"With what amazing power has he painted nature! How all his pages glow with creative fire! Who is there writing English among our contemporaries, if not of him, of whom it can be said, that he has a genius of the first order?"—Revue de Paris.

"Altogether he is the most original writer that America has yet produced, and one of whom she may well be proud."—Lon. Athenæum.

"We accord to Cooper an equal degree of talent and power with that ascribed to Scott, and would place the originality of the American author at a higher point. There is certainly in Cooper more power of concentration, a more epigrammatic style, and greater terseness of expression. . . . No one can peruse the works of Cooper without being convinced of the innate beauty of his own mind. His ethical notions are of the highest order, his morality is as pure as that of the men whose unaffected religion he is so fond of portraying.

"The philosophy of his mind is of a high order, and few can be unsusceptible of this. The most ordinary reader must be conscious of a superiority and elevation of thought while he peruses the writings of Fenimore Cooper. The gentleness of his own mind, its lofty appreciation of every thing that was good, its innate poetry, breathed forth in his graphic descriptions of nature, in the love with which he regards the forests, the broad prairies, and the sun-lighted valleys.

"It is rarely so many qualities are combined in one writer. His name is endeared in his country, and his productions will hand it down to posterity with undiminished lustre. Cooper's novels will be standard works as long as fiction continues to excite an interest in the admirers of literature."—Obituary Notice, Eclectic Review.

Cooper, John, Professor of Astrology. Primum Mobile, with Theores to the Theory and Canons of Practice, wherein is demonstrated from Astronomical and Philosophical Principles, the nature and extent of Celestial influx on Man, 1814, 8vo. New Trans. of Dodæus Placidus de Titus's Primum Mobile, or Celestial Philosophy: Illustrated by upwards of 30 remarkable Nativities of the most eminent men in Europe, 1815, 8vo.

Cooper, John Gilbert, 1723–1769, was educated at Trin. Coll., Cambridge, where he applied himself zealously to classical literature. The Power of Harmony, 1745:

"In which he endeavoured to recommend a perfect attention to what is perfect and beautiful in nature, as the means of harmonising the soul to a responsive regularity and sympathetic order. This imitation of the language of Shaftesbury's school was not affectation. He had studied the works of that nobleman with enthusiasm, and seems entirely to have regulated his conduct by the maxims of the ancient and modern academicians." See Chalmers's Biog. Dict.

The Life of Socrates, 1749, 8vo. In this work Cooper pub. some notes furnished by John Jackson, levelled against Bishop Warburton. The bishop thus returns the compliment in a note on an Essay on Criticism:

"As ignorance, when joined with humility, produces stupid admiration, on which account it is so commonly observed to be the mother of devotion, and blind homage; so when joined with vanity (as it always is in bad critics) it gives birth to every iniquity of impudent abuse and slander. See an example (far want of a better) in a late worthless and now forgotten thing, called The Life of Socrates; where the head of the author (as a man of wit observed on reading the book) has just made the shift to do the office of a camera obscura, and represent things in an inverted order; himself above, and Sprat, Rollin, Voltaire, and every other author of importance, below."—Pope's Works, ed. 1751, t. 151.

This is in the favourite style of the amiable prelate, and we need not be surprised that it somewhat excited the ire of the author of The Life of Socrates. He followed up the war by Remarks on Warburton's edition of Pope, in a Letter to a Friend, 1751. In this work Mr. C. appeals to the impartial reader, "Whether there is the least reflection through the whole Life of Socrates, or the Notes, upon W.'s morals, and whether he has not confined his criticism to W.'s practice as an author?" and he declares the epithet bestowed upon him to be a downright slander. Letters on Taste, 1754.

"These Letters may still be perused with interest; they are more remarkable, however, for splendour of style and imagery than for strength of reasoning, and are occasionally tinged with the hue of affectation."—DR. DRAKE.

The Tomb of Shakspeare, a Vision, 1755. The Genius of Britain, 1756. Epistles to the Great from Aristippus, 1758. The Call of Aristippus, 1758. Trans. of Ver Ver, 1759. Poems on several subjects, 1764:—Originally con. to Dodsley's Museum, under the signature of Philaretos.

"Mr. Cooper was a gentleman of an agreeable appearance, of polite address, and accomplished manners."—DR. KIPPIS. See Biog. Brit.; Chalmers's Biog. Dict., and Johnson and Chalmers's English Poets, and works cited above.

Cooper, Joseph, 1635–1699, a Nonconformist divine. Eight Sermons on 1 Pet. v. 15, 1663, 8vo. Domus Moisaice Clavis, sive Legis Septimentum, 1673, 12mo.

"This is a curious Latin work, written in defence of the Manichee doctrines and punctuation; in which Elias Levita, Cappellus, Walton, Morinus, Gordon, surnamed Huntly, are all attacked; and the Buxtorfs, Owen, Glasius, and the rest of the same school, are defended. Cooper was a pious and learned man; but on this subject had more zeal than knowledge."—OXF. Bib. Bib.

Cooper, Maria Susanna. Jane Shore to her Friends; a Poetic Epistle, 1776, 4to. The Exemplary Mother. The Wife, or Caroline Herbert, 1812, 2 vols.; posth.

"An example of virtue which may be useful and interesting to many of our fair readers; particularly such as are speculating on matrimony."—Lon. Monthly Review, 1813.

Cooper, Mary Grace. Thamata, The Spirit of Death; and other poems, Lon., 1839, 12mo.

"A pure pearl, deserving of notice; calculated to console and cheer the sick chamber, or rest amongst those Sabbath books which ought to have a place 'sacred and apart' in every English home."—Britannia.

Cooper, Myles, D.D., d. at Edinburgh, 1785, aged about 50, was educated at the University of Oxford. He emigrated to New York in 1762, and was (at the instance of the Archbishop of Canterbury) appointed Prof. of Moral Philosophy in King's College, New York city. In 1763 he succeeded Dr. Johnson as president. In 1775 his Tory principles caused him to leave America. He was subsequently one of the ministers of the Episcopal chapel of Edinburgh, in which city he died. Poems, 1758. Fast Sermon, 1776. Sermon on Civil Government, Oxf., 1777. He wrote on the subject of an American Episcopate, and also upon the politics of the country. To his pen is ascribed A Friendly Address to all Reasonable Americans on our Political Confusions, and the Necessary Consequences of Violently Opposing the King's Troops, &c., N. York, 1774, 8vo. Dr. Cooper was much disliked by the Whigs. Those who desire to become acquainted with the history of the Tories, as they were styled in the Revolutionary Contest of America, should consult Mr. Lorenzo Sabine's American Loyalists, Boston, 1847, 8vo. A new edit. is now (1858) in course of preparation. See SABINE, LORENZO.

Cooper, Oliver St. John. 400 Texts of Scripture Explained, Lon., 1791, 8vo.

"A small, but useful, work. . . It contains multum in parvo."—Orms: Bibl. Soc.

Cooper, R. Bransby. Trans. of Mede's Clavis Apocalyptica, Lon., 1833, 8vo. Commentary on the Revelation of St. John, 1833, 8vo.

"The first of these publications will be a very acceptable present to the legal student of the Bible; as, in having Mede's views set before him, he will certainly have those of the soundest writer on prophecy unfulfilled. The second work is also valuable, as the commentary is nearly founded upon Mede's views, and Mr. Cooper points out where he has gone beyond them."—British Magazine, June, 1833, 692.

Cooper, Richard. Countryman's Proposal to raise £20,000 a day, Nott., 1711, 12mo.

Cooper, S. M. Life in the Forest; or the Trials and Sufferings of a Pioneer, Phila., 1854, 16mo.

Cooper, Samuel. On a Storm at Norwich: Phil. Trans., 1759.

Cooper, Samuel, D.D. 1725–1783, graduated at Harvard College, 1743; associate minister of the Brattle Street Church, Boston, 1746. He was one of the principal promoters of the American Revolution. He pub. many political papers in the journals of the day, and some sermons, &c., 1751–60. See Allen's Amer. Biog. Dict.

Cooper, Samuel, D.D. Rector of Morley and Yelverton, Norfolk. Sermons, 1776, '77, '90.

Cooper, Samuel, D.D. Minister of Great Yarmouth, d. 1809. Definitions and Axioms relative to Charity, Charitable Institutions, and the Poor Laws, 1764, 8vo. Serms., 1782, '86, '89, '90. Letters to Dr. Priestley, 1791, 8vo.

Cooper, Samuel, Surgeon, London. Reflections on the Cataract, Lon., 1805, 8vo. First Lines of the Practice of Surgery, 1807, 8vo; 7th ed., 1840, 8vo. Dictionary of Practical Surgery, 1809, '13, 8vo; 7th ed., 1838, 8vo. Diseases of the Joints, 1807, 8vo. This took the prize adjudged by the Royal College of Surgeons in 1806. Epitome of Modern Surgery, 1812, 8vo. Dr. C. has also given to the world a third ed. of Dr. Mason Good's Study of Medicine, Lon., 5 vols. 8vo.

Cooper, Miss Susan Fenimore, daughter of the distinguished American novelist, has already (1855) added to the family laurels, and thereby proved that no Salique Law exists in the Republic of Letters. Miss Cooper's first publication was Rural Hours, by a Lady, New York, 1850, 8vo. This is a journal of the scenes of country life, commencing with the spring of 1848, and concluding with the spring of 1849.

"The scenery described so charmingly is that surrounding her own fair home in Cooperstown: out of these simple materials Miss Cooper has formed one of the most interesting volumes of the day, displaying powers of mind of a high order."—Mrs. Hale's Woman's Record.

"An admirable portraiture of American out-door life, just as it is, with no colouring but that which every object necessarily receives in passing through a contemplative and cultivated mind."

Miss Cooper has an observant eye, and a happy faculty of making her descriptions interesting by selecting the right objects, instead of the too common method of extravagant embellishment. She never gets into ecstasies, and sees nothing which anybody else might not see who walked through the same fields after her."—PROFESSOR HART: Female Prose Writers of America, 1855.

"A very pleasant book—the result of the combined effect of good sense and good feeling, an observant mind, and a real, honest, unaffected appreciation of the countless minor beauties that Nature exhibits to her assiduous lovers."—Albion.

It is no matter of surprise that so attractive a book has reached the 4th. edition.

Miss Cooper has also edited Country Rambles, or Journal of a Naturalist in England, with Notes and Additions, New York, 12mo.

"Thanks to Miss S. F. Cooper, whose own 'Rural Hours' show how well she is fitted for the task she has undertaken. . . Every rural library should have this book. No kind of information gives such certain returns of gratification as that we gain by the study of works like this."—New York Evening Post.

Miss Cooper's last publication is entitled Rhyme and Reason of Country Life; from Fields old and new: New York, 1854, 8vo. This is a volume of "selections, connected together by a mere thread of remarks."

"The large reading and fine taste of Miss Cooper are admirably displayed in her choice as well as arrangement of the flowers which go to make up her several bouquets. . . Precisely such a book as cultivated persons like to snatch up for a spare hour, during the long evenings of winter, in the country, or to carry out with them, in the summer-time, to the shade of a favourite arbour or tree."—Palmist's Magazine.

We believe that Miss C. has ready for the press The Shield, a Narrative. She has commenced her literary career under such brilliant auspices that we see not how she can be excused from the frequent use of a pen which she knows so well how to guide. If the paternal name first secured her a hearing, it at the same time subjected her compositions to a trying ordeal. Having encountered with honour so severe a test, there need be no hesitation in the future.

Cooper, Capt. T. H. Practical Guide for the Light Infantry Officer, 1806, 8vo. Military Cabinet; a collection of extracts from the best authors, ancient and modern, 1809, 3 vols. 12mo.

Cooper, or Couper, Thomas, 1517?–1594, educated at, and Fellow of, Magdalen College, Oxford; Dean of Gloucester, 1569; Bishop of Lincoln, 1570; translated to Winchester, 1584. Bibliotheca Eliota, 1541, (Elyot's Dict. of Latin and English was first pub. in 1538;) the second time, enriched, 1548–52, fol.; third, 1559–65, fol. Epitome of Chronicles, by T. Languet and T. Cooper, 1549, 4to; augmented, 1565; continued, 1565, 4to. Thesaurus Lingue Romane et Britannice, 1565, '73, '78, '84, fol.

"The foundation was taken from Sir Thomas Eliot's dictionary, and the materials, for the most part, from Rob. Stevens's Thesaurus, and John Frisius's Lat. and Germ. Dictionary."—Athen. Oxon.

Cooper does not pretend that the work is an original one. It was a great favourite with Queen Elizabeth, and was the cause of Cooper's preferments. It contains many quotations of early English, and is undoubtedly a philological curiosity. Brief Expositions of such chapters of the Old Testament as usually are read in the Church at Common Prayer, on the Sundays throughout the year, 1573, 4to. Serms., 1575. 12 Serms., 1580, 4to. An Admonition to the People of England, 1589, 4to. This is an answer to John ap Henry's books against the Church of England, pub. under the name of Martin Mar-Prelate. Bishop Cooper's admonition elicited two "ludicrous pamphlets," entitled, Ha' ye any work for a Cooper? and More work for a Cooper. An Answer in defence of the Truth against the apology of private Mass, 1562, 12mo, anon. There is some doubt as to the authorship of this treatise. See Bliss's Wood's Athen. Oxon. It was in 1850 edited for the Parker Society by the Rev. W. Goode, Camb., 8vo. Cooper was less happy in his domestic relations than his merits deserved.

"A man of great gravity, learning, and holiness of life."—Godwin.

"A very learned man: eloquent, and well acquainted with the English and Latin languages."—Bale.

"He was furnished with all kind of learning, almost beyond all his contemporaries; and not only adorned the pulpit with his sermons, but also the commonwealth of learning with his writings."—Wood.

"Of him I can say much, and I should do him great wrong if I said nothing: for he was indeed a reverend man, very well learned, exceeding industrious; and, which was in those days counted a great praise to him, and a chief cause of his preferment, he wrote that great dictionary that yet bears his name."—SIR JOHN HARRINGTON.

There was a story current that his wife, fearing lest he should kill himself with study, burnt all the notes which her husband had for eight years been industriously collecting for the compilation of his dictionary. But his wife gave palpable evidence that she cared very little either for her husband's comfort or reputation.

Cooper, Thomas. Nona Novembris, &c., Oxf., 1607, 4to. Romish Spider, 1606, 4to. Worldling's Adventure, 1619, 4to. Other works.

Cooper, Thomas. Political treatises, &c., 1794–1806.

Cooper, Thomas, M.D., LL.D., 1759–1840, a native of London, educated at Oxford, emigrated to Pennsylvania, and was appointed president-judge of a judicial district by Governor McKean. He was subsequently Professor of Chemistry, first in Dickinson College, Carlisle, 2dly in the University of Pennsylvania, 3dly at Columbia College, South Carolina. He afterwards became President of the last-named institution. The Bankrupt Law of America compared with the Bankrupt Law of England, Phila., 1801, 8vo. An English Version of the Institutes of Justinian, Phila., 1812, 8vo; New York, 1841, 8vo; 3d ed., Phila., 1852. He contrates the Roman Jurisprudence with that of the United States. Tracts on Medical Jurisprudence, Phila., 1819, 8vo. Opinion of Judge Cooper in the case of Dempsey v. The Insurance Co. of Pennsylvania, on the Effect of a sentence of a Foreign Court of Admiralty; pub. by A. J. Dallas, Phila., 1810, 8vo.

"I would recommend every American student to read this opinion of Judge Cooper's; not so much for the reasoning and ideas, as for the analysis and systematic comprehension of the subject. It is a model that deserves to be admired."—JUDGE BRACKENRIDGE: Miscellanies, 525; Note.

"It is perhaps one of the ablest, most comprehensive, and perspicuous arguments that has appeared on that difficult and highly important question, the effect of a sentence of a foreign court of Admiralty as evidence in domestic suits. Both in England and this country, the question has been very frequently agitated, and not less frequently, variously, and confusedly decided."—Hoffman's Legal Study, 472.

Lectures on the Elements of Political Economy, Columbia, 2d ed., 1829, 8vo.

"This work, though not written in a very philosophical spirit, is the best of the American works on political economy that we have ever met with."—McCulloch: Lit. of Pol. Economy.

Dr. Cooper's infirmities obliged him to resign the presidency of Columbia College, and he devoted his last years, in conjunction with Mr. D. McCord, to a revision of the statutes of South Carolina. These were pub. in 10 vols. 8vo, Columbia, 1836-41. Besides the works mentioned, Dr. Cooper pub. the Emporium of Arts, trans. from the French, and many pamphlets on politics, physics, and theology. Few men have led so active a life, and still fewer have exhibited so great a variety of talents.

Cooper, Thomas, the Chartist. The Baron's Yule Feast: a Christmas Rhyme, Lon., 1846, 12mo. The Purgatory of Suicides: a Prison Rhyme, 3d ed., 1853, 12mo. Wise Saws and Modern Instances: a Series of Short Tales, 1845, 2 vols. p. 8vo. Two Orationes against Taking away Human Life, p. 8vo.

"Mr. Cooper's style is intensely clear and forcible, and displays great earnestness and fine human sympathy; it is in the highest degree manly, plain, and vigorous."—Lon. Morn. Advertiser.

Cooper, W. White. Invalid's Guide to Madeira, Lon., 1840, 12mo. On Near Sight, Aged Sight, and Impaired Vision, 1846, p. 8vo.

"Truly practical, and consequently truly valuable, we recommend this volume to all eyes."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

Cooper, William, Bishop of Galloway. Dikaialogi; containing a just defence of his former apology against David Hume, Lon., 1814, 4to.

Cooper, William. Serm., Lon., 1849, 4to.

Cooper, William. Serm., Lon., 1863, 76, 77.

Cooper, William. Catalogue of Chymical Books, Lon., 1875, 12mo. Other publications.

Cooper, William, D.D., Archbishop of York. Serm., &c., 1763-79. Discourses, 1786, 2 vols. 8vo. Address, 1788. Phil. Trans., 1784; of a remarkable meteor.

Cooper, William, d. 1743, aged 49, a minister of Boston, Massachusetts, was in 1737 elected President of Harvard College, but declined the trust. He pub. a number of sermons, 1714-41. The Doctrine of Predestination unto Life explained and vindicated in 4 sermons, 1741; and Lon., 1765, 12mo.

"A candid and practical view of this doctrine."—BICKERSTETH.

Cooper, William, D.D., Archdeacon of York. Discourses, Lon., 1795, 2 vols. 8vo.

Cooper, William, M.D. Med. Obs. and Inq., 1770. Phil. Trans., 1775.

Coore, Richard, D.D., d. 1687. Practical Exposition of the more difficult Texts that are contained in the Holy Bible, Lon., 1683, 8vo.

"The dreams in Daniel and the visions of all the Prophets, and the two mystical books of the Canticles and the Revelation are all clearly opened."—Author's Pref.

Coortresse, Richard, Bishop of Chichester. A Sermon before the Queen's Majesty, Lon., 1573, 8vo.

Coote, Charles, LL.D., of Pembroke College, Oxford. Graii Elegia, &c., Lon., 1794, 4to. Hist. of England to 1783, 1791-98, 9 vols. 8vo. Cont. of the Peace of Amiens, 1803, 8vo. English Grammar, and a hist. of the language, 1788, 8vo. Life of Caesar, 1802, 8vo. Hist. of the Union, 1802, 8vo. Hist. of Modern Europe, 1810; continued to 1815, 1817, 8vo. Mosheim's Eccl. Hist. by MacLaine, brought down to the 18th century, 1811, 6 vols. 8vo. Hist. of Ancient Europe, 1815, 3 vols. 8vo. This was intended to accompany Dr. Wm. Russell's Hist. of Modern Europe, Lon., 1779, 2 vols. 8vo.

Coote, Sir Charles, Earl of Monrath, Governor of Dublin, d. 1661. Declarations, Dublin, 1659; Lon., 1660, 4to. His Victory, Lon., 1649, 4to. Transactions with O. R. O'Neal, Lon., 1649, 4to.

Coote, Chilly. Ireland's Lamentations, Lon., 1664.

Coote, Edward. English Schoolmaster, Lon., 1627.

Coote, H. J. The Homologies of the Human Skeleton, Lon., 1849, 8vo.

Coote, J. Memoir of Princess Charlotte, etc., 1818, 8vo.

Coote, R. H. An Analysis, arranged to serve also as a compendious digested Index to Mr. Fearn's Essay on Contingent Remainders and Executory Devises, and of Mr. Butler's Notes, Lon., 1814, 8vo.

"Every topic to be found in the text and notes is concisely abridged by Mr. Coote, and the whole is alphabetically arranged. This small volume should ever be in view whilst the student is engaged with the great original."—Hoffman's Legal Study, 241.

Treatise on the Law of Landlord and Tenant, Lon., 1840, 8vo. Treatise on the Law of Mortgage, with an Appendix of Precedents, Lon., 1822, 8vo. The 3d ed. of this valuable work, by the original author and Richard Coote, Esq., was pub. Lon., 1850, r. 8vo. An American ed. (the third) founded on the 3d Lon. ed., is now (1858) in the press of the enterprising and well-known publishers, T. and J. W. Johnson, of Philadelphia. It is edited by Judge Sharswood, whose name is sufficiently known to the profession to render any comments useless. The Practice of the Ecclesiastical Courts, with Forms and Tables of Costs, Lon., 1846, 8vo.

"Ecclesiastical Practice is now for the first time made the subject of a formal and elaborate treatise, and it has remained for Mr. Coote, by a combination of industry and experience, to give to the profession a work which has long been wanted, but which so few are competent to supply."—Lon. Law Times.

Coote, Richard, Earl of Bellamont. Articles of agreement between him, R. Livingston, and Capt. W. M. Kidd, fol.

Coote, Hon. Robt. Compleat Marksman; Poem, 1755.

Cope. Hist. of the East Indies, Lon., 1754, 8vo.

Cope, Alan, an English R. Catholic, d. about 1580. Historia Evangelicorum veritas, Lon., 1572; Doway, 1603, 4to. "This is a kind of Harmony of the Gospels, or rather a digest of the Life of Christ, in the words of the Evangelists. . . . Crow speaks of Cope as 'eximii ingenii vir.'"—Oxon. Bibl. Bb.

Cope also pub. Dialogi sex contra Summi Pontificatus Monasticæ Vitæ, &c., Antw., 1566, 4to. This work was written by Nic. Harpesfeld.

"Which book being put into the hands of his friend Alan Cope, he put it out under his name, lest danger should befall the author in person."—Athen. Oxon.

Cope, Sir Anthony. Historie of Anniball and Scipio, Lon., 1544, 4to. Godly Meditation vpon XX. Psalmes of Dawid, 1547, 4to; a new ed. with Biog. Pref. and Notes, by G. W. H. Cope, 1848, 8vo.

"He went into France, Germany, Italy, and elsewhere; in which places visiting the universities, and joining his company to the most learned men of them, became an accomplished gentleman, wrote several things beyond the seas, as well as at home."—Athen. Oxon.

Cope, Henry. Demonstratio Medico-Practica Prognosticum Hippocratis, Dublin, 1736, 8vo.

Cope, Henry. Scrutiny after Religion, 1620, 8vo.

Cope, John. An ancient date at Widel-Hall; Phil. Trans., 1735.

Cope, Sir John. Report on his conduct, 1749, 4to.

Cope, Michael. Exposition on Proverbs, in French, Genève, 1557; trans. into English by Marcelline Outerd, 1580, 4to.

"Many deep and striking thoughts."—BICKERSTETH.

Exp. sur le Livre de l'Ecclesiaste, Genève, 1563, 8vo.

"I find Michael Cope to have been a zealous Calvinist at Geneva and other places, a frequent preacher in the French tongue, and author in the French language."—Athen. Oxon.

Copeland, John. Arithmetic, Lon., 1713, 12mo.

Copeland, Thomas. Medical treatises, Lon., 1810, '12, '18.

Copeman, E. Cases of Apoplexy, Lon., 1845, 8vo.

Copinger, Maurice. Excise Laws, 1799, 4to.

Copland, Alexander, Advocate. Mortal Life, and the State of the Soul after Death, &c.; 2d ed., Lon., 1834, 8vo. "This work gives us all that can be known of the subject which it treats, and a great deal which can only be conjectured."—Lowndes.

Copland, James, M.D. Pestilential Cholera, Lon., 12mo. Palsy and Apoplexy, 1850, p. 8vo. Dictionary of Practical Medicine, Library of Pathology, and Digest of Medical Literature, 1833-58, 3 vols. 8vo. This invaluable work should be in the possession of every medical man, and in every public library. From the many commendations before us, we have room but for a few lines from two or three eminent authorities:

"We feel it a great duty to record our opinion that, as there is no medical practitioner in this country, old or young, high or low, who will not derive great pleasure and great profit by consulting Dr. Copland's Dictionary, so we think there is no one who should not add the work to his library."—Brit. and For. Med. Review.

"The labour is immense, and will stamp the author as a man of great research, unusual industry, and sound judgment."—Lon. Medico-Chir. Review.

"It is the production of a physician profoundly acquainted with the medical literature of all countries, and one practically acquainted with the immense class of diseases usually consigned to that order of the profession to which he belongs."—Lon. Medical and Surgical Journal.

Copland, Patrick. Virginia's God be thanked; a Thanksgiving Sermon, with some Epistles by Peter Pope, an Indian Youth, Lon., 1622, 4to.

Copland, Peter. Con. to Med. Com. Facts and Memoirs, Lon., 1791, '93, '99, and 1805.

Copland, Robert, a printer, &c., d. about 1548? Hye Way to the Spytell House, Lon., 4to; reprinted in Utterson's Pieces of early Popular Poetry, vol. ii. Iyl of Brantford's Testament, newly compiled, 4to. Copland was author of some other pieces, and trans. from the French. See Watt's Bibl. Brit.; Warton's Eng. Poet.; Athen. Oxon.; Ritson's Bibl. Poet.

Copland, Robert. The Questionary of Chyrurgions; with the Formulery of littl Guido in Chyrurgirie, with the Spectacles of Chyrurgions newly added, and the fourth book of the Therapeutike, or Method Curative of Claud. Galien, Prince of Physicians, with a singular Treatise of the cure of Ulcers, Lon., 1541, 4to.

Copland, Samuel, D.D. Christian Character, 1785.

Copland, Samuel. Hist. of Madagascar, Lon., 1821, 8vo.

Copleston, Edward, D.D., 1776-1849, a native of Offwell, Devon, elected scholar at Corpus Christi College, Oxford, 1791; chosen Fellow of Oriel College, 1795; College tutor, 1797; Prof. of Poetry, 1802; Proctor, 1807; Provost of Oriel, 1814; Dean of Chester, 1826; Bishop of Llandaff and Dean of St. Paul's, 1827. Letter to John Coker, 1810. Enquiry into the doctrines of Necessity and Predestination; 4 discourses, Lon., 1821, 8vo. See Review in Quart. Rev., xxvi. 82. See a list of Bishop C.'s other sermons, speeches, &c. in Darling's Cyc. Bibl. The following work conferred great reputation upon the author: Prælectiones Academicæ Oxoniæ habitæ, 1813, 8vo, and 1828, 8vo, Oxonii.

"The elegant and masterly Prælectiones of Mr. Copleston, delivered by him as Professor of Poetry at Oxford, are, we presume, already in the hands of our readers."—Museum Criticum.

Copleston, John. Serm., Lon., 1661, 4to.

Copley, Anthony. A Fig for Fortune. Recta securas, Lon., 1596, 4to. Trans. of the prose portion of Wits, Fittes, and Fancies, 1595, 4to. See Lowndes's Bibl. Man., iv. 1966.

Copley, Esther, late Mrs. Hewlett, one of the most useful writers of the present century. We notice a few of her many excellent works. Scripture Hist. for Youth, Lon., 1829, 2 vols. 16mo.

"The plan and execution of this work are both highly creditable to the plety, talents, research, and taste of the esteemed author."—Lon. Evangelical Mag.

Scripture Nat. Hist. for Youth, 1828, 2 vols. 8vo. Scripture Biography, 1835, 8vo. Early Friendships, 1840, 18mo.

"It is attractively written, and full of interest."—Cbm. Adv.

Little Harry and his Uncle Benjamin, 1841, 16mo. Hist. of Slavery and its Abolition; 2d ed., 1839, 8vo.

"The best compendium with which we are acquainted."—Lon. Christian Guardian.

Copley, J. S. Borough of Horsham, 1808, 8vo.

Copley, John. Observ. on Religion, Lon., 1611, 4to.

Copley, Josiah. Thoughts of Favoured Hours, Phila., 1858, 18mo.

Coppe, Abiezer. Flying Roll, &c., Lon., 1646, '49, '51.

Coppée, Henry, b. in Savannah, Georgia, Oct. 15, 1821; grad. at West Point in 1845, and served through the Mexican War as a lieutenant of artillery; at its close, breveted a captain and sent as an instructor to the Military Academy; remained on that duty until 1855; was then appointed Prof. English Literature and History in the University of Penna., in the place of Prof. Henry Reed. Elements of Logic, Phila., 1857. Elements of Rhetoric, 1858. Edited Gallery of Famous English and American Poets, with an Introductory Essay, Phila., 1858, 8vo. Contrib. articles in prose and verse to various periodicals, &c.

Coppin, Richard. Theolog. treatises, Lon., 1649, '53, '54, '55.

Copping, John, Dean of Clogher. Sermon, Lon., 1740, 4to.

Copping, Thomas. Fast Serm., 1702, 4to.

Coppinger, Mat. Poems, Songs, and Love-Verses, Lon., 1682, 12mo. Read sale, 6666, £6 6s.

Coppinger, Sir Nath. A Speech for the bringing in of the Archbishop of Canterbury to his Long-Expected Trial, Lon., 1641, 4to.

Copway, George, (Kahgegwagebow,) Indian of the Ojibway nation, b. August, 1820, in Michigan; for many years connected with the press of New York City; has lectured extensively throughout Europe and America. 1. Recollections of a Forest Life, 1847. 2. Traditional History of the Ojibway Nation, 1850. 3. Ojibway Conquest; a Poem, [curious,] 1850. 4. Running Sketches of Men and Places in Europe, 1851. 5. Copway's American Indian.

Corbet, Edward. Serm., Lon., 1642, 4to.

Corbet, Jeffray. Protestant's Warning Pieces, 1656.

Corbet, John, of Bonyl, Scotland. Ungirdling of the Scottish Armour, Dubl., 1639, 4to.

Corbet, John, 1620-1680, educated at Magdalen Hall, Oxford, obtained the living of Bramshot, Hampshire; ejected for Nonconformity, 1662. Hist. Relation of the Milit. Government of Gloucester, Lon., 1645, 4to. Vindication of the Magistrates and Ministers of Gloucester, 1646, 4to. Self-Employment in Secret, 1681, 12mo. Remains, 1684, 4to. Other works. See Athen. Oxon.

Corbet, John, beheaded in the Irish Rebellion. Epistle Congratulatory to the Covenanters in Scotland, 1640, 4to.

Corbet, John. English Grammar, Shrew., 1784, 12mo.

Corbet, Miles. Speech in H. of Commons, 1647, fol.

Corbet, Richard, D.D., 1582-1635, educated at Broadgate's Hall and Christ Church, Oxford, Dean of Christ Church, 1627; Bishop of Oxford, 1629; translated to Norwich, 1632. Journey to France; a Poem, Oratio-Oxon., 1613, 4to. Certain elegant Poems, Lon., 1647, 12mo. Poetical Stromata, or Pieces in Poetry, 1648, '72, 8vo. Fourth ed. of his Poems, with addita. and Life by Octavius Gilchrist, 1809, 12mo. Of Corbet's Poems the Journey into France, an amusing sketch, is "Remarkable for giving some traits of the French character that are visible in the present day."

The Farewell to the Fairies also possesses much humour. See Aubrey's Letters; Life by Gilchrist; Athen. Oxon.

Corbet, Roger. Letter from Court, Lon., 1647, 4to.

Corbet, Thomas. Gospel Incense, 1653, 12mo.

Corbett, Misses. The New Happy Week; or, Holidays at Beechwood, Lon.

"The conversations are natural, animated, and sparkling with good humour and agreeable pleasantry."—Edin. Even. Post.

The Happy Week; or, Holidays at Beechwood, 3d ed.

"The Happy Week will be read with avidity by those of our young friends who may be so fortunate as to obtain possession of it. The 'Large Nose' is capital. The contents of the book are agreeably varied."—Christian Advocate.

Lessons for the Heart, selected from the best Examples for the Improvement of Young Persons.

"We have been delighted with this volume, and consider it a very valuable addition to the list of books designed for the instruction of the young. A mifer, or more useful, or more entertaining little work could scarcely be put into their hands."—Christian Instructor.

Elucidations of Interesting Passages in the Sacred Volume, drawn from the Works of the most celebrated Commentators and Travellers. First and Second Series.

"We assure parents, guardians, and teachers, that they cannot do a better service to the education of the young, than put into the hands of those under their charge these deserving volumes."—Scottish Guardian.

The Cabinet for Youth, containing Narratives, Sketches, and Anecdotes, for the Instruction and Amusement of the Young, 3d edition.

"The book is a good one, and will be a popular one, or we err greatly in our estimate of what young folks like to read, and what their guardians think it advisable to purchase for them."—Edinb. Observer.

Corbett, M. de. Oriental Key to the Sacred Scriptures, as they are illustrated by the Rites, &c. of Eastern Nations, Lon., 1837, 18mo.

Corbett, Thomas. An Inquiry relative to the Wealth of Individuals, Lon., 1841, 12mo.

"It deserves the attentive perusal of the commercial world."—Lon. New Monthly Mag.

Corbett, Uvedale. Inquiry into the Election Laws, Lon., 1816, 8vo. U. C. and E. R. Daniell: Reports of Controversial Elections, 1821, 8vo.

Corbould, Edward. Aristomenes: a Grecian Tale, with Illustrations, Lon., 2 vols. 8vo.

"In these two handsome volumes we find considerable power of writing."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

"The whole effusion bears the very spirit of classical antiquity."—Lon. Monthly Advertiser.

Corbyn, Benjamin. Sermon.

Corbyn, Samuel. To the Unconverted, 1677, 8vo.

Corbyn, Samuel. Sermon, Lon., 1765, 8vo.

Corder, Susannah. Life of Elizabeth Fry. This work has been highly commended.

Corderoy, Jeremy. Theol. treat., Lon., 1604, '08, 8vo.

Cordiner, Charles. Antiquities and Scenery of the North of Scotland, Lon., 1780, 4to.

"An intelligent and very amusing work, designed as a supplement to Pennant's Scottish Tour."—Lowndes.

Remarkable Ruins and Romantic Prospects of North Britain, with Ancient Monuments and Singular Subjects of Natural History, Lon., 1788-95, 2 vols. 4to.

Cordiner, James. Description of Ceylon, Lon., 1807, 2 vols. 4to.

"Mr. Cordiner made the tour of the whole sea-coast of the island, a journey of nearly 800 miles. He states many valuable facts; his two volumes contain a great deal of curious matter."—Lon. Quart. Review.

Cordwell, J. New System of Physic, 1668-70, 8vo.

Core, Francis. Treatise on Witches, Lon., 1564, 8vo.

Corfe, Joseph. Treatise on Singing, Lon., 1791, fol.

Coriat, Jun. See CORYATE.

Coriat, Thomas. See CORYATE.

Corker, Edward. His Case, fol.

Corker, James, is supposed to have written the treatise entitled Roman Catholic Principles in reference to God and the king, 1680, which was referred to by Lord Stafford on his trial in vindication of his faith. A new edit. was pub. by Rev. John Kirk, 1815, 8vo.

"It is a clear and accurate exposition of the Roman Catholic Creed, on some of its most important principles, and has all the authority that such a document can receive from time and universal assent."—CHARLES BUTLER.

"In perusing the Principles, Dr. Leland, the historian, is said to have declared, that, if such were the principles of Roman Catholics, no government had any right to quarrel with them." See Charles Butler's Memoirs respect. the English, Irish, and Scottish Catholics, 1819: II. 40, 345-353.

Corker, Samuel. Funl. Sermon, Dublin, 1695, 4to.

Cormack, John. Lives of Philosophers; trans. from Fenelon, London, 1803, 2 vols. 12mo. Female Infanticide in Guzerat, 1815, 8vo. Sermon, Edinburgh, 1810.

Cormick, C. M. Hist. of England, from the Death of George II. to the Peace of 1783, London, 3 vols. 12mo.

Cormouls, Thomas. Eversion; or the Refutation of the present Principles of Mundane Philosophy, Wolverhampton, 1804, 8vo.

Corncob, Jonathan, Loyal American Refugee, The Adventures of, London, 1787, 12mo.

"The prototype of the Halls and Trollope, who, as the Monthly Review says, 'thought that his ridicule of the Jonathans would render his work the more acceptable in England.'"—Bacon: Bib. Amer. Novæ.

Cornelius, Lucius. De Monarchia Jesuitarum, London, 1648, '65, '80, 8vo.

Cornelius, Peter. A Way to make the Poor, in these and other Nations, happy, London, 1659, 4to. Surely so philanthropic a proposal demands a respectful consideration!

Cornell, Ebenezer. Sermon, London, 1756, 8vo.

Cornell, S. S., Corresponding Member of the American Geographical and Statistical Society. Author of a series of popular School Geographies.

Cornell, Rev. Wm. Mason, M.D., b. 1802, Massachusetts, grad. at Brown Univ., 1827. Grammar of the English Language. Consumption Prevented, 8th edition. Consumption Forestalled and prevented. Sabbath made for Man. Treatise on Epilepsy. Contributed largely to the various medical and educational journals.

Corner, Julia, may be styled, without compliment, one of the most useful writers of the age. Of her many valuable works, we notice: Questions on the Hist. of Europe; a Sequel to Miss Mangnall's Hist. Questions; new ed., London, 1847, 12mo.

"Miss Corner is a worthy successor to Miss Mangnall. An immense quantity of matter is condensed in these pages."—Lon. Lit. Gazette.

Children's Sunday Books, 1850-52. Hist. of China and India. The Historical Library, 1840-48, 14 vols. 12mo.

"We know of no works better suited for youth, or the careful perusal of which is likely to be attended with more lasting impressions, than Miss Corner's Hist. Library."—Lon. Conservative Jour.

"Miss Corner writes intelligently and fluently, with much easy and winning grace."—Lon. Mag. of Arts and Sciences.

We have perhaps 20 or 30 such commendations before us.

Corney, Bolton. New Curiosities of Literature, in Illustration of D'Israeli, London, 1838, p. 8vo; and a 2d ed.

"Ce livre est une vive critique des Curiosités de la Littérature, recueil d'anecdotes et de remarques bibliographiques fort répandu en Angleterre. . . M. Bolton Corney a déjà publié un écrit fort judicieux sur la Tapisserie de Bayeux."—Journal des Savants.

"These illustrations are by far the best specimens of historical and bibliographical criticism that we have seen anywhere this many a day."—Lon. Metropolitan Magazine.

"A masterly volume."—London Examiner.

See a communication from Mr. Corney, and a letter from the Rev. Alexander Crombie, respecting the above-named work, in the Gent. Mag., Oct. 1841, 355.

Thomson's Seasons, edit. by Bolton Corney, 1842, sq. 8vo.

"Mr. Bolton Corney's labours are not the less to be commended because they are unobtrusive: the work is extremely well edited."—London Athenæum.

The Poetical Works of Oliver Goldsmith; edited by Bolton Corney, 1845, 8vo. A valuable edit.

"The whole of the poems have been collated with the several editions; the Deserted Village boasts an improved text; and the oratorio of the Captivity is printed complete from the MS. in Mr. Murray's possession. A new memoir of the poet has the merits of fulness and accuracy in respect of facts, and conciseness in point of style."—London Spectator.

Mr. Corney is well known as a contributor to Notes and Queries and other journals. He is one of the few learned archaeologists still left (1858) of the school of Nichols and Gough, Baker and Cole.

Cornings, Benj. N., b. 1817, at Cornish, N. Hampshire. Principles of Physiology, 1851. Class Book of Physiology, 1853. Preservation of Health and Prevention of Disease, 1854.

Cornish, Joseph. Theolog. treatises, &c., 1780, '89, '90. Importance of Classical Learning, 1783, 8vo.

Cornish, T. H. Jurymen's Legal Hand Book and Manual of Common Law, 2d ed., London, 1843, 8vo.

"This little volume contains much curious as well as useful matter, collected from various sources, adapted principally to the use of the general reader."—25 Legal Observer, 500.

Cornish, William Floyer. Essay on Uses, London, 1825, 8vo. Essay on the Law of Remainders, 1827, 8vo.

"It involves critical discussions upon the most abstruse, subtle, and artificial distinctions in the law, and the author is a shrewd and dry critic, dealing in occult points."—4 Kent's Com., 198, 245, 260.

"His new classification may be maintained without materially impairing the usefulness of Mr. Fearn's treatise."—Hoffman's Legal Study, 258.

Treatise on Purchase Deeds, 1828, 8vo.

"A very creditable production, better suited, however, for English conveyances than for this country. . . Every thing from the pen of Mr. Cornish is learned and able."—Hoffman's Legal Study; q. v. for an account of this learned author, who died at an early age.

Cornthwaite, Robert. The Sabbath, London, 1740, 8vo.

Cornwall, Barry. See PROCTER, BRYAN WALTER.

Cornwall, Frederic. Assize Sermon, London, 1710, 8vo.

Cornwall, Capt. Henry. Observations upon several Voyages to India, London, 1720, fol. Magnetic Needle; Phil. Trans., 1722.

Cornwall, James. Tables of Pleadings, Writs, &c., London, 1705, fol. This sometimes accompanies G. Townsend's Tables, 1667.

Cornwall, John, D.D. Sermon, Cambridge, 1701, 4to.

Cornwall, N. E. Music as it Was and as it Is, New York, 12mo.

Cornwallis, Henry. Sermons, &c. London, 1693-1706.

Cornwallis, Sir Charles, d. about 1630. The Life and Death of Henry, Prince of Wales, London, 1641, 8vo and 4to; 1644, 1738, '51; with an Appendix, 1788, 8vo. Granger commends this work for elegance of style, but Birch condemns it as extremely superficial.

Cornwallis, Charles, Marquis, 1738-1805, served against the Americans in their revolutionary struggle, and afterwards distinguished himself in Ireland and the East Indies. In 1762 he succeeded his father in the Earldom of Cornwallis. He accepted the government of British India in 1790, and again in 1805. He died in the latter year at Ghazepore, in the province of Benares. An Answer to that part of the Narrative of Lieut.-Gen. Henry Clinton, K. B., which relates to the Conduct of Earl C. during the Campaign in North America, in the year 1781, '82, 8vo.

Cornwallis, Frederick, Archbishop of Canterbury, d. 1783, son of Lord Cornwallis, was consecrated Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, 1749; translated to Canterbury, 1768. Sermons, 1751, '52, '56, '62.

Cornwallis, James, Dean of Canterbury, 1775, consecrated Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, 1781. Sermons, 1777, '82, 1811.

Cornwallis, Mrs. Mary. Observations on the Canonical Scriptures, London, 1817, '20, and last ed., 1831, 4 vols. 8vo.

"A judicious and pleasing companion in the perusal of the Holy Scriptures."—Lowndes's Brit. Lib.

Cornwallis, Sir William, son of Sir Charles. Essays, London, 1600, 8vo; newly corrected, 1632, 8vo. Discourses upon Seneca, 1601, 16mo. Union of England and Scotland, 1604, 4to. Essays on Encomium of Sadness and of Julian the Apostate, 1616, '26, 4to. Praise of King Richard, 1617: in the Somers Collection of Tracts, vol. iii.

Cornwell, B. M. L. The Domestic Physician, 1785.

Cornwell, Francis. Theolog. treatises, 1644, '45, '46.

Cornwell, James, has pub. many useful educational works—on Grammar, Geography, Composition, &c.—some of them in conjunction with the late Dr. Alexander Allen. Their works have been highly commended as "Written by those who are profoundly acquainted with the sources of our language."—Church of England Quarterly.

Corp, Harriet. An Antidote to the Miseries of Human Life, or the Widow Placid and her daughter Rachel, 1814, 2 vols. 8vo.

Corp, William, M.D. Jaundice, 1785. Essay, 1792.

Corri, D. Singer's Preceptor, 1811, 2 vols. 8vo.

Corrie, Archibald, 1777-1857, a distinguished agricultural writer.

Corrie, D., LL.D., first Bishop of Madras. Memoirs of; compiled chiefly from his own Letters and Journals, by his Brothers, London, 1846, 8vo.

Corrie, Edgar. Treat. on Polit. Econ., 1791, '96, 1808.

Corrie, George Elwes, Norrisian Prof. of Divinity, Cambridge. Burnet's Hist. of the Reformation abridged, London, 1847, 8vo.

"In this Edition, the supplemental Matter added by the Bishop, and which has hitherto existed in a Separate Form, has been incorporated into the History; admitted Error has been corrected, and some changes and additions made."

Corrie, James, M.D. Vitality of the Blood, Lon., 1791, 8vo.

Corrie, John. Apology for the diversity of religious sentiments, 1802, 8vo. Reflections on Private Judgment in Religion; a serm., 1804, 8vo.

Corrigan, Andrew. Theory and Practice of Modern Agriculture; to which is added, the breeding and management of sheep, cattle, pigs, and poultry, with some remarks on dairy-husbandry, 1853.

"This small work is truly a mutuum in parvo, showing a very correct knowledge of the articles described."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Corry, John. Life of Washington, Lon., 1800, 12mo; of A. Berkeley, 1808, 12mo; of Cowper, 1803, 12mo; of J. Priestley, 1805, 8vo. Tales, 1802, 12mo. View of London, 1799, 12mo. Address, 1803, 12mo. Novels, 1803, &c. The Detector of Quackery, or Analysis of Medical, Philosophical, Political, Dramatic, and Literary Imposture, 1801, 8vo.

Corry, John. Hist. of Bristol, by J. C. and John Evans, Bristol, 1816, 2 vols. r. 8vo.

"In little estimation."—Lowndes.

Corry, Joseph. Windward Coast of Africa, 1807, 4to.

Corse, John. Nat. History: see Phil. Trans., 1799, 1800.

Corser, William. Fast Sermon, Lon., 1793, 4to.

Corwine, Richard M. Digest of Cases in H. C. of E. and A., &c. of Mississippi, Cincinnati, 1845, 8vo.

"The material of this volume seems to have been carefully collected, and is very well arranged."—Merriv's Legal Bibl.

Cory, E. A. Diseases of Children, Lon., 12mo.

Cory, Isaac Preston. Ancient Fragments of various writers, 2d ed., Lon., 1832, 8vo. Ancient and M. Philosophy, 12mo. Inquiries, 12mo; ditto, 12mo. Accounts, 8vo. Official Accounts, 8vo.

Cory, Thomas. Course and P. of C. C. Pleas, 1672, 4to.

Coryate, or Coriat, George, d. 1606, educated at, and Fellow of, New College, Oxford; Rector of Odecombe, 1570; Prebendary of York, 1594. Poemata varia Latina, 1611, 4to. Descriptio Angliæ, Scotiæ, et Hiberniæ.

"He was a person much commended in his time for his fine fancy in Latin poetry, and for certain matters which he had written."—Athen. Oxon.

Coryate, or Coriat, Thomas, 1577–1617, son of the preceding, educated at Gloucester Hall, Oxford, was celebrated for his extended pedestrian excursions over a large portion of the Continent. In 1608 he travelled through France, Germany, and Italy, walking 1975 miles, more than half of which were accomplished in one pair of shoes, which were only once mended, and on his return were hung up in the church of Odecombe. Of this trip he pub. an account in 1611, 4to, under the title of Coryat's Crudities hastily gobbled up in five months' Travels in France, &c. Bib. Anglo-Poet., 113, £15. Repub. in 1776, 3 vols. 8vo.

"Which book was then usher'd into the world by an Odecomitant-Banquet, consisting of near 60 copies of excellent verses made by the poets of that time, (which did very much advantage the sale of the book); among them were Ben Jonson, Sir Jo. Harrington, etc."—Athen. Oxon.

"His book, known by the name of Coriat's Crudities, nauseous to nice readers, for the rawness thereof, is not altogether useless; though the porch be more worth than the palace: I mean, the presence of other men's mock-commending verses thereon."

This collection of ironical verses presents an amusing specimen of the taste for humour of many of the greatest names of the day. Coryate's Crambe, or his Colwort twice sodden, and now served in with other Macaronicke dishes, as the second course to his Crudities, 1611, 4to. Bib. Anglo-Poet., £10 10s. Traveller for the English Wits, 1616, 4to. Mr. Thomas Coriat to his Friends in England sendeth greeting from Agra, &c., in the Eastern India, Oct. 16, Lon., 1618, 4to. Some of his pieces will be found in Purchas's Pilgrimes. In 1612 this eccentric genius gathered the citizens around him at the cross in Odecombe, delivered a valedictory oration, and left his country for a ten years' ramble. But half the assigned limit had expired, when the wanderer was called to depart to that "undiscovered country from whose bourn no traveller returns." He died at Surat in 1617, after explorations in Greece, Asia, Egypt, and India. Before his roaming propensities became so strongly developed, he was in the service of Henry, Prince of Wales, and seems to have filled the honourable post of Court Fool, but it appears that he sometimes displayed more wit than those who had more reputation for wisdom.

"He carried folly (which the charitable called merriment) in his very face. The shape of his head had no promising form, being like a sugar-loaf inverted, with the little end before, as composed of fancy and memory, without any common sense. . . . He accounted those men guilty of superfluity, who had more suits and shirts than bodies, seldom putting off either till they were ready to go away from him. Prince Henry allowed him a pension, and kept him for his servant. Sweet-meats and Coriat made up the last course at all court entertainments. Indeed he was the courtiers' anvil to try their wits upon: and sometimes this anvil returned the hammers as hard knocks as it received, his bluntness repaying their abusiveness."—Fuller's Worthies.

"The distinguished characteristic of Coryat's mind seems to have been a passion for travelling, and an irrepressible desire to render his name famous by his peregrinations. 'Of all the pleasures in the world,' says he, 'travel is (in my opinion) the sweetest and most delightful.'"—Lon. Retrospect. Rev., 1822, vi. 206.

"He was a man of a very coveting eye, that could never be satisfied with seeing, tho' he had seen very much, and yet he took as much content in seeing, as many others in the enjoying of great and rare things."—Athen. Oxon. See also Biog. Brit.; Censura Literaria; Bibl. Anglo-Poet.; Purchas's Pilgrims.

We should not omit to mention that the useful thousand miles shoes which Coryat wore in his first travels were allowed to hang in undisturbed dignity in Odecombe Church for nearly a century. About 1702 they were removed, and where they are now preserved, or whether preserved at all, is more than we can say. We commend the subject to the early attention of the Society of Antiquaries.

Coriat, [Coriat,] Junior. Another Traveller; or Cursory Remarks and Critical Observations, made upon a Journey through part of the Netherlands, in the latter part of the year 1766, Lon., 1767, 3 vols. 12mo. This is the production of the celebrated Samuel Paterson, the London auctioneer.

"This book was an imitation of Sterne, and not of Coriat, whose name Paterson had chosen as a whimsical one."—Dr. Johnson.

But Paterson pub. a pamphlet entitled An Appeal, &c., to prove that his work was written before the appearance of Sterne's Sentimental Journey.

"As travels we are in conscience bound to say, that we cannot reckon them very praiseworthy; they do not, in fact, contain above half a dozen descriptions. Nor as a series of anecdotes will they stand the test; the number of those not being great, and honest Paterson not being the very best narrator of a story we have met with."—Lon. Retrospect. Rev., 1825, xli. 290, q. v. For an account of Sam. Paterson, see the above, and Nichols's Literary Anecdotes.

Corye, John. The Generous Enemies, or the Ridiculous Lovers, a Comedy, Lon., 1672, 4to.

"A complement or rather plagiarism from other authors."—Lowndes.

Corymbæus, i. e. Richard Brathwait.

Coryton, John. A Treatise on the Law of Letters Patent for the sole use of Inventions in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, including the practice connected with the Grant; to which is added a Summary of the Patent Laws in force in the principal foreign States; with an appendix of Statutes, Rules, Practical Forms, &c., Lon., 1855, 8vo; Amer. ed., with notes referring to Amer. Cases, Phila., 1855, 8vo.

Cosbie, Arnold. Ultimum Vale to the Vaine World, an Elegie written by himself in the Marshalsea, after his condemnation for murdering Lord Brooke, 1591, 4to.

Cosens, John, D.D. The Economy of Beauty; in a Series of Fables addressed to the Ladies, 1777, 4to. Serma., Lon., 1793, 2 vols. 8vo.

"The style of these sermons is vigorous, animated, and well suited to popular discourses."—Lon. Monthly Review.

"They tend to promote the cause of piety and virtue, and may be read with considerable pleasure and edification."—Brit. Critic.

Cosh, William. The Cause of the Cooper, Lon., 1765, 4to.

Cosin, James. Names of Roman Catholics, Nonjurors, and others who refused to take the Oath in George the First's time, Lon., 1745, 8vo.

Cosin, or Cozen, John, D.D., 1594–1672, a native of Norwich, educated at, and Fellow of, Caius College, Cambridge, Master of Peterhouse, Cambridge, 1638; Dean of Peterborough, 1640. In the time of the Commonwealth he was deprived of his ecclesiastical preferments, and retired to Paris, where he exercised his ministerial functions greatly to the advantage of the Protestant cause.

"Yea, whilst he remained in France, he was the Atlas of the Protestant religion, supporting the same with his piety and learning, confirming the wavering therein, yea, adding daily proselytes (not of the meanest rank) thereunto."—Fuller's Worthies.

At the Restoration he returned, and within the year was raised to the Bishopric of Durham. A Collection of Private Devotions in the Practice of the Ancient Churches, called the House of Prayer, Lon., 1627, 8vo. This manual, said to have been compiled at the request of Charles I., or of the Countess of Denbigh, was a chief cause of the troubles which befell the worthy doctor. The frontispiece—a cross, angels, &c.—especially, aroused the ire of Prynne and Burton. The Puritans styled the collection a book of Censuring Devotions. A Scholastical History of the Canon of Holy Scriptures, Lon., 1657, 4to, 1672, '83; new edit., 1849, vide post.

"This work contains a pretty satisfactory induction of the evidence for the authenticity of the Scriptures; and of the different degrees of authority or respect which the church has attached to the apocryphal books. It has long been completely superseded by the more extensive and accurate works of Jones, Lardner, and Michaels; but is still deserving of respect for the service which it rendered at the time."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

Historia Transubstant. Papalis, 1675, 8vo; in English, 1676, 8vo; new edit., revised with a Memoir of the author, by Rev. J. S. Brewer, Lon., 1840, 12mo.

"A most substantial treatise against transubstantiation."—Dr. JOHN DUKEL.

Notes on the Book of Common Prayer, 1710, fol. Dr. C. pub. some other treatises. An edit. of his works, now first collected, was pub. in Oxford, 1843–45, 5 vols. 8vo; Lib. of Anglo-Cath. Theology. A letter of Dr. C.'s upon the Validity of the orders of the Foreign Reformed Churches, will be found in Two Treatises on the Church, edited by Rev. Wm. Goode, Lon., 1843, 8vo.

"One whose abilities, quick apprehension, solid judgment, variety of reading, &c. are sufficiently made known to the world in his learned books, whereby he hath perpetuated his name to posterity. I must not pass over his constancy in his religion, which rendered him amiable in the eyes not of good men only, but of that of God, with whom there is no variableness nor shadow of changing. It must be confessed that a sort of fond people surmised as if he had once been declining to the popish persuasion. Thus the dim-sighted complain of the darkness of the room, when, alas, the fault is in their own eyes; and the lame, of the unevenness of the floor, when indeed it lieth in their unsound legs."—Fuller's Worthies.

Cosin, Richard, LL.D., Dean of the Arches, also Chancellor of the diocese of Worcester from 1579 until 1598. An Answer to a Libel entitled An Abstract of Certain Acts of Parliament, Lon., 1584, 4to. Conspiracy for pretended Reformation, viz.: Presbyterian Discipline by Hacket, Coppinger, and Arthington, 1592, 4to. Apologie for sundrie Proceedings by Iurisdiction Ecclesiasticall, 1593, 4to. Commended as "a learned and excellent work." There was an earlier edit. in two parts, only 40 copies printed. Carmina, &c., 1598, 4to. Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ Politeia in Tabulas digesta, Lon., 1604, fol.; Oxf., 1634, fol.; with preface by Allane, 1684, fol. Regni Angliæ sub imperio Regiæ Elizabethæ Religio et Gubernatio Ecclesiastica, aucta et emendata, cura Joannis Cosini. Gul. Wechet, Editore, Lon., 1729, 4to.

"He was a general scholar, geometrician, musician, physician, divine, but chiefly civil and canon lawyer. . . His last words were these, 'Farewell, my surviving friends; remember your mortality and eternal life.'"—Fuller's Worthies.

Cossham, J. N. Interest Time Tables, 1813, 12mo.

Costa, Emanuel M. Da. See DA COSTA.

Costard, George, 1710–1782, Fellow and Tutor of Wadham College, Vicar of Twickenham, 1764. Mr. C. was versed in astronomy, and famous for his Oriental learning, and thereby acquired the title of Rabbi Costard. Observations on some Psalms, 8vo. Use of Astronomy, 1764, 4to. Hist. of Astronomy, 1767, 4to. A second edit. of Hyde's Historia Religionis Veterum Persarum eorumque Magorum, 1760, 4to. Con. to Phil. Trans., 1745, '51, '53, '54, '77.

Observations on the Book of Job, 1747, 8vo.

"Ingenious, but not all correct. He was of opinion that it was not older than the time of the Babylonish captivity; and considered it a piece of exalted and regular Eastern poetry, of the dramatic kind."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

Other publications. See Biog. Brit.; Bibl. Brit.; Nichols's Literary Anecdotes.

Coste, Peter. Trans. of Montaigne's Essays, 1759, 3 vols. 8vo.

"An immense treasure-house of observation, anticipating all the discoveries of succeeding essayists; you cannot open him without detecting a Spectator, or Rambler."—LEIGH HUNT.

Very extravagant, this, Mr. Leigh Hunt!

Costeker. The Fine Gentleman; or, The Education of a Young Nobleman, Lon., 1732, 8vo.

Costello, Mrs. The Soldier's Orphan; a Tale, 1809, 3 vols. 12mo.

"Some novels have no character at all, and this is one of them. It is neither remarkably dull, nor particularly lively; neither perfectly uninteresting, nor peculiarly pleasing; in short, neither commendable nor reprehensible."—Lon. Monthly Review, 1809.

Costello, Dudley. A Tour through the Valley of the Meuse, Lon., 1845, p. 8vo.

Costello, Col. Edward. Adventures of a Soldier, Lon., 1841, p. 8vo.

"This highly interesting volume is filled with details and anecdotes of the most sterling character, and well deserves a place in the library of every regiment in the service."—Naval and Military Gazette.

Costello, Louisa Stuart, one of the most voluminous and most popular writers of the day. Specimens of the Early Poetry of France, Lon., 1835, 8vo.

"We warmly recommend Miss Costello's very elegant little work."—Lon. Athenæum.

Summer amongst the Bocages and Vines, 1840, 2 vols. 8vo.

"These volumes are written with true gusto: they sparkle over with sketches of romantic scenery, outlines of antique places, historical legends, local traditions, &c."—Lon. Atlas.

"Most agreeable volumes."—Lon. Quar. Review.

The Queen Mother, a Romance, 3 vols. p. 8vo. A Pilgrimage to Auvergne, 1842, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Two more delightful volumes have not proceeded from the pen of the tourist."—John Bull.

Memoirs of Eminent Englishwomen, 1844, 4 vols. 8vo.

The reader will here find 37 biographies.

The Rose Garden of Persia; trans. from the Persian Poets, 1845, 8vo.

"She has by this remarkable volume of specimens at once won her way into the foremost rank of modern poets."—Lon. M. Chron.

The Falls, Lakes, and Mountains of N. Wales, 1845, 8vo.

"It is gratifying to find that she has brought her exquisite sense of the picturesque, and vivid appreciation of local historical association, always simple and unpretending in their enunciation, to bear upon a portion of Great Britain."—Ainsworth's Magazine.

A Tour to and from Venice, 1846, 8vo.

"A pleasanter book for travellers bound to the north of Italy it would be difficult to find."—Oxford and Cambridge Review.

Jacques Cœur, the French Argonaut, and His Times, 1847, 8vo. Miss C. has also pub. Bearn and the Pyrenees, 1844, 2 vols. 8vo; Catherine de Medicis, 1848, p. 12mo, and p. 8vo; Clara Fane, 1848, 3 vols. p. 8vo; Gabrielle, 1843, 3 vols. p. 8vo; and Songs of a Stranger, 8vo. We express the wish of many, when we record the desire that Miss Costello may long continue to delight and instruct a public whom she has made so familiar with her merits.

Coster, Robert. A Mite cast into the common Treasury, 1649, 4to.

Costigan, Capt. A. W. Sketches of Society and Manners in Portugal, Lon., 1788, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Very good pictures of Portuguese life and manners, though in many instances, the portraiture seems considerably over-charged—the outline caricatured—and the colouring too much heightened."—Lon. Monthly Rev., 1789.

Costill, O. H. Practical Treatise on Poisons, their Symptoms, Antidotes, and Mode of Treatment, Phila., 18mo.

Cosway, Mrs. Mary, d. 1804, a miniature painter of great reputation, projected and partially prepared a collection of copies of paintings in the Musée Française, accompanied with historical notices. In consequence of the loss of a child, she abandoned her design, and retired to a nunnery near Lyons. See Woman's Record.

Cotes. Sketches of Truth, 1803, 3 vols. 12mo.

Cotes, Charles. Oratio, &c., Harveiana, 1746, 4to.

Cotes, Digby. See COATES.

Cotes, Henry. Serms., 1805, '13; ditto, from Beausobre, 1822, 8vo.

"A paraphrase, rather than a translation."—Preface.

Cotes, J. Surveyor's Guide, 1806, 8vo.

Cotes, Roger, 1682–1716, an eminent mathematician and astronomer, a native of Burbage, Leicestershire, was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, Fellow, 1705; Plumian Prof. of Astronomy, 1706. In 1713 he took orders, and in the same year, at the desire of Dr. Bentley, he pub. at Cambridge the second edit. of Sir Isaac Newton's Mathematica Principia, &c., with the author's improvements, and a preface of his own, which has been greatly admired. A number of his works were pub. after his death. Harmonia Mensurarum, pub. by Dr. Smith, 1722, Camb., 4to. Opera Miscellanea, Camb., 1722, 4to. Theorematum, &c., Camb., 1722, 4to. Extracts from his Lectures, 4to. Compendium of Arithmetic; in English, pub. by Dr. Smith, 1737, 8vo. Account of a great Meteor which appeared in 1715, Phil. Trans., 1720. Hydros and Pneumat. Lectures, pub. with notes by Dr. Smith, 1738, 8vo. Cotes was eminently versed in mathematics, metaphysics, philosophy, and divinity. Those not conversant with the scientific history of the period would consider us extravagant in ranking Cotes as the equal of any philosopher whom England has hitherto produced. That Sir Isaac Newton considered himself as inferior to the editor of his Principia, we have good reason to believe. We must not, however, forget to make proper allowance for the remarkable humility of this wonderful genius: a humility to which we find a striking counterpart in the character of a celebrated personage, equally distinguished, though in a far different sphere,—the illustrious Edmund Burke. The great Dr. Bentley

"Never mentioned Cotes but with the highest regret, [he died at the age of 35:] he had formed the highest expectations of new lights and discoveries in Philosophy from the penetrating force of his extraordinary genius; and on the tablet devoted to his memory in the chapel of Trinity College, has recorded his sorrows, and those of the whole learned world, in the following beautiful and pathetic epitaph:

H. S. E.
Rogerus Roberti filius Cotes,
Collegii hujus S. Trinitatis Socius,
Astronomiæ et Experimentalis Philosophiæ:
Professor Plumianus.

Qui
Immaturâ morte præreptus, paucis quidem ingenui sui pignora reliquit,
sed ægrotia, sed admiranda, ex inaccessa Matheseos penetralibus felici solertia cum primum ætatis
Post magnum illum Newtonum
Societatis hujus spes altera et decus gemellum
Cui ad summam doctrinæ laudem."

See Nichols's Literary Anecdotes, ii. 128.

Sir Isaac Newton mourned the loss of a great philosopher in Cotes, and would exclaim when referring to his early death—"If Cotes had lived, we had known something."

Cotes, William. Short Questions between the Father and the Sonne, Lon., 1585, 8vo.

Cotgrave, John. The English Treasury of Wit and Language, collected out of the best Dramatick Poems; methodically digested into common places for general use, Lon., 1665, 8vo. Bibl. Anglo-Poet., 168, £3 3s.

"Thou mayest not reasonably expect the abstracted Quintessence of betwixt three and four hundred Poems in this small compass, (which yet may be large enough for an essay,) for I find that an absolute impossibility. But I can assure thee, that what is herein couched, is a great part of the best, and generally taken out of the best."—Address to the Reader.

Wit's Interpreter, or the English Parnassus, 1655, 8vo.

Cotgrave, Randle. French and English Dictionary, with another by R. Sherwood; edit. by J. Howell, Lon., 1673, fol. To those who read the old French writers, or wish to compare the changes in language, this is a valuable book.

"It is a rich storehouse of old French, and English also."—Todd.

Cotman, John Sell, 1780–1843, b. at Norwich. Architectural Antiquities of Normandy, Lon., 1820, '21, with Hist. and Descrip. Notices by Dawson Turner, super-roy. fol.

"A highly valuable and faithful delineation of hitherto inedited monuments."—Lon. Quar. Review.

Miscellaneous Etchings, super-roy. fol., 1812. Architect. Antiq. of Norfolk, 1812–17, imp. fol. Sepulchral Brasses in Norfolk, 1819, roy. 4to; new edit., greatly enlarged, 2 vols. imp. 4to.

"A work highly interesting to the Antiquary and the man of taste, as throwing much light on the early history of this country; and bearing an equal degree of artful merit with the 'Antiquities of Norfolk' by the same artist."—General Hist. of Norfolk.

"Cotman's work on Sepulchral Brasses is by far the most important publication on the subject."—DAWSON TURNER.

Liber Studiorum, 1838, imp. fol. Illustrations of Dr. Dibdin's Bibliographical Tour in France and Normandy, by J. S. C. and Mrs. D. Turner, imp. 8vo. Architect. and Picturesque Remains in various Counties of England, but chiefly in Norfolk. With descriptions by Thomas Rickman. Other publications of a similar character. See H. G. Bohn's Cat., 1841.

"His Etchings have all the richness and vigour of the best artists of the old School, and are highly prized by all who are capable of appreciating them."—Lon. Quar. Review.

Cotta, John. Medicine and Witchcraft, 1612–25.

Cotter, George Sackville. Poems, Cork, 1790, 8vo.

Cotter, John R. Gospels of Matt. and Mark, paraphrased, Lon., 2d ed., 1840, 12mo. Treatises, &c. for the Times, Lon., 1849, 12mo. Mass and Rubrics of the R. C. Church, trans. into English, 1845, 12mo.

"A very exact version in our own language."

Cotterel, Sir Charles, Master of the Requests to Charles II. Cassandra, trans. from the French of La Calprenède, Lon., 1735, 5 vols. 12mo.

"The most famous of the Heroical Romances, from which Rousseau (a great reader of them) has taken some of the affecting incidents in the New Heloise."—DUNLOP.

Historie of the Civill Warres of France, trans. from the Italian of Davila, by C. C. and Wm. Aylesbury, 1647, fol.; 2d ed., 1678, fol.

"A noble historian, equal to Livy."—LORD BOLINGBROKE.

"The History of the Civil Wars from 1559 to 1598 displays profound knowledge of times, characters, intrigues, &c."—SIMONDI.

Cotterill, T. Speech before the Bible Society, 1813, 8vo.

Cottesford, S. Against Traitors, 1591. Serm., 1622.

Cottingham, John. Serms., &c., 1784–1807.

Cottingham, L. N. Architectural works, 1822–24.

Cottle, Amos Simon, d. 1800, was educated at Magdalen College, Cambridge. Icelandic Poetry, or the Edda of Shemend, trans. into English Verse, Lon., 1797, 8vo. Other poetical compositions. Both Amos and Joseph Cottle were roughly handled by a very foolish young man, smarting under a deserved rebuke:

"Oh! AMOS COTTLE, Phœbus!—what a name
To fill the speaking trumpet of future fame!
Oh! AMOS COTTLE! for a moment think
What meagre profits spread from pen and ink!"

Byron's Eng. Bards and S. Reviewers.

Yet Amos was a favourite with the terrible Monthly Reviewers:

"His Icelandic, like his other poetry, is versified often with vigour, and always with neatness, with grace, and with euphony. Of Mr. Cottle's poetical talents we have repeatedly spoken with approbation."—Monthly Review, 1798, 381.

Cottle, John. New Version of the Psalms, Lon., 1802, 12mo. The author states that he has omitted, transposed, and paraphrased, as the occasion seemed to require.

Cottle, Joseph, d. 1853, in his 84th year. Poems, 1795, 12mo. Malvern Hills, a Poem, 1798, 4to. John the Baptist, a Poem, 1801, 8vo. Alfred, an Epic Poem, 1801, 4to; 1804, 2 vols. 12mo, and 1816. Selection of Poems for Young Persons, 1805, '15, 12mo. The Fall of Cambria, a Poem, 1809, '11, 2 vols. 8vo. Other publications. Early Recollections of Coleridge, 1837, 2 vols. 8vo. Mr. C. was in early life a bookseller, but relinquished that business in 1798, shortly after publishing the Lyrical Ballads of Coleridge. He pub. in 1796 Coleridge's first vol. of Poems. See Coleridge's Letter to him in Gent. Mag., Aug. 1853.

"Boeotian Cottle, rich Bristow's boast,
Imports old stories from the Cambrian Coast,
And sends his goods to market—all alive!
Lines forty thousand, Cantos twenty-five."

Byron's Eng. Bards and S. Reviewers.

Well had it been for Byron had he been as good a man as "Boeotian Cottle." He may have been a bad poet, but he was—that rarer character—a good friend. To both Coleridge and Southey he extended the hand of kindness, when kindness was the most needed:

"If my poems should ever acquire a name and character, it might be said the world owed them to you. Had it not been for you, none perhaps of them would have been published, and some not written. Your obliged and ever affectionate friend, S. T. COLERIDGE." Letter to Cottle, April 15, 1798.

"Do you suppose, Cottle, that I have forgotten those true and most essential acts of friendship which you showed me when I stood most in need of them? Your house was my house when I had no other. . . . Sure I am; there never was a more generous or a kinder heart than yours; and you will believe me when I add that there does not live that man upon earth whom I remember with more gratitude and affection. . . . Good night! my dear old friend and benefactor."—ROBERT SOUTHEY: Letter to Cottle, April 20, 1804.

Commend us to that noble-hearted man who in the day of his prosperity is not ashamed to acknowledge the benefactions received in the dark hours

"When friends were few and fortune frowned!"

In the letter quoted above, (the reader must devour the whole of it; see Southey's Life and Correspondence,) Southey, to his lasting honour, tells his friend,

"You are in the habit of preserving your letters, and if you were not, I would entreat you to preserve this, that it might be seen hereafter."

The reader will now understand that our transcriptions have been made from a sense of duty (accompanied with much pleasure) to both writer and recipient.

In the same generous spirit he writes to John May: "You ought to become acquainted with my old friend Joseph Cottle, the best-hearted of men. . . . Become acquainted with one who has a larger portion of original goodness than falls to the lot of most men."—Spt. 15, 1827.

"Cottle published my Joán of Arc in 1796, and there are very few who entertain a warmer regard for me than he has done from that time."—Letter to Charles Swain, Oct. 27, 1836.

We trust we have no reader who will complain of the length of this article, consecrated to two of the noblest feelings of the human breast—to Friendship and Gratitude!

"If such there breathe, go mark him well,
For him no Minstrel raptures swell."

Cotton, Bartholemew de, Monk of Norwich. Annales Ecclesiæ Norwicensis, 1042–1295, et Historia de Episcopis Norw., ad an. 1299. Accedunt continuatio historie ad an. 1446, et successio Episcoporum et priorum. Vide Wharton, Anglia Sacra, 1691.

Cotton, Charles, 1630–1687, educated at Cambridge, obtained considerable celebrity as a humorous poet and translator. See a list of his publications in Watt's Bibl. Brit. We notice a few: Devaix's Philos. of the Stoics, 1664. A Voyage to Ireland. Virgil Travestie, 1664–67, and '92, 3 vols. 8vo. Some of Lucian's Dialogues in English Fustian, 1675, 8vo.

"Nothing can be more vulgar, disgusting, or licentious, than his parodies on Virgil and Lucian. That they should have been so often reprinted, marks the slow progress of the refinement of public taste during the greater part of the eighteenth century."

The Wonders of the Peake, 1681, 8vo. Genuine Works, 1715, 8vo. Trans. of Montaigne's Essays, 1759, 3 vols. 8vo. Poems, 1689, 8vo. Poetical Works, 1765, 12mo; 6th ed., 1771, 12mo.

Cotton is best known by his addition to his adopted father's (Isaak Walton) Complete Angler. This treatise—How to angle for a Trout or Grayling in a clear stream—was written in ten days. It is often found bound up in the 3d and 4th edits. of the Complete Angler, and was reprinted with every subsequent edit. See an account of their Fish House, &c. on the river Dove, in Biog. Brit.

"It is of stone, and the room on the inside a cube of about fifteen feet. It is paved with black and white marble. . . . In the farther corner, on the left, is a fire-place, with a chimney; and on the right, a large beaufet with folding-doors, wherein are the portraits of Mr. Cotton, with a boy-servant, and Walton, in the dress of the time: underneath is a cupboard, on the door whereof the figures of a trout, and also of a grayling, are well portrayed. . . . Over the door the initial letters of his own name and Isaac Walton's were placed together in a cypher."—Note to the Compl. Angler, 21st edit., 1784.

Cotton, Clement. Mirror of Martyrs, Lon., 1631, 8vo. Convert's Catechism, 1616, 8vo. Concordance to the Bible, 1631, '33, fol.; enlarged, &c. by Samuel Newman, 1643. Way of Life, 1641, 4to.

Cotton, Edward. Loadstone; Phil. Trans., 1667.

Cotton, G. E. L., D.D. Lord-Bishop of Calcutta and Metropolitan of India. 1. Doctrine and Practice of Christianity; 3d ed., Lon., 1853, 18mo. 2. Short Prayers for Public Schools; 5th ed., 1854, 18mo. 3. Seven Sermons, 1855, 8vo. 4. Sermons, 1858, cr. 8vo.

Cotton, Henry, D.C.L., Archdeacon of Cashel. List of Edits. of the Bible and Parts thereof in English, 1505–1820, &c., Lon., 1821, 8vo; 2d ed., enlarged, 1852, 8vo. See Lewis, J. "Evidently the result of deep research, and drawn up with great care."—Horne's Introduction.

"Very complete. . . . The most valuable part is the Appendix, in which Mr. Cotton gives specimens of all the early translations of the Scriptures into English; besides accurate descriptions of the several scarce editions. The author has availed himself of the previous labours of Lewis, Ducarel, (or rather Tutet,) and Gifford, Crutwell, and Newcome."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"This and Lewis's Hist. of Eng. Trans. give the fullest accounts of the points on which they treat."—Dickens's Christian Student.

The Typographical Gazetteer, Oxf., 1825, 8vo; 2d ed., enlarged, 1831. Mem. of a French trans. of the N. Testament, Lon., 1827, 8vo.

"Dr. Kidder's pamphlet having become extremely rare, Dr. Cotton has rendered a valuable service to the Protestant cause by reprinting it, with some corrective notes; and he has prefixed an interesting bibliographical memoir on the Bordeaux New Testament."—Horne's Introduction.

The Five Books of Maccabees in English, with Notes and Illustrations, Oxf., 1832, 8vo.

"Dr. Cotton has for the first time given an English translation of what are called the fourth and fifth books; and he successfully adapted the style and language of his version to those of the preceding books, as closely as was consistent with a careful adherence to the original."—Ibid.

A Short Explain. of Obsolete Words in our Version of the Bible, &c., Oxf., 1832, 12mo. Fasti Ecclesie Hibernice: The Succession of the Prelates and Members of the Cathedral Bodies in Ireland, Dublin, 1845–50, 4 vols. 8vo. Rhemes and Doway: An Attempt to Shew what has been done by R. Catholics for the Diffusion of the Holy Scriptures in English, Oxf., 1855, 8vo.

"A most valuable contribution to Biblical bibliography."—T. H. Horne, D.D., in a letter to the author of this Dictionary, Aug. 31, 1858.

Cotton, J. D. Lachrymæ Elegiacæ, &c., 1765, 4to.

Cotton, John, 1585–1652, a native of Derby, England, educated at Trinity and Emanuel College, Cambridge, became in his 28th year minister of Boston in Lincolnshire. Having adopted the principles of the Puritans, he emigrated to Boston, Mass., and spent the rest of his days in America. He was eminent for profound learning and devoted piety. He pub. many theological works, the most celebrated of which were in defence of the interference of the civil power in support of the truth. In this position he found a powerful antagonist in Roger Williams. Cotton's Letter concerning the power of the Magistrate in matters of Religion was answered by W. in 1644, in The Bloody Tenet of Persecution for the cause of conscience. This elicited Cotton's Bloody Tenet washed and made white in the Blood of the Lamb, 1647. Williams rejoined in The Bloody Tenet yet more bloody by Mr. Cotton's endeavour to wash it white in the Blood of the Lamb, 1652. A Discourse about Civil Government in a New Plantation, &c., was pub. in Camb., 1663, sm. 4to, under Cotton's name, but it was really the production of John Davenport of New Haven Colony. This book is so rare, that a copy in sheets sold in New York in 1847 for $14 50. Cotton's youngest daughter married Increase Mather. See Mather's Magnalia; Norton and Mather's Life of Cotton; Neefs N. E.; Hutchinson; Winthrop; Mass. Hist. Coll.; Allen's Amer. Biog. Dict.

Cotton, John, 1640–1699, minister at Plymouth, Mass., son of the preceding, revised and corrected Eliot's Indian Bible, printed at Cambridge in 1685.

Cotton, John, d. 1757, in the 64th year of his age, minister of Newton, Mass., great-grandson of the first-named John Cotton. Serms., 1728, '29, '34, '39, '53.

Cotton, John, d. 1789, aged 77, first minister of Halifax, Mass., great-grandson of the first-named John Cotton. Two Serms., 1757. Baptism. Hist. of Plymouth Church.

Cotton, Josiah, 1680–1756, father of the preceding, compiled and left in MS. a copious English and Indian Vocabulary. He had four sons who were ministers.

Cotton, Nathaniel, 1707–1788, an English physician and poet, was noted for his skill in the treatment of insanity, and had a private establishment for lunatics. Obs. on Scarlet Fever, Lon., 1749, 8vo. Visions in Verse, 1751, '64. Works in Prose and Verse, 1791, 2 vols. 12mo. Marriage, a Vision; being an addit. to J. Macgown on Marriage, 1811, 8vo.

"He is truly a philosopher, according to my judgment of the character, every tittle of his knowledge in natural subjects being connected in his mind with the firm belief in an omnipotent agent."—Cowper: who had been Dr. C.'s patient.

Cotton, R. P., M.D. On Consumption: its Nature, Symptoms, and Treatment. To which Essay was awarded the Fothergillian Gold Medal of the Medical Society of London, Lon., 1852, 8vo.

"Notwithstanding the hackneyed nature of the subject, and the multitude of works which have appeared upon phthisis, the present work is of very considerable interest, from the clear and simple manner in which it is arranged, and from the use made by the author of the ample materials placed at his disposal at the Brompton Hospital."—Medical Times.

Phthisis and the Stethoscope: a concise Practical Guide to the Physical Diagnosis of Consumption, 1851, 8vo.

Cotton, Richard Lynch, D.D. Provost of Worcester College, Oxford, formerly Vicar of Denchworth. The Way of Salvation, a series of Serms., Oxf., 1837, 8vo.

Cotton, Sir Robert Bruce, 1570–1631, an eminent antiquary, a native of Denton, Huntingdonshire, but a descendant of Robert Bruce, was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge. He was created a knight upon the accession of James I., and was highly esteemed by the king and principal statesmen, who often solicited his advice. In 1629 he was arrested and confined in the Tower, in consequence of a manuscript, which proposed a plan by which the king could enslave his subjects, being traced to his library. It was the production of Sir Robert Dudley, and Sir Robert Cotton seems to have been unconscious even of its possession. Upon his innocence being made apparent, he was released, and his liberty restored to him. This was a severe blow to the excellent man, and he never regained his strength of body or cheerfulness of mind.

"When I went several times to visit and comfort him in the year 1630, he would tell me 'they had broken his heart that had locked up his library from him.' He was so outworn, within a few months, with anguish and grief, as his face, which had been formerly rosy and well coloured, (such as the picture I have of him shows,) was wholly changed into a grim blackish paleness, near to the resemblance and hue of a dead visage."—Sir Symonds D'Ewex.

He died of a fever at Westminster in the next year. His noble library, the fruit of many years' collections, received augmentations from his son and grandson, and was deposited in the British Museum in 1753. It had suffered severely from a fire in 1731. Its inestimable value is too well known to require any enlargement upon the subject. Sir Robert wrote many historical, antiquarian, and political treatises. For a particular account of them, see references below. We notice a few: Life and Reign of Henry III. of England, 1627, 4to. A Treatise against Recusants, in Defence of the Oath of Allegiance, 1641, 4to. Wars with Foreign Princes dangerous to our Commonwealth, 1657, 8vo. Abridgt. of the Records (Rolls of Parliament) in the Tower, with addits. by Wm. Prynne, 1657, 2 vols. fol. Narrative of Count Gondomar's Transactions during his Embassy to England, 1659, 4to. The King's Revenue. Discourse of Foreign War, 1690, 8vo. Many of his Pieces will be found in Hearne's Discourses, and also in Cottoni Posthuma: Divers choice Pieces of that renowned Antiquary, Sir Robert Cotton, by J. (ames) H. (owell), Lon., 1651, '72, '79, 8vo. Also refer to Biog. Brit.; Watt's Bibl. Brit.; Lowndes's Bibl. Manual; Pref. to Plante's Cottonian Cat., 1802, fol.; Life prefixed to Dr. Smith's Cat., 1696; Nichols's Leicestershire; Hist. of Hinckley; Life of Bowyer; Bridgman's Legal Bibl.; Gent. Mag., 1767; Chalmers's Biog. Dict.; Cunningham's Biog.

Hist.; Dibdin's Bibliomania. For a recent description of the Cottonian Library, see the excellent Hand Book to the library of the Brit. Museum, by Richard Sims, Lon., 1854, 18mo. It may be said without "Exaggeration, that the writers upon the history and antiquities of Great Britain and Ireland have been more indebted to the inexhaustible treasures of the Cottonian Library than to all other sources together."

There can be no question that Sir Robert Cotton is entitled to a place in the first rank of England's learned antiquaries; a noble army, truly!

"The name of Sir Robert Cotton must always be mentioned with honour; his memory cannot fail of exciting the warmest sentiments of gratitude while the smallest regard for learning subsists among us."—DR. SAMUEL JOHNSON.

See Gale's eloquent tribute—"quisquis bona fide Historiam nostram," &c.—in Rer. Anglia Script. Vet. i. præf. 3.

Cotton, Roger. Direction to the Waters of Lyfe, Lon., 1590, 4to. Treatise, 4to. Armour of Proofs brought from the Tower of David to fight against the Spannyardes and all Enemies of the Truth, 1598, 4to. Spiritual Songs, 1596, 4to.

Cotton, W. C. My Bee Book, Lon., 1842, p. 8vo.

"One of the most elegant volumes that ever graced a library-table. . . The perfection of a scrap-book for the gentleman or lady bee-keeper."—Lon. Quar. Review.

Two Letters to Cottagers on Bees: 1. On Bee Management. 2. On the Natural Theology of Bees, 1843, 12mo. Short and Simple Letters to Cottagers, 1844, 12mo.

Cottrell, C. H. Don Carlos, a Dramatic Poem, Lon., 8vo; 2d ed., 1844. Recollections of Siberia in 1840, '41, 1843, 8vo. Relig. Move. of Germany, 1849, 8vo. Trans. of C. J. Bunsen's Egypt's Place in Universal History, 1848, '53, 2 vols. 8vo.

"The fullest and most exact work that has hitherto appeared on the interpretation of hieroglyphical inscription."—Church of Eng. Quar. Review.

"The learned author is one of the most erudite and accomplished expositors of ancient Egyptian learning."—Lon. Critic.

The Chevalier is also favourably known as a learned writer by his Constitution of the Church of the Future, trans., 1847, p. 8vo. Memoirs of the Duchies of Schleswig and Holstein, 1848, p. 8vo. Hippolytus and his Age; or The Chris. Church of the Third Century, 1852, 4 vols. p. 8vo.

Couch, John. Anabaptismarum; or Answer to a Kentish Anabaptist, made in the year 1649, Lon., 1650, 4to.

Couch, Jonathan. Illustrations of Instinct, Lon., 1847, p. 8vo.

"This volume is full of anecdotes which must delight readers of all ages, and is written in a most popular and unpretending style."—Britannia.

Couch, Robert. Praxis Catholica, by C. Pack, 1680.

Couchman, Giles. An Exhortation or Warning, to beware of greater Plagues and Troubles than are yet come upon this Realm, for the Sinnes and Wickedness that has been, and is yet daily committed therein. Lon., 1551, 8vo.

Coues, Samuel Elliot. Outlines of a System of Mechanical Philosophy; being a Research into the Laws of Force, Boston, 1851, 12mo.

"We heartily commend this work to philosophical inquirers, as one full of strength, beauty, and originality, and eminently entitled to their attention."—GEORGE RIPLEY.

Couleius, Abrahamus. See COWLEY.

Couling, Nich. The Saints Perfect in this Life or never, Lon., 1647, 12mo.

Coulson, William, Surgeon to the Magdalen Hospital, London. Diseases of the Bladder and Prostate Gland, 4th ed., 1852, 8vo.

"We strongly recommend it to the attention and perusal of our readers."—Lon. Lancet.

Deformities of the Chest and Spine, 2d ed., 1839, p. 8vo. Diseases of the Hip Joint, 2d ed., 1841. New ed. of Laurence's trans. of Blumenbach's Manual of Comparative Anatomy.

"The most useful elementary work on Comparative Anatomy which we yet possess is the Short System of Professor Blumenbach."—Sup. to Encyc. Brit., art. Animal Anatomy.

Trans. of Edwards's Manual of Surgical Anatomy.

"The work contains a great deal of practical information, which cannot fail to be interesting to the student and practitioner. The translation is well executed, and Mr. Coulson has increased its value by the addition of notes containing information derived from the records of both English and German surgery."—Lon. Med. and Phys. Jour.

Coult, Nich. Patternes of True Repentance, 1595.

Coultas, Harland. Principles of Botany, as exemplified in the Cryptogamia, with Illus., Phila., 1853, 12mo.

Coulter, John, M.D. Adventures in the Pacific, Dubl., 1845, p. 8vo. Adventures on the Western Coast of South America, and in the Interior of California, Lon., 1847, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

"Every page teems with adventure of the most extraordinary and most racy kind."—Lon. Naval and Mill. Gaz.

"In energy and power of observation it resembles Dampier and the other old voyagers."—Jerrold's Paper.

Coulthard, Clara. Poems, 16mo. Rhymes for an Hour, 1842, 18mo. Prayers and Hymns, 1845, 18mo.

Coulthart, J. R. Decimal Interest Table, Lon., 8vo.

Coulthurst, H. W., D.D. Sermon, 1796.

Coulton, David Trevena. Inquiry into the Authorship of the Letters of Junius. Fortune: a Story of London Life, 3 vols. p. 8vo, 1853.

"All is reality about it: the time, the characters, and the incidents. In its reality consist its charm and its merit. It is, indeed, an extraordinary work, and has introduced to the world of fiction a new writer of singular ability, with a genius more like that of Bulwer than any to whom we can compare it."—Lon. Critic.

Coulton, James Trevena. Dootrine of the Bible, 1805, 8vo.

Counsell, George. Midwifery, Lon., 1752, 12mo.

Couper, Catherine M. A. Visits to Beechwood Farm, Lon., 1847, 16mo. Lucy's Half Crown, 18mo. Trans. of Wm. Von Humboldt's Letters to a Female Friend.

"Remarkable letters."—Westminster Review.

"We have seldom read such a rendering of German thought into the English tongue."—Lon. Critic.

Couper, Robert, M.D. Poetry, chiefly in the Scottish Language, 1802, 2 vols. 12mo. Med. Treatise, 1803, 8vo. The Tourifications of Malachi Meldrum, 1803, 2 vols. 12mo. Hist. of Brit. Isles, 1807, 8vo.

Courayer, Peter Francis, 1681–1776, a French divine of the Roman Catholic Church, after a careful examination became satisfied of the validity of the orders of the Church of England, and drew up a treatise entitled, Dissertation sur la validité des Ordinations des Anglois, et sur la Succession des Evêques de l'Eglise Anglicane: avec les preuves justificatives des faits avancés dans cet ouvrage; printed at Nancy (though Brussels appears on the title) in 1723, 2 vols. 8vo. It was trans. into English by the Rev. Daniel Williams, and pub. in Lon., 1725, 8vo; 2d ed., 1727; new ed., Oxf., 1844, 8vo. In 1726 Couray pub. a Défence de la Dissertation, &c., Brux., 4 vols. 12mo. The Défence was also trans. by Williams, Lon., 1728, 2 vols. 8vo. The new Oxf. ed. noticed above does not contain the "Défence." In 1727 he received the degree of D.D. from the University of Oxford. Being subjected to much censure at home on account of this work, and anticipating personal danger, he took refuge in England, where he resided from 1728 until his death in 1776. He attended the services of the Church of England, but never renounced the communion of the Church of Rome. He pub. a Letter to Card. de Noailles, Lon., 1728, 8vo, trans. of Father Paul's Hist. of the Council of Trent, 1736, 2 vols. fol., and a trans. of Sleidan's Hist. of the Reformation, 1767, 3 vols. 4to. His declaration of his last sentiments on the subject of religion was pub. in French, by W. Bell, D.D., in 1787, 8vo, (also pub. in English), and a Treatise on the Trinity, in French, appeared in 1810.

Courcy, Richard De. See DE COURCY.

Courcenn. Catastrophe, &c. rel. to E. I. Company, 1644.

Court. Trans. of Josephus, Lon., 1733, fol.

Courtall, John. Sermon, Lon., 1760, 4to.

Courtenay, Charles. Ereton; a Novel, 1809, 2 vols.

Courtenay, Edward H. Trans. of Bouchardat's Mechanics, with addita. and emendations, New York, 8vo.

Courtenay, Henry Reignald, Bishop of Bristol, 1794; translated to Exeter, 1797. Fast Sermon, 1795, 4to. Charge, 1796, 4to.

Courtenay, John, M.P., 1741?–1816, a native of Ireland. Commission of the Treasury, 1806. Poetical Review of the Literary and Moral Character of Dr. Saml. Johnson, 1786, 4to. Philos. Reflex. on the French Revolution, in a Letter to Dr. Priestley, 1790, 8vo.

"Mr. Courtenay is a true believer in the Horatian precept: no one more frequently substitutes the ridiculum for the acere, nor comes to the discussion of grave matters with a more laughing countenance."—Lon. Monthly Review, 1790.

Manners, Arts, and Politics of France and Italy, in Poetical Epistles, 1792, '93, 1794, 8vo. Post. and Philos. Essay on the French Revolution, addressed to Mr. Burke, 1793, 8vo.

Courtenay, Rt. Hon. Thomas Peregrine, M.P. Obs. on the American Treaty, being a Contin. of the Letters of Decius, 1808, 8vo. State of the Nation, 1811, 8vo. Treatise on the Poor Laws, 1818, 8vo. Letter to Lord Grenville on the Sinking Fund, 1828. Sir William Temple, his Life and Times, with his Unpub. Essays and Corresp., 1836, 2 vols. 8vo.

"It is in every sense an important addition to the library, and will no doubt find a place in every sterling collection."—Lon. Lit. Gazette.

"Fairly entitled to the praise of diligence, care, good sense, and impartiality."—T. B. Macaulay: see Edin. Rev., Oct. 1838.

Commentaries on the Hist. Plays of Shakespeare, 1840, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

"An almost inseparable companion to Shakespeare's Plays. . . . The production of a scholar and a gentleman of refined taste and acute judgment."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

Courthope, Sir William. Synopsis of the Extinct Baronetage of England, Lon., 1835, p. 8vo.

"A most useful book of reference to the genealogist, the antiquarian, and the lawyer."

Courtier, Peter L. Poems, &c., Lon., 1795–1813.

Courtney, Mrs. Isabinda, a Novel, 1796, 3 vols. 12mo.

Courtney, John. 1. Sermon. 2. Parish Registers, 1812, 8vo.

Cousin. See Cosin.

Coustos, John. Sufferings in Inquisition, 1746.

Couteau, J. B. Confessions of, Lon., 1794, 2 vols. 12mo;—A satire of the depravity of French manners, written by Robt. Jephson.

Couton, John. The English Gil Blas; or, the Adventures of Gabriel Tangent, Lon., 1807, 3 vols.

Coutts, Robert, born 1803, of Brechin, Scotland. Sermons, 2d ed., Lon., 1808, 8vo; 3d ed., Edin., 1847, 12mo.

Cove, Augustus. Tocsin Sounded, 1813, 8vo.

Cove, Morgan, Preb. of Hereford. Revenues of the Ch. of England, Lon., 1797, 8vo; 1816. Inquiry resp. Tithes, 1800, 8vo.

Covel, John, D.D., 1638–1722, Fellow of Christ Church, Cambridge, and Master, 1688, resided 7 years at Constantinople, as Chaplain to the Embassy. Account of the present Greek Church, Camb., 1722, fol.

Covell, L. T., an American author. Prim. Grammar, 1814. Digest of Eng. Grammar, 1852; adopted by many schools.

Covell, William. Defence of Hooker's Eccles. Polity, Lon., 1603, 4to. Examination of some things in Ch. of Eng., 1604, 4to. Answer to an Apology by John Burges, 1606, 4to.

Covell, William. 1. Letter. 2. Proclamation, Lon., fol.

Coven, Stephen. The Militant Christian, 1781, 12mo.

Coventry, Andrew, M.D., d. 1830, was Professor of Agriculture in the University of Edinburgh. Discourse explanatory of the nature and plan of a course of lectures on Agriculture and Rural Economy, Edin., 1808, 8vo. Observations on Live Stock, in a letter to Henry Clive, Esq., 8vo. Notes on the culture and cropping of Arable Land, 1812, 8vo.

"The professional life of the author was distinguished by much sound information and a very discreet judgment."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Coventry, Lord. Journal of his Embassy, Sav., 1667, 4to.

Coventry, Francis, d. 1759, educated at Magdalen College, Cambridge, Curate of Edgeware. Penhurst, a Poem, 1750; repub. in Dodsley's Collec. Absurdities of Modern Gardening; a paper pub. in The World. Pompey the Little, a Satirical Romance, 1751.

"Pompey is the hasty production of Mr. Coventry, (cousin to him you know,) a young clergyman. I found it out by three characters, which made part of a comedy that he showed me, of his own writing."—Gray, the Poet, to Horace Walpole.

Coventry, Henry, d. 1752, referred to by Mr. Gray as a cousin of the preceding, a Fellow of Magdalen College, pub. Letters of Philemon to Hydaspes, relating a Conversation with Hortensius upon the Subject of False Religion, in 5 parts, Lon., 1736, '37, '38, '41, '44, 8vo. He was also one of the writers of the Athenian Letters.

Coventry, Thomas, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England temp. Charles II., 1578–1640. Answer to the Petition against Recusants. Fees of C. Pleas, Chancery, &c. Prothonotary's and Chancery Fees, 1644, 12mo. Wood enumerates 9 speeches of his lordship, 1625, '26, '27, '28; and other papers of his occur among the Harleian MSS.: see Nos. 2207 and 3305.

Coventry, Thomas. A New and Readable Edition of Coke upon Littleton, Lon., 1830, 8vo.

"Certain parts regarded as antiquated are omitted, which we regard, however, as a defect more than a recommendation."—Huffman's Legal Study.

Concise Forms in Conveyancing, 4th ed., Lon., 1831, 12mo.

"The attempt to shorten Conveyances by legislative enactment is hopeless; it must be left to the good sense and honour of the Conveyancer."—Sugden's Answer to Humphreys.

T. C. and Samuel Hughes, Analytical Digested Index to the Common Law Reports, Hen. III. to George III., Lon., 1828, 2 vols. 8vo; Phila., 1832.

"This Digest is very well arranged, and will answer as a pretty good substitute for the Old Reports."—Murvin's Legal Bibl.

Other legal compilations. In a notice of his Conveyancer's Evidence, Lon., 1832, 8vo, in the Law Magazine, some faults are noticed, and the following compliment passed upon Mr. Coventry's publications generally:

"In London his books have long since found their level, and no books could find a lower one."

Coventry, Sir William, M.P., 1626–1686, youngest son of Lord Keeper Coventry, educated at Queen's College, Oxford, filled several public posts with great credit. England's Appeal from the Cabal at Whitehall to Parliament, Lon., 1673, 4to. Letter to Bishop Burnet resp. Cardinal Pole, Abbey Lands, &c., 1685, 4to. Character of a Trimmer, 1st ed., anon.; 2d, 1689, 12mo; 1697. Wood and some later authorities ascribe the Character of a Trimmer to Sir William, but the credit has been transferred to the Marquis of Halifax and others.

"This piece is in the Miscellanies of the Marquis of Halifax, whose mother was sister to Sir William Coventry."—Lowndes. See Edard, and Bliss's Wood's Athen. Oxon., iv. 193.

"It will be seen that I believe Halifax to have been the author, or at least one of the authors, of the Character of a Trimmer, which, for a time, went under the name of his kinsman, Sir William Coventry."—Macaulay's Hist. of England. Read Mr. M.'s admirable sketch of the character of Halifax.

The Character of a Trimmer has been reprinted by Duncan, a London publisher.

Coverdale, Miles, 1487–1568, a native of Yorkshire, was educated at the house of the Augustine friars at Cambridge. He became an Augustine monk, and was ordained at Norwich in 1514. He afterwards embraced the principles of the Reformation, and was one of its most zealous promoters. In 1532 he was abroad, and assisted Tyndale in his trans. of the Bible. In 1535, fol., appeared his own trans. of the Scriptures, being the first impression of the whole Bible in English. An account of this version, and the sources from which it is drawn, will be found in Mr. Whittaker's Inquiry into the Interpretations of the Scriptures, and a bibliographical account of the original edit. is prefixed to a reprint in 1838, 4to. Mr. Lowndes could only discover one perfect copy. One nearly perfect is in the British Museum. A copy with the title and two following leaves in facsimile was sold at auction for £89 5s. In 1538 a quarto New Testament in the Vulgate Latin, and Coverdale's English was pub. So anxious was he to disseminate a knowledge of the word of God, that in the same year he again visited the Continent, to superintend a new edit. of the Bible, as it could be printed cheaper and better in Paris. 2500 copies were struck off, when the Inquisition interfered, and committed them to the flames. The presses, types, and printers were transferred to England, and in 1539 Crammer's, or the Great Bible, was issued from the office of Grafton and Whitchurch. For many years Coverdale now enjoyed the opportunity of labouring for the spiritual enlightenment of his countrymen. As a preacher he was in high esteem with the people; his value was recognised by those in authority, also; and in 1551 he was raised to the see of Exeter. Upon the accession of Mary, in 1553, he was deprived of his bishopric, cast into prison, and confined for two years. When released, he visited the Continent, where he remained until Elizabeth became Queen of England. Coverdale now returned to England, and brought home some notions of the Geneva school with regard to vestments, which were not calculated to recommend him to preferment. Bishop Grindal, who ineffectually endeavoured to aid him at court, collated him to the rectory of St. Magnus, near old London Bridge, which he retained until 1556, shortly before his death. His publications were chiefly translations from the writings of the foreign Reformers. A list, taken principally from Ames and Herbert, will be found in Chalmers's Biog. Dict., and in Watt's Bibl. Brit. Of his Letters of the Martyrs, 1564, a new edit. was pub. by Rev. E. Bickersteth in 1837, Lon., 8vo. Writings and translations, edit. for the Parker Society, by the Rev. George Pearson, Camb., 1844, 8vo. Remains, 1846, 8vo. Trans. of a Spiritual Pearl, Lon., 1838, 18mo, and in Richmond's Fathers, viii. 793. Also see his writings in Brit. Reformers, xii. See Bale and Tanner; Strype's Life of Crammer; Parker Memorials; Annals: Biog. Brit.

Coverley, Sir Roger de. A Cure for the Spleen; or, Amusement for a Winter's Evening, Anver., 1775, 8vo.

Covert, Nicholas. Scrivener's Guide, 1716, 2 vols. 8vo.

Covert, Captain Robert. A true and almost incredible Report of an Englishman that travelled by Land through many unknown Kingdoms and great Cities, Lon., 1612, 4to. Reprinted in Osborne's Voyages, ii. 236; 1745.

Cowan, Andrew, M.D. General Education, 1803, 2 vols.

Cowan, Charles. Article "Paper" in Encyc. Brit., 7th edit.

"A luminous and accurate account of the newest processes and the most improved machinery used in the manufacture of this article."—Birmingham Herald.

Cowan, Charles, M.D. Trans. of Louis on Consumption, Lon., 8vo.

"An excellent translation of a most excellent work."—Lon. Lancet. Phrenology consistent with Science and Religion, 1841, 12mo. Bedside Manual, 2d ed., 1842, 18mo.

Cowan, James, 1738–1795. Serms., Edin., 1795, 8vo.

Coward, John. The Gospel Preached, &c., Lon., 1803, 8vo.

Coward, William, of Walthamstow, founded a Lecture, at which Hubbard, Guyse, Godwin, and others preached. 12 Serms., Lon., 1729, 8vo; Christ's Loveliness and Glory. 54 Serms., 1757, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Highly and deservedly esteemed."—Dr. E. Williams.

Coward, William, M.D., 1656–1725, educated at Hart Hall and Wadham College, Oxford, trans. Dryden's Absalom and Achitophel in Latin, and pub. some medical and poetical works. His Licentia Poetica discussed, appeared in 1709, 8vo. He is best known, however, by his Second Thoughts concerning the Human Soul, by Estibius Psychalettres, 1702; 2d ed., 1704, 8vo. This work was answered by William Nichols, in his Conference with a Theist, 1698–1703; by John Broughton, in his Psychologia, 1703; and by John Turner, in his Vindication of the separate Existence of the Soul, 1703. Coward answered Turner in his Further Thoughts upon Second Thoughts, and Broughton in an Epistolary Reply annexed to his Grand Essay. The work which excited this controversy was burnt by the common hangman in 1704, by order of Parliament.

"It is an elaborate defence of the doctrine of materialism, and is mentioned in this place because of the quantity of critical disquisition on passages of Scripture which it contains."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

Dr. Coward strongly affirmed that he never intended to promulgate any sentiments contrary to religion and morality.

Cowdry, Richard. Pictures, &c. at Wilton House, 1751.

Cowe, James. Serm., &c., 1797–1806.

Cowell, J. W. Letters on Currency, Lon., 1843, 8vo.

Cowell, John, 1554–1611, educated at King's College, Cambridge. Institutiones juris Anglicani, &c., Cantab., 1605, 8vo. Written after the method of Justinian's Institutes. Law Dictionary, 1607, fol. This was thought to attack the principles of the Common Law, and was publicly burned: many edits. and continued.

"It is an excellent glossary to Coke, Littleton, and the old law-books, and will be found of considerable utility to a modern student of English law and antiquities." See Marvin's Legal Bibl.; 1 Kent's Com., 508.

Cowell, John. The Snare Broken, 1677, 8vo.

Cowell, John, a gardener. Account of the Olive in Blossom; containing an account of the Torch Thistle, part ii. p. 33; of the Glastonbury Thorn, part ii. p. 44, Lon., 1729, 8vo. The Curious and Profitable Gardener, 1730, '32, 8vo.

Cowen, E. Civil Jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace of the State of New York, 2 vols. 8vo, 1844. New York Reports, 1823–28, 9 vols.; 8vo, 1824–30. Digested Index of Reports, 1831, 8vo. Ed. Phillipp's on Evidence, 5 vols., 1850.

"I have long considered Mr. Phillipp's work on Evidence as the most thorough, accurate, and able that I have ever seen; and I have used it more constantly than any other."—JOSEPH STORY.

Cowen, Sidney J. 2d ed. of E. Cowen's Justice, 1841.

Cowif, George. Dissenter's Guide, 1799.

Cowland. Republication of Devises, Lon., 1833, 8vo.

Cowley, Captain. Voyage round the Globe. See Hacke's Voyages, vol. i. 1699, and Harris's Voyages, 1702. Voyage to Magellanica and Polynesia, 1683. See Callander's Voyages, ii. 582, 1766.

Cowley, Abraham, M.D., 1618–1667, a poet of great eminence, was a native of London, where his father was a grocer. His taste for poetry was awakened by a perusal of the poems of Spenser, which he had devoured with great zest before he was 12 years of age. When only three years older, being then at Westminster School, he pub. a volume of poems, containing, with other pieces, the tragic History of Pyramus and Thisbe, written at the age of ten, and Constantia and Philetus, composed two years later. This volume was entitled Poetical Blossoms.

"In which there were many things that might well become the vigour and force of a manly wit."—Dr. Sprat.

In 1636 he was removed to Trinity College, Cambridge, where he continued his poetical pursuits. In 1638 he pub.

his Love's Riddle, a pastoral comedy, and a Latin comedy called Naufragium Joculare, or the Merry Shipwreck.

"Written without due attention to the ancient models; for it is not loose verse, but mere prose."

In 1643 he was, with others, ejected from Cambridge by parliamentary influence, and retired to St. John's College, Oxford. In the same year he pub. a satire entitled, The Puritan and the Papist. Whilst referring to his residence at Oxford, it may be proper to state by anticipation, that in 1657 the university granted him the degree of M.D., but he never practised as a physician. His loyalty and wit recommended him to the favourable notice of the court, and when Oxford was surrendered to the Parliament, Cowley attended the queen to Paris, where he was secretary to the Earl of St. Alban's, and agent of correspondence, by means of cypher, between Charles I. and his consort. He remained abroad between 10 and 12 years, and in various ways was zealously devoted to the royal interests, which fidelity excited no unreasonable expectations of reward at the Restoration. The profligate Charles, however, like most profligates, was too fond of his own ease to care for the comfort of others, and valued the last pleasure above the first friend. A real or pretended offence at his comedy—The Cutter of Coleman Street—a new edition of his old play of The Guardian—afforded an excuse to the court party for neglecting his claims upon the royal favour. The disappointed poet, after an unsuccessful "Complaint" (in an ode so called) of this ingratitude—in which he declared that his desire was "to retire to some of the American plantations, and forsake the world forever"—concluded to retire to a plantation nearer home, and took up his residence first at Barn Elms, and subsequently at Chertsey. He found a country life more delightful in anticipation than in reality: his country neighbours were as debauched in their morals as the roysters of London, his tenants refused to pay him his rents, and his grass was devoured at night by strange cattle quartered upon the London gentleman by the innocent rustics whose guileless simplicity and honest virtues have so often inspired the poetic muse. After a residence at Chertsey of about two years, he caught a severe cold, attended with a fever, which proved fatal July 28, 1667, in his 49th year. Sprat's account of the circumstances connected with his last days differs from that in Spence's Anecdotes, but this is a point in which minute accuracy is not always to be expected. Sprat certainly had the best means of knowing the truth. When the ungrateful king heard of his death, he declared that "he had not left a better man behind him;" but

"Can Flattery soothe the dull, cold ear of Death?"

We return to his works. In 1647 he pub. his Mistress, remarking in his preface, that "Poets are scarcely thought freemen of their company, without paying some duties, or obliging themselves to be true, to Love."

Upon his return to England, in 1656, he pub. a new edit. of all his poems, consisting of four parts; viz.: 1. Miscellanies. 2. The Mistress; or Love Verses. 3. Pindaric Odes. 4. Davidic; a Heroical Poem of the Troubles of David. In 1660 appeared An Ode upon the Blessed Restoration of King Charles II. This title reminds us forcibly of Barrow's admirable Epigram:

"Te magis optavit redditorum, Carole, nemo, Et nemo sensit te reddisse minus!"

"Thy restoration, royal Charles, I see,
By none more wished, by none less felt, than me!"

In 1661 he pub. his Proposition for the Advancement of Experimental Philosophy. Whilst in England he wrote his two Books of Plants, pub. first in 1662. To these he afterwards added four more books, and all the six, together with his other Latin poems, were printed in 1678, 8vo, after his death, under the title of Poemata Latina, viz.: Plantarum, lib. vi. cum Notis; Herborum, Florum, et Sylvarum, lib. ii.; Miscellaneorum, unus; quibus premititur Autoris vita, per T. Sprat conscripta.

"Botany, in the mind of Cowley, turned into poetry."—Dr. Johnson.

"The two first books treat of Herbs, in a style resembling the elegies of Ovid and Tibullus; the two next, of Flowers, in all the variety of Catullus and Horace's numbers, and the two last, of Trees, in the way of Virgil's Georgics."—Dr. Sprat.

A later critic has questioned the extent of Dr. Cowley's acquaintance with the modern botanical authors, who would have proved the most useful to his researches in point of accurate knowledge.

Cowley's History of Plants, with Rapin's Disposition of Gardens, a Poem, in 4 Books, was pub. in English in 1795, 12mo: the former trans. by N. Tate and others, the latter by James Gardiner. The Iron Age, pub. 1656 and 1675, 8vo, was disclaimed by Cowley. The Poem on the late Civil War appeared in 1679, 4to. A Discourse, by Way of Vision, concerning the Government of Oliver Cromwell, pub. 1661, 4to, is commended by Bishop Hurd as one of the best of its author's prose works. It will be found in vol. v. of the Harleian Miscellany. Cowley's Works, 1669; with Life by Thomas Sprat, D.D., 1680, 12mo; many edits.: 1710-11, 3 vols. 8vo; 12th ed., 1721, 2 vols. 12mo. Select Works, with a Preface and Notes by the Editor, Bishop Hurd, 1772-77, 3 vols. p. 8vo. Prose Works, including his Essays in Prose and Verse, 1826, cr. 8vo. The edit. of the Poetical Blossomes, 1633, 4to, is of great value if it have the portrait of the author; Bibl. Anglo-Poet. 140, with two portraits of Cowley, £16. Cowley's prose writings, occupying about 60 folio pages, consist principally of his Essays, which are of a high order of merit. They have none of the affectation and love of conceit which often disfigure his poetry.

"The Essays must not be forgotten. What is said by Sprat of his conversation, that no man could draw from it any suspicion of his excellence in poetry, may be applied to these compositions. No author ever kept his verse and his prose at a greater distance from each other. His thoughts are natural, and his style has a smooth and placid equability, which has never yet obtained its due commendation. Nothing is far-sought, or hard-laboured; but all is easy without feebleness, and familiar without grossness."—DR. JOHNSON.

"To Cowley we may justly ascribe the formation of a basis on which has since been constructed the present correct and admirable fabric of our language. His words are pure and well chosen, the collocation simple and perspicuous, and the members of his sentences distinct and harmonious."—DR. BRAKE.

Read the Essays "Of Myself," "Poetry and Poets," and "Of Procrastination." The "Vision of Oliver Cromwell" may also be mentioned as a noble specimen of a dignified yet graceful style:

"Cowley's character of Oliver Cromwell, which is intended as a satire, (though it certainly produces a very different impression on the mind,) may vie for truth of outline and force of colouring with the masterpieces of the Greek and Latin historians."—HAZLITT.

Of his poetical pieces, the general favourites will be found among the Anacreontics and the Miscellanies. The lines on the death of Harvey, and the Elegy on Crashaw, the Ode on Wit, the Chronicle, and the verses to Davenant, have been greatly admired. The wit by which Cowley was so highly distinguished is of a character which possesses but little charms save for the poet's own generation. But by that generation, and for some years after his death, he was lauded to a degree which appears to modern readers very extravagant.

"These times have produced many excellent poets, among whom, for strength of wit, Dr. Abraham Cooley [Cowley] justly bears the bell."—FROM BAXTER'S Prefatory Address to his Poetical Fragments, 1681.

"Clarendon represents him as having taken a flight beyond all that went before him; and Milton is said to have declared, that the three greatest English poets were Spenser, Shakespeare, and Cowley. . . . It has been observed by Felton, in his Essay on the Classics, that Cowley was beloved by every Muse that he courted; and that he has rivalled the Ancients in every kind of poetry but Tragedy."

Even in Pope's days, how sadly was the once great Cowley neglected!

"Who now reads Cowley? If he please yet,
His moral pleases, not his pointed wit:
Forgot his epic, nay, Pindaric art,
But still I love the language of his heart."

Charles Lamb, in a Letter to Coleridge, refers to the general neglect of the accomplished author of Poetical Blossomes:

"In all our comparisons of taste, I do not know whether I have ever heard your opinion of a poet very dear to me, though now out of fashion—Cowley."

The reader will find an admirable criticism upon the works of this once famous author, in Dr. Johnson's Lives of the English Poets, an extract from which may appropriately conclude our article:

"It may be affirmed, without any encomiastic fervour, that he brought to his poetic labours a mind replete with learning, and that his pages are embellished with all the ornaments which books could supply; that he was the first who imparted to English numbers the enthusiasm of the greater ode, and the gaiety of the less; that he was equally qualified for sprightly sallies and for lofty flights; that he was among those who freed translation from servility, and, instead of following his author at a distance, walked by his side; and that, if he left versification yet improvable, he left likewise, from time to time, such specimens of excellence as enabled succeeding poets to improve it."

Read an eloquent paper by Mr. Macaulay in his Miscellanies, entitled A Conversation between Mr. Abraham Cowley and Mr. John Milton, touching the great Civil War: set down by a Gentleman of the Middle Temple.

Cowley, Hannah, 1743-1809, the daughter of Philip Parkhouse, of Tiverton, in Devonshire, was married in her 25th year to Captain Cowley, of the East India Company. In 1776 she produced the Runaway, a Comedy, which met with such success as to encourage her to further attempts. Her works principally consist of dramatic pieces; among which are Who's the Dupe? 1779; The Belle's Stratagem, 1780; A Bold Stroke for a Husband, &c. See a list of her 14 pieces in Biog. Dramat. Her Poems, The Maid of Arragon, The Scottish Village, and the Siege of Acre, have been highly commended. An edit. of her Works, with a memoir, was pub. in 1813, 3 vols. 8vo.

"In her writings, nothing was laboured; all was spontaneous effusion: she had nothing of the drudge of literature; and fame was not half as much her object as the pleasure of composition."—Biog. Dramatica.

Cowley, J. Sailor's Companion, Lon., 1740, 12mo.

Cowley, John L. Geometry made Easy, Lon., 1752, 8vo; new ed., by Wm. Jones, 1787. On Comets, 1757, 8vo. App. to Euclid's Elements, 1759, 4to. Theory of Perspective Demonstrated, 1766, 4to.

Cowper, Allan. Assize Sermon, 1722, 8vo.

Cowper, Charles. Sermon, Lon., 1763, 4to.

Cowper, Henry. Reports of Cases C. K. B., Lon., 1783, fol.; 2d ed., 1800, 2 vols. 8vo. 1st Amer. ed., Bost., 1809, 2 vols.; N. York, 2 vols. in 1, by J. P. Hall, 1833. "A very accurate and valuable collection."

Cowper, James, M.D. Narrative of the effects of a celebrated medicine, Lon., 1760, 8vo.

Cowper, John. Sermon, 1752, 8vo.

Cowper, Robert. See COUPER.

Cowper, Spencer, D.D., 1713-1774, second son of the Lord High Chancellor Cowper, was educated at Exeter College, Oxford. He became Rector of Fordwich, Prebendary of Canterbury, and Dean of Durham. Speech, 1762, 4to. Sermon, 1753, 4to. Discourse, 1773, 8vo. Dissertation on the distinct Powers of Reason and Revelation, 1773, 8vo.

Cowper, William, 1566-1619, Bishop of Galloway, was educated at the University of St. Andrews. Before his elevation to the episcopate, he preached 8 years at Bothkennar, in Sterlingshire, and 19 years at Perth. His works, consisting of sermons, expositions of the 51st and 119th Psalms, and theolog. treatises, pub. 1611, '12, '13, '14, '16, and '18, were collected in 1623, fol. This vol. includes a Comment on Revelation, then first pub. His sermons have been highly praised:

"Perhaps superior to any sermons of that age. A vein of practical piety runs through all his evangelical instructions; the style is remarkable for ease and fluency; and the illustrations are striking and happy."—DR. MCCUA.

"Dr. McCue's character of the sermons will apply to the expositions."—ORRIS.

"An excellent writer—full of devotion, Christian experience, and consolation."—BICKERSTETH.

Cowper, William. Catalogue of the Chemical Works written in English; in 3 parts, Lon., 1672, 75, 8vo.

Cowper, William. Charge at the General Quarter Sessions of the City and Liberty of Westminster, Oct. 19, 1719, 8vo. The same, April, 1730, 8vo. The same, June, 1736, 8vo.

Cowper, William, 1666-1709, a surgeon and anatomist of eminence, was a native of Hampshire. Myotamia Reformata; or A New Administration of all the Muscles of the Human Body, Lon., 1694, 8vo; an edit. by Dr. Mead, with an Introduction on Muscular Motion, 1724. The Anatomy of Human Bodies: illustrated with 114 copper-plates, Oxf., 1698, fol. The publication of this work led to a warm controversy with Godfrey Bidloo, the German anatomist. The latter accused Cowper of using his plates. Cowper contributed many papers to Phil. Trans., 1694, '96, 1702, '03, '05, '12.

Cowper, William, M.D., d. 1767, practised physic at Chester, England. Life of St. Werburgh, 1749, 4to. This is said to have been stolen from the MSS. of Mr. Stone. The Doctors Cowper seem to have had a propensity for availing themselves of the labours of others: see above. Il Penseroso, 1767, 4to. Dr. C. prepared materials for histories of the town and county of Chester, but death prevented the completion of his labours.

Cowper, William, 1731-1800, one of the most eminent of English poets, was the son of the Rev. John Cowper, Chaplain to Geo. II., and Rector of Berkhamstead, Hertfordshire, where the subject of our memoir was born on the 26th of November. His grandfather was the distinguished Hon. Spencer Cowper, Chief Justice of Chester, and Judge in the Court of Common Pleas, and brother to Earl Cowper, Lord High Chancellor of England. William Cowper, deprived of a mother's care at the early age of six years, was placed at the boarding-school of Dr. Pitman, Market street, Bedfordshire, where he remained for two years. There being reason to fear that some unfavourable symptoms would result in a loss of sight, he resided for two years in the house of a female oculist of great reputation. When ten years of age he was sent to Westminster School, where he remained for seven years, leaving with a character for scholarship, especially in the classics. The timid, sensitive character of the poet was but little suited for the rude conflicts to which school-boys are often subjected, and a portion of this season of life was embittered to Cowper by a tyranny upon the part of a senior scholar of the most intolerable character. Having selected the profession of the law, Cowper was now articled for three years to a Mr. Chapman, a solicitor of some eminence. How assiduously he devoted himself to Blackstone, and with what pleasing thralldom he submitted to the tenures of Coke, may be gathered from the following honest confession to his cousin, Lady Hesketh:

"I did actually live three years with Mr. Chapman, a solicitor; that is to say, I slept three years in his house, but I lived, that is to say, I spent my days, in Southampton Row, as you very well remember. There was I, and the future Lord Chancellor, (Thurlow,) constantly employed from morning till night in giggling and making giggle, instead of studying law."

With such an apprenticeship, we need not be surprised that, when at the age of 21 he took possession of a set of chambers in the Temple, he neither sought business, nor business sought him. It was at this early period of his life that we first find strongly-marked indications of that terrible mental malady, which to a greater or less degree held its victim all his lifetime "subject to bondage" of the most fearful and tormenting character. Upon this extremely painful subject but little can be said—but little can be expected—in the brief limits to which we are confined. We must, however, be allowed to enter our most decided protest against the strange misapprehension—grounded upon a deplorable ignorance both of the effects of religion, and of the mental characteristics of Cowper—that the derangement of this gifted man was either originated, developed, or increased, by theological truths or theological errors.

The contrary to this has been often asserted and denied at great length, and truly, we marvel as much at the unnecessary prolixity of those who adopt and support the negative, as we wonder at the obtuseness of those, who, professing a knowledge of Cowper's mental history, stereotype their simplicity or dishonesty, by charging religion with the unhappy gloom which enshrouds the halo of one of the brightest suns of England's literary firmament. Why should apologists waste the elaboration of argument and fervours of eloquence upon a cause which unadorned chronology can settle in a few lines decisively and forever? If we cannot take Cowper's own testimony, we know not whose should be admitted, for "What man knoweth the things of a man save the spirit of a man?"

We assert then, first, that Cowper's derangement was not in the most remote degree to be attributed to religious impressions of any kind, true or erroneous.

We assert, secondly, that nothing but the soothing, restraining, and purifying influences of religion stood for forty years between William Cowper and the madman's cell, or the suicide's grave. In support of these assertions, we appeal to the whole mental history of the unhappy poet, to his own experience, and to the testimony of those true friends whose unwearied kindness mitigated his sufferings, ministered to his necessities, augmented his comforts, and smoothed his dying pillow. Before leaving this subject, however, we will adduce one or two facts of simple chronology, which may correct the misapprehensions of some who lack time for the examination of the voluminous testimony to which we have appealed.

Cowper informs us that in his earlier years (and long after) he was entirely ignorant of any experience of a religious character, and even neglectful of the ordinary duties of prayer and attendance upon public worship. Whilst a student of law, he never attended church, unless when visiting at his uncle's:

"By this means I had indeed an opportunity of seeing the inside of a church, whither I went with the family on Sundays, which probably I should otherwise never have seen."—Autobiography.

It was whilst thus utterly forgetful of his Creator, that "I was struck, not long after my settlement in the Temple, with such a defection of spirits, as none but they who have felt the same can have the least conception of. Day and night I was upon the rack, lying down in horror, and rising up in despair."—Ibid.

At this time he was about 21 years of age. Undoubtedly this was the commencement of the development of constitutional insanity. Eleven years later he tells us,

"To this moment I had felt no concern of a spiritual kind. Ignorant of original sin, insensible of the guilt of actual transgression, I understood neither the law nor the gospel, the condemning nature of the one, nor the restoring mercies of the other. I was as much unacquainted with Christ, in all his saving offices, as if his blamed name had never opened upon me. Co just committed, [the well as its atrocity, was] bly strong, that I designed or expressed, it

We have asserted: unhappy man and I our affirmation good

"This sense of it seen I could not now reflect

Did religion driv

"The only thing that yet wanting; an escape is in Christ Jesus."—Ibid

Does this look like thing yet wanting?" sufferer,—and what

"The next day I was recovery. Throughout my emotions; so fully . . . Such was the joy for mourning, and vices."—Ibid.

"His residence at St. Albans in 1763—the last year the Journals, Reading House of Lords,—all of Cowper's,—became were conferred on Cowper, high spirit, and the duties attached to the mittens were duties which before the House, extreme nervousness, a himself expresses it, 'I diately after having ac that of clerk of the Jo of nomination having required to submit his House before being all which he seemed to t bolt,' he writes, in his welcome to me as this at the bar of the House to the office, was in time, the interest of m reputation and circum me to undertake that was the anguish which anxiously to the comit which had manifeste have a reason for thro day drew near and t senses, he determined attempts to destroy I pleased to explain it in vidence. The office w appointed for the exas insane. He was imme at St. Albans, with w place about eighteen u Cyc., vol. II., Div. Biog

He settled at Hunance with the Rev. kindest of friends.

sion; and, upon t removed with his Rev. John Newton valuable friend. T of vigilant affectio be too highly esti paratively trifling or soothed to a reping to the course of he subjected. How devolves upon the afflicted appertains tal health was but again settled over l it was more or les was again a victim of Mrs. Unwin in 1 nurse—added to hi her lifeless form, lei afterwards once he 1800, he betrayed a and, on the 25th ended by a change and so acutely suff Being whom he has of which a pertur capable. All that voted Christian fri only lavished upon be entirely dissipa glory which illumines the City of the living God. Such priceless offices of love, such unwearied, self-sacrificing devotion, can never be forgotten: the names of Unwin, Heeketh, Austen, Johnson, Hayley, and Rose, must be closely connected with the memory of William Cowper, so long as the noblest qualities which adorn humanity are valued among men. Having thus taken a rapid view of the character of the man, we now proceed to a brief consideration of the author.

Few men who commenced authorship at so late a period of life have attained so large a measure of popularity in their lifetime. When Cowper's first volume was given to the world, he had seen more than fifty years. He lacked, therefore, what had been considered almost indispensable to the character of a poet—inexperience of the world, and that freshness of feeling and fervour of thought which are supposed to accompany the earlier stages of life. The subjects, too, of his first volume, (1782, 8vo,) were of too didactic a character to arouse or gratify public curiosity or literary interest. But little to charm the imagination, or delight the fancy, could be expected from the discussion of The Progress of Error, Truth, Table Talk, Expostulation, Hope, Charity, &c. It was evident, indeed, that "Wisdom had prepared her Feast and uttered her Voice," but until the nature of man changes, she must continue to "lift up her voice in the streets, and cry in the chief places of concourse," ere she can gather around her the very few who prefer instruction to amusement, and moral improvement to mental dissipation.

But the applause of a few sages was more valuable than the indifference of the children of the world; and Cowper was more delighted at having pleased Johnson and Franklin, than he would have been with the applause of Holland House, and the adulation of half the fashionable assemblies of London. Mr. Hayley gives us his own opinion of the merits of the volume in these words:

"It exhibits such a diversity of poetical powers as have been given very rarely indeed to any individual of the modern or of the ancient world."

By the influence of Lady Austen, who had previously elicited the famous ballad of John Gilpin, Cowper was induced to commence a new poem—The Task, which was pub. in 1785. Its success was immediate, and almost unbounded. There were few, however opposed in their tastes, who could not find something to charm them in the many pleasing pictures and graphic sketches presented in this volume.

"The Task is a poem of such infinite variety, that it seems to include every subject, and every style, without any dissonance or disorder; and to have flowed, without effort, from inspired philanthropy, eager to impress upon the hearts of all readers whatever may lead them most happily to the full enjoyment of human life, and to the final attainment of Heaven."—HAYLEY.

"It is impossible to describe this fine poem better than by saying that it treats, in a masterly way, of all that affects us here, or influences us hereafter; that it pleads the cause of the poor and the desolate in the presence of the rich; admonishes the rich of their duty to their country, their cottagers, and their God; takes the senate to task; shakes the scourge of undying verse over the pulpit; holds a mirror before the profligacy of cities till they shudder at their own shadow, and exhibit to the hills and dales of the country, an image of the follies of their sons and daughters."—ALLAN CUNNINGHAM: Biog. and Crit. Hist. of Lit.

"Of all the verses that have been ever devoted to the subject of domestic happiness, those in his Winter Evening, at the opening of the fourth book of The Task, are perhaps the most beautiful. In perusing that scene of 'intimate delights,' 'fire-side enjoyments,' and 'home-born happiness,' we seem to recover a part of the forgotten value of existence, when we recognise the means of its blessedness so widely dispensed and so cheaply attainable, and find them susceptible of description at once so enchanting and so faithful."—CHAMBERS: Essay on English Poetry.

"It contains a number of pictures of domestic comfort and social refinement which can hardly be forgotten but with the language itself."

Cowper's next production was the Tirocinium, intended, as he tells us,

"To censure the want of discipline, and the scandalous inattention to morals, that obtain in public schools, especially in the largest." &c.

In the same year, (1784,) he commenced his translation of Homer, which was completed and pub. in 1791, 2 vols. 4to. Not entirely satisfied with his performance, he commenced a revision in 1792, and devoted his leisure time for several years to the corrected version. It was pub. in 1802, 4 vols. 8vo, by J. Johnston. Very different opinions are entertained both of the merit of the translation generally, and of the respective excellencies or defects of the earlier and later versions.

Mr. Southey greatly prefers the former:

"The version he composed when his faculties were most active, and his spirits least subject to depression, ought not to be superseded by a revival, or rather reconstruction, undertaken three years before his death; not like the first translation, 'a pleasant work, an innocent luxury,' but 'a hopeless employment, a task to which he gave 'all his miserable days and often many hours of the night.'"

Dr. Clarke appears to be of a different opinion:

"For fidelity, accuracy, and the true poetical fire, this corrected edition of Cowper's Translation stands yet unrivalled."

Mr. Croker remarks that

"It is the fashion to call Cowper's translation 'a miserable failure,' but the more one reads it the better it seems to represent the original than any other."

"We admire Mr. Cowper's abilities; some passages are executed with great taste and spirit, and those that were difficult he has happily elucidated."—Lon. Critical Review.

"I long to know your opinion of Cowper's translation. The Odyssey, especially, is surely very Homeric. What nobler than the appearance of Phœbus at the beginning of the Iliad—lines ending with 'Dread sounding-bounding on the silver bow?'—Charles Lamb to Coleridge.

"That the translation is a great deal more close and literal than any that had previously been attempted in English verse, probably will not be disputed by those who are the least disposed to admire it; that the style into which it is translated is a true English style, though not perhaps a very elegant or poetical one, may also be assumed; but we are not sure that a rigid and candid criticism will go further in its commendation."—LOAN JERRARD: Edin. Rev., II. 68.

It is useless to venture any suppositions as to the character which his intended life and edition of Milton would have assumed. Certainly few men have been better qualified for so arduous a task.

Of Cowper's minor poems, perhaps the best known are the Lines addressed to his Mother's picture, and that inscribed to Mary, his faithful friend and nurse Mrs. Unwin. The Olney Hymns, written in conjunction with Rev. John Newton, have had a wide circulation, and doubtless proved very useful. In 1803, '04, Mr. Hayley pub. A Life, and the Posthumous Writings of Cowper, Chichester, 3 vols. 4to. "The little Mr. Hayley writes in these volumes is by no means well written, [but] with a very amiable gentleness of temper, and with the strongest appearance of a sincere veneration and affection for the departed friend to whose memory it is consecrated."—LOAN JERRARD.

In 1806 Mr. Hayley added Supplementary Pages to the Life of Cowper, Chichester, 4to. In 1824 his Private Correspondence with several of his most intimate friends, from the originals in the possession of his kinsman, Mr. Johnson, appeared in 2 vols. 8vo. A complete edition of his Works, Correspondence, and Translations, with a Life of the Author, edited by Robert Southey, was pub. in 15 vols. p. 8vo. A new ed., with additional Letters, in Bohn's Standard Library, 8 vols., plates.

"There is no one among our living writers who unites research, taste, and sincerity, (the three great requisites of a biographer,) so delightfully as Dr. Southey; and it is almost superfluous to say, that his work is as readable for its anecdotes and contemporary sketches, as for its clear, manly, and eloquent style."—Lon. Athenæum.

"It is hardly too much to say that it derives nearly half its value from the labours of the editor and biographer."

"In the Life of the Poet, Dr. Southey has introduced much of the literary history of England during half a century, with biographical sketches of many of his contemporaries."

The Rev. T. S. Grimsdew, author of the Life of Rev. Leigh Richmond, pub. an edit. of the Works, Letters, and Life, in 1835, Lon., 8 vols. 8vo; new edit., 1847, 8 vols. 8vo, and also an edit. in 1 vol. r. 8vo.

"Mr. Grimsdew's labours are not only recommended by the power his relationship to Dr. Johnson placed in his hands, but by the deep concern he takes in every thing which regards the essential and beautiful parts of Cowper's character."—Norwich Mercury.

We notice some other editions. Cowper's Poems, with a Memoir of the Author, by John McDiarmid, Edin., 18mo.

"The Memoir has the merit of being written with remarkable critical acumen, of delineating the character of Cowper with accuracy, and of including, stripped of all book-making periphrases, the whole course of the poet's life, agitated as it was by acute mental sufferings."—Court Magazine.

Cowper's Works, with Life, by Dr. Memes, Glasg., 1852, 12mo.

"The Memoir greatly surpasses, in philosophical accuracy, the former estimates of Cowper's Life. The editor is evidently a student of human nature, under all the varieties of physical and moral causes by which it may be affected. He is also a clear, good writer, who, understanding his subject, expresses himself with equal beauty and precision."—Evangelical Magazine.

To these may be added Memoirs, Essays, &c. by Nicolas, Greethead, Stebbins, Cary, Dwight, &c.

The Letters of Cowper have gained him as much reputation as have the most favourite passages of his poetry. On this theme it were easy to enlarge, but we must rest content with a citation from one of the greatest masters of our tongue:

"I have always considered the letters of Mr. Cowper as the finest specimen of the epistolary style in our language. . . . To an air of inimitable ease and carelessness they unite a high degree of correctness, such as could result only from the clearest intellect, combined with the most finished taste. I have scarcely found a single word which is capable of being exchanged for a better. Literary errors I can discern none. The selection of words, and the construction of periods, are inimitable: they present as striking a contrast as can well be conceived to the turgid verbosity which passes at present for fine writing, and which bears a great resemblance to the degeneracy which marks the style of Ammianus Marcellinus, as compared to that of Cicero or of Livy. In my humble opinion, the study of Cowper's prose may on this account be as useful in forming the taste of young people as his poetry."—Rev. Robert Hall to Rev. Dr. Johnson.

The reader should peruse an article, nominally a review of Thomas Taylor's Life of Cowper, by Mr. W. B. O. Peabody, in the North American Review for January, 1834. Also see articles by Lord Jeffrey, in the Edinburgh Review, vols. ii. 64, and iv. 273; two reviews in the London Quarterly Review, vols. xvi. 116, and xxx. 185. To these may be added the articles in the N. American Review, by W. Phillips, ii. 233; H. Ware, xix. 435, and E. T. Channing, xlv. 29. Also consult the Life, Dissertation, and Notes, in the new ed. of Cowper's Poetical Works, by Rev. George Gilfillan, 1854, 8vo.

A few brief extracts from two or three eminent authorities must conclude an article already sufficiently extended: "Of Cowper how shall I express myself in adequate terms of admiration? The purity of his principles, the tenderness of his heart, his unaffected and zealous piety, his warmth of devotion, (however tinged at times with gloom and despondency,) the delicacy and playfulness of his wit, and the singular felicity of his diction, all conspire by turns 'To win the wisest, warm the coldest heart.'

"Cowper is the poet of a well-educated and well-principled Englishman. 'Home, sweet home' is the scene—limited as it may be imagined—in which he contrives to concentrate a thousand beauties, which others have scattered far and wide upon objects of less interest and attraction. His pictures are, if I may so speak, conceived with all the tenderness of Raffaele, and executed with all the finish and sharpness of Teniers. No man, in such few words, tells his tale, or describes his scene, so forcibly and so justly. His views of nature are less grand and less generalized than those of Thomson: and here, to carry on the previous mode of comparison, I should say that Thomson was the Gaspar Poussin, and Cowper the Hobbins of rural poetry. . . . The popularity of Cowper gains strength as it gains age: and after all, he is the poet of our study, our cabinet, and our alcove."—DR. DISNEY.

"His language has such a masculine idiomatic strength, and his manner, whether he rises into grace or falls into negligence, has so much plain and familiar freedom, that we read no poetry with a deeper conviction of its sentiments having come from the author's heart, and of the enthusiasm. In whatever he describes, having been unfigured and unexaggerated. He impresses us with the idea of a being whose fine spirits had been long enough in the mixed society of the world to be polished by its intercourse, and yet withdrawn so soon as to retain an unworlly degree of simplicity and purity."—THOMAS CAMPBELL.

"The great merit of this writer appears to us to consist in the boldness and originality of his compositions, and in the fortunate audacity with which he has carried the dominion of poetry into regions that had been considered as inaccessible to her ambition. . . . He took as wide a range in language, too, as in matter; and shaking off the tawdry incumbrance of that poetical diction which had nearly reduced the art to the skillful collocation of a set of appointed phrases, he made no scruple to set down in verse every expression that would have been admitted in prose, and to take advantage of all the varieties with which our language could supply him."—LORD JEFFREY.

Cox, Dr. 1. Med. Discourses. 2. Discourse against Apothecaries, Lon., 1666, 69, 8vo.

Cox, Dr. Medical Compendium, &c., 1808.

Cox, Mrs. Joseph; a Poem, 1783, 12mo.

Cox, or Coxe, Benj. Theolog. treatises, Lon., 1645, '46, 4to.

Cox, D. Address to Dissenters, 1807, 12mo.

Cox, Daniel, M.D. Prof. treat., &c., 1753, '57, '58, 8vo.

Cox, David. Landscape Painting and Effect in Water Colours, Lon., 1814, fol. Highly esteemed.

Cox, E.W. Registration of Voters' Act, Lon., 1843, 12mo.

Cox, F. A., D.D. Christian Knowledge, Lon., 1806, 8vo. Life of Melancthon, 1815, 8vo; 1817, 8vo.

"Correct in narrative, forcible in argumentation, &c."—Brit. Rev. Female Scripture Biography, 1817; 1852, 2 vols. 8vo. On Baptism, 8vo. On the Book of Daniel, 1833, 12mo.

"A very useful manual."—Lon. Congregational Mag.

Our Young Men; a Prize Essay, 1838, 12mo.

"A word in season to young men in every grade of Society."—Evangel. Mag.

Mr. C. has written some other theological treatises.

Cox, George. Chemical Delectus, 2d ed., 1844, 32mo. Spectable Secrets, 2d ed., 1844, 12mo. Agricultural Chemistry, Lon., 1844, p. 8vo.

"The author discusses ætérifm matters, salts, acids, &c. but fails to establish any fact for practical adoption. This is the fault of all chemical essays."—Donaldson's Agricult. Mag.

Cox, Capt. Hiram. Journal of a Residence in the Burman Empire, &c., Lon., 1821, 8vo.

Cox, Sir J. H. Letters on Catholic Claims, 1812.

Cox, James, D.D. Conjugal Affection; a Poem, 1813, 8vo.

Cox, James, D.D. Tithe Commutations, Lon., 1838, 8vo.

Cox, John. Dialecticon Vivi boni et literati de veritate et Natura atque Substantia corporis et sanguinis Christi in Eucharistia, Lon., 1557, 8vo.

Cox, John. Trans. of H. Bullinger's Exhortation to the Ministers of God's Word, &c., Lon., 1575, 8vo.

Cox, John E. Protestantism contrasted with Romanism, Lon., 1852, 2 vols. 8vo. Trans. of Dr. H. Olshausen's Com. on 1st and 2d Epist. to the Corinthians; Vol. xx. of Clark's For. Theol. Library.

"A superior help to the study of those two important epistles."—British Banner.

Cox, John H. Harmony of the Scriptures, Lon., 1823, 8vo. Highly commended. Jesus shewing Mercy, 18mo.

"A most useful book to be put into the hands of young converts."—Christian Guardian.

Cox, John S. Two Serms., with Notes, Lon., 1835, 12mo.

"These are sensible and sound discourses, which we recommend to all lovers of orthodoxy."—Chris. Remembr.

Cox, Joseph. Narrative rel. to Thief-takers, 1756, 8vo.

Cox, Joseph M., M.D. Insanity, 1804, 8vo.

Cox, Leonard. See COCKEN.

Cox, Michael, Bishop of Ossory, 1743; Archbishop of Cashel, 1754. Sermon, Dublin, 1748, 4to.

Cox, Nicholas. The Gentleman's Recreation, in four Parts, viz.: Hunting, Hawking, Fowling, Fishing, 1674, 8vo; 6th ed., 1721.

Cox, Owen. Intelligence from Ireland, 1642, 4to.

Cox, Richard, 1499–1581, educated at Eton and King's College, Cambridge, became Chancellor of the University of Oxford, and Dean of Westminster. On the accession of Mary he was imprisoned. In 1559 he was made Bishop of Ely. He trans. for the "Bishops' Bible" the four Gospels, the Acts, and the Epistle to the Romans. He also assisted in the Compilation of the Liturgy, &c.

Cox, Richard. See CRANCE, WILLIAM.

Cox, Sir Richard, 1650–1733, was created Chancellor of Ireland in 1703. Hibernia Anglicana; or the History of Ireland from the Conquest to the present time, Lon., 1689, 2 vols. fol. Compiled chiefly from the accounts of Sir John Temple and Dr. Borlase. An Inquiry into Religion, Lon., 1711, 8vo. Linen Manufactory, Dublin, 1749.

Cox, Robert. Actæon and Diana, with a pastoral Store of the Nymph Oenone, &c., Lon., 1566, 1656, 4to. In Fras. Kirkman's, The Wits, or Sport upon Sport.

"Cox was an excellent comedian, who lived in the reign of King Charles I." See Blog. Dramat.

Cox, Robert. Hist. of an Old Pocket Bible, Lon., 1813, 8vo. Narratives of the Lives of some of the most eminent Fathers, &c., 1817, 8vo. Horæ Romanæ, or an Attempt to elucidate St. Paul's Epist. to the Romans, by an original Trans., &c., 1824, 8vo.

"While possessing merits of a high order, it is entirely free from display."—Lon. Eclectic Review.

The Liturgy Revised, 1830, 8vo. Secession Considered, 1832, 8vo.

Cox, Ross. Adventures on the Columbia River, Lon., 2 vols. 8vo; New York, 1832.

Cox, S. C. P. Williams's Chancery Reports, 4th edit., 1787, 3 vols. r. 8vo; 5th ed., 1790. Reports of Cases in Courts of Equity, 1783–96, &c., Lon., 1816, 2 vols. 8vo. Amer. edit., by Murray Hoffman, New York, 1824.

"Most brief and perspicuous Reports of unquestionable accuracy."—1 Kent's Com., 494.

"The American edition is ably edited."—Marrin's Legal Bibl.

Cox, Samuel H., D.D., a Presbyterian minister, long settled in Brooklyn, New York. Quakerism not Christianity, New York, 1833, 8vo. Interviews, Memorable and Useful, from Diary and Memory, reproduced, New York, 1853, 12mo.

Cox, Samuel S. The Buckeye Abroad; or Wanderings in Europe and the Orient, N. York, 1852, 12mo.

"One of the most readable books of travel that we have taken up for a long time."—N. Y. Mirror.

Cox, Thomas. See COX.

Cox, William, d. 1851? an Englishman, for some time resident of New York City. Crayon Sketches, by an Amateur, N.Y., 1853, 2 vols. 12mo.

Coxe, Arthur Cleveland, D.D., b. in Mendham, New Jersey, 1818, grad. at the University of New York, has gained great reputation for classical attainments and poetical talents. Advent, a Mystery; a Dramatic Poem, 1837. Athwold; a Romance, 1838. Saint Jonathan; the Lay of a Scald. Cantos 1st and 2d, 1838: all that was pub. Athanasion, and Miscellaneous Poems. Christian Ballads; new edit., Lon., 1853, 8vo. Halloween. Saul; a Mystery. Trans. of Dr. Von Hirsch's Sympathies of the Continent, or Proposals for a New Reformation.

"The following work will be found a noble apology for the poet."

tion assumed by the Church of England in the sixteenth century, and for the practical reforms she then introduced into her theology and worship."—Dr. Cox's Introduction.

Impressions of England, N.Y., 1856, 12mo. Dr. Cox has published Sermons on Doctrine and Duty, 1855.

"They are remarkably able and eloquent, and discuss a variety of subjects. The spirit throughout is eminently Christian and persuasive, and all may be read with pleasure and with profit."

Coxe, Daniel, M.D. Discourses and papers in Phil. Trans., 1674; Alkaline Seeds; Sea Sand; Volatile Salt from Vegetables.

Coxe, Daniel, resided 14 years in America. He claimed the territory of Georgia, Florida, and Louisiana under his father's purchase. Description of Carolina, Lon., 1722, '27, '41, 8vo.

"A crude performance, drawn up from various journals and voyages to impress the public with the great importance of the region described, and to make them jealous of its occupation by the French." See N. American Review, II. 1.

Collection of Voyages and Travels, Lon., 1741, 8vo.

Coxe, Edward. 1. Miss. Poetry. 2. Valentine, 1805, '10, 8vo.

Coxe, Eliza A. Liberty and Prejudice, a Novel, 1813, 3 vols.

Coxe, Francis. His Retraction, Lon., 1561. A short Treatise declaring the detestable Wickedness of magical Sciences, Lon., 1561, 8vo. Oyles, Vngents, Emplaisters, and Stilled Waters, 1575, 8vo.

Coxe, Henry. A Picture of Italy, 1816, 18mo.

Coxe, John Redman, formerly Prof. of Materia Medica and Pharmacy in the Univ. of Penna. 1. On Inflammation, Phila., 1794, 8vo. 2. Importance, &c. of Medicine, 1800, 8vo. 3. On Vaccination, 1800, 8vo. 4. On Combustion, &c., 1811, 8vo. 5. Amer. Dispensary, 1827, 8vo, &c. 6. Refut. of Harvey's Claim to the Discovery of the Circulation of the Blood, 1834, 8vo. 7. Appeal to the Public, &c., 1835, 8vo. 8. Agaricus Atramentarius, 1842, 8vo. 9. Recog. of Friends in Another World, 1845, 12mo. 10. Epit. of Hippocrates and Galen, 1846, 8vo. 11. Crystallization; Ann. Philos., 1815, vi. 101. Edited: 12. Phila. Med. Museum, 1805, 6 vols. 8vo; New Ser., 1811, 1 vol. 8vo. 13. Emporium of Arts and Sciences, [continued by Thomas Cooper, M.D.,] 1812, 5 vols. 8vo.

Coxe, Leonard. See COCKES.

Coxe, Margaret, a native of Burlington, New Jersey. Claims of the Country on American Females, Phil., 2 vols. 12mo. Botany of the Scriptures. Wonders of the Deep. Young Lady's Companion and Token, 12mo.

"A series of Letters replete with the faithful monitions and precepts a good mother, or, rather, an affectionate elder sister, would urge on those under her care."—S. J. HALL: Woman's Record.

Coxe, Nehemiah. Heresies, &c. in Thomas Collier's Body of Divinity, confuted. Discourses of the Covenants: wherein Circumcision as a Plea for Pædo-Baptism is invalidated, Lon., 1681, 8vo.

Coxe, Peter. Social Day, a Poem with 32 engravings, Lon., 1823, 8vo.

"A poem of no merit."—Lowndes.

This beautiful volume contains engravings after Wilkie, Stothard, Smirke, Cooper, Hills, &c. The exquisite plate of the Broken Jar, by Wilkie, engraved by Warren, has been sold for £33s.

Coxe, R. C. Lectures on Miracles, Lon., 1832, 12mo. Lent Lectures, 1836, 12mo. Advent Lectures, 1845, 8vo. Church Subjects, Newc., 1851, 8vo. Poems, 1845, p. 8vo. Practical Sermons. Wood Notes and Musings, 1848, p. 8vo.

Coxe, Richard S. Reports of Cases, in S. Court, N. Jersey, 1790-95, Burling., 1816, 8vo. Decisions in the S. C., C. C., and D. Courts of the U. States, Phila., 1829, 8vo. This work is the result of great labour, well employed.

Coxe, Tench, of Philadelphia, Commissioner of the Revenue, d. 1824, aged 68. 1. Address on American Manufactures. 2. Inquiry into the Principles of a Commercial System for the United States, 1787. 3. Examination of Lord Sheffield's Observations on the Commerce of the United Provinces, 1792, 8vo. 4. View of the U. States of America, in a series of papers written 1787-94, Phila., 1794, 8vo; Lon., 1795, 8vo. 5. Thoughts on Naval Power, and the Encouragement of Commerce and Manufactures, 1806. 6. Memoir on the Cultivation, Trade, and Manufacture of Cotton, 1807. 7. Memoir on a Navigation Act, 1809. 8. Statement of the Arts and Manufactures of the U. States, 1814.

Coxe, Thomas. Med. Con. to Phil. Trans., 1667.

Coxe, Thomas. Serms., 1709, '12, '26, '27. Magna Britannia et Hibernia, antiqua et nova: or a new Survey of Great Britain, Lon., 6 vols. 4to, 1720-31; 1738. Counties which have not been elsewhere particularly described—Lincolnshire, Suffolk, Shropshire, Yorkshire—are noticed in these volumes.

Coxe, William, 1747-1828, one of the most useful of modern historical writers, was a native of London; Fellow of King's College, 1768; Curate of Denham, 1771; Rector of Bemerton, 1788; Canon-Residentiary of Salisbury, 1803; Archdeacon of Wilts, 1805. He was also Chaplain of the Tower. He made several excursions on the Continent, in company with young members of the nobility, and pub. the result of his observations to the world. 1. Sketches of the Natural, Civil, and Political State of Switzerland, Lon., 1779, 8vo. See No. 6. 2. Account of the Russian Discoveries between Asia and America, &c., 1780, 4to; 2d edit., 1780, (supplet. pub. in 1787; see No. 5); 3d edit., 1787; 4th edit. enlarged, with maps, 1804, 8vo.

"This work is interesting, not merely from the particular subject which the title indicates, but also on account of the sketch it contains of the conquest of Siberia, and of the Russian commerce with China."—STEVENSON: Voyages and Travels.

"This work confirmed the literary reputation of its author, and from the time of its first appearance it has been esteemed one of the most valuable sources of knowledge on the subject of Northern Europe. Some of the earlier portions were submitted to Dr. Robertson, the historian, who carefully revised them."—Lon. Quar. Review.

"Mr. Coxe's book contains many curious and important facts with respect to the various attempts of the Russians to open a communication with the New World."—Dr. ROBERTSON.

3. Account of the Prisons and Hospitals in Russia, Sweden, and Denmark, 1780, 8vo. 4. Travels in Russia, Poland, Sweden, and Denmark, 1784, 2 vols. 4to; vol. iii., 1790, 4to; 2d edit., 1787, 5 vols. 8vo; 3d edit., 1802, 5 vols. 8vo; 4th edit., 1803, '04, 3 vols. 4to.

"Coxe's Tour has lost little of its value by time. The sterling ore of the matter preserves it, and though it has been distilled, and hashed up into a hundred subsequent works, there is always a freshness in the original relation which literary piracy cannot successfully counterfeit."—SIR ROBERTSON BARROWS.

"The substantial merits of this work are well known."—STEVENSON: Voyages and Travels.

5. A Comparative view of the Russian Discoveries, with those made by Captain Cook and Clerke: and a Sketch of what remains to be ascertained by future Navigators, 1787, 4to. See No. 2, to which this work is supplementary.

6. Travels in Switzerland and in the country of the Grisons, 1789, 3 vols. 8vo. This may be called an enlarged edit. of No. 1.

"These travels were performed in 1776, and again in 1785 and 1787, and bear and deserve the same character as the author's travels in Russia, &c. Mr. Coxe gives a list of books in Switzerland at the end of his 3d volume, which may be consulted with advantage. There is a similar list at the end of his travels in Russia, &c."—STEVENSON: Voy. and Trav.

7. Letters to Dr. R. Price upon his Discourse on the Love of our Country, 1790, 8vo. 8. Expl. of the Catechism, 1792, 8vo. 9. Of Confirmation, 1793, 8vo. 10. Gay's Fables, with Life and Notes. 11. Letter to the Countess of Pembroke on the secret tribunals of Westphalia, 1796, 8vo. 12. Memoirs of the Life and Administration of Sir Robert Walpole, Earl of Orford, 1798, 3 vols. 4to. The State Papers which accompany these Memoirs are most valuable to the historian.

"A more judicious and instructive biographical work, or one more satisfactory to every rational desire of knowledge, is not found in English literature. It combines in a remarkable degree the exact and dispassionate inquiry which forms the great merit of compiled history, with the lively circumstantial illustration which belongs to contemporary narrative, or that drawn from recent tradition. It would be superfluous to dwell longer on a book with which no accurate reader of English history can permit himself to be unacquainted."—Lon. Quar. Review.

Mr. Pitt remarked that he had never formed a just appreciation of the character of Sir Robert Walpole and his Administration, before he had perused Mr. Coxe's work. 13. Biographical Anecdotes of Handel and C. J. Smith, 1799, 4to. This vol. contains some of Smith's music never before pub. 14. A Sermon on the excellence of the British Jurisdiction, 1799, 8vo. 15. Historical Tour in Monmouthshire; with upwards of 80 engravings, by Sir R. Colt Hoare, 1801, 2 vols. 4to. Abridged by the author's sister, 1802, sm. 8vo.

"One of Coxe's most agreeable works, and may be ranked among the most elegant and interesting publications extant on British Topography."—Lon. Quarterly Rev.

This valuable work contains much local history and many interesting biographical anecdotes. This is a department—Topography—in which Americans will long have to envy their elder brethren. 16. Memoirs of Horatio, Lord Walpole, 1802, 4to. This may be considered as supplementary to No. 12. 17. Vindication of the Celts, 1803, 8vo. 18. History of the House of Austria, 1218-1792, 1807, 3 vols. 4to; 2d edit., 1820, 5 vols. 8vo; 3d ed., 1847, 3 vols. sm. 8vo.

"The House of Austria has in particular received due homage and respect from the labours of J. P. Kraft and Mr. Archdeacon Coxe."—Dr. DIBDIN: Lib. Comp.

"Coxe's House of Austria must be diligently read," &c.—Smyth's Lect. on Mod. Hist., q. v.

19. Essay on the Epist. of Ignatius, 1807, 8vo. 20. The Literary Life and Select Works of Benj. Stillingfleet, 1811, 3 vols. 8vo. Vol. i. contains the Life; ii. and iii. S.'s Poetry, Tracts on Nat. Hist., and Prof. Martyn's Observations.

"The value of these original and truly curious extracts cannot fail to be appreciated by every person conversant with the subject. Mr. Stillingfleet's Remarks on Agricultural Writers are particularly valuable. His Works will now attain the rank in every Library to which they are so justly entitled."—Lon. Gent. Mag.

21. Memoirs of the Kings of Spain of the House of Bourbon, 1700–88, 1813, 3 vols. 4to; 2d ed., 1815, 5 vols. 8vo.

"In Mr. Coxe's House of Bourbon every subject that I have now alluded to is treated very fully. His work is in many places entertaining, and is on the whole a valuable accession to our historical information."—PROF. SMYTH: Lect. on Mod. Hist.

22. Letter on Tithes, 1815, 8vo. 23. A Sermon, 1817, 4to. 24. Memoirs of John, Duke of Marlborough, with his original Correspondence, 1818, '19, 3 vols. 4to; 2d ed., 1820, 6 vols. 8vo; new edit., revised by John Wade, 1848, 3 vols. sm. 8vo, and an Atlas in 4to. One of the large paper copies of the first edit. had the two portraits of the Duke taken on satin. This copy was marked £30 in a bookseller's catalogue.

"To write the Life of Marlborough is to write the history of the reign of Queen Anne; and it is impossible for any one to judge properly of this part of our annals, without a diligent perusal of this very entertaining and valuable work."—PROF. SMYTH: Lect. on Mod. Hist.

25. Private Correspondence of Charles Talbot, Duke of Shrewsbury, 1821, 4to. 26. Sketches of the Lives of Correggio and Parmegiano, 1823, 8vo. 27. Memoirs of the Administration of the Right Hon. Henry Pelham, 1829, 2 vols. 4to.

"The late Archdeacon Coxe has terminated his long and useful literary course by a work which adds largely to our stores of authentic information. . . . He has executed his task with no less diligence and fidelity than he displayed while in the full enjoyment of earlier vigour."—British Critic.

"These Memoirs have lately acquired a new title to attention, (if such a work needed any casual incident to enhance its value,) by the publication of Lord Orford's lively letters to Sir Horace Mann, where a great part of the small talk embodied in Walpole's Memoirs, and of which Mr. Coxe's history is the best correction, reappears in a lighter form."—Lon. Quarterly Review.

"I have now then only to refer the student to Mr. Coxe's Memoirs of the Pelham Administration, and to request that he will depend on this regular and authentic account of an important period in our annals, not only while he wishes to know the transactions that belong to it, but the character of the ministers and parliamentary leaders by which it was distinguished. In no other way can he derive a proper idea of the merits of Mr. Pelham, Lord Hardwicke, and, above all, of the Duke of Newcastle."—PROF. SMYTH: Lect. on Mod. Hist.

We notice a set of Coxe's Historical Works and Travels, 24 vols. imp. 4to, all on large paper, in Mr. H. G. Bohn's Catalogue for 1841, elegantly bound in red morocco by Lewis, priced £84. The same enterprising publisher has recently issued in his excellent STANDARD LIBRARY, cheap edit., of several of the works of this author: see ante. Here is an opportunity for both long and short purses. Let no historical student fail to secure these invaluable volumes in some form, for, as Dr. Aikin well remarks,

"He who wishes to understand intimately the politics of the two last reigns must consult the volumes of Mr. Coxe: the future historian will refer to them with confidence and gratitude."—Annual Review.

"The biographical labours of MR. ARCHDEACON COXE are considerable in extent, and meritorious in quality; and, as they appear to my judgment, are likely to be yet more appreciated by posterity than in the present times."—DR. DIBDIN: Lib. Comp.

Coxeter, Thomas, 1689–1747, a native of Lechlade, Gloucestershire, was educated at Magdalen School and Trinity College, Oxford. He collected some of the materials used in what is styled Cibber's Lives of the Poets, assisted Ames in his Typographical Antiquities, and aided Theobald in his black-letter researches, when the latter was preparing his edit. of Shakespeare. Some of his MSS. were used by Warton in his History of English Poetry. He pub. in 1739 an edit. of Baily's, or rather Hall's, Life of Bishop Fisher, first pub. in 1655. He was the originator of the scheme adopted by Dodsley of publishing a collection of Old English Plays. He also pub., in 1710, a poem supposed to be his own, entitled Astrea Lierimans, to the memory of Sir John Cook, and in 1759 an edit. of Massinger's Works appeared, said to be "revised, corrected, and the editions collated, by Mr. Coxeter."

"We talked of a collection being made of all the English poets who had published a volume of poems. Johnson told me that a Mr. Coxeter, whom he knew, had gone the greatest length towards this; having collected, I think, about five hundred volumes of poets whose works were but little known; but that upon his death Tom Osborne bought them, and they were dispersed, which he thought a pity, as it was curious to see any series complete; and in every volume of poems something good may be found."—Boswell's Johnson.

It should be mentioned to Dr. Johnson's credit, that he often afforded aid to Coxeter's daughter, who was left in needy circumstances by her father's death. Coxeter was secretary to an English Historical Society, and he contemplated the publication of an edit. of the Dramatic Works of Thomas May. See a notice of him in Nichols's Literary Anecdotes, and in the Gent. Mag. for 1756.

Coyte, B., M.D. Con. to Med. Trans., 1785. Hortus Botanicus Gippovicensis, Ipswich, 1796, 4to. Index Plantarum, vol. i. 1808, 8vo.

Coyte, Joseph William. A Cockney's Rambles in the Country, 1811, 12mo.

Coyte, Tobias. Fifteen Serms., 1762, 2 vols. 12mo.

Coyte, William. Sermon, Norw., 1710, 12mo.

Cozens, Dr. Mercurius Ecclesiasticus, 1645, 4to.

Cozens, Alexander, d. 1786, a drawing-master in London, born in Russia. 1. 32 Species of Trees, 1771.

2. Landscapes, 1785. 3. Nature. 4. Principles of Beauty relative to the Human Head, with 19 Plates by Bartolozzi; Letter Press in English and French, 1778, imp. fol.

"A work very ingenious, but somewhat fanciful."—DR. WARR: Bibl. Brit.

Cozens, Charles. Adventures of a Guardsman, Lon., 1847, 12mo.

Cozens, Samuel. Biblical Lexicon of 2500 names and places, Lon., 1848, 12mo.

Cozens, Zachariah. 1. A Tour through the Isle of Thanet, 1794. 2. The Margate Hoy. 3. A Poem. Con. to Gent. Mag. See Nichols's Literary Anecdotes.

Cozzens, Fred. S., b. 1818, in New York City. 1. Prisms, N. York, 1852. 2. Stone House on the Susquehanna. 3. Sparrowgrass Papers, 1856, 12mo. A work full of wit and humour. 4. Acadia; or, A Sojourn among the Blue Noses, 1858, 12mo. Ed. The Wine-Press; a Monthly devoted to the interests of American vine-planters and wine-makers.

Cozzens, Issachar, b. 1781, Newport, R.I., uncle of the preceding. Geological History of New York Island, N.Y., 1843, 8vo.

Crabb, George, of Magdalen College, Oxford, d. 1854. 1. Universal Historical Dictionary, 1825, 2 vols. 4to. 2. Dictionary of General Knowledge, 5th ed., by Rev. H. Davis, 1853, cr. 8vo. 3. Universal Technological Dictionary, 1823, 2 vols. 4to. 4. English Synonyms, 3d ed., 1824, 8vo; 1826, 4to; pub. in N. York, 10th ed. from the folio edit., 1852, 8vo.

"A valuable addition to the philological treatises which we possess."—British Critic, Oct. 1823.

"As an etymologist, Mr. Crabb seems to have some dictionary-knowledge of many languages; but to be unacquainted with the philosophy, or history even, of language in general. . . . However, with all this apparent incompetency for the office of Synonymist, Mr. Crabb has most industriously brought together a mass of materials and observations, which, under judicious selection, in more skilful hands, may, hereafter, essentially contribute to the service of English literature."—Lon. Quarterly Rev., xxv.

"It is wished that some such work as the Abbé Girard's Synonymes Français were undertaken for our tongue. Nothing would contribute more to precise and elegant writing."—Baird's Lectures.

5. German Grammar for Englishmen, 12mo. 6. English Grammar for Germans. 7. Extracts from Germ. Authors; 7th ed. by Tiarks, 1841, 12mo. 8. Germ. and Eng. Conversationists; 9th ed. by Bernays, 1846, 12mo. 9. New Pantheon, or Mythology of All Nations, 1847, 18mo. Like all Mr. Crabb's works, most useful and instructive.

Crabb, George. 1. Conveyancer's Assistant, 3d ed., Lon., 1845, 2 vols. 8vo; 4th ed., by J. T. Christie, Lon., 1855, 2 vols.

"Mr. Christie has not only revised this Fourth Edition of the late Mr. Crabb's work, but very materially improved it by amending, and in many cases curtailing, the length of the original precedents, and adapting them to the established forms of the present day."—Lon. Legal Observer.

"No lawyer will feel his library to be complete without it."—Bell's Messenger.

2. Law of Real Property, 1846, 2 vols. 8vo. 3. Hist. of the English Law, 1829, 8vo; 41st Am. ed., Burlington, 1831, 8vo. This is founded upon Reeves's Hist. of the English Law. 4. Digest and Index of the Statutes, &c., Lon., 1841, '47, 4 vols. r. 8vo.

"A work of immense labour, most carefully and satisfactorily stated."—Morvin's Legal Bibl.

Crabb, Habakkuk, 1756–1794. Serms., Camb., 1796, r. 8vo.

"A valuable addition to the stock of English Discourses."—HUGH WORKINGTON.

Crabb, John. Poem, 1704; ditto, 1719, Oxf., fol.

Crabb, Maria J. Tales for Children, 1807, 12mo.

Crabb, Roger. The English Hermit; or Wonder of this Age, Lon., 1655, 4to; reprinted in Harl. Miscell., vol. iv.

Crabbe's Report of Cases in D. C. U. States for the E. District of Penna., 1836-46, chiefly before the Hon. Joseph Hopkinson, Phila., 8vo.

"Mr. Crabbe's Reports are extremely well done. The style is good, the facts of the cases well stated, and the syllabus carefully abstracted." See Amer. Law Reg., June, 1853.

Crabbe, George, 1754-1832, a native of Aldborough, Suffolk, was the son of a collector of the salt-duties, who placed him as an apprentice with a surgeon, which profession the future author for a time adopted. Meeting with but little success, and having become enamoured of authorship, he determined to seek his fortune in London, which he had already visited as a medical student. A poetical address to the monthly reviewers, entitled, The Candidate, profited him but little either in pocket or reputation, and the res angusta domi—if the term may be applied to a poet's garret—stared him in the face with a most threatening aspect. In this emergency he made unsuccessful applications for relief to Lord North, Lord Shelburne, and Lord Chancellor Thurlow. The latter was subsequently more gracious to him, and presented him with £100, and two years later with two small livings. But at the earlier period of which we speak, he would have been desolate and destitute indeed, had it not in a happy moment occurred to him to make known his case to that exalted character—EDMUND BURKE, a name never to be mentioned without reverence nor thought of without admiration and esteem. His written application will be found in the Life of the poet by his son, and several letters to Mr. Burke are pub. in the Correspondence of the latter. In our memoir of this distinguished statesman and philosopher, we have quoted an eloquent tribute by Crabbe to the virtues of his generous benefactor, and we have such delight in recording any thing to the honour of this illustrious man, that we cannot withhold from the reader the enthusiastic eulogy of the grateful child of the deeply obliged author:

"He went into Mr. Burke's room, a poor young adventurer, spurned by the opulent, and rejected by the publishers, his last shilling gone, and all but his last hope with it: he came out virtually secure of almost all the good fortune that, by successive steps, afterwards fell to his lot—his genius acknowledged by one whose verdict could not be questioned—his character and manners appreciated and approved by a noble and capacious heart, whose benevolence knew no limits but its power—that of a giant in intellect, who was, in feeling, an unsophisticated child—a bright example of the close affinity between superlative talents and the warmth of the generous affections. Mr. Crabbe had afterwards many other friends, kind, liberal, and powerful, who assisted him in his professional career; but it was one hand alone that rescued him when he was sinking."

By the assistance of this true friend, who took him under his own roof, Crabbe was enabled to prepare himself for admission to holy orders. He was ordained deacon in 1781 and priest in 1782. After officiating for a time as curate to the rector of Aldborough, he became, by the influence of Mr. Burke, chaplain to the Duke of Rutland, and took up his residence at Belvoir Castle. In 1788 Lord Thurlow presented him with two small livings in Dorsetshire. He now felt at liberty to marry the object of his early affections—Sarah Elmy—who was removed by death in 1813. In this year—he had in the meantime held several rectories and curacies—the Duke of Rutland gave him the living of Trowbridge in Wiltshire, to which the incumbency of Croxton, near Belvoir, was subsequently added. Here he lived for the rest of his life, a useful, respected, and beloved parish priest, occasionally relieving his pastoral duties by a visit to his literary friends in London, who admired the poet, esteemed the man, and revered the priest. In 1822 he paid a visit to Sir Walter Scott, in Edinburgh. We now come to the consideration of his writings. The Poem of the Library was pub. in 1781, 4to, and met with a flattering reception. Two years later appeared The Village, which confirmed his literary reputation, and made the obscure priest one of the most noted in an age of great names. Both of these poems had before publication received the benefit of the revision of Mr. Burke, and The Village had passed under the critical eye of Dr. Johnson:

"March 4, 1783.

"Sir—I have sent you back Mr. Crabbe's poem, which I read with great delight. It is original, vigorous, and elegant."

"The alterations which I have made I do not require him to adopt, for my lines are perhaps not often better than his own; but he may take mine and his own together, and perhaps between them produce something better than either. He is not to think his copy wantonly defaced. A wet sponge will wash all the red lines away, and leave the page clear."

"The dedication will be least liked. It were better to contract it into a short, sprightly address. I do not doubt Mr. Crabbe's success."—Dr. Johnson to Sir Joshua Reynolds.

Scenes so graphically described, appealing to the experience of so many, could not be otherwise than widely read. Those who read extracts in the journals were not satisfied until they had procured the volume, and the author felt his position to be no longer doubtful. The Newspaper appeared in 1785; The Parish Register in 1807; The Borough in 1810; Tales in Verse in 1812; and his last publication—Tales of the Hall—in 1819. He sold this work, and the unexpired term of his former copyrights, to Mr. Murray for the handsome sum of £3000. We should not omit to mention, that two years before the publication of the last-named work, Mr. Crabbe pub. a Sermon on the Variation of Public Opinion as it respects Religion. In delineating the homely everyday scenes of common English life—in depicting the tenants of the lowly cottage, the rude hut, the parish workhouse, and the jail—perhaps Crabbe has never been surpassed. His command of language and facility in rhyme are remarkable, and without being free from diffusiveness, there is often an epigrammatic terseness in his lines which delights even a careless reader. Horace Smith calls him "Pope in worsted stockings," but Horace said many things in his wit which he would have repudiated in his wisdom. One of the most eloquent criticisms upon Crabbe's writings with which we are acquainted will be found in Cunningham's Biog. Hist. of England. We give a brief extract:

"The severity of Crabbe's muse consists in a faithful portraiture of nature. If man is not always happy, it is not the poet's fault. There is too much of sober reality in life to make the picture other than it is. This Crabbe knows, for he writes of scenes under his own observation. He lived amidst the people he describes, felt their occasional joys, and saddened over their many misfortunes. But in his gloomiest character he never oversteers the modesty of nature. He does not accumulate horrors for effect. He has no extravagant and unnatural heroes pouring forth their morbid sentiment in his pages. There is no sickly affectation, but a pure and healthy portrait of life—of life it may be in its unhappiest, but in its least artificial, development, where society has done little to alter its rough uneducated tones, where the actual feelings and passions of man may be traced at every footstep."—Vol. viii. 420.

Gifford, referring to the affecting story of the village girl betrothed to the sailor, in The Borough, remarks:

"Longinus somewhere mentions, that it was a question among the critics of his age, whether the sublime could be produced by tenderness. If this question had not been already determined, this history would have gone far to bring it to a decision."

Allan Cunningham hardly agrees with the critic quoted above:

"Crabbe is a cold and remorseless dissector, who pauses with the streaming knife in his hands, to explain how strongly the blood is tainted, what a gangrene is in the liver, how completely the sources of health are corrupted, and that the subject is a bad one. . . . Deliver us from Crabbe in the hour of depression! Pictures moral, and mental, and bodily degradation, are frequent through all his works; he is one of Job's chief comforters to the people."—Biog. and Crit. Hist. of Lit.

We quote an able criticism on Crabbe from an eminent authority:

"Mr. Crabbe is the greatest mannerist, perhaps, of all our living poets; and it is rather unfortunate that the most prominent features of his mannerism are not the most pleasing. The homely, quaint, and prosaic style—the flat, and often broken and jingly versification—the eternal full-lengths of low and worthless characters—with their accustomed garnishing of sly jokes and familiar moralizing—are all on the surface of his writings; and are almost unavoidably the things by which we are first reminded of him, when we take up any of his new productions. Yet they are not the things that truly constitute his peculiar manner, or give that character by which he will and ought to be remembered with future generations. It is plain, indeed, that they are things that will make nobody remembered—and can never, therefore, be really characteristic of some of the most original and powerful poetry that the world ever saw."

"Mr. C., accordingly, has other gifts; and those not less peculiar or less strongly marked than the blemishes with which they are contrasted—an unrivalled and almost magical power of observation, resulting in descriptions so true to nature as to strike us rather as transcripts than imitations—an anatomy of character and feeling not less exquisite and searching—an occasional touch of manly tenderness—and a deep and dreadful pathetic. Interspersed by fits, and strangely interwoven with the most minute and humble of his details. Add to all this the sure and profound sagacity of the remarks with which he every now and then startles us in the midst of very unambitious discussions; and the weight and terseness of the maxims which he drops, like oracular responses, on occasions that give no promise of such a revelation; and last, though not least, that sweet and seldom-sounded chord of lyrical inspiration, the lightest touch of which instantly charms away all harshness from his numbers and all harshness from his themes—and at once exalts him to a level with the most energetic and inventive poets of his age."—LORD JEFFREY.

Read articles in Edin. Review, xii. 131, xvi. 30, xx. 277, xxxii. 118, lx. 131; Lon. Quar. Rev., l. 468, lii. 97; Blackwood's Mag., v. 469; N. American Rev., xxxix. 135. An edit. of Crabbe's Works was pub. in 7 vols. 8vo. Lon., 1822; 1823, 5 vols. 8vo. and 8vo. Life, with his Letters and Journals, by his son; new edit., 1838, 8vo. New edit. of his Life and Poetical Works, edited by his son, 1847, 1 vol. r. 8vo. Poetical Works, with his Letters and Journals, 1847, 8 vols. fp. 8vo; Works, &c., 5 vols. 8vo; also in 1850 and 1851. The Life, by the son of the poet, has been highly commended.

"We never read a more interesting piece of biography—it is so unaffected, and we are sure so faithful, that we now feel as well acquainted with the man as we have hitherto been with the poet."—Lon. Athenæum.

Crabtree, Wm. Observations Coelestes, 1672, 4to.

Crabtree, Wm. Funeral Sermon, Leeds, 1780, 8vo.

Cracherode, Rev. Clayton Mordaunt, 1729–1799, educated at Christ Church, Oxford, was conspicuous for his taste in books, pictures, &c., and for his noble Library and collection of curiosities, which were bequeathed to the British Museum. Three specimens of his excellent Latin poetry will be found in the Carmina Quadragesima, for the year 1748, and an account of the author and his books is recorded by Dr. Dibdin in the Bibliographical Decameron. Also see Gent. Mag., vol. lix., and Sims's Hand Book to the Library of the British Museum.

"He was a splendid star in the old school of bibliography—from the time of the sale of Askew's library to the day of his death—which latter event took place about eight or nine years after the dispersion of the Pinell collection."—Dibdin's Bibliog. Decameron, iii. 329.

Cracklow, C. Views of Churches in Surrey, Lon., 1827, 4to. This should accompany Britton and Brayley's Hist. of Surrey.

Cracknell, Benj., D.D. Theolog. treatises, 1794–1806.

Craddock, Francis. Revenue without Taxes, 1661, 4to.

Craddock, John, Archbp. of Dublin. Sermon before the Univ. of Cambridge, 1739; H. of Commons, 1752; Fast S., 1758.

Craddock, Joseph. Tour in Wales, Lon., 1770, 12mo. Zobeide; a Trag., 1771, 8vo. Account of parts of N. Wales, 1777, 12mo. Literary and Misc. Memoirs and some of the author's writings, 1826–28, 4 vols. 8vo.

"Anecdotes of many distinguished political, literary, and theatrical characters of the 18th century, travels in parts of Europe, and reprints of several of the author's tracts and plays."—Lowndes.

Craddock, Samuel, 1620–1706, a Nonconformist divine, Fellow of Emanuel College, Oxford, Rector of North Cadbury, ejected, 1662. 1. Knowledge and Practice, Lon., 1659, 8vo.

"I know of no book so well adapted to help a young minister."—ORSON.

"One of the best systems of divinity which a plain man can read."—BOSCH.

"Much instruction is condensed."

2. Harmony of the Four Evangelists, 1668, fol. This was revised by Archbishop Tillotson.

"In the seventeenth century it was deservedly held in the highest estimation; though it is now superseded by later and more critical works."—T. H. HOARZ.

3. The Apostolical History, 1672, fol. 4. The Old Testament History Methodized, 1683, fol.; in Latin, at Leyden, 1685, 8vo. Superseded by the labours of Stackhouse and Townsend. 5. Exposition of the Revelation, 1692, 8vo.

"Superseded by later and better works."—T. H. HOARZ.

"Anti-millennarian, but evangelical."—BICKERSTAFF.

6. Gospel Liberty. 7. A Catechism.

"Craddock's three volumes are very readable: the two last on the New Testament are much better than the first on the Old. His extracts in the margin from Hammond, Lightfoot, and Grotius, are very judicious; and I think, on the whole, I never read any one author that assisted me more in what relates to the New Testament."—DR. DODDING.

Craddock, Thomas, d. 1760, Rector of St. Thomas's, Baltimore county, Maryland. Two Sermons, 1747, 8vo. Trans. of Buchanan's Latin Psalms into Eng. Verse, 1754, 8vo.

Craddock, Walter, d. 1660, a Puritan divine, travelled in Wales, and excited great interest in religion by his sermons. To this day in some parts of Wales professors of religion are called "Craddocks." Sermons, 1646, 4to. Gospel Liberty, 1646, 4to. Divine Drops, 1650, 4to. Gospel-holiness, 1651, 4to. Works, Chester, 1800, 8vo.

"His works excel in clearness of doctrine, especially in the grand article of Christian righteousness. The author discovers a great simplicity of manner as a preacher, with much energy and loving zeal."—DR. E. WILLIAMS.

Craddock, William, D.D. Sermons, 1713, '18, 8vo.

Craddock, Zachary, D.D., 1633–1695. Sermons, 1678, 1706, '42. Two of his sermons, one on Providence, and one on the Design of Christianity, have been greatly admired.

Cradocke, Edward. The Shippe of Assured Safetie. Discourse of God's Providence, Lon., 1571, 16mo.

Cradocot. Sermon, Lon., 1663, 4to.

Craford, Earl of. Speech, Lon., 1641, 4to.

Crafordius, Matt. Latin treat. on the Sabbath, 1669, 8vo.

Crafts, William, 1787–1826, a native of Charleston, S. Carolina, and for some time editor of The Charleston Courier. He attained considerable distinction as a lawyer. Poems, Essays, and Orations, with a Biog. Memoir, Charleston, 1828. See Kettell's Spec. American Poetry, ii. 144.

Crafurdus, Thomas. See CRAFTURD.

Crafurdus. See CRAFTURD.

Crag, John. A Prophecy concerning the Earl of Essex that now is, 1641, 4to.

Cragge, John. 1. G. Britain's Prayers in the time of dangerous Contagion, 1641, 4to. 2. Against Anabaptism, 1656, 8vo. 3. Cabinet of Spiritual Jewells, in Eight Serms., 1657. 4. The Royal Prerogative, &c., and a Sermon, 1661, 8vo.

Craghead, Robert. Answer to a discourse of Ep. King, Edin., 1694, 4to.

Craig, A. R. 1. Corporal Punishments in Schools, Lon., 1844, 8vo. 2. Philosophy of Training, 1847, 12mo.

"Worthy of attention; for its purpose is not only to obviate the necessity of normal schools for teachers, but to afford better guides to the mode of teaching languages, so as to abridge the time employed in attaining them, and to enable the learner to gain them with more ease and accuracy."—Lon. Gent. Mag.

Craig, or Craige, Alexander. Poeticall Essayes, Lon., 1604, 4to. Amorse Songs, Sonets, and Elegies, 1606, 12mo. Poeticall Recreations, Aberd., 1623, 4to.

Craig, Edward. Jacob, or Patriarchal Piety, 1826, 12mo. Sermons, 1828, 12mo.

"The grand doctrines of the gospel are here brought prominently forward, and established by clear and appropriate testimonies from the sacred volume. We feel as we read these sermons the kindling ardour of a devotional spirit."—Lon. Cong. Mag.

Craig, James, 1682–1744, a native of East Lothian, one of the most popular preachers in Edinburgh. Divine Poems. Serms., Edin., 1732–38, 3 vols. 8vo. Greatly admired; very scarce, and should be republished.

Craig, John, 1512?–1600, a preacher of the Reformation in Scotland, wrote the celebrated National Covenant, and partly compiled The Second Book of Discipline. A Short Summe of the whole Catechism, Edin., 1581, 8vo. So rare, that a copy in a bookseller's catalogue some years back, was priced £8 8s. Reprinted, Lon., 1591, 8vo.

Craig, John, a Scotch mathematician. Theologim Christianæ Principia Mathematica, Lon., 1699, 4to; Leipzig, 1755. In this he attempts to prove that the Christian religion will last only 1454 years from the date of his book, unless the second coming of Christ prevent its extinction. Abbé Hautville refuted his arguments in his Christian Religion proved by facts. Craig pub. several mathematical treatises, and some papers in Phil. Trans., 1698–1712. See Chalmers's Biog. Dict., and Watt's Bibl. Brit.

Craig, John. Origin of the Distinctions of Rank, by Prof. Millar, with account of his life and writings, Edin., 1806, 8vo. Remarks on Doctrines in Political Economy, 8vo. Elements of Political Science, 1814, 3 vols. 8vo.

Craig, John. New Universal Etymological, Technological, and Pronouncing Dictionary of the English Language, with an Essay on Language, Lon., 1852, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Partaking, from the copiousness of its explanations, and the number of words, of the character of an Encyclopædia. It contains a vast mass of important information on Natural History and Science."

Craig, R. D., and T. J. Phillips. Reports of Cases in H. C. of Chancery, 3 Vols., 1840, '41, Lon., 1842, 8vo. R. D. C. and J. W. Mylne's Reports in Chancery, 1835–41, 5 vols. r. 8vo, 1837–48.

Craig, Rev. Robert. Refutation of Popery, Lon., 2 vols. 8vo. Theocracy, or the Principles of the Jewish Religion and Polity adapted to all Nations and Times, 1848, p. 8vo.

"An excellent treatise, written with clearness and vigour."—Edinburgh Advertiser.

Craig, Sir Thomas, of Riccarton, 1548–1608, an eminent lawyer and antiquary, a native of Edinburgh. Poemata, Edin., 1603, 4to; et inter Delit. Poet. Scotar., Amst., 1637, 8vo. Jus Feudale, tribus Libris comprehensum, left in MS. by the author, edited and pub. by Robert Burnet in 1655, fol. The 2d edit. was enlarged by Menckenius: the last edit. was improved by the notes and corrections of James Baillie, Edin., 1732, fol.; Lon., 1766, 4to; Lipsie, 1716, fol. Other edits. and translations. It illustrates the Feudal Law as applied in Scotland.

"A lasting monument of the extraordinary learning of its great author."—BISHOP NICOLSON: Hist. Lib.

"Craig has taken little pains to search into the antiquities of our law. It was not the practice in his days either for historians or lawyers to dip into records; and our author appears to be better acquainted with the Feudal history of other countries, which might be learned from books, than with the Feudal history of his own country, which must be gathered from records."—Lord Kames: Statute Law of Scotland.

"Craig's is a work of authority all over Europe." See Moreri; and Laing's Hist. of Scotland.

Scotland's Sovereignty asserted; being a dispute concerning Homage, Lon., 1695, 8vo.

"An elaborate treatise, proving that the kings of Scotland never paid nor owed any homage to those of England."—BISHOP NICOLSON: Hist. Lib.

The Right of Succession to the Kingdom of England, Lon., 1703, fol., answered by W. Atwood. Craig was author of some Latin poems, which have been highly admired. See an Account of his Life and Writings by Patrick Fraser Tytler, Edin., 1823, 8vo; and see, Lowndes's Bibl. Manual.

"Sir Thomas Craig is known in every enlightened country in Europe—and his Latin Poems have been mentioned in commendatory terms by critical writers."—IRVING.

Craig, Thomas. Sermon, Lon., 1821, 8vo.

Craig, W. Marshall. Study of Nature in drawing Landscape, Lon., 1703, 4to. He attacks Gilpin's principles of drawing. Craig pub. several other works on painting, drawing, &c.

Craig, William, D.D., 1709–1783, of St. Andrew's Church, Glasgow. Essay on the Life of Christ, Edin., 1767, 12mo. Discourses, Edin., 1775, 3 vols. 12mo; new edit., 1808, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Habitually pious, ardently devout, and deeply interested in the welfare of those who listened to his instruction, he delivered himself with genuine and becoming earnestness."—Prior. RICHARDSON, in Biog. Brit.

Craigie, David, M.D. Elements of the Practice of Physic, Edin., 1837–40, 2 vols. 8vo. Elements of General and Pathological Anatomy, 2d edit., Edin., 1847, 8vo, pp. 1088.

"A volume which may be perused with pleasure and advantage, both by the non-professional man of science and the practical anatomist."—Lancet.

See "Anatomy," in Encyc. Brit., 7th edit.

Craigie, J., and J. S. Stewart. Reports of Cases decided in the H. of Lords under Appeal from Scotland, 1720–53, being a continuation of Robertson's Reports, Edin., 1825, 8vo.

Craik, George Lillie, b. 1799, in Fifeshire, son of a schoolmaster, settled in London in 1824; Prof. English Literature and History, Queen's College, Belfast, since 1849. From the commencement to the close of the Penny Cyclopaedia he was one of its most valuable contributors in history and biography, and is one of the most useful writers of the day. 1. Romance of the Peerage, Lon., 1848–50, 4 vols. p. 8vo.

"We believe there are few literary men in England who are so well acquainted with this subject as the present author."—Jerrold's Newspaper.

2. Bacon: his Writings and his Philosophy, 3 vols. 18mo. Highly commended: see notice in Lon. Athenaeum, &c. 3. Spenser and his Poetry, 3 vols. 18mo. 4. Paris and its Historical Scenes, 2 vols. 18mo. 5. Evils of Popular Tumults, illustrative of the Evils of Social Ignorance, 18mo. 6. History of British Commerce from the Earliest Time to the Present Day, 3 vols. 18mo.

"To the merchant, the capitalist, the manufacturer, the tradesman, to all who are desirous of knowing by what means England has arrived at her present state of commercial greatness and prosperity, we recommend this work as the cheapest and by far the best mode of obtaining the desired information."—Lincoln Stan.

7. History of Literature and Learning in England, from the Earliest Time to the Present Day, 6 vols. in 3, 18mo, 1844, '45.

"An invaluable text-book to all students of English literature."—Lon. Critic.

8. The Pursuit of Knowledge under Difficulties, (3 vols. 18mo;) a new edit., to which is added Female Examples, (2 vols. 18mo,) 5 vols. in 2, 1845–47.

"A body of examples, full of anecdotes and interest, to show how an ardent desire for knowledge has been able to triumph over the most unpropitious circumstances. A pleasant book, worthy of being accepted by all thoughtful women and honourable men."—Lon. Athenaeum.

9. Outlines of the Eng. Language, 1851, 12mo. Mr. Craik and Charles Macfarlane were the principal contributors to Knight's invaluable Pictorial History of England, 8 vols. super-roy. 8vo. See ANDREWS, J. PETTIT.

"Scrupulous accuracy, unwearied research, and sound criticism, united with an ardent desire for the safe and gradual advance of all that may practically improve the condition of society, are the leading characteristics of Mr. Craik's writings."—Knight's Eng. Cyc., Div. Biog., vol. II.

Crakanthorpe, Richard, D.D., 1569–1624, Fellow of Queen's College, Oxford, 1598. Defensio Ecclesiae Anglicanae, &c., Lon., 1625, 4to.

"Which book was held to be the most exact piece for controversy since the time of the Reformation."—Athen. Oxon.

Dr. C. also wrote A Defence of Justinian, 1616, 4to; of Constantine, 1621, 4to; Popish Falsifications, 1607; A Treatise of the 5th Genl. Council at Constantinople, 653, 1631, fol.; and some sermons, &c. See Athen. Oxon.

"Dr. Crakanthorpe's Defensio gives the best account of most Popish controversies."

In his Treatise of the 5th General Council he contends, in opposition to Baronius and Binius, that the Pope's apostolical constit. and definitive sentence in matter of faith was condemned as heretical by the Synod.

Crakelt, W. Trigonometry, &c.

Cralle, Richard K., of South Carolina. Life and Works of John C. Calhoun, N.Y., 6 vols. 8vo. See p. 327.

Cramer, J. A. Catenae Græcorum Patrum in Novum Testamentum, Oxon., 1838–44, 8 vols. 8vo. Ancient Greece, 3 vols. 8vo. Italy, 2 vols. 8vo. Asia Minor, 2 vols. 8vo. Study of Modern History, 1843, 8vo. Cramer and Wickham's Dissert. on the Pass. of Hannibal over the Alps, 1828, 8vo.

"A scholar-like work of first-rate ability."—Edin. Review.

Crammond, H., M.D. Outlines of Human Life, 1787, 8vo.

Crammond, Robt. and H., M.D. A Letter to the National Assembly of France, 1790, 4to.

Cramp, J. M. Text Book of Popery, Dubl., 1831, 12mo; enlarged, Lon., 1839, 8vo; 3d ed., 1851.

"A complete exposure of the imposture of the Papal religion by authorities the most unexceptionable, the most decisive, the most condemning."—MENDHAM: Memorials of the Council of Trent.

Lectures for these Times, 1844, 12mo.

Crampton, Philip, M.D. Profess. treatises, Lon., 1805, '13.

Cranch, Rev. C. P., b. 1813, in Alexandria, District of Columbia, is a son of Judge WILLIAM CRANCH, (q. v.) He pub. a vol. of poems in 1844, (Phila., 12mo.) See specimens in Griswold's Poets and Poetry of America. The Last of the Huggermuggers, Bost., 1856, 12mo. Koboltoto; a Sequel to the above, 1857, 12mo.

Cranch, John. Wills, by W. Langworth, 1794, 8vo. Fine Arts, 1811, 4to.

Cranch, Judge Richard, 1726–1811, a native of England, resided for 61 years at Baintree, near Quincy, Massachusetts. He pub. his Views of the Prophecies concerning Antichrist. See Allen's Amer. Biog. Dict.

Cranch, Judge William, 1768–1854, son of the above. Reports of Cases in Sup. Court U.S., Aug. 1801, to Feb. 1815, 9 vols. in 8, Washington, 1804–17; N. York, 1812, 8vo.

"The period taken in by Judge Cranch is perhaps the most momentous and lustrous in our judicial history."—Hoff. Leg. Sta., 421, q. v., et 413, 560, 569; Story's Prom. Notes.

Cranch, W., and Richard Cox, Condensed Reports Supreme Court U. States, Washington, 1835, 8vo. Reports of Cases in U. States Circuit Court of the District of Columbia, 1801–41, 6 vols. 8vo.

"The extensive jurisdiction, civil and criminal, original and appellate, of the tribunal whose decisions are here reported,—the long period covered by the volumes,—the interest and variety of the subjects adjudicated by the court, and the great research which characterizes its most important decisions,—concur to render this publication in the highest degree desirable to the community."

Crandolph, A. J. Mysterious Hand, 1811, 3 vols. 12mo.

Crandon, John. Baxter's Aphorisms, Lon., 1654, 4to.

Crane, John, M.D. Nottingham M. Water, Lon., 1790, 8vo.

Crane, Ralph. The Workes of Mercy, both corporal and spirituall; A Poem, Lon., 1621, 8vo. Sykes's sale, £9 10s.

Crane, Thomas, of Lancashire. A Prospect of Divine Providence, Lon., 1672, sm. 8vo. Has only the initials, T. C.

"A valuable work."—BICKERSTETH.

Serm. at Funeral of Rich'd. Sherlock, D.D., 1690, 4to.

Crane, Thomas. Theolog. treatises, &c., 1772, '74, '86. Poet. Works of Wm. Smith, D.D. Life and Writings, 1788, 8vo.

Crane, Wm., Jun., M.D. Con. to Phil. Mag., 1814, '15; Chemical Affinity; the Nature of Light.

Craner, Henry. Sermons, 1749, '63.

Craner, Thomas. Sermon, Lon., 1766, 8vo.

Cranfield, Thomas. An Harmony of the Gospels, Dubl., 1795, fol.

"It contains much accurate research, and much useful information."—Drs. GRAVES and HARRITT.

"The testimony of two scholars of such eminence is entitled to the greatest deference and respect."—CRANE: Bibl. Bib.

Cranford, James. The Teares of Ireland, Lon., 1642, 12mo. Bindley sale, £13 13s.; Nassau ditto, £17. Sermon on Heresies, 1646, 4to.

Crank, W. H. Theory and Practice of Arithmetic, Lon., 1843, 12mo.

"Many rules not generally known are introduced in this work."

Cranley, Thomas. Amanda, 1635, 4to. Reed, vi. 728; Bindley, i. 2195, £5 17s. 6d.; Steevens, 1051.

Cranmer, George. New Church Discipline, 1641, 4to.

Cranmer, Thomas, D.D., 1489–1556, a native of Aslacton, Nottinghamshire, was entered of Jesus College, Cambridge, in 1503, became a Fellow, 1510, '11; D.D., 1523. The concurrence of his opinions with the desires of Henry VIII. in the matter of his divorce from his brother's widow gained him the favour of the sovereign, and raised him to the Archbishopric of Canterbury, March 30, 1533. Upon the death of Henry he was one of the Council of Regency to Edward VI., and laboured zealously to promote the principles of the Reformation. Upon the accession of Mary, he was imprisoned as an abettor of the treason of Lady Jane Grey, and also declared guilty of heresy by Pope Pius IV. The melancholy story of the recantation wrung from the bodily infirmities and mental distraction of an old man, goaded by merciless demons in human shape to a state of desperation, is too well known and too painful a theme to be lingered over here. Indeed, the Life of Cranmer belongs to ecclesiastical and political, rather than to literary, history. He passed to heaven through the fires of martyrdom on the 21st of March, 1556, in his 67th year. His writings—for an account of which refer to the works cited below—greatly tended to the promotion of the English Reformation. Cranmer's Bible, or the Great Bible, as it is called, was printed by Richard Grafton and Edward Whitchurch, 1539, fol. The translation is Tyndale's and Rogers's, carefully revised throughout. Many edits. were printed between 1540–69. A beautiful copy on vellum—probably unique—formerly the property of Henry VIII., can be seen in the British Museum. For an account of Cranmer's Bible, see Lewis, Cotton, Horne, Lowndes, &c. The Instruction of a Christian Man was pub. in 1537, fol., and Catechismus, a trans. from Justus Jonas, in 1548, 8vo. Cranmer wrote some of the Homilies, and various controversial and explanatory treatises. See the following works: Memorials of the Life and Works of Archbishop Cranmer, collected by the Rev. John Strype, Lon., 1694, fol. New ed., Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1812, 2 vols. r. 8vo; 50 copies, large paper, imp. 8vo; Sykes's sale, £7 10s.; again Oxf., 1840, 2 vols. 8vo. Remains; collected and arranged by the Rev. H. Jenkins, Oxf., 1833, 4 vols. 8vo. Writings and disputations relative to the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Edited for the Parker Society by the Rev. John Edmund Cox, Camb., 1844, imp. 8vo. Works; Miscellaneous Writings and Letters, edited as above, for the P. S., vol. ii., 1846. Writings, see British Reformers, ix. Reprint of Catechismus, Oxf., 1839, 8vo; Extracts from E. J. Barrow. Tracts of Anglican Fathers, i. 7. Life of Cranmer by William Gilpin, 1784, 8vo. Life of, by Charles Webb Le Bas, 1833, 2 vols. sm. 8vo. Also see Burnet, Fox, and Biog. Brit. Nor must we forget Archdeacon Todd's Vindication of Cranmer against Lingard, Milner, and Butler, 1825, '26; Reply to Dr. Lingard's Vindication of his Hist. of England, 1827; and Life of Archbishop Cranmer, 1831, 2 vols. 8vo. This biography is thus highly commended by an eminent authority:

"The most impartial and complete historical narration of the life of this celebrated Churchman. By a judicious arrangement, and a pleasing and unprejudiced style, Mr. Todd has rendered his work highly interesting."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

The amiability and ingenuousness of Cranmer's character were so well known, that Shakespeare mentions it as a common saying concerning him:

"Do my Lord of Canterbury
But one shrewd turn, and he's your friend forever."

Cranston, David, a native of Scotland. Questiones in lib. Magist. Martini de Fortitudine, Paris, 1511, fol. Additions in Moralia Jacobi, Almain. Gourment, 1518, fol.

Cranwell, Rev. J. The Christiad, a Poem from Vida, 1767.

Cranwell, L. Bishop and Presbyter equal, 1661, 4to. Crashaw. Delays in Religion, Lon., 1653, 4to.

Crashaw, H. The Be spotted Jesuit, Lon., 1648, 8vo.

Crashaw, Richard, d. 1650? son of the Rev. Richard Crashaw, was a native of London, and educated at the Charterhouse, and Pembroke Hall, Cambridge. In 1637 he was Fellow of Peterhouse. Entering the Church, he became distinguished as an eloquent preacher, but was ejected in 1644 for refusing to take the Covenant. He now removed to France, and became a convert to the Roman Catholic religion. In 1646 Cowley found him in Paris in great pecuniary distress, and secured him the influence of Henrietta Maria, whose commendatory letters procured him the posts of secretary to one of the cardinals, and canon of the church of Loreto. Soon after this last promotion he died of a fever, about 1650. In 1634 he pub. a vol. of Latin poems, in one of which occurs the well-known line—sometimes ascribed to Dryden—referring to the miracle of the conversion of water into wine:

"Nympha pudica Deum vidit et erubuit."
The modest water saw its God, and blushed.

His English Poems, Steps to the Temple, The Delights of the Muses, and Carmen Deo Nostro, were pub. in 1646, 12mo, and 1648, 12mo. Carmen Deo Nostro, te decet Hymnus: Sacred Poems, collected, Paris, 1652, 8vo. Poetry, with some Account of the Author and Introductory Address, by Peregrine Phillips, 1758, 12mo. Poetical Works; now first completely edited by W. B. Turnbull, 1858, fp. 8vo. His poetry consists principally of religious invocations and translations of uncommon merit from the Latin and Italian. His luxuriance of imagination and exquisite facility in the expression of his poetical visions have seldom been surpassed. Among his best-known pieces are Hymn to the Name of Jesus; Lines on a Prayer-Book; Music's Duel; the translation from Moschus, Catullus, and of a portion of Marino's Sospetto d'Herode. The latter will remind the reader as forcibly of Paradise Lost as the same author's Elegies on St. Alexis will recall the fervid strains in which Eloisa invokes Abelard. Mr. Hayley considers that Pope conferred quite as much as he borrowed:

"If Pope borrowed any thing from Crashaw in this article, it was only as the sun borrows from the earth, when drawing from thence a mere vapour, he makes it the delight of every eye, by giving it all the tender and gorgeous colouring of heaven."

Pope thus announces his favourite pieces in Crashaw's collection:

"I will just observe that the best pieces of this author are a Paraphrase on Psalm xlii.—On Læsalus.—Epitaph on Mr. Ashton.—Wishes to his supposed Mistress, and the Dies Ira."—Letter to H. Cromwell, Dec. 17, 1710.

Crashaw's editor dissents from this opinion:

"The reader must determine whether Mr. Pope has mentioned the best pieces: on the contrary, whether many much superior are not to be met with in the little work before us; and if so, what fair reason could there be for such a partial selection."—Phillips's Crashaw, p. 22.

Selden and Cowley were intimate friends of our poet, and the monody in which the latter laments his death has been highly commended:

"Cowley seems to have had what Milton is believed to have wanted, the skill to rate his own performances by their just value; and has therefore closed his Miscellanies with the Verses upon Crashaw, which apparently excel all that have gone before them; and in which there are beauties which common authors may justly think not only above their attainment, but above their ambition."—Dr. Johnson's Life of Cowley.

"Crashaw has originality in many parts, and as a translator, is entitled to the highest applause."—Headley's Select Beauties of Ancient Eng. Poetry.

"His translations have considerable merit, but his original poetry is full of conceit."—Ellis's Specimens of the Early Eng. Poets.

"Poet and Saint! to thee alone are given.

The two most sacred names of earth and heaven.

How well (blest Swan) did fate contrive thy death,

And made thee render up thy tuneful breath

In thy great mistress' arms! Thou most divine

And richest offering of Loreto's shrine."—Cowley.

Crashaw, William, father of the preceding, was preacher at the Temple, and was as much opposed to Romanism as his son was in favour of it. Roman Forgeries, and Falsifications of Authors, Lon., 1606, 4to. Neues from Italy of a second Moses, &c., 1608, 4to; being the life of the Marquess of Vico, from the Latin of Beza, by W. C., 1608, 8vo. In this is contained "the story of his admirable conversion from popery." Ficus Papalis, 1617, 4to. See Bliss's Wood's Athen. Oxon., ii. 468, '69. The Jesuites Gospel, written by themselves, laid open and reproved, 1641, 4to. Other theological works; see Bibl. Bib.

Crauford, Capt. C. Events of the War, 1756–63, and a Treatise on some branches of the Military Art, trans. Lon., 1787, 3 vols. 8vo.

Crauford, Crawford, or Crawford, David, 1665–1726, a lawyer and historiographer of Scotland. Memoirs of the Affairs of Scotland, 1566–81, Edin., 1706, 8vo; 1767, 12mo. His veracity has been questioned: see M. Laing's Pref. to his ed. of the Historie and Life of James the Sixth, Edin., 1804, 8vo.

Cranford, George. Treats on Polit. Econ., 1785–1809.

Craufurd, Lt. Col. Spanish Life, 1837, 2 vols. 8vo.
Craufurd, A. Essay on the Development of Functions, Lon., 1844, 8vo. Verses on various occasions, 1846, 12mo.

Craufurd, Charles H. Serms., Lon., 1840, 8vo.
Craufurd, Sir G. W. Examinations on Butler's Analogy, 3d ed., Lon., 1847, 12mo.

Craufurd, George. See CRAUFURD.

Craufurd, John Lindesay, Earl of. Memoirs from his own Papers, &c., Lon., 1769, 12mo. R. Rolt also pub. his Memoirs, 1753, 4to.

Craufurd, Quintin. Sketches, &c., relating to the Hindoos, 1792, 2 vols. 8vo. A. and M. India, 1817, 2 vols. 8vo. Other works.

Craufurd, Thomas. Prof. of Philos. and Math. in the College of Edinburgh, in 1646. Locorum Nominum, &c. Scriptorum historiarum, &c., emend. C. Irvinis, Edin., 1665, 12mo. Notes, &c., on Buchanan's Hist. of Scot., 1708, 12mo. Hist. of Univ. of Edinburgh, 1580-1646, 1808, 8vo.

"An extraordinary criticism in the history and antiquities of Scotland."—BISHOP NICOLSON: Scot. Hist. Lib.

Craveu. See CARLETON, CAPT.

Craven, Lady Elizabeth. See ANSPACH, MAR-GRAVINE OF.

Craven, Isaac. Sermon, Lon., 1658, 4to.

Craven, Hon. R. Keppel. Tour through the Southern Provinces of Naples, Lon., 1821, 4to.

"His work, without pretending to deep science or extensive scholarship, is both entertaining and instructive."—Edin. Review.

Excursions in the Abruzzi and Northern Provinces of Naples, 1838, 2 vols. 8vo.

"To all those who have ever 'swam in a gondola,' &c. these volumes will be received as welcome."—Lon. Athenaeum.

Craven, William, 1731-1815, Prof. of Arabic, Cambridge, educated at St. John's College. Sermons on the Evidence of a Future State of Rewards and Punishments, &c., Camb., 1776, 8vo.

"The subject is treated with great perspicuity, and Mr. Hume's objections solidly refuted."—BISHOP WATSON.

Sermon, &c., Lon., 1798, 8vo. Discourses, &c., in Answer to Mr. Hume, Camb., 1802, 8vo.

"We recommend it, as furnishing a series of important facts and observations, to all ingenious inquirers into the very interesting subject of which it treats."—Edin. Review.

Crawford, The Olive Branch, a Poem, Lon., 1814, 8vo.

Crawford, Mrs. The Lady of the Bedchamber, Lon., 2 vols. p. 8vo. The Double Marriage.

"A first-rate novel, both as regards purity of style, the interest of the tale, and life-like development of character."—Lon. Ev. Post.

Crawford, Capt. Reminiscences of distinguished Commanders, Lon., 1850, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

"A work which cannot fail of being popular in every portion of our seagirt isle, and of being read with delight by all who feel interested in the right hand of our country—its navy."—Plymouth Herald.

Crawford, Col. Ireland's Ingratitude to the Parliament of England, Lon., 1643, 4to.

Crawford, A. Account of Mr. Stern, 1760, 8vo.

Crawford, Adair, d. 1795, Prof. of Chemistry, Woolwich. Animal Heat, 1779, 8vo. Reviewed by Wm. Morgan, 1781, 8vo. Tonics; edited by Alex. Crawford, 1817. Phil. Trans., 1790.

Crawford, Charles. Dissert. on the Phædo of Plato, Lon., 1774, 8vo. Several polit. and theolog. publications, 1776-1811.

Crawford, G. Drainage Act, Dubl., 1843, 12mo.
Crawford, G., and Edw. S. Dix, Cases in Courts of Law and Equity in Ireland, 1837, '38, &c., Dubl., 1839, 8vo. Cases on the Circuits in Ireland, 1839-42, 2 vols. and 3 parts of vol. 3d, Dubl., 1844, 8vo.

Crawford, George. Discourses, Edin., 1832, 12mo.

Crawford, George M. The Case of Saunders v. Smith, as to Copyright in Law Reports, Lon., 1839, 8vo.

Crawford, James, Writer to the Signet, d. 1783. The Decisions of the Court of Session, &c.

Crawford, James, M.D. Practical Remarks on the Sympathy of the Parts of the Body.

Crawford, John. Statue to K. William, &c.

Crawford, John. 1. Theory of Physic. 2. Causes, &c., 1724, '32.

Crawford, John Lindesay, Earl of. See CRAUFURD.

Crawford, John, M.D. 1. Liver. 2. Muscles, 1772, '86.

Crawford, John. Philosophy of Wealth, 3d edit., Lon., 1847, 8vo.

Crawford, Patrick. Returne from Poperie, 1627, 4to.

Crawford, Robert, d. 1733, gained some celebrity as the author of The Bush aboon Traquair, and the admired lyric of Tweedside. He assisted Allan Ramsay in his "Tea Table Miscellanies."

"The true muse of native pastoral seeks not to adorn herself with unnatural ornaments; her spirit is in homely love and fireside joy, tender and simple, like the religion of the land, she utters nothing out of keeping with the character of her people, and the aspect of the soil: and of this spirit, and of this feeling, Crawford is a large partaker."—ALLAN CUNNINGHAM: see Chambers's Cyc. of Eng. Lit.

Crawford, William, 1676-1742, a Scottish divine, a native of Kelso. Dying Thoughts. Sermons, Lon., 1825, 12mo.

"Dying Thoughts will prove a real friend to the devout reader."

Crawford, William. 1. Remarks on Lord Chesterfield's Letters to his Son. 2. Sermon, 1776, '86.

Crawford, William, D.D., of Straiton, Scotland. Hist. of Ireland in a Series of Letters, Strabane, 1783, 2 vols. 8vo. See an unfavourable notice in the London Monthly Review, lxx. 39, which concludes thus:

"We are sorry there is no Index. An omission of this kind is particularly inexcusable in a History."

Or inexcusable in any work which aspires to take a permanent place in literature. "What, even in works of imagination or fancy?" Yes, even in such. Dr. Johnson advocated an Index for Clarissa, and who would not delight to see one to the Waverley Novels? Let not this hint be thrown away. Mrs. Clarke has given us an index to Shakespeare—let us next have one to Scott. Who will undertake it? Profit and honour await him. We have already expressed ourselves at large upon the Index head: See ATSCOUGH, SAMUEL. Dr. Crawford also pub. a vol. of Sermons, Edin., 1815, 8vo.

Crawford, William H., and Horatio Marbury. A Digest of the Laws of Georgia, Savannah, 1802, 4to. Prepared under the special authority of the State.

Crawford, Charles. See CRAUFURD.

Crawford, David. See CRAUFURD.

Crawford, Thomas. See CRAUFURD.

Crawford, George. 1. Hist. of the Family of the Stewarts, 1034-1710, Edin., 1710, fol. New edit. to the present time by W. Semple, Paisley, 1782, 4to. Enlarged and continued to present time by George Robertson, Paisley, 1818, 4to. A valuable work. 2. The Peerage of Scotland, Edin., 1716, fol.

"As the first publication on the Peerage of Scotland, this work is deserving of great praise."

Lives and Characters of the Crown and State Officers of Scotland, Edin., 1726, fol., vol. i. only pub.

Crawford, John, late British Resident at the Court of the Sultan of Java. 1. Hist. of the Indian Archipelago, Edin., 1820, 3 vols. 8vo.

"This is a valuable work, particularly in what relates to the actual commerce and commercial capabilities of these islands: it also treats of the manners, religion, language, &c. of the inhabitants; but on some of these points not with the soundest judgment, or the most accurate information."—STEVENS: Voy. and Trav.

Dr. Murray tells us that he was induced to omit a description of the Islands of the Indian Archipelago, in consequence of so "full and interesting a view having been given by Mr. Crawford." See Hist. Acct. of Discoveries and Trav. in Asia.

2. Siam and Cochin China, 1828, 4to; 2d ed., 1830, 2 vols. 8vo.

"A very valuable contribution to the geography and statistics of the Oriental world, and one of the most interesting narratives we have for some time past been called upon to notice."—Lon. Monthly Review.

3. Court of Ava in 1827, 1829, 4to; 2d ed., 1834, 2 vols. 8vo.

"This, like Mr. Crawford's other publications, contains a large store of information, and many sound and judicious remarks on the institutions and manners of the East."—Westminster Review.

"This and the preceding work give not only the latest, but the best and most authentic accounts of the countries referred to; and have added most materially to our knowledge of a very large portion of Eastern Asia."—McCulloch: Lt. of Polit. Economy.

Mr. Crawford is also one of the contributors—the others are Hugh Murray, Peter Gordon, Capt. Thomas Lynn, and Professors Wallace and Burnett—to the excellent account of China, illustrated by Jackson, pub. in 3 vols. sm. 8vo, forming part of Oliver and Boyd's Edin. Cab. Library.

"The best digest which has yet appeared, adapted to the object in view, that of giving a popular account of the empire of China."—Asiatic Journal.

4. Inquiry into the System of Taxation in India, 8vo.

5. Letters on the Interior of India, 8vo. 6. Taxes on Knowledge, 1836, 8vo. The taxes objected to—the stamp-duty on newspapers, and the duty on paper—were subsequently reduced, the former about 66, and the latter about 50, per cent.; and the duty on newspapers has also been repealed.

7. Grammar and Dictionary of the Malay Language, 1852, 2 vols. 8vo.

"These volumes are inestimable to the philologist as well as the Eastern traveller and trader."—Lon. Examiner.

Crawskey, John. The Countryman's Instructor, Lon., 1836, 4to. The Good Husband's Jewel, York, 1661.

Crayon, Geoffrey. See IRVING, WASHINGTON.

Creamer, Hannah G., b. at Salem, Mass. Gift for Young Students. Eleanor. Delia's Doctors, &c.

Crease, J. Prophecies Fulfilling, 1785, 8vo.

Crease, Jas. 1. Varnishing. 2. Wood Work, 1800, '03.

Creaser, Thomas. Vaccine Inoculation, 1800, '03.

Creasy, Edward Shepherd, M.A., b. 1812, at Bexley, in Kent, Eng., Prof. of Hist. at Univ. Coll., Lon. 1. Parega: Poems, 1843, r. 8vo. 2. Eton College, Lon., 1848, p. 8vo: see Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1848, 305. 3. Text-Book of the Constitution, 1848, 8vo: see No. 10. 4. Sub Regē Sacerdos: Comments on Bp. Hampden's Case, 1848, 8vo. 5. Eminent Etonians, 1850, r. 8vo. 6. Battle of Waterloo, 1852, 12mo. 7. Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World: Marathon to Waterloo, 1852, 8vo; 9th ed., 1858. 8. Invasions and Projected Invasions of England from the Saxon Times, 1852, 8vo. 9. History of the Ottoman Turks, 1856, 2 vols. 8vo. 10. Rise and Progress of the English Constitution, 1856, 8vo. This is the 3d ed. of No. 3.

"An admirable summary of knowledge, which every well-educated Englishman ought to possess."—Lon. Lit. Gaz.

Crech, Rev. Thomas, 1659–1701, Fellow of All Souls' College. Trans. of Lucretius, Oxf., 1682, 8vo; best ed., Glasgow, 1759, 12mo.

"Crech's Lucretius, the notes included, is a great performance."—HARTLEY COLERIDGE.

Trans. of Horace, 1684. Crech also pub. translations from Theocritus, Ovid, Plutarch, Juvenal, and others. Crech committed suicide, which rash act Jacob ascribes to his splenetic temper.

But Mr. Malone has proved that Crech had previously exhibited marks of insanity. See Biog. Brit.

"Crech is a much better translator than he is usually supposed and allowed to be. He is a nervous and vigorous writer: and many parts not only of his Lucretius, but of his Theocritus and Horace, (though now derided,) have not been excelled by other translators. One of his pieces may be pronounced excellent: his translation of the thirteenth satire of Juvenal; equal to any that Dryden has given us of that author."—DR. WARRON,—an undoubted judge.

A Step to Oxford—An Essay on Crech's Suicide—was pub., Lon., 1700, 4to.

Crech, William, 1745–1815, an eminent bookseller of Edinburgh. Trial of Brodie and Smith, Edin., 1789, 4to. Edinburgh Fugitive Pieces, Edin., 1791, 8vo; new ed., 1815, 8vo.

Creed, Cary E. Of Pembroke's Statues, 1731, 4to.

Creed, Wm. 1. Refuter. 2. Sermon. 3. Sermon, Lon., 1660.

Creffield, Edward. Theolog. treatises, 1711–77.

Creighton, Capt. John. Memoirs of, from his own materials; drawn up and digested by Dean J. Swift, 1731. By the Dean's interest in this work, £200 was secured to the aged soldier. See an interesting account of the work in the Lon. Retrospect. Review, v. 238.

Creigh, Alfred, b. 1810, in Penna. Masonry and Anti-Masonry, 8vo. Analytical Text Book for the Masonic Student, 12mo.

Creighton, H. Ruins of Gour, 1817, r. 4to.

Creighton, J. C. Acts relating to Insolvent Debtors, Dublin, 1841, 8vo.

Creighton, James. Origin of true Religion, Lon., 1803, 8vo. Fenelon's Dialogues on Eloquence, trans. by Simpson; new ed., 1808, 8vo.

Creighton, or Crighton, Robert, 1593–1672, educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, Bishop of Bath and Wells, 1670, trans. Sylvester Sygropoulos's History of the Council of Florence from Greek into Latin, Hague, 1660. Wood states that he had some sermons in print.

Creighton, Robert, D.D., 1639–1736, son of the above, pub. a vol. of Sermons in 1720. He was quite famous for skill in Church Music. The celebrated anthem for four voices, "I will arise and go to my Father," pub. by Dr. Boyce, is the composition of Dr. Creighton.

Cresser, A. Vindication of, Lon., 1687, 4to.

Cressener, Drue, D.D. Judgments of God on the R. Catholic Church, Lon., 1689, 4to. Demonstration of the First Principles of the Protestant Applications of the Apocalypse, 1690, 4to.

"A work full of instruction and copious testimonies from the Romanists."—BUCKLEY.

Cresset, Edward, d. 1754, Bishop of Llandaff, 1748. Sermon, Pa. lxxi. 7, Lon., 1749, 4to; 2 Tim. ii. 9, 1753, 4to.

Cressey, or Cressy, Hugh Paulin de, or Serenus, 1605–1674, a native of Wakefield, Yorkshire, Fellow of Merton College, Oxford, 1626, took holy orders, and became chaplain to Thomas, Lord Wentworth, and subsequently to Lucius, Lord Falkland, who promoted him to the deanery of Laughlin, and a canonry of Windsor, which the troubles of the times prevented his enjoying. He travelled in Italy, and in 1646, whilst at Rome, embraced the Roman Catholic religion. He resided for seven or more years in the College of Douay, where he changed his name to Serenus de Cressy. After the Restoration he came to England, and became chaplain to Queen Catherine. Shortly before his death he retired to Grinstead in Sussex.

Examologesis, or a faithful Narrative of the Conversion unto Catholique Unity, of Hugh Paulin, lately Deane of Laghlin in Ireland, and Prebend of Windsor in England, Paris, 1647, sm. 8vo; 1653, 8vo. The last ed. contains an answer to J. P., author of the preface to Lord Falkland's work on Infidelity.

"His Examologesis was the golden calf which the English Papists fell down and worshipped. They brag'd that book to be unanswerable, and to have given a total overthrow to the Chillingworthians, and book and tenets of Lucius, Lord Falkland."—Athen. Oxon.

"Among the Catholic writers in the reign of Charles the Second, none was more distinguished than Hugh Paul Cressy. The fruit of his studies appeared in his Examologesis."—CHARLES BUTLER.

Sancta Sophia, Douay, 1657, 2 vols. 8vo: see BAKER DAVID. R. C. Doctrines no Novelties, 1663, 8vo. Church Hist. of Brittany, or England, from the beginning of Christianity to the Norman Conquest, Roan, 1668, fol.; completed only to about 1350. Vol. ii. was unfinished when the author died. This is compiled principally from the Annales Ecclesie Britannicæ of MICHAEL ALFORD, q. v., vols. i. and ii. of Monast. Anglicæ, the Decem Scriptores Hist. Anglicanæ, and the collections of DAVID BAKER, q. v., et Athen. Oxon.

Cressey has been blamed, particularly by Lord Clarendon, for introducing the accounts of so many miracles and monkish stories into this history; but Wood excuses him as follows:

"Yet let this be said of him, that for as much that he doth mostly quote his authors for, and leaves what he says to the judgment of the readers, he is to be excused, and in the meantime to be commended for his grave and good stile, proper for an ecclesiastical historian."—Athen. Oxon.

Sixteen Revelations of Divine Love. Fanaticism fanatically imputed to the Catholic Church, by Dr. Stillingfleet, and the imputation refuted and retorted, 1672, 8vo. Question, Why are you a Catholic? with the Answer; Why are you a Protestant? An Answer attempted in vain, Lon., 1672, 8vo. Answer to Dr. Stillingfleet's Idolatry practised in the Church of Rome, 1674, 8vo. The Earl of Clarendon came to the rescue in a Vindication of Dr. Stillingfleet. This elicited Cressey's Epistle Apologetical to a Person of Honour, touching his Vindication of Dr. Stillingfleet, 1674, 8vo. Cressey pub. an Answer to Bagshaw, 1662, a Letter and Remarks upon the Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance. Clarendon had been his acquaintance at Oxford, and lamented his change of religion:

"If we could keep him a minister of our church, I wish he would continue a layman in theirs, which would somewhat lessen the defection, and it may be, preserve a greater portion of his innocence."—Letter to Burle: see State Papers, Oxf., 1773, vol. ii. 822, and Bliss's Wood's Athen. Oxon., iii. 1016.

Cresswell, C. See BARNEWALL, R. V.

Cresswell, Daniel, D.D., 1776–1844, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Linear Perspective, Camb., 1811, 8vo. Maxima and Minima, 1816, 8vo, 1822. Sphærics, 1816, 8vo. Sup. to the Elements of Euclid, 1822, 8vo. Treatise of Geometry, 1822, 8vo. Sermons on Domestic Duties, Lon., 1829, 12mo.

Cresswell, R. N. Cases of Insolv. Debtors, Lon., 1830, 8vo.

Cresswell, Thos. E. Narrative of his Affair with Miss S—ce, 1747, 8vo.

Cresswick. The Female Reader; pieces in prose and verse, Lon., 1781, 12mo.

Cressy, H. P. de. See CRESSY.

Cresswell, Jos. Elizabethæ Angliæ, Reginæ Responsio ad Edictum, Roma, 1593, 4to.

"Written to prove the lawfulness of rising against an heretic prince."—LOWNDRA.

Cresy, Edward. Architecture of the Middle Ages of Italy, Lon., imp. 4to. Treatise on Bridges, Vaults, &c., 1839, fol. Analytical Index to Hope's Architecture, 8vo. Encyclopædia of Civil Engineering, Historical, Theoretical, and Practical, Illustrated by upwards of 3000 engravings on wood, by R. Branson, pp. 1655, Lon., 1847, 8vo, £3 13s. 6d.

"An extremely valuable book, filled with information of the most important kind to the young engineer."—Lon. Artisan.

Crenze, A. F. B., editor of the Papers on Naval Architecture. Treat. on the Theory and Prac. of Naval Architecture, Edin., 1840, 4to: see Encyc. Brit., 7th edit. "One of the best, because the clearest and at the same time most perfectly comprehensive, disquisitions on ship-building."

Crevecoeur, Hector St. John, 1731-1813, b. at Caen, Normandy, of a noble family, settled in America, 1754. 1. Letters from an American Farmer, Phila., 1794; Lon., 1782: see Edin. Rev., Oct. 1829; AYSCOUGH, SAML. Trans. into French, 2 edits., Paris, 1784, '87. 2. Voyage dans le Haut Pennsylvanie et dans l'Etat de New York, par un Membre Adoptif de la Nation Oneida, Paris, 1801, 3 vols. 8vo.

Credson, Isaac. A Beacon to the Society of Friends, Lon., 1835, 12mo.

"An admirable work."—LOWNDEN.

Crewe, Charles H. Seven weeks in the West, Lon., 1841, 12mo. Doctrine of the N. Test. on Prayer, 18mo. The System behind the Age, 1846, 12mo.

Crewe, Thomas. Nonsense of Moral Philos., &c., Lon., 1580, &c.

Crewe, or Crew, Sir Thomas. Proceedings and Debates in the House of Commons, Lon., 1707, 8vo.

Creyghton, Robert, D.D. See Crichton.

Cribb, William. Med. Treatise, Lon., 1773, 8vo.

Crichton, Alexander, M.D. Mental Derangement, Lon., 1798, 2 vols. 8vo. Table of Diseases, 1805. Tar as a cure for Pulmonary Consumption, 1818. Arnica Montana; the Lichislandicus; in Med. Jour., vol. x.

Crichton, Sir A. M. Commentaries on some Doctrines of a dangerous tendency in Medicine, Lon., 1842, 8vo.

Crichton, Andrew. Converts from Infidelity, being vols. vi. and vii. of Constable's Miscellany.

"These vols. amply illustrate the truth of Abp. Sharpe's assertion, that the best evidences of Christianity might be obtained from the death-bed."—LOWNDEN'S BRIT. LIB.

Koch's Revolutions of Europe; from the French, 3 vols. 18mo.

"A most useful work, and written with much care."—HEEREN. History of Arabia, Ancient and Modern, 1848, 2 vols. sm. 8vo.

"We recommend this able and elaborate work to our readers, as the only one in the English language to which they can refer with the expectation of obtaining satisfactory information on the history and national character of the Arabs."—Lon. Monthly Rev. Scandinavia, Ancient and Modern; being a History of Denmark, Sweden, and Norway, by A. Crichton and Henry Wheaton, author of the Hist. of the Northmen, &c., 2 vols. sm. 8vo; 2d ed., 1848.

"To the student of our own early records, this work will prove a valuable auxiliary."—Asiatic Journal.

"A complete account of its subject."—Lon. Spectator.

Crichton, James, "The Admirable," can hardly claim much space as an author, but shall not be altogether omitted. His birth has been generally placed in 1551, but Lord Buchan has decided that he was born in August, 1560. His lordship also settles upon July, 1582, as the time of his death. He was the son of Robert Crichton, Lord Advocate of Scotland, and was descended by his mother, a Stuart, from King Robert II. After studying at the Perth, and at the University of St. Andrew's, and "acquiring a knowledge of ten languages, and all the sciences when 16 to 20 years of age," (!) he travelled abroad, and visiting Paris, Venice, Rome, &c., challenged the Rabbi of the different universities to learned disputations upon any subject whatever. He was killed, it is said, in a rage of jealousy,—a lady, of course, being the exciting cause,—by Vincentio, his pupil, a son of Gonzaga, Duke of Mantua. Those who would know more of one of the most remarkable characters of history, must consult the works of Sir Thomas Urquhart, Bayle, Joannes Imperialis, Francis Douglas, Patrick Fraser Tytler, and the article by Dr. Kippis in the Biog. Brit., partially compiled from a MS. drawn up by the Earl of Buchan, for the Society of Antiquaries at Edinburgh. In the Biog. Brit. will be found four Latin Poems, the only literary remains of the Admirable Crichton.

"These will not exhibit him in a very high point of view. Some fancy, perhaps, may be thought to be displayed in the longest of his poems, which was written on occasion of his approach to the city of Venice. . . . The other three poems have still less to recommend them. Indeed his verses will not stand the test of a rigid examination, even with regard to quantity."—Biog. Brit.

Crichton was as celebrated for his personal beauty, and his skill in fencing, drawing, and other polite accomplishments, as for his marvellous erudition. Joannes Imperialis, an Italian biographer, cannot say enough in his praise:

"What can more exceed our comprehension, than that Crichton, in the twenty-first year of his age, should be master of ten different languages, and perfectly well versed in philosophy, mathematics, theology, polite literature, and all other sciences? Besides, was it ever heard, in the whole compass of the globe, that to these extraordinary endowments of the mind, should be added a singular skill in fencing, dancing, singing, riding, and in every exercise of the gymnastic art?"

This is sufficiently high-flown, but Imperialis has not done with us yet; for he goes on to declare that when Crichton died,

"The report of so sad a catastrophe was spread to the remotest parts of the earth; that it disturbed universal Nature; and that in her grief for the loss of the Wonder she had produced, she threatened never more to confer such honour upon mankind."

The last paragraph is not to be disputed. Certainly the world has since seen no such Phoenix! We should not omit to mention that Crichton's tract of Epicidium illustrissimii et reverendissimi Cardinalis Borromei, Mediolani, 1584, 4to—so rare that it is asserted there is no other copy known than that in the Sapienza College at Rome—was reprinted in 1825 by a distinguished book-collector for private distribution. 25 copies were struck off on paper, and one on vellum.

Crichton, Robert. See Crichton.

Crimmin, D. M. Diss. upon Rhetoric, Lon., 1811, 8vo.

Crimm, Richard. Cupid's Solicitor of Love, with sundry Compliments, Lon., 12mo.

Crine. Management of the Gout, 1758, 8vo.

Cripps, Henry W. Reports, 1849-50. Laws relating to the Church and Clergy, Lon., 1845, 8vo; 2d ed., 1850.

"Mr. Cripps has taken the happy via media between too copious and elaborate a Codex of Church Law on the one side, and a vide necum of it, in a too abstract and narrow consideration, on the other."—3 L. M. N. S. 151.

Cririe, James, D.D. Scottish Scenery; or Sketches in Verse, &c., Lon., 1803, 4to.

Crisp, J. The Conveyancer's Guide, or Law Student's Recreation, a Poem, 3d ed., Lon., 1835, 12mo. Mr. Crisp is a wag. He here teaches the principles of Conveyancing in Hudibrastic verse! He insists that Poetry is the original language of the Law! Every lawyer must have it.

Crisp, John. Nature of Vision, Lon., 1796, 8vo.

Crisp, Samuel, son of Tobias. Christ made Sin, Lon., 1691, 4to. New ed., 1832, 2 vols. 8vo. See CRISP, TOBIAS.

"With much earnestness we recommend this masterly defence of Dr. Crisp, written by his son; happy such a father, and blessed is such a progeny!"—Lon. Gospel Mag.

Christ Alone Exalted in Dr. Tobias Crisp's Sermons; in answer to Mr. D. Williams's Pref. to his Gospel Truth stated, Lon., 1693, 4to.

Crisp, Samuel. Two Theolog. Letters, Lon., 1795, 8vo.

Crisp, Stephen, a Quaker. Charitable Advice, Lon., 1688, 4to. Serms. or Declarations, 1693, '94, 3 vols. 8vo. A Word in due season, 4to.

Crisp, Tobias, D.D., 1600-1642, a native of London, studied at Eton and Cambridge, and afterwards removed to Balliol College, Oxford. He became Rector of Brinkworth, Wiltshire, in 1627. In 1642 he removed to London to escape "the insolencies" of the Cavaliers, who disliked his puritanical principles and republican tendencies.

"Where [in London] his opinions [Antinomian] being soon discovered, he was baited by 52 opponents in a grand dispute concerning freedom of the grace of God in Jesus Christ to poor sinners, &c. By which encounter, which was eagerly managed on his part, he contracted a disease that brought him to his grave."—Athen. Oxon.

Surely 52 opponents were too much for a mortal man! Some good old bishop used to say that when a man engaged in controversy, he might bid adieu to peace. If, then, one disputant can rob us of peace, 52 would soon finish the most robust! The principal parties in this controversy were Williams, Edwards, Lorimer, &c. against Crisp, and Chauncey Mather, Lobb, &c. on his side. Crisp left them to carry on the war—he died in 1642—and it was maintained for seven years. After his death 14 of his serms. were pub. under the title of Christ Alone Exalted, 1643, 8vo; 17 serms. do., 1644, 8vo; 11 serms. do., 1646; 2 serms. do., 1683, 8vo. Christ made sin, Lon., 1691, 4to. New ed., with Explanatory Notes and a Memoir by Dr. Gill, 1832, 2 vols. 8vo. See an account of this celebrated controversy in Bogue's Hist. of the Dissenters, and in Nelson's Life of Bishop Bull. See CRISP, SAMUEL, ante. The Dr. seems to have been a most excellent man, however erroneous may have been his views.

"His life was so innocent and harmless from all evil, so zealous and fervent in all good, that it seemed to be designed as a practical confutation of the slander of those who would insinuate that his doctrine tended to licentiousness."—LANCASTER.

"He was much followed for his edifying manner of preaching, and for his great hospitality."—NEAL.

"One of the first patrons of Calvinism run mad."—Bogue and Bennett's History of the Dissenters.

"Crisp's statements are not scripturally guarded, and their tendency is to weaken the abomination of sin."—BICKERSTETH: Christian Student.

"Crisp's works, with explanatory notes by Dr. Gill, have in them a singular mixture of excellence and faults. What is exceptional arises chiefly from unqualified expressions, rather than from the author's main design."—Dr. E. Williams: Christian Preacher.

Crispe, Samuel, of Bungay. Serms., Lon., 1686, 4to.
Crispe, Thomas. Theolog. treatises, Lon., 1682, '94, '97.

Crispin, Gilbert, d. 1114 or 1117, a noble Norman, was brought to England by Lanfranc, who made him Abbot of Westminster, which dignity he is said to have enjoyed for 32 years—until his death. Two of his works were printed. 1. De Fide Ecclesia contra Judæos; vide Sancti Anselmi opera, fol., Parisii, 1721, pp. 512–544. 2. Vita B. Herluini Beccensis abbatis pmi et conditoris; vide Acta Sanctorum, &c., Paris, 1701, fol.

"Most of the treatises ascribed by Cave and others to Gilbert Crispin belong to other persons of the name of Gilbert."—Wright's Biog. Brit. Lit.; q. v. et Leland. Bale, Pitt, Tanner.

Cristall, Ann Batten. Poetical Sketches, Lon., 1795, 8vo.

"These sketches possess considerable merit."—Walt's Bibl. Brit. Crittenden, S. W. Treatise on Book-Keeping, Phila., r. 8vo, and school edit., Phila.

"The elementary portion is simple, clear, comprehensive, and gradually progressive; and the whole work is of a pre-eminently practical character."

Croce, Giovanni. Musica Sacra, 1608, 6 Pts. "For a full, lofty, and sprightly vein he was second to none." See Peacham's Compleat Gentleman.

Crocker, Abr. Theological, educational, and other works. Elements of Land-Surveying, 1805, 12mo; new ed., by T. G. Bunt, 1842, p. 8vo.

Crocker, Hannah Mather, grand-daughter of the Rev. Dr. Cotton Mather, (post.) and widow of Joseph Crocker, of Taunton, Mass. 1. Letters on Free Masonry, 1815; with a Preface by Thaddeus Mason Harris, D.D., who urged the republication of these letters, which originally appeared in a newspaper in 1810. 2. The School of Reform: Seaman's Safe Pilot to the Cape of Good Hope, by the Seaman's Friend. 3. Observations on the Rights of Woman, 1818. This vol. is dedicated to Miss Hannah More. Mrs. Crocker drew up a statement respecting the history of Madam Knight, the schoolmistress of Dr. Benjamin Franklin, (see p. 1040, post.) which can be seen in the library of the Antiquarian Society of Worcester, Mass. See Bost. Living Age, No. 735, June 26, 1858.

Crocker, Zebulon. Catastrophe of the Pres. Church, 1838, 12mo.

Crocket, G. F. H. Abolition of Cap. Punishment, Georgt., Kentucky, 1823.

Crockett, Col. David. Exploits in Texas, 12mo. Tour Down East, 12mo. Autobiography, 12mo. Sketches and Eccentricities of. Song Book.

Crockett, H. C. The American in Europe; parts 1 to 18, Lon., 1850, 4to.

Crocus, anglic. CROKE.

Croft, Mrs. Ankerwick Castle; a Nov., Lon., 1800, 4 vols.

Croft, G. The Christian Instructor, Lon., 1825, 12mo.

Croft, George, D.D., 1747–1809, Fellow of Univ. College, Oxford. Theolog. works, Lon., 1784–1811. Eight Serms. at the Bampton Lecture, 1786, Oxf., 1786, 8vo.

Croft, Sir Herbert, d. 1622, became a R. Catholic at the age of 52, and entered the monastery of the English Benedictines at Douay, where he resided until his death. 1. Letters persuasive to his Wife and Children in England to take upon them the Catholic Religion. 2. Arguments, &c. 3. Reply to the Answer of his daughter, (Mary,) which she made to a paper of his, Douay, circa 1619, 12mo. Eight copies printed. See Athen. Oxon.

Croft, Herbert, D.D., 1603–1691, son of the preceding, was educated at the English College at St. Omer's, returned to England in 1622, abjured Romanism, and entered the Church of England. Prebendary of Salisbury, 1639; Dean of Hereford, 1644; Bishop of Hereford, 1691. The Naked Truth; or the True State of the Primitive Church, Lon., 1675, 4to. The object of this book was to prove that Protestants agree in essentials and should cherish a spirit of unity.

"It drew the eyes of all that could look upon it. It was a divine manifestation of a primitive Christian spirit of love."—Edward Pearce: The Unformists' Plea for Nonconformists.

Quite a controversy was excited upon the subject. Among others, Dr. Francis Turner attacked the Bishop, and Andrew Marvell defended him. See Athen. Oxon. Serms., 1674, 8vo. Animadversions on Dr. Burnet's Theory of the Earth, 1685, 4to. Legacy to his Diocese, or a short determination of all controversies we have with the Papists by God's Holy Word; being three serms. on John v. 39, &c.

The title of the above indicates the zeal of the bishop on behalf of the Protestant cause. He takes pains to reaffirm his principles in the preamble to his Will:

"I do in all humble manner most heartily thank God, that he hath been most graciously pleased, by the light of his most holy gospel, to recall me from the darkness of gross errors and popish superstitions into which I was seduced in my younger days, and to settle me again in the true ancient Catholic and Apostolic faith, professed by our Church of England, in which I was born and baptised, (his father embraced Romanism after his son's birth,) and in which I joyfully die." See Athen. Oxon.; Biog. Brit.; Salmon's Lives of the Bishops.

Croft, Sir Herbert, 1751–1816, of the same family as the above, a native of London, was educated at University College, Oxford, and afterwards studied law at Lincoln's Inn. In 1782 he took holy orders, and in 1797 he succeeded to a baronetcy. A Brother's Advice to his Sisters, 1775, 12mo. Love and Madness, 1780, sm. 8vo. This was founded upon the murder of Miss Ray, by Hackman. Fanaticism and Treason, 1780, 8vo. The Literary Fly, 1780. Other works. In 1792 he issued proposals for an enlarged edit. of Johnson's Dictionary, with 20,000 words added and errors corrected. To be pub. in four large folios at £12 12s! We have the original prospectus before us, and a curious affair it is. The work was never completed. He wrote the life of Young, in Johnson's English Poets. The Doctor thus honourably mentions his assistant:

"The following Life was written, at my request, by a gentleman who had better information than I could easily have obtained; and the publick will perhaps wish that I had solicited and obtained more such favours from him."

See Boswell's Johnson, and Memoir of Croft in Gent. Mag., May, 1816, p. 470, and Dec. 4, p. 487.

Croft, John. 1. Wines, 1787, York, 8vo. 2. Scrap-eans; Fugitive Miscellany, 1792, 8vo. 3. Excerpta Antiqua, 8vo. 4. Annotations on Plays of Shakspeare. (Johnson and Steevens's ed.,) 1810, 8vo.

Croft, Robert. Loyal Officer, Lon., 1663, 4to.

Croft, Robert? Terrestrial Paradise; in verse and prose, 1639.

Croft, Thomas. Funl. serm., Lon., 1711, 8vo.

Croft, William, Mus. Doc., 1677–1727, a celebrated composer of Cathedral Music, organist of Westminster Abbey. Divine Harmony, 1712, anon. Musicus, &c., 1715. Musica Sacra, 1724, 2 vols. fol. This beautiful work is the first that was stamped on pewter plates and in score. Vol. 1st contains the Burial Service, left unfinished by Purcell. See Hawkins's History of Music; Burney's ditto.

Crofton, Dennis. Genesis and Geology; or an investigation into the reconciliation of the modern doctrines of Geology, with the declarations of Scripture; with an Introduction by Edward Hitchcock, D.D., LL.D., Boston, 1853, 16mo, pp. 100.

Crofton, Zachary, d. 1672? a native of Ireland, obtained the living of St. Botolph, Aldgate, London; rejected for Nonconformity, 1662. He pub. a number of theolog. (controversial) and other treatises, 1660–63. His Discourse of Patronage appeared in 1675.

Crofts, John. Piety and Courage; a serm., 1813, 12mo.

Crofts, Robert. The Lover, or Nuptial Love, written by Robert Crofts to please himself, Lon., 1638, 18mo.

Crockatt, Gilbert. Letter to Lady Shovell, 1708, 8vo.

Croke, Alexander, LL.D. Report of Case of Horner vs. Liddiard, Lon., 1800, 8vo. Argument in Case of the Hendrick and Maria, 1800, 8vo. Remarks on Schlegel's work upon the Visitation of Neutral Vessels under Convoy, 1801, 8vo.

Croke, Sir Alexander. A Genealogical Hist. of the Croke Family, 1823, 2 vols. 4to, £7 7s. Progress of Idolatry and other Poems, 1841, 2 vols. 8vo. Schola Salernitana, by G. D. Milano; with an Eng. trans., introduction, and notes; by Sir A. C., p. 8vo.

"How popular this ancient poem must have been, we may infer from its having passed through 160 editions. It is republished now as a bibliographical curiosity; but Sir A. Croke has, in the introduction and notes, gathered together so many interesting facts, that the volume will be welcomed for itself, as well as treasured as a curiosity."—Athenæum.

Essay on the Origin, Progress, and Doctrine of Rhyming Latin Verse, with many specimens, 1828, p. 8vo.

"This is a clever and interesting little volume on an attractive subject; the leisure work of a scholar and a man of taste."—British Critic.

Croke, or Crook, Sir George, 1559–1641, educated at University College, Oxford, entered the Inner Temple, and in 1628 succeeded Sir John Doderidge as Justice of the King's Bench. In 1636 he espoused the part of Hampden in the ship-money case. Hampden's share, for which he went to law, was 18 shillings, and Lloyd remarks that it cost the nation £18,000,000! Report of Select Cases in the C. of K. B. and C. P. temp. Eliz., Jas. I. and Chas. I.; French, Lon., 1857-61, 3 vols. fol.; 2d ed., without references, 1869, 3 vols. fol.; 3d ed. in English, by Croke's son-in-law, Sir Harbottle Grimston, with many references, &c., 1883-85, 3 vols. fol.; 4th ed., with notes and references to later authorities, by Thos. Leach, 1790-92, 4 vols. r. 8vo. Abridgt. of the Cases temp. Chas. I., 1658, 8vo. Abridgt. by Wm. Hughes, 1665, 8vo.

"A work of credit and celebrity among the old reporters, and which has sustained its character in every succeeding age."—CHANCELLOR KENT.

There has been some dissent to this opinion, but Mr. Wallace's explanation of the matter appears to us to be satisfactory. See Wallace's Reporters, 23; Marvin's Legal Bib., 240; Brooks's Bib. Leg., 212; Reeves's Hist., 240.

Croke, John. Relationes Casuum Selectorum ex Ibris. Rob. Kielwey et alim Relationes per Gul. Dalison et Gul. Bendloes, Lon., 1633, fol.

Croke, Richard, (in Latin, Crocus), d. 1558, a native of London, was educated at Eton and King's College, Cambridge. He was Greek Professor at Leipsic, at Louvain, and subsequently at Oxford. He was sent by Henry VIII. to influence the University of Padua to favour the divorce of the king. His letters to Henry may be seen in Burnet's Hist. of the Reformation. Croke pub. several treatises, among which are Introductiones ad Grammaticam Linguam, Cologn., 1520, 4to, and Orationes, 1520, 4to.

Croker, Rev. Henry Temple. Bower detected as an Historian, Lon., 1758, 8vo. Experimented Magnetism, 1761, 8vo. The Complete Dict. of Arts and Sciences, 3 vols. fol., 1769. Superseded by later compilations.

Croker, Rt. Hon. John Wilson, D.C.L., 1780-1857, a native of the county of Galway, Ireland, but of English descent, was one of the most prominent literary characters of his day. He died at the house of Sir William Whitman, at St. Alban's-bank, Hampton, near London. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, called to the Bar in 1807, and from that time to 1832 occupied a seat in the House of Commons. From 1809 to '30 he was Secretary to the Admiralty, and in 1828 was sworn of the Privy Council. His opposition to the Reform Bill, and his declaration that he would never sit in a Reformed House of Commons, has enabled him to devote more attention to literary pursuits. His first publication, Familiar Epistles to Frederick E. Jones, Esq., on the Irish Stage, Dublin, 1804, two edits. in the year, displayed that satirical power which is so conspicuous in his articles in the Quarterly Review—originated in 1809 by Scott, Canning, and Croker. In that valuable, if not altogether amiable, ingredient in reviewing, sarcasm, Mr. Croker is thought not to have been a whit behind the great Gifford himself.

"John Wilson Croker more than approached the editor in sarcastic sallies and biting wit: he gave early proofs of such powers in his poem on the Irish stage; intimated talents active and argumentative in his speeches; and a poetic feeling and spirit approaching Scott in his Peninsular battles. To his pen, many articles full of political wormwood are attributed; and also some of the papers on America, which were not received in a tone of thankfulness by the men of the West."—ALLAN CUNNINGHAM: Biog. and Crit. Hist. of Lit. See Men of the Time, Lon., 1853.

Mr. C.'s next publication was an Intercepted Letter from Canton. This is a satirical picture of the city of Dublin. To this succeeded Songs of Trafalgar; The Battle of Talavera; Sketch of Ireland, Past and Present; Letters on the Naval War with America; Stories from the History of England. This work (of which 30,000 to 40,000 copies have been sold) was the model of Sir Walter Scott's Tales of a Grandfather.

"A good thought came in my head—to write stories for little Johnnie Lockhart, from the History of Scotland, like those taken from the History of England. But I will not write mine quite so simply as Croker has done. I am persuaded both children and the lower class of readers hate books which are written down to their capacity, and love those that are composed for their elders and betters."

We wish that the authors of some modern juvenile books would ponder the above.

Sir Walter presented a copy of the First Series to Mr. Croker, with the following note:

"MY DEAR CROKER,—I have been stealing from you, and as it seems the fashion to compound felony, I send you a sample of the snag, by way of stopping your mouth. . . . Always yours, W. SCOTT."

Mr. Croker has also aided educators and their pupils by his excellent Progressive Geography for Children, which a high authority commends as "The best elementary book on the subject."—Lon. Quart. Rev.

We continue the enumeration of Mr. Croker's works: Reply to the Letters of Malachi Malagrowther; The Snuff-papers; Military Events of the French Revolution of 1830; trans. of Bassompierre's Embassy to England; Hervey's Memoirs of the Court of George the Second, now first pub. from the Originals at Ickworth.

"I know of no such near and intimate picture of the interior of a court. No other Memoir that I have read brings us so immediately, so actually into not merely the presence, but the company, of the personages of the royal circle. Lord Hervey is, I may venture to say, almost the Boswell of George II. and Queen Caroline."—Mr. Croker's Preface.

The mention of Boswell naturally introduces a notice of the magnum opus of Mr. Croker—the production by which he is best known to the popular literary circles—his edit. of Boswell's Johnson. This work has been already noticed at length in our article upon Boswell. The reader will there see that Mr. Macaulay does not indulge in rapturous plaudits of Mr. Croker's valuable labours, and the latter has returned Mr. Macaulay's compliments in his review in the Quarterly of The History of England from the Accession of James II. An answer to Mr. Croker's charge of "partial selection" and "misrepresentation of facts" will be found in the "Edinburgh." It is not pleasant to dwell upon these family quarrels; for surely those who zealously labour for the intellectual advancement of the race may be properly said to constitute one family. With the exception of contributions to the Quarterly Review, Mr. Croker published nothing for many years. At the time of his death he was engaged in the preparation of an edition of the works of Alexander Pope, in connexion with Mr. Peter Cunningham, which was announced by Mr. Murray. Mr. Cunningham continues the editorship, (see p. 461, post.) Essays on the Early Period of the French Revolution, by the late Rt. Hon. John Wilson Croker; reprinted from the Quar. Rev., with Additions and Corrections, 1857, 8vo. He also edited Lady Hervey's Letters, Walpole's Letters to Lord Hertford, and was the author of several lyrical poems of merit.

Croker, Capt. Richard. Travels through Several Provinces of Spain and Portugal, &c., Lon., 1799, 8vo.

"An entertaining and, in some parts, instructive performance."—Lon. Monthly Review, 1799.

Croker, Thomas. Knavish Merchant, 1661, 4to.

Croker, Thomas Crofton, d. 1854, aged 57, a popular author, has done much to illustrate the Irish character and the Antiquities of the country. Researches in the South of Ireland, Lon., 1824, 4to. This volume contains a large amount of valuable information respecting the manners and superstition of the Irish Peasantry, Scenery, Architectural Remains, &c.

Fairy Legends and Traditions of the South of Ireland, 1825. This edit. contains contributions—which were subsequently omitted—by Maginn, Pigot, Humphreys, and Keightley. Legends of the Lakes, 1828; new edit. arranged as a Tour to the Lakes, 1853. Daniel O'Rourke, 1828. Barney Mahoney, 1832. My Village versus Our Village, 1832. Tour of M. Boullaye Le Gouz in Ireland, 1844. The Popular Songs of Ireland, 1839.

"Each is accompanied by its history from the competent pen of Crofton Croker, than whom no man knows more of the poetic superstitions and the manners and mythology of Ireland."

"A volume of singular interest and curiosity. It is even more than this—it is a publication of real value, as illustrative of the past and present condition, both mental and moral, of the most singular people of the world. At the same time, it is, as a collection of vocal compositions, full of the graces and beauty of which that class of poetry is so eminently susceptible."—Lon. Naval and Military Gazette.

Mr. Croker pub. in 1838, 2 vols. 8vo, the Memoirs of Joseph Holt, General of the Irish Rebels in 1798, edited from his original MSS. in the possession of Sir William Betham.

"These Memoirs are wild, eccentric, and adventurous."—Lon. New Monthly Magazine.

"We heartily recommend the general and his editor (whose notes in themselves are copious and interesting) to our readers."—Lon. Athenaeum.

"Of Crofton Croker it may truly be said, as of his countryman, Oliver Goldsmith, nullum inquit quod non ornavit, (long may he adorn our literature with such works as the present, before the compliment can be used in his epitaph!) and of his coadjutor in this work, the worthy Ulster King, that he too has done good service in preserving these curious records belonging to Irish history. The work contains adventures of extraordinary and romantic character, and everybody will read it."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

The reader will find further details of Mr. Croker's literary life in the Lon. Gent. Mag. for Oct., 1854.

Croker, Walter. A Letter to an M. P., Lon., 1816.

Crole, or Croleson, Robert. See CROWLEY.

Croly, Rev. Geo., LL.D., one of the most voluminous writers of the day, was b. in Dublin, 1780, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin. He has been for many years Rector of St. Stephen's, Walbrook, London. We classify his works according to their subjects. 1. The Apocalypse of St. John; a New Interpretation, Lon., 1827, 8vo.

"An original and powerfully-written volume. . . . The sketch which completes the volume is evidently the result of great labour and research, and abounds with most important historical information."—Horne's Introd.

2. Divine Providence; or the three Cycles of Revelation, 1834, 8vo.

"To Dr. Croly belongs the high and lasting praise of lending new forces to the defenders of religion, and adding a new wing to the temple of the Christian Faith."—Lon. Gent. Mag.

"Dr. Croly is a man of vivid imagination, but the misfortune is, that his imagination runs away with him. His language, therefore, is rich and often eloquent; but his ideas are for the most part quite fanciful and unsound."—British Critic, 1834.

3. The True Idea of Baptism, 1850, 8vo. 4. Sermon on Marriage, 2d ed., 1836, 8vo. 5. Sermons on Important Subjects, 1849, 8vo. (As connected with a subject which excited great interest in England and America, we should not omit to mention that in 1842 Mr. D. Croly pub. an Index to the Tracts for the Times; with Dissertations.) 6. Serms. preached in the Chapel of the Foundling Hospital, with others preached in St. Stephen's, Wallbrook, in 1847, 1848, 8vo.

"Clearer, more nervous, and in the true sense of the term, simpler, discourses, have not appeared for many years: their style is in general true Saxon, their matter strong, their theology sound and scriptural."—Gifford's Literary Portraits.

7. Speeches on the Papal Aggression. 8. Exposition on Popery and the Popish Question. 9. The Popish Supremacy; two sermons, 1850, 8vo. 10. Works of Jeremy Taylor. With Life and Times of the Author, 1838, 8 vols. p. 8vo.

"A beautiful edition of the best works of this eloquent and admired author."

11. Scenes from Scripture, with other Poems, 1851, 8vo. "Eminent in every mode of literature, Dr. Croly stands, in our judgment, first among the living poets of Great Britain."—Lon. Standard.

"An admirable addition to the library of religious families."—John Bull.

12. Marriage with a deceased Wife's Sister. 13. On the proposed Admission of Jews into Parliament. 14. Works of Alex. Pope, with Memoirs, Notes, and Critical Notices on each Poem, 1835, 4 vols. 12mo. 15. Pride shall have a Fall; a Comedy. This is an early production of Mr. Croly. 16. Catiline, a Tragedy, with other Poems, 8vo.

"There can be no doubt that this, whether considered as a poem or as a drama, is a splendid performance, and one which must greatly elevate the name of Croly."—Blackwood's Mag.

17. Verse Illustrations to Gems from the Antique, sm. 8vo.

"Mr. Croly's genius is too well known to need our commendation. We can safely say, that these Illustrations will add a wreath to his laurels."—Lon. New Monthly Mag.

18. Paris in 1815, and other Poems, 8vo, (his first work.) 19. The Angel of the World; an Arabian Tale, 1820. 20. Sebastian; a Spanish Tale. 21. Poetical Works, 1830, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

"Full of lofty imaginings and poetic thought, we will venture to say, that there is hardly a theme which Mr. Croly has not awoken with a masterly hand, and hardly a sympathy which he has not touched, in the great and multifarious range of subjects embraced in these volumes."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

22. Beauties of the English Poets, 12mo. 23. The Modern Orlando; a Poem, 1846, 8vo; 2d ed., 1855.

"One cannot but regret that Dr. Croly has not carried out his original purpose of prolonging the poem to a ramble in other cities and scenes of modern travel. Fragmentary as it now is, it is by far the best thing of the kind that has been written since Byron."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

24. Character of Curran's Eloquence and Politics. 25. Political Life of the Rt. Hon. Edmund Burke, 1840, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

"A valuable contribution to our national literature, an effectual antidote to revolutionary principles, and a masterly analysis of the mind and writings of the greatest philosopher and statesman in our history."—Britannia.

26. Historical Sketches, Speeches, and Characters, 1842, p. 8vo. 27. Tales of the Great St. Bernard, 3 vols. p. 8vo. 28. Year of Liberation in 1813, 2 vols. p. 8vo. 29. Salathiel, a Story of the Past, the Present, and the Future, 1827, 3 vols. p. 8vo.

"We have risen from the perusal of the volumes before us, just as we have felt after losing ourselves in the absorbing interest of Shakespeare's finest tragedy. Every page is instinct with the energy of passion, or with some glowing picture of romantic grandeur—the tender, the affecting, and the pathetic—the ardent, the heroic, the devoted—all that can excite the highest and most dramatic of our feelings. There is, we will venture to predict, in Salathiel, the germ of perpetuity; it is not destined, like some other works of imagination, to be read and forgotten."—Lon. Genl. Magazine.

"One of the most splendid productions among works of fiction that the age has brought forth."—Lon. Athenaeum.

"There are many natural scenes, and passages tender and eloquent, but somewhat cold and stately; it abounds in descriptions on which all the splendours of fancy and language are lavished. . . . The author in his poem of 'May Fair' was more at home; it contains passages which, for condensed vigour of thought and language, and sharp severity of rebuke, are not to be paralleled in the 'Legion Club' of Swift."—ALLAN CUNNINGHAM: Biog. and Crit. Hist. of Lit.

30. Marston; or, The Soldier and Statesman, 1846, 3 vols. p. 8vo. 31. The Personal History of King George the Fourth, 1830, 8vo; 2d ed., 1841, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

"These volumes have a higher degree of interest than could possibly arise from merely tracing the personal career of George the Fourth. They are a history of his age; introducing us to all the great statesmen and wits of that period; abounding in rapid and masterly sketches of character, brilliant reflection, and pleasant episodes; and embodying all that information current in the best-informed circles of the day, which is necessary to be known if we would thoroughly understand the transactions of the period."—Britannia.

"Dr. Croly is an almost universal poet. He is grand and gorgeous, but rarely tender and affectionate; he builds a lofty and magnificent temple, but it is too cold and stately to be a home for the heart."—Mrs. Hall.

Cromartie, or Cromerty, George, Earl of. Conspiracies of the Earl of Gowry and Robert Logan against King James VI., and a Vindication of Robert III., &c., Edin., 1713, 8vo. Mosses in Scotland, Phil. Trans., 1710.

Crombie, Alexander, LL.D., 1760–1842, a native of Aberdeen, pastor of a Presbyterian congregation in London, schoolmaster at Highgate, and subsequently at Greenwich. 1. Philosophical Necessity, Lon., 1793, 8vo. 2. Etymology and Syntax of the English Language explained, 1802, 8vo; 4th ed., 1836; adapted to schools by W. Smith, 1846. 3. Gymnasium, sive Symbola Critica, 1812, 2 vols. 8vo; 5th ed., 1834; abridged, 1836, 12mo. 4. Letters on the Agricultural Interest, 1816, 8vo. 5. Natural Theology, Lon., 1829, 2 vols. 8vo.

"In these volumes Dr. Crombie has presented, as we believe, the most comprehensive view of the whole science of natural theology that has hitherto appeared."—Lon. Quarterly Rev. II. 213; q. v., & vol. xxxix. 6, and Edin. Rev. liv. 147.

Dr. C.'s English Grammar is one of the best in the language.

Crombie, John. The Character and Offices of Christ Illustrated by a Comparison with the Typical Characters of the Old Testament, Lon., 1827, 8vo.

"Crombie uses a copious and pleasing diction, and manifests a devout spirit in the treatment of the several subjects which he has included in his comparison."—Lowndes's Brit. Lib.

Crombie, Wm. The Soul's Progress, Edin., 1768, 8vo.

Crome, John. Art of writing Short Hand, Shef., 1801. In doggerel verse.

Cromek, R. H. 1. Reliques of Robert Burns, Lon., 1808, 8vo. 2. Select Scottish Songs, ancient and modern, with observations and notices by Robert Burns; edit. by R. H. C., 1810, 8vo. 3. Remains of Nithsdale and Gallo-way, Song, 1810, 8vo.

"A faithful portrait unadorned
Of manners lingering yet in Scotia's vales."

But, unfortunately, most of these venerable remains were composed by Allan Cunningham.

Cromerty, Earl of. See CROMARTIE.

Cromerty. Daniel's Prophecy, &c., Edin., 1708, 4to.

Crommelin, L. An Essay towards improving the Hempen and Flaxen Manufacs. in Ireland, Dublin, 1705, 4to.

Crompe, John. Theolog. treatises, 1639, 41.

Crompton, C. Legal Reports, in conjunction with Jervis, Meeson, and Roscoe, 1832–36.

Crompton, George. Practice in C. of K. B. and C. P., Lon., 1780, 2 vols. 8vo; 3d ed., 1786, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Many of the cases published in Crompton's Practice collected by himself before he was at the bar, were never intended for publication, and are too loose to be relied on."—Murray's Legal Bibl.

New ed. corrected, &c. by B. J. Sellen, 1798, 2 vols. 8vo. 1st Amer. ed., with new cases, N. York, 1813, 2 vols. 8vo.

Crompton, Hugh. Poems, being a Fardle of Fancies, or a Medley of Music, stowed in four Ounces of the Oyl of Epigrams, Lon., 1657, 8vo. Pierides; or the Muses' Mount, 1658, 8vo. Dedicated to Mary, Duchess of Richmond and Lenox, &c.

Crompton, J. Letters, pub. by R. Maresden.

Crompton, Joshua. Genuine Memoirs of; written by himself, Lon., 1773, 8vo.

Crompton, Richard. L'autorité et juridiction des Courts de la Majesté de la Royne, Lon., 1594, 1637, 4to. See a list of Crompton's works in the Bibl. Brit. He made large additions to Fitz Herbert's Justice; therefore often cited as Crompton's Justice.

"Mr. Crompton's books are in every man's hands, which proves their general allowance. A man may, by them, in a few hours, gain great knowledge."—Fulbeck's Study of the Law, 74.

Crompton, Susan F. Stories for Sunday Afternoons, Lon., 1845, 16mo, and 1846.

Crompton, William, son of Richard, ante. 1. St. Austin's Religion. 2. C. Religion. 3. Prayer. 4. Serms., 1623, '33, '59, '79.

Cromwell, Oliver, the last male descendant of "The Protector." Memoirs of Oliver Cromwell, and of his Sons Richard and Henry, with Original Letters and other Family Papers, 1820, 4to; 2d ed., 1820, 2 vols. 8vo; 3d ed., 1823, 2 vols. 8vo. The daughter of the above author is Mrs. Russell of Cheshunt. The Memoirs have been characterized as an "unbounded panegyric." The reader who would peruse both sides of the subject, should study Hume, Clarendon's Hist. of the Rebellion, Catherine Macaulay's Hist. of England, Bulstrode's Memoirs, Conference at the end of Thurloe's State Papers, Ludlow's Memoirs, Sir Edward Walker's Hist. Discourses, Sir John Sinclair's Hist. of the Revenue, Carte's, Lingard's, Smollett's, Keightley's, and the Pictorial, histories of England, Noble's Memoirs of the Cromwells, Gumble's Life of Monk, Trial of the Regicides, Thomas Cromwell's Oliver Cromwell and his Times, Hallam's Constitutional Hist. of England, Carlyle's Letters and Speeches of Cromwell with Elucidations, D'Aubigné's Protector, Smyth's Lectures on Mod. Hist., T. B. Macaulay's Review of Hallam's Constitution and Hist., and M.'s paper on Milton, in Edin. Review. Other works might be mentioned, but we imagine the reader will excuse us for the present. For a list of State papers issued in the name of Oliver Cromwell, and the name of Richard Cromwell, see Watt's Bibl. Brit. and Lowndes's Bibl. Manual, where will also be found lists of works respecting the character of Cromwell's administration, and the government which preceded it.

Cromwell, Samuel. Disputatio Medica Inauguratis de Tumoribus in Geneve, Lugd. Bat., 1682, 4to.

Cromwell, Thomas. The Schoolboy and other Poems, 1816. Oliver Cromwell and his Times, Lon., 1821, 8vo.

"An attempt to steer a middle course between the prejudiced representations of Hume and the unbounded panegyrists of Oliver Cromwell."—LOWND.

Cronhelm, F. W. Book-keeping, 1818, 4to.

Crook, Sir George. See CROKE.

Crook, John. Theolog. and Autobiographical works, 1661-1706.

Crook, John. Address to the Legislature; also works on the Church, Charity Schools, &c., 1797-1813.

Crook, W. Historian's Guide, 1600-79, Lon., 1679, 12mo.

Crooke, B. Sermons, Lon., 1695, '98, 4to.

Crooke, Helkiah, M.D. Description of the Body of Man, from the best authors of Anatomy, Lon., 1615, fol. 53 Instruments of Chirurgery, 1631, fol.

"Taken principally from Parac."—DR. WATT.

Crooke, Henry. Sermons, 1755, 8vo.

Crooke, Samuel, 1574-1649, Fellow of Emanuel College, Cambridge. Divine Characters, &c., 1619, '58.

Crooke, Unton. Letter to Cromwell, 1654, 4to.

Crooke, William. Funeral Sermon, Lon., 1670, 8vo.

Crooke, George R., D.D., b. 1822, at Philadelphia. In connexion with Dr. McClintock, First Latin Book. In connexion with Prof. Schen, Latin-English Lexicon, Phila., 1858, large 8vo. Highly commended. Ed. Butler's Analogy. Contrib. Method. Quar. Rev. See SCHEN, A. J.

Crookshank, William, D.D., died 1769, minister of the Scots Church, Swallow Street, London, 1735. Hist. of the State and Sufferings of the Church of Scotland from the Restoration to the Revolution, Lon., 1749, 2 vols. 8vo; Edin., 1761, 2 vols. 8vo; Glasg., 1787, 2 vols. 12mo; Paisley, 1789, 2 vols. sm. 8vo. Chiefly abridged from Wodrow.

Crookshanks. Public Debts and Funds, Lon., 1718, fol.

Crookshanks, John. Letter to R. Kirke, 1772, 8vo.

Croon, or Croune, William, M.D., d. 1684, founder of the Croonian Lectures, the first of which was delivered in 1738, was a native of London, Fellow of Emanuel College, Cambridge, Professor of Rhetoric in Gresham College, and Registrar of the Royal Society. He founded a course of Algebraic Lectures in seven colleges at Cambridge, and a yearly Anatomical Lecture in the Royal Society. He pub. De Ratione Motus Musculorum, Lon., 1664, 4to; Amst., 1677, 12mo. Some of his papers will be found in Phil. Trans., and many remain in MS. in the British Museum.

Cropley, Sir John. Letters to Mr. Molesworth, 1721, 8vo.

Crosby, Allen. Exposition of St. John, 1755, 4to.

Crosby, Alpheus, born at Sandwich, N. H., 1810, graduated at Dartmouth College, 1827. In 1837 he became Prof. of the Latin and Greek Languages and Literature in Dartmouth College, and 1849, Prof. Emeritus of the Greek Language and Literature in the same college. Prof. Crosby has published a Greek and General Grammar; Greek Tables; Greek Lessons; An edition of Xenophon's Anabasis; First Lessons in Geometry; A Letter of John Foster, with Additions; An Essay on the Second Advent.

Crosby, Howard, b. 1826, N. Y. City, (great grandson of Wm. Floyd, one of the signers of Dec. of Independence,) Prof. Greek, Univ. N. Y. Lands of the Moslem, N. York, 1851, 8vo. Editor of Œdipus Tyrannus of Sophocles.

Crosby, Thomas. The History of English Baptists, from the Reformation to the beginning of the Reign of George I., Lon., 1738-40, 4 vols. 8vo.

This is considered the best history of the English Baptists. The author tells us that he undertook it in consequence of the misrepresentations of the sect in the History of the Puritans by Neal, who had summed up its history in so small a compass as five pages. The MS. from which these four vols. are compiled, was drawn up by Benjamin Stinson, and was "in the possession of the author of the History of the Puritans for some years."

Bishop Burnet says of the English Baptists that "they were generally men of virtue, and of an universal charity."

Crosby, Thomas. 1. Key. 2. Builder's Book, 1797, &c.

Crosfield, Robert. Treatises on Polit. Econ., 1692-1704.

"The author alludes to many publick corruptions, and proposes schemes by which great savings to the nation might be accomplished."

Crosfield, Miss A. Hist. of Northallerton, Northall, 1791, 8vo.

Crosfield, Geo. Kalendrar of Flora, Lon., 1810, 8vo.

Crosfield, R. J., M.D. The Scurvy, Lon., 1797, 8vo.

Crosland, Mrs. Newton, late Camilla Toulmin, b. in London. Lays and Legends of English Life, Lon., 4to. Partners for Life, 12mo. Little Berlin Wool-Worker, 16mo. Poems, 12mo. Stratagems, 1849, square. Toil and Trial, 1849, p. 8vo. Ditto, and Double Claim, by Hervey, 1851, square. Tales, 16mo. Lydia; a Woman's Book, 1852, 12mo. The Young Lord, 1849, 18mo.

"She is a moralist, who draws truths from sorrow with the hand of a master, and depicts the miseries of mankind only that she may improve their condition."—Bell's Weekly Messenger.

Crosley, David. Sermon, Lon., 1691, 4to.

Crosley, H. Law of Wills, pt. 1, Lon., 1828, 8vo.

Cross, Fras. De Febre Intermittente, Oxon., 1668, 12mo.

Cross, James C. The Apparition; a Musical Dramatic Romance, &c., 1794-1809. See a list of his dram. pieces in Biog. Dramat.

Cross, John. Cash Tables for Duties, Newc., 1779, 8vo.

Cross, John. Law of Lien, &c., Lon., 1840, 8vo.

Cross, John, M.D. Profess. treatises, Glasg., 1815-19.

Cross, Joseph, D.D., b. 1813, Brent, Somersetshire, Eng., came to U.S. at the age of 12, and commenced the ministry at 16. 1. Life and Sermons of Christmas Evans; from the Welsh, 8vo. 2. Headlands of Faith, 12mo. 3. The Hebrew Missionary, 18mo. 4. Pighav Views of the Promised Inheritance. 5. A Year in Europe. 6. Prelections on Charity. Ed. Portraiture and Pencillings of Mrs. L. A. L. Cross. Contrib. Southern Methodist Quar. Rev., Home Circle, &c.

Cross, Nicholas. The Cynosura, Lon., 1670, fol. Sermon on Ps. lxxxiii. 5; see Catholic Serms., ii. 123.

Cross, Peter Brady. Laws and Constitutions of England, Lon., 1797, 8vo. Peace or War, which is the best Policy? 1800, 8vo.

Cross, Walter, d. 1701? Exposition on Rom. iv. 1, 2, Lon., 1693, '94, 4to. Serms., 1695, '97, 4to. The Tagh-mical Art; or the Art of Expounding Scripture by the Points usually called Accents, Lon., 1698, 8vo.

"Written with great abundance of confidence, and vast lack of intelligence. The whole system is baseless, visionary, and useless. The rhetorical rules for the use of the learner are in verse; of which take the following specimen:

'Siluk the sentence and the verse doth end;
Attach in two divides, and so attends;
Segola three will have, or not appear;
Merekah in verse doth to them both come near;
Inferior game Reb. gerachate doth play.
Because as vicar he comes in the way!'"—ORMS: Bibl. Bæ.

Crosse, Wm. Portions of the Psalms, Oxf., 1801, 12mo.

Crosse, Henry. Virtue Commonwealth; or the Highway to Honour, &c., Lon., 1603, 4to. Gordounstoun sale, 633, £4.

Crosse, John. Sermons, &c., 1693, '94, '95, 4to.

Crosse, Peter† Power of Friendship; a Poetical Epistle, 1785, 4to.

Crosse, R. S. Concio in 1 Cor. ii. 14, Oxf., 1655.

Crosse, Wm. Continuation of Grimeston's Hist. of the Netherlands, 1608-27, Lon., 1627, fol.

Crosse, Wm. A Brief Treatise of the Eyes, Lon., 1708, 8vo.

Crosse, Wm. Serm. on Heb. i. 14, Lon., 1713, 8vo.

Crossing, Richard. Sermons, 1718, '20, '22, '32.

Crossley, Aaron. Peerage of Ireland, Dubl., 1725, fol.

Crossley, J. T. Educational works, Lon., 12, 18, and 24mo.

Crossman, F. G. Course of Prayer, Lon., 1824, 12mo.

Crossman, Henry. Serms., &c., 1758-1816.

Crossman, Samuel. Sermons, 1680, '82, '86.

Crosswell, Wm. Tables for Longitude, Bost., 1791, 8vo.

Crosthwaite, Charles. Synchronology, being a Treatise on History, Chronology, and Mythology, Oxf., 1839, 8vo.

"A useful information."—BICKERSTETH.

Crosthwaite, J. C., Rector of St. Mary-at-Hill. Maps illustrating the Journeys of Christ and of St. Paul, Lon., 1830.

"A useful supplement to the Atlases to the Bible, hitherto published."—Lon. Chris. Remembrancer.

1. The Christian Ministry. 2. Discourses, 1835, 8vo.

"Very strongly recommended to all lovers of vigorous thought, sound principles, and curious information."—British Magazine.

Serms., 1840, 12mo. Daily Communion, 1841, 18mo., Modern Hagiology, 1846, 2 vols. 12mo.

Crosthwaite, John. Pendulums; in Trans. Irish Acad., 1788.

Croswell, Andrew, minister in Boston, Mass., died 1785, aged 76. Theolog. treatises, 1746, '68, '71.

Croswell, Edwin, a native of Catskill, New York, editor of the Albany Argus, has pub. a number of Addreses, &c., and is said to be preparing Sketches and Anecdotes of Men and Events of his Time.

Croswell, Rev. Harry, father of the Rev. Wm. Croswell, at one time a leading political editor at Hudson and Albany, N.Y. 1. Rudiments of the Church. 2. Family Prayers, New Haven, 8vo and 12mo; new ed., revised, N.Y., 1857, 12mo.

Croswell, Rev. William, 1804-1851, b. at Hudson, N.Y., son of the preceding; grad. at Yale Coll., 1822; Rector of Christ Church, Boston, 1829-40; St. Peter's Church, Auburn, N.Y., 1840-44; Rector of Church of the Advent, Boston, 1844-51. See specimens of his poetry, &c. in Duyckinck's Cyc. of Amer. Lit., Griwald's Poets and Poetry of America, and Memoirs by his Father, N.Y., 1853, 8vo.

Crotch, Wm., Mus. Doc. Elements of Musical Composition, 1812, 4to. Styles of Music, 1812, 3 vols. fol. Substance of Lectures on Music, 8vo.

"A very popular and pleasant work."—Westminster Review.

Crouch, Edwin A. An English edit. of Lamarck's Conchology, Lon., 1827, r. 4to.

"We can strongly recommend it to all those who feel interested in this department of natural history."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

Crouch, Henry. British Customs, Lon., 1724-28, 8vo. Guide to the Officers of the Customs, 1732, fol.

Crouch, Humphrey. Parliament of Graces, 1642, 4to.

Crouch, John. Muses' Joy, &c., Lon., 1657-66.

Crouch, Nathaniel. See BURTON, ROBERT.

Crouch, Wm. Posthuma Christiana, Lon., 1712, 8vo.

Crouleus, Robert. See CROWLEY.

Croune, Wm. See CROON.

Crow, Rev. Francis, died 1692. Vanity and Impiety of Judicial Astrology, 1690, 8vo. Mensalia Sacra, 1693, 8vo.

Crow, or Crowe, Sir Sackville. His Case as it now stands, with his request to the Parliament, Lon., 1652, 4to.

Crowe, Anna Mary. Case in Chancery, 1806, 8vo. Letter to Dr. Willis on Private Mad Houses, 1811, 8vo.

Crowe, Mrs. Catherine, whose maiden name was Stevens, is a native of Borough Green, county of Kent, England. She married Lt.-Col. Crowe, Royal Army. Light and Darkness; or, Mysteries of Life, Lon., 1850, 3 vols. p. 8vo. Men and Women, 1843, 3 vols. p. 8vo. Pippie's Warning, 1848, 16mo. Aristodemus; a Tragedy. Susan Hopley, 1841, 3 vols. p. 8vo. Lilly Dawson, 1847, 2 vols. 12mo.

"A novel of rare merit."—Lon. Messenger.

"A creation worthy of Scott."—John Bull.

Adventures of a Beauty, 1852, 3 vols. p. 8vo. The Night Side of Nature, 1848, 2 vols. 12mo.

"It shows that the whole doctrine of spirits is worthy of the most serious attention."—Lon. Athenaeum.

Crowe, Eyre Evans. The English in Italy and France. To-Day in Ireland. Tales, 1825, 3 vols. p. 8vo. Yesterday in Ireland. Tales, 1829, 3 vols. p. 8vo. Hist. of France, 1830-44, 3 vols. p. 8vo.

Crowe, Rev. Henry. Zoophilos; or Considerations on the Moral Treatment of Inferior Animals, 3d ed., Bath, 1822, 12mo.

Crowe, Wm. Catalogue of Eng. Writers on the Old and New Testaments, 2d ed., Lon., 1668, 12mo.

Elenchus Scriptorum in Sacram Scripturam tam Græcorum quam Latinorum in quo exhibentur eorum gens, patria, professio, religio: librorum tituli, volumina, editiones variae, Londini, 1672, 8vo.

The compiler actually arranges his authors under their Christian names! Of the whims of book-makers there is no end!

Crowe, Wm., DD. Serms., &c., Lon., 1720-44.

Crowe, Wm. Serms. and Orations, 1781, '88, 1800. Lewesdon Hill; a Poem, Lon., 1786, '88, 1804, 4to.

"A poem of very considerable merit."—Lowndes.

Treatise on English Versification, 1827, p. 8vo.

Crowell, William, born 1806, at Middlefield, Mass. Church Member's Manual, 12mo, 2d ed., 1852. Church Member's Hand Book, 1851. Also many Sunday School Books. Ed. Christian Watchman, 1838-48.

Crowfoot, Wm. Observ. on Apoplexy, Lon., 1801, 8vo.

Crowley, John. Thoughts on the Emancipation of the Roman Catholics, 1811, 8vo.

Crowley, Robert, d. 1588, a divine, poet, bookseller, and printer, was educated at, and became Fellow of, Magdalen College, Oxford. He was made Archdeacon of Hereford, and in 1558 was collated to a prebend at St. Paul's, London. In 1550 he pub. the 1st ed. of Piers Plowman's Vision, and with the same design—to expose the vices and follies of the age—he put forth 31 Epigrams. For a list of his works and notices of them, see Strype's Life of Parker and his Memorials; Tanner and Bale; Bliss's Wood's Athen. Oxon.; Warton's Hist. Eng. Poetry; Watt's Bibl. Brit.; Dibdin's Typ. Antiq.; and Lowndes's Bibl. Man.

Crowley, Thos. Life of M. de la Salle, 1751, 12mo.

Crowley, Thomas. Payment of Tithes, 1776, 8vo.

Crowne, or Crown, John, a native of Nova Scotia, obtained considerable notoriety at the court of Charles II. as a writer of plays, 18 of which are enumerated in the Biog. Dramat. Of these, The Destruction of Jerusalem, 1677, 4to, and City Politiques, 1675, 4to, seem to have been among the best. He also wrote Pandion and Amphigenia, 1665, 8vo, and Dæneids, 1672, 4to, and trans. Boileau's Lutrin.

"He may assuredly be allowed to stand at least in the third rank of our dramatic writers."—Biog. Dramat.

Crowne, Wm. Travels of the Lord Howard, Lon., 1637, 4to. Condemned, as abounding in errors and imperfections.

Crownfield, Henry. On the Scriptures, 1752, 8vo.

Crowquill, Alfred, (Alfred Henry Forrester,) b. 1806, brought up to his father's profession of Public Notary at the North Gate of the London Royal Exchange, where his family had practised the same profession for a century before. Commenced his literary career at the age of 15, by a swarm of papers in various monthly publications of the period. At the age of 20 practised drawing, with a determination to illustrate his own works, pub. Leaves from his Memorandum-Book,—a volume of comic prose and verse illustrated by himself, and various caricatures in the fashion of the day. In the same year he published Eccentric Tales, 1 vol. 8vo, illustrated by himself. In 1828 he was solicited by Mr. Colburn to join the celebrated clique of authors then engaged to produce the Humorist papers in his Magazine,—Theodore Hook, Benjamin Disraeli, and a host of others. He wrote the Humorist's introduction. He left this Magazine to join Bentley's celebrated Miscellany, with Dickens, Father Prout, Tom Ingoldsby, Dr. Maginn, &c. He was also the first illustrator of Punch and of the Illustrated News. An exhibitor of large pen-and-ink drawings at the Royal Academy. Painter in oil, from which many engravings were published. Designer and modeller. He designed the statuette of the Duke of Wellington produced a fortnight before the duke's death, which he presented to her Majesty and the allied sovereigns. The Wanderings of a Pen and Pencil; a large antiquarian book profusely illustrated. Comic English Grammar. Comic Arithmetic. Phantasmagoria of Fun, 2 vols. 8vo. Bentley Fun. A Bundle of Crowquills. Magic and Meaning It, 1 vol. Scrap Books, innumerable. Railway Raillery. St. George and the Dragon, &c. Gold; a Poem, illustrated with twelve outlines, large 4to. Absurdities, 8vo. Reproof of the Brutes, Careless Chicken, and many vols. of Fairy Tales. Engraver on steel, stone, copper, and wood. Picture Fables; new ed., 1855, 4to. Little Pilgrim, 1856, 4to.

Crowsley, John. Good Husband's Jewel, 1651, 12mo.
Crowther, Bryan, Surgeon. Profess. treatises, 1797-1811.

Crowther, J. Dissertation on Acts xvii. 30, Lon., 1822, 8vo.

Crowther, P. W. Law of Arrest, &c., Lon., 1828, 8vo.

Crowther, S. Sermon, Lon., 1814, 4to.

Crowther, S. Grammar of the Yoruba Language, Lon., 1852, 8vo; Vocabulary of do., with Introd. by Rev. Mr. Vidal, 1852, 8vo.

"It proves that a whole African race, numbering 3,000,000, exists, possessing a language highly refined and developed."—Lon. Times.

Croxall, Samuel, D.D. died 1752, educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, Archdeacon of Salop, &c. The Fair Circassian, Lon., 1720, 4to; later edita in 12mo. Fables of Æsop and others, trans. into English, 1722. Very popular. Serms., 1715-41. Scripture Politics, 1735, 8vo. He also wrote some poems, and edited the collection of Select Novels and Histories, from the French, Italian, and Spanish, printed for Watts, Lon., 1729, 6 vols. 12mo. There was no want of variety in Croxall's literary pursuits.

Cruden. Complete Family Bible, with Notes, Lon., 1770, 2 vols. fol.

"An indifferently-executed commentary."—Hornu.

This is not the publication of Alexander Cruden.

Cruden, Alexander, 1701-1770, a native of Aberdeen, educated at Marischal College, designed entering the Church, but was prevented by symptoms of insanity. In 1732 he settled in London as a permanent residence, opened a bookstore, and became a corrector to the press. He styled himself Alexander the Corrector. In 1733 he commenced the preparation of his Concordance to the Holy Scriptures, and laboured with such industry in the intervals of business, that he was able to put it to press in 1737, 4to; 2d ed., 1761, 4to; 3d ed., with improvements, 1769, 4to; 6th ed., with Life, by Alex. Chalmers, 1812, 4to; 10th ed., 1824, r. 8vo. The editor of this last ed. hopes that his "extraordinary care will obtain for this edition the high recommendation of being the most correct edition of CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE EVER PUBLISHED." But alas! for the hope of faultless typography! The editor of the Phila. reprint of 1830 professes to have discovered (and corrected) in this immaculate edition, no less than TEN THOUSAND ERRORS in the references, which had escaped the eye of the London editor!

Of Cruden's Concordance, there have been many abridgments, which profess to contain all that is valuable in the original, which makes us marvel at the stupidity of the author, who devoted so many days and nights to accumulate what we are now assured is entirely superfluous! Yet being old-fashioned in our ideas, we rather prefer having every line of this unnecessary matter.

The late Rev. Thos. Scott, author of the Commentary, partially prepared a new Concordance to the Bible. See his Life by his son. Mr. Scott remarks that "The errors and deficiencies in Cruden are tenfold more than are generally suspected."

But, on the other hand, Dr. Williams declares that "It is so complete as a Concordance that nothing remains materially deficient."—Christian Preacher.

"It is not unlikely that Cruden, corrected and improved, will still retain his place in English literature."—ORAN: Bib. Bib.

"Cruden's Concordance, or a similar work, is indispensable to ministers."

"Cruden's Concordance should be in everybody's library. It is uncommonly complete, the definitions of leading words remarkably accurate, and the references exceedingly correct."—LOWND.

Cruden also wrote An Account of the History and Excellency of the Holy Scriptures, prefixed to a Compendium of the Holy Bible; A Scripture Dictionary; an Index to Bp. Newton's edit. of Milton; The History of Richard Potter, and sundry pieces under the names of The London Citizen and Alexander the Corrector.

We notice with commendation Wm. Youngman's edit. of Cruden's Concordance, with a Compendium of the Bible, and a Brief Account of its History and Excellence, to which is added a Sketch of the Life of the Author.

Cruden, John. Address to the loyal part of the Brit. Empire, and the friends of Monarchy throughout the Globe, 8vo.

Cruden, R. P. Obser. upon Municipal Bodies in Eng. and Wales, 1826, 8vo. Hist. of Gravesend and Port of London, 1844, r. 8vo.

"This volume contains a complete history of the Thames and all that is connected with it, its Docks and Arsenals, and the great historical scenes that have been witnessed on its shores, added to an immense amount of curious information relating to the early history and progress of the navy, interesting alike to the antiquary and political economist."

Cruikshank, Brodie. Eighteen Years in the Gold Coast of Africa, Lon., 1853, 2 vols.

"One of the most interesting books that ever came into our hands."—Lon. Standard.

"It will give a fresh impulse to the efforts of philanthropy and religion."—John Bull.

Cruikshank, Thos. Practical Planter, Lon., 8vo.

Cruikshank, Geo. Salt Duties, 1734-45, 3 vols. fol.

Cruikshank, George, born in London about 1794, has attained great celebrity as an artist of rare talents, both in humour and pathos. An interesting account of his labours will be found in Men of the Time, Lon. 1853, 18mo, also in Lon. Jour., 1847, by Dr. Mackenzie; Westm. Rev., 1840; Knight's Eng. Cyc., vol. ii., Div. Biog.

Cruikshank, Jas. Treat. on Polit. Econ., 1811, 8vo.

Cruikshank, Robert, brother of George Cruikshank. Facetiae: being a Collection of all the Humorous Jeux-d'Esprit which have been illustrated by R. C., Lon., 2 vols. These vols. comprise all, from Monsieur Tonson to Margate.

Cruikshank, Wm., 1745-1800, an eminent surgeon and anatomist, was a native of Edinburgh, and successively a pupil, assistant, and partner of the celebrated Dr. Hunter. The publication of his Anatomy of the Absorbent Vessels, in 1786, 4to, secured him immediate reputation; 2d ed., 1790, 4to. He had previously pub. treatises on Absorption and Respiration, 1779, 8vo. Some of his papers were pub. in Phil. Trans and Nic. Jour. See Watt's Bibl. Brit.

Cruise, Major Richard A., Royal Army. Journal of a Ten Months' Residence in New Zealand, Lon., 1823, 8vo. Contains much information respecting the productions of New Zealand, and the manners, religion, and character of the natives.

Cruise, Wm. Fines and Recoveries, 3d ed., Lon., 1794, 2 vols. 8vo. Modelled upon Fearn's Contingent Remainders. Essay on Uses, 1795, 8vo. Digest of the Laws of England respecting Real Property, Lon., 1804-07, 7 vols. 8vo; 4th ed., by H. H. White, 1835, 7 vols. 8vo; 5th Amer. from the 4th London ed., revised, enlarged, and adapted to American Practice, by Simon Greenleaf, LL.D., Royall Prof. of Law in Harvard Univ., Boston, 1849, '50, 3 vols. 8vo.

"We are sure that Mr. Greenleaf could have performed no task which would be more generally acceptable, than this very one of winnowing the chaff from the wheat. It has been performed in a manner which will do justice to his eminent reputation. No work which has appeared for a long time will be more valuable to students, or to the profession generally."—Law Reporter.

Principles of Conveyancing, Lon., 1808, 6 vols. 8vo. Origin and Nature of Dignities or Titles of Honour, Lon., 1810, 8vo; 2d ed., 1823, r. 8vo.

"Mr. Cruise's book is an extremely useful book of reference."—LORD REDESDALE.

"With as little erroneous matter as might be expected in a book of that description."—SIR ANTHONY HART.

Crull, Jodocus, M.D. Antient and Present State of Muscovy, Lon., 1698, 2 vols. 8vo. Continuation of Puffendorf's Introd. to Hist. of Europe, 1705, 8vo. Antiquities of St. Peter in the Abbey Ch. of Westminster, 1711, 8vo; 1722, 2 vols. 8vo.

Crump, J. Protection of Brit. Commerce, 1812.

Crump, John, became minister at Maidstone about 1653, ejected for Nonconformity, 1662. The Great Supper, 1669, sm. 8vo.

Crump, W. H., a native of England, has been for many years settled in Philadelphia, where he is one of the most popular and intelligent members of the periodical press. The World in a Pocket Book, or Universal Popular Statistics, Phila., 1841, 24mo. Eighth ed., greatly enlarged and improved, with the addition of Part 2, 1855, 12mo, pp. 446.

Crumpe, Saml., M.D., of Limerick, Ireland. Opium, Lon., 1793, 8vo. Essay on the Means of Providing Employment for the People, Lon., 1793; 2d ed., 1795, 8vo. The prize proposed by the Royal Irish Academy was obtained by this essay.

"A really valuable publication. . . . The principles which pervade the work are sound; and those parts of it which have special reference to Ireland are distinguished by the absence of prejudice and by their practical good sense."—MCCULLOCH: Ed. of Phil. Econ.

Crumpe, Thomas. Orthography, Lon., 1712, 12mo.

Cruse, Peter Hoffman, 1798-1832, a native of Baltimore, contributed largely to the Reviews, and was for several years editor of the Baltimore American. Some of his poetry will be found in The Red Book, a periodical pub. in Baltimore 1818-19, by Mr. Cruse and John P. Kennedy, a favourite American author.

Crusio, Cato, M.D. Skin Disease, Phil. Trans., 1754.

Crusius, Lewis. Roman Poets, Lon., 1733, '53, 2 vols. 12mo.

Cruso, Joh. Castremation, or the measuring out the quarters for the Encamping of an Army, Lon., 1642, 4to. Medicamentorum Thesaurus, 1701, 8vo; in English, with Annotations, Glossary, and Index, 1771, 12mo.

Cruso, Timothy, 1637?-1697, a Disenting divine. Serms. 1688, '89, &c. Three vols. of Discourses, 1697, '98, '99, sm. 8vo.

"Superior sermons for matter. Cruso's works might be advantageously reprinted."—Buckminster.

Crutchley, John. Agricult. of the County of Rutland, Lon., 1795, 4to. See Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Cruttenden, David H., b. 1816, Saratoga co., N.Y.; grad. Union Coll., 1841. Author of a series of Systematic Arithmetics; Philosophy of Sentential Language; Geography and History Combined, &c.

Cruttenden, Jos. Wounded Seamen, &c., 1780, 4to.

Cruttenden, R. His Experience, Lon., 1744, 8vo.

Cruttwell, C., Surgeon. Professional treatise, Bath, 1778, 12mo.

Cruttwell, Rd. Treatise on Currency, Lon., 8vo.

Crutwell, Rev. Clement. The Scripture Harmony, or Concordance of Parallels, Lon., 1790, 4to.

"This is a very elaborate work, and will amply repay the labour of consulting; though the parallels are not always to be traced, and are sometimes very fanciful. But for this the industrious author is not to be censured, as he everywhere cites his authorities, which are very numerous."—Horne's Introduction.

Crutwell pub. an edit. of the Bible in 1785, 3 vols. 4to, with the notes of Bishop Wilson, of Sodor and Man. A Gazetteer of France, 1793, 3 vols. 12mo; of the Netherlands, 1794, 8vo. Universal Gazetteer, 1798, 3 vols. 4to. 1808, 4 vols. 8vo. Superseded by later works. Tour through Great Britain, 1801, 6 vols. 8vo. Life of Bishop Wilson, 4to.

Crutwell, Richd. Funeral Discourse, 1809.

Cruwys, H. S. Archetype of the Septuagint, 1773, 8vo.

Crymes, Thomas, alias Graham. Carmina Pro-gymnastica, Lon., 1654, 8vo. Roxburghe, 2803, £3 11s.

Cubitt, George. Scriptural Expositions, Lon., 1844, 18mo. Parables, 1840, 18mo. Sketches and Skeletons of Sermons, 18mo.

Cudmore, Daniel. Sacred Poems, Lon., 1655, 8vo.

"Written in a great variety of measure, and several of them have peculiar merit, mingled with much quaintness."—Lowndes.

Cudworth, John. Fides Eccl. Anglic., &c., Oxon., 1688, fol.

Cudworth, Ralph, 1617-1688, a native of Aller, Somersetshire, where his father was rector, was educated at Emanuel College, Cambridge, of which he became a Fellow and Tutor; Rector of North Cadbury, 1641; Master of Clare Hall, 1644; Prof. of Hebrew, 1645; Master of Christ's College, 1654; Vicar of Ashwell, Hertfordshire, 1662; Prebendary of Gloucester, 1678. The Lord's Supper, with two Sermons on the Union of Christ and the Church in a Shadow, Lon., 1642, 8vo. Cudworth's hypothesis is that the Supper is a Feast upon a Sacrifice. This opinion was revived by Bishops Warburton and Cleave, Dr. Worthington and Mr. Willets, and opposed by Dr. Bell and others.

"Cudworth's notion was adopted by many able writers, but they do not appear to the author to have proved that the supposed view was intended by our Lord."—Buckminster: Chris. Student.

Two Sermons, 1647, 4to. In 1678 he pub. his celebrated work, The True Intellectual System of the Universe; wherein the Reason and Philosophy of Atheism is confuted; fol.; 2d ed., with Life of the author by Birch, 1733, 2 vols. 4to. Abridgt. of 1st ed., 1706, 2 vols. 4to, by Rev. Thomas Wise. In Latin, by Mosheim; Jenæ, 1733, 2 vols. fol.; with improvements, Leyden, 1773, 2 vols. 4to.

"The Latin translation by Professor Mosheim is greatly to be preferred to the English original, not only for its purity and elegance, but also for its great abundance and excellence of learned notes."—Bishop Warburton.

Cudworth did not complete his whole design in the Intellectual System, but was discouraged from publishing any thing further by the misrepresentations to which his learned labours were subjected. He left several MSS., which appear to have been intended as a continuation of his design. One of these, A Treatise concerning eternal and immutable Morality, was pub. by Bishop Chandler in 1731, 8vo. A number of his MSS. are deposited in the British Museum. Cudworth's great work was elicited by the absurd, yet mischievous, principles advocated by Hobbes in the Leviathan. Being a perfectly fair and ingenious opponent, Cudworth placed the atheistic doctrines which he intended to refute in the clearest light, and stated them with such force, that, to his amazement, he found his own sincerity doubted when he proceeded to show their fallacy!

He unfortunately encumbered his argument by an admixture of Platonic philosophy, and a "wild hypothesis of a plastic nature," assumed to be the immediate instrumentality by which the Divine Being carried his purposes into execution. His fate, with some shallow minds, was that of Sir Thomas Browne—to be considered a champion of impieties, which he abhorred.

"He raised such strong objections against the being of a God and Providence, that many thought he had not answered them."—Deixen.

"Though the whole world were no less satisfied with his capacity and learning, than with his sincerity in the cause of the Deity; yet was he accused of giving the upper hand to the atheists, for having stated their reasons and those of their adversaries fairly together. . . . The common fate of those who dare to appear fair authors."—Lord Shaftesbury.

The depth of erudition displayed in the Intellectual System has been a subject of admiration to the learned of all varieties of opinion.

"It contains the greatest mass of learning and argument that ever was brought to bear on atheism. A thousand folio pages, full of learned quotations, and references to all heathen and sacred antiquity, demonstrate the fertility and laborious diligence of the author. And whoever wishes to know all that can be said respecting liberty and necessity, fate and free-will, eternal reason and justice, and arbitrary omnipotence, has only to digest the Intellectual System."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"It will at least be expedient, I had almost said necessary, to know so much of the opinions of heathen antiquity as is to be learned from those authentic documents which the industry of the indefatigable Cudworth has collected and arranged with great judgment."—Bishop Hoadley.

"Great strength of genius and a vast compass of learning."—Bishop Burnet.

"With a boldness uncommon indeed, but very becoming a man conscious of his own integrity, and of the truth and evidence of his cause, Dr. Cudworth launched out into the immensity of the Intellectual System, and at his first essay, penetrated the very darkest recesses of antiquity to strip atheism of all its disguises, and drag up the lurking monster to conviction."—Bishop Warburton.

"Like another Atlas, he carried in this work the whole World of Learning on his broad intellectual shoulders."

"The Intellectual System is an immense storehouse of facts, of arguments, and principles."

"That great master of learning and reasoning, Dr. Cudworth."—Dr. J. Pre Smith.

"The Intellectual System will forever remain a precious mine of information to those whose curiosity may lead them to study the spirit of the ancient theories."—Dugald Stewart.

"The Intellectual System is a work of stupendous erudition, and of frequent mastery over diction and illustration on subjects where it is most rare."—Sir James Mackintosh.

"Cudworth was one of those whom Hobbes had roused by the atheistic and immoral theories of the Leviathan; nor did any antagonist of that philosopher bring a more vigorous understanding to the combat."—Hallam: Literary History.

"Dr. Ralph Cudworth held the same rank in Metaphysics that Dr. Barrow did in the Sublime Geometry."—Granger's Biog. Hist.

"The Platonic philosophy was with greater accuracy and sounder judgment (than evinced by Gale) applied to the refutation of impiety by Ralph Cudworth. . . . In this important undertaking, he very successfully employed a vast fund of erudition."—Enfield's Hist. of Philosophy.

"Amongst all the early philosophical writers of our country, there is no one who displayed so complete a mastery over the metaphysical systems of antiquity, and no one who has left behind him so vast a monument of varied and accurate learning, as Ralph Cudworth, the author of the Intellectual System."—Morrell's Hist. of Modern Philosophy.

It is pleasing to reflect that to the eminent Cudworth may be added the title of good as well as great:

"An excellent and learned divine, of highest authority at home and abroad."—Lord Shaftesbury: Characteristics.

An unimpeachable authority thus enthusiastically commends Cudworth:

"He was a great man in all parts of learning, divine and human; an honour to Emanuel College, where he was educated, to Christ's College, where he afterwards presided, to the whole University of Cambridge, which he adorned; and to the church and age in which he lived."—Bishop Burnet.

Will not the University of Cambridge, thus honoured by his name, honour his memory by publishing his MSS.? How much would the world be the gainer by the reflections of so profound a thinker as Cudworth upon such subjects as "Moral Good and Evil;" "Liberty and Necessity;" "The Seventy Weeks of Daniel;" "The Creation of the World;" "The Learning of the Hebrews;" "The Notion of Hobbes concerning God and Spirits!" We feel some pride in recording the fact that an edition of The True Intellectual System of the Universe has been published in America—Andover, 1837, 2 vols. r. 8vo—and an edit. of his whole works has recently been issued in New York, 2 vols. 8vo. We must not omit to recommend to the reader the excellent edition published in London in 1845, 3 vols. 8vo, which contains the learned Notes and Dissertations of the Latin edition by Mosheim, translated by Harrison.

Cudworth, Wm. Sermons, &c., 1747, '60.

Cuff, or Cuffe, Henry, 1560?-1601, Greek Prof. at Merton College, Oxford, was executed at Tyburn as a participant of the treason of the Earl of Essex. The Difference of the Ages of Man's Life, Lon., 1607, 8vo. He left some papers evincing great learning. See Wood's Athen. Oxon.

Cuffe, Maurice. News from Munster, Lon., 1642, 4to.
Cutt, George. Hist. of Chester, 1815, 8vo. Etchings of Ancient Buildings, 1816, fol. Wanderings and Pencilings amongst Ruins of the Olden Time, 1848, r. fol. "These plates are etched with great freedom, and remind us of the etchings of Rome, (by Pyramess.) to which they come nearer than any modern work of British Art of a similar class."—Lon. Times.

Culbertson, Robert. Sermon, 1817. Lectures on the Prophecies of St. John, 1818, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Rather tedious, but always sensible."—Orms.
"The production of a man of no ordinary endowments."—Lon. Congregational Mag.

"One of the most judicious expositions of the Book of Revelation."—Lon. Eclectic Rev.

Culham, B. P. The Fig Leaf; a Poem, 3d ed., 1805.

Cull, Francis. Sermon, Lon., 1732, 8vo.

Cull, Richard. Garrick's mode of reading the Liturg; new ed., Lon., 1840, 8vo.

Cullen, Arch. Principles of the Bankrupt Law, 1800. "Written with brevity and distinctness; omitting nothing that is material, and introducing nothing that is unimportant."—Lon. Monthly Review.

Cullen, C. S. The Bankrupt Court, 1830.

Cullen, Charles. Chemical Analysis of Wolfram, Lon., 1785, 8vo. History of Mexico, 1787, 2 vols. 4to.

Cullen, Edmund, M.D. Phys. and Chem. Essays, 1785-91.

Cullen, Margaret, daughter of Dr. Cullen, of Edinburgh, q. v. Home; a Novel, 1803, 5 vols. Morton; a Novel, 1814, 3 vols. 12mo.

Cullen, Michael. Churchwarden's Guide, Dubl., 1823.

Cullen, Paul, R. C. Archbishop of Armagh, consecrated Feb. 24, 1850, has written a work, "affirming the immutability of the earth, on the ground of his interpretation of the theological records."—Men of the Time, Lon., 1853.

Cullen, Stephen. The Castle of Inchvally; a Tale, alas! too true, 1796, 3 vols. 12mo. The Haunted Priory, 8vo.

Cullen, Wm., M.D., 1712-1790, a native of Lanarkshire, made several voyages to the West Indies as surgeon in a London trading vessel. He afterwards settled at Shotts, where he entered into copartnership with Dr. Wm. Hunter. In 1746 Cullen was appointed Lecturer on Chemistry in the University of Glasgow, and in 1751 became King's Professor of Medicine. In 1756 he accepted the chair of Chemistry in the Univ. of Edinburgh, and in 1763 succeeded Dr. Alston as Professor of Medicine. When obliged by physical infirmity to resign his office to Dr. Black, he became associated with Dr. Gregory in the lectures on the practice of physic. Synopsis Nosologiae Methodice in usum Studiosorum, Edin., 1769, 8vo; many edits.; the best by Dr. John Thompson, 1814, 8vo. Lectures on the Materia Medica, Lon., 1772, 4to; pub. without the author's consent; reprinted with his permission, 1773, 4to; Cullen's own edit., 1789, 2 vols. 4to. The last is the edit. to be sought for. It is still one of the best works on the subject. The Recovery of the Drowned, Edin., 1775, 8vo. First Lines of the Practice of Physic, Edin., 1776-83, 4 vols. 8vo; many edits. Dr. Rotherham's, Edin., 1796, 4 vols. 8vo; several edits. by Dr. P. Reid; last, 1816, 2 vols. 8vo. The 7th edit. in 2 vols. 8vo, with Notes, was pub. by Dr. Gregory. Clinical Lectures, 1765, '66, pub. by an auditor, Lon., 1797, 8vo; by John Thompson, Edin., 1814, 8vo. Of Cold; Ess. Phys. and Lit., 2 p., cxlv., 1756. This tract is also pub. with some Experiments by Dr. Black, Edin., 1776-82.

The amiability of Dr. Cullen's character elicited the love, whilst his professional attainments commanded the respect, of his associates and the public at large. See his Life by Dr. Anderson in The Bee, vol. 1.

Culley, George, 1734-1813. Observations on Live Stock, Lon., 1786, 8vo. Agricult. of Northumberland, 1797, 8vo; in conjunction with J. Bailey.

"The treatise on live stock has ever been very justly esteemed, and the county survey shows an enlightened mind."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Culloch, Mc. See McCULLOCH.

Cullum, Sir Dudley. Sove; Phil. Trans., 1694.

Cullum, Rev. Sir John, 1738-1785, Fellow of St. Catherine Hall, Cambridge; Rector of Hawstead, 1763; Vicar of Great Thurlow, 1774. The Hist. and Antiq. of Hawstead and Hardwick, Suffolk; 2d ed., with Notes by his brother, Sir Thomas Gery Cullum, Lon., 1813, r. 4to. 200 copies printed. The 1st ed. was pub. in Nichols's Bib.

Top. Brit.; see No. 23. A Remarkable Frost, Phil. Trans., 1784. See Nichols's Literary Anecdotes.

Cullum, Sir Thomas Gery. Con. to Med. Obs. and Inq., 1794. Mem. Med., 1792. See article next above.

Culley, John. Gent. and Farmer's Assistant, Lon., 1798, 12mo.

"Usefully compiled."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Tables for Gentlemen, Farmers, &c., Norw., 1803, 12mo.

Culmer, Rev. Richard. Cathedral News from Canterbury, Lon., 1644, 4to.

"A most vile pamphlet."—Fasti Oxon.

Dean and Chapter News from Canterbury, 1649, 4to.

Minister's Hue and Cry, 1651, 4to. Lawless Tithe Robbers Discovered, 1655, 4to.

"Mr. Richard Culmer was an ignorant person, and with his ignorance one of the most daring schismatics in all that country, [Kent]."—ARCHBISHOP LAUD.

See an account of Culmer—"Blue Dick of Thanet"—in Wood's Fasti Oxon.

Culpepper, Sir John. Speech in Parliament, 1641, fol.

Culpepper, Nathaniel. Almanack, Camb., 1686, 8vo.

Culpepper, Nicholas, 1616-1654, "student in Physic and Astrology," was a violent opponent of the Royal College of Physicians. He pub. a number of works on Medicine, Medical Botany, Astrology, the Aurum Potabile, &c.: see Watt's Bib. Brit. His English Physician, 1652, fol., has passed through many editions. His Herbal is not without merit:

"His descriptions of common plants are drawn up with a clearness and distinction that would not have disgraced a better pen."—DR. PULTNEY.

Culpepper, Sir Thomas. Moral Discourses and Essays, Lon., 1655, 8vo. He pub. several tracts upon Usury, 1661-71, urging the reduction of the rate of interest. See McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Economy.

Culros, Lady Eliz. M. Ane Godlie Dreame compyllit in Scottish meter, Edin., 1603, 4to.

"Lady Culros's Dreame was long popular among the Scottish Presbyterians."—DR. LYTDEN.

Armstrong states in his Essays that he recollected having heard it sung by the peasants to a plaintive air.

Culverhouse, C. Bread Laws, Lon., 1815, 8vo.

Culverwell, Ezekiel, a Puritan divine. Treatise of Faith, Lon., 1629, 12mo. A Blessed Estate, 1633, 12mo. Meditations, 1634, 12mo.

Culverwell, Nath. Light of Nature, &c., 1652, 4to.

Culy, David. Theolog. works, Boston, 1787, 12mo.

Cumberland, Earls of. See CLIFFORD, GEORGE, HENRY.

Cumberland, Denison, Bishop of Clonfert, Ireland, 1763; of Kilmore, 1772. Sermon on Luke xv. 10, 1764, 4to; on John xvi. 2, 3, 1765, 4to.

Cumberland, George. Anecdotes of the Life of Julio Bonafoni; with a cat. of his Engravings, Lon., 1793, 8vo. Lewina, &c., 1793, 4to. Hafod, and the neighbouring scenes, &c., 1796, 8vo. Orig. Tales, 1810, 2 vols. Con. to Nic. Jour., 1807, '10, '11.

Cumberland, Richard, 1632-1718, Fellow of Magdalen College, Cambridge; Rector of Bampton; presented to the living of All-hallows, Stamford, 1667; Bishop of Peterborough, 1691. 1. De Legibus Naturæ Disquisitio Philosophica, &c., et Elementorum Philosophiæ Hobbianæ Refutatio, Lon., 1672, fol. Lub. et Francf., 1683, 4to. In English by J. Maxwell, Lon., 1727, 4to. Abridged in English by T. Tyrrell, Lon., 1692, 8vo. Trans. with Notes by Rev. John Towers, Dubl., 1750, 4to. In French by Barbeyrac, Amst., 1744, 4to.

"Ce livre est un des meilleurs sur le droit naturel, quoique un peu abstrait."

This work, like most others upon the same difficult subject, has been superseded by Rutherford's Institutes of Natural Law, (Lon., 1754-56, 2 vols. 8vo.)

"Which we think decidedly preferable to any other production on that topic, with which we are acquainted."—Hoffman's Legal Study, 112.

2. An Essay towards the Recovery of Jewish Weights and Measures, 1685, 8vo.

"It discovers great sagacity, learning, and research. The subject is attended with many difficulties, which the bishop of Peterborough combats, perhaps as successfully as could reasonably be expected. The work was attacked by Bernard in a Latin work on the same subject, published two years after; but it is highly spoken of by Le Clerc."—Orms: Bib. Bib.

"A good treatise on the subject."—BICKERSTETH: Chris. Student.

3. Sanchoniatho's Hist. of the Phœnicians, trans. from Eusebius de Preparatione Evangelica, with a continuation of it by Eratosthenes Cyranæus, his Canon, &c., 1720, 8vo, posth.

"A curious and learned work. . . . Perhaps there are more learning and labour thrown away on these fragments, than their importance deserves."—Orms, ubi supra.

4. Origines Gentium Antiquissimæ; or Attempts for discovering the time of the first planting of nations, 1724, 8vo, posth.

"Many curious and obscure particulars are embraced in this work. They are very similar to some of the investigations of Michæls and Bochart, and are pursued with similar ingenuity and diligence."—Ibid.

"See especially Tract iv., Concerning the possibility of a sufficient increase of men from the three sons of Noah, to a number large enough to found all the nations mentioned in the oldest credible histories," &c.—McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Economy, 253.

The pastoral industry, affectionate zeal, and fervent piety of Bishop Cumberland, were as conspicuous as his learning and theological acumen.

Cumberland, Richard, 1732-1811, was son of Denison Cumberland, Bishop of Kilmore, grandson of the celebrated Dr. Bentley, and great-grandson of the Bishop of Peterborough. He was educated at Westminster and Trinity College, Cambridge. He became secretary to Lord Halifax, and in 1780 was employed on a secret mission to Spain and Portugal, which resulted in a loss of credit and money. A debt of £5000, expended by him for the public service, was disowned by the ministry, and Cumberland was obliged to part with his patrimony, and retire to Tunbridge Wells, where he devoted himself entirely to those literary pursuits which had been a source of recreation in better days. We notice some of his principal productions. His comedies of The West Indian, The Wheel of Fortune, The Jew, and The Fashionable Lover, were most favourably received, and possess unquestionable merit. He displays a higher tone of morality than dramatic literature can always claim, and Goldsmith did not hesitate to style him "The Terence of England, the mender of Hearts."

His novels, Arundel, Henry, and John de Lancaster, are devoid of that vivacity and sprightliness which constitute the soul of fiction. How far his female readers may have resented a characteristic noticed by an eminent authority, we shall not pretend to determine:

"He had a peculiar taste in love affairs, which induced him to reverse the natural and useful practice of courtship, and to throw upon the softer sex the task of wooing, which is more gracefully, as well as naturally, the province of the man."—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

He pub. several theological tracts, a Version of Fifty of the Psalms of David, The Exodiad, and a poem entitled Calvary, or the Death of Christ. His Anecdotes of Eminent Painters in Spain during the 16th and 17th centuries, abound in interesting and curious information. In 1785 he pub. in 2 vols. the series of Essays under the title of The Observer, enlarged in 1786, pub. in 5 vols. in 1790, and in 1803 incorporated with the British Classics.

"The Observer, though the sole labour of an individual, is yet rich in variety, both of subject and manner: in this respect, indeed, as well as in literary interest, and fertility of invention, it may be classed with the Spectator and Adventurer. If inferior to the latter in grandeur of action, or to the former in delicate irony and dramatic unity of design, it is wealthier in its literary fund than either, equally moral in its views, and as abundant in the creation of incident. I consider it, therefore, with the exception of the papers just mentioned, as superior, in its powers of attraction, to every other periodical composition."—Dr. Drake's Essays, vol. v.

His last work, pub. in the year of his death, is entitled Retrospection, a Poem in Familiar Verse. The work by which he will be best known to posterity is his Memoirs, interspersed with Anecdotes and Characters of the Most Distinguished Persons of his Time, 1806, 4to. Supp., 1807, 4to. With Illustrative Notes, edited by Henry Flanders, [see p. 602, post.] Phila., 1856, 8vo.

"It is indeed one of the author's most pleasing works, and conveys a very accurate idea of his talents, feelings, and character, with many powerful sketches of the age which has passed away."—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Cuming, Patrick. Serm., 1746, 8vo; do., 1760, 8vo.

Cuming, Ralph, M.D. Amanuensis Med. et Chir., Lon., 1806, 8vo.

Cuming, Wm., M.D., 1714-1788, of Dorchester, England, pub. nothing himself, but aided in Hutchin's Hist. of Dorset, and in other publications.

Cumings, Henry, D.D., of Billerica, Mass., died 1823. Fourteen Discourses, pub. separately, 1783, &c.

Cumming, Alex., of Boston, Mass., died 1763. Serm. preached at his own installation, 1761.

"It is a specimen of his talents, and of his regard to the truths of his gospel."—Swail's Pulp. Serm.

Cumming, Alex., d. 1814. Clock and Watch Work, Lon., 1766, 4to. Gravitation, Edin., 1803, 4to. Broad Wheels of Carriages, 1804, 4to.

Cumming, James. Feltham's Resolves, with an account of the author, Lon., 1806, 8vo.

Cumming, John, D.D., b. 1810, a native of Aberdeenshire, Scotland. In 1832 he became minister of the Scotch Church in Crown Court, Covent-Garden, London. "He has distinguished himself as a popular preacher, an acute and skilful controversialist, and a diligent and successful author." Many pages might be quoted in commendation of his works, although they have not escaped severe criticism. His writings are so numerous that a mere enumeration of titles demands more space than we can well afford.

1. Church of Scotland. 2. Apocalyptic Sketches. 3. Lectures on the Seven Churches. 4. Lect. on Christ's Miracles. 5. Lect. on the Parables. 6. Lect. on Daniel. 7. The Finger of God. 8. Christ our Passover. 9. The Comforter. 10. A Message from God. 11. The Great Sacrifice. 12. Christ receiving Sinners. 13. Is Christianity from God? 14. Sab. M. Readings on Genesis. 15. On Exodus. 16. On Leviticus. 17. Benedictions. 18. Voices of the Night. 19. Of the Day. 20. Of the Dead. 21. God in History. 22. Infant Salvation. 23. The Baptismal Font. 24. Lectures for the Times. 25. Christian Patriotism. 26. The Communion-Table. 27. Almost Protestant, &c.: 4 Lectures. 28. The Church before the Flood. The following numbers, 29 to 36 inclusive, have been pub. in a vol., under the title of Occasional Discourses: 29. Liberty. 30. Equality. 31. Fraternity. 32. The Revolutionists. 33. The True Charter. 34. The True Succession. 35. Psalm for the Day; Expos. of Ps. xci. 36. Thanksgiving; Expos. of Ps. ciii. 37. Our Father; a Week's Family Prayers. 38. An edit. of The Pulpit Psalm Book; Church of Scotland. 39. An edit. of Fox's Book of Martyrs. 40. An edit. of Albert Barnes's Notes. 41. Trans. of the last French edit. of Bonaventure's Psalter of the Blessed Virgin. 42. Discussion upon Protestantism, with Daniel French, Esq., held at Hammersmith in April and May, 1839. 43. The Tent and the Altar. 44. Daily Family Devotion, 4to. Other works.

The sale of Dr. Cumming's works has exceeded that of the productions of any other theological writer of the day.

"The Rev. John Cumming is now the great pulpit orator of London, as Edward Irving was some twenty years since. But very different is the doctor from that strange, wonderfully eloquent, but erratic man. There could not by possibility be a greater contrast. The one all fire, enthusiasm, and semi-madness; the other a man of chastened energy and convincing calmness. The one like a meteor, flashing across the troubled sky, and then vanishing suddenly in the darkness; the other like a silver star, shining serenely, and illuminating our pathway with its steady ray."

"Often have we heard Dr. Cumming, but never without having noticed that he referred either to the Apocalyptic mysteries or to Papacy. These are his two great topics. . . . By many able persons it is considered that Dr. Cumming is mistaken in many of the predictions which he utters, and that his great abilities are wasted on mysteries which, after all, are unattainable by mortal mind."—Figures of Popular English Preachers, ed. 1862, 18-28, q.v.

"Careful research, acute argument, brilliant illustration, graphic description, and eloquent appeal, all unite in enriching and embellishing his papers, [Lectures for the Times], alluring the most indifferent to read, and compelling the most prejudiced against his views to pause and consider."—Edinburgh Ecclesiastical Journal.

Cumming, Preston. Dictionary of Congregational Principles, Boston, 1852, 12mo.

Cumming, R. G. Five Years' Lion Hunting in South Africa, Lon., 2 vols. p. 8vo; 2d ed., 1850.

"It is difficult to lay the volumes down until the issue of each adventure, as they rapidly follow one another, has been ascertained."—Lon. Quart. Review.

Cummings, Abr., 1755-1827. Theolog. treatises.

Cummings, George. Sermon, Lon., 1713, 8vo.

Cummings, Jacob A., 1773-1820, of Boston, pub. a number of popular educational works.

Cummings, Maria, an American authoress. The Lamplighter, Boston, 1854, 12mo. So great is the popularity of this work, that 40,000 copies were issued within eight weeks from its first publication, and seventy thousand in about a twelvemonth.

"There is to us a charm about this story which we cannot fully express. . . . We thank Miss Cummings heartily for the pleasure she has given, and is yet to give, to thousands of readers. May her present success—deserved alike by the merits of her book and her motive in writing it—stimulate her to further and to more successful exertions!"—Norton's Lit. Gazette.

Mabel Vaughan, Bost., 1857, 12mo.

"It is a charming story, to which the character of 'Rose' gives the same interest and beauty which little 'Gertrude' and the old 'Lamplighter' gave to the author's first production; while, considered as a piece of literary mechanism, it is more finished and better sustained. The interest of the story does not flag, and its arrangement and execution are far in advance of 'The Lamplighter'."

Cummings, R. T. Church of Ireland, 12mo.

Cummingy, Mrs. Susannah. Estelle, Lon., 1798, 2 vols. 12mo. Juvenile Biography, or the Lives of Little Children, 1801, 2 vols. 12mo.

Cuninghame, Alex. Dissertatio Medica de Epilepsia, Lugd. Bat., 1725, 4to.

Cuninghame, David. Dissertatio Medica de Dysenteria, Tr. ad Rh., 1725, 4to.

Cunninghame, James. Warnings, Lon., 1711, 8vo.
Cunninghame, Wm. Evidences, Lon., 1804, 12mo.
 Levi's Diss. on Prophecies, 1810, 8vo. Apostasy of the Church of Rome, 1818, 8vo. Seals and Trumpets of the Apocalypse, &c., 1813, 8vo; 4th ed., 1843, 8vo.

"Few works which have lately appeared on the Apocalypse have higher claims to the character of research and ingenuity. Many of his remarks on the seals and trumpets are original and well supported."—OWEN.

"A soberly written and truly valuable work."—T. H. HORN.

See Lon. Christian Observer, xiii. 163-180.

"This work contains much valuable instruction, just application and true exposition. . . . All of Mr. C.'s works deserve consideration."—BICKERSTETH: see Christian Student and Guide to the Prophecies.

This learned layman has pub. several other valuable theological works.

"Mr. Cunningham deserves well of every friend to revelation for his zeal and perseverance in defending its evidence and illustrating its subjects."—OWEN: Bib. Bib.

Cunn, Samuel. Mathemat. works, Lon., 1714-45.

Cunningham, Alexander, 1654-1737? a native of Ettrick, Scotland, was British Envoy to Venice, 1715-20. The celebrated criticisms on Horace, pub. in 1721, 2 vols. 8vo, and some remarks on Virgil, pub. 1742, have been attributed to this person, but there seems to be but little doubt that the annotations in question are to be ascribed to another Alexander Cunningham, who died at the Hague in 1730. See Chalmers's Biog. Diet. and Scots' Mag. for Oct., 1804. The subject of this article wrote The History of Great Britain from 1688 to the Accession of George I. Trans. from the Latin into English, by Rev. Dr. Wm. Thomson, and pub. by Rev. Dr. Thos. Hollingberry.

"It contains many curious anecdotes and facts not to be found in other histories, and which throw new light on several important transactions in this kingdom."

Cunningham, Allan, 1785-1842, a native of Blackwood, near Dalswinton, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, was the son of a gardener. He was apprenticed to his uncle, a country mason, but feeling dissatisfied with this position, he removed in 1810 to London, where he became connected with the newspaper press. In 1814 he was so fortunate as to obtain the situation of Clerk and overseer of the establishment of the celebrated sculptor, Sir Francis Chantrey. This association was only dissolved by the death of Sir Francis in November, 1841. Cunningham survived his friend and patron less than a twelvemonth. He industriously devoted his leisure time to those literary pursuits for which he had a strong natural predilection, and obtained an honourable position among the celebrities of the day. Among his earlier compositions were many of the pieces in Cromek's Remains of Nithsdale and Galloway Song, pub. in 1810; q. v. In 1822 appeared his dramatic poem of Sir Marmaduke Maxwell.

"Many parts of the poetry are eminently beautiful. . . . The suit which, I think, attaches to Lord Maxwell, is a want of distinct precision and intelligibility about the story, which counteracts, especially with ordinary readers, the effect of beautiful and forcible diction, poetical imagery, and animated description."—Sir Walter Scott's Letters to the Author.

2. Traditionary Tales of the Peasantry, 1822, 2 vols.

3. Lord Roldan; a Romance, 3 vols. 4. Sir Michael Scott; a Romance, 3 vols. 5. Paul Jones; a Romance, 3 vols.

"It has established the author's character as one of the most distinguished writers in the province of fiction."—Lon. N. Monthly Mag.

6. The Maid of Elwar; a Romance. 7. Songs of Scotland, Ancient and Modern, with an Essay and Notes, historical and literary, 1825, 4 vols. cr. 8vo.

"The Ettrick Shepherd has collected not a few of those things," said Scott, "and I suppose many snatches of song may yet be found." Cunningham: "I have gathered many such things myself, Sir Walter, and as I still propose to make a collection of all Scottish songs of poetic merit, I shall work up many of my stray verses and curious anecdotes in the notes." Scott: "I am glad that you are about such a thing; any help which I can give you, you may command; ask me any questions, no matter how many, I shall answer them if I can. Don't be timid in your selection; our ancestors fought boldly, spoke boldly, and sang boldly too." See Cunningham's Recollections of Scott, in Lockhart's Biography of Sir Walter.

8. Lives of the Most Eminent British Painters, Sculptors, and Architects, 1829-33, 6 vols. 12mo. In Murray's Family Library. Perhaps the most popular of Cunningham's works.

"The critical observations profusely scattered through these Biographies will render them useful to the student, while the personal anecdotes with which they abound make them equally alluring to the ordinary reader."

9. Biog. and Crit. Hist. of the Literature of the last Fifty Years; pub. in the London Athenæum for 1833; repub. in Paris, 8vo. 10. The Works of Robert Burns, with a New Life and Notes, 1834; 2d edit., 1835, 8 vols. 8vo. This edition is highly commended. 11. Biog. and Crit. Dissertations to Major's Cabinet Gallery of Pictures, 1833-34, 2 vols. r. 8vo; 73 beautiful engravings.

"A magnificent work, and a treasury of instructive criticism."—Dr. Diddin's Reminiscences.

Only two days before his death Cunningham completed, 12. The Life, Journals, and Correspondence of his friend Sir David Wilkie, pub. in 1843, in 3 vols. 8vo. Sir Robert Peel had remarked,

"If ever Sir David Wilkie's correspondence shall see the light, it will, I am confident, serve to add to the honour in which he is already held, from the devotion which is manifest to his art, and the generosity which it testifies towards every competitor."

It is no small praise conferred by a London journal of high authority, that "Mr. Allan Cunningham has done justice to his subject, and produced a work of great interest and utility."—Gentleman's Mag.

In addition to the works noticed above, we should not omit to record the fact that, Mr. Cunningham was a contributor to the excellent Conversation Lexicon, pub. by Blackie & Son, of Edinburgh, in 28 parts, and to several of the periodicals of the day. In 1847 an edit. of his Poems and Songs was pub. by his son, Mr. Peter Cunningham.

"The works of the most tender and pathetic of the Scottish minstrels, in a cheap and elegant form."—Blackwood's Mag.

Many interesting particulars, letters, &c. relative to our author will be found in Lockhart's Life of Sir Walter Scott, with an extract from which, and a few lines from a distinguished female critic, we must conclude our article:

"November 14.—We breakfasted at honest Allan Cunningham's—honest Allan—a real and true Scotchman of the old cast. A man of genius, besides, who only requires the tact of knowing when and where to stop, to attain the universal praise which ought to follow it. I look upon the alteration of 'It's hame and it's hame,' and 'A wet sheet and a flowing sea,' as among the best songs going. His prose has often admirable passages; but he is obscure, and overlays his meaning, which will not do now-a-days, when he who runs must read."—Sir Walter Scott's Diary.

"His ballads and lyrical pieces are exquisite in feeling, chaste and elegant in style, graceful in expression, and natural in conception; they will bear the strictest and most critical inspection of those who consider elaborate flourish to be, at least, the second requisite of the writers of song."—Mrs. Hall.

Cunningham, Francis. Origin against Celsus, Camb., 1812, 8vo. Letter to Lord Bexley, 1827, 8vo.

Cunningham, Francis. Trans. of Gieseler's Text-Book of Ecclesiastical History, Lon., 1842, 3 vols. 8vo. See DAVIDSON, REV. SAMUEL, LL.D.

"I prefer Gieseler's to any other Church history."—PAGE, BRUNN.

Cunningham, G. Cheerful Companion; Songs, Catches, and Glees, 1797.

Cunningham, George Godfrey. Foreign Tales and Traditions, Lon., 2 vols. 12mo. Editor of A History of England in the Lives of Englishmen; last edit., 1853, 8 vols. 8vo, Lon. and Edin. This excellent work is beyond all praise. We have occasionally been indebted to its learned and attractive pages, as the reader will observe by the references in the present work. We should dwell longer upon its merits, but that we find ready for our purpose the following eulogies from sources of a higher character than we can claim:

"In originality and excellence of plan, this work is entitled to command an extensive sale. The matter for copiousness and condensation, and the style for clearness, vigour, and impartiality, are eminently distinguished. The introductions are excellent, and not unworthy of our very best constitutional writers."—Lon. Monthly Review.

"Embodying the history of England in the lives of Englishmen, and the nearest approach, compatible with truth, to the historical plays of Shakspeare, and the historical novels of Scott. We warmly recommend the work as a mine of valuable information presented in the most attractive form."—Tait's Edin. Mag.

Cunningham, Isabella, Countess of Glencairn. A Letter to the Rt. Hon. Spencer Perceval, Bristol, 1812, 4to.

Cunningham, J. W., Vicar of Harrow. World without Souls, Lon., 1805, 12mo; many edits. Essay on Introduct. Christianity in India, 1808, 8vo. The Velvet Cushion, 1814, 8vo; many edits. It excited much controversy. Morning Thoughts, 1825, 12mo. De Rance; a Poem, 8vo. Serms., 3d edit., 1823, 2 vols. 8vo, and 1824: Lectures on Jonah. Other works.

Cunningham, James. Essay upon the Inscription of Macduff's Crosse in Fyfe. By I. C., Edin., 1678, 4to; also attributed to James Carmichael.

"A learned essay."—BISHOP NICOLSON: Scot. Hist. Lib.

In Floridum Asaphensem Episcopum, Scotorum Reges, Regnum, Ritus sacros, &c., 1685.

A writer "who slew the Bishop of St. Asaph in verse." Vide Bp. Nicolson, ubi supra.

Cunningham, James. Voyage to China, &c.; in Phil. Trans., 1702; and in Harris's Voyages, i. 852. Con. to Phil. Trans., 1700-03.

Cunningham, Major James. Brigade of Infantry 1804, 4to. The Tactics of the British Army, 1804, 4to.

Cunningham, John, 1729-1773, a native of Dublin, an actor, gained considerable reputation as a poet.

Love in a Mist; a Farce. Dublin, 1747. Elegy on a Pile of Ruins. The Contemplative; a Night Piece, 1762, 4to. Fortune; an Apologue, 1765, 4to. Poems, chiefly Pastoral, Lon., 1766, 8vo; Edin., 1781, 12mo.

Cunningham, John. Copernican System, Lon., 1789, 8vo.

Cunningham, Sir John, a lawyer and antiquary, wrote notes on that part of Antonine's Itinerary which respects Scotland. See Nicolson's Scot. Hist. Lib.

Cunningham, Capt. Joseph D. A History of the Sikhs, Lon., 1849, 8vo.

"A more systematic history of the sect called Sikhs than we had hitherto obtained from the many interesting sketches which have appeared on the subject."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

Cunningham, Josh. Eccles. Courts in Ireland, 1834.

Cunningham, Josias. Miscell. Poems, 1764, fol.

Cunningham, Lady Margaret, a part of her Life; edited by C. K. Sharpe, Edin., 1826, 4to. Privately printed.

Cunningham, Peter, surgeon R. N. Hints for Australian Emigrants, Lon., 1841, p. 8vo. Two Years in New South Wales, 1828, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

"The best book of general information that has been written on that interesting country."—Lon. Monthly Mag.

Essays on Electricity, Lon., 1834, p. 8vo.

Cunningham, Peter, b. 1816, in Pimlico, eldest son of Allan Cunningham, (ante), and a son-in-law of John Martin, the painter, became a junior-clerk in the Audit-Office in 1834, and a chief-clerk in 1854. 1. The Life of Drummond of Hawthornden, Lon., 1835, 12mo. 2. Songs of England and Scotland, 1835, 2 vols. 12mo. 3. Campbell's Spec. of the Brit. Poets, &c., 1841, r. 8vo. 4. The Hand-Book for Visitors to Westminster Abbey, 1842, fp. 8vo.

"A very complete and intelligent guide."—Lon. Spectator.

5. The Life of Inigo Jones, 1848. 6. Hand-Book of London, 1849, 2 vols. p. 8vo; 2d ed., 1850, p. 8vo.

"The extraordinary research displayed by the author gives his work a literary charm which is a novelty in a dictionary."—Chambers's Edin. Jour.

7. Modern London, 1851, fp. 8vo; 3d ed., 1854, fp. 8vo.

"It is one of the excellencies of this little volume that wherever genius has left a footprint Mr. Cunningham's sympathies induce him to guide us to the track."—Lon. Quar. Rev., April, 1854.

8. The Story of Nell Gwynne, &c., 1852, p. 8vo. 9. Presbyterial Memoir of J. M. W. Turner, prefixed to John Burnet's Turner and his Works, 1852, 4to. 10. The Works of Oliver Goldsmith, 1854, 4 vols. 8vo.

"Mr. Cunningham, whose scrupulous exactness is generally known, has furnished the first complete and accurate reprint of Goldsmith. Numerous errors which had crept into previous editions are corrected, omitted passages are restored, and entire pieces have been added. . . . The new edition of the works of Goldsmith forms part of a series of the British Classics which is undoubtedly the best selected and edited, the cheapest and the handsomest, that has ever issued from the press."—Lon. Quar. Rev., Oct. 1854.

11. Johnson's Lives of the Most Eminent English Poets, &c., 1854, 3 vols. 8vo. An excellent edition. 12. The Works of Alexander Pope: see CROKER, RT. HON. JOHN WILSON, D.C.L. 13. The Letters of Horace Walpole, Earl of Orford, &c., 1857-58, 9 vols. 8vo: see ATHEN., 1857, '58. Mr. Cunningham has contributed a number of articles to Fraser's Mag. Household Words, The Athenæum, Illustr. London News, &c.

Cunningham, Timothy. Tithes, 4th ed., Lon., 1777, 8vo. Bills of Exchange, 6th ed., 1778, 8vo. Super-added. Merchant's Lawyer, 3d ed., 1768, 2 vols. 8vo. Law Dict., 3d ed., 1782, '83, 2 vols. 4to. A useful work for obsolete words in charters, &c., Laws resp. Game, 1764, 12mo. Cases in K. B., 1766, fol. Pleadings in Actions, 1771, 4to. Customs, &c., 3d ed., 1778, 8vo. Inns of Court and Chancery, 1780, 8vo, and 1790. Rights of Election, 1783, 2 vols. 8vo. Law of Simony, 1784, 8vo. Laws and Constitution, 1763, 8vo. Lord Ward's Justices of the Peace, 1762, 2 vols. 8vo.

Cunningham, Wm., M.D. Lecturer in 1565 at Surgeons' Hall, London. The Cosmographical Glasse, Lon., 1559, fol. Almanack, 1566, 8vo and 16mo. Comment on Hippocrates, &c.

Cunningham, Wm., D.D. Veto Act, Edin., 1840, 8vo. Speech, 1841.

Cunningham, James. Explication of Thrissel's Banner. With a Plate of the Banner, 1640, 4to.

Cunningham, Wm. Principles of the Constitution of Governments, with Illustrations from the Classics, Lon., 1811, 4to; 1813, 8vo.

Cunynghame, Alex. Sermon, 1770, 8vo.

Cupper, Wm. Certain Sermons, Lon., 1592, 8vo.

Curate, Jacob. Scotch Presb. Eloquence, Lon., 1692, 4to.

Curling, Thomas B., Assist. Surg. to the London Hospital. Diseases of the Testis, &c., Lon., 1843, 8vo. A Treatise on Tetanus, 1836, 8vo.

"The best monograph extant on tetanus."—Annals of Med. Diseases of the Rectum; 2d ed., 8vo.

Curll, Edmund, d. 1748, a London bookseller, is embalmed in the bitter herbs of the Dunciad. Curlium Displayed, Lon., 1712, 12mo. Atterburyana, 1727, 12mo. Court Secrets, 1727, 12mo. The unfortunate bibliopole lost his ears for publishing some licentious pieces. If the same justice were now meted out to the cray, many privateers would be in danger of capture.

Curll, Walter, Bishop of Winchester. Serm., Lon., 1622, 4to; repub. in 1712, 8vo, with Some Account of Walter, Bishop of Winchester, &c.

Curry, Edward. Van Diemen's Land, Lon., 1820, 12mo. See Articles on the Australian Colonies, and notices on the above "excellent work" in the Lon. Quart. and the Westm. Reviews.

Curry, John. The Practical Coal Viewer and Engine Builder's Companion, 1797, 4to.

Curran, John Philpot, 1750-1817, an eminent member of the Irish Bar and House of Commons, was a native of Newmarket, near Cork. He succeeded Mr. Ponsonby as Master of the Rolls, and retired in 1814 on a pension of £3000 per annum. "He animated every debate with all his powers. He was copious, splendid, full of wit, and life, and ardour." Speeches, Dublin, 1805, 8vo; 1808; new ed., with a Memoir, 1845, 8vo; do., 1847. Life by his son, W. H. Curran, 1819, 2 vols. 8vo. Letters to Rev. H. Weston, 1819, 8vo. Memoirs of, by Wm. O'Regan, 1817, 8vo. Recollections of, by Charles Phillips, 1818, 8vo; 4th ed., 1851, 8vo.

"Certainly one of the most extraordinary pieces of biography ever produced. Nothing can be more lively and picturesque than its representation of the famous original. The reader can hardly be said not to have known Curran and Curran's contemporaries. It has been justly said of this admirable work that it is Boswell minus Boswell."—LORD BROUGHAM.

The Life of Curran, by his Son, (ut supra), was republished in New York in 1819, and again in 1855, edited by Dr. R. Shelton Mackenzie, with considerable additions, &c.

Curran, Collection of Sentences, 1732.

Curry, C. The Four Gospels exhibited as one continued Narrative, Lon., 1834, 4to.

"An unassuming but neatly executed volume."—T. H. HORN.

Curry, George. Hulsean Lectures, 1851, Camb., 1851, 8vo.

Currie, James, M.D., 1756-1805, a native of Dumfriesshire, Scotland, practised medicine at Edinburgh and Liverpool, and finally settled at Bath on account of ill health. Letter to Pitt, commercial and political, by J. Wilson, 1793. Water in Fever, 1797, 8vo; 5th ed., 1814, 2 vols. 8vo. Of Tetanus; Med. Mem., iii. 147. Immersion in Water; Phil. Trans., 1792. The following work was generously undertaken for the benefit of the poet's widow and children: The Works of Robert Burns, with Life and Criticism, Liverp., 1800, 4 vols. 8vo; again in 1814; 1820, with addit. notes by Gilbert Burns. Dr. Currie's Memoir of Burns has been incorporated with later editions. See BURNS, ROBERT.

"If you have not got Currie's edition of Burns, you will thank me for telling you of it."—SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH.

"As a compact and regular memoir, the work is a failure. . . . The charm lies in the perfect sincerity, fine sensibility, and easy style of the whole composition. . . . It was a labour of love and of charity. . . . The good and generous Currie."—ALLAN CUNNINGHAM.

Currie, Wm., M.D. Foxglove; Mem. Med., iv. 10, 1795. Insalubrity of Marshy Situations; Trans. Amer. Soc., 1799.

Curry, G. G., M.D. Tetanus; Med. Trans., 1813.

Curry, James, M.D. Drowning, 1792, 8vo. Mercury, 1810, 8vo. Causes of the late high Price of Provisions, 1815, 8vo.

Curry, John, M.D. Fevers, 1773; Nature of ditto, 1774. Hist. Review of the Civil Wars of Ireland, Lon., 1775, 4to, anon.; 2d ed., with name, enlarged and edited by C. O'Connor, 1786, 2 vols. 8vo.

"A valuable work by honest Curry."—THOMAS MOORE.

Hist. Mem. of the Irish Rebellion in 1641.

Curry, Thomas, and W. B. Miller. Reports of Cases in S. Court of Louisiana, 1830-41, 19 vols., New Orleans, 1831-41. The first 5 vols. reported by Miller, the remaining 14 by Curry.

Curry, Otway, of Cincinnati. Poema.

Curry, Wm. Abridgt. and Cont. of Blackstone's Commentaries, Lon., 1796, 8vo; 2d ed., 1809, 8vo.

"Ablly executed, and extremely useful for revision."—Hoffman's Leg. Stu.

Curson, Henry. Lex Customaria, 1696, 8vo. Comp. of Laws, 1699, 12mo. Sciences Illustrated, 1702, 8vo. Estates Taile, 1703, 8vo. Arcana Clericalia, 1705, 8vo.

Curson, John. Vindication from Aspersions.

Curteis, Thomas. Essays and Sermons, 1704-31.

- Curtis, Thomas. Serm., Maidstone, 1820, 8vo.
- Curtis, W. C. Reports Ecclesiastical Courts, 1834-44, Lon., 1840-44, 3 vols. 8vo. Case of Mastin v. Escott, 1843, 8vo.
- Curtis, Marianne. Classical Pastime, in a Set of Poetical Enigmas on the Planets and Zodiacal Signs, 1813, 8vo.
- Curtis, T. J. Horseley. Novels, 1801, '02, '04, '05.
- Curtin, Samuel, M.D. Observations on the Yellow Fever of the West Indies; Med. Com., 1785.
- Curtis. Dissertation on the Unreasonableness, Folly, and Danger of Infidelity, Lon., 1725, 8vo.
- Curtis, Alva, M.D., b. 1797, in New Hampshire; for twenty years editor of Physio-Medical Recorder in Cincinnati. Medical Discussions, 1833, 12mo. Lectures on Obstetrics, 1838, 8vo. Lectures on the Theory and Practice of Medicine, 1842, 8vo; repub. in England, 1847. Medical Criticisms; or, A Review of all Systems, 1856.
- Curtis, Mrs. Anne, sister of Mrs. Siddons. Poems on Miscellaneous Subjects, Lon., 1783, 12mo.
- "Published, we presume, for the sake of the subscription,—which might be necessary for the authoress. The public is very frequently addressed in worse poetry."—Lon. Month. Rev., 1783.
- Curtis, Benjamin R., b. 1809, Watertown, Mass., graduated at Harvard University in 1829; studied law under Mr. Justice Story in the same institution; practised in Boston; appointed Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, Sept. 1851; resigned, and returned to the Bar, 1857. 1. Reports of Cases in the Circuit Courts of the United States, Bost., 1854: vols. i., ii., 1857.
- "It is almost superfluous to say that these Reports are of great value. Next to the leading elementary treatises, and the reports of decisions in his own State, every American lawyer most needs the reports of the decisions of the United States Supreme Court and of the several associate justices thereof in their respective circuits."
2. Decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, with Notes and a Digest, comprising the Cases reported by Dallas, 4 vols.; Cranch, 9 vols.; Wheaton, 12 vols.; Peters, 16 vols.; Howard, 17 vols.; Bost., 22 vols., including a Digest. The Old Series of these Reports are in 58 volumes, the catalogue price of which is $222. This edition is pub. at $3 per vol.
- "This work contains the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States. The opinions of the Court are in all cases given as they have been printed by the authorized reporters, after correcting such errors of the press or of citation as a careful examination of the text has disclosed.
- "I have endeavored to give in the head-notes the substance of each decision. They are designed to show the points decided by the court, not the dicta or reasonings of the judges.
- "The statements of the cases have been made as brief as possible. For many years, it has been the habit of all the judges of this court to set forth in their opinions the facts of the cases as the court viewed them in making their decisions. Such a statement, when complete, renders any other superfluous. When not found complete, I have not attempted to restate the whole case, but have supplied, in the report, such facts or documents as seemed to me to be wanting.
- "In some cases turning upon questions or complicated states of fact, and not involving any matter of law, I have not thought it necessary to encumber the work with detailed statements of evidence which no one would find it useful to recur to. These instances, however, are few.
- "To each case is appended a note referring to all subsequent decisions in which the case in the text has been mentioned. It will thus be easy to ascertain whether a decision has been overruled, doubted, qualified, explained, or affirmed, and to see what other applications have been made of the same or analogous principles.
- "The paging of the authorized reporters has been preserved at the head of each case, and in each margin of each page, for convenience of reference; the reporters being designated by their initials,—D. for Dallas, C. for Cranch, W. for Wheaton, P. for Peters, H. for Howard."—Extract from the Preface.
- "We approve the plan of Mr. Justice Curtis's 'Decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States,' and believe that its execution by him will be of much utility to the legal profession and to our country.
- "ROGER B. TANNEY, Chief Justice.
 "PETER V. DANIEL, Associate Justice.
 "JOHN MCLEAN, Associate Justice.
 "SAMUEL NELSON, Associate Justice.
 "JAMES M. WATSON, Associate Justice.
 "ROBERT C. GRIER, Associate Justice.
 "JOHN CATRON, Associate Justice.
 "S. A. CAMPBELL, Associate Justice."
3. A Digest of the Decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, from the Origin of the Court to the Close of the December Term, 1854, 8vo.
- Curtis, Charles, M.D. Diseases of India, Edin., 1807, 8vo.
- Curtis, Charles. Answer to Dr. Parr, Lon., 1792, 8vo.
- Curtis, George Ticknor, b. 1812, at Watertown, Mass., an eminent legal writer of Boston. 1. A Digest of Cases adjudicated in the Courts of Admiralty in the U.S.

- and in the H.C. of Admiralty in England, Bost., 1839, 8vo.
2. A Digest of the Decisions of the Courts of Common Law and Admiralty in the U.S.: vol. i., by T. Metcalf and J. C. Perkins; vols. ii. and iii., by G. T. Curtis, Bost., 1840-44, 3 vols. 8vo. 3. A Treatise on the Rights and Duties of Merchant Seamen according to the General Maritime Law and the Statutes of the U.S., Bost., 1841, 8vo; Lon., 8vo.
- "I think the work is written with great ability, accuracy, and learning, and, if published, it will constitute by far the most valuable treatise now in existence on this highly-important branch of law, and will be worthy of extensive public patronage."—JOSIAS BROWN.
- This work should accompany Asson on Shipping, (q. v.)
4. The American Conveyancer, Bost., 1846, 12mo; new ed., 1847.
- "This work has evidently been prepared with great care."
5. A Treatise on the Law of Copyright, &c. as administered in Eng. and Amer., Bost., 1847, 8vo; Lon., r. 8vo.
- "So far as we know, there is in our language no work upon literary property so complete and satisfactory as this treatise by Mr. Curtis."—N. Amer. Rev.
- "A full and lucid exposition of the law as it is upon the subject in question."—Western Law Journal.
6. Treatise on the Law of Patents for Useful Inventions in the U.S. of America, Bost., 1849, 8vo.
- "It is valuable not only to gentlemen of the law, but to the originators and proprietors of useful inventions generally."—Law Reporter.
7. Equity Precedents: designed as a Supplement to illustrate and accompany Mr. Justice Story's Treatise on Equity Pleadings: vol. i., 1850, 8vo.
- "We are much pleased to see a collection of really useful Equity precedents collected and edited in the very excellent manner in which Mr. Curtis has prepared this book."—American Law Journal.
8. The Inventor's Manual and Guide to the Patent-Office, Boston, 12mo.
- "This is an important work for ingenious men, showing them, when they have made a patentable invention, how a patent is to be obtained and how to protect it from infringement. It is the design of the book to explain the law of Patents to practical men, and to give full directions how to obtain, renew, or extend a patent."
9. History of the Origin, Formation, and Adoption of the Constitution of the U. States, with Notices of its Principal Framers, New York, 8vo: vol. i., pp. 500, pub. in 1855; vol. ii., pp. 653, 1858. In the preparation of this work the Hon. Daniel Webster took a lively interest, and almost with his dying breath urged Mr. Curtis to complete what he had undertaken. Mr. Webster at one time designed a work of this character himself.
- "You have a future: I have none. You are writing a History of the Constitution. You will write that work: I shall not. Go on, by all means; and you shall have every aid that I can give you."
- These words were spoken by Mr. Webster but a short time before his death.
- See a review of vol. i. in Norton's Literary Gazette, New York, Jan. 1, 1855.
- "Mr. Curtis writes with vigour and dignity; and his work, if the second volume be equal to the first, will be one of permanent interest."—Lon. Athenaeum.
- "In fulness and explicitness of detail, clearness of method, impartiality of statement, and the pervading spirit of reverence and love for the Constitution and the Union, Mr. Curtis has equalled the highest expectations of his friends and the demands of the theme. His history must take its place among the standard works in its department. While it will be read with unflagging interest, its copious index fits it to be a permanent reference-book as to the whole ground that it covers."—N. Amer. Rev., clxxx, July, 1858. (Review of vol. ii.)
10. Commentaries on the Jurisdiction, Practice, and Peculiar Jurisprudence of the Courts of the United States, Phila., 2 vols. 8vo: vol. i., 1854; vol. ii., 1858.
- "Mr. Curtis's Commentaries is a work of much value. Indeed, it could not fail to be so, coming as it does from the hands of one so justly eminent in the Profession. I take pleasure in recommending it,—although my recommendation can hardly be necessary to attract to it the attention of the Profession."—R. B. TANNEY.
- "Mr. Curtis's book will be of much service, by the clear and luminous exposition it contains of matters interesting not merely to the lawyer, but also to the statesman and the patriot."—Law Reporter, Nov. 1854.
- Curtis, George William, born in 1824, at Providence, Rhode Island, has attained considerable celebrity as an author. 1. Nile Notes of a Howadji, New York, 1851, 12mo, Lon., 1852.
- "A brilliant book, full of vivid feeling and fancy."—LEIGH HUNT.
- "Of such a land what new thing remains for prose-poet to sing or word-painter to draw? The answer is this little book,—the unrhymed poem—wild, wilful, fantastic, but very beautiful,—of a wanderer from beyond the Atlantic, who has brought a fresh eye and heart to see the wonders of Egypt and a master-hand to record them."—Lon. Weekly News.
- "We heartily congratulate American literature on this addition to the list in which Melville, Ik Marvel, and Dr. Mayo flourish."—New York Albion.
- "Our Howadji is a gentleman of exquisite poetic taste, refined but glowing in feeling and fancy, polished in his style, and altogether a most captivating writer."

2. The Howadji in Syria, New York, 1852, 12mo; Lon., 1852. 3. Lotus Eating, a Summer Book, New York, 1852, 12mo; Lon., 1852.

"Brilliant, sketchy, and here and there philosophical. . . . Though at times a little too highly coloured, yet it is gracefully written, and will add to the fame of its Howadji author."—Norton's Literary Guide.

4. The Potiphar Papers, reprinted from Putnam's (New York) Monthly Magazine, with Illustrations by Augustus Hoppin, New York, 1854, 12mo.

"To readers outside the pale of fashionable frivolity they will be recommended by their gaiety of humour no less than by their sharp satire. As specimens of polished invective, they are rivalled by the productions of few of our modern Juvenals."—Gleaner Riple.

5. Prue and I, N. York, 1856, 12mo. Rural Essays, by A. J. Downing, edited by G. W. Curtis, with a Memoir of the author. See DOWNING, A. J.

Curtis, Henry. Beauties of the Rose, pub. in numbers, Lon., 1851, &c., 4to.

"Curtis's Beauties of the Rose will make a splendid work."—Gardener's and Land Steward's Journal.

Curtis, Jas. Travels in Barbary in 1801, Lon., 1803.

Curtis, John. British Entomology, Lon., 1824–40, 193 Nos., 16 vols. r. 8vo, £43 16s. New issue in course of publication.

"For elegance of design, accuracy of execution, and beauty of drawing, this work cannot be excelled."—Wood's Cat. of Insects.

Curtis, John H. Diseases of the Ear, Lon., 8vo; 5th ed., 1836.

"The results of his experience appear to have been particularly favourable."—Lon. Med. and Phys. Journal.

Present State of Aural Surgery.

"The author appears well versed in its diseases."—Lon. Lancet. Diseases of the Eye, 2d ed., 1835, 8vo.

"Whoever will attend to the sensible advice given in the chapter on sight and spectacles, will have reason to thank Mr. Curtis for an unimpaired eyesight to old age."—Lon. Med. and Phys. Jour.

Essay on the Deaf and Dumb.

"Mr. Curtis is entitled to the best thanks of the public."—Lon. Lancet.

Mr. C. has pub. other valuable works.

Curtis, R. Treatise on the Teeth, Oxf., 1769, 12mo.

Curtis, Richard, Bishop of Chichester. Sermons, 1573, 75, 76. Trans. of Cardinal's Treat. on Rom. i. 20, &c., 1577, 8vo.

Curtis, Lt. Roger. Particulars of the Country of Labradore. See Phil. Trans., 1774.

Curtis, Samuel. A Monograph on the Genus Camellia, Lon., 1822, large fol. £3 3s., col'd, £6 16s. 6d. The plates are from nature, by Clara Maria Pope. In conjunction with Sir W. J. Hooker, Mr. Curtis superintended the New Series of the Botanical Magazine.

Curtis, Thomas. The Existing Monopoly, &c. Aut. Vers. of the Scriptures, Lon., 1833, 8vo. See Horne's Introduction to the Scriptures.

Curtis, William, 1746–1799, a native of Alton, Hampshire, had botanical gardens successively at Bermondsey, Lambeth, Marsh, and Brompton. 1. Collecting Insects, &c., 1771, 8vo. 2. Fundamenta Entomologiæ; trans. from Linnaeus, with addits., Lon., 1772, 4to. 3. Flora Londinensis, Lon., 1774, &c., fol., revised and improved, by George Graves, extended and continued by Sir W. J. Hooker, Lon., 1835, 5 vols. r. fol., (109 parts,) 647 plates. This splendid work, pub. at £87 4s., has been offered within the last few years for £25 to £30.

"This is to the present hour, the only extensive work on the Indigenous Botany of this country, which gives well-coloured representations of the plants in their full natural size. . . . This important work is now brought to a close, and may justly boast of unrivalled excellence, undiminished splendour, and unabated accuracy."—Lon. Monthly Review.

The three grandest Indigenous Floras ever published are The Flora Londinensis, The Flora Danica, and Sibthorp's Flora Græca.

4. The Brown Tail Moth, 1782, 4to. 5. Cat. of Plants in the Lon. Botan. Garden, 1784, 12mo. 6. Comp. to the Botan. Mag., 1788, 8vo. 7. Lectures on Botany, arranged by Saml. Curtis, 1803, '04, 2 vols. 8vo. 8. Practical Observations on the British Grasses, 1790, 8vo; several edits., 1812, 8vo.

"A very useful volume. . . . No subsequent work has overdone the merits of the book in the small compass it contains. The portraits are true in the likeness and correct in the execution."—Donaldson's Agricult. Bing.

Some of Mr. C.'s papers will be found in Trans. Linn. Soc., 1791, 1802.

To him we are indebted for the origination of the Botanical Magazine, commenced in 1787; new series, edited by Samuel Curtis and Sir W. J. Hooker. Complete sets of this work, lacking the last few years, which can be readily supplied, can be had in London. The volumes from 1787 to 1842, containing nearly 4000 plates, accurately drawn and coloured after nature, subscription-price upwards of one hundred guineas, can be purchased for £35 to £45, according to binding and condition.

Curtis, Wm. Observ. on the New Corn Bill, 1804, 8vo.

Curtiss, N. M., author of Byron Blonday, Haunted Chief, Prairie-Guide, Maid of Saranac, and numerous other novelettes.

Curtois, John. Serms., 1684, '85. Essay, 1679.

Curwen, B. Proceed. against Sir F. Burdett, 1810, 8vo.

Curwen, John C., M.P. Speeches, 1797, 1809, Hints on Feeding Stock and Bettering the Condition of the Poor, Lon., 1809, 8vo.

Observations on the State of Ireland, principally directed to its Agriculture and Rural Population, Lon., 1818, 2 vols. 8vo.

"The reflections of a man of good sense, good feelings, liberal sentiments, and comprehensive views."—Lon. Monthly Review.

Curzon, Fre. Lays and Legends of the West, Lon., 1846, 12mo.

Curzon, Hon. Robert, Jr. Visits to the Monasteries of the Levant, Lon., 1849, p. 8vo, with 20 wood-cuts.

"We hazard little in prophesying that Mr. Curzon's work will be more popular than any other recent set of Oriental descriptions, except Mr. Kinglake's."—Lon. Quart. Review, lxxiv. 461, &c. lxxv. 52, & Dublin's Literary Reminiscences, 941.

"Most agreeable writing, replete with information on most interesting points."—Lon. Times.

"Unusually picturesque and lively."—Lon. Athenæum.

Cushing, Mrs., a sister of Mrs. HARRIET V. CHENEY, (q. v.) now (1855) resides at Montreal, Canada, and edits The Literary Garland. She has pub. several juvenile works and some poems. Esther, a Dramatic Poem, is commended by Mrs. Hale as "a work of deep interest." The Sunday School, or Village Sketches, is the joint production of the sisters, now Mrs. Cushing and Mrs. Cheney.

The Coquette, or the History of Eliza Wharton, written by the mother of these ladies, (Mrs. Hannah Foster), and previously noticed by us as one of the earliest American novels, was republished in 1855. See FOSTER, HANNAH.

Cushing, Abel. Historical Letters on the First Charter of Massachusetts Government, Bost., 1839, 18mo.

Cushing, Hon. Caleb, b. 1800, at Salisbury, Mass., graduated at Harvard College at the age of 17; tutor at Harvard Coll., 1819–21. He was a general in the late Mexican War, has occupied several public posts in his native State, and been Representative in Congress, Attorney-General of U. States, &c. History and Present State of the Town of Newburyport, Mass., Newburyport, 1826, 12mo.

"Valuable, not for its local information only, but for its general relation to the history of Massachusetts."—North American Review, xlv. 252.

Review of the Late Revolution in France, 1833, 12mo.

Reminiscences of Spain, N. York, 1833, 12mo.

"A work which will be read with great pleasure, and which holds out a high promise of future excellence. The best parts are, we think, the descriptions of places and persons: the least successful are the poems, which are yet not without considerable merit. They are mostly translations from the Spanish, and exhibit in some instances a remarkable facility of versification. The tales are very interesting."—ALEXANDER H. EVERETT: N. Amer. Rev., xxxvii. 84–104.

Growth and Territorial Progress of the U. States, Springfield, 1839, 8vo. Life and Public Services of Wm. Henry Harrison, Bost., 1840, 18mo.

Cushing, Mrs. Caleb. Letters Descriptive of Public Monuments, Scenery, and Manners in France and Spain; printed for private distribution, Newburyport, 1832, 2 vols. 12mo. Mrs. Cushing accompanied her husband (v. ante) to Europe, and the volumes above noticed contain letters to her friends whilst absent. See very interesting extracts in the N. Amer. Rev., xxxvii. 104–117, (by Alex. H. Everett.)

"This accomplished lady, as is sufficiently evident from these volumes, was equally well fitted to shine in the higher sphere of letters, and to grace the private walks of social and domestic life."

Cushing, Jacob, D.D., of Waltham, Massachusetts, died 1809, aged 78. Serms., 1766, '71, '72, '78, '93, '96.

Cushing, John. The Exotic Gardener, 1812, 8vo.

Cushing, Luther Stearns, 1803–1855, Worcester co., Mass., a distinguished Law Writer and Judge. Treatise on the Trustee Process, or Foreign Attachment, 8vo, 1833. Insolvent Laws of Mass., 12mo, 1839. Supp. to Revised Statutes of Mass., 8vo, 1854. Reports of Controverted Election in Mass., 8vo, 1852. Proceedings and Debates in the House of Rep. previous to the election of Speaker in Jan. 1843, 8vo. Pothier on Contracts, translated by Cushing, 8vo, 1839. Civil Laws in their natural order, by Domat, edited by Cushing, 2 vols. 8vo, 1850. Rules of Proceedings and Debates in Deliberative Assemblies, 18mo, 1854.

"This is the standard text-book for Legislative Bodies of the U. S."

C. J. A. Mittermaier on the Effect of Drunkenness on Criminal Responsibility, from the German, by Cushing, 8vo, 1841. Savigny's Analysis of the Law of Possession, from the French, by Cushing, 8vo, 1838. A. C. Renouard's Theory of the Rights of Authors, from the French, 8vo, 1839. Remedial Law, 8vo, 1837. Introduct. to the Study of Roman Law, 12mo, 1854. Rep. of the Supreme Judicial Court of Mass. from 1848, 8 vols. Law and Practice of Legislative Assemblies in U. S., 1855. One of the leading editors of the later vols. of the Jurist and Law Magazine. "The accurate translation of Pothier on the Contract of Sale by so good a writer as Mr. Cushing, is a valuable service alike to the profession and general reader."—N. Amer. Rev., xlviii. 553.

"Considering the age and circumstances in which it was written, it is a truly wonderful performance. His method is excellent, and his matter clear, exact, and comprehensive."—JUDAS STRAIT: Pref. to Bailments.

Cushman, Robert, died 1626. The Sin and Danger of Self-Love, Lon., 1622; Boston, 1724; Plymouth, with memoir of Cushman, by John Davis, 1785. See an account of this energetic layman in Belknap's Amer. Biog., et v. N. A. Review.

Custance, George. View of the Constitution of England, 1808, 8vo; 3d ed., 1815. Drawn from Blackstone, Christian, De Lolme, and others. Reformation and Fund. Doctrines of the Ch. of England, 1813, 8vo.

Cutbush, James. Treatise on Pyrotechny, Phila., 1825, 8vo.

Cuthbert, died about 678, a disciple of Bede, wrote a letter to Cuthwine, giving an account of the death of their master. This letter will be found in Bede's works, &c.: see Wright's Biog. Brit. Lit.

Cuthbert of Canterbury, died 758, succeeded Nothelm in the see of Canterbury, about 740. He wrote some metrical compositions, which are not considered as indicative of remarkable poetical genius.—Ubi supra.

Cuthbert, R. Theory of Tides, Quebec, Lon., 1811, 8vo.

Cuthbertson, John. Electricity and Galvanism, Lon., 1807, 8vo. Other works, and con. to Nic. Jour., 1798-1810.

Cuthbertson, Jona. Distance-Measure, 1792, 8vo.

Cutler, Benjamin Clarke, D.D., b. at Roxbury, Mass., graduated at Brown Univ., 1822; received the degree of D.D. from Columbia College, N. York, 1836; was called to the Rectorship of St. Anne's Church, Brooklyn, 1833, and still continues rector, (1858.) 1. Century Sermon, Christ Church, Quincy, Mass., 1826. 2. Sermon, N. York City Mission, 1832. 3. Thanksgiving Sermon, 1835. 4. Sermon on National Independence, 1840. 5. Sermon on the death of Albert W. Duy, 1846. 6. Sermon on the death of Rev. F. C. Clements, 1853. 7. Parochial Sermons, 21 in number, Phila., 1857, 12mo. Other sermons, discourses, tracts, &c.

Cutler, Rev. Manasseh, died 1823, aged 80. Century Discourse, 1815. American Plants, in Mem. Amer. Acad.

Cutler, Nath. Coasting Pilot, Lon., 1728, fol. This composes the second part of the Atlantis Maritimi.

Cutler, Thomas, M.D. Surgeon's Practical Guide in Bandages, Lon., 1836, f. 8vo.

"This appears to be a valuable little treatise."—Lon. Med. Gaz. Popular Surgery from the French of Mayor, with addits., 1846, 12mo.

Cutler, Timothy, D.D., 1683-1765, Pres. of Yale

College, 1719-22, a man of profound learning. Sermons, 1717, '57. See Holmes's Life of Stiles, 387, and Annals, ii. 143.

Cutlere, Joseph. Serm. about Swearing; on Exod. xx. 7, 1682, 4to. An excellent subject. The profane swearer should be driven out of the society of honest men. Serm. on Rom. xii. 10, 1682, 4to.

Cutspear, W. Dramatic Rights, Lon., 1862, 8vo.

Cutter, C., M.D., a popular lecturer on Physiology. First Lessons in Anatomy, &c., N. York, 12mo. Anatomy, Physiology, and Hygiene, 12mo. Anatomical Plates (16) for schools.

Cutter, Capt. George W. Buena Vista, and other Poems, Cincinnati, 1848, 12mo. Song of Steam, and other Poems, with a Portrait, Cincinnati, 12mo. Poems, National and Patriotic, Phila., 1857, 8vo.

"The finest of his compositions is The Song of Steam, which is worthy of the praise it has received, of being one of the best lyrics of the century. The Song of Lightning, written more recently, is perhaps next to it in merit."—Grinnell's Poets and Poetry of America, q. v.

Cutter, Wm., b. 1801, in Maine, graduated at Bowdoin Coll., 1821, historian and poet. Life of Putnam; of La Fayette. Anonymous author of some 12 vols. Contributor of poetry and miscellaneous matter to various leading journals.

Cutting, John H., M.D. Con. to Med. Chir. Trans., 1811.

Cutts, Rev. Edward L. A Manual for the study of the Sepulchral Slabs and Crosses of the Middle Ages, Lon., 1849, 8vo.

Cutts, Lord John, died 1707, was a distinguished officer in the wars of William III. Addison, in a Latin poem, applauds the bravery of Lord Cutts at the siege of Buda, 1686. His lordship was author of a Poem on the Death of Queen Mary, and Poet. Exercises, Lon., 1687, 8vo.

Cutts, John. Rebellion Defeated, or the Fall of Desmond; a Tragedy, 1745, 4to; Reed, 1795, £2 12s. 6d.

Cutwode, T. Caltha Poetarum, or the Bumble Bee, Lon., 1599, sm. 8vo.

"Stay'd at the press, by order of the Abp. of Canterbury and Bp. of London, and such copy as could be found, or were already taken, were to 'bee presently brought to the Bp. of London to be burnt, and 'noe satyres or epigrams [to] be printed hereafter.'" See Stevens, Sale 1040.

This rare piece was reprinted in 1815, 4to, by Richard Heber, Esq., for the Roxburghe Club, 32 copies taken. Sir M. M. Sykes, 1618, £2 3s.; Boswell, 3026, £4; Dent, pt. 2, 1193, £2. See Dibdin's Literary Reminiscences; Lowndes's Bibl. Manual.

Cuyler, Rev. C. C. The Signs of the Times, Phila., 12mo.

Cuyler, Rev. Theodore Ledyard, born 1822, in New York. Stray Arrows, New York, 18mo. Contributor to several periodicals.

Cynewulf, Kenulf, Kenulfus, or Chenulfus, who died 1008, was made Abbot of Peterborough about 992, according to Hugo Candidus, the historian of Peterborough. He is supposed to have been the author of some religious poems in the collection of Anglo-Saxon poems in the Exeter and Vercelli MSS. Mr. Kemble discovered the name concealed under a playful device. Whether Mr. Kemble's Cynewulf be the Abbot of Peterborough or not, is a question involved in some obscurity.

D.

Dabney, J. P. Annotations on the Bible, New York, 12mo. An edit. of The New Testament, by William Tyndale, the Martyr, Andover and New York, 1837, 8vo.

"The Anglo-American edition is edited with much industry and taste by the Rev. J. P. Dabney. It contains first a reprint of the London edition just noticed, (pub. in 1836;) secondly, the essential variations of Coverdale's, Matthew's, Cranmer's, the Geneva, and Bishops' Bibles as marginal readings, thus presenting a complete variorum edition of the vernacular versions; and thirdly, a preface, and an interesting memoir of the martyr Tyndale, recast from the memoir compiled by the London editor, a list of Tyndale's writings, an account of the early vernacular versions, select collations of the first and second editions of Tyndale, and a tabular list of the more common distinctive expressions used by him." See Horne's Bibl. Bib.; Biblical Repository, x. 496.

Dabney, Richard, a poet and scholar, born in Louisa county, Virginia, about 1786, of an ancient family, "known in early times in England by the name of Daubeney, and in France by that of D'Aubigné. Richard was nearly grown before his classical education began, but he made very rapid proficiency, and attained a rare familiarity with the best Latin and Greek authors, as well as with Italian and English literature. At the burning of the Richmond Theatre in 1811, when 70 persons perished, he escaped barely with his life, suffering from burns and bruises, which permanently shattered his constitution. In 1812 he published a small volume of Poems and Translations, of which a second edition much improved appeared in 1815, published by Mathew Carey, bookseller and publisher, of Philadelphia. The translations, some of them spirited and elegant, were from the Greek of Alcaeus, Euripides, Sappho, Tyrtaeus, and several minor poets in Dalsell's Collectanea Græca, the Latin of Martial and Seneca, and the Italian of Petrarch, Carlo Fugoni, and others. He early fell into habits of intemperance, which, co-operating with his injuries received at the burning theatre, made him suffer in 1825 a death of great bodily pain, embittered by disappointment, and the consciousness of uncommon powers almost uselessly spent."

Daborne, Robert. A Christian turn'd Turke; a Tragedy, Lon., 1612, 4to. The Poor Man's Comfort; a Tragi-Comedy, 1655, 4to. Sermon on Zach. xi. 7, 1618, 8vo.

Da Costa, Emanuel Mendez, foreign secretary to the Royal Society, d. about 1788. Nat. Hist. of Fossils, Lon., 1757, 4to. Trans. of Cronstedt's Mineralogy, 1770, 8vo. Conchology, 1776, 8vo. Hist. Nat. Testaceorum Britanniae; in Eng. and French, 1778, 4to. Con. to Phil. Trans. on Fossils, &c., 1747, '53, '57, '59, '62.

"A Gentleman well skilled in Philosophical learning and Natural Knowledge, particularly in what relates to the Mineral and Fossil Parts of the Creation; one exceedingly diligent in his Enquiries; and who, by applying himself with great assiduity to the study of Natural History, is likely to be a useful Member of the Royal Society, and a zealous Promoter of Natural Knowledge, for the advancement of which the same was founded."

Thus complimentary was the certificate recommending Da Costa to a membership of the Royal Society. It was signed by the Duke of Montagu, Martin Folkes, Bryan Fairfax, Henry Baker, Dr. James Parsons, Peter Collinson, and James Theobald. Much interesting matter relative to Da Costa will be found in Nichols's Literary Anecdotes, and an account of his family, compiled from his own notes, may be seen in Gent. Mag., lxxxiii. 21.

Da Costa, J. Fr., Eng. and Span. Grammar, Lon., 1752, 8vo. Alexandri Pope de Homine, Jacobi Thomson et Thomae Gray, Selecta Carmina ex Britannica, in Latinam Linguam translata, Padoua, 1776, 4to.

Da Costa, J., M.D. Trans. from the German of Kölliker's Anatomy of the Human Body, Phila., 1855, 8vo.

Dacre, Lady, has acquired considerable celebrity as a novelist. The Recollections of a Chaperon, Lon., 1833, 3 vols. p. 8vo. In 1834 appeared Trevelyan, 3 vols. p. 8vo. This novel, pub. anonymously, was ascribed both to Lady Scott and Lady Dacre, and declared superior to any production of a female pen since the publication of Miss Edgeworth's Vivian. Peerage and Peasantry, 3 vols. p. 8vo.

"We are very anxious to recommend these tales to our readers; and the best proof of the opinion we have formed of them is to be found in this, that, with this anxiety, we have coupled them with the Tales of Woman's Trials [by Mrs. S. C. Hall.] They will not lose—perhaps they may gain by the comparison."—Dublin Univ. Mag., vii. 213.

Dacre, Rev. B. Testimonies in favour of Salt as a Manure, Manches., 1834, 8vo, pp. 288.

"It failed to lead to any use of the mineral in that way."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Dacre, Charlotte, or Mrs. Byrne, who sometimes published under the name of "Rosa Matilda," gave several novels and poems to the world. Confessions of the Nun at St. Omer's, 1805, 3 vols. Hours of Solitude; Poems, 1805, 2 vols. 8vo. She also pub. Zofloya; The Libertine; and The Passions.

Dacres, William. Elements of Water Drawing, Lon., 1660, 4to.

Dadd, George H., M.D., b. 1813, England, settled in U. S., 1839, Veterinary Surgeon. Outlines of Anatomy and Physiology of the Horse, 8vo, pp. 306. Amer. Cattle Doctor, 8vo, pp. 359. Modern Horse Doctor, 1854, 8vo, pp. 432.

"A very valuable work for those who have the care of horses." Manual of Veterinary Science, 8vo, pp. 500, 1855. Ed. Am. Veterinary Journal, 8vo, pp. 384.

Dade, John. Almanacks, 1558, 1607, &c.

Dade, Wm. Almanacks, 1624, &c. John and Wm. Dade seem to have pub. almanacks "for the greater part of the 17th century."

Dade, Wm., d. 1790. Proposals for the History and Antiquity of Holderness, Yorkshire, 1783.

Dadby, Joseph. Funl. Sermon, Lon., 1740, 8vo.

Daforne, Richard. Merchant's Mirror, Lon., 1635. Subsequently annexed to Gerard Malyne's Consuetudo vel Lex Mercatoria. The Apprentice's Time Entertainer Accomplantly, 1669, 4to.

Dagge, Henry. Considerations on the Criminal Law, Lon., 1772, 8vo; 2d ed., 1774, 3 vols. 12mo. A valuable work.

Dagge, Jonathan. Sermons, 1703, '09, &c.

Dagge, Robert. Proteus; or the Jesuit detected, 1746, 8vo.

Daggett, Naphtali, D.D., Pres. of Yale College, d. 1780. Sermons., 1767, '70, '73.

Dagleish, Wm., D.D. See DALGLEISH.

Dagley, Richard. Gems, principally from the Antique, with Illustrations. Part I, Lon., 1804, 4to. New ed., 1822, p. 8vo, with Illustrations in Verse, by the Rev. Geo. Croly. Death's Doings; Prose and Verse, 1826, 8vo.

Dagnilar, Miss Rose. Gorts of Berlichingen; a Hist. Dram. from the German of Goëthe, 1799.

Dahme. Sermons, 1755, '58, 8vo.

Daking, Wm., D.D. Trans. of the Hist. of Catherine, Empress of Russia, 1798, 2 vols. 8vo. Sermons., 1801, '03, '06, '07, '08, '10.

Dakins, Wm., d. 1607, one of the translators of the Bible, temp. James I., had assigned to him the Epistles of St. Paul and the canonical Epistles.

Dalbiac, Major James Charles. A Military Catechism for the use of young officers, 1806. See McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Economy, p. 80.

Dalby, Isaac, 1744–1824. Course of Mathematics, Lon., 1805, &c., 2 vols. 8vo. Other mathematical works.

Dalby, Joseph. The Virtues of Cinnabar and Musk against the Bite of a Mad Dog, Birm., 1764, 4to.

Dalcho, Frederick, 1769–1836, b. in London; came to the U. States while a lad; was a physician in Charleston, S.C., 1800, and became an Episcopal minister there in 1819. 1. Evidence of the Divinity of Our Saviour, 1820. 2. Historical Account of the Protestant Episcopal Church in South Carolina, Charleston, 1820, 8vo. 3. Ahiman Reson; for the Use of Freemasons, 1822, 8vo.

Dale, John. Analysis of the Epistles N. T., Oxf., 1652, 12mo.

Dale, M. Value of Annuities, Lon., 1777, 8vo.

Dale, Robert. Cat. of the Nobility, &c. of England, 1679, 8vo.

Dale, Samuel, M.D., 1659–1739. Pharmacologia seu manufactio ad Materiam Medicam, Lon., 1693, 8vo; several edits. much improved, 1737, 4to. Pub. at Leyden, 1739, '51, 4to.

"The whole consists almost entirely of Names and Synonymes, with a very brief account of the powers of each medicine."—Dr. Warr.

"Scarcely in any author is there a more copious collection of synonymes."—Dr. Pulteney.

Hist. and Antiq. of Harwick and Dover Court, with an Appendix first collected by Silas Taylor, alias Dornville, and now much enlarged, Lon., 1730, 4to; 2d edit., 1732, 4to.

"That part of this work which regards natural history is so copious and accurate as to render the book a real acquisition to science." See Pulteney's Sketches of Botany.

Dale contributed several papers to Phil. Trans.

Dale, Thomas. De Pareira Brava et Seraphia Off., Lugd. Bat., 1723, 4to.

Dale, Thomas. Trans. of Reynault's Entretiens Physiques, Lon., 1731, 3 vols. 8vo.

Dale, Thomas, b. 1797, London, Canon-Residentiary of St. Paul's, and Vicar of St. Pancras. Widow of Nain, 1818. Domestic Liturgy and Family Chaplain, 1846, p. 8vo.

"A valuable substitute for the more effective practice of communion when circumstances occur to interrupt or prevent attendance at public worship."—Lon. Lit. Gaz.

Sabbath Companion: 2 Series, 1844, &c.

"They are full of truth and beauty; and so may God speed them!"—Ch. of England Quar. Review.

Translation of Sophocles, 1824. Sermons at Cambridge, 1832, '35, '36, 3 vols. 8vo. Sermons at St. Bride's, London, 1830, 8vo. The Good Shepherd, 1845. Golden Psalm, 1847. Sermons at Denmark Hill, 8vo.

"Dale's Discourses produce an overwhelming effect upon his audiences, spoken as they are in the author's calm, solemn manner."—Presbyt. Review, Sept. 1836.

Poetical Works; new ed., 1842, sm. 8vo.

Dalechamp, Caleb. Vindiciæ Salamonis; sive de ejus lapsu statuque æterno, Lon., 1622, 4to. Exercitationes, 1624, 4to. Harrisonus honoratus, Cantab., 1632, 8vo. Hospitality: on Rom. xii. 13, 1632, 4to.

Dales, Major Saml. An Essay on the Study of the History of England, Lon., 1809, 8vo.

Dalgarno, George, 1627–1687, a native of Old Aberdeen, was noted for his learning. Ars Signorum, vulgo Character universalis et Lingua philosophica, Lon., 1661, 8vo.

His treatise was enlarged upon by Bishop Wilkins, in his Essay towards a real Character and a Philosophical Language; with an Alphabetical Dictionary, 1668, fol. Dalgarno wrote also Didascalocophus, or the Deaf and Dumb Man's Tutor, Oxf., 1680, 8vo.

Dalgleish, John. Sermons, Edin., 1711, 4to.

Dalgleish, Wm., D.D. Sermons, Edin., 1786, '99, 4 vols. 8vo.

Dalhusius, J. H. Theolog. and other works, Lon. and Edin., 1689, '91.

Dalison, Dallison, or Dallison, Gulielme. Cases, Reports, &c., Lon., 1609, 12mo. Reports des divers Cases adjuges en la Court del Common Bank en les Regnes Mar. et Elis., 1689, fol. Dalison's Reports were collected and pub. with Benloe's, by John Rowe, and others had appeared in Ashe and Keilwey.

"Of Dallas little is known, and his Reports long since ranked among the antiquities of the Law, and are now almost obsolete and valueless."—Mervin's Legal Bibl. q. v.; also Bridg. Leg. Bibl. 192; Winch's Rep. 43; and Wallace's Reports, 14.

Dallam, James W. Laws of Texas, Balt., 1845, 8vo.
Dallas, Alexander James, 1759–1817, third son of Robert Charles Dallas, was a native of Jamaica, to which island his father, an eminent physician, had emigrated from Scotland about the middle of the 18th century. Upon his father's return to Scotland, Alexander was placed at an academy in the neighbourhood of London, under the care of James Elphinstone, a familiar name to the readers of Boswell's Johnson. With the great lexicographer, and the equally famed philosopher—Dr. Franklin—young Dallas became acquainted whilst still a student. In 1780 he was married to Arabella Maria Smith, a daughter of Major George Smith, of the British Army. In 1781, after the death of his father, Mr. Dallas sailed for Jamaica, and had resided in that island for two years when he determined to emigrate to the United States. He arrived at the city of New York in 1783, and proceeding to Philadelphia, took the oath of allegiance to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania the 10th day after his first landing on the shores of the United States. In 1785 he was admitted to the Bar of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and in four or five years became a practitioner in the Courts of the United States. It has been mentioned as a striking proof of his industry and zeal in his legal pursuits, that "Within five years after his admission to the bar, he collected and prepared for publication a volume of cases, many of which were decided before the Revolution: a service to the profession, and, we may say, to the law itself at that time, which we, at this day, can scarcely appreciate."

See National Portrait Gallery of Distinguished Americans, Phila., 1853, (article GEORGE MIFFLIN DALLAS), to which we acknowledge our obligations.

In 1791 Mr. Dallas was appointed Secretary to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and upon the election of Mr. Jefferson to the Presidency, he became Attorney of the United States for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. He continued in this office until October, 1814, when he was appointed Secretary of the Treasury of the United States. In 1815 "he undertook the additional trust of Secretary of War, and performed with success the delicate task of reducing the army of the United States."

In November, 1816, the country being at peace, its finances arranged, and the machinery of government undisturbed by any of the obstructions which had so long retarded the harmonious action of its various functions, Mr. Dallas felt that he had a right to claim for his declining years a measure of that repose which he had long postponed to the pressing exigencies of his adopted country. He therefore resigned his official trusts, and returned to the practice of the law in Philadelphia. But the pressing responsibilities which had so long taxed his mental and bodily powers had doubtless affected his constitution, and he fell an easy victim to an attack of gout in the stomach—the result of exposure to the cold when engaged in an important suit—in about two months after his return to private life. America will ever have reason to cherish with affectionate reverence the memory of the name and services of Alexander James Dallas.

As a man of letters—equally conversant with the refinements of elegant literature, and the graver studies incident to his professional duties—Mr. Dallas enjoyed great reputation. His contributions to the periodical literature of the day were numerous, and we have the testimony that "His essays will bear a comparison with those of his contemporaries; and this is no small praise, for Franklin, Rush, and Hopkinson were of the number."

He was for some time editor of The Columbian Magazine. He published, 1. Features of Jay's Treaty, 1795. 2. Speeches on the trial of Blount, and the impeachment of the Judges. 3. The Laws of Pennsylvania from Oct. 14, 1700, to Dec. 1, 1801; with Notes Republished under the authority of the Legislature, 4 vols. fol., 1797–1801. 4. Address to the Society of Constitutional Republicans, 1805. 5. Reports of Cases in the Courts of the United States and Pennsylvania, before and since the Revolution, 4 vols. 8vo, 1790–1807. Vol. i. contains Cases adjudged in the Courts of Pennsylvania, namely, the Common Pleas, Supreme Court, and the High Court of Errors and Appeals, before and since the Revolution to 1789; with an Appendix, containing the Cases of the Court of Chancery in Pennsylvania; 3d edit., with adds. and copious Notes by Thomas I. Wharton. Vol. iv. has recently been reprinted, with Notes and References by Benjamin Gerhard, Esq. Vols. ii., iii., and iv. contain Cases adjudged in the several Courts of the United States and of Pennsylvania, from the year 1781 to December Term, 1806, Phila., 1830, 4 vols. r. 8vo.

With the exception of Kirby's, these are the oldest Reports in the United States. In many of the cases the reporter was engaged as counsel. Of the value of these Reports we have the following testimony from an eminent authority:

"They do credit to the Court, the Bar, and the Reporter; they show readiness in practice, liberality in principle, strong reason, and legal learning; the method, too, is clear, and the language plain."—LORD MANSFIELD.

Peak's Evid. by Randall, Pref.; 1 Com. Rep. Pref., 28; 5 Month. Anth., 156; Marvin's Leg. Bibl., 249.

6. Exposition of the Causes and Character of the late War, 1815. The author's son, Hon. George Miffin Dallas, proposed in 1817 to publish a collective edition of his father's works in 3 vols. Among his papers were some unfinished sketches of a history of Pennsylvania, which, if completed, would, from the author's familiarity with the topic and literary ability, have proved a valuable record of a most interesting portion of the annals of the infant republic.

Dallas, Rev. Alexander Robert Charles, one of the most exemplary and distinguished of the clergy of the Church of England, is a son of Robert Charles Dallas, Esq., (the friend and connexion of Lord Byron,) whose literary labours we shall have occasion to chronicle hereafter. The subject of this notice served for many years as an officer in the English army, and was at every engagement at which the Duke of Wellington was present, throughout the Peninsular War. He was at the battle of Waterloo, also, as was his cousin and brother-in-law, Mr. (now the Rev.) Charles Dallas, who was badly wounded on that perilous day. After returning to England, Charles Dallas, under the promptings of religious duty, determined to assume holy orders, and his example and friendly counsel induced A. R. C. Dallas to embrace the same sacred calling. The exemplary piety and unwearied zeal in well-doing of these devoted soldiers of the cross, are well known to the world. A. R. C. Dallas for several years laboured with great success in the work of missions in Ireland. For the following account of this enterprise, we are indebted to the Hon. Judge Kelley, of Philadelphia, who recently spent some days in the hospitable mansion of the Rev. Mr. Dallas. Mr. D. is a first-cousin of our distinguished townsman, George Miffin Dallas, of Philadelphia, late Vice-President of the United States.

"Mr. Dallas has undoubtedly been the chief agent and supporter of the missionary work in the west of Ireland. His first efforts in this field were in 1844, since when they have been unremitting, and have exhibited in a peculiar combination the devotion of the Christian with the activity and discipline of the soldier. His first effort was to establish an efficient body of colporteurs: this accomplished, he obtained the name and post-office of every farmer throughout the region in which his labours have since been so efficient. In January, 1845, each of the persons whose addresses were thus obtained, 25,000 in number, received copies of the first of a numerous series of powerful pamphlets. The first, I believe, was entitled 'A Voice from Heaven to Ireland.' Since then Mr. Dallas, though faithful to his charge at Wexford, and meeting with great frequency the committees connected with the mission at Exeter Hall—has passed a portion of each year in Connaught, and is personally known and loved by thousands of its inhabitants. In 1847 he assisted in founding the Connemara Orphan House, which was first filled with those whose parents were swept from them by the famine and cholera of 1846. Some idea may be formed of the extent and blessed results of these labours, from the fact that 9 churches were consecrated by the Archbishop of Tuam in August, 1852, the entire congregations of which had but a short period before been attached to the church of Rome."

Mr. Dallas is the author of many excellent works, the beneficial influence of which upon the public mind of Great Britain it would be difficult to exaggerate. We annex a list: 1. Practical Sermons on the Lord's Prayer, Lon., 1823, 12mo.

"The great recommendation of Mr. Dallas's Sermons is their plainness and simplicity: the style is easy and elegant, and with all its plainness never degenerates into homeliness."—Low. Christian Remembrancer.

2. Pastoral Superintendence, its motive, detail, and support, 1841, 8vo.

"Many useful practical hints."—Bickersteth's Christian Student.

3. Curate's Offering; Village Sermons, 12mo. 4. Introductory to Prophet. Researches, 12mo. 5. Lent Lectures on Christ's Temptation, 18mo. 6. Ministerial Responsibility, 12mo. 7. Miracles of Christ, 18mo. 8. Parables of Christ, 18mo. 9. Realizing; the Strength of an Effectual Ministry, 18mo. 10. Rise, Progress, and Prospects of Romanism, 8vo. 11. Scriptural View of the Position of the Jews, 12mo. 12. Serms. to Country Congregations. 13. Christian Mission at Castlekerke, 1849, 12mo. 14. Look to Jerusalem; or the Position of the Jews, 5th ed., 1853, 12mo. 15. Missionary Crisis in the Church of England, 1842, 12mo.

16. Pastor's Assistant, 3 vols. in 1, 1842, 12mo. 17. Cot-tager's Guide to the New Testament, 6 vols., 1839-45, 12mo; 18. To the Acts of the Apostles, 1847, 12mo; 19. To the Epistles of St. Paul, 1849, 12mo. 20. My Churchyard, 2d ed., 1848, 12mo. 21. Book of Psalms arranged for Devotional Readings, 2d ed., 1847, 32mo. 22. Revelation Readings; vol. i., 1848, 12mo; vol. ii., 1851, 12mo; vol. iii., 1852, 12mo. 23. The Point of Hope in Ireland's Present Crisis, 1849; 2d ed., 1850, 12mo. 24. Prophecy upon the Mount: 2d ed., 1848, 12mo. Transubstantiation, 1837, 8vo.

Dallas, E. S. Poetics: an Essay on Poetry, Lon., 1853, p. 8vo.

Dallas, E. W. The Elements of Plane Practical Geometry, Lon., 1855, 8vo.

Dallas, George, of St. Martin. System of Styles as now practicable within the kingdom of Scotland; in 6 parts, Edin., 1697, fol., 1774, 2 vols. 4to.

Dallas, Sir George, Bart., 1758-1833, a native of London, of the same family as A. J. Dallas. A Speech, praying redress against an Act of Parliament, Lon., 1786, 8vo. The India Guide; a Poem. Thoughts on our present Situation, with remarks on the Policy of a War with France, 1793, 8vo. Letters on the Trade between India and Europe, 1802, 4to. Letters to Lord Moira on the Polit. and Com. State of Ireland. Vindication of the Justice and Policy of the late Wars carried on in Hindostan and the Dekkan, by Marquis Wellesley, 1806, 4to. A Biographical Memoir of the late Sir Peter Parker, Bart., Captain of his Majesty's Ship Menelaus, &c., 1815, 4to. Other publications. The remarks on the policy of a war with France were greatly admired by Wm. Pitt, and, at his suggestion, reprinted for general distribution. We give an extract from a letter of Robert Southey's:

"Sir George Dallas has sent me some marvellous verses by a son of his, not yet thirteen—as great a prodigy as I have ever read of. Verse appears as easy to him as speech; Latin verse is at his fingers end like English; and he has acted a part in a play of his own composition, like another Roscius."—To C. H. Twissenden, Esq., April 12, 1818.

Dallas, George Mifflin, LL.D., b. July 10, 1792, in the city of Philadelphia, is a son of Alexander James Dallas, a native of Jamaica, and one of the most distinguished and useful of America's adopted sons, (v. ante). Indeed, in but few families have so many members risen to distinction and eminent public usefulness as in that of the subject of this notice. His grandfather, Dr. Dallas, who emigrated from Scotland to Jamaica about the middle of the 18th century, was one of the most prominent professors of the particular branch of science to which his energies were devoted. Of his four sons, Robert Charles Dallas became one of the most voluminous and useful writers of his age; and Alexander James Dallas, Secretary of the Treasury and Secretary of War of the Federal Republic, deservedly acquired by his public services a commanding position in the eyes of the American people. Their sister, Miss Dallas, married Capt. Byron of the English navy, and was mother of the present and seventh Lord Byron. To the same family belonged the distinguished brothers, Sir George Dallas, whose political writings were so warmly admired by William Pitt, and Sir Robert Dallas, President Judge of the Court of Common Pleas. Nor have the wisdom of the Bench and the deliberations of the councils only, been indebted to this House: in the Church it is ably represented by those excellent religious instructors through the pulpit and the press, the Rev. Alexander Robert Charles Dallas, and Rev. Charles Dallas, who, after gaining military laurels in the Peninsula and at Waterloo under Wellington, are now zealously engaged in the promotion of the best interests of the human race.

Of the three sons of Alexander James Dallas, the eldest rose to the rank of Commodore in the American navy, the third was the late Judge Dallas of Pittsburgh, and the second, George Mifflin Dallas, after occupying many public positions, was, in 1844, elected to the Vice-Presidency of the United States. The particular incidents connected with Mr. Dallas's career, which belong to political rather than to literary history, will not be expected in this volume. The reader will find an excellent biographical sketch in the National Portrait Gallery, Phila., 1853; and his visit to England whilst yet a youth is noticed by his noble connexion, Lord Byron the poet, in his correspondence with Robert Charles Dallas. We may mention an amusing instance of the early display of that principle of sturdy democracy for which Mr. Dallas has been distinguished through life. Upon his arrival in England he called upon and paid his respects to his distinguished connexion, Lord George Gordon Byron, and awaited a call in reply. His uncle, R. C. Dallas, informed him that peers were not in the habit of returning visits to those of inferior rank to their own, and that it was his place to visit his lordship. But the young republican declared that he should not call again unless his first visit were returned. Lord Byron was not a little amused by this practical exhibition of republicanism, and complied with the code thus recommended to him, and invited Mr. Dallas to visit him at Newstead.

1. An Essay on the expediency of erecting any Monument to Washington except that involved in the preservation of the American Union: printed in 1811. 2. An Address to the Democrats of Philadelphia in vindication of the War of 1812: delivered on the 4th July, 1815. 3. An Appeal to the Democracy of Pennsylvania, for the election of William Findlay as Governor: in 1817. 4. A Vindication of President Monroe, for authorizing General Jackson to pursue the hostile Indians into Florida: in 1819. 5. An Oration on Reverence and Love of our Country, before the Clissophic and Whig Societies, at Princeton College: in 1831. 6. An Oration at Lafayette College, Easton, on the Public Character of Pennsylvania: in 1834. 7. An Appeal to the People of Pennsylvania in favour of having a formal scrutiny instituted by the approaching Constitutional Convention, as to the corrupt creation and fraudulent invalidity of the Charter granted by their Representatives to the Bank of the United States: in 1836. 8. Address before a Committee of the Legislature pursuing an Anti-Masonic investigation; denouncing and resisting their course as a violation of the private rights guaranteed to the citizen by the Constitution: in 1836. 9. An Address to sustain the nomination of Andrew Jackson to the Presidency: in 1828. 10. A Lecture before the Mercantile Institution on Russia: in 1840. 11. Defence of Comm. Jesse D. Elliott, before a Court Martial: in 1840. 12. An Oration in Commemoration of the Centennial Anniversary of Jefferson's Birthday: in 1843. 13. Eulogy on Andrew Jackson: at the public celebration of his Obsequies by the citizens of Philadelphia: in 1845. 14. Speech of Vice-President Dallas to the Senate of the United States, on giving his casting vote in favour of the new Tariff of duties on Imports: in 1846. 15. Vindication of the Vice-President's casting vote on the Tariff of 1846, in a series of letters: in 1846. 16. Address as Chancellor of the Smithsonian Institute, on laying the corner-stone of the edifice at Washington: in 1847. 17. Speech at the Celebration of the Centennial Anniversary of the foundation of the College of New Jersey: in 1847. 18. Published Letter on the practicability and expediency of securing by the treaty of peace with Mexico the right of way, and of opening a Ship Canal across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec: in 1847. 19. Thoughts on Mr. Trist's Treaty of Peace with Mexico: in 1849. 20. Eulogy on the Life and Character of James K. Polk: in 1849. 21. Letter to Mr. Bryan, of Texas, on the character of the Federal Constitution, and the approach of danger to the Union: in 1851. 22. Speech on the trial of William Hogan, a Roman Catholic Priest, indicted for an assault and battery on Mary Connell. 23. Speech in the Senate of the United States, on Nullification and the Tariff: in 1831. 24. Speech in the U. S. Senate on the Constitutionality and Equality of the Apportionment of Federal Representatives by the Act of 1832, under the Fifth Census: in 1832. 25. Speech in the U. S. Senate in vindication of Edward Livingston, nominated by President Jackson for the office of Secretary of State: in 1832. 26. Speech to the citizens of Pittsburgh on the War, Slavery, and the Tariff: in 1847. 27. Speech to the citizens of Hollidaysburg: in 1847. 28. Speech to the citizens of Philadelphia in Town-Meeting, on the necessity of maintaining the Union, the Constitution, and the Compromise: in 1850. 29. Speech on the application to the Supreme Court for an Injunction against the Canal Commissioners, on alleged usurpations of power in the management of the Columbia Railroad: in 1853. 30. Speech in maintenance of the legal right of the Corporation of Philadelphia to subscribe to the North Pennsylvania Railroad Company: in 1853.

In addition to the works previously cited, we refer the reader to notices of Mr. Dallas and his public services in Democratic Review, x. 158; American Whig Review, xiv. 451; Niles's Register, xliii., Sup. 124; Chase's Hist. of the Polk Administration.

Dallas, Robert Charles, 1754-1824, uncle of the preceding, and brother of Alexander James Dallas, was a native of Kingston, Jamaica. He was educated first at Musselburgh, and next under Mr. Elphinstone. He was entered of the Inner Temple as a law student, but upon attaining his majority he returned to Jamaica, where he continued for three years, when he again visited Europe, and was married to a daughter of Benjamin Harding, Esq., of Hacton House, near Hornchurch. Before this last visit he had been appointed to a lucrative office in Jamaica, and returned to the discharge of his duties after his marriage; but the climate not agreeing with Mrs. Dallas's health, they quitted the West Indies forever, and resided for several years upon the Continent. That terrible scourge, the French Revolution, drove Mr. Dallas, with almost all other men of proper spirit, from unhappy France; and he determined to visit America, in which country his brother, Alexander James Dallas, subsequently attained great distinction, (r. ante.) Mr. Dallas was not sufficiently pleased with the United States to induce a permanent settlement, and he returned to England, where he entered upon an extended literary career, for which his talents eminently fitted him. His best-known work—published shortly before his death—is the Recollections of Lord Byron. Mr. Dallas was related to the Byron family, his sister, Miss Dallas, having married Captain Byron of the English navy, father of the present and seventh Lord Byron, successor of the noble poet.

Mr. Dallas had great influence with his relative, and exerted it in a manner which redounded greatly to his honour. The reader of Moore's Life of Byron will remember that it was owing to Mr. D.'s agency that Childe Harold was given to the world, but all are not aware that many objectionable verses were expunged at his earnest request, and others protested against, which Byron insisted upon retaining. The reader who would do justice to the character of this excellent man—Robert Charles Dallas—must peruse the Recollections, and especially the "preliminary statement," of the Rev. A. R. C. Dallas, and the concluding chapter of the book. We proceed to the enumeration of Mr. Dallas's productions:

1. Miscellaneous Writings, consisting of Poems; Lucretia, a Tragedy, and Moral Essays, with a Vocabulary of the Passions, 1797, 4to. 2. Clery's Journal of occurrences at the Temple during the confinement of Louis XVI.; from the French, 1797, 8vo. 3. Annals of the French Revolution; from the French of Bertrand de Moleville, 1800–02, 9 vols. 8vo. 4. Memoirs of the last year of Louis XVI., 3 vols. 8vo. 5. Letter to the Hon. C. J. Fox, respecting an inaccurate quotation of the Annals of the French Revolution, made by him in the House of Commons, by Bertrand de Moleville, with a trans., 1800, 8vo. 6. Correspondence between Bertrand de Moleville and C. J. Fox upon his quotation of the Annals, with a trans., 1800, 8vo. 7. The British Mercury; from the French of Mallet du Pan. 8. The Natural History of Volcanoes, including Submarine Volcanoes, and other Analogous Phenomena. Trans. from the French of the Abbé Ordinaire, 1801, 8vo. 9. Percival, or Nature Vindicated; a Novel, 1801, 4 vols. 12mo.

"The foundation of this fascinating and instructive work of imagination is laid in pure religion and uncontaminated nature; and the superstructure is raised upon a liberal and virtuous education, under the direction of those best architects of the human mind, sound example and sound precept."—European Magazine. "It presents the reader throughout with a very beautiful picture of virtue, in its most engaging form, delineated in the clearest colouring of purity of style and simplicity of language."—Anti-Jacobin Review.

10. Elements of Self-Knowledge, 1802, 8vo; 2d ed., 1806. 11. The History of the Maroons, Lon., 1803, '04, 2 vols. 8vo. This work is censured with much severity by the Edinburgh reviewer, (vol. ii. 376,) whose justice is questioned by Mr. Rich:

"The Edinburgh Review seems to be rather too severe upon this work, for by its own account, it contains much curious and interesting matter, and appears to form a useful appendix to Brian Edwards's West Indies, &c."

Vide Bibliotheca Americana Nova, ii. 13.

The three opinions which follow are entitled to great respect:

"The whole work is curious, interesting, and instructive, and distinguished for the sincerity of its narrations."—Lon. Annual Review.

"We advise the inquisitive to consult the volumes of Mr. Dallas, which certainly afford much of both information and entertainment."—Lon. Monthly Review.

"This book was much esteemed for the simplicity of its narration, and authenticity of its details."—Lon. Gentleman's Mag.

12. The Costume of the Hereditary Estates of the House of Austria, from the French of B. de Moleville, 1804, imp. 4to. 13. Refutation of the Libel on the Memory of the late King of France, pub. by Helen Maria Williams, from the French of B. de Moleville, 1804, 8vo. We confess that the seal with which this excellent man espouses the cause of the "murdered majesty" of France recommends his memory to our profound respect. How long will Americans degrade themselves, and disgrace the cause of that liberty which they profess to cherish, by extolling the English regicides of the 17th, and the French regicides of the 18th century? Our country is afflicted with some apologists for these damning crimes—but "let no such man be trusted!" 14. Aubrey, a Novel, 1804, 4 vols. 12mo.

"We here announce to our readers a very agreeable and instructive novel, in which the incidents themselves afford a lesson both improving and entertaining, and the sentiments are always founded on just perceptions of reason and nature."—Lon. Monthly Review.

"In saying that this production is superior to the generality of novels, we shall be thought by many to express ourselves but coldly of its merits. Aubrey does, in fact, deserve a higher commendation. It is written with ease, and excites much interest in the mind of the reader."—British Critic.

15. Memoirs of Marie Antoinette, Queen of France, from the French of Joseph Weber, her foster-brother, 1805, 8vo. 16. The Morlands; Tales illustrative of the Simple and Surprising, 1805, 4 vols. 12mo.

"Thus concludes the first Tale of the Morlands: we shall take a short notice of the second hereafter. This Tale is certainly much superior to the general course of novels. The language is natural and chaste, the business, in general, interesting and rapid, and the moral effect is such as will often instruct, and can never offend."—Lon. Gen. Review.

"The merits of both his efforts are considerable; our judgment, however, decides for the last."—Anti-Jacobin Review.

"The value of these works of imagination consists in the faithful picture of mankind which they present. Mr. D.'s just discriminations of character are evidences of his acquaintance with the world. Many excellent reflections, and precepts of the best morality, occur in the work."—Lon. Monthly Review.

17. The Latter Years of the Reign and Life of Louis XVI., from the French of Hue, 1806, 8vo. 18. The Knights; Tales illustrative of the Marvellous, 1808, 3 vols. 12mo.

19. The Siege of Rochelle, an historical novel from the French of Madame de Genlis, 1808, 3 vols. 12mo. 20. Not at Home; a Comedy, 1809, 8vo. 21. The New Conspiracy against the Jesuits detected and briefly exposed; with a short account of their institutes, and observations on the danger of systems of education independent of religion, 1815, 8vo.

22. Recollections of the Life of Lord Byron, from the year 1808 to the end of the year 1814, 1824, 8vo. "It certainly does appear that Mr. Dallas, from the first to the last of his intimacy with Lord Byron, did every thing that a friend, with the feelings of a parent, could do to win his lordship to the cause of virtue, but unhappily in vain."—Lon. Gentleman's Mag.

Mr. Dallas died at St. Adresse, in Normandy, at the ripe age of seventy. Dallas, Thomas, Surgeon. On the Treatment of a Polypus in the Pharynx and Oesophagus; Ess. Phys. and Lit., iii. 525, 1771. Sequel to the preceding, by Dr. Monro, iv. 534. Fatal Histories of different Tetanic Complaints, in which the most powerful remedies were employed in vain; Annals of Med., iii. 323, 1797.

Dallas, W. S. 1. Nat. Hist. of the Animal Kingdom, Lon., 1856, p. 8vo. 2. Elements of Entomology, 1857, p. 8vo.

"In every thing essential the book is excellent and will prove a useful guide for the entomological student."—Annals of Nat. Hist.

Dallaway, Mrs. Harriet. A Manual of Heraldry for Amateurs, Lon., 1828, 12mo.

"A useful work; the descriptions are concise and simple. Some copies have the cuts emblazoned."

Dallaway, James, 1768–1834, a native of Bristol, England, was educated at Trinity College, Oxford; Rector of South Stoke, Sussex, 1799; Vicar of Letherhead, Surrey, 1801. He officiated for some time as chaplain and physician to the British Embassy at the Porte. He paid much attention to antiquarian pursuits. 1. Letters of Bishop Rundell to Mrs. Sandys, Ox., 1789, 2 vols. 8vo. 2. Inquiries into the Origin and Progress of the Science of Heraldry in England, Gloucester, 1793, 4to.

"The author of this elegant and erudite work has here, with the pen of a Tacitus, accurately defined, in a most comprehensive manner, the rise and progress of the science of heraldry, from the earliest through the most interesting period of British history, accommodating the study to modern systems."—Moule's Bibl. Heraldica.

In this work Mr. D. reprinted the part of the celebrated "Boke of St. Alban's," printed in 1486, which relates to Armorial Bearings. 3. Constantinople, Ancient and Modern, 1797, 4to. 4. Letters and Works of Lady Montagu, from her Original MSS., with Memoirs of her Life, 1805, 5 vols. 8vo. 5. Anecdotes of the Arts in England, 1800, 8vo. 6. Walpole's Anecdotes of Painting in England, considerably enlarged, 1806; 1828, 5 vols. r. 8vo.

"An admirable publication; quite a treasure,—beautiful alike in paper, printing, and engraving, and truly excellent in every thing which depended upon the talents and exertions of its editor."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

"The Lives of the Painters by Walpole, with notes by the Rev. Mr. Dallaway, form five perfectly resplendent volumes. In the good old times of Bibliomania this work would have walked of its own accord into the mahogany book-cases of half the Collections in London."—Diddin's Bibliomania.

7. History of the Western Division of the County of Sussex, 1815, '19, imp. 4to; vol. i. and vol. ii. part 1. 500 copies were printed, of which 300 of the 1st vol., and 470 of the 1st part of the 2d, were destroyed by fire at Bensley's printing office, Bolt Court, June 26, 1819. Parochial Topography of the Rape of Arundel; new ed. by Cartwright, and Cartwright's Hist. of the Rape of Bramber, (forming vol. ii. of Dallaway's Western Sussex,) 2 vols. imp. 4to, 1830-32. Cartwright's Hist. of the Rape of Bramber was pub. to complete Dallaway's work, and should not be neglected by the collector.

8. Observations on English Architecture, military, ecclesiastical, and civil, 1806, 8vo; 1833.

"Mr. Dallaway has collected all the most striking facts respecting the Saxon, Norman, and Gothic Architecture. Those who desire to collect materials respecting the history and character of the English Gothic Architecture, will find much that is valuable in this volume; it will indeed be especially serviceable to architectural students."—Lon. Athenæum.

9. Statuary and Sculpture among the Ancients, 1816, 8vo. 350 copies were printed, of which 200 were destroyed by fire at Bensley's printing office. 10. William Wyccestre Redivivus, Bristol, 1823, 4to. 11. Notices of Ancient Church Architecture in the 15th Century, Lon., 1823, 4to. 12. Pictures exhibited in the Rooms of the British Institution from 1813 to 1828. In the Archæol., xv. 231, 1803, will be found an account by Mr. D. of the Walls of Constantinople.

Dallaway, J. J. The Map Pedometer, 4to.

Dallaway, R. C. The Servant's Monitor, Lon., 1815, 12mo. Observations on Education, 12mo.

Dallington, Sir Robert, d. 1637, aged 76, a native of Geddington, Northamptonshire, was "bred a Bible clerk (as I justly collect) in Bene't College; and after became a schoolmaster in Norfolk."—Fuller's Worthies. Wood says he was a Greek scholar in Pembroke Hall. A Book of Epitaphs made upon the death of the Right Worshipfull Sir Wm. Buttles. To this work, consisting of poems in Latin and English, contributions were made by Thomas Corbold, Henrie Gosnolds, &c. It is now very rare. A Method for Trauell, shewed by taking the View of France as it stood in 1598, Lon., by Thos. Creede, 8vo. Inscribed "To all gentlemen that have travelled."—Rob. Dallington. Survey of the Great Duke's State in Tuscany, in the year 1596, 1604, '05, 4to. Aphorisms, &c.; 2d ed., 1629, with the clause of Guicciardine defaced by the Inquisition.

"He had an excellent wit and judgment: witness his most accurate aphorisms on Tacitus."—Fuller's Worthies.

Dallowe, Timothy. Boerhaave's Chemistry, with the author's correct, and emendat., Lon., 1795, 2 vols. 4to.

Dally, Frank Fether. Apotheosis of Shakespeare, and other Poems, Lon., 1848, 8vo. The Channel Islands, 1858.

Dalrymple, Alexander, 1737-1808, an eminent hydrographer, was a son of Sir James Dalrymple, Bart., of New Hailes. In his 16th year he went out as a writer in E. I. Company's service, and was placed in the secretary's office. In 1779 he was appointed Hydrographer to the E. I. Company, and in 1795, upon the establishment by the Admiralty of a similar office, Dalrymple was selected to fill the post. He took a lively interest in voyages of discovery. We notice a few of Mr. D.'s many publications. See list in European Mag., Nov. and Dec. 1802, and in Watt's Bibl. Brit.

Account of the Discoveries in the South Pacific Ocean previous to 1764, Lon., 1767, 8vo. He states in his Historical Collection, that but few copies of the above were printed, and that "it was not published until some time after, when it was reported that the French had discovered the Southern Continent, the great object of all his researches."

An Historical Collection of the South Sea Voyages. Vol. i., The Spanish Voyages; Vol. ii., The Dutch Voyages, 2 vols. 4to, 1770-71. The collector should see that the 2d vol. has a chronological table, and a vocabulary, for these are frequently wanting. Both Burney's and Dalrymple's Collections

"Are by men well qualified by science, learning, research, and devotedness to their object, to perform well what they undertook on any subject connected with geography and discovery."—Stevenson's Voyages and Travels.

"Dalrymple is a great name in the annals of Navigation and Hydrography, and the present collection is among the very best of his works."—T. F. DUDIN.

Collection of Voyages, chiefly in the Southern Atlantic Ocean, 1775, 4to.

A Letter to Dr. Hawkesworth, occasioned by some groundless and illiberal imputations in his account of the late Voyages to the South, 1773, 4to.

"The indefatigable Alexander Dalrymple, who appears to have been the first projector of the expeditions under Wallis, Cartaret, and Cook, to the South Seas. In which he was not permitted to join, is rather severe in this tract, upon some parts of Dr. Hawkesworth's account of these voyages."—Rich's Bibliotheca Americana Nova.

Observations on Dr. Hawkesworth's Preface to the 2d edit., 1773, 4to.

An Historical Journal of the expeditions by sea and land to the North of California, in 1768, '69, and '70; when Spanish establishments were first made at San Diego and Monte Rey, 1790, 4to.

"This was a Spanish MS. presented to the ingenious and indefatigable Mr. Dalrymple by Dr. Robertson. Mr. D. had it translated by Mr. Revelly, and enriched it with other corresponding material, and two maps of this hitherto imperfectly known coast. The account is very curious and interesting."—Lon. Monthly Review. See Rich's Bibl. Amer. Nova under 1790, and the notice of Diario Historico under 1770.

The Oriental Repository, 1791-1808, 2 vols. imp. 4to. This is a valuable collection of tracts relating to the commerce, history, manners, and natural history of the East Indies and China, including communications from Major Rennell, Orme, Wilkins, Sir W. Jones, Roxburgh, &c. The East India Company, at whose charge the collection was pub., took 100 of the 250 copies which were struck off.

Collection of English Songs, with an Appendix of original pieces, 1796, 8vo. An excellent selection. Catalogue of Authors who have written on Rio de la Plata, Paraguay, and Chaco, 1809, 4to. Dalrymple pub. some papers in Phil. Trans. In the London Institution is a very complete copy of his collection of plans of ports in the East Indies, with descriptions, a MS. index, &c. in 13 vols. folio and quarto.

Dalrymple, Campbell. A Military Essay, Lon., 1761, 8vo.

Dalrymple, David, Lord Hailes, son of the preceding, 1726-1792, a native of Edinburgh, was a learned and industrious lawyer and antiquary, and added considerably to the historical treasures of the language. In 1776 he became Lord Commissioner of the Justiciary. Many interesting details connected with his literary history will be found in Boswell's Life of Johnson, Tytler's Life of Lord Kames, and Forbes's Life of Beattie. Sacred Poems by various authors, Edin., 1751, 12mo. A Cat. of the Lords of Session from 1532, 1767, 4to. Memorials and Letters relating to the Histories of Britain in the reign of James I., Glasg., 1762, 8vo; 1766, 8vo; in the reign of Charles I., 1766, sm. 8vo; the same, with account of the preservation of Charles II. after the battle of Worcester, 1766, sm. 8vo. Secret Corresp. of Sir Robert Cecil with James VI., Edin., 1766, 12mo. Annals of Scotland, 1656-1370, 2 vols. 4to, 1776-79; 1819, 3 vols. 8vo, including other works.

"The Memoirs of Dalrymple contain very curious information, and will give important hints most useful to every inquirer into the Constitutional History of England."—PROF. SMYTH.

"It is in our language, I think, a new mode of history, which tells all that is wanted, and, I suppose all that is known, without laboured splendour of language, or affected subtilty of conjecture. . . . A book which will always sell; it has such a stability of dates, such a certainty of facts, and such a punctuality of citation, I never before read Scotch History with certainty."—DR. SAMUEL JOHNSON.

"Lord Hailes's Annals of Scotland, it is believed, stands unrivalled in the English language for a purity and simplicity of style, an elegance, perspicuity, and conciseness of narration, that peculiarly suited the form of his work, and is entirely void of that false ornament and stately gait which makes the works of some other writers appear in gigantic but fictitious majesty."—Edinburgh Mag.

Remains of Christian Antiquity, with Notes, Edin., 1766-80, 3 vols. 12mo. Lord H. pub. translations of Lactantius de Justitia and other works, (see list in Orme's Bibl. Bib.) which have been highly commended:

"These works by Lord Hailes are among the most elegant specimens of translation, and discover a profound acquaintance with the most minute circumstances of early Christian antiquity. . . . He was one of the most formidable antagonists of Gibbon. His Inquiry into the Secondary Causes [pub. 1786, 4to; new ed., 1806, 12mo] is a most triumphant exposure of the sophistry and misrepresentations of that artful writer. The preceding works are now become scarce; but I know not a higher treat which can be enjoyed by a cultivated and curious mind than that which they afford."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"They would have been admired in days when the knowledge of sacred criticism was less rare, and when the value of it was more justly estimated."—DR. EARL.

An Examination of some of the Arguments for the High Antiquity of Regiam Majestatem; and an Enquiry into the Authenticity of Leges Malcolmi, 1768, 4to. Tracts relative to the Hist. and Antiquities of Scotland, 1800, 4to. One of the tracts in this collection was rigidly suppressed immediately after publication. For other works of this learned author see Watt's Bibl. Brit. In 1826, 2 vols. 4to, were pub. his Decisions of the Lords of Council and Session from 1766 to 1791, selected from the original MSS. by M. P. Brown.

Dalrymple, Sir Hew, 1652-1737, of North Berwick, President of the Court of Sessions. Decisions of the Court of Sessions from 1698 to 1718, Edin., 1738, fol.; 1792.

Dalrymple, General Sir Hew Whiteford, Bart., 1750-1830, commander of the army in Portugal, great-grandson of the above. Memoir of his Proceedings as connected with the Affairs of Spain and the Commencement of the Peninsular War, Lon., 8vo.

"It forms, with the documents in the Appendix, a very valuable and authentic addition for the history of the period in question."—United Service Journal.

Dalrymple, James, first Viscount Stair, 1619-1695, was one of the Lords of Session, President Judge of the Court of Session, Lord Advocate and Secretary of State. Institutions of the Law of Scotland deduced from its original, and collated with the Civil, Canon, and Feudal Laws, and with the Customs of our neighbouring Nations, Edin., 1681, fol.; 2d ed., 1693; 3d ed., 1759; 4th ed., with Commentaries and a Supplement, by George Brodie, Edin., 1825-32, 2 vols. fol. There is a later edit. by John S. More.

"A work surprisingly in advance of the age in which it was produced, and reflecting honour upon the name and family of its gifted author."—Warren's Law Studies, 2d edit., 387.

"It is in truth to be regarded as a Digest of the judgments of the Court of Session, reduced to order according to the spirit and arrangement of the Roman jurisprudence."—G. J. Bell's Commentaries on the Law of Scotland, vol. 1.—Proface.

"A Treatise on General Jurisprudence, illustrated by reference to the Law of Scotland." See More's edit.

"Our own greatest judicial authors make frequent use of the writings of Lord Stair, who is often cited, for instance, by Blackstone."—Warren's Law Studies, 388.

Decisions of the Lords of Council and Session, 1661-1681, 2 vols. fol., 1683-87. Physiologia Nova Experimentalis, Lugd. Bat., 1686, 4to. This was pub. during his exile. An Apologie for himself, Edin., 1690, 4to. A copy, said to be unique, is in the Advocates' Library. In 1815 seventy-two copies were printed at the expense of Wm. Blair, Esq., for the members of the Bannatyne Club. Modus Litigandi, 1681, fol. Vindication of the Divine Perfections, illustrating the Glory of God in them by Reason and Revelation, Lon., 1695, 4to.

Dalrymple, Sir James, Bart. Collections concerning the Scottish History preceding the death of King David I., anno 1153, Edin., 1705, 8vo. Vindication of the Ecclesiastical part of the above, Edin., 1714, 8vo. Sir James's critic was Mr. John Gillane. See Gillane's Life of John Sage.

Dalrymple, John, 5th Earl of Stair, d. 1789, was called the "Cassandra of the State" from his gloomy predictions concerning matters of political economy. 1. The State of the National Debt, Income, and Expenditure, 1776, fol. 2. Facts and their Consequences, 1782, 8vo. 3. State of the Public Debts. 4. An Attempt to balance the Income and Expenditure of the State, 1783, 8vo. Appendix to ditto. 5. An Argument to prove that it is the Indispensable Duty of the Public to insist that Government do forthwith bring forward the Consideration of the State of the Nation, 1783, 8vo. 6. On the proper Limits of Government's Interference with the Affairs of the East India Company, 1784, 8vo. 7. Address to, and Expostulation with, the Public, 1784, 8vo. Comparative State of the Public Revenues for the Years ended 10th Oct. 1783, and 10th Oct. 1784, '85, 8vo. Other publications. See Park's Walpole's R. and N. Authors.

Dalrymple, Sir John, 1726-1810, a Baron of Exchequer in Scotland, and father to the present Earl of Stair. An Essay towards a General History of Feudal Property in Great Britain, Lon., 1757 and 1758, 8vo, and 4th edit., 1759, 12mo. Highly esteemed. Considerations on the Policy of Entails in a Nation, Edin., 1765, 8vo.

"The Considerations on Entail is one of the best defences that has been put forth of their policy. It appears to have been principally intended as an answer to the following tract, [A Free Disquisition concerning the Law of Entails in Scotland, &c., Edin., 1766, 8vo.] in which entails are vigorously and ably attacked."—McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Economy.

The Question considered whether Wool should be allowed to be Exported when the Price is Low at Home, on Paying a Duty to the Public? Lon., 1781, 8vo.

"A well-written pamphlet, in which the question is answered in the affirmative."—Obi. supra.

Memoirs of Great Britain and Ireland, from the Dissolution of the last Parliament of Charles II., until the Sea Battle off La Hogue. With the Supplement and Appendices, 3 vols. 4to, Edin., 1771, '73, '88. New edit., with a continuation till the capture of the French and Spanish Fleets at Vigo, Lon., 1790, 3 vols. 8vo.

"Dalrymple was the first to procure access to the despatches of Bardin, the French minister at the Court of James II., and thereby unveil the state secrets of the reign, and in particular the fact that the leaders of the Whigs were in the pay of Louis XIV."

See Dalrymple's second volume. The statements thus put forth respecting the character of Lord William Russell and Algernon Sydney, elicited several responses by Joseph Towers and others.

"Another publication remains yet to be mentioned, which deservedly excited the attention of the public on its first appearance, and which must always be examined with great care by every inquirer into the constitutional history of England—the Memoirs of Dalrymple. They contain very curious information: and will give very important hints respecting the character and views of both the Duke of York, the king, and the popular leaders, and put the student into possession of the state secrets of the reign."—Prof. Smyth's Lectures on Modern History.

"This Dalrymple seems to be an honest fellow; for he tells equally what makes against both sides. But nothing can be poorer than his mode of writing; it is the mere bounding of a schoolboy: 'Great He! but greater She!' and such stuff."—Dr. SAM'L JOHNSON.

The Rights of Great Britain asserted against the claims of America; being an answer to the declarations of the general Congress, Lon., 1776, 8vo.

"This celebrated performance is said to have been written, printed, and liberally distributed, both in Great Britain and America, at the instance and expense of government; but whether this be true or not, the work itself, we are afraid, will answer no other purpose than to exasperate the people of Great Britain against their brethren of America, and, by inflaming misrepresentations and invectives, aggravate the evils of our present civil discord."—Lon. Monthly Review.

"I have a copy of the EIGHTH EDITION, (printed in the same year;) to which is now added a refutation of Dr. Price's State of the national debt; which belonged to Sir James Mackintosh, who has written on the fly-leaf, 'now owned to be by Sir John Dalrymple.'"—Rich's Bibl. Americana Nova, under 1776, p. 237.

Dalrymple, John, 1804-1852, b. at Norwich. Anatomy of the Human Eye, Lon., 1834, 12mo. Pathology of the Human Eye; complete in nine fasciculi, imp. 4to, 1849, &c.

"The value of this work can scarcely be overestimated."—Brit. and For. Medico-Chir. Review.

"The most truly valuable work upon the pathology of the human eye which has yet appeared."—Dublin Quarterly Journal.

"As practically useful as it is beautiful."—Lon. Lancet.

Dalrymple, Major Wm. Travels through Spain and Portugal in 1774, Lon., 1777, 4to. Treatise on Military Tactics, 1781, 8vo.

Dalrymple, Wm., D.D., d. 1813, aged 90. History of Christ, 1787, 8vo. Family Worship explained; in four Serms., 1787, 8vo.

Dalrymple, Wm. Treatise on the Culture of Wheat, 1800, 8vo.

"This work treats of wheat on strong and light lands, the rotations of cropping, seed, and sowing, and steepes or brines. The ideas are not very enlightened, and now far superseded."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Dalton, Edward. The Jesuits, their Principles and Acts, Lon., 1843, 18mo.

"Very useful."—BICKERSTETH.

Six Serms., 1844, 18mo. Thoughts for Each Day, 1844, 18mo. Life of Joseph, 1846, 12mo.

Dalton, J. 15 Serms. A Sermon, 1771, '73, 8vo.

Dalton, James. A strange and true relation of a Young Woman possessed with the Devil, Lon., 1647, 4to.

Dalton, John, 1709-1763, Fellow of Queen's Coll., Oxf.; Prebendary of Worcester; Rector of St. Mary-at-Hill. Two Epistles, 1744, 4to. Poem on the Coal Mines near Whitehaven, &c., 1755, 4to. Remarks on 12 Designs of Raphael. Serms., 1745, '47, '55. Serms., 1757.

"The discourse on Peace is one of the best sermons which we remember to have read on the subject."—Lon. Critical Review.

Dalton, John, 1767-1844, a native of Eaglesfield, Cumberland, was a teacher of mathematics at Manchester. He made some valuable contributions to chemistry: the Atomic theory; theory of Mixed Gases; meteorological observations, &c. Meteorological Observations and Essays, Lon., 1793, 8vo.

"All of which have thrown much light on the subject of which he treated."—R. D. THOMSON, M.D., &c.

2. English Grammar, 1801, 8vo. 3. New System of Chemical Philosophy. Part 1st, 1808, 8vo. Part 2d, Manchester, 1810, 8vo. Part 3, 1827. Chemical Con. to Nic. Jour., 1806, '11; to Annals of Phil., 1813, '14. See Rich's Cyc. of Biog., 1854, and Atomic Theory in Thomson's Cyclopædia of Chemistry; also Brit. Quar. Rev., i 157, and Westm. Rev., xiv. 88.

Dalton, Maria R. The Vicar of Lansdowne; a Tale, Lon., 1789, 2 vols.

Dalton, Michael, M.P., 1554-1620, an English lawyer. 1. The County Justice, 1619, fol.; 10 or 12 edit.: last 1746, fol.

"A book which, though not a judicial authority, is of considerable weight."—Murray's Leg. Bibl., 251; 3 Bos. & Pol., 254; 1 Brod. & B., 579, 595.

2. Officium Vicecomitum, the Office and Authority of Sheriffs; with an Appendix, Lon., 1682, 1700, fol.

There is a MS. of his in the Brit. Museum, entitled A Breviary or Chronology of the State of the Roman or Western Church or Empire, &c.

DAL

Dalton, R. Every Man his own Physician; or the present Practice of Physic, Lon., 1789, 12mo.

Dalton, Richard, d. 1791, keeper of the pictures, medals, &c., and antiquary to George III., was a brother of John Dalton, Preliminary of Worcester. Explana. of a set of prints relative to the Manners, Customs, &c. of the present inhabitants of Egypt, Lon., 1781, fol. Antiquities and Scenery in Greece and Egypt, 1791, fol. These engravings include the basso-reliefs discovered in Caria, &c.

Dalvimart, M. Costumes of Turkey, 1802, imp. 4to.

Daly, Charles P., Judge of the Common Pleas, N. York. Historical Sketch of the Judicial Tribunals of New York from 1623 to 1844.

Daly, Daniel, 1596-1662, an Irish Dominican monk, founder and superior of a college of his order at Lisbon. Initium, incrementum et exitus familie Giraldinorum Desmonien, &c., Lisbon, 1655, 8vo.

Daly, Daniel, Trial between, and R. Rolles, 1803.

Dalyell, Sir John Graham, d. 1851, in his 74th year. Fragments of Scot. History, Edin., 1793, 4to. Scot. Poems of the Sixteenth Century, 1801, 8vo. Tracts on the Nat. Hist. of Animals and Vegetables, &c., 1803, 2 vols. 8vo. Illust. of Scot. Hist., 1804, 8vo. Monastic Antiquities, 1809, 8vo. Ancient MS. of Marcellus's Epigrams, 1812, 8vo. Lindsay of Pitcairnie's Hist. of Scotland, new ed. Darker Superstitions of Scotland, 1834, 8vo. Rare and Remarkable Animals of Scotland, Lon., 1847, 48, 2 vols. 4to, £6 6s.

"The present publication will not only prove Sir John's independent discoveries and priority, but it will place its author in the first rank of those who gain deserved honour by their talent for original observation, and by that devoted love," &c.—Annals and Magazine of Natural History, Feb. 1848.

Powers of the Creator Displayed in the Creation, 1851-53, 2 vols. 4to, £8 8s. Other works.

Dalziel, Andrew, 1767-1806, a native of Batho, near Edinburgh, was Professor of Greek in the University of Edinburgh. The Plain of Troy, from Chevalier, Edin., 1791, 4to. Drysdale's Serms., with Life, &c., 1793, 2 vols. 8vo. Analecta Græca Minora cum Notis Philologicis. New edit., with notes by Rev. J. T. White, Lon., 1849, p. 8vo. Collectanea Græca Majora, Edin., 1802, '03, 2 vols. 8vo. Vol. I., 4th edit., 1849; vol. II., 8th edit., 1846; vol. III., 1825. Con. to Trans. R. Soc., Edin., II. 3, 1790. In Mr. White's edit. of Dalziel's Analecta Græca Minora, a portion of the long extracts from Lucian has been retrenched, and the place supplied by selections from Arrian and Aelian. The notes are written in English, and the Greek Lexicon has been remodelled and enlarged. Substance of Lectures on the Ancient Greeks, 1821, 8vo. See a review in Lon. Quarterly Review, xxvi. 243.

Dalziel, Archibald, Governor of Whydah, and afterwards of Cape Coast Castle, in Africa. The History of Danomey, Lon., 1793, 4to.

"The official situation which the author held gave him opportunities of gaining much valuable information of this kingdom and its inhabitants, the accuracy of which may be depended on."—Account of Voyages and Travels.

Dalziel, James. Short Genealogy of the Family of Maitland, Earl of Lauderdale, Edin., 1785, 4to. Privately printed.

Daman, or Damon, Wm., one of Queen Elizabeth's Musicians. The Psalms of David in English meter, Lon., 1579, long 8vo. Guib Damon, his Psalms, in four parties, 1591, 4to.

Damberger, C. F. Travels in the Interior of Africa, Lon., 1801, 8vo; from the German. Of these celebrated fictitious travels, written in a garret in London, two translations were published in 1801.

Damer, Hon. Mrs. Diary of her Tour in Greece, Turkey, Egypt, and the Holy Land, Lon., 2 vols. p. 8vo, 1841, '42.

"The Hon. Mrs. Damer, a descendant of Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, successfully rivals her ladyship in the very features in which she has so long been considered the most delightful of tourists. Such pictures of Turkish private life as are here given, it is vain to look for elsewhere."—Lon. New Monthly Mag.

"Information that cannot but be considered of unrivalled interest in every part of the Christian world."—Lon. Sun.

Dametz, Dr. Juan. Hist. of the Ballarick Islands, or Kingdom of Majorca, Lon., 1719, 8vo.

Damon, Wm. See DAMAN.

Dampier, George. Cure for bites of Mad Creatures, Phil. Trans., 1698.

Dampier, Thomas, D.D., Dean of Rochester. Sermon, 1782, 4to.

Dampier, Capt. Wm., b. 1652, a celebrated navigator, was a native of Somersetshire. A sketch of his voyages is contained in Chalmers's Biog. Diet., and in the Biographie Universelle; but the reader should not neglect to peruse the voyages, the best edit. of which will be found in the Collection pub. in 1729, Lon., 4 vols. 8vo. Contents: 1. Capt. Dampier's Voyages round the World. 2. Voyages of Lionel Wafer. 3. Voyage round the World, by W. Funnell, Mate to Capt. Dampier. 4. Capt. Cowley's Voyage round the Globe. 5. Capt. Sharp's Journey over the Isthmus of Darien, and Expedition into the South Seas. 6. Capt. Wood's Voyage through the Straights of Magellan. 7. Mr. Roberts's Adventures and Sufferings among the Corsairs of the Levant.

DAN

Dampier's Account of a New Voyage round the World was pub. in 1697, 3 vols. 8vo; 1699, 2 vols. 8vo; 1703, 3 vols. 8vo. Voyage to New Holland, 1781, &c. Besides several edita., the substance of his story has been transferred into many Collections of Voyages.

"It is not easy to name another Voyager who has given more useful information to the World, and to whom the Merchant and Marine are so much indebted."—BUNN.

"Unequalled as an observer, and gifted with the most remarkable powers of description."

Dan, Archdeacon. Discourse of the Army of the King of Spain, assembled at Lisbon against England, Lon., 1588, 8vo.

Dana, Charles Anderson, b. August 8, 1819, at Hinsdale, N.H. He entered Harvard Univ. in 1839, but, owing to a disease of the eyes, he remained there but two years, and received an honourable dismissal. He successively edited The Harbinger, a Weekly Journal devoted to Social Reform and General Literature; the Boston Chromotype; and in 1847 he became connected with the N.Y. Tribune, and is now (1858) one of its proprietors, and, in the absence of Mr. Greeley, editor-in-chief. He edited the Household Book of Poetry, N.Y., 1858, 8vo, pp. 798.

"Dana's Household Book of Poetry is a success. Everybody is glad to have in a single volume the English poems to which they habitually love to refer."—HARV. T. TUCKERMAN.

In connexion with Geo. Ripley, he is editing Appleton's New American Cyclopaedia, to be completed in 15 vols. 8vo. See RIPLEY, GEORGE.

Dana, E. Geographical Sketches of the Western Country; for Emigrants and Settlers, Cin., 1819, 12mo.

Dana, Francis, LL.D., d. 1811, aged 66, Chief Justice of Massachusetts, was a descendant of Richard Dana, who died at Cambridge about 1695. Francis Dana was envoy to Russia during the American Revolution, a member of Congress, and of the Massachusetts Convention for adopting the national Constitution. In politics he was a decided and energetic Federalist. His Correspondence whilst in Europe will be found in Sparks's Diplomatic Correspondence, vol. viii. We shall hereafter have occasion to notice the literary productions of Judge Dana's distinguished son, RICHARD H. DANA.

Dana, James, D.D., d. 1812, aged 77, a minister of New Haven, was a native of Massachusetts. Examination of Edwards's Inquiry on the Freedom of the Will, Boston, 1770, 8vo. Anon. The Examination Continued, New Haven, 1773;—with his name—3 Serms. in Amer. Preacher, vol. I and III. Serms., 1763, '64, '67, '70, '74, '90, '91, '92, '94, '95, 1801, '05, '06. See Allen's Amer. Biog. Diet.

Dana, Professor James Dwight, b. 1813, at Utica, New York, is a son of James Dana. 1. A System of Mineralogy. 1st edit., New Haven, 1837, 8vo, pp. 572; 2d edit., N. York, 1844, pp. 634; 3d edit., 1850, pp. 712; 4th edit., 1854, 2 vols., pp. 320 and 354; 5th ed., 1858, 8vo.

"This work does great honour to America, and should make us blush for the neglect in England of an important and interesting science."—Lon. Athenæum.

2. Manual of Mineralogy, New Haven, 1849, 12mo; 1851, pp. 482. 3. Report on Zoophytes; United States Exploring Expedition under Commander Charles Wilkes, U.S.N., pp. 749, 4to, with an Atlas in folio, of 61 plates, Phila., 1846. Report on Geology, (Ibid.) pp. 756, 4to, with an Atlas in folio of 31 plates, New York, 1849. Report on Crustacea, 2 vols. 4to, pp. 1620, with an Atlas in folio of 96 plates, 1852. Mr. Dana has been since 1846 one of the editors of The American Journal of Science, and to this periodical and the proceedings of the following learned bodies he has contributed many valuable papers: The proceedings of the Academy of Natural Sciences at Philadelphia; the Academy of Science, Boston; the Lyceum of Natural History, N. York; the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Dana, Professor James Freeman, M.D., 1793-1827, grandson of Judge Samuel Dana, and son of Luther Dana, was Professor of Chemistry and Mineralogy at Dartmouth College, and subsequently Professor of Chemistry in the College of Physicians and Surgeons at New York. Outlines of the Mineralogy and Geology of Boston and his Vindicta, Boston; 1818, 8vo; written in conjunction with his brother, Samuel L. Dana, M.D. An Epitome of Chemical Philosophy, 1825, 8vo. He contributed to several journals. See Thacher's Med. Biog.; Cat. N. H. Hist. Soc., ii, 290.

Dana, James G. Reports of Select Cases decided in the Court of Appeals of Kentucky, 1834-49, Frankfort, 9 vols. 8vo.

Dana, Joseph, D.D., 1742-1827, a minister of Ipswich, Massachusetts. Discourses, 1782, '95, '99, 1809, '01, '06, '07, '18.

Dana, Richard Henry, b. 1787, at Cambridge, Massachusetts, is a son of FRANCIS DANA, (v. ante,) successively minister to Russia, member of Congress, and Chief Justice of Massachusetts. The first of the family who settled in America (about the middle of the 17th century) was Richard Dana, a descendant of William Dana, Sheriff of Middlesex during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. After a course of three years' application to his studies at Harvard College, he adopted the profession of the law, which he may be said to have inherited, as his father and grandfather, and his mother's father and grandfather, were all gentlemen of the long robe. Mr. Dana's health was not robust, and this impediment to active exertion, combined with an inclination to authorship, caused him to close his office, and assume a portion of the mingled pleasures and pains attendant upon a partial editorship of the North American Review, in conjunction with his relative, Edward T. Channing, principal manager of that excellent periodical. Whilst associate editor—or rather assistant in the management—of the Review, he wrote a number of articles for its pages, among the best known of which is the review of Hazlitt's Lectures on the British Poets. We may here remark that Mr. Dana was one of the first to oppose the despotic sway of the great Jeffrey, who then ruled the Republic of Letters with a "rod of iron";—one of the first to claim for Wordsworth and Coleridge the tribute which has since been so heartily accorded to them. Mr. Dana's connection with the Review ceased in 1820, and soon after his withdrawal from the North American Club, he began The Idle Man, of which the first volume appeared in 1821. This volume, and one number of a second, compose the whole series of this periodical. It was unprofitable, and Mr. Dana did not deem it a duty to amuse and instruct the public at his own expense. In The Idle Man appeared Tom Thornton, a novel; his other stories, and several essays. In 1821 Mr. Dana contributed to The New York Review—under the editorial care of his friend, Wm. C. Bryant—his first poem, The Dying Raven. In 1827 he published his most celebrated production, The Buccaneer; some other poems were included in the same volume. In 1833 he gave to the world an edition of his Poems and Prose Writings, including The Buccaneer and other pieces embraced in his previous volume, with some new poems, and his own compositions originally published in The Idle Man. Since 1833 Mr. Dana has written but little. He has contributed a few articles to The Literary and Theological Review, and The Spirit of the Pilgrims, and a few poems to a magazine published under the editorial superintendence of the Rev. Dr. Griswold; to whose works on American Authors we are indebted for the facts contained in this notice.

We must not omit to notice, as among the most valuable of Mr. Dana's contributions to the intellectual wealth of his country, a course of ten lectures upon Shakespeare, delivered in the winters of 1839 and '40 in the cities of Boston, New York, and Philadelphia. Many of our readers will remember the interest excited among the more intelligent classes by these expositions of the excellencies of the great poet of human nature under all types and in all ages. A collective ed. of Mr. Dana's Poems and Prose Writings was pub. N. York, 1850, 2 vols. 12mo; and a vol. entitled The Poetical Works of Edgar Allan Poe and Richard H. Dana was printed by Routledge, Lon., 1857, 18mo, pp. 260. For the profit of the reader, we give some extracts from a review of the American volumes by Mr. S. G. Brown:

"No one can rise from even a rapid perusal, without a fresh impulse towards the noblest objects of life; no one can become familiar with them without being unconsciously led to a habit of serious thought, and finding his best affections most cherished, and his sympathies with the beautiful, the good, and the true, enlarged and strengthened. . . . An exquisite and indescribable delicacy and gentleness of spirit pervades every page, and beautifully tinges the thoughts which another would have expressed, if at all, with a glaring obtrusiveness. . . . The special power of the imagination, impenetrated, warmed, and directed by the affections, gives a peculiar and insubstantial vitality to the style; and perhaps there is no single quality of Mr. Dana's mind which so strongly individualizes elevates, and, as we may say, glorifies his writings. In the gravest essay, no less than in the story, you fall upon some touching expression upon almost every page, to which the heart gave birth, not the head. . . . After these quotations it surely needs no word of ours, as it has by no means been our object, to vindicate the claim of the author to what the gentle Sir Philip calls 'the sacred name of Poet.' That verdict was given long since. Accuracy of observation, a wide and genuine sympathy, an insight into the secret heart of things, a just judgment and ample knowledge, a fancy to paint and an imagination to warm and enliven, an ear for the music of language, and a mind all aglow with the fire of thought, attest the truth to which we must readily assent."—North Amer. Review, lxviii, 116.

The reader must not fail to peruse a notice of The Buccaneer in Blackwood's Magazine, (xxxvii, 419, 1835,) which the famous reviewer introduces, and treats throughout in his own inimitable style:

"We remember some years ago having been greatly struck, in Specimens of the American Poets—a Collection in three volumes, which some consummate villain has stolen from us—with The Buccaneer, by Richard H. Dana. It is included in this volume, [Selections from the American Poets, Dublin, 1834, 12mo,] and we rejoice to see it by far the most powerful and original of American poetical compositions. The power is Mr. Dana's own; but the style—though he has made it his own too—is coloured by that of Crabbe, of Wordsworth, and of Coleridge. He is no servile follower of those great masters, but his genius has been inspired by theirs—and he almost places himself on a level with them by this extraordinary story—we mean on the level on which they stand in such poems as the Old Grimes of Crabbe, the Peter Bell of Wordsworth, and the Ancient Mariner of Coleridge. The Buccaneer is not equal to any one of them, but it belongs to the same class, and shows much of the same power in the delineations of the mysterious workings of the passions and the imagination. The opening is very beautiful. . . . In our abridgment the Tale has seemed almost all one uninterrupted series of guilt and misery; but sweet and soothing imagery is sometimes very skillfully introduced for relief's sake, and sometimes, too, touches of tenderness that may awaken tears."—CHRISTOPHER NORTH.

A notice of Mr. Dana's Thoughts on the Soul, by F. W. P. Greenwood, will be found in the North American Review, xxx, 374: We quote a few lines:

"The poet's Thoughts on the Soul are evidently the breathings of his own soul; and his words flow out warmly from his own heart. There is a serious and earnest individuality about Mr. Dana's muse, which forbids the suspicion that she can be playing a part, or that she is in any degree otherwise than what she seems. The love which she demands in respectful love, the homage which is rendered to the beauty of holiness."

Dr. Griswold also notices this marked individuality, which is so striking a characteristic of Mr. Dana's compositions:

"The strength of Mr. Dana lies very much in the union of sentiment with imagination, or perhaps in an ascendancy of sentiment over his other faculties. It is this which makes every character of his so actual, as if he entered into each with his own conscience, and in himself suffered the victories over the will, and the remorse which follows them. These are beautiful touches of fancy in his tales, but as in his poems, the fancy is inferior and subject to the imagination."

See also N. Amer. Rev., vol. v., (Wm. C. Bryant;) Chris. Exam., xv., (G. C. Felton,) xlviii., (E. P. Whipple;) Amer. Whig Rev., v., (Wm. A. Jones;) Amer. Quar. Obs., ii., (E. C. Tracy;) Lit. and Theol. Rev., (Neh. Adams;) Amer. Quar. Rev., iii.; Amer. Month. Rev., iv.; N. Eng. Mag., v.; N. Englander, ix.; Knighter, xxxviii.; Phila. Mus., xvi.

"The Idle Man, which came out in numbers in 1821, '22, notwithstanding the cold reception it met with from the public, we look upon as holding a place among the first productions of American literature. It will be referred to hereafter, we doubt not, as standing apart from the crowd of contemporary writings, and distinguished by a character of thought and expression peculiarly its own. One reason why it took so little at its first appearance, was probably the hardness with which its author alighted the usual arts of attracting the public attention, and conciliating the public favour. It was not a work that reflected the passing image of the day; and the author adopted no fashionable modes of expression, submitted to no fashionable canons of criticism, copied no popular author, and intimated no consent to favourite opinions. He seems to have fixed his attention only upon what he thought the permanent qualities of literature, and his work is one which will be read a century hence, as at the present time. . . . The style of The Idle Man is genuine mother English, formed from a study of the elder authors of the language, with now and then a colloquial expression of the humblest kind, elevated into unexpected dignity, or an obsolete word or phrase revived, as if on purpose to excite the distaste of the admirers of a stately or a modernized diction. It is free from all commonplace ornaments, from all that multitude of stock metaphors and illustrations which have answered the uses of authors from time immemorial. Add to this that the speculations of the author were as much his own as his style. An original turn of thinking is not the surest passport to immediate popularity. It is much easier, and sometimes much safer, to follow one who thinks in the common track. . . . We like this work [The Buccaneer and other Poems, Boston, 1827, 8vo, pp. 113] the better, perhaps, because some of its merits are of a kind not common in modern poetry. It is simple and severe in its style, and free from that perpetual desire to be glittering and imaginative, which dresses up every idea that occurs in the same allowance of figures of speech. As to what is called ambition of style, the work does not contain a particle of it: if the sentiment or image presented to the reader's mind be of itself calculated to make an impression, it is allowed to do so, by being given in the most direct and forcible language; if otherwise, no pains are taken to make it pass for more than it is worth. There is even an occasional homeliness of expression which does not strike us agreeably, and a few passages are liable to the charge of harshness and abruptness. Yet, altogether, there is power put forth in this little volume, strength of pathos, talent at description, and command of language. There is the same propensity as was exhibited in The Idle Man to deal with strong and gloomy passions, with regret, remorse, fear, and despair, with feelings over which present events have no control except to exaggerate them, and which look steadily back to the unalterable past or forward to the mysterious future."—Wm. C. Bryant: N. Amer. Rev., xvi. 280.

Dana, Richard Henry, Jr., son of the preceding, and a distinguished member of the Boston Bar, is known as the author of Two Years before the Mast, N.Y., 1840, 24mo.

"This is, in many respects, a remarkable book. It is a successful attempt to describe a class of men, and a course of life, which, though familiarly spoken of by most people, and considered as within the limits of civilization, will appear to them now almost as just discovered. To find a new subject in so old a sphere of humanity is something; and scarcely second to this are the spirit and skill with which it is handled. It seems as if the writer must have been favoured with a special gift for his novel enterprises."

"The style we had never thought of as a distinct thing, till we began to prepare this notice; and, no doubt, because it calls for no separate remark, and is content with doing his work. It is plain, straightforward and manly, never swollen for effect, or kept down from apprehension. There is no appearance of seeking for words; but those that will best answer the purpose come and all into their proper places of their own will; so that, whatever the transitions may be, the composition flows on with natural, stream-like varieties, while we partake of the changing influences without a word of comment, and probably with little consciousness. This, we suppose, is the perfection of style, so far as impression is concerned; and to some extent it will always be found in an intelligent writer, who, without thinking much of himself, or of making a sensation, says honestly how things were, and how they affected him. We must not, however, attribute too much to sincerity, or even to intelligence. Where language is employed with singular fitness and ease, a writer must be deep in the secret of its power, though at little trouble in managing it."—E. T. Channing: North Amer. Rev., lii. 55. See also Chris. Exam., vol. xxix.; Dem. Rev., vii.; N. York Rev., vii.

We add a few lines from a transatlantic critic:

"This is an exceedingly interesting narrative, depicting, in its true colours, what is the real life of a sailor before the mast. It is the only work that has yet appeared from the pen of one whose personal experience has enabled him to set forth to the public what are the thoughts, feelings, enjoyments, and sufferings of our seamen; and Mr. Dana, the author of it, has been most successful in his delineation of them. We strongly recommend this book to the attention of the Tars of Old England, as being one which will afford them both amusement and instruction. The fine tone of manly feeling and tender sympathy which runs throughout the whole of it, will not only suggest to them how they may make themselves happy in their condition of life, but how they may encounter and overcome the many troubles and trials to which their hardy profession is necessarily exposed. We hope to hear that every sailor, from the cabin-boy to the captain, has procured for himself a copy of it. We are sure one perusal of it will amply repay him both the expense and time taken up in it."

"We understand from competent judges—from seamen themselves—that it is the only book that has yet appeared which gives any real idea of the life of a sailor. Captain Marryat's novels do not depict what life on board ship is. Much of what is reported in them to have passed in conversation was never spoken, and never had existence but in the fertile imagination of the novelist: it is, in short, as far different from the real life and character of the sailor, as it possibly can be; and those who want to see what is the true character of the man on board ship, have yet to peruse the work of this estimable young man. It is, in fact, a voice from the common sailor—a true picture of his thoughts, feelings, the fore-castle—a faithful simple record of the every-day duty of enjoyments and sufferings."

Mr. Dana has also published The Seaman's Friend, containing a Treatise on Practical Seamanship, with Plates; a Dictionary of Sea Terms; Customs and Usages of the Merchant Service; Laws relating to the Practical Duties of Masters and Mariners, 1841, 12mo; Lon., 1856, p. 8vo.

Dana, Samuel L., M.D. Treatise on Diseases, 8vo. Essay on Manures, N. York, 1850, 12mo. Muck Manual for Manures, Lowell, 1851, 12mo. See DANA, JAMES FREEMAN, M.D.

Danby, Thomas Osborne, Earl of, subsequently Duke of Leeds. Copies and Extracts of some Letters written to and from the Earl of Danby, 1676-78, with particular Remarks upon some of them, Lon., 1710, 8vo. Pub. by his Grace's direction to exculpate himself from the charges laid against him in Parliament in 1678. See Arguments in the Court of King's Bench on his Motion for Bail, 1682, fol.; Memoirs relating to his impeachment, 1711, 8vo.

Dance, George, d. 1824. A Collection of 72 Portraits from Life, engraved by Wm. Daniel, Lon., 1808-14, 12 Nos. 2 vols fol.

Dancer. History of the Civil Wars of Great Britain and Ireland, 1661, fol.

Dancer, John. Plato and Aristotle, Lon., 1673, 12mo; Nicomede, a Tragi-Comedy, 1671; Agrippa, 1675, sm. fol.; all from the French. With Nicomede will be found a Catalogue of all the English Stage Plays printed till this present year, 1671. Dancer trans. Amynta, a Play from Tasso. All of his trans. are scarce.

Dancer, Thomas. Med. and botanical works, 1781-1806.

Dancy, Mrs. Elizabeth, b. 1509, second daughter of Sir Thomas More, was a correspondent of Erasmus, who praises her for "her pure Latin style, and genteel way of writing." See Ballard's Memoirs of British Ladies.

Dane, John, D.D. Serms., 1705, '10, '11, '12.

Dane, Nathan, d. 1834, aged 82, a native of Ipswich, Massachusetts, founded in 1829 the Law Professorship which bears his name at Harvard University. Abridgment and Digest of American Law, with Notes and Comments, Boston, 1829, 9 vols. 8vo. Appendix to ditto, 1830, 8vo.

"His comments exhibit various learning and close reflection, and his illustrations cannot fail to assist such as seek for aid in those obscure parts of the law which perplex by their intricacy and equivocal direction."

"Although the Abridgment is a work of great labour, and an acknowledged monument of its author's industry, care, and accuracy, yet it has never been a great favourite with the profession, from the want of method which pervades the entire work. It was valuable when first published, but is now nearly superseded as a book of reference, and no one thinks of reading it as an elementary treatise. Its immethodical plan and the natural changes and progress of American jurisprudence have almost consigned to oblivion the half-century's toil of a learned jurist and a true philanthropist."—Martin's Legal Bibl., 252; 4 Amer. Jurist, lxiii. 411; (9) 411.

"A liberal and learned profession will hold in high estimation the labours of this eminent civilian and lawyer, who, for half a century, has made American jurisprudence and American institutions his peculiar study; and every lawyer, instead of feeling regret for deficiencies, ought to be animated with sincere gratification for what has been accomplished."—North American Review, xliii. 1, 1826.

When we add to the above tribute a consideration of the benefits which have resulted from the Dane Law School and Dane Professorship, which has been dignified by the learning of a Story, a Greenleaf, and a Parsons—we feel authorized in claiming for Nathan Dane a prominent place in the first rank of American philanthropists. It were easy to add to the catalogue of Mr. Dane's claims to the respectful remembrance of his countrymen.

Danes, John. A Light to Lillie; or the Latin Tongue, Lon., 1631, 8vo. Paralipomena, Orthographia, &c., 1638, 4to.

Danett, Thos. Historie of France, from the death of Charles 8th till the death of Henry 2d, 1600, 4to. The Description of the Low Countreys; an Epitome out of Guiccardini, 1593, 8vo.

Danforth, John, 1660-1730, a minister of Dorchester, Mass. Serms., 1697, 1710, '16, &c. Poems, 1727, &c.

Danforth, Samuel, 1626-1674, a minister of Roxbury, Mass., father of the preceding, was a native of England. Astronom. descrip. of the late Comet, Camb., New Eng., 1665, '66, 8vo. Serms., 1670, &c.

Danforth, Samuel, 1666-1727, a minister of Taunton, Mass., son of the preceding. Eulogy, 1713. Sermon, 1714. He left in MS. an Indian Dictionary, a part of which is now in the library of the Mass. Historical Society.

Danforth, Thos. Theory of Chimnies, 1796, 8vo.

Dangerfield, J. Short-hand, Chelsea, 1814, 8vo.

Dangerfield, Thos. Theolog. treatises, &c., 1679-85.

Daniel, George. The Times; or the Prophecy, Lon., 1812, 8vo; 2d edit., 1813. Miscellaneous Poems, 1812, 8vo.

Daniel, George. Modern Dunciad, Virgil in London, and other Poems, Lon., 1835, p. 8vo.

"This modern Pope, whoever he be, has produced a Dunciad, which the stinging bard of Twickenham would not be ashamed to own. The bard spares neither poet nor courtier; and in the office of a satirist, he speaks with the boldness of Juvenal."—Low. Monthly Review.

The Missionary, a Poem, 1847, sm. 4to. Merrie England in the Olden Time, 1842, 2 vols. p. 8vo. This is an instructive and amusing volume. The good-humoured antiquary is no ignoble philanthropist. Democritus in London, &c., 1852, p. 8vo.

Daniel, Godfrey. The Christian Doctrine, in six principles, Dubl., 1652, 8vo. In English and Irish.

Daniel, John. Comfort against all kinde of Calamities, Lon., 1576, 8vo. This is a trans. from the Spanish of Peres.

Daniel, John. The Jewish Uction, Lon., 1651, 12mo.

Daniel, John. Life and Adventures of, Lon., 1751, 12mo. Written in imitation of Peter Wilkins.

Daniel, Rev. John. Ecclesiastical History of the Britons and Saxons, 1815, 8vo.

Daniel, Mrs. Mackenzie. The Poor Conch, 1646, 3 vols. p. 8vo. My Sister Minnie, Lon., 1844, 3 vols. p. 8vo. Georgina Hammond, 1849, 3 vols. p. 8vo. Other works.
"Amongst our novellists we have no more pure, agreeable, and genial writer than Mrs. Mackenzie Daniel. Georgina Hammond is written to become one of the standard novels in the language, and to be read over and over again,—providing, with a graphic pen, the manners, thoughts, customs, and feelings prevailing at this moment among large classes of the English people."—Lon. Literary Herald.

Daniel, Richard. A Copy Book, Lon., 1664, fol.

Daniel, Richard. A Poem, Lon., 1714, fol.

Daniel, Richard, Dean of Armagh. A Paraphrase on some Select Psalms, Lon., 1732, 8vo.

Daniel, Samuel, 1563-1619, a poet and historian, was a native of Taunton, Somersetshire. He was educated at Magdalen Hall, Oxford, and was subsequently tutor to the celebrated Anne Clifford, daughter of George, Earl of Cumberland, and afterwards Countess of Pembroke. Of his personal history but few records have descended to posterity, and later rumours have rendered even these questionable. That he was a great favourite with his contemporaries, we have ample evidence. For some years he resided in a small house in the parish of St. Luke's, London, associated with Shakespeare, Marlowe, Chapman, and others, and towards the close of his life retired to a farm at Bechington near Philips Norton, in Somersetshire. Discourse of Rare Inventions; a trans. from Paulus Jovius, Lon., 1545, 8vo. Della, containing certain sonnets, 1562, 4to. Dein and Romance augmented, 1594, 4to. The Tragedie of Cleopatra, 1594, 4to. Histories of the Civile Warres between the Houses of York and Lancaster, 1596, 4to; in verse. Octavio to Antonius, 1598, 8vo. Myrrha, 1599, 4to. Epiques, 1601, 4to. For certain small poems, with the tragedy of I 8vo. Defense of Ryme against Thomas C 8vo. A Panegyric, 1623, 4to. Twelve Go 8vo. The Queens Armes, a Pastoral Tr 1604, 4to. Toby's Festival, 1610, 4to. Ti of England, Part 1, reaching to the end of E. 8o in prose, 1612, 4to. Part 2, reaching to th. reign of E. Edw III., 1612, '21, '22, '24, fol. Continued to the end of K. Rich. III., by John Russell; to which is added Lord Bacon's Life of Henry VII., Lon., 1621, '30. To which is added Hist. of Eng. to the end of Henry VI. See Kennett's Hist. Certain small poems heretofore divulged, 1611, 12mo. Poem on the Death of the Earl of Devon, 1623, 4to. Plays and Poems, 1623, 4to. Hymns Triumph, 1623, 4to. Collections of the Hist. of Eng. to the end of Henry III., 1626, fol. Whole Works, in Poetry, 1601, fol., 1623, 4to. Pub. by the Author's brother Bidd. Anglo Poet., 24 16a. 8d. Works, 1631, fol. Pastoral Works, with Mem. of his Life and Writings, 1712, 2 vols. 12mo.

"The works of Samuel Daniel containe somewhat a flat, yet without a very pure and copious English and words so remarkable as any man's, and other perhaps for poems than manners."—Bacon.

"For sweetness and rhyming, second to none."—Darwin.

Gabriel Harvey, in his Four Letters and Certain Sonnets, praises our author for his efforts to enrich and polish his native tongue.

"One whom memory will ever be true to the midst of those who great history or poetry. But however his Genius was qualified for Poetry, I take his History of England to be the Crown of all his Works."—Longhurst's Dramatic Poets, 1401.

"His father was a master of music, and his harmonious mind made an impression on his son's genius, who proved an exquisite poet. He arrived in his Christian and catholic, two holy prophets, his masters to qualify his reputation, that he observed all pre-eminence. He was also a judicious historian, written his View of our English Kings from the conquest until Edward III., wherein he both the happiness to reconcile beauty with clearness, quality of great distance to other authors. In his old age he turned husbandman, and resided a farm in Wiltshire, which the Doctor. I can give no account how he thrived thereupon. For though he was well versed in Virgil, his fellow husbandman-poet, yet there is more required to make a rich farmer than only to say his Georgics by heart, and I question whether his Italian will fit our English husbandry. Besides, I suspect that Mr. Daniel's dairy was too fine and sublimated to be wrought down to his private profit."—Author's Works.

"Though very rarely sublime, he has skill in the pathetic, and his pages are dignified with neither pedantry nor conceit. We find, both in his poetry and prose, such a legitimate and rational flow of language as approaches nearer the style of the 18th than the 16th century, and of which we may safely assert, that it never will become obsolete. In his Complaint of Cleopatra he has caught Swift's manner very happily."—Hilary.

"The character of Daniel's genius seems to be propriety, rather than elevation. His language is generally pure and harmonious, and his reflections are just. But his thoughts are too abstract, and appeal rather to the understanding than to the imagination or the heart, and he wanted the fire necessary to the higher flights of poetry."—See Boston Review.

"If we revert to the accounts of Daniel which were published in 1806, we shall there find, as Mr. Malone had previously remarked, 40 the prototype of Shakespeare's countryman. . . . There is reason to suppose that some of Shakespeare's sonnets were written before the appearance of Daniel's Della. There is also in Daniel much of that turn of abstract thought, and that restoration of words, which so remarkably distinguishes the sonnets of our bard.

"Sound morality, predominate wisdom, and unusual freedom of the pathos, delivered in a style of them unequalled clarity and perspicuity. Will be recognized throughout his work. (The Civil War) are between the two Houses of Lancaster and York, but neither warmth, passion, nor vehemence, nor the most direct trace of enthusiasm, and he seemed to estimate the same. But these historical scenes Raleigh, Heyward, Kellian, and Lord Stanes are executed in purity of style and perspicuity of narration, by Daniel, whose History of England, closing with the reign of Edward the Third, is a production which reflects great credit on the age in which it is written."—Daniel's Shakespeare and his Times.

Certainly Daniel succeeded better as a prose historian than as a poetical annalist. Drayton speaks of him as "too much historian in verse;

His times were smooth, his metres well did time;

But yet his measure better fitted prose."

"It is the chief praise of Daniel, and must have contributed to what popularity he enjoyed in his own age, that his English is unobscured; pure, free from affectation and ornament, and from pedantic innovation, with very little that is now obsolete."—Johnson's Dictionary in the Ed. of Europe.

Read a review of Daniel's poems in the Retrospective Review, vol. 277, Lon., 1823.

Daniel, Samuel. Archiepiscopal Priority Instituted by Christ, 1642, 4to.

Daniel, Samuel, M.D. Dissertation de Letore, 1776, 8vo.

Daniel, T. British Customs of the Nation, Lon., 1762, fol.

Daniel, Wm. Journal of his Expedition from London to Surat in India, Lon., 1792, 8vo.

Daniel, Wm. Treatise on Perspective, 1697, 12mo.

"Well calculated to answer the end for which it was designed."—Brit. Crit.

Daniel, Rev. Wm. B. Rural Sports or Treatise on Hunting, Hawking, Shooting, Angling, Fowling, &c., Lon., 1801, '02, 2 vols. 4to. Other ed., 1801, 5 vols. 8vo; 1803, 3 vols. imp. 4to; 1812, 3 vols. r. 8vo, and large paper in 4to; Supplement, 1813, r. 8vo, 4to, and imp. 4to. Illustrations, principally by Scott. The value of this splendid publication is well known.

Daniell, E. R. 1. Practical Observations on the New Orders for the reg. of the Proc. and Proceed. of the Ct. of Chancery, Lon., 1841, 8vo. 2. Considerations on Nature in Chancery, Lon., 1842, 8vo. 3. Reports of Cases argued and determined on the Equity side of the Ct. of Chancery, 1617-20 inclusive, Lon., 1834, 8vo. 4. Practitioner of the High Ct. of Chancery, 2d ed. by T. R. Headlam, Lon., 1844, 2 vols. 8vo; 1st Amer. edit. by J. C. Perkins, Boston, 1844, 2 vols. 8vo; and 2d Amer. edit. Supplement to Daniell's Chancery Practice, by T. R. Headlam, Lon., 1851, 8vo.

"The universal opinion of the Profession has stamped upon Mr. Daniell's book a high character for usefulness and general accuracy. It has become, in fact, the manual of the Chancery Practitioner."—Law.

"Limitation in declaring that this is the most able ever been written on the Practice of the Court of a Jurist."

"A very valuable book."—Rev. James R. Taylor, in the Dublin Review.

"Such as all the students to the student, the Practitioner, and the Judge, and should consider as Equity Library complete without it."—Rev. Thomas Knox, in the Rev. Judge Pith. Ct. of Common Pleas.

"Daniell's Chancery Practice is, perhaps, the most elaborate, complete, and authoritative treatise on the subject that has appeared."—Rev. John R. Green, in American Justice of the Supreme Court of Penna.

Daniell, John Frederick, D.C.L., 1790-1846, b. in London. He was a pupil of Prof. Brander, and in 1816, in connection with him, he commenced the Quarterly Journal of Science and Art, the first twenty vols. of which were pub. under their joint superintendence. In 1823 appeared the 1st ed. of his great work, entitled Meteorological Essays; 3d ed., 1827, 3d ed., 1845, 2 vols. 8vo. He was engaged in revising the proofs of the 3d ed. at the time of his death.

"This was the first systematic attempt to explain the general principles of meteorology by the known laws which regulate the temperature and constitution of gases and vapours, and in which the meteorological observations and isolated phenomena presented by the earth's atmosphere were considered in their most extensive and general bearings."—Knapp's Eng. Cyc.

Introduction to Chemical Philosophy, 1839, 8vo; 2d ed., 1845, 8vo.

Mr. Daniell takes rank as one of the most distinguished scientific men of the nineteenth century. He is the only individual on whom all the three medals in the gift of the Royal Society were bestowed. For a very carefully-prepared biographical sketch of Mr. D., and a list of his valuable contributions to various scientific journals, see Knapp's Eng. Cyc., Div. Bing., vol. II.

Daniell, Saml. African Scenery and Animals, Lon., 1808, fol. Do. &c. of Ceylon, 1808, fol. Do. &c. of Southern Africa; engraved by Wm. Daniell, 1820, r. 4to. Views near the Cape of Good Hope, No. 1, 1804.

Daniell, Thomas, 1750-1840, uncle of the following, a distinguished painter of Oriental scenery, animals, &c. See Bohn's Cat., Lon., 1841, and the following article.

Daniell, William Daniell, R.A., 1769-1837, painter and engraver. At the age of fourteen he accompanied his uncle, Thomas Daniell, to India. They spent ten years in sketching the magnificent scenery from Cape Comorin to the Himalaya Mountains. Many of their drawings were afterwards engraved and pub., the original ed. of which—Oriental Scenery and Antiquities, elephant folio size, 6 vols. (150 views)—was completed in 1808, and pub. at Two Hundred and Ten Pounds, (£210.) The 6th vol. was executed by Thomas Daniell. The coppers were destroyed. He also engraved and pub. Picturesque Voyage to India; Zoography, in conjunction with Mr. W. Wood; Animated Nature, 2 vols.; The Docks, a Series of Illustrations; The Hunchback, after R. Smirke, R.A. From 1814 to '25 he was chiefly engaged in a work of extraordinary labour, entitled a Voyage Round Great Britain. He was the chief contributor to the Oriental Annual. See H. G. Bohn's Guinea Cat., Lon., 1841.

Danis, H. H. Exercises on the Anabasis of Xenophon, Lon., 12mo.

Dannett, Rev. H. Slave-Trade, Lon., 1788, 8vo.

Danniston, Gual. Psalmi Davidici, 8vo.

Dannye, Robert, D.D. Serm., York, 1718, 4to.

Dansey, Rev. J. C. Hist. of the English Crusaders, Lon., 1850, imp. 4to. Of this beautiful work only 40 copies were printed for sale, at £3 13s. 6d. It is executed entirely on stone, in the black letter, with 31 plates, &c.

Dansey, Rev. Wm. Arrian on Coursing: The Cynegeticus of the Younger Xenophon, &c., and an Appendix rel. to the Canes Venatici of Classical Antiquity, 1831, imp. 8vo.

"A most complete and almost inexhaustible fund of amusing, interesting, practical, and instructive information on the subject."—Thacker on Coursing.

Horn Decanices Rurales, or a Hist. of Rural Deans, 1835, 2 vols. sm. 4to; 1844.

"Abounding in solid ecclesiastical and antiquarian views."—ARCHDEACON GODDARD.

Dansie, John. Mathemat. Manual, Lon., 1627, 12mo.

Danson, F. M., and Lloyd, J. H. Reports of Cases rel. to Commerce, Manufac., &c. in Cts. C. L., Lon., 1830, 8vo.

Danson, J. F., and G. D. Dempsey. The Inventor's Manual; a Treatise of the Law of Patents, Lon., 1843, 8vo.

"This is a useful manual."—Legal Observer.

See CURTIS, GEORGE TICKNOR.

Danson, Thos. Works agst. Quakers, &c., Lon., 1659-94.

Danverd, John. The Royal Onke; the Travels, Escapes, &c. of Charles II., Lon., 1660, 4to.

D'Anvers, Alicia. Academia; or the Humours of the University of Oxford, in burlesque verse, Lon., 1691, 4to.

Danvers, Arthur. Serm. on Popery, 1736, 4to.

D'Anvers, Caleb, of Gray's Inn. The Craftsman; being a Criticism on the Hist. of the Times, Lon., 1727, 14 vols. 12mo. See BOLINGBROKE, LORD. Remarks on the History of England, Lon., 1743, 8vo.

D'Anvers, Henry. Works on Baptism, &c., Lon., 1674, '75, 8vo.

Danvers, Henry. Liberty of Conscience, 1649.

Danvers, Joseph. Tipping tipt Justice, Lon., 8vo.

D'Anvers, Knightly. A Genl. Abridgt. of the Common Law, alphabetically digested under proper titles, Lon., 1705-13, 2 vols. fol.; 2d edit., 1725, '32, '37, 3 vols. fol.

This is, so far as it goes, a trans. of Rollo's Abridgt. It is only completed to the title Extinguishment. See Pref. to vol. xviii., Viner's Abridgt.

Danyel, John. Songs for the Lute, Viol, and Voyce, 1606.

Darby. Vapour Bath. Med. Com., ix. 305, 1785.

Darby, John. Manual of Botany, Macon, 1841, 12mo. Botany of the Southern States; in two parts, New York, 1855, 12mo.

Darby, Samuel. Serms., 1784, '86.

Darby, Wm., d. 1827. Descrip. of Louisiana, 1816, 8vo. Emigrant's Guide, 1818, 8vo. Tour from New York to Detroit, 1819. Memoir on the Geog. and Hist. of Florida, 1821. New edit. of Brooke's Universal Gazetteer, 1823. Maps and Plans.

D'Arblay, Madame Frances, 1752-1840, was the second daughter of CHARLES BURNBY, (q. v.) Musical Doctor, and was a native of Lynn Regis, Norfolk, England. Much of what might otherwise have been said here relative to the brilliant and intellectual circle in which Fanny Burney moved from her childhood has been anticipated in our article upon Dr. Burney. We may add that the circumstances attendant upon the composition and anonymous publication of Evelina are too well known to claim repetition. The oft-told story was never so well told as by the authoress herself, in her avowal to George III. Some doubt has been expressed relative to the early date at which it is asserted Evelina was composed. It certainly was not given to the world until 1778, when Fanny was about twenty-six. Had the work, or the greater portion of it, been lying in MS. for nine years? Evelina was sold for £20; but this was a small part only of the young lady's reward.

"Evelina seems a work that should result from long experience and deep and intimate knowledge of the world: yet it has been written without either. Miss Burney is a real wonder. What she is, she is intuitively. Dr. Burney told me she had the fewest advantages of any of his daughters, from some peculiar circumstances. And such has been her timidity, that he himself had not any suspicion of her powers. . . . Modesty with her is neither pretence nor decorum; it is an ingredient of her nature; for she who could part with such a work for twenty pounds, could know so little of its worth or of her own, as to leave no possible doubt of her humility."—Dr. Johnson.

The testimony of a still more distinguished person shall be adduced in favour of the merits of Cecilia, pub. four years later:

"There are few—I believe I may say fairly there are none at all—that will not find themselves better informed concerning human nature, and their stock of observation enriched, by reading your Cecilia. . . . I might trespass upon your delicacy if I should fill my letter to you with what I fill my conversation to others; I should be troublesome to you alone if I should tell you all I feel and think on the natural vein of humour, the tender pathetic, the comprehensive and noble moral, and the sagacious observation, that appear quite throughout this extraordinary performance. . . . In an age distinguished by producing extraordinary women, I hardly dare to tell where my opinion would place you amongst them."—EDMUND BURKE: Letter to Miss Burney, Whitehall, July 29, 1782.

In 1786 occurred the most unfortunate event of Miss Burney's Life—her appointment to the post of Second Keeper of the Robes to Queen Charlotte. From this intolerable slavery—for slavery it was, notwithstanding the kind treatment of her royal patrons—she was relieved in 1791, and in 1793 she married a French refugee officer, the Count D'Arblay. In 1802 she accompanied her husband to Paris, and was obliged to remain in France—the Count having entered the army of Napoleon—until 1812. He died in that year, and their son, the Rev. A. D'Arblay of Camden Town chapel, near London, followed his father to the grave in 1832. Madame D'Arblay attained the great age of eighty-eight, dying at Bath in 1840. Her other productions, which by no means fulfilled "the promise of her spring," were Edwin and Elgitha, a Tragedy, 1795; Camilla, which was pub. by subscription in 1796, and paid her three thousand guineas; and The Wanderer, a Tale in 5 vols., 1814, for which she received £1500. She also pub. Brief Reflections relative to the French Emigrant Clergy, 1793, 8vo; and a Memoir of her father, Dr. Burney, in 1832, 3 vols. 8vo.

The Diary and Letters of Madame D'Arblay were given to the world in 7 vols. p. 8vo, 1842-46. The unreserved and comprehensive character of the lady's journal may be inferred from her prologue:

"To have some account of my thoughts, actions, and acquaintance, when the hour arrives when time is more nimble than memory, is the reason which induces me to keep a journal:—a journal in which I shall confess every thought—shall open my whole heart."

Notwithstanding their egotism and prolixity, certainly these volumes are among the most delightful in the language! To the mere novel-reader they are charming; to the student of literary history and English manners, invaluable. We must refer the reader to a review of this work by T. B. Macaulay, (Edin. Rev., Jan. 1843,) and to notices of Madame D'Arblay's writings in the London Quarterly Review, xi. 123, lxx. 134, and in Blackwood's Magazine, l. 784:

"Miss Burney did for the English novel what Jeremy Collier did for the English drama. She first showed that a tale might be written in which both the fashionable and the vulgar life of London might be exhibited with great force, and with broad comic humour, and which yet should not contain a single line inconsistent with rigid morality, or even with virgin delicacy. She took away the reproach which lay on a most useful and delightful species of composition. She vindicated the right of her sex to an equal share in a fair and noble promise of letters. . . . Burke had sat up all night to read her writings, and Johnson had pronounced her superior to Fielding, when Rogers was still a schoolboy and Southey still in petticoats. . . . We soon discovered to our great delight that this Diary was kept before Madame D'Arblay became eloquent. It is for the most part, written in her earliest and best manner; in true woman's English, clear, natural, and lively."—T. B. MACAULAY: Edin. Review, Jan. 1843.

"The Diary is a work unequalled in literary and social value by any thing else of a similar kind in the language."—Lon. Naval and Military Gazette.

"This work presents an unrivalled combination of attractions. That extraordinary man, Johnson, is painted far better than he is by Boswell."—Court Journal.

The reviewer in the London Quarterly quite forgets his gallantry in his disgust at Miss Fanny's egotism:

"The interest is indeed much less than we anticipated, but in all the rest—the diffusiveness—the pomposity—the prolixity—the false colouring—the factitious details—and, above all, the personal affectation and vanity of the author, this book exceeds our worst apprehensions. . . . We have indeed brought before us not merely the minor notabilities of the day, but a great many persons whose station and talents assure them an historic celebrity. . . . but when we come a little closer, and see and hear what all these eminent and illustrious personages are saying and doing, we are not a little surprised and vexed to find them a wearisome congregation of monotonous and featureless prosers, brought together for one single object, in which they, one and all, seem occupied, as if it were the main business of human life—namely, the glorification of Miss Fanny Burney—her talents—her taste—her sagacity—her wit—her manners—her temper—her delicacy—even, her beauty—and, above all, her modesty!"—Vol. lxx. 244.

Allan Cunningham's summary of the merits and demerits of the author of Evelina is drawn up with his usual taste and judgment. We must content ourselves with a brief extract:

"Her works are deficient in original vigour of conception, and her characters in depth and nature. She has considered so anxiously the figured silks and tamboured muslins which flutter about society, that she has made the throbbings of the hearts which they cover a secondary consideration. . . . Fashion passes away, and the manners of the great are unstable, but natural emotion belongs to immortality."—Biog. and Crit. Hist. of the Lit. of the last Fifty Years.

Darch, John. Sermon, 1766, 4to.

Darcie, or Darcy, Abraham. Original of Idolatries; a trans., 1624, 4to. Darcy "fathered this book upon Isaac Casaubon, and was imprisoned in consequence." See Fuller's Church History. Annales: The True and Royal Hist. of Elizabeth, Queene of England, France, and Ireland, 1625, 4to.

"A translation of Camden, from the French, by Abraham Darcy, who, according to Dr. Fuller, understood not the Latin, and has therefore committed many mistakes."—Br. Nicolson.

Other works.

D'Arcy, Patrick, Count, 1725–1779, s'native of Galway, Ireland, served in the French army. 1. Essai sur l'Artillerie, 1760–62. 2. Mémoire sur la Durée des Sensations de la Vue, 1765. 3. Sur la Théorie de la Lune, 1749. 4. Sur la Théorie et Pratique de l'Artillerie, 1766. 5. Nouvelle Théorie d'Artillerie, 1766. 6. Recueil de Pièces sur un Nouveau Fusil, 1767. He made experiments in electricity and mechanics.

"Condorcet fit son éloge à l'académie des sciences. Plusieurs de ses écrits sont insérés dans les Mémoires de l'académie des sciences."—Biographie Universelle.

Dare, Wm. Sermon, before the Freemasons, 1747, 8vo.

Darell, Lt. Col. Sketches of China, India, and the Cape, 1853, fol.

Darell, or Darrell, John. Treatises on possession by devils, 1600, '02, '41. A Detection of that Discours of S. Harsnet, entitled a Discoverie of the fraudulent practices of John Darrell, 1609, 4to.

"In this treatise 'full of sound and fury,' Darrell has contrived to render it somewhat doubtful whether he was a dupe or an impostor."—Girton; and see Bliss's Wood's Athen. Oxon.

Darell, John, was employed from 1615 to 1665 in the affairs of the East Indies. East India Trade first discovered by the English, Lon., 1651, 4to. Strange News from Indies, 1652, 4to. The Second part of Amboyna, 1665, 4to.

Darell, Rev. Wm. Hist. of Dover Castle, Lon., 1786, 4to.

Darker, John. A Breviary of Military Discipline, Lon., 1692, 8vo.

Darley, George, combines two characters which are not thought to be peculiarly compatible—mathematician and poet. Poems. Sylvia, or the May Queen, Lon., 1827, 12mo. Familiar Astronomy, 1830, 12mo. Popular Algebra, 3d edit., 1836, 12mo. Geometrical Companion, 2d edit., 1841, 12mo. Ethelstan, a Dramatic Chronicle, 1841, 8vo. Geometry, 5th edit., 1844, 12mo. Errors of Extasie and other Poems, 8vo. Trigonometry, 3d edit., 1849, 12mo.

"No prose or poetry can be further from the sonorous school of Addison, and nowhere can we find rhythmical cadences of greater beauty than in some occasional passages of Darley."—A critic in Arcturus: see Griswold's Poets and Poetry of England.

"George Darley is a true poet and excellent mathematician: there is much compact and graceful poetry in his May Queen; and in The Olympian Revels a dramatic freedom and fervour too seldom seen in song."—Cunningham's Biog. and Crit. Hist. of Lit. for the last Fifty Years, 1833.

Darley, J. R. Treatise on the Dramatic Literature of the Greeks, Lon., 1840, 8vo. Homer, with Questions, 1848, 12mo.

476

Darley, John. Chelsea College, Lon., 1662, 4to.

Darley, W. F. Public G. Statutes rel. to Ireland, Dubl., 1841, 5 vols. 8vo. General Orders Ct. Court of Chancery in Ireland, &c., 1843, 12mo.

Darling, J. J. Powers and Duties of Law Officers, Lon., 8vo. Practice of the Court of Session, Scotland, 2 vols. 8vo.

Darling, James. Cyclopædia Bibliographica; A Library Manual of Theolog. and General Literature, and Guide for Authors, Preachers, Students, and Literary Men. Analytical, Bibliographical, and Biographical. Vol. i., composed of 21 Nos., 1852–54. Vol. ii., Parts 1 to 5, 1857. We heartily recommend this truly valuable work—to which our pages have been frequently indebted—to every one who possesses knowledge, and every one who seeks it. Vol. i. contains Authors and their works, alphabetically arranged. In many cases the volumes are carefully dissected, so that the reader can see at a glance the topics discussed, and turn at once to the portion which contains the matter sought for. In the second volume the "whole of the matter contained in the first is arranged under heads or common places in scientific order, with an Alphabetical Index, by which any subject can be readily referred to; and all authors of any authority who have written on it are at once exhibited, with the titles of their Works, Treatises, Dissertations, or Sermons, and a reference to the volumes and pages where they are to be found."

"Mr. Darling has been an eminent theological bookseller in London for at least forty years. He has brought all his bibliographical knowledge to bear upon this most valuable and accurate work. All the leading English journals, both ecclesiastical and secular, episcopal and non-episcopal, unite in commending its plan and execution."—T. H. Hoare, D.D., Assist. Lib. Brit. Mus., in a letter to the author of this Dictionary, Aug. 31, 1858.

Darling, John. Carpenter's Rule, Lon., 1658, 8vo.

Darling, P. M. Romance of the Highlands, 1810.

Darlington, William, M.D., LL.D., b. 1782, in Birmingham township, Chester co., Penn., was brought up to Agriculture till 18 years of age. In 1800 he commenced the study of Medicine under Dr. John Vaughan of Wilmington, Del., and in 1804 he graduated M. D. in the University of Penn. In 1806, '07 he made a voyage to India as ship's surgeon. During the last 40 years he has filled several important positions of trust under the General Government, as well as that of his native State. The degree of LL.D. was conferred by Yale College. Dr. Darlington has spent a long life in the pursuit of Botany, his favourite science, in which he has obtained an enviable reputation. The following are his principal works: 1. Mutual Influence of Habits and Disease, 8vo, 1804–06. 2. Flora Cæstrica, 1st ed., 1826; 2d, 1837; 3d, 1853. This work has been favourably noticed by the greatest botanists of Europe. 3. Edited Reliquies Baldwinii, 1843, 8vo. 4. Agricultural Botany, 1847. 5. Edited Memorials of John Bartram and Humphrey Marshall, Phil., 1849, r. 8vo. These works have all been favourably reviewed in Silliman's Journal, q v.

Darnell, W. N. Sermons, Lon., 1816, 8vo.

Darracott, R. W. Sermons, 1756, 12mo.

Dart. Complaint of the Black Knight; from Chaucer, 1718, 8vo.

Dart, J. H. Suggestions for a General Registry, Lon., 1844, 8vo. Compendium of the Law and Practice of Vendors and Purchasers of Real Estate, 2d edit., Lon., 1852, 8vo. Amer. edit., with copious Notes and References. Also a Preparatory View of the Existing Law of Real Property in England and the United States, by Thos. W. Waterman, New York, 1851, 8vo.

"I have examined with attention Dart's Vendors and Purchasers of Real Estate, edited by Mr. Waterman. It is a most excellent practical work."—Hon. Lewis H. Sandroan, Judge of the Superior Court, New York.

Dart, John. Hist. and Antiq. of the Cathedral Church of Canterbury, Lon., 1726, fol. Hist. and Antiq. of the Abbey Church of St. Peter's, Westm., 1723, 2 vols. fol.

Darton, Nich. Christ the True Bishop, Lon., 1641, 4to.

D'Arusmont, Madame Frances, better known as Miss Fanny Wright, d. at Cincinnati, 1852, aged 57, made herself famous in America about 1830 by the promulgation of some foolish doctrines, which we understand she subsequently repudiated. 1. Altorf; a Tragedy, Phila., 1819, 8vo. 2. Views of Society and Manners in America, &c. in 1818–20, N. York, 1821, 8vo; Lon., 1821, 8vo. 3. A Few Days in Athens, Lon., 1822, 8vo.

Darwall, Mrs. E. Poems, 1794; ditto, 1811.

Darwall, John. Political Lamentations, 1777, 4to.

Darwin, Charles, 1758–1778, a son of Erasmus Darwin, M.D. Experiments establishing a Criterion between Mucilaginous and Puerulent Matter, &c., Lichfield, 1780, 8vo. Pub. by his father.

Darwin, Charles. Narrative of the 10 years' Voyage of H. M. Ships Adventure and Beagle, Lon., 1839, 3 vols. 8vo. Vol. i. by Capt. King; ii. by Capt. Fitzroy; iii. by Chas. Darwin, giving an account of his discoveries in Nat. Hist., (Journal of Researches; Nat. Hist. and Geology, 1839, 8vo.)

"Mr. Darwin's Journal contains many valuable contributions to science. I cannot help considering his voyage round the world as one of the most important events for Geology which has occurred for many years."—Mr. Whewell's Address to the Geolog. Soc.

Zoology of the Voy. of H. M. S. Beagle, 1832-36. Edited and superintended by Charles Darwin, 1843, 4to. For divisions see Rich's Bibl. Amer. Nova, or the London Publisher's Cat. Geological Observations, 1842, '44, '46, 3 vols. 8vo. Voyage of a Naturalist round the World, 2d edit, 1845, p. 8vo.

"The author is a first-rate landscape painter, and the dreariest solitudes are made to teem with interest."—Lon. Quar. Rev.

Monograph of the Family Cirripedia, 2 vols. 8vo, pub. by the Royal Society, and distributed to the subscribers in the years 1851 and '53.

"It has been characterised by a competent writer as one of the most remarkable works on zoology produced during the present century." See Knight's Eng. Cyc., and Agassiz's Bibliographia Geologiae et Zoologiae.

Darwin, Erasmus, M.D. 1731-1802, was a native of Elton, near Newark, Nottinghamshire. He studied both at St. John's College, Cambridge, and at Edinburgh, and having chosen the profession of medicine, practised first at Northampton, and subsequently at Lichfield, where he acquired a profitable practice. Being left a widower, he was married in 1781 to Mrs. Colonel Pole, by whose influence he was induced to retire to Derby, where he died suddenly in 1802. Dr. Darwin enjoyed considerable reputation as a botanist, philosopher, and poet. Botanic Garden; a Poem in two parts. Part I containing the Economy of Vegetation. Part 2, The Loves of the Plants, with Philosophical Notes, Lon., 1791, 2 vols. 4to. Part 2 had been previously pub. anonymously at Lichfield, 1789, 4to. "Pompous rhyme—the scenery is its sole recommendation."—Lord Byron.

But there must have been some merit in poetry which, without the advantage of literary reputation, secured the author so large a host of enthusiastic admirers. Darwin's powers of description and of dramatic effect were undoubtedly great. The absence of judgment and taste is equally clear; hence the decline of his early fame. Zoonomia, or the Laws of Organic Life, Lon., 1794-96, 2 vols. 4to; 3d ed., 1801, 4 vols. 8vo. This work will remind the reader of the speculations contained in a volume which has lately excited much attention—Vestiges of the Natural History of Creation. Darwin's fallacies—especially his theory which refers instinct to sensation—have been amply exposed by Dr. Thomas Brown, Dugald Stewart, Paley, Good, and others. See Dr. Brown's Observations on the Zoonomia, Edin., 1798, 8vo. Plan for the Conduct of Female Education in Boarding Schools, Derby, 1797, 4to. Phylologia, or the Philosophy of Agriculture and Gardening, Lon., 1800, '01, 4to.

"The section on manures, or the food of plants, is the sole part that interests the agriculturist, and it is much too refined for the grossness of the farmer's application of the articles. No new fact was elicited and established, but much light was cast on the processes that had been adopted."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

The Temple of Nature, or the Origin of Society; a Poem, with Philosophical Notes, Lon., 1803, 4to. Posthumous. Profess. con. to Med. Trans., 1785. Phil. Trans., 1757, '60, '74, '78, '85. Poetical Works, with Philosophical Notes, 1807, 3 vols. 8vo. See Memoirs of his Life, by Anna Seward, Lon., 1804, 8vo; reviewed in Edin. Rev., iv. 230.

The reader must peruse this article, and see if he can trace any resemblance between Dr. Darwin's school and the poem of Universal Beauty, pub. Lon., 1735, fol. See a review of The Temple of Nature, &c. in the same periodical, ii. 491.

"Only a few years have elapsed since the genius of the author of The Botanic Garden first burst on the public notice in all its splendour. The novelty of his plan—an imposing air of boldness and originality in his poetical as well as philosophical speculations—and a striking display of command over some of the richest sources of poetical embellishment, were sufficient to secure to him a large share of approbation, even from the most fastidious readers, and much more than sufficient to attract the gaze and the indiscriminating exclamations of a herd of admirers and imitators. Yet, with all these pretensions to permanent fame, we are much deceived if we have not already observed in that of Dr. Darwin the visible symptoms of decay."—1803, (by T. Thomson.)

Darwin, Robert Waring, M.D. brother to the preceding. Principia Botanica, or a Concise and Easy Introduction to the Sexual System of Linnaeus, 3d ed., corrected and enlarged, Lon., 1810, 8vo. Profess. con. to Mem. Med., 1792; Phil. Trans., 1786; on the Ocular Spectra of Light and Colours.

Dary, Michael. Mathemat. treatises, 1664, '69, '77.

Dashwood, James. The Case of the Rector of D., 1812.

Daubeny, Charles, D.D. 1744-1827, was educated at New College, Oxford; Prebendary of Salisbury, 1784; Archdeacon of Sarum, 1804. A Guide to the Church; 3d ed., Lon., 1830, r. 8vo. Appendix to do.; 3d ed., 1830, r. 8vo. Vindiciae Ecclesiae Anglicanae, 1803, 8vo. Remarks on the Unitarian Method of Interpreting the Scriptures, 1815, 8vo. Discourses, 1802-10, 3 vols. 8vo. Charges, Serms., &c., 1809, '19, &c. Dr. Daubeny is said to have been one of the contributors to the Anti-Jacobin Review.

Daubeny, Charles Giles Bridle, M.D., F.R.S. Prof. of Botany and Chemistry in the University of Oxford. 1. Essay on the Geology and Chemical Phenomena of Volcanoes, Oxford, 1824, 8vo. 2. Description of the Active and Extinct Volcanoes, with Remarks on their Origin, Lon., 1826, 8vo; 2d ed., 1848, 8vo.

"One of the most useful contributions to geological science that has yet appeared."—Edinburgh Review.

3. Introduct. to the Atomic Theory, 1831, 8vo; with Supp., 1840, 8vo; new ed., 1850, 8vo. 4. Lects. on Agricult., 1841, 8vo. 5. Popular Geog. of Plants, square, 1855. 6. Lects. on Roman Husbandry, Oxf., 1857, 8vo. For a biog. sketch of Dr. Daubeny and a list of his valuable contributions to the various scientific journals, see Knight's Eng. Cyc.

Daubigny. Dissert. in Orat. Dominic., Lon., 1704, 8vo.

Dauborne, Robert. See DABORNE.

Daubuz, Charles, 1670?-1740? a French Protestant divine, came to England on the revocation of the Edict of Nantz, and became Vicar of Brotherton. Pro Testimonio Flavii Josephi, de Jesu Christo, Lon., 1706, 8vo. The Revelations literally trans. from the Greek, Lon., 1712, '20, fol. Pub. in 1730, 4to, by Peter Lancaster, under the title of A Perpetual Key on the Revelation of St. John. This is the best edition. A portion of the work—A Dictionary of Prophetic Symbols—was reprinted in 1842, Lon., 8vo, with a Memoir and Preface by Habershon.

"For understanding the prophecies, we are, in the first place, to acquaint ourselves with the figurative language of the prophets."—SIR ISAAC NEWTON.

"There is no commentator who can be compared with Daubuz for the accuracy, the care, and the consistency with which he has explained the prophetic symbols."—Illustrations of Prophecy.

"An elaborate and very useful work, of which later authors have not failed to avail themselves."—Horne's Bibl. Bib.

Dauby and Leng. Arithmetician, 1814, 12mo.

Daucet, N. B. Fundamental Principles of the Laws of Canada, Montreal, 1841, 8vo.

Dauby, Daniel. A Descriptive Catalogue of the Works of Rembrandt and of his Scholars, Bol. Livens, and Van Vliet, Liverp., 1796, 8vo. A work of authority. The preface was written by Mr. Roscoe.

Daunce, Edward. A Brief Discourse of the Spanish State, with a Dialogue annexed, intitled Philobasilis, Lon., 1590, 4to.

Dauncey, John. Chronicle of Portugal, Lon., 1661, 8vo.

D'Auvergne, Edward. See AUVERGNE, D'.

Dauney, Wm. Ancient Scottish Melodies from a MS. of the reign of K. James VI., Lon., 1838, r. 4to.

"We can now refer to an authentic National Collection of a comparative early date, in which a number of our Scottish Melodies are to be found, and among these some of those which have been most deservedly admired, and are here presented, as we conceive, in even a more engaging form than that under which they are popularly known."—Blackwood's Magazine.

Davall, Peter, d. 1768. Trans. of the Memoirs of Cardinal de Retz, Lon., 1774, 4 vols. 12mo. Vindication of the New Calendar Tables and Rules, 1761, 4to. Con. to Phil. Trans., 1728, '49, '62.

Davan, Kingsmill. Essay on the Passions, Lon., 1799.

Davelcourt, D., a native of Scotland. L'Artillier, Paris, 1606, 8vo.

Davenant, Charles, LL.D. 1656-1714, eldest son of Sir William Davenant, was a Member of Parliament, Inspector of Plays, a dramatic author, and a famous writer upon political economy, politics, and trade. His Tragedy of Circe, in which he himself performed, was written at the age of 19; pub. 1677, 4to; also in 1685 and 1703. A collection of his works upon the subjects named above was made and revised by Sir Charles Whitworth, Lon., 1771, 5 vols. 8vo. They excited much animosity at the time, but soon gained the ear of the public. See Censura Litteraria. When Lord Oxford suspected Swift of having written any anonymous piece, he used to remark to him: "This is very much in the style of Dr. Davenant."

Respecting the merits of Davenant's writings, a wide difference of opinion has been expressed:

"Davenant is certainly a most valuable political author, and undoubtedly a writer whose progress was more advanced than could have been expected at the time he wrote. He had access to official information from which he derived many advantages. He possessed a very considerable command of language."—SIR JOHN SINCLAIR.

"Admirable works; replete with curious and instructive reflections."—DUKE OF GRAFTON.

"There seem to be but slender grounds for the eulogies bestowed on his writings, or for thinking that they at all accelerated the progress of sound commercial knowledge. They contain little that is valuable that may not be found in the work of Sir Joshua Child. Some detached paragraphs are exceedingly good; but the treatises of which they form parts are remarkably inconclusive, and are for the most part pervaded by the narrowest and most illiberal views. There is no evidence to show that Davenant had ever reflected on the influence of commerce in facilitating the production of wealth, by its enabling the division of labour to be carried to the farthest extent; that is, by its enabling the people of different countries to apply themselves, in preference, to those employments for the prosecution of which they have some natural or acquired advantage."—McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Economy, 1845, 352.

Davenant, John, D.D., 1576–1641, a native of London, was educated at, and Fellow of, Queen's College, Cambridge; Lady Margaret Profess. of Divinity, 1609; Master of his College, 1614; sent by James I. to the Synod of Dort, 1618; Bishop of Salisbury, 1621. He incurred the displeasure of the king by maintaining the doctrine of predestination in a sermon preached before his majesty. Expositio Epistolæ D. Pauli ad Colossenses, Cantab., 1627, fol.; 3d ed., Cantab., 1639; Amst., 1646, 4to; Groning., 1655, 4to. This is the substance of Lectures read by the author.

"The bishop pays considerable attention to find out the literal sense, as well as to illustrate the doctrinal and practical meaning, of the epistle. Walch commends it; and the learned author of the Synopsis speaks of Davenant as an interpreter far above his praise."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"Davenant's Exposition is valuable, not as a book for continuous perusal, but as a work of reference, in which the reader will find most of the disputed points of the Papistical, Calvinistic, and some minor controversies treated with great acuteness, learning, and judgment."—Lon. Eclectic Review.

"A very excellent work, full of valuable elucidation."—Bickersteth's Christian Student.

Trans. into English, with a Life of the Author and Notes, by the Rev. Josiah Allport, Lon., 1831, '32, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Mr. Allport has conferred no small favour on biblical students by rendering Bishop Davenant's valuable exposition accessible to English readers."—Horne's Bibl. Bib.

"The translation not only possesses the more ordinary and absolutely indispensable prerequisites of general accuracy and fidelity, but the more rare recommendations of commendable care, propriety, and even elegance. . . . A very valuable feature of the present work is, that the edition has appended (in the form of notes) biographical sketches of the Fathers and Schoolmen, whose names so profusely adorn the pages of Davenant. . . . His notes contain a great deal of curious and valuable information. The Sketch of the Life of Davenant deserves the highest praise: it is the only attempt that has ever been made to give any thing like a detailed account of the history and writings of that great and good man."—Lon. Eclectic Review.

Prælectiones, &c. de Justitia habituali et actuali altero. Cantab., 1631, fol. Determinationes XLIX. Questionum, &c., 1634, fol.

"Many debateable doctrines [in the two vols.] wisely stated."—Bickersteth's Christian Student.

Trans. of the above two vols. into English by the Rev. Josiah Allport, Lon., 1844–46, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Well calculated to meet the errors which are most prevalent at the present time. . . . The man who will make himself master of Davenant's arguments will find in them a sufficient safeguard against Romanizing tendencies at any time."—Church of England Quar. Rev.

An Exhortation to Brotherly Communion between the Protestant Churches, 1641, 12mo. The same in Latin, Camb., 1640, 8vo.

"A delightful little work on this subject. Milton, Baxter, Burroughes, Bishop Stillingsfleet, and others wrote with the same views."—Bickersteth's Christian Student.

Animadversions upon a Treatise written by Mr. S. (or J.) Hoard, entitled God's Love to Mankind, &c., Camb., 1641, 8vo. Epistola de Sacramentis, Lon., 1649, 8vo. Dissertationes duas de Morte Christi et Prædestinatione, Cantab., 1650, fol.

"In his elaborate and very judicious treatise on the Death of Christ, Davenant plainly shows, that while profoundly impressed with the truth of the main doctrines of the Calvinistic school, he was by no means the supralapsarian which many of the opposite party have been fond of representing him. He was decidedly a sublapsarian."—Lon. Eclectic Review.

See an interesting account of this excellent man in Fuller's Worthies.

Davenant, Sir William, 1605–1668, a native of Oxford, was the son of a vintner—at least we are willing to accept this version of his paternity. Wood gives an interesting account of the household:

"His mother was a very beautiful woman, of a good wit and conversation. In which she was imitated by none of her children, but by this William. The father, who was a very good and discreet citizen, (yet an admirer and lover of plays and play-makers, especially Shakespeare, who frequented his house in his journeys between Warwickshire and London,) was of a melancholic disposition, and was seldom or never seen to laugh, in which he was imitated by none of his children but by Robert, his eldest son, afterwards Fellow of St. John's Coll. and a venerable doct. of div. As for William, whom we are farther to mention, and may justly stile 'the sweet swan of Isle,' he was educated in grammar learning under Edw. Byliverter, whom I shall elsewhere mention, and in academical in Line. Coll. under the care of Mr. Dan. Hough, in 1620, or 21, or thereabouts, and obtained there some smattering in logic; but his geny which was always opposite to it, lead him in the pleasant paths of poetry, so that tho' he wanted much of university learning, yet he made as high and noble flights in the poetical faculty, as fancy could advance, without it."—Athen. Oxon., Bliss's ed., iii. 802.

On quitting college he obtained the place of page to the celebrated Duchess of Richmond, and subsequently resided in the household of Sir Fulke Greville, Lord Brooke, by whose death in 1628 he was once more thrown upon his own resources. In the same year appeared his Tragedy of Albovine, King of the Lombards, pub. 1629, 4to. To this succeeded The Just Italian, a Play; and The Cruel Brother, a Tragedy, both pub. 1629, 4to. The success of these pieces, and other compositions, (see a list of his productions in Lowndes's Bibl. Manual.) gave the author a position among the wits of the day, and in 1637 he succeeded Ben Jonson as poet laureate. In 1641 he became involved in the political difficulties which entangled most of the principal men of the time. Of course he was a royalist, and for his efforts on behalf of the unfortunate monarch he was for some time imprisoned, and was glad to retire to France. After a short residence abroad, he returned to England, and served with the royalist forces as lieutenant-general of the ordnance at the siege of Gloucester. At this period he was knighted by King Charles. Again repatriated to France, he was honoured with the confidence of Queen Henrietta Maria, and intrusted by her with a communication to Charles. Davenant saw no promise of brighter times at home, and therefore determined to try his fortune in the New World. The vessel in which he sailed with his company of mechanics and weavers was seized by an English man-of-war, and our poetical knight found himself for the second time a prisoner. Whilst confined in Cowes Castle, he finished the first part of the poem of Gondibert. He was now removed to the Tower of London, and would probably have fared badly in addition to his two years' imprisonment, had not Milton nobly exerted himself to procure his enlargement. It is said that this debt of gratitude was repaid at the Restoration, when Milton was beholden for his safety to the influence of his brother poet. Davenant now employed himself in the introduction of such dramatic entertainments—partaking of the character of the opera—as the taste of the age, or the forbearance of the rulers, rendered practicable. The remainder of his life seems to have passed in the quiet enjoyment of his literary tastes, and the admiring appreciation of his contemporaries. He was honoured with a last resting-place in Westminster Abbey, and the sepulchral marble was not thought unworthy of the expressive epitaph which had previously been applied to his successor in the honours of the laurel:—"O Rare Sir William Davenant" the poet would have considered as ample reward for his literary exertions. A collective edition of his works was pub. in folio, 1672, '73. Gondibert—by which the author's name is best known—is a heroic poem, the events of which are supposed to have occurred in the reign of Aribert, King of Lombardy, 653–661. By some of the principal poets of the day, Cowley and Waller being of the number, it was rapturously applauded; by others it was so warmly attacked, that the author felt it incumbent on him to defend himself from their censures. He had no heart to continue a theme so little appreciated, and Gondibert was left to posterity in an unfinished state. See Disraeli's Quarrels of Authors; Miscellanies in Prose by Aikin and Barbauld; Retrospective Review, (Lon., 1820,) ii. 304–24; prefatory remarks to vol. iv. of Anderson's British Poets; Headley's Select Beauties; Hurd's Letters on Chivalry and Romance; Biog. Brit.; Malone's History of the Stage. Gondibert has now but few readers. The four-lined stanzas with alternate rhymes is not a favourite measure, and six thousand lines of such, in a solid phalanx, present an appearance sufficiently formidable to repel ordinary readers. Yet those who thus neglect the bulky tomes of old English poetry little know what they lose. With much that may be spared, there is much also which is admirably calculated to charm the imagination, to delight the fancy, and to improve the heart. If it were only to enjoy the exquisite sketch of the Character and Love of Birtha, would it not be well worth while to read the six thousand lines of Gondibert? But we are extending this article unwarrantably, and must conclude; not, however, without the citation of some opinions upon the merits of the once thrice-famed, now little known, "Rare Sir William Davenant!"

"I found him of so quick a fancy, that nothing was proposed to him on which he could not suddenly produce a thought extremely pleasant and surprising; and those first thoughts of his, contrary to the old Latin proverb, were not always the least happy. And as his fancy was quick, so likewise were the products of it remote and happy. He borrowed not of any other, and his imaginations were such as could not easily enter into any other man, bestowing twice the time and labour in polishing which he used in invention."—DAVIDEN.

Dryden on other occasions expresses his obligations to Davenant, and surely the latter had a claim upon his gratitude, for Dryden remarks in his preface to the Tempest, which they had altered:

"It was originally Shakespeare's—a poet for whom he had particularly a high veneration, and whom he first taught me to admire."

"Gondibert, which is rather a string of Epigrams than an Epic Poem, was not without its admirers, among whom were Waller and Cowley. But the success did not answer his expectation. When the novelty of it was over, it presently sunk into contempt; and he at length found, that when he strayed from Homer he deviated from nature."—GRANGER, iv. 43.

"The stanza which he has adopted is better suited to elegiac than to heroic poetry. A beautifully descriptive passage, interspersed in the course of two or three hundred lines, will not alleviate the tedium of the rest; as an occasional flash of lightning cannot illuminate the continual gloominess of an extensive prospect."—KNOX'S Essays, ii. 377.

"When a writer who is driven by so many powerful motives to the imitation of preceding models, revolts against them all, and determines at any rate, to be original, nothing can be expected but an awkward straining in every thing. Improper method, forced conceits, and affected expressions, are the certain issue of such obduracy. The business is to be sensible; and this he may very possibly be, but at the expense of graceful ease and true beauty."—Bishop Hurd's Critical Commentaries, Notes, and Dissertations, iii. 138-144.

But Mr. Headley disputes the justice of the bishop's critique:

"After all, it seems but candid to examine every work by those rules only which the author prescribed himself in the composing of it: every contrary step is but trying a man of one country by the laws of another. What right have we, therefore, to be offended at not finding the critical acts passed by Aristotle originally, and re-echoed by Bossu and the French critics, rigidly observed, when it was the author's professed intention to write without them?"—Biog. Sketches prefixed to Headley's Collection, vol. 1. See Biog. Brit.

Davenant, Rev. William, drowned whilst swimming, 1681, fourth son of the preceding, was educated at Magdalen Hall, Oxford. Trans. of La Mothe le Vayer's Animadversions on Greek and Latin Historians.

Davenport, Christopher, 1598-1680, became a Franciscan, adopted the name of Sancta Clara, and was chaplain to Queen Henrietta Maria. De Prædestinatione Meritis, &c., Lugd., 1634, 8vo. Apologia Episcoporum, 1640, 8vo. Manuale Miss. Regularium, Duaci, 1658, 8vo. Systema Fidei, &c., Leodi, 1648, 4to. Vindict. of R. Catholics, 1659. Religio Philosophi, &c., Duaci, 1662, 8vo. R. C. Belief, 1670, 8vo. Middle State of Souls. See Bishop Heber's Life of Jeremy Taylor.

Davenport, Francis. Tides at Tonquin, Phil. Trans., 1684.

Davenport, Humphrey. Abrigt of Coke upon Littleton, 4th ed., Lon., 1685, 12mo. See Marvin's Leg. Bibl.

Davenport, John, 1597-1670, brother of Christopher, emigrated to Boston in 1637, and was minister at New Haven and at Boston. He was of great learning, piety, and zeal. When Whalley and Goffe fled to New Haven, he concealed them in his own house. He pub. a number of sermons, letters, &c., 1629-1637. See Athen. Oxon.; Mather's Magnalia; Trumbull's Conn.; Hutchinson; Winthrop.

Davenport, John. Historical Class Book, Lon., 1839, 12mo.

"One of the most useful helps to education which has fallen under our critical cognizance."—Lon. M. Advertiser.

Hist. of the Bastille. Lives of Eminent Men. All Pasha. Narrative.

Davenport, R. A. Dictionary of Biography, Lon., 1831, 12mo.

Davenport, Richard. Con. to Amer. Phil., 1815; Nat. Phil.

Davenport, Robert. New Tricks to cheat the Devil, Lon., 1639, 4to. The City Night Cap, 1655, 4to. Other dramatic pieces.

Davenport, Selina. Novels, 1814, '15.

Daventer, Henry. Midwifery Improved, 1716, 8vo.

Davey, John. Obs. on Bane in Sheep, Bath, 1830, 8vo.

David, St., the Patron of Wales, d. 544, was born about the close of the 5th century. He wrote the Decrees of the Synod of Victoria, the Rules of his Monasteries, some Homilies, and Letters to King Arthur; all of which have perished. See Butler's Lives of the Saints; Wharton's Anglia Sacra; Tanner.

David, Ap Gwillum, a famous Welsh bard, is noted for having inscribed 147 poems to the fair Morvid. Such a deluge was too much for her constancy—if indeed she ever favoured the poet—and she was married to a soldier named Rhys Gwgan, who had distinguished himself at the battle of Crecy. So, in this case, the favourite maxim of authors was disproved,—the Sword outweighed the Pen. David's works were edited in London in 1789.

David, Ben. Theolog. Letters to Lon. Quar. Review, 1825.

David, Job. Review of Dr. Priestley's Letter to an Antipædobaptist, 1803, 8vo.

David, M. Effect of Motion, Rest, &c., Lon., 1790, 4to.

David, Michael. Religion, &c. of J. B. Renoult, 1708, 4to.

David, R. 1. The Fast. 2. Fear of God, 1781, '82, 8vo.

Davidson, The Christian Prize; a Serm., 8vo.

Davidson, Rev. Anthony. A Sentimental Journey, in imitation of Sterne. Serms. in blank verse.

Davidson, Charles. Precedents in Conveyancing, 4th ed., Lon., 1852, 12mo. Common Forms in Conveyancing, 1846, r. 8vo.

Davidson, David. Thoughts on the Seasons, 1789, 8vo.

Davidson, David. English Grammar, 1814, 12mo.

Davidson, David, D.D. Comment on the Bible, Lon., 1845, fol.; 1836-46, 3 vols. 24mo. Pocket Biblical Diet., new ed., 1837, 24mo. Prophecy, 1839, 12mo. Connec. of S. and P. Hist., 1842, 24mo.

"This work is well executed. The historical plan is clear and unique, and the style is singularly attractive, on account of its purity and strength."—Protestant Churchman.

Davidson, G. Bark Tree in St. Lucia, Phil. Trans., 1784.

Davidson, G. F. Trade and Travel in the East, Lon., 1846, p. 8vo.

"One of the best and most entertaining books of travels published within the last three years."—Lon. Dispatch.

Favourably reviewed in the Edin. and Lon. Quar. Reviews.

Davidson, Henry. Waterloo; a Poem, Lon., 1816, 8vo.

Davidson, James. Two Serms., 1804.

Davidson, John. Dialogue betwixt a Clerk and a Courtier, concerning the state of Parish Kirks in Scotland, 1570, or. 8vo. 40 copies reprinted at Edinburgh in 1829.

Davidson, John. Helpes for Y. S. in Chris., Edin., 1602, 8vo.

Davidson, John. Catechism, Edin., 1708, 8vo.

Davidson, John. Accounts of the Chamberlain in Scotland in 1329, '30, '31. Obs. on the Regiam Majestatem, Edin., 1792, 8vo. Remarks on some Edits. of the Acts Parl. of Scotland, 1792, 8vo. See SIR DAVID DALRYMPLE'S Annals of Scotland, iii. 340.

Davidson, Lucretia Maria, 1808-1825, a native of Plattsburg, New York, was the daughter of a physician. Before she was six years of age she wrote quite a number of original poetical compositions, which were accidentally discovered, having been carefully concealed in a closet seldom visited. Her first poem which has been preserved, was written when she was nine years old. The earliest of her productions which has been published was written at eleven years of age. Before she was twelve years old she had read much of Shakspeare, Kotzebue, and Goldsmith, many of the standard English poets, and several historians. Such remarkable precocity of course excited much observation, and when about 16 years of age, by the kindness of Mr. Moses Kent, she was placed at the excellent seminary of Mrs. Willard, at Troy. This lady, who has done so much to educate the female mind in America—whose name is so familiar to many mothers who are now communicating to their children the intellectual and moral lessons acquired from their former preceptor—immediately recognised the peculiar characteristics of the mind confided to her guidance. She remarks:

"She at once surprised us by the brilliancy and pathos of her compositions; she evinced a most exquisite sense of the beautiful in the productions of her pencil; always giving to whatever she attempted to copy certain peculiar and original touches which marked the liveliness of her conceptions, and the power of her genius to embody those conceptions. But from studies which required calm and steady investigation, efforts of memory, judgment, and consecutive thinking, her mind seemed to shrink. She had no confidence in herself, and appeared to regard with dismay any requisitions of this nature."

During the vacation—a few months after her reception into Mrs. Willard's household—she suffered from ill health, but rallied sufficiently to be placed at a school in Albany, where it was hoped she might be able to continue her studies. But it was soon apparent that her life was not to be prolonged. The unfavourable symptoms which had alarmed the anxiety of her family and friends now developed themselves with increased strength, and resulted fatally on the 27th of August, 1835, one month before she had attained the age of 17. So great was her facility in composition, that she left no less than two hundred and seventy-eight pieces, (about one hundred and forty had been destroyed before her death,) among which were five poems of several cantos each, a number of romances, and a tragedy.

A collection of her pieces, with a memoir, was pub. in 1829, by Mr. Samuel F. B. Morse, under the title of Amir Khan and other Poems: the Remains of Lucretia Maria Davidson. An interesting review of this volume by Robert Southey will be found in the London Quarterly Review, xli. 289. Miss Catherine M. Sedgwick also has pub. a biography of her life and character, and the reader will find interesting notices of Lucretia M. and Margaret M. Davidson in Dr. Griswold's Female Poets of America, and in Mrs. Hale's Records of Woman.

"In these poems there is enough of originality, enough of aspiration, enough of conscious energy, enough of growing power, to warrant any expectations, however sanguine, which the patron, and the friends and parents of the deceased could have formed. . . . In our own language, except in the cases of Chatterton and Kirke White, we can call to mind no instance of so early, so ardent, and so fatal a pursuit of intellectual advancement."—ROBERT SOUTHEY, ubi supra.

Davidson, Margaret Miller, 1823-1838, was a sister of the preceding, and distinguished by the same remarkable precocity of intellect and facility in literary composition. At the early age of six years she found great delight in the perusal of the poems of Milton, Cowper, Thomson, Scott, and other authors of the same class.

"By the time she was six years old," remarks her mother, "her language assumed an elevated tone, and her mind seemed filled with poetic imagery, blended with veins of religious thought." About this time she commenced "liaping in numbers," and specimens of her poetry then written will be found in Washington Irving's charming Memoir of this wonderful child, for she was but fifteen years and eight months old when translated to a brighter sphere. Of the beautiful stanzas addressed to her sister Lucretia, Mr. Irving remarks:

"We may have read poetry more artificially perfect in its structure, but never any more truly divine in its inspiration."

Leonore is the longest of her poems; (the volume just quoted contains some of her prose compositions, also.)

"It is a story of romantic love, happily conceived, and illustrated with some fine touches of sentiment and fancy. It is a creditable production, and would entitle a much older author to consideration; but its best passages scarcely equal some of her earlier and less elaborate performances."—Griswold's Female Poets of America.

Mrs. Davidson had drank deeply of the cup of affliction; few could lose such a daughter as Lucretia Maria—but it was much that her little sister—then not quite two years old—was left to comfort the stricken parent. When only three years of age the child would sit "on a cushion at her mother's feet, listening to anecdotes of her sister's life, and details of the events which preceded her death; and would often exclaim, while her face beamed with mingled emotions, 'Oh, I will try to fill her place—teach me to be like her!'"

Her prayer had been granted. She had grown up to supply her sister's place, and had evinced the possession of powers calculated to honour her name and bless her race—when she too was called to be numbered with the "early lost, the long deplored." Again the fond mother had to pass through the afflicting scenes from which she had already suffered so deeply. Some four years after she had followed Margaret to the grave, she remarks in a letter to the author of this work—referring to an incident which had recently transpired—

"I will not attempt to describe feelings which brought before my mind's eye with all the freshness of yesterday, some of the most deeply touching incidents in my sorrowing and varied life, with cherished and sacred recollections of the dear one who, like a bright dream, has faded away from my sight in this world forever!"

The reader must not fail to peruse the deeply interesting memoir by Mr. Irving before referred to. We may fitly conclude this sketch in his own words:

"We shall not pretend to comment on these records; they need no comment, and they admit no brightening. Indeed, the further we have proceeded with our subject, the more has the intellectual beauty and the seraphic purity of the little being we have intended to commemorate broken upon us; and the more have we shrunk at our own unworthiness for such a task."

Notices of the literary history of the gifted sisters, and reviews of Miss Sedgwick's and Mr. Irving's biographies, will be found in the Southern Lit. Messenger, i. 51; ix. 94, 399; Sparks's Amer. Biog., vii. 209; Lon. Quar. Rev., xli. 289, lix. 49; Chris. Examiner, xxxi. 269. In London, the biographies of the sisters, by Miss Sedgwick and Mr. Irving, have been incorporated into one volume.

Davidson, Margaret M., mother of the two preceding. A volume of Selections from her Writings, with a preface by Miss Sedgwick, was pub. in 1843.

"There is nothing in her book to arrest attention. Mrs. Davidson has some command of language, and a knowledge of versification, and the chief production of her industry in this line is a paraphrase of six books of Fingal. Her writings are interesting only as indexes to the early culture of her daughters."—Griswold's Female Poets of America.

Davidson, Robert. Serm., 1707, 4to.

Davidson, Robert, and David Douglass. Decisions of the C. of Sess., 1792-96, Edin., 1797, fol. The same, 1796-1801, fol.

Davidson, Samuel. Con. to Med. Com., 1790.

Davidson, Rev. Samuel, LL.D. Ecclesiastical Polity of the N. Test., Lon., 1848, 8vo. Introduct. to the N. Test., 1848-51, 3 vols. 8vo. Biblical Criticism, Edin., 1852, 2 vols. 8vo; new ed., Lon., 1855, 8vo. Sacred Hermeneutics Developed and Applied, 1843, 8vo.

"Nothing seems to be left undone which could be brought within the prescribed limits; and that which has been done appears to be well done and treated in an intelligent and masterly manner."—Ch. of England Quar. Rev.

Trans. of Gieseeler's Comp. of Eccles. History, Lon., 1846, &c., 4 vols. 8vo. See Clarke's Foreign Theolog. Library.

"Gieseeler's Church History is an invaluable storehouse of reference to the anxious and inquiring student and doctrinarian."—Lon. Educ. Rev.

Text of the Old Testament Considered, Lon., 1856, 8vo.

Davidson, Thomas. Cantus; Songs and Fancies, Aberdeen, 1666. This is said to be the first collection in which Scottish Songs are to be found.

Davidson, Thomas. Serm., Lon., 1749, 8vo.

Davidson, Thomas. Sketch of Dr. Erskine, 1803, 8vo.

Davidson, Wm. Sermon on Fasting, Newc., 1793, 8vo. Brief Outline of an Exam. of the Song of Solomon, Lon., 1817, 8vo.

"The author of this work considers the Canticles as an inspired song, wholly referring to the spiritual Solomon, or Christ and his true spiritual church."—Horne's Bib. Bib.

Davidson, Wm. The Pulmonary System, Lon., 1795, 8vo. Con. to Med. Com., 1793; to Med. Facts, 1792, '93, '94.

Davidson, Wm., M.D. On the Continued Fevers of G. Britain and Ireland, Lon., 1841, 8vo. Treatise on Diet, 1843, 12mo; 1847.

"The volume is comprehensive; it includes a great deal of most useful matter; and will be a valuable guide to the student and young practitioner."—Edin. Med. and Surg. Journal.

Davidson, David. Disp. Inaug. de Febre Quartana, Lugd. Bat., 1686, 4to.

Davidson, John. Ane brief Commendatioun of Vprichtnes. Imprintit at Sanct Androis be R. Lekpreuich, 1573, 4to.

Davie, Charles H. Hist. of the Inquisition, 1851, 12mo.

"A fair and full account of the evils which it professes to describe, since its statements are taken from the most authentic sources of information, both ancient and modern."—Chris. Times.

Davie, John C. Letters from Paraguay, Lon., 1805, 8vo.

"A fictitious work of no reputation or value."

Davie, Sampson. End, &c. of T. Norton; in verse, 1670, 8vo.

Davies. Antiquities: see Hearne's Collec., fl.

Davies, Arabella. 1. Letters. 2. Diary, 1788, 12mo.

Davies, Anth. The Protestant's Practice. Sparkles of the Spirit, 1656, 68.

Davies, B. Serm., Lon., 1785, 8vo.

Davies, C. M. Hist. of Holland, Lon., 3 vols. 8vo, 1841, '42, '44; new ed., 1851.

"Historical students must and ought to be grateful to the author of this valuable work, which has long been wanted."—Lon. Athenaeum.

Davies, C. N. Lectures on Prophecy, 1836, 12mo.

"This little volume displays both thought and feeling on a subject of the deepest interest."—British Magazine.

Davies, Charles, LL.D., born at Washington, Connecticut, for many years Professor at West Point. Prof. Davies is the author of the following valuable series of Mathematical works, which are very extensively used in schools and colleges throughout the U. S., and, it is said, have produced the author more than $50,000: 1. Primary Table Book. 2. First Lessons in Arithmetic. 3. Intellectual Arithmetic. 4. School Arithmetic. 5. Grammar of Arithmetic. 6. University Arithmetic, 1st ed., 1846. 7. Elementary Algebra, 1st ed., 1839. 8. Elementary Geometry and Trigonometry, 1st ed., 1840. 9. Practical Mathematics, 1852. 10. Bourdon's Algebra, 1st ed., 1834. 11. Legendre's Geometry, 1st ed., 1828. 12. Elements of Surveying, 1st ed., 1832. 13. Analytical Geometry.

14. Differential and Integral Calculus. 15. Descriptive Geometry, 1st ed., 1826. 16. Shades, Shadows, and Perspective. 17. Logic of Mathematics. 18. Mathematical Dictionary, 1855, N. York, 8vo. See PECK, Wm. G.

Davies, Charles G. Sermon, Lon., 1841, 8vo.

Davies, D. 1. Sermon. 2. Letters, 1810, 8vo.

Davies, D. W. Sermon, Cranbrook, 1803, 8vo.

Davies, David. Med. &c. con. to Phil. Trans., 1700, '01.

Davies, David. Jurymen's Guide, Lon., 1779, 8vo.

Davies, Rev. David. The Case of Labourers in Husbandry stated and considered, Lon., 1795, 4to.

"A publication which has been a good deal referred to for its facts and statements."—McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Econ.

Davies, Rev. David Peter. A New Historical and Descriptive View of Derbyshire, Lon., 1811, 8vo.

Davies, E. Sermon, 1720, 8vo.

Davies, Ebenezer. American Scenes and Christian Slavery, Lon., 1849, '53, 12mo.

Davies, Edward. Art of War, Lon., 1618, 4to.

Davies, Edward. Sermon, 1769, 8vo.

Davies, Edward, 1756-1831, Rector of Bishopston, and Chancellor of Brecon. Vacunalia; Essay in verse, Lon., 1788, 8vo. Twelve Dialogues on Different Subjects, 1801, 8vo. Celtic Researches, or the Origin, Traditions, and Languages of the Ancient Britons, 1804, 8vo. The Rites and Mythology of the British Druids, 1809, r. 8vo.

"But above all other works on the subject of Druidism would we recommend Davies, the author of the Celtic Researches. His History of the British Druids is a perfect mine of information on their most recondite antiquities. Davies, though not free from the hyper-enthusiasm which always runs in the blood of the Welsh, has never been excelled by any writer who has yet discussed Druidical Literature."—Lon. Monthly Magazine.

Davies, Lady Eleanor, 1603-1652, daughter of Lord George Audley, Earl of Castlehaven, and wife of the celebrated Sir John Davies, gained great notoriety as a prophetess. She pub. a number of addresses, appeals, prophecies, &c., 1641-52. Her Strange and Wonderful Prophecies appeared in 1649, 4to. See Heylin's Life of Archbishop Laud, and Ballard's British Ladies.

Davies, Evan. Lightning, Phil. Trans., 1730.

Davies, Franc. A Catechisme, Lon., 1612, 8vo.

Davies, Rev. G. Introduct. to Reading, 1810, 12mo.

Davies, George Harley, Comedian. The Fight of Trafalgar; a Descriptive Poem, 1806, 4to.

Davies, Griffith. Key to B's Trigonometry, 1814, 8vo.

Davies, Henry, M.D. Young Wife's Guide, Lon., 1852, 8vo.

Davies, Herbert. On the Physical Diagnosis of the Diseases of the Lungs and Heart, Lon., 1851, p. 8vo; 2d ed., revised and enlarged, 1854.

"The first edition of this work was published in 1851, and we then recommended it to the attentive consideration of our readers as embodying the latest views of the Vienna School. So valuable a work cannot fail to reach many editions."—Lon. Med. Times and Gazette.

Davies, Rev. Hugh. Welsh Botany, Lon., 1813, 8vo. Con. to Trans. Linn. Soc., 1794, 1811, '15.

Davies, J. Instructions for History, 1680, 8vo.

Davies, James. Sermon, Lon., 1679, 4to.

Davies, James. Sermon, 1716, 4to.

Davies, James. Address to the Aged, Lon., 1734, 12mo.

Davies, James. Supremacy of the Scriptures, with a Preface by the Rev. J. P. Smith, D.D., Lon., 1846, 12mo.

"To those who wish, by a single strain of thought, well sustained, to find weapons to beat down the whole fabric of Popery, and every kindred system, we recommend Mr. Davies's masterly treatise."—Lon. Evangelical Mag.

Davies, James Seymour. Stubborn Facts, 1812, 8vo.

Davies, Sir John, 1570-1626, a native of Wiltshire, was educated at Queen's College, Oxford, and afterwards studied law. In 1603 he was sent as solicitor-general to Ireland, soon rose to be attorney-general, and subsequently was appointed one of the judges of assize. In 1607 he was knighted, and after filling several offices with great credit, he was in 1626 appointed Lord Chief Justice of England, but "died suddenly before the ceremony of settlement or installation could be performed."

Nosce Teipsum: This Oracle expounded in two Elegies: 1st, of Human Knowledge, 2d, Of the Soul of Man, and the Immortality thereof: title of 2d ed. pub. 1602, 4to; 1st pub. in 1599, 4to. Yet the dedication to Queen Elizabeth bears date 1592. See Chalmers's Biog. Dict.

"This poem is, without dispute, except Spenser's Faery Queen, the best that was written in Queen Elizabeth's or even in King James the First's time."—Note in the edit. of Davies's Poet. Works, 1773, 12mo.

"The author of this poem merits a lasting honour; for, as he was a most eloquent lawyer, so, in the composition of this piece, we admire him for a good poet and exact philosopher."—N. Tatler, Pref. to 4th ed., 1697, 8vo.

"Davies's Nosce Teipsum is an excellent poem, in opening the nature, faculties, and certain immortality of man's soul."—RICHARD BAXTER: Prefatory Address to his Poetical Fragments, 1681.

"Perhaps no language can produce a poem, extending to so great a length, of more condensation of thought, or in which fewer languid verses will be found. . . . Very few have been able to preserve a perspicuous brevity without stiffness or pedantry, (allowance made for the subject and the time,) in metaphysical reasoning, so successfully as Sir John Davies."—HALLAM: Introduct. to Lit. of Europe.

"In the happier parts of his poem we come to logical truths so well illustrated by ingenious similes, that we know not whether to call the thoughts more poetically or philosophically just. The judgment and fancy are reconciled, and the imagery of the poet seems to start more vividly from the surrounding shades of abstraction."—CAMPBELL.

"Sir John Davies and Sir William Davenant, avoiding equally the opposite faults of too artificial and too careless a style, wrote in numbers which for precision and clearness, and felicity and strength, have never been surpassed."—SOUTHEY.

The edition of his poetical works pub. in 1773, 12mo, already referred to, contains, in addition to the above-noticed poem, the Hymns of Astrea—acrostics in praise of Elizabeth—and Orchestra, a Poem on Dancing.

Reports of Cases in the Law in the King's Courts in Ireland, 2 Jac. L.—10 Jac. L., (1604-12,) with a learned Preface, dedicated to Lord Chancellor Ellesmere, Dublin, 1615, fol.; Lon., 1628, '78, (in French;) 4th ed., 1762, (in English,) Dublin, 8vo. These were the first reports of Irish judgments which had ever been made public during the 400 years that the laws of England had existed in that kingdom. The preface to these reports, which is "a very learned and eloquent eulogium" on the Common Law of England, and a vindication of its professors, "vies with Coke in solidity and learning, and equals Blackstone in classical illustration and elegant language."

In addition to the above-noticed works, and some Essays, &c., Sir John pub. an abridgt. of Coke's Reports, and a number of historical and political tracts. George Chalmers pub. in 1786, 8vo, an edit. of his Historical Tracts; the best known of which is A Discoverie of the True Causes why Ireland was never entirely subdued, nor brought under Obedience to the Crowne of England, until the beginning of his Majesty's Reigne, Lon., 1612, 4to; Dubl., 1664, '66, 8vo; 1704, fol.; Lon., 1747, 12mo. It would be difficult to commend this performance too highly.

"The very best view of the political state of Ireland from the reign of Henry II. to that of James I."—BISSOP NICOLSON.

"A great performance: a mastery work, and contains much depth and extensive knowledge in state matters and settling of countries, in a very short compass."—KARL OF CHATHAM.

In versatility of talent, brilliancy of imagination, political wisdom, and literary taste, few Englishmen have equalled Sir John Davies.

See Athen. Oxon.; Biog. Brit.; Johnson and Chalmers's English Poets, 1810; Life by George Chalmers, prefixed to his Tracts; Warton's Hist. of Eng. Poetry; Ellis's Specimens; Marvin's Legal Bibl.; Wallace's Reporters; Retrospect. Review, v. 44, 1822.

Davies, John. Outinam:—1. For Queene Elizabeth's Securitie. 2. For her Subjects Prosperitie. 3. For a general Conformitie. 4. And for England's Tranquillitie, Lon., 1591, 16mo.

"This volume consists of a fulsome sermonial address to the people; an indecent prayer for the queen, &c., and closes with seven six-line stanzas which are only remarkable for their demerit."—T. PARK.

Davies, John, D.D., a native of Wales, studied at Jesus College and Lincoln College, Oxford. Antiquæ Linguae Britannicæ, &c., Lon., 1592, fol. Dictionarium Latino-Britannicum, by T. Williams; to which is added Adagia Britannica, Authorem Britannicorum Nomina et quando floruerunt, 1632. Parson's Resolutions trans. into Welsh. He assisted in a version of the Welsh Bible, pub. 1620.

"This author was esteemed by the academicians well vers'd in the history and antiquities of his own nation, and in the Greek and Hebrew languages, a most exact critic, an indefatigable searcher into ancient scripts, and well acquainted with curious and rare authors."—Athen. Oxon.

Davies, or Davis, John, "of Hereford," educated at Oxford, became famous as a poet and a writing-master. Mr. Chalmers supposes his Mirum in Modum, a Glympse of God's Glorie and the Soule's Shape, 1602, 4to, to have been his earliest work. Sold at Lloyd's sale for £5 2s. 6d. Witte's Pilgrimage, sine anno; Bibl. Anglo-Poet., £25; Perry Sale, £28. The Holy Roode or Christ's Crosse; Bibl. Anglo-Poet., £15 15s. Other publications. A list of his works will be found in Athen. Oxon., and in Lowndes's Bibl. Manual, and notices of most of them in Censura Literaria, The Bibliographer, and Restituta.

"Sir John Davies was more a scholar than a lawyer; but this John Davies was more a poet than a scholar, and somewhat inclined towards the law; which hath made some unwary readers take the writings of one for the other."—Athen. Oxon.

Davies, John, 1625-1693, a native of Carmarthenshire, made many trans. from the French into English. We notice a few of his publications. Hist. of the Carribby Islands, fol., Lon., 1666; year of the great fire; therefore this is a rare work. Voyages and Travels of Frederic's Ambassadors, 1662, fol. Peregrinations, 1669, fol. Rites and Monuments of Durham, 1672, 8vo.

Davies, John. Answers to Papers on Free-Trade, 1641, 4to.

Davies, John. Apocalypsis, Lon., 1658, 12mo.

Davies, John, D.D., 1679-1732, Prebendary of Ely, was a native of London, and educated at Queen's College, Cambridge, of which he became Fellow. He attained considerable reputation as a philologist. Maximi Tyrri Dissertationes Gr. et Lat. ex interpretatione Heinsii, &c., 1703, 8vo. C. Julii Cesaris, &c., Cant., 1706 et '27, 4to. De Natura Deorum, 1718, 8vo. Other publications, 1707-27.

Davies, John. Display of Heraldry, 1716, 12mo.

Davies, John. Serms., &c., 1799, 1802, '05, '14.

Davies, John. Innkeeper's Guide, Leeds, 1806, 12mo.

Davies, John. Cases resp. Patents, Lon., 1816, 8vo. These Cases are held "in high estimation." See Pref. to Phil. on Pat.

Davies, Rev. John. Essay on the O. and N. Test., Camb., 1843, 8vo. Estimate of the Human Mind, Lon., 8vo; new ed., 1847.

"A great variety of topics of vast interest are ably and eloquently discussed."—Lon. Congregational Mag.

Cultivation of the Mind, Lon., 8vo.

"An able Christian view of the subject."—Buckminster.

"Mr. Davies is every way qualified for the task he has here undertaken."—Imperial Mag.

The Ordinances of Religion practically Illustrated and Applied, Lon., 8vo.

"We content ourselves with a hearty recommendation of the volume."—Lon. Pulpit.

Davies, Joseph. Increase of Home Trade, &c., Lon., 1731, 8vo.

Davies, Myles, a Welsh divine, a native of Tre'r-Abbot, Flintshire. Icon Libellorum; or a Critical Hist. of Pamphlets, Lon., 1715, 8vo; this work is included in the following: Athenæ Britannicæ, or a Critical Hist. of Oxford and Cambridge Writers and Writings. This work is one of the rarest in the English tongue. Mr. H. G. Bohn's Cat. of 1841 contains the Icon Libellorum, 8vo, Athenæ Britannicæ, 3 vols. 8vo; and 1 vol. 4to, 1716; vols. i. and ii. being a Crit. Hist. of Pamphlets. The 4 vols. are marked £5 5s. In his Cat. for 1848 the 6 vols. are marked £10 10s. The 6 vols. were pub. in 8vo, 1716, and one (vol. 4) in 4to. The six were sold at the Bindley sale for £10 10s. See an interesting account of Davies in Disraeli's Calamities of Authors. He pub. two theological treatises on Arianism and Romanism.

Davies, Richard, Bishop of St. David's. Fun. Sermon on the Earl of Essex, Lon., 1577, 4to. Epistle to the Welsh. Reprinted, Oxon., 1671, 8vo.

Davies, Richard. Chester's Triumph in honor of her Prince. As it was performed upon St. George's Day in the foresaid Citie, Lon., 1610, 4to. Bibl. Anglo-Poet., 225, £25. Reprinted in Nichols's Progresses of K. James I.

Davies, Richard. Convincement, &c., Lon., 1710, 12mo.

Davies, Richard, M.D. Profess., &c. treatises, 1759, &c.

Davies, Robert, 1770-1836, a Welsh poet, wrote a Welsh Grammar, and some poetical works in Welsh, which are highly esteemed.

Davies, Roger. Existence of a Divine Being, 1724, 8vo.

Davies, Samuel. Serms., 1758, '59, 8vo.

Davies, Rev. Samuel, 1724-1761, a native of Newcastle, Delaware, preached with great success in Virginia. In 1759 he succeeded Jonathan Edwards in the Presidency of the College of New Jersey at Princeton. Mr. D. maintained an exemplary character in all the relations of life. Religion and Patriotism the constituents of a good soldier, a Serm., preached Aug. 17, 1755, Phila., 1756, 8vo, pp. 38.

In a note to this discourse, p. 12, Mr. Davies remarks, speaking of "martial spirit:"

"As a remarkable instance of this, I may point out to the public that heroic youth, Colonel [afterwards General] Washington, whom I cannot but hope Providence has hitherto preserved in so signal a manner for some important service to his country."

The Crisis considered, with reference to Great Britain and her Colonies, a Serm., Lon., 1757, 8vo. This contains some curious particulars relative to the loss of Oswego, Braddock's Defeat, &c. Other serms. and addresses. See Middleton's Biog. Evangel.; Rice's Memoirs of Davies, &c. A collection of his sermons was pub. by Drs. Finley and Gibbons of London, 1787-71, 5 vols. 8vo; later edits. in 4 vols., (Lon., 1824,) and in 3 vols., (N. York, 1849, 1851.) Mr. Davies excelled in

"Animated and pathetic application, in which he collects and concentrates what he has been proving in his discourses, and argues with all the powers of forcible and melting persuasion to the heart. . . . I most sincerely wish that young ministers, more especially, would peruse these volumes with the deepest attention and seriousness, and endeavour to form their discourses according to the model of our author."—DR. THOMAS GIBBONS.

"Evangelical. His style and manner are not always good, but being posthumous, he is less to be blamed. On Church Government he takes the side of Dissenters."—BUCKMINSTER.

"President Davies is generally cited as the most eloquent American divine of the past age. His sermons are formed on the declamatory and French models, and are direct, vehement, often eloquent and moving appeals, but wanting accuracy and finish."

"Had the editor been less scrupulous, the sermons might have appeared to much greater advantage as to the method, proportions, &c. They should be read, not as models of composition, but in reference to the serious truths they contain, and the vivida vis animi of the author."—DR. E. WILLIAMS.

"They abound with striking thoughts, with the beauties and elegancies of expression, and with the richest imagery."—PRESIDENT ALLEN.

The edit. of Davies's sermons pub. in New York, 1851, 3 vols. 8vo, contains an essay on the Life and Times of the Author, by the Rev. Albert Barnes of Philadelphia.

Davies, Sneyd, d. 1769, wrote several of the anonymous imitations of Horace in Duncombe's edit., 1767, and see end of vol. iv., and Poems in Dodsley's and Nichols's Collection, and in the Alumni Etonenses. See account of Davies in Nichols's Literary Collection.

Davies, Thomas. Serm. on Amos ix. 2, 8vo.

Davies, Thomas. Sixteen Discourses, Lon., 1720, 8vo.

Davies, Thomas. Laws rel. to Bankrupts, 1744, fol.

Davies, Thomas, 1712?-1785, studied at the University of Edinburgh, and became an actor and bookseller. Dr. Johnson, who valued him highly, and declared that he was "learned enough for a clergyman," assisted him liberally in his pecuniary difficulties. He married Miss Yarrow, a celebrated beauty, to whom we shall refer presently.

Life of David Garrick, Lon., 1780, 2 vols. 8vo. New (5th) ed. by Stephen Jones, 1808. Dramatic Miscellanies, 1784, '85, 3 vols. 8vo. Lives of Dr. John Bachard, Sir John Davies, and Mr. Lillo, prefixed to the eds. of their works pub. by T. Davies. Memoirs of Henderson. Life of Massinger. Review of Lord Chesterfield's Character. Dramatic Works of George Lillo, with Memoirs of the Author, 1810, 2 vols. 18mo. Interesting particulars of our author will be found in Boswell's Johnson. It was at the house of the bookseller that the biographer was first introduced to the great lexicographer. Who that has ever read Boswell's amusing account of this introduction can ever forget it?

"Both Davies and his wife (who has been celebrated for her beauty) maintained an uniform decency of character; and Johnson esteemed them, and lived in as easy an intimacy with them as with any family which he used to visit."

Churchill's unmerciful ridicule of Davies's acting drove him from the stage:

"With him came mighty Davies:—on my life

That Davies has a very pretty wife!

Statesman all over,—in plots famous grown,—

He mouths a sentence as curs mouth a bone."

The Rivaland.

This was too much for Davies, and he again tried book-selling as a vocation. If he could not "act well his part" himself, he contrived to profit by the success of a brother actor; for his Life of Garrick relieved him of the res cæcæ domi, and gave him fame in the world of letters.

Davies, Maj. Gen. Thomas. Con. in Zoology and Ornithology to Trans. Linn. Soc., 1798, 1802.

Davies, Thomas S. Hutton's Mathemat., 12th ed., by Gregory and Davies, Lon., 1840, 2 vols. 8vo. Solutions of the principal questions of Hutton's Mathemat., 1840, 8vo.

"The solutions exhibit a degree of simplicity, ingenuity, and elegance, rarely to be met with in works of this nature."—Edin. Chronicle.

Davies, Rev. Walter. General View of the Agriculture and Domestic Economy of North Wales, Lon., 1811, 8vo.

"The report exhibits much sound information, and an acute judgment on every point of discussion. It has always been esteemed and recommended as a source whence information may be got."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Davies, William. A True Relation of his own Travels and most miserable Captivity, Lon., 1614, 4to. Reprinted in the Oxford Collection of Voyages and Travels, vol. i.

Davies, Wm. Plays for a private Theatre, Lon., 1786, 8vo.

Davies, sometimes Davis, g. v.

Davies, Col. Joseph H., of Kentucky, d. 1811. View of the President's Conduct con. the conspiracy of 1806.

Daville, John. Serm. on Ephes. v. 6, 1745, 8vo.

Davis. Welsh and Latin Dictionary, Lon., 1632, fol.

A Catalogue of the most noted British Authors, &c. is annexed to this volume, which is truly a liber varietatis.

Davis. Hosanna before the Bishops, Lon., 1642, 4to.
Davis. Explanation and Vindication of the Rubrics before the New Office for the 11th of June, Oxf., 1731, 8vo.

Davis, Andrew Jackson, the Poughkeepsie Seer and Clairvoyant, was born at Blooming Grove, Orange co., N.Y., 1828. 1. Nature's Divine Revelations, pp. 800, 8vo, N.Y., 1828. 2. The Great Harmonia, 6 vols. 12mo; containing Physician, Teacher, Seer, &c. 3. Review of Dr. Horace Bushnell on Supernaturalism. 4. Philosophy of Spiritual Intercourse, 8vo. 5. Philosophy of Special Providences, 8vo. 6. Harmonial Man; or, Thoughts for the Age, 8vo. 7. Free Thoughts concerning Religion, 8vo. 8. Present Age and Inner Life. 9. The Penetrals: Harmonical Answers. We append notices of two of Mr. Davis's publications:

"We can regard this book [The Great Harmonia] in no other light than as part of a series of systematic impostures. The infidelity of our day is to a considerable extent combined with an amazing degree of credulity and superstition. . . . We have no hesitation in predicting that money will be lost upon this volume and the remainder of the series—either by the publishers or by the purchasers—and we think it would be full as well for the world at large that the loss should fall upon the former."—Norton's (New York) Literary Gazette.

A well-known writer thus refers to the Principles of Nature, her Divine Revelation, and a Voice to Mankind:

"Taken as a whole, the work is a profound and elaborate discussion of the Philosophy of the Universe; and for grandeur of conception, soundness of principle, clearness of illustration, order of arrangement, and encyclopedical range of subjects, I know of no work of any single mind that will bear away from it the palm. To every theme the inditing mind approaches with a certain latent consciousness of mastery of all its principles, details, and technicalities; and yet without the least ostentatious display of superior mental powers."—PROFESSOR BURN.

Davis, Asahel, b. 1791, in Massachusetts. Ancient America and Researches of the East, 30th thousand, 1854.

Davis, Crusoe R. Life and Adventures of, Lon., 1756.

Davis, Daniel, of Boston, 1773–1835. Criminal Justice, Boston, 2d ed., 1828, 8vo; 3d ed. by F. F. Heard. "A valuable manual of criminal law."—Marvin's Legal Bibl.

Precedents of Indictments, Boston, 1831, 8vo.

Davis, Daniel, Jr. Manual of Magnetism, 6th ed., Boston, 1854, 12mo. One of the best works upon the subject.

Davis, David D., M.D. Trans. of Phinel on Insanity, Sheff., 1806, 8vo. Acute Hydrocephalus, Lon., 1840, 8vo.

"A treatise eminently calculated to exalt the high reputation which already distinguishes its author."—Edin. Month. Med. Jour., Jan. 1841.

Elements of Obstetric Medicine, Lon., 4to. New ed. in 10 Nos. 8vo, and 70 plates in 4to, 1842.

"We do not, therefore, hesitate to say that it is a work which ought to be found on the table of every teacher and medical practitioner."—Edin. Medical and Surgical Magazine, Jan. 1842.

Davis, Edward, Surgeon. Con. to Phil. Trans., 1747.

Davis, Edwin Hamilton, b. 1811, in Ross county, Ohio; appointed Prof. of Materia Medica and Therapeutics in the New York Medical College in 1850. As early as 1833 he commenced his antiquarian researches, the results of which have been pub. as the 1st vol. of the Smithsonian Contributions to Knowledge, entitled: 1. Monuments of the Mississippi Valley, by E. G. Squier and E. H. Davis. 2. Report on the Statistics of Calculous Disease in Ohio, 1850, 8vo.

Davis, Francis. A Catechism, Lon., 1612, 8vo.

Davis, George. Serms., 1758, '63, 4to.

Davis, Rev. H. Exercises in Latin, Lon., 1844, 12mo.

Davis, Henry W. The War of Ormuzd and Ahriman in the Nineteenth Century, Baltimore, 1853, 8vo.

Davis, Rev. Henry Edwards, 1756–1784, educated at, and Fellow and Tutor of, Balliol Coll., Oxford, when only twenty-one pub. an examination of Gibbon's 15th and 16th chapters of the Decline and Fall, Lon., 1778, 8vo. He charges Gibbon with misrepresentations of authors cited and with want of accuracy in his statements. The historian pub. a Vindication, which Davis answered in A Reply to Mr. Gibbon's Vindication, 1779, 8vo.

Davis, Hewlett. Farming Essays, Lon., 1848, 8vo. "These essays are very particular for sound practice and enlightened judgment."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Davis, Hugh. De Jure Uniformitatis Ecclesiasticæ; of the rights belong. to an unif. in Churches, Lon., 1669.

Davis, J. Exposition of the Laws rel. to the Medical Profession, Lon., 1844, 8vo.

Davis, J. B., M.D. 1. Fever of Walcheren, Lon., 1810, 8vo. 2. Hist. of Nice, 1807. 3. Bognor, 1807. 4. Asphyxies. 5. Project. 6. France, &c., 1807, 2 vols. 12mo.

Davis, J. C. B. Mass. Justice, Worcester., 1847, 8vo.
Davis, Jo. Minucius Felix, cum Notis Jo. Davisi, Glasg., 1750, 12mo.

Davis, John, d. 1605, a celebrated navigator, was a native of Sandridge, Devonshire. Between 1585 and '87 he made three voyages for the discovery of a Northwest passage. He discovered the strait which bears his name. In 1571 he sailed with Cavendish in his voyage to the South Sea, and subsequently made five voyages to the East Indies as pilot. In the last he was killed by the Japanese in the Strait of Malacca. A Traverse Book by J. D. in 1587. A Report of J. D. of his three voyages made for the Discovery of the N. West Passage. Pub. by Hakluyt. The World's Hydrographical Description, Lon., 1595, 8vo. This very rare vol. was pub. by Davis himself. The Seamen's Secrets, 1595, 8vo, 1626 and 1657, 4to. See Hakluyt's Collection of Voyages.

Davis, John. News from Ireland, &c., Lon., 1642, 4to.

Davis, John. Theolog. treatises, &c., 1652, '55.

Davis, John. Sermon, 1814, 8vo.

Davis, John. Travels of four and a half years in the U. States, 1799–1802, Lon., 1803, 8vo; 1817. Contains some interesting facts relating to Pres. Jefferson, Col. Burr, &c. He pub. some other works.

"With more sincerity than is usual among travellers, he states that he made his tour on foot, because he could not afford the expense of a horse."—Rich's Bibl. Amer. Novæ.

Davis, Sir John. See DAVIES.

Davis, John A. G., 1802–1840, a lawyer and professor, born in Middlesex co., Virginia. Before the age of thirty "he was appointed Law-Professor in the University of Virginia, and filled that chair for ten years or longer. In 1839 he pub. a valuable Treatise on Criminal Law, and Guide to Justices of the Peace, pp. 600, 8vo. For gratuitous circulation, a tract on Estates Tail Executory Devises, and Contingent Remainders under the Virginia Statutes modifying the Common Law; and another tract against the Constitutional right of Congress to pass laws expressly and especially for the 'Protection' of Domestic Manufactures, combating Mr. Madison's views upon that subject. In Nov. 1840, Mr. Davis was shot with a pistol by a rioting student, whom he, in obedience to the university-laws, was endeavouring to arrest. After lingering for several days, he died, leaving a widow and seven children."

Davis, John Ford, M.D. Carditis, Bath, 1808, 12mo.

Davis, Sir John Francis, Governor of Hong Kong, formerly Her British Majesty's Chief Superintendent in China. 1. The Chinese: a General Description of China and its Inhabitants, Lon., 1836, 2 vols. p. 8vo. Several edits., 1840, &c.

"Mr. Davis resided twenty years at Canton, where he at length rose to be chief of the factory; he accompanied Lord Amherst's embassy to Peking; and he ranks as one of the few Europeans who have ever really mastered the language and literature of China. We have a right, therefore, to consider the statements which he has now submitted to the public as containing as full and correct a view of this singular people, of their government, laws, and institutions—and, in short, of the whole frame of their society, as the many difficulties with which the subject is beset will permit."—Lon. Quarterly Review.

"This is undoubtedly the best work on China in the English language."—McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Economy.

"My information is derived from Mr. Davis's able and lucid work on China."—Duke of Wellington.

2. Chinese Moral Maxims, with Translations, 8vo. 3. Chinese Novels, 8vo. 4. The Massacre of Benares; a chapter from British Indian History, 1p. 8vo.

"The whole of this spirit-stirring volume is well entitled to perusal."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

5. Sketches of China, 2 vols. p. 8vo, 1841; and new ed.

6. China during the War and since the Peace, 1852, 2 vols. p. 8vo; new ed., 1857, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

The reader can perhaps learn as much of the Chinese from these works as from any other volumes in the language.

Davis, Joseph. Last Legacy, Lon., 1707, 12mo.

Davis, Joseph. Digest of Legislative Enactments relating to the Society of Friends, commonly called Quakers, in England; with occasional Observations and Notes, Lon., 1820, 8vo; 2d ed., 1849, r. 8vo.

Davis, M. Thoughts on Dancing, 1791, 12mo.

Davis, M. S. Case of Rev. C. Jones, N. York, 1813, 8vo.

Davis, Mary Anne. Fables in Verse, 1813, 12mo.

Davis, Matthew L., of New York, d. 1850, aged 84. Memoirs of Aaron Burr, N. York, 1837, '38, 2 vols. 8vo. The Private Journal of Aaron Burr, 1838, 2 vols. 8vo. See an obituary notice of Mr. Davis in Littell's Living Age, xvi. 217.

Davis, Richard. Auctio Davisiana Oxonii habita, per Gul. Cooper & Ed. Millington, Bibliopol. Lond., Lon., 1689, 4to.

"An excellent Latin poem."—Woon.

Davis, Richard. Gospel Light, Lon., 12mo.
Davis, Richard. Theolog. treatises, Lon., 1693-1700.
Davis, Richard. Narrative of Facts, 1789, 8vo.
 General View of the Agricult. of the county of Oxford, Lon., 1794, 4to.
 "This is a very meagre report, and was but little noticed."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.
Davis, Richard, 1649-1741, an Irish divine. 1. A Letter to a Friend (who had become a R. Catholic) concerning his changing his Religion, Lon., 1694, 4to. 2. The Truly Catholic and Old Religion, showing that the Established Church in Ireland is more truly a member of the Catholic Church than the Church of Rome, and that all the ancient Christians, especially in Great Britain and Ireland, were of her Communion, Dublin, 1716, 4to. 3. A Letter. 4. Remarks, 4to. 5. Serms., 1716, 8vo; 1717, 4to.
Davis, Richard Bingham, 1771-1799, b. in the city of New York. His Poems were collected after his death, and pub. with a Memoir by John T. Irving, N. York, 1807.
Davis, Thomas. General View of the Agricult. of the County of Wilts, Lon., 1794, 4to; 1811, 8vo.
Davis, Thomas. Poems, with an Introduction by John Mitchell, N. York, 1856, 18mo.
Davis, Thomas A. Cosmogony; or, The Mysteries of Creation, N. York, 1858, 8vo.
Davis, Rev. W. The Believer's Assurance of Salvation: Is it Attainable? 18mo.
Davis, Wm. See DAVIES.
Davis, Wm. Mathemat. treatises, Lon., 1798-1813.
Davis, Wm. An Olio of Bibliographical and Literary Anecdotes, Lon., 1814, 12mo; and Memoranda original and selected. A new edit. has been pub. A Journey round the Library of a Bibliomaniac; or Cento of Notes and Reminiscences concerning rare, curious, and valuable Books, 1821, sm. 8vo. A Second Journey round the Library of a Bibliomaniac, 1825, sm. 8vo.
Davis, Wm. The Acts of Congress in relation to the District of Columbia from July, 1790, to March, 1831, &c., Wash., 1831, 8vo.
Davis, Wm. Theolog. treatises, Lon., 1839, &c.
Davison. Letter to Bowles; 10 Letters, 1803; referring to the Nottingham Election.
Davison, Alex. Obs. on the Report of the Committee on Military Inquiry, 1807, 8vo.
Davison, D., M.D. Trans. of F. C. Schlosser's Hist. of the 18th Century, and of the 19th till the Overthrow of the French Empire, with particular reference to Mental Cultivation and Progress, Lon., 1843-52, 8 vols. 8vo. This work has been trans. into French and Dutch also.
 "Schlosser is, as an historian, second to none of his contemporaries. We possess in England no writer between whom and himself it would not be mere irony to institute any comparison. Rankes among German and Thierry among French historians may enter the lists with him. In the depth and variety of his attainments, and the range and compass of his view, he is superior to them, and among modern writers, quite unrivalled."—Westminster Review.
Davison, Francis, son of Wm. Davison, an eminent statesman temp. Elizabeth. Poetical Rhapsody, Lon., 1602, '08, '11, '21. With a Preface by Sir E. Brydges, 1814-17, 3 vols. 8vo. With Memoirs and Notes by H. H. Nicholas, 1826, cr. 8vo; 250 copies printed, best ed. This excellent collection contains poems by Francis and Walter Davison, Sir John Davies, Sir Philip Sydney, Sir Walter Raleigh, the Countess of Pembroke, Spenser, Sir H. Wotton, Donne, Greene, and others.
 "How say you, reader? Is not the above a glorious pageant of poets? Does not the mere enumeration of them beget in thee a longing to explore the pages which contain their bright thoughts and tuneful lines?"
Davison, H., and Merivale, H. Reports in the Q. B. and upon Writs of Error, &c., 1843, '44, Lon., 1844, r. 8vo.
Davison, Hilkiah. Serms., Lon., 1720, 8vo.
Davison, John. Dr. Bancroft's Rashness in railing against the Ch. of Scot. noted, Edin., 1590, 16mo.
Davison, John. Algebra, Lon., 1739, 8vo.
Davison, John, 1777-1834, Prebendary of Worcester. Discourses on Prophecy, Lon., 1824, 8vo; 5th ed., Oxf., 1845.
 "While the student is carried forward by the interest of critical research, and his understanding enlightened by the wide and clear views opened to him, his piety will not fail to be warmed, his faith strengthened, and his best affections exalted and improved."—British Critic.
 "Some useful remarks in this work, with much deep, serious, and original thinking."—Bickersteth's Christian Student.
Primitive Sacrifice, 1825, 8vo. Baptismal Regeneration, 1844, 8vo. Remains, and Occasional Publications, Oxf., 1840, 8vo.
Davison, Thomas. Serms., 1683, '88, 4to.
Davison, Wm., M.D. Med. and chem. works, 1633-60.
Davisson, John. Prot. Minister's Mission, 1721.

Davors, Jo. Secrets of Angling, by J. D., supposed to be the above, Lon., 1613, 12mo. Augmented by Wm. Lawson, Lon., 1652. In Cens. Lit., 1811, and in 1812, 8vo. This rare work is also ascribed to Davies, Donne, and Denny. See Blakey's Lit. of Angling, 1856, 311.
Davy, Charles. Trans. of Baurit's Journey to the Glaciers in Savoy, Norw., 1775, 8vo: in conjunction with F. Davy. Letters upon Subjects of Lit., Lon., 1789, 2 vols. 8vo. College Terms, 3d ed., 1824, 4 vols. 12mo; 1845, 2 vols. 12mo. Ruth; an Oratorio. Balaam; an Oratorio.
Davy, Chris. Architectural Precedents, Lon., 1840, 8vo. Artificial Foundations, 1841, 8vo.
 "A sort of Chamber Council to be consulted with advantage by all practical men."—Lon. Mechanics' Mag.
 Commended by the Civil Engineer's Jour., The Atlas, &c.
Davy, Edm. Chem. con. to Phil. Trans., 1817. Phil. Mag., 1817.
Davy, Henry. Views of Gentlemen's Seats. Architectural Antiq. of Suffolk, 1827-46.
Davy, Henry. Landing of Rebels, Lon., 1643, 4to.
Davy, Sir Humphry, Bart. 1778-1829, was a native of Penzance, Cornwall. After serving an apprenticeship to a surgeon and apothecary, he became, at the age of 20, assistant to Dr. Beddoes in the Pneumatic Institution at Bristol. In 1799 Dr. Beddoes pub. a work entitled Contributions to Physical and Medical Knowledge, principally from the West of England. To this collection young Davy contributed Essays on Heat, Light, Respiration, Gas, and Colours. In 1803 he became a Fellow of the Royal Society, in 1806 Secretary, and in 1820 President, of that distinguished body. In 1812 he was married to Mrs. Apreece, a lady of large fortune. In 1815-17 he contributed to Phil. Trans. the celebrated papers on the Miner's Safety Lamp, for which useful invention the coal proprietors of the district of the Tyne and Wear presented him with a service of plate worth £2000. In 1818, '19, he travelled in Italy, zealously pursuing his scientific investigations, and during his absence was created a baronet. He again travelled on the Continent in 1827, hoping to benefit his impaired health, but he experienced only temporary relief, and died of apoplexy at Geneva in 1829. For an account of the brilliant discoveries of this distinguished benefactor to science, we must refer the reader to the biographies by his brother, Dr. John Davy, and Dr. Paris. In additions to Six Discourses delivered before the Royal Society at their Anniversary Meetings, he was the author of more than fifty Treatises and Lectures upon subjects of scientific investigation. He was also a poet as well as a philosopher, and his powers as an essayist are displayed to great advantage in his Consolations of Travel, and Days of Fly Fishing.
 "Had not Davy been the first chemist," remarked Coleridge to Mr. Poole, "he probably would have been the first poet of his age."
 "Who that has read his sublime quatrains on the doctrine of Spinoza can doubt that he might have united, if he had pleased, in some great didactic poem, the vigorous ratiocination of Dryden, and the moral majesty of Wordsworth."—Lockhart.
Salmonia, or Days of Fly-Fishing. By an Angler, Lon., 1828, 12mo; 4th ed., 1851, fp. 8vo.
 "We are informed in the preface, that many months of severe and dangerous illness have been partially occupied and amused by the present treatise, when the author was incapable of attending to more useful studies or more serious pursuits. While we regret that the current of scientific investigation, which has led to such brilliant results, should be, for a moment, interrupted, we have here an example, and a pleasing one, that the lightest pursuits of such a man as our angler—nay, the productions of those languid hours, in which lassitude succeeds to pain, are more interesting and instructive than the exertion of the talents of others whose mind and body are in the fullest vigour—illustrating the scriptural expression that the gleanings of the grapes of Ephraim are better than the vintage of Abieser."—Lon. Quar. Review, xxxviii. 503.
 "This is a book on a very delightful subject, by a very distinguished man. But although it is occasionally rather a pleasant book than otherwise, it is not by any means worthy either of the subject or the man—the one being Angling, and the other Sir Humphry Davy."—Prof. Wilson: Blackwood's Mag., xxiv. 248.
 Read this very amusing review.
 "We have been greatly delighted with this work."—Lon. Monthly Review.
 "The work is of a very superior character, elaborately written, full of most ingenious thoughts, with some passages of a great beauty."—Astic Journal.
Consolations in Travel, or the Last Days of a Philosopher, Lon., 1830, 8vo; 5th ed., 1851, fp. 8vo.
 "Sir H. Davy has in this little work built up for himself a monument, which indicates not, indeed, the extent and the vast advantages of his scientific research, but which exhibits the far more interesting portrait of a man who holds in adequate estimation the blessings of religion, and who endeavours to sustain it by the suffrage of science,—science so often a truant to this, the most important interest of mankind."—Lon. Monthly Review.
 "Apart from the scientific value of the labours and researches of Sir H. Davy, they are pervaded by a tone and temper, and as enthusiastic love of nature, which are as admirably expressed as their influence is excellent."

Elements of Agricultural Chemistry, in a Course of Lectures to the Board of Agriculture, Lon., 1813, 4to; 6th ed., revised by John Davy, M.D., 1839, 8vo. By Shier, 1840; new ed., 1850.

"Considering the ten years of research and meditation which the author has bestowed on the subject, its execution has, on the whole, fallen short of our expectations."—Edin. Review, xli. 280. Read this review; also one in the Lon. Quar. Rev., xi. 318.

"The book enjoyed some little popularity; but scarcely added any thing to our previous stock of knowledge. It was hailed as a grand beginning; but nearly half a century has not shown any advancement. And this deficiency may not be owing to any lack of exertion, or remissness in using and connecting the knowledge that exists on both sides; but from the impossible nature of the employment that has been projected. Agriculture and chemistry are connected in the single article of manures only; the other uses are very widely different."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

A collective edition of Sir Humphry's Works, with his Life, was pub., Lon., 1839-40, 9 vols. 8vo, by his brother, Dr. John Davy. Contents: Vol. I. Life. II. Early Miscellaneous Papers, 1799-1805. III. Researches concerning Nitrous Oxide, &c. IV. Elements of Chemical Philosophy. V. Bakerian Lectures. VI. Miscellaneous Papers and Researches, 1815-28. VII, VIII. Agricultural Lectures. IX. Salmonia; Consolations of Travel.

"This collection, from its variety and interest, promises to be one of the most valuable republishings of our time."—Lon. Spect.

Dr. Davy's Memoir of his brother is commended as "A worthy record of the life of our great philosopher, and should be studied by the youth of England, that they may know how mighty a power resides in the mind to conquer difficulties."—Britannia.

"This biography is admirably written—correct details, full of instruction, and amusing throughout."—Lon. Review.

Dr. Paris's Life of the philosopher, Lon., 2 vols. 8vo, has been characterized as "A durable monument to the memory of Sir Humphry Davy, and to the talents of Dr. Paris."—Lon. Genl. Mag.

"No one who reads this book, and studies the processes by which Davy arrived at his grand results, will hesitate to place him in the rank of immortal genius."—Spectator.

It would be difficult to exaggerate the value of Sir Humphry's contributions to science. Whilst yet but a youth, officiating as assistant to Dr. Beddoes,

"He discovered the remarkable action of nitrous oxide, or laughing gas, on the system, and thus paved the way to the application of those means now in use for alleviating pain in severe operations. . . . In 1806 he made the important discovery that the combinations and decompositions by electricity are referable to the law of electrical attractions and repulsions, and thus demonstrated the intimate connection between electricity and chemistry. His most brilliant discovery was, however, that of, in 1807, the composition of the alkalies, which he proved to be combinations of oxygen with metals. In 1810 he found chlorine to be a simple body, in accordance with the view of Berzelius, announced in the previous century. His other discoveries were that of the Safety Lamp, exhibiting a fine example of inductive reasoning; and his mode of preventing the corrosion of copper sheathing by the protecting influence of zinc."—R. DUNDAS THOMSON, M.D., &c., Prof. of Chemistry, St. Thomas's Hospital College, London.

"Since the age of Sir Isaac Newton, the History of British Science has recorded no discoveries of equal importance with those of Sir Humphry Davy. The researches of Black, Priestley, and Cavendish, however important in their results, were less brilliant in their generalisations, less striking in their individual phenomena, less indicative of inventive talent, and less fruitful in their practical applications. In placing Sir Humphry Davy, therefore, at the head of the British Chemists, we cannot anticipate an appeal from our decision;—and if any dissenting voice shall be raised, it will proceed only from the sacred recesses of personal esteem or family affection."—Edinburgh Review, lxxii. 101.

"Davy was the greatest chemical genius that ever appeared."—M. DUMAS.

"Mr. Davy, not yet thirty-two years of age, occupied, in the opinion of all that could judge of such labours, the first rank among the chemists of this or of any other age; it remained for him, by direct service rendered to society, to acquire a similar degree of reputation in the minds of the general public."—Cuvier's Eloge of Sir H. Davy.

Davy, John. Sermon on the death of Prince George, 1708.

Davy, John, M.D., brother of Sir Humphry. Account of the Interior of Ceylon, Lon., 1821, 4to.

"This is an excellent work, though like many other works of excellence, too bulky; its chief and peculiar merit and recommendation consists in its details on the natural history of Ceylon."—Stevenson's Voyages and Travels.

Researches, Physiological and Anatomical, 1839, 2 vols. 8vo. Notes and Observations on the Ionian Islands and Malta, &c., 1842, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Dr. Davy's work deserves to be bought as well as perused, so carefully, completely, and extensively has it been got up. We trust that the consciousness of having discharged such an important duty will not be the only result of his long labour, but that the work will prove as remunerative as it ought to be."—Westminster Review.

Lectures on the Study of Chemistry, in Connection with the Atmosphere, the Earth, and the Ocean; and Discourses on Agriculture, 1849, 12mo.

"We have great pleasure in recommending this volume as an excellent popular introduction to chemical studies."—Lon. Medical Gazette.

For notices of Dr. Davy's Memoirs of his distinguished brother, edit. of his works, &c., see preceding article.

Davy, John, d. 1824, a musical composer, wrote some dramatic compositions. His best-known song is—Just like Love is yonder Rose.

Davy, Michael. Tale of a Tub, Lon., 1674, fol.

Davy, Wm., d. 1826, curate of Lustleigh, &c. System of Divinity, Exeter, 1785, 6 vols. 12mo; 1825, 2 vols. 8vo; 1827, 3 vols. 8vo. System of Divinity, Lustleigh, 1796-1807, 26 vols. 8vo; 14 copies only, which were printed and bound by the author himself. Highly commended by the Bishops of London, Durham, Bristol, and Norwich.

"In persevering industry, you are without a rival. In theological knowledge there are not many who equal you, and the selections and arrangement of your work appear to me judicious."—Bp. of Norwich, in a Letter to Rev. W. Davy.

Davyes, Hatton. Sermon on Ephes. iv. 14, 1708, 4to. Davyes, Thomas. The Tenth Worthy, or several Anagrams on the name of that Worthy of Worthies, Oliver Cromwell, 1658, fol.

Davyes, Sir John. See DAVIES.

Davyes, John. Art of Decyphering, 1737, 4to.

Davyes, Mrs. Mary. Works; consisting of Plays, Novels, Poems, and Familiar Letters, Lon., 1726, 2 vols. 8vo. "She was a correspondent of Dean Swift; and thirty-six letters from him to her and her husband were, a few years ago, in the hands of Dr. Ewen of Cambridge."—Biog. Dramat.

Dawbeny, H. Historie, &c., rel. to Cromwell, 1659, 8vo.

Dawborn, Mrs. 1. Nursing. 2. Assistant, 1805, '06.

Dawe, George, d. 1829, an English painter, of whom some account will be found in the Essays of Charles Lamb. The Life of George Morland; with Remarks on his Works, 1807, 8vo.

Dawe's, Jack. Prognostication for the Year 1623, or Vox Graculi, 4to. This rare pamphlet was sold for £5 9s. at the Gordonstoun sale.

Dawes, Four Serms., 1773, 8vo.

Dawes, John. Admeasurement, 1797, 12mo.

Dawes, Lancelot, 1580-1633. Serms., 1614-33.

Dawes, M. Serms., 1763. Phil. Considerations, 1780.

Dawes, Matt. Crimes and Punishments, Lon., 1782. Real Estates, 1814. Landed Property, 1818. Arrests, 1787. Other works.

Dawes, Richard, 1708-1766, was educated at, and became Fellow of, Emanuel College, Cambridge. He was eminent for his critical knowledge of the Greek tongue, which proficiency he perhaps over-estimated. He seems to have been jealous of Dr. Bentley, and was guilty of the absurdity of declaring that the doctor

"Nihil in Græcis cognovisse nisi ex indicibus petivisset."

In 1745 Dawes pub. his Miscellaneous Critica, Cambridge, 8vo; new edit. by Bishop Burgess, Oxon., 1781; by Kidd, Cantab., 1817.

"Second only to Bentley's Phalaris."—Poerson.

"A work displaying considerable ingenuity and erudition."—Lon. Quar. Rev.

Abroad it was highly commended by Valkener, Pierson, Koen, and Reiske. There is no doubt of the value of this work, especially with the improvements of the latter edit.; but the authority of Dawes is by no means so great as it was for some twenty years after the publication of his canons. He has been proved to be often wrong, and an erring dogmatist meets with but little mercy.

Dawes, Rufus, b. 1803, in Boston, is the son of Judge Thomas Dawes, whose name is enrolled among the poets of America. In 1830 Rufus Dawes pub. The Valley of the Nashaway and other Poems, and in 1839 Athenia of Damascus, Geraldine, and his miscellaneous poetical works. Nix's Mate, an historical romance, appeared in 1840. For specimens of Mr. Dawes's poetry, see Griswold's Poets and Poetry of America.

Dawes, Sir Thos. Title to certain Lands, 1654, fol.

Dawes, Thomas, 1757-1825, father of Rufus Dawes, was Judge of the Municipal Court of Boston, and Judge of Probate. He pub. some poetical compositions—see Kettell's Specimens of American Poetry—an Oration on the Boston Massacre, and an Oration on the 4th of July, 1787.

Dawes, Wm. Disp. Med. de Variolis, Lyons, 1680, 4to.

Dawes, Sir Wm., 1671-1724, a native of Essex, was educated at St. John's College, Oxford, and Catherine Hall, Cambridge; Master of Catherine Hall, 1696; Bishop of Chester, 1707; Archbishop of York, 1714. An Anatomy of Atheism; a Poem, Lon., 1693, 4to. Serms. pub. separately, 1707-13. Whole Works, with a Life, 1783, 3 vols.

8vo. Sir Wm. was one of the most popular preachers of his day.

"Dawes's sermons are plain and unaffected, and adapted to every comprehension."—Willford's Memorials.

Dawkes, Thomas. Medical treatises, 1736, '44, '47.

Dawne, Derby, M.D. Health; a Poem, Lon., 1724, 8vo.

Dawney, Benj. Crit. Remarks upon the Epistles, York, 1735, 8vo. See Horne's Bibl. Bib.

Dawson. Paroch. Clergyman's Duty, 1716, 8vo.

Dawson. Appeal in defence of Christianity, 1733.

Dawson, Rev. Abraham. Trans. of portions of Genesis, 1763, '72, '86, 4to.

"In some passages he improves upon the common translation; but on the whole his works add nothing of great importance to our biblical apparatus."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

Dawson, Ambrose, M.D. Profess. works, 1744–78.

Dawson, Benj., Rector of Burgh, d. 1814, aged 85. He pub. some works on the "Confessional Controversy," and other treatises, sermons, &c., 1767–1806. The Necessitarian, 1783, 8vo. Now very rare. Philologia Anglica; or a philological and synonymical Dictionary of the English Language, Lon., 1806, 4to.

"A very perfect specimen of what may be termed an annotated edition of Dr. Johnson's Dictionary. The design is to strike out the superfluities of Johnson, to correct his errors, to amend his definitions, to vary his examples, and to supply his omissions."—Dr. Drake.

Dawson, Birket. Sermon, 1802, 8vo.

Dawson, Charles. Analysis of Musical Composition, Lon., 1845, 12mo. Elements of Music, 1844, 12mo.

"Teachers of music will find a library of useful knowledge in Mr. Dawson's well-digested compendium; and we heartily recommend it as a class-book to all engaged in the task of musical instruction."—Musical Review, April 13, 1844.

Dawson, Eli. Sermon, 1760, 4to.

Dawson, G. Pearson, M.D. Walcheren Diseases, 1810. A Nosological Practice of Physic, Lon., 8vo.

"This volume contains, we will venture to say, more correct pathology and sound practice than any systematic work of the same size in the English language."—Johnson's Med.-Chirurgy Review.

Dawson, George. Origo Legum; or a Treatise of the Origin of Laws, and their obliging power, Lon., 1694, fol.

Dawson, Rev. George, b. 1821, in London, has become distinguished as a literary lecturer. Several articles which appeared in the Birmingham Mercury were attributed to his pen. See Gillfillan's Second Gallery of Literary Portraits.

Dawson, Henry. Sermon, 1777, 12mo.

Dawson, J. H. Law rel. to Attornies, &c., Lon., 1830.

Dawson, John. Eighteen Sermons, Lon., 1642, 4to.

Dawson, John. Small Pox, &c., 1781, '85.

Dawson, John. Sermon, 1791, 8vo.

Dawson, John. Lexicon Novi Testamenti, Lon., 1709, 8vo. Also pub. in Greek and English by W. C. Taylor, 1831, 8vo.

Dawson, John, 1734–1820, an eminent mathematician, had controversies with Emerson, Stewart, and Wildbore.

Dawson, Thos. The Good Husiue's Jewell. In two parts, Lon., 1596, '97, 16mo.

Dawson, Thomas. Memoirs of St. George, the English Patron; and of the Order of the Garter, Lon., 1714, 8vo.

Dawson, Thomas. Dissertations on Biblical Subjects, Lon., 1727, 8vo.

"It is not a book of much importance."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

Dawson, Thomas, M.D. Profess. treatises, 1744, '62.

Dawson, W. C. Laws of Georgia, 1831, 4to.

Dawson, Wm. Sermon on Phil. iv. 13, 8vo.

Dawson, Wm. Atheist; a Phil. Poem, 1723, 4to.

Dawson, Wm. Poetry of Nations, 1814, 8vo.

Dax, Thomas. Offices of the Masters, Lon., 1844, 12mo. Other legal treatises.

Day. Report for Committee of Survey H. Commons, and a Charge to the Grand Jury of the county of Dublin.

Day, Angel. English Secretorie, Lon., 1586, 4to.

Day, Charles W. Five Years in the West Indies, Lon., 2 vols.

"It would be unjust to deny the vigour, brilliancy, and varied interest of this work, the abundant stores of anecdote and interest, and the copious detail of local habits and peculiarities in each island visited in succession."—Lon. Globe.

Day, G. E. Diseases of Old Age, &c., Lon., 1848, 8vo. Amer. ed., Phil., 1849, 8vo.

Day, Harry. Stock Companies, 1808, 8vo.

Day, Henry. Sermon, 1696, 4to.

Day, Henry N., b. 1808, in Connecticut, grad. at Yale College, 1828; Prof. of Rhetoric at Western Reserve College, 1840. Art of Elocution. Art of Rhetoric, 1850, 12mo.

"I am now using it, with very great satisfaction, in the instruction of my classes."—JOHN W. PRATT, Prof. of Rhetoric in the University of Alabama.

Prof. Day has contributed to numerous journals.

Day, Henry T. Serma at Mendlesham, Lon., 1838, 12mo. Algiersife and other Poems, 1838, 12mo.

Day, J. Stories for the Young, 1807, 12mo.

Day, James. Divine Poetrie, Lon., 1637, 4to.

Day, Jeremiah, LL.D., late President of Yale College, was born in Washington, Connecticut, August 3, 1773. Author of Introduction to Algebra for the Use of Colleges. A Course of Mathematics for Colleges, embracing the following works: Principles of Plane Trigonometry, Mensuration, Navigation, and Surveying. These works have been extensively used in the Colleges throughout the U. S. Inquiry Respecting Contingent Volition, 12mo. Examination of Edwards on the Will, 12mo.

Day, Rev. John, 1566–1627, son of John Day, the famous English printer. Twelve Sermons, 1615, 4to. Conciones ad Clerum, Oxf., 1612, '15. Day's Dyall; 12 Lectures, 1614. Comm. on the first 8 Psalms of David, 1620, 4to.

Day, John, of Calus College, Cambridge. The Isle of Guls, Lon., 1606, 4to; 1633. Travels of the three brothers Shirley, 1607, 4to. Law Nicks, 1608, 4to. Humour out of Breath; a Comedy, 1608, 4to. The Parliament of Bees, 1640, 4to. The Blind Beggar of Bednal Green, 1659, 4to. Vindication of John Day, 1646, 4to.

"A flourishing poet and comedian of his time."—Woods. See Biog. Dramat.

Day, Joseph. Exam. of Attornies, &c., Lon., 1795, 4to.

Day, Rev. Lionel, son of John Day, the famous English printer. Concio ad Clerum, Oxon., 1632, fol.

Day, Martha, 1818–1833, was a daughter of President Day of Yale College. She attained great proficiency in mathematics and the languages, and wrote poetry of uncommon merit. A collection of her Literary Remains, with Memorials of her Life and Character, was pub. at New Haven by Prof. Kingsley.

"Her poems were buds of promise, which justified the anticipations that were entertained of her eminence in literature."—Criswold's Female Poets of America.

Day, Martin, "that learned and judicious divine."

22 Sermons, Lon., 1632, 4to. Some of his sermons are in the collection entitled The House of Mourning, 1660, fol.

Day, Matthew. Excerpta in sex priores libros Homeri Iliados, Lon., 1652, 12mo.

Day, Rev. Richard, son of John Day, the famous English printer, was also a printer as well as a clergyman. He wrote some verses, Contra Papiatos Incendiaros, in Fox's Martyrology, 1576; and trans. Fox's De Christo triumphante Comedia, to which he wrote a preface and two dedications. The father of the three clergymen just noticed—John Day—contributed essentially to the promotion of the English Reformation by his editions of the Bible, Fox's Martyrs, Ascham's and other works.

"As a printer, Richard Day justly merits the honour of attempting a general reform in the distinct use of the letters j and t, v, and u, which he observed in P. Baro's Treatises, De Fide, &c."

Day, Richard. Petition to Parliament, 1652, 4to.

Day, Hon. Robert. Free Thoughts, in Defence of a Future State, Lon., 1700, 8vo.

Day, Robert. Sermon, 1779, 8vo.

Day, Samuel Phillips, formerly a monk of the order of the Presentation. Monastic Institutions; their origin, progress, nature, and tendency, Lon., 1844, sp. 8vo; 2d ed., 1846. Life in a Convent, 1848, 12mo.

Day, Thomas, 1748–1789, a philanthropist, poet, and political writer. The Dying Negro, 1773; in conjunction with Mr. Bicknell; intended to promote the abolition of slavery. The Devoted Legions; a Poem against the war with America, 1776. The Desolation of America; a Poem, 1777. Letters of Marius, 1784, 8vo. Reflections on the Present State of England and the Independence of America, 1782, 8vo.

"From the inflexible spirit of the Americans, and their determined resolution to be free, Mr. Day gives it as his opinion that America ought to be declared independent. He conceives that great advantages will result from this measure, and his reasonings are solid and well supported. He affirms that England ought to yield with magnanimity what she cannot withhold by arms."—Lon. Monthly Review.

History of Sandford and Merton, 1783–89, 3 vols. 12mo. This is a deservedly popular work. It was trans. into French by M. Berquin. History of Little Jack. Other publications. See Account of his Life and Writings by James Keir, Lon., 1791, 8vo.

"The pool of mercenary and time-serving ethics was first blown over by the fresh country breeze of Mr. Day's Sandford and Merton, a production that I well remember, and shall ever be grateful for. . . . It assisted the cheerfulness I inherited from my father; showed me that circumstances were not a check to a healthy gaiety, or the most masculine self-respect; and helped to supply me with a resolution of standing by a principle, not merely as a point of lowly or lofty sacrifice, but as a matter of common sense and duty, and a simple co-operation with the elements of natural warfare."—LUCAS HUNT.

Day, Thomas. Medical treatises, 1772, '85.
Day, Hon. Thomas, 1777-1855, a native of Connecticut. Reports of Cases, &c. Supreme Court of Errors of Conn. 1814 to '28 inc., 6 vols. 8vo. A Digest of Reported Cases of Sup. Court of Errors of Conn. from 1786 to 1829, 8vo. His vols. of Reports amount to 26, besides Digests to most of the series. He also edited several English law-works, in all about 40 vols.
Day, Valentine. Serms., Lon., 1818, 8vo.
Day, Wm. 1. Isaiah. 2. Romans, 1654, '66.
Day, Wm. Man's Destruction, Lon., 1713, 12mo.
Day, Wm. The Shepherd's Boy: Pastoral Tales, 1804.
Day, Wm. Slavery in America Shown to be Peculiarly Abominable, Lon., 1841, 8vo. Punctuation Reduced to a System; 6th ed., 1853, 18mo.
 "Mr. Day has laboured with success; and his little book should be read attentively."—The Critic.
Daye, Eliza. Poems, 1798, 8vo.
Daye, James. Serms., 1752, 4to.
Dayes, Edward. Works, Lon., 1805, 4to. Contains an excursion through Derbyshire and Yorkshire, with notes by E. W. Brayley; essays on painting; instructions for drawing and colouring, and professional sketches of modern artists.
Dayrell, Richard, D.D. Serms., 1759, 4to.
Deacon, Aug. Elements of Perspec. Drawing, 1841, 8vo. "A well-reasoned and clearly-written pamphlet."—Lon. Exam.
Deacon, D. D., Jr. Poems, Chesterf., 1790, 4to.
Deacon, E. E. Game Laws, Lon., 1831, 8vo. L. and P. of Bankruptcy, 2d ed., 1846, 2 vols. 8vo. Crim. Law, 1836, 2 vols. 8vo. Cases in Bankruptcy, 1837-41, 4 vols. r. 8vo. Guide to Magis., 1843, 2 vols. 8vo. Deacon, E. E., and Chitty, Ed., Reports in Bankruptcy, 1833-37, 4 vols.
Deacon, H. Treat. on the V. Disease, 1789, 8vo.
Deacon, John. Godlie Serms., Lon., 1586, 8vo.
Deacon, John. Tobacco tortured in the filthy Fumes of Tobacco refined, Lon., 1616, 4to. Treatise of the Flux, 1657, 12mo.
Deacon, John. Theolog. treatises. Discourses of Spirits and Devils, by John Duncan and John Walker, 1601, 4to.
Deacon, John. Charge and Sermon, 1786, 8vo.
Deacon, John. Hymns and Psalms, 1801, 18mo.
Deacon, Thomas. Theolog. publications, Lon., 1734-48.
Deacon, W. F. Annette; a Tale; with a memoir of the author by Hon. Sir T. N. Talfourd, Lon., 1853, 3 vols. "It has enough in it of life and interest to keep it for some years to come in request."—Lon. Examiner.
Deacon, Wm. Justification by Faith, 1794, 4to.
Deacon, Wm. Stage Waggon, &c., 1807.
Deakin, Richard, M.D. Florigraphia Britannica, Lon., 1837-41, 4 vols. 8vo.
Dealtry, R. B. Serms., 1782, 4to.
Dealtry, Robt. Monody; Elegy, 1809, 4to.
Dealtry, Wm., 1775-1847, Archdeacon of Surrey. Fluxions, 1810, 8vo; 1816. See Quart. Rev. Serms., &c., 1810-46.
Dean, Amos, b. 1803. Lectures on Phrenology, 8vo, pp. 252, 1835. Philosophy of Human Life, 8vo, pp. 300, 1839. Manual of Law, Albany, 1838, 8vo. Principles of Medical Jurisprudence, Albany, 1850, pp. 664, 8vo. "The design appears to have been well executed."—Amer. Law Journal.
 "Whatever may be deficient in the work of Dr. Beck, will be found amply supplied in the one of which the title is placed at the head of this article."—U. S. Law Mag.
 See also Western Law Journal and The Law Reporter.
Dean, G. A. Construction of Farm Buildings and Labourers' Cottages, Lon., 1850, r. 8vo.
 "This work is on an extensive and improved scale, and its merit is very considerable."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.
Dean, John. Legerdemain, Lon., 1622, 12mo.
Dean, John. His Sufferings, &c., Lon., 1711, 8vo. Falsification of the above by Chris. Longman, N. Miller, and G. White, 1711, 8vo.
Dean, John. Account of Ship Sussex, 1740, 8vo.
Dean, Rev. Rd. Future Life of Brutes, 1768, 2 vols.
Dean, S. Swedenborg's writings, 1802. Serms., 1795.
Deane, Edmund, b. 1572. Spadacrene Anglica, or the English Spa-Fontaine, Lon., 1626, 4to.
 "A learned and ingenious treatise."—BRASER NICOLSON
Admiranda Chymica, Frankf., 1630, 8vo. On Harrowgate Water, York, 1654, 8vo.
Deane, Henry. Letter to Bp. of Salisb., 1845, 8vo.
Deane, Rev. J. Serpent-Worship, Lon., 1832, 4to.
Deane, John. Letter from Moscow, Lon., 1699, fol.
Deane, Richard. Baptism, Lon., 1693, 12mo.
Deane, Saml., D.D., minister of Portland, Maine, d.

1814, aged about 73. New England Farmer, or Georgical Dict., 2d ed., 1797, 8vo. Serms., 1794, '95.

Deane, Silas, d. 1789, minister of the U. States to France. Address to the Independent Citizens of the U. States. Letters to Hon. Robt. Morris, New London, 1784, sm. 4to; Lon., 8vo. Deane's vindication from alleged mismanagement of the public funds will be found here. The New London ed. contains matter not in the London ed. Deane's intercepted Letters to his brother and others were pub. in 1782. He died in great poverty at Deal in England. See Warren's Amer. Rev.; Marshall; Gordon.

Dearborn, Gen. Henry Alexander Scammell, 1783-1851, b. at Exeter, N.H., son of Gen. Dearborn, of the American Revolution. 1. Memoir on the Commerce of the Black Sea, Boston, 1819, 2 vols. 8vo, and 1 vol. 4to of Maps. 2. Letters on the Internal Improvements and Commerce of the West, 1839, 8vo. 3. Biography of Commodore Bainbridge. 4. Memoir of his Father. He left in MS. A Diary in 45 vols., a Memoir of his Father-in-law, Col. Wm. R. Lee, and a History of the Battle of Bunker's Hill.

Deare, James. Trans. of Virgil's Georgics, 1808.

Dearing, or Deering, Sir Edward, was first a republican, subsequently a zealous supporter of K. Chas. I. Collection of Speeches in matters of Religion, Lon., 1642, 4to. Character of Maria, his late lady, 1601, 8vo. Some of his speeches, &c. were pub. separately, 1641-44.

Dearle, Edw. Sure Guide for Youth, 1791, 8vo.

Dearn, T. D. W. Works on Architecture, 1807, '09, '11, '21. Hist. Topog., and Descrip. Account of the Weald of Kent, 1814, 8vo.

Dearsly, H. R. Drainage Act, 10 and 11 Vict., Lon., 1847, 12mo. Law of Banks and Bankers, with Charter, &c. of Bk. of Eng.

Deas, Geo., and Jas. Anderson. Cases decided in Ct. of Session, Jury Ct., and H. Ct. of Just., 1829-32, Edin., 1829-33, 5 vols. 8vo.

Dease, Wm. Med. treatises, Dubl., and Lon., 1776-86.

Deason, T. Serms. on Death, 1799, 8vo.

Deason, Wm. See DEACON.

Debary, Rev. Thos. Notes of a Residence in the Canary Islands, the South of Spain, and Algiers, Lon., 1851, 12mo.

Debden, Waldron. Compendious Hist. of the English Stage, 1800.

Debenham, Thos. Med. con. to Phil. Trans., 1751.

Debords, Lewis. Serms., 1723, 8vo.

De Bow, James D. B., was born in Charleston, S. C., 1820; graduated at Charleston Coll., 1842; removed to New Orleans, 1845. Professor of Political Economy and Statistics in the University of Louisiana, 1847. Edited the Southern Quarterly Review, 1843-45. Originated De Bow's Monthly Review at New Orleans, 1846, which he still conducts. Author of Industrial Resources and Statistics of the Southern and Western States, 1853, 3 vols. 8vo. Two years Superintendent of the United States Census at Washington. Compiled 3 vols. of the Statistics, the quarto edition, and the Compendium of the Census, 1854. Also the volume of Mortality, Statistics, &c.

Debrow, John. Sex of Bees, Lon., 1777, 8vo.

Debrett, John. New Foundling Hospital, Lon., 1784, 12mo. State Papers, 1791-1803; pub. in 11 vols. 8vo. Parliamentary Papers, 1797, 3 vols. 8vo. New Baronetage of England, 1803, 2 vols. 18mo; new ed. by G. W. Collen, 1840, 8vo. Peerage of England, Scotland, and Ireland, Lon., 1809, 2 vols. 12mo; 16th ed., 1826; new ed. by G. W. Collen, 1849, r. 8vo. Asylum for Fugitive Pieces in Prose and Verse, 4 vols. 12mo.

Decan. Latin Syllables, Lon., 1784, 8vo.

De Charms, Richard, b. 1796, at Philadelphia, a Swedenborgian divine, has contributed to the literature of his Church, and edited several of its periodicals. He is the author of The New Churchman Extra, Sermons, Lectures, &c.

De Chemant, D. Artificial Teeth, 1798.

Decker, Sir Matthew, an English merchant. Causes of the Decline of the Foreign Trade, Lon., 1744, 4to; Edin., 1756, 12mo. Considerations on High Duties, Lon., 1743, 8vo. Fauquier ascribes the first tract to a Mr. Richardson. See McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Economy. Sir M. D.'s Scheme for a Tax on Houses laid open, 1757, 8vo.

Decker, P. Chinese Architecture, Lon., 1795, 4to.

Decker, Dekkar, Derkar, or Dekker, Thomas, acquired some celebrity among the wits of the reign of James I. as a writer of plays and tracts upon the vices and customs of the age. He wrote plays in conjunction with Webster, Rowley, Ford, and Jonson. It chanced, however, that "Rare Ben" quarrelled with him, and, it was supposed, went so far as to ridicule him under the character of Crispinus in the "Poetaster." But Mr. Gilchrist has proved that Marston was intended by this personage. However, Decker displayed Jonson to the amusement of the town, in his piece of Satiro-Mastix, or the Untrussing of the humorous Poet. Ben here figures as Horace Junior—he had assumed the name of Horace—and his allusions to Decker's ill-favoured visage are thus repaid:

"You staring Leviathan! look on the sweet visage of Horace: look, parballed face: look—he has not his face puncht full of eyel holes, like the cover of a warming pan!"

Jonson replied in an address to the Reader introduced in the 4to ed. of his play, styling Decker The Untrusser.

Decker's plays amount to twenty-eight, and his tracts to about five-and-twenty. See Lowndes's Bibl. Man.; Drake's Shakespeare and his Times; Warton's Hist. of Eng. Poetry; Bibl. Anglo-Poet.; Collier's Hist. of Eng. Dramat. Poet. His best-known plays are Fortunatus, or the Wishing Cap; and The Honest Whore; and his best-known tract is The Gull's Horn Book, of which a new ed. was pub. in 1812, Bristol, 4to, edited by Dr. Nott.

"His 'Gull's Horn Book, or fashions to please all sorts of Gulls,' first printed in 1609, exhibits a very curious, minute, and interesting picture of the manners and habits of the middle class of society, and on this account will be hereafter frequently referred to in these pages."—Drake's Shakespeare and his Times.

Sir Walter Scott draws largely from the Gull's Horn Book, in his description of London life, in The Fortunes of Nigel. Decker is supposed to have died about 1639.

De Clarovade, E. Watchman's Alarm, or the Burden of England, Ireland, and Scotland, Lon., 1646, 4to.

De Clifford, Lord. Letter to Electors, 1790, 8vo.

De Coetlogon, Charles E., an English Calvinist divine of French descent, d. 1820. Sermons, &c., Lon., 1776-1818.

"The matter of his discourses was replete with ingenious illustration, sound argument, and pointed application."—Middleton's Ecclesiastical Memoirs.

De Coetlogon, Dennis, M.D. Profess. and other publications, Lon. 1739-46. Universal Diet. of Arts and Sciences, Lon., 1745, 2 vols. fol.

De Coignet, P. Refut. of Cotton's Letter for the Jesuits' killing of kings, 1611.

De Courcy, Richard, Vicar of St. Alkmund, d. 1803. Theolog. treatises, 1776-1810.

"His sermons were in language dignified, in reasoning perspicuous, embellished by apposite allusions, and ornamented with many of the graces of oratory."—Lon. Gent. Mag.

De Crespigny, Caroline. Visions of Great Men and other Poems, Lon., 12mo. Enchanted Rose, from Schults, 1844, p. 8vo. My Souvenir; or Poems and Translations, 1844, 8vo.

"She appears to have resided long abroad, and to have caught something of the earnest and profound, yet mystical, feeling that pervades the poetry of Germany."—Britannia.

De Crespigny, Mrs. Champion. The Poor Soldier; inscribed to Mrs. C., Lon., 1789, 4to. Letters of Advice, 1803, 8vo. Monody on the Death of Lord C., 1810.

Dede, James. English Botanist's P. Companion, 1809.

Dee, Arthur, son of the famous John Dee, was physician to Charles I. Fasciculus Chymicus, &c., 1631, 12mo, trans. into English by James Hasolle, [i. e. Elias Ashmole,] 1650, 12mo. See ASHMOLE, ELIAS.

Dee, John, 1527-1608, was one of the most remarkable characters of a remarkable age. His genius was of so comprehensive a description, that he could alternately devote his attention to the speculations of philosophy, the lessons of divinity, the problems of mathematics, the experiments of chemistry, the mysteries of astrology, and the incantations of magic. When only 15, he was, he tells us, "meetly well furnished with understanding of the Latin tongue," and entering St. John's College, Cambridge, "I was so vehemently bent to study, that for these years [1542-45] I did inviolably keep this order: only to sleep four hours every night; to allow to meat and drink, and some refreshments after, two hours every day; and of the other eighteen hours, all, except the time of going to, and being at, the divine service, was spent in my studies and learning."

In 1547 he visited Flanders, and on his return was made Fellow of Trinity College. His devotion to astronomy drew upon him the suspicion of being a reader of the stars, and he found it expedient to return to the University of Louvain, where he became highly distinguished. He subsequently visited Paris, and delivered lectures upon Euclid, which gave so much satisfaction that he was invited to accept the mathematical professorship of the University.

In 1551 he returned to England, where he was warmly received; but soon fell into trouble, being suspected of favouring the cause of the Princess Elizabeth and practising against Queen Mary's life by enchantments. Unable to convict him of this crime, or of heresy, his prosecutors set him at liberty, and in a few months afterwards (Jan. 15, 1556) he evinced his zeal for learning by presenting a supplication to Queen Mary for the recovery and preservation of ancient writers and monuments. Upon the accession of Elizabeth he would certainly have received substantial marks of her regard—for she treated him with great respect at different times during her reign—but the public insisted that he was too intimate with the great enemy; and even went so far as to break into his house during his absence from the kingdom, and destroy his mathematical instruments and many of his books. As the people would have it that he was a magician, Dee seems now to have imbibed the same opinion, and forming a copartnership with Edward Kelley and the Count Laski, a Polish nobleman, he professed to hold communion with spirits. For further particulars respecting this extraordinary character and his writings, the reader must consult the works indicated below. The philosopher suffered much in the latter part of his life from the privations incident to extreme poverty. His talents and acquirements were great. The mathematical notes to Sir Henry Billingsley's trans. of Euclid, pub. in 1570, fol., would have done credit to any scholar of the age; the Memorials pertaining to the perfect Arte of Navigation, 1577, fol., display the hand of a master, and the reformation of the calendar entitles him to the gratitude of posterity. See Life by Smith in Vita Eruditissimorum Virorum, and in Hearne's Joan. Confratris et Monachi Glastoniensis Chronica, 2 vols. 8vo, 1726. Biog. Brit.; Athen. Oxon.; Niceron, vol. i.; Lysons's Environs; Chalmers's Biog. Diet.; A Relation of what passed for many years between Dr. John Dee and some Spirits: as also the Letters of sundry great Men and Princes to said Dr. Dee; with a Preface by Meric Casaubon, D.D., 1659, fol. A copy of this curious work, which excited much attention at the time of its publication, is worth about £5. In 1842 the Cambridge Society pub. The Private Diary of Dr. John Dee, with a Catalogue of his Library of Scientific MSS. This was edited by one of the most eminent antiquaries of our own day—James Orchard Halliwell, Esq.

Deeble, Wm. Thanet and the Cinque Ports, 2 vols.

Deems, Charles F., D.D., b. at Baltimore, 1820; graduated at Dickinson College, 1839; Professor in the University of N. Carolina, 1842; Prof. of Chemistry in Randolph Macon Coll., 1848; President of Greensboro' Coll., 1850; President of Centenary Coll., 1854. Author of—1. Triumph of Peace, and other Poems. 2. Devotional Melodies. 3. Twelve College Sermons. 4. Life of Rev. Dr. Clarke. 5. Home Altar. 6. What Now? Edited 5 volumes of Southern Methodist Pulpit. Contrib. to the Gentleman's Magazine, Southern Methodist Quarterly, and other journals.

Deering, Charles, M.D., a native of Saxony, settled in England, and d. at Nottingham in 1749. Small Pox, Lon., 1737, 8vo. Cat. of Plants, 1738, 8vo. Nottinghamii vetus et nova, Nottingham, 1754, 4to.

Deering, Edward, a Puritan divine, d. 1576; Rector of Pluckley, 1569; of Salisbury, 1571. He was an eloquent preacher and a warm disputant. Workes, 1614. Pub. separately, 1568-99.

Deering, Sir Edward. See DEARING.

Deering, Nathaniel, a native of Portland, Maine, graduated at Harvard College in 1810. He is the author of two five-act tragedies, Carobasset, or The Last of the Norridgewocks; and Bozzaris.

Deering, Richard, a musical composer and organist to Q. Henrietta Maria. See John Playford's Cantica Sacra, 1674, fol., for some of his compositions.

Dees, R. D. Insolvent Debtors, Lon., 1843, 12mo.

De Foe, Daniel, 1661-1731, was a son of James Foe, (the son prefixed a De to his name,) a butcher of St. Giles, Cripplegate, London. Educated among the Dissenters, he was intended for a Presbyterian minister; but we find him first a political author, (in 1683) then a soldier, as an adherent of the Duke of Monmouth, and subsequently a hosier, a tilemaker, and a woollen merchant, in succession. The publication referred to above is the Treatise against the Turks, which was intended to support the cause of the Austrians. His excellent treatise, called an Essay upon Projects, appeared in 1697. In 1699 he pub. a poetical satire entitled The True-born Englishman, a defence of King William and the Dutch. This was successful, and gave the author a great reputation. Three years later, the publication of The Shortest Way with the Dissenters, involved De Foe in great trouble.

"In this playful piece of irony, the author gravely proposed, as the easiest and speediest way of ridding the land of Dissenters, to hang their ministers and banish the people. But both Churchmen and Dissenters viewed the whole in a serious light; and while many of the former applauded the author as a staunch and worthy Churchman, as many of the latter, filled with apprehensions dire, began to prepare for Tyburn and Smithfield."

The High Church party, however, were not disposed to tolerate irony; the House of Commons declared the book a libel, and ordered it to be burnt by the hands of the common hangman; and the zealous polemic was invited to assume a prominent position in the pillory. Pope thus refers to this unpalatable exaltation:

"Earless on high stood unabashed De Foe."—Dunciad.

The sufferer himself displayed his equanimity by inditing a hymn to the pillory, which he describes as "A hieroglyphic state-machine Condemned to punish fancy in."

Whilst imprisoned in Newgate, where he was confined for two years, he pub. a periodical paper called The Review. In 1706 he again entered the political field by his Essay at removing Prejudices against an Union with Scotland, and in 1709 pub. his celebrated History of the Union. The last of his political tracts was An Appeal to Honour and Justice, intended as a hint to the House of Hanover of the obligations due to the neglected writer. A proper reward for his services would have been very acceptable to the author, for he seldom prospered in trade, and often knew the bitterness of pecuniary embarrassment. Among his best-known works, which amount in number to at least 210—Wilson thinks some have escaped him, and see Lowndes's Bibl. Man., Watt's Bibl., and Biog. Brit.—are the following: Robinson Crusoe, (first pub. in 1719); A New Voyage round the World; The Life of Captain Singleton; The Adventures of Roxana; the Hist. of Duncan Campbell; The Life of Moll Flanders; The Life of Colonel Jack; The Memoirs of a Cavalier during the Civil Wars in England; Religious Courtship; A Journal of the Plague in 1665; The Political Hist. of the Devil and A System of Magic; A Relation of the Apparition of one Mrs. Veal; A Tour through England and Scotland; An Essay on the Treaty of Commerce with France; A Plan of the English Commerce; Giving Alms no Charity. Of the last two works an eminent authority remarks:

"The Plan of the English Commerce is full of information; and, though desultory, is ably written, and contains sundry passages in which the influence of trade and industry in promoting the well-being of the labouring classes and the public wealth is set in the most striking point of view. . . . Giving Alms no Charity is written with considerable cleverness. . . . But these arguments are not so conclusive as some have supposed. . . . The truth is, that in matters of this sort De Foe was quite as prejudiced and partial as the bulk of those around him. He had not read, or if he had read, he had plainly, at all events, profited nothing by the conclusive reasonings in the Tract on the East India Trade, previously referred to. See p. 100."—McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Econ.

Another authority entitled to great respect, remarks: "As a commercial writer, De Foe is fairly entitled to stand in the foremost rank among his contemporaries, whatever may be their performances or their fame. . . . His distinguishing characteristics are originality and depth. He has many sentiments with regard to traffick, which are scattered through his Reviews, and which I never read in any other book."—George Chalmers's Life of De Foe, Lon. 1790, 8vo.

An ed. of the novels of De Foe was pub. in Edinburgh in 1810, 12 vols. 8vo. Works, with Memoir of his Life and Writings by W. Hazlitt, Lon. 1840-43, 3 vols. 8vo. Miscellaneous Works, with Memoir, Literary Prefaces, Illustrative Notes, &c. by Sir Walter Scott and others, (Talbot's ed.,) Oxford, 1840-41, 20 vols. 12mo. This ed. is now very scarce. It was pub. at £5. The reader must not fail to procure that interesting work, The Life and Times of Daniel De Foe, with Review of his Writings and Opinions on Important Matters, by Walter Wilson, Lon. 1830, 3 vols. 8vo.

"I have given your volumes a careful perusal, and they have taken their degree of classical books on my shelves. De Foe was always my darling; but what darkness was I in as to far the larger part of his writings! I have now an epitome of them all."—C. LAMB.

Before quoting some testimonies to De Foe's general merits as an author, and notices of particular works, it will be only proper to cite some opinions upon that delightful romance—among the first and last of our literary luxuries—Robinson Crusoe.

"De Foe has been charged with surreptitiously appropriating the papers of Alexander Selkirk to the formation of his celebrated work; but the charge, though repeatedly and confidently brought, appears to be destitute of foundation."—PARK.

Howell's Life and Adventures of Selkirk must not be neglected by the reader.

"As this is the latest, so it is the most authentic, account of Selkirk, and embraces a variety of particulars relating to his personal history, never before communicated to the public. It is an elegant little volume, and will be read with interest by every admirer of Robinson Crusoe."—Wilson's Memoir of Daniel De Foe.

Other accounts of Selkirk will be found in his own narration, entitled Providence Displayed, printed from Capt. Woodes Rogers's Cruising Voyage round the World, 1712. See Isaac James's publication of Providence Displayed, Lon., 1800, 12mo—in Capt. Edw. Cooke's Voyage, 1712, p. 34; in the Englishman, by Sir Rd. Steele, No. 26; and in Collet's Relics of Literature, 341-44.

Robinson Crusoe first appeared in a periodical publication entitled The Original London Post, or Heathcote's Intelligencer, Nos. 125 to 289 inclusive, in 1719. Its success was so great, that four edits. were pub., 3 in 2 vols. 8vo, and an abridgt. in 12mo, in the same year. In 1720, 8vo, appeared Serious Reflections during the Life and Adventures of Robinson Crusoe: with his Vision of the Angelic World. This was intended as a third vol. to Robinson Crusoe, but was not so well received. Of the many eds. of Crusoe, we may especially notice Tys's illustrated one, pub. in about 40 Nos., with engravings from designs by Granville, and an ed. of 1820, 2 vols. 8vo, with engravings by Charles Heath, from designs by Mr. Stothard.

"If ever the late Mr. Stothard entered more warmly upon any one of his labours than another, these illustrations to Robinson Crusoe have that honour; composed at a time when he was in fullest possession of his powers, there is a charm about them which no other book illustrations possess. They are as unique in their way as the book they adorn."

"Robinson Crusoe must be allowed, by the most rigid moralists, to be one of those novels which one may read, not only with pleasure, but also with profit. It breathes throughout a spirit of piety and benevolence; it sets in a very striking light the importance of the mechanic arts, which they who know not what it is to be without them are apt to undervalue. It fixes in the mind a lively idea of the horrors of solitude, and, consequently, of the sweets of social life, and of the blessings we derive from conversation and mutual aid; and it shows how by labouring with one's own hands, one may secure independence, and open for one's self many sources of health and amusement. I agree, therefore, with Rousseau, that this is one of the best books that can be put into the hands of children."—Dr. Beattie's Moral and Critical Dissertations.

We quote from Rousseau's opinion, referred to by Dr. Beattie:

"As we must have books, there is one already written, which, in my opinion, affords a complete treatise on natural education. This book shall be the first Emilius shall read; in this, indeed, will, for a long time, consist his whole library, and it will always hold a distinguished place among others. It will afford us the text to which all our conversations on the objects of natural science will serve only as a comment. It will serve us as our guide during our progress to a state of reason; and will ever afterwards give us constant pleasure, unless our taste be wholly vitiated."

"You ask impatiently, What is the title of this wonderful book? Is it Aristotle, Pliny, or Buffon? No; it is ROBINSON CRUSOE."—Emilius and Sophia, or a New System of Education, ii. 50-53, English trans. 1761, 12mo.

"Was there ever any thing written by mere man, that the reader wished longer, except Robinson Crusoe, Don Quixote, and the Pilgrim's Progress?"—DR. SAM'L JOHNSON.

"How happy that this, the most moral of romances, is not only the most charming of books, but also the most instructive."—CHALMERS.

"Robinson Crusoe is delightful to all ranks and classes. It is capital kitchen reading, and equally worthy from its deep interest, to find a place in the libraries of the wealthiest and the most learned."—CHARLES LAMB.

"Perhaps there exists no work, either of instruction or entertainment, in the English language, which has been more generally read, and more universally admired, than the Life and Adventures of Robinson Crusoe. It is difficult to say in what the charm consists, by which persons of all classes and denominations are thus fascinated; yet the majority of readers will recollect it as among the first works that awakened and interested their youthful attention; and feel, even in advanced life, and in the maturity of their understanding, that there are still associated with Robinson Crusoe, the sentiments peculiar to that period, when all is new, all glittering in prospect, and when those visions are most bright, which the experience of after life tends only to darken and destroy."—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

We shall now quote some opinions of a few of our author's other works, and of his peculiar excellencies as an author:

"De Foe was employed by Queen Anne on a special mission to Scotland respecting the Union. His work is the most authentic on the subject."—CHALMERS.

"His History of the Union is sufficient to place the author among the soundest historians of the day."—T. F. DRIBBUN.

"De Foe visited Scotland about the time of the Union, and it is evident that the anecdotes concerning this unhappy period, must have been peculiarly interesting to a man of his liveliness of imagination, who excelled all others in dramatizing a story, and presenting it in actual speech and action before the reader."—Lon. Quar. Rev. xxi. 361.

"It will be in vain to contend for any thing like the same merit

(as in Crusoe) in Moll Flanders, Captain Singleton, Colonel Jack, and Roxana; yet it is, in part, of the same description. We advert to the singular truth and correctness of the individual portraiture. Whether it is possible to benefit the world by veritable likenesses of harlots, pirates, and sharpers, may be doubted; but it is something to have them exhibited in their native deformity, without being sentimentalised into Guineas, Comrads, and interesting affaires perduees of that Byronic description. Whatever caveat may be entered against these productions, the first-rate sign of genius, the power of imagining a character within a certain range of existence, and throwing into it the breath of life and individualisation, was a pre-eminent mental characteristic of De Foe."—Westminster Review, xlii. 69, &c.

"While all ages and descriptions of people hang delighted over Robinson Crusoe, and shall continue to do so, we trust, while the world lasts, how few comparatively will bear to be told, that there exist other fictitious narratives by the same writer—four of them at least of no inferior interest: Roxana—Singleton—Moll Flanders—Colonel Jack—are all genuine offspring of the same father. An unpractised midwife would swear to the nose, lip, forehead, and eye of every one of them. They are, in their way, as full of incident, and some of them every bit as romantic. . . . We would not hesitate to say, that in no other book of fiction, where the lives of such characters are described, is guile and delinquency made less seductive, or the suffering made more closely to follow the commission, or the penitence more earnest or more bleeding, or the intervening flashes of religious visitation upon the rude, unstructured soul, more meltingly and fearfully painted."—C. LAMB.

"Most of our readers are probably familiar with De Foe's history of that great calamity (the Plague)—a work in which fabulous incidents and circumstances are combined with authentic narratives, with an art and verisimilitude which no other writer has ever been able to communicate to fiction. . . . The author of Robinson Crusoe was an Englishman, and one of those Englishmen who make us proud of the name."—Edin. Rev. xxiv. 321.

"Few men have been more accurate observers of life and manners, and of the mechanism of society, than De Foe. . . . His Novels, in spite of much improbability, have been oftener taken for true narratives than any fictions that ever were composed."—Lon. Quar. Rev. xxiv. 361.

In proof of the above assertion, we may mention that the alleged appearance of the apparition of Mrs. Veal was believed to be sober matter of fact; the Memoirs of a Cavalier have been often cited as historical authority, and were credited by Lord Chatham; the Journal of the Plague was believed by as keen critics as Dr. Mead and Dr. Cheyne; and still more amusing—the track of the pretended Voyage round the World was actually laid down in a staid, dignified, respectable-looking map! On the publication of the Voyage to the World of Cartesius, "scarce mention was made of this New World, but an infinite number of French, English, and Dutchmen resolve to go and see it." p. 1.

The compliment conveyed in the last sentence of the annexed quotation which we italicize is therefore well deserved:

"As a writer of fiction, whether we consider the originality of his genius, the simplicity of his design, or the utility of his moral, De Foe is now universally acknowledged to stand in the foremost ground. That his inventive powers were of the first order, no one can doubt; nor that he possessed the art, above most other men, of infusing into his performances all the genuine pathos of nature, without the least apparent effort or exaggeration."—WILSON.

Sir Walter Scott thus defines the pathos which affects us so sensibly in the writings of De Foe:

"Pathos is not De Foe's general characteristic: he had too little delicacy of mind. When it comes, it comes unbidden, and is created by the circumstances, not sought for by the author. The excess, for instance, of the natural longing for human society which Crusoe manifests while on board of the stranded Spanish vessel, by falling into a sort of agony, as he repeated the words, 'Oh that but one man had been saved! oh that there had been but one!' is in the highest degree pathetic. The agonising reflections of the solitary, when he is in danger of being driven to sea, in his rash attempt to circumnavigate his island, are also affecting."

"He must be acknowledged as one of the ablest, as he was one of the most captivating, writers of which this tale can boast."—CHAMBERS.

In an estimate of the writings of De Foe, the strongly-marked moral and religious tendency of his compositions must by no means be forgotten. The eminent authority just quoted, who, as his biographer, carefully investigated the incidents of a troubled life extending to the threescore and ten years allotted to man, declares as the result of his investigations that "The events of his life prove him entitled to the praise of integrity, sincerity, and unvaried consistency."—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Another biographer remarks that his review of the life and writings of De Foe had satisfied him that "Religion was uppermost in his mind; that he reaped its consolations, and lived under a habitual sense of its practical importance."—WILSON.

"I am a stoick," says he, "in whatever may be the event of things. I'll do and say what I think is a debt to justice and truth, without the least regard to clamour and reproach; and, as I am utterly unconcerned at human opinion, the people that throw away their breath so freely in censuring me may consider of some better improvement to make of their passions than to waste them on a man that is both above and below the reach of them. I know too much of the world to expect good in it, and have learnt to value it too little to be concerned at the evil. I have gone through a life of wonders, and am the subject of a vast variety of providences. I have been fed more by miracle than Elijah, when the ravens were his purveyors. I have sometime ago rummaged up the scenes of my life in this distich:

No man has tasted differing fortunes more;
And thirteen times I have been rich and poor.

"In the school of affliction I have learnt more philosophy than at the academy, and more divinity than from the pulpit: in prison I have learnt that liberty does not consist in open doors, and the egress and regress of locomotion. I have seen the rough side of the world as well as the smooth; and have, in less than half a year, tasted the difference between the clove of a king and the dungeon of Newgate. I have suffered deeply for cleaving to principles of which integrity I have lived to say, none but those I suffered for ever reproached me with it."

We conclude with an eloquent tribute to De Foe's merits from an authority of the first rank:

"For our part, surrounded as we are by the bustle and cares of middle age, the mere mention of our author's name falls upon us as cool and refreshing as a drop of rain in the hot and parched midday. . . . We are compelled to regard him as a phenomenon, and to consider his genius as something rare and curious, which it is impossible to assign to any class whatever. Throughout the ample stores of fiction in which our literature abounds, more than that of any other people, there are no works which at all resemble his, either in the design or execution. Without any precursor in the strange and unwonted path he chose, and without a follower, he spun his web of coarse but original materials, which no mortal had ever thought of using before; and when he had done, it seems as though he had snapped the thread, and conveyed it beyond the reach of imitation. To have a numerous train of followers is usually considered as adding to the reputation of a writer: it is a peculiar honour to De Foe that he had none. Wherever he has stolen a grace beyond the reach of art, wherever the vigour and freshness of nature are apparent, there he is inaccessible to imitation. . . . In the fictions of De Foe we meet with nothing that is artificial, or that does not breathe the breath of life."—Lon. Retrospective Review, iii. 354, 1821.

De Forest, J. W. 1. History of the Indians of Connecticut from the Earliest Known Period to 1850, Hartford, 8vo. 2. Oriental Acquaintance: in a series of letters from Asia Minor, N. York, 1856, 12mo. 3. European Acquaintance: being Sketches of People in Europe, N. Y., 1858, 12mo.

Degg, Simon. A Skeleton, &c., Phil. Trans., 1727.

Degge, Sir Simon. The Parson's Counsellor, and Law of Tithes, Lon., 1676, 8vo; 7th ed., by C. Ellis, 1820, 8vo.

"A text-book which Richards referred to, as he had always used it to be a book of some value as an authority."—Morison's Legal Bibl.

Degols, Gerard. Serms., &c., 1711-26.

Degravere, J. Theasauri Remedium, Lon., 1662.

Dehany, Wm. K. Turnpike Acts, Lon., 1823, 12mo.

De Hart, W. C. Military Law, N. York, 1846, 8vo.

Dehon, Theodore, D.D., 1776-1817, a native of Boston, graduated at Harvard College, 1795; Rector of Trinity Church, Newport, R. I., 1798; of St. Michael's, Charleston, S. C., 1809; Bishop of S. Carolina, 1812.

"He was respected as a man of talents, and beloved for his amiable qualities and many virtues."—Allen's Amer. Biog. Dict.

He pub. several discourses before societies and some serms. 90 Serms. on the Public Means of Grace, &c., 1821, 2 vols. 8vo; new ed., Lon., 1823, 2 vols. 8vo; Amer. ed., N. York, 1857, 2 vols. 8vo.

"A silvery eloquence runs through the whole texture of these discourses."—Lon. Christian Observer.

"His sermons are useful, interesting, and eloquent."—Darling's Cyc. Bibl.

Deighan, Paul. Arithmetic and Key, Dubl., 1809.

Deios, Lawrence. Serms. against Antichrist, Lon., 1509, 8vo.

Dekar, H. Predestination. 2d ed., 1779, 8vo.

De Kay, James E. Sketches of Turkey in 1831, '32, New York, 8vo. Natural History of New York; Zoology, vols. 1-5. This work is in 15 vols. 4to, pub. in Albany, 1842-49. The introduction is by Hon. Wm. H. Seward, late Governor of N. York. See Rich's Bibliotheca Americana Nova; Roerbach's Bibliotheca Americana.

Dekker, Thomas. See DEKKER.

De La Beche, Sir Henry Thomas, 1796-1855, a native of London, entered the Royal Military College in 1810, and became a member of the Geol. Soc. in 1817. He was knighted in 1848. Trans. of a Select. of the Geolog. Memoirs in the Annales des Mines, with Notes, Lon., 1824, 8vo, and 1836. Geolog. Notes, 1830, 8vo. Sections and Views illus. of Geolog. Phenomena, 1830, 4to. Geolog. Manual, 1832, 8vo. How to Observe, Geology, 1835, sm. 8vo, and 2d ed.

"It is a truly Baconian volume; a sort of Novum Organon of Geology."

Report on the Geology of Cornwall, Devon, and Somerset, 1839, 8vo. The Geological Observer, with upwards of 300 wood-cuts, 1851, 8vo; 2d ed., 1853.

"No one could be found so capable of directing the labours of the young geologist, or to add by his own experience the studies of those who may not have been able to range so extensively over the earth's surface. We strongly recommend Sir Henry De La Beche's book to those who desire to know what has been done, and to learn something of the wide examination which yet lies waiting for the industrious observer."—Lon. Athenaeum.

De La Cour or Delacour, James, an Irish poet, 1700-1781, was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and subsequently took holy orders. Abelard to Eloisa; a Poem, 1729. In imitation of Pope. The Prospect of Poetry, 1733.

Delafaye, Theo. Serms., &c., 1745-68.

Delafon, W. Naval Court Martials, Lon., 1805, 8vo.

Delamain, Rich. Lands in Ireland, Lon., 1841, fol.

Delamain, Robert. Mathemat. treatises, 1630, '31.

Delamayne, Thos. Essay on Man, 1779, 4to.

Delamere, Henry, Earl of Warrington. Collection of his Speeches, Lon., 1694, fol. Works and Speeches, 1694, 8vo.

Delmote, P. Introduc. to Mvickske, Lon., 1574, 8vo.

De Lancey, Wm. Heathcote, D.D., LL.D., Prot. Episcopal Bishop of Western New York, a descendant of Chief Justice De Lancey, was born in 1797 at Mainaroneck, Westchester county, New York; graduated at Yale College, 1817; Provost of the University of Pennsylvania, 1828; assistant rector in 1833, and rector in 1836, of St. Peter's Church, Philada.; consecrated bishop of the diocese of Western New York, 1839. Sermons, &c.

Delane, John T., the editor of The London Times, was educated at Magdalen Hall, Oxford, where he took his degree.

"As the responsible head of the most widely circulated paper in London, Mr. Delane probably exercises as great a power for good—or for mischief—as any man in England."—Men of the Time, Lon., 1853.

Delane, W. F. A. Turnpike Acts, Lon., 1828, 12mo. Laws for reg. the Highways, 1835, 12mo. Electors, 2d ed., 1836, 12mo.

Delaney, General Oliver. Considerations on the Propriety of Imposing Taxes in the British Colonies, Lon., 1766.

Delany, Mary, 1700-1788, a daughter of Bernard Granville, Esq., afterwards Lord Lansdowne, was married first to Alexander Pendarves, and then to Dr. Patrick Delany. She corresponded with the literary celebrities of the day, and her letters have been much admired. Late in life she commenced writing poetry. Letters of Mrs. Delany to Mrs. Frances Hamilton, 1779-88, 8vo; 1821. This vol. contains many anecdotes relating to the royal family. See the Diary of Mme. D'Arbly.

Delany, Patrick, 1686?-1768, a native of Ireland, was educated at, and Fellow of, Trinity College, Dublin; became Chancellor of Christ Church, and Prebendary of St. Patrick's, Dublin; Dean of Down, 1744. He was an intimate friend of Dean Swift, and wrote some strictures upon Lord Orrery's Remarks on the Life and Writings of that distinguished author. The Tribune, a Periodical Paper, continued through 20 Nos., commencing in 1729. Revelation Examined with Candour, 1732-63, 3 vols. 8vo; 3d ed. of the 2 vols., 1735; 4th ed., 1745, anon.

"In this work Dr. Delany discovers a very considerable portion of learning, research, and acuteness. It contains many things not to be found in the ordinary class of commentaries; some things that are fruitful; and some things not in unison with generally received opinions."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"It is a work of uncommon merit, and too little known. It comprises a number of Dissertations on the most important facts and histories in the sacred writings; and especially those which have been cavilled at by Deists and freethinkers of every description. In every case he is master of his subject; and in every instance his pretended Anakim opponents die grasshoppers in his hands."—Dr. ADAM CLARKE.

"An able defence of Natural and Revealed Religion against Atheists and Deists."—BICKERSTETH.

Reflections upon Polygamy, 1738. Hist. Account of the Life and Reign of David, King of Israel, 1740-42, 3 vols.; 1745, '58, '69, anon.

"A very interesting and elegant work. If it is drawn up with less sobriety of judgment and severity of criticism than the Life of David by Dr. Chandler, it displays much greater refinement and delicacy of thought and manner."—Williams's Christian Preacher.

"Unfortunately for its reputation, a similar life of David by Dr. Chandler provokes comparison; and every one who has read the two performances, will have no hesitation in preferring the work of Chandler to that of Delany. It is more valuable, both as a book of Scripture criticism, and of general information."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

Bickersteth thus draws the comparison:

"Chandler more critical and sober in judgment; Delany finer thoughts and more taste. Chandler too much palliates David's crimes."—Christian Student.

"A respectable and useful work, but greatly inferior to Dr. Chandler's masterly Critical History of the Life of David."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

Serms. upon Social Duties, 1744, 8vo; 1747, '50.

"The Practical Duties of Religion are enforced with great Energy; and an amiable Spirit of Candour, Benevolence, and Piety breathes throughout all his Discourses."

Delany pub. a number of separate sermons, &c. His last work was the following: Eighteen Discourses and Dissertations upon various very important and interesting Subjects, 1766, 8vo. See a notice of this volume—especially two dissertations at the end—in Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"Delany was a man of ability and learning; disposed occasionally to use his fancy, and to reason confidently on doubtful or disputed premises. There is also a great lack of evangelical sentiment in his writings."—Orme, ubi supra.

Delap, Dr. J. The Royal Suppliants; a Trag., Lon., 1781, 8vo. The Captives; a Trag., 1786, 8vo. Elegies, 1788, '90. Sedition; an Ode, 1792.

Delap, John, D.D. Serms., 1762, 4to.

De Lara, D. E. Key to Portuguese, Lon., 1825, 18mo.

De laune, Henry. Legacy to his Sons, Lon., 1657, sm. 4to.

"A miscellany of precepts, theological, moral, political, economical, digested into seven centuries of quadrins."

"The admonitions in this volume are estimable, the style nervous, and the versification, in general, correct."—Wall's Bibl. Brit.

De laune, Thos. The Present State of London, &c., 1681, 12mo. Continued by a Careful Hand to 1690, 1690, 12mo.

"Nor is De Laun's pretended state of the city much different from what we have there [in Stow's Chronicle]."—Bishop Nicolson's Eng. Hist., lib. 15.

De laune, Thomas. Theolog. treatises, 1667-1728. In answer to Dr. Calamy's discourse Concerning a Scrupulous Conscience, he wrote A Plea for the Nonconformists, 1684, 1704, 4to; preface by Daniel De Foe. His opponents replied by putting him in the pillory, taking off his ears, flogging and imprisoning him. He died in prison.

De laune, Wm., D.D., Pres. of St. John's Coll., and Margaret Prof. of Divinity in Oxford. Serms., 1702, 4to. Twelve Serms., Lon., 1728, 8vo.

De laval, Edward Hussey, 1729-1814, an eminent chemist and natural philosopher. Exper. Inquiry rel. to the Changes of Colours in Opake and Coloured Bodies, Lon., 1744, 4to. In French, Paris, 1778, 8vo. In Italian, Mil., 1779, 8vo; Bolog., 1779, 8vo. Exper. Inquiry into the Causes of the Permanent Colours of Opake Bodies, Warr., 1785, 8vo. Con. to Phil. Trans., 1759, '64, '65.

De La Warre. True Relation of Virginia, 1611, 4to.

Delepierre, J. Octave. Old Flanders; or, Popular Traditions and Legends of Belgium, Lon., 1845, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

"Two volumes written with considerable spirit. They will afford pleasure to many a reader as the long evenings of winter draw on."—Lon. Examiner.

Deletanville, Thos. Guides to French, Lon., 1758.

Delgado, Isaac. New Translation of the Pentateuch, Lon., 1789, 4to.

"A learned London Jew, who has given some good observations on the Pentateuch."—Dr. GORDON.

"The work altogether is not equal to its pretensions, and both the translation and the notes discover the influence of Jewish prejudice."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

Delisser, Richard L., born in the West Indies in 1820. 1. Interest and Average Tables, N. Y. 2. Complete Time Tables. 3. Ready Reckoner. 4. Elements of Book Keeping, &c.

Dell, George. Serms., 1711, 4to.

Dell, John, d. at Sturry, in Kent, 1810, aged 53. Poetical Effusions of the Heart, 1783, 8vo. Contributed to periodicals under the signature of Rusticus.

Dell, Jonas. Theolog. treatises, Lon., 1646, '56, '58.

Dell, Wm., Rector of Yelden, and Master of Gonvil and Caius College; ejected, 1662. Serms. and theolog. treatises, 1645-97. Select Works, Lon., 1773, 8vo.

De Loier, Peter. Treatise of Specters or Strange Sights, Visions, and Apparitions appearing sensibly unto Men, 1605, 4to.

De Lolme, John Louis, 1745-1807, a Swiss lawyer, resided for some years in England, where at times he required the assistance of the Literary Fund. He died in Switzerland. A Parallel between the English Government and the Former Government of Sweden, Lon., 1772. Later eds. of this work include the English version of the following: The Constitution of English; written in French and pub. in Holland; trans. into English, and pub. in 1775, with the Parallel, 3d ed., 1781; 4th, 1784, with Notes by Dr. Chas. Coote, 1807, 8vo. Late eds., 1822, 8vo. With Notes by W. Hughes, 1834, 8vo; by Stephens, 1838, 2 vols. 8vo; by T. G. Western, 1838, 8vo; by J. Macgregor, 1853, p. 8vo.

De Lolme has been blamed for too excessive and general admiration of the Constitution of England; but this is a point, we think, in which exaggeration is not easy. The merits of this work are unquestionable. Lords Chatham and Camden commend it highly.

"A performance deep, solid, and ingenious."—JUNYUS.

"The author has presented a view of English Equity Jurisprudence, far more exact and comprehensive than many of the English text-writers on the same subject."—CHIEF JUSTICE STOKY.

"It is unquestionably a luminous, candid, concise, yet satisfactory, exposition of the British constitution, and is written in a pure and nervous style."—Hoffman's Legal Study, 148.

Hist. of the Flagellants; or, Memorials of Human Superstition, 1783, 4to.

"Scarcely reconcilable to decorum in style or matter."

Observations upon the late National Embarrassment, &c., 1789, 8vo. The writer coincides with Mr. Pitt. Essay containing Strictures on the Union of Scotland with England, &c., 1787, 4to. This was pub. as an introduc. to De Foe's Hist. of the Union. He pub. some other treatises. See an interesting, yet distressing, account in De Lolme's Narrative, prefixed to his essay, of the difficulties he experienced in bringing his great work before the public:

"When my enlarged English edition was ready for the press, had I acquainted ministers that I was prepared to boll my tea-kettle with it, for want of being able to afford the expenses of printing it?—ministers, it seems, would not have considered that he was lighting his fire "with myrrh and cassia and precious ointment." See Disraeli's Calamities of Authors.

"De Lolme had the art of pleasing in conversation, though the graces did not appear in his manner or deportment. He had a turn for pleasantry and humour; and has been compared to Burke for the variety of his allusions and the felicity of his illustrations." See Dr. Chas. Coote's Preface to the work on the Constitution, ed. 1807, 8vo.

Deloney, Thomas. Declaration made by the Archbp. of Colen upon the Deed of his Marriage, Lon., 1583, 12mo. See Lowndes's Bibl. Man. for other pieces.

Delta. See MOIR, DAVID MACBETH.

Delvin, George. Sermon, Lon., 1795, 8vo.

Deman, E. F. Flax, its Cultivation and Management, 1851.

"This essay is not inferior to the many treatises on Flax."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Demarville. Y. Ladies' Geography, 1758, 2 vols.

Demetrius, Charles. News from Gulick and Cleve, Lon., 1615, 4to.

Democritus Secundus, a fictitious name. The Fellow Traveller, through City and Countrey; Book of Stories, Lon., 1658, 12mo.

Demoivre, Abraham, 1667–1757, a native of Champagne, spent most of his life in England, where he died in the above year. Miscellanea Analytica, &c., Lon., 1730, 4to. Doctrine of Chances, or a Method of calculating the Probabilities of Events in Play, 1718, 4to; best ed., 1756, 4to. Annuities on Lives, 1724, '50, '52, 8vo. He contributed a number of papers to Phil. Trans.

De Morgan, Augustus, b. 1806, in the island of Modma, coast of Java; Prof. of Mathemat. in University College, London. His father was an officer in the British Army. Has pub. a number of valuable works on Algebra, Arithmetic, Trigonometry, Logic, &c. In 1847 he gave to the world a volume exhibiting much research, entitled Arithmetical Books from the Invention of Printing to the Present Time. Every teacher and student of Mathematics—and of course every bibliographer—should possess this volume. See Knight's Eng. Cyc.

Dempsey, G. Drysdale. 1. Papers on Railways, Lon., 1845, 4to. 2. Practical Railway Engineering; 4th ed., 1855, 4to. 3. Brick Bridges, Sewers, and Culverts, 1850, 4to. 4. Examples of Iron Roofs, 1850, 4to. 5. Iron applied to Railway Structure, 1850, 4to. 6. Malleable Iron Bridges, 1850, 4to. 7. The Builder's Guide in Materials and Construction; 2d ed., 1857, 4to. 8. Machinery of the Nineteenth Century, 1852, &c., 4to. 9. Railway Stations, Engine-Houses, &c., with folio plates, 1856. 10. Ten Bridges, with details, 1856, 4to. 11. Working-Drawings of Stations, &c., 1856, 4to. Other works.

Dempster, George, 1736–1818, a native of and M.P. for Dundee, Scotland. Discourse containing a Summary of the Directors of the Society for Extending the Fisheries of Great Britain, 1789. Magnetic Mountains of Cannay, 8vo. Letters in Agricult. Mag. Papers and Speeches.

Dempster, Thomas, 1579–1625, a native of Scotland, studied at Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, and at Paris, and became distinguished for his erudition. He was professor successively at Paris, Pisa, and Bologna, and died in the last-named city. He pub. several works, a list of which will be found in Watt's Bibl. Brit. His best-known production is Historia Ecclesiastica Gentis Scotorum, Bonon., 1627, 4to. Reprinted for the Bannatyne Club, 1829, 2 vols. 4to. This work is not at all to be relied on.

"Tho. Dempster, though he was no Jesuit, stands fair for the remaining part of his character that he 'was as well inclined to believe a lie as any man in his time'; and was as well qualified to put it into a pretty dress of poetry."—Bishop Nicolson's Scot. Hist. Lib., 58; and the Bishop of St. Asaph's Hist. Account, p. 153.

"He shamefully published I know not how many fables."—BAYLE.

"He would have wished that all learned men had been Scots. He forged titles of books which were never published, to raise the glory of his native country, and has been guilty of several cheating tricks, by which he has lost his credit among men of learning."—M. BAILLET.

See Mackenzie's Lives; McCrie's Melville; Chambers's Scot. Biog.

Dendy, Edw. Petition to Parl., Lon., 1654, fol.

Dendy, Walter Cooper. Book of the Nursery, Lon., 12mo. Diseases of the Skin in Children, 8vo. Diseases of the Scalp, 1849, r. 4to. Phenomena of Dreams and Illusions, 12mo. Philosophy of Mystery, 1841, 8vo.

"It reminds in every page of the erudite Burton, whose Anatomy of Melancholy drives away the vapours from the most confirmed hypochondriac."—Dr. Johnson's Journal.

Varieties of Pock delineated and described, 1853, p. 8vo. Discourse on the Birth and Pilgrimage of Thought, 1853, square. The Beautiful Islets of Britaine, 1857, p. 8vo.

Dene, Willemus de. Historia Rossensis, 1814–50, successione Episcoporum et priorum, &c. Vide Wharton Anglia Sacra, i. 327.

Denham. Miners' Charters, Lon., 1657, 4to.

Denham, Captain. See GULLY, ROBERT.

Denham, Dixon, Col. R.N. and Governor of Sierra Leone, an enterprising traveller, 1786–1828. Narrative of Travels and Discoveries in Northern and Central Africa, 1822–24, by Denham, Clapperton, and Oudney, Lon., 1826, 4to; 2d ed., 1828, 2 vols. 8vo. He who desires to become acquainted with Africa and the Africans must not neglect this invaluable work. See CLAPPERTON, HUGH; LANDE, RICHARD.

Denham, Rev. J. F. Marriage with a deceased Wife's Sister defended, Lon., 1847, 8vo. Spelling and Reading Book; 3d ed., Parts 1 to 3, 1848, 12mo. Other works.

Denham, Sir James Stuart. See STEUART.

Denham, Sir John, 1615–1668, a native of Dublin, was the only son of Sir John Denham, Baron of the Exchequer. In 1631 he was entered of Trin. Coll., Oxford.

"But being looked upon as a slow and dreaming young man by his seniors and contemporaries, and giving more to cards and dice than his study, they could never then in the least imagine that he could ever enrich the world with his fancy, or issue of his brain, as he afterwards did."—WOOD.

This habit of gaming clung to him in after life, to his great loss and disgrace. He was made Governor of Farnham Castle by Charles I.; his fortunes were depressed during the Commonwealth, revived in the Restoration. In 1641 he pub. his Tragedy of the Sophy, which elicited the enthusiastic commendation of Waller, who remarks of the author, that "He broke out like the Irish Rebellion, threescore thousand strong, when nobody was aware, or in the least suspected it."

In 1643 appeared his poem of Cooper's Hill, which established his reputation as an author. He wrote a number of other pieces—The Destruction of Troy, Cato Major, &c.—translated portions of Virgil, and imitated Tully. The 6th ed. of his collected works, entitled Poems and Translations, with the Sophy, a Tragedy, was pub. in 1719, 12mo. The reputation of Denham is not so high as it was formerly, but few poets have been more warmly commended by several rigid critics. The approbation of Waller, Prior, Dryden, Warton, and Johnson, is no slight guarantee of merit.

"'Cooper's Hill,' says Dryden, 'for majesty of style, is, and ever will be, the standard of good writings;' and Pope eulogizes it highly in his Windsor Forest."

"Denham is deservedly considered as one of the fathers of English poetry. Denham and Waller, according to Prior, improved our versification, and Dryden perfected it."—Dr. Johnson's Lives of the English Poets.

Denham, John E. Sermons, Lon., 1821, 8vo.

Denham, Joseph. Serms., 1741, 8vo.

Denham, N. Trans. of the Way of Lyfe, &c., 1578, 4to.

Denham, Wm. Serms., 1742, '43, '45.

Denholm, James. History of Glasg., 1797, 12mo. Many eds. Tour to the Lakes, 1804, sm. 8vo.

Denio, Hiram, born 1799, at Rome, N. Y., a resident of Utica, N. Y., Judge of the Court of Appeals. Reports of Cases argued and determined in the Supreme Court, and in the Court for the Correction of Error of the State of New York, 1845–48, 5 vols. Revised Statutes of the State of N. Y., 4th ed., 1852, 2 vols., prepared by Hiram Denio and William Tracy.

Denison, Charles Wheeler, b. in Conn., 1809. American Village and other poems. Contrib. to the Knickerbocker and various other magazines and journals.

Denison, Daniel, 1613–1682. Irenicon, or a Salve for New England's Sore. This is annexed to Hubbard's Funl. Sermon.

Denison, Edward, D.D. Bishop of Salisbury, 1837.

Serms. Charges, &c., 1836-44. Serms. before the Univ. of Oxf., 1836, 8vo.

"A volume of sermons worthy of the perusal of all sound churchmen."—Church of Eng. Quar. Rev.

Denison, Edward B. Marriage with a Wife's Sister, Lon., 1861, 8vo. Bp. of Exeter's Speech on the Marriage Bill, 3d ed., 1851, p. 8vo.

Denison, George Anthony. Sermon, Lon., 1850, 8vo.

Denison, John, d. at Reading, 1628-29. Serms. and treatises, 1616-24.

Denison, Mary Andrews, b. in Cambridge, Mass., 1826. Author of Home Pictures, N. York, 12mo. What Not? Phila., 12mo. Carrie Hamilton, Phila., 12mo. Gracie Amber, N. York, 12mo. Old Hepty: a Tale of the South, N. York, 1858, 12mo. Has contributed extensively to many of the leading journals of the Union.

Denison, Stephen. Serms., Lon., 1620-27. The White Wolfe, 1627, 4to. At p. 88 will be found a catalogue of 88 Sects and Heresies which sprang up in the primitive Church. John Hetherington was principally aimed at in this discourse. He was obliged to recant his "fanatical doctrines" before the king.

"The book comprehends a strange mixture of learning and extravagant reasoning, and is altogether a singular curiosity."—Baker's Anecdotes of Scarce Books.

Denman, Jacob S., b. 1814, in New Jersey. Stories for Children, 16mo. Compiler of a series of Reading Books, in 8 parts.

Denman, Joseph, M.D. Buxton Water, 1793, 8vo.

Denman, Thomas, M.D., a native of Derbyshire, practised in the Royal Navy, and subsequently in London. He pub. several works upon obstetrics, &c., the best-known of which is Introduct. to Theory and Prac. of Midwifery, 6th ed., 1824, 8vo.

Denmark, Alex., M.D. Med. Chir. Trans., 1813.

Denne, Henry. Serms., &c., Lon., 1642-60.

Denne, John. Answer to Bunyan, 1673, 8vo.

Denne, John, D.D., 1693-1767, Archdeacon of Rochester, and Rector of Lambeth. Serms., &c., 1720-77. Articles of Inquiry for a Par. Visitation, 1732, 4to. Dr. D. was a learned antiquary, and contributed to Lewis's Life of Wicliffe.

Denne, John. Sermon, 1753, 4to.

Denne, Samuel, 1730-1799, Vicar of Darent, and son of the Archdeacon of Rochester. Hist. and Antiq. of Rochester, 1772. Palace of Mayfield, 1787, 4to. Hist. Partic. of Lambeth Parish and Palace, 1795, 4to. This forms part of vol. I. of the Supp. to Nichols's Bib. Top. Brit., and is perhaps the scarcest of the whole series. Dr. D. pub. many antiquarian papers in Archæol., 1787-1800.

Denneston, E. Revenue of Excise, 1707, 4to.

Dennie, Joseph, 1768-1812, a native of Boston, graduated at Harvard University in 1790. Adopting the profession of the law, he opened an office at Walpole, New Hampshire, but found little encouragement, and determined to devote himself to literary pursuits. In 1795 he pub. in Boston, The Tatler, a weekly paper, and issued at Walpole, The Farmer's Museum. In this periodical appeared the essays by which he is best known, entitled The Lay Preacher. In 1799 Mr. Pickering, Secretary of State, proffered him a clerkship, and he removed to Philadelphia, where in 1801 he established The Port Folio, which he conducted until his death in 1812. He enjoyed great reputation as a writer during his life, and for some years after his decease. Patriarchs of the "lean and slippered pantaloon"—who perhaps composed a part of the "mob of gentlemen who wrote with ease" about the beginning of this century—still extol the melodious cadence and liquid flow of the essays of the American Addison. We ourselves are so old-fashioned as to consider Dennie a charming writer.

"The Lay Preacher of Dennie, and his articles in the Portfolio, seem to me feeble and affected, though occasionally marked by considerable excellence. It was natural to overrate him, as in his time we had very few writers with whom he could be compared. For several years after the death of Brockden Brown, I believe he was the only man in the country who made literature a profession. . . . He was a great favourite in society, and his brilliant social qualities gave him a fictitious reputation as a man of letters. There is nothing in his writings deserving of reputation."—Criswell's Prose Writers of America.

Dennie, Lt. Col. Wm. H., R.A., d. 1842, a distinguished officer, mortally wounded at the siege of Jellalabad. Personal Narrative of the Campaigns in Afghanistan, Lon., 1843, 12mo.

Dennis, C. and R. Lloyd. A trans. of the Contes Moraux of Marmontel, under the title of Moral Tales, Lon., 1781, 3 vols. 8vo; Perth, 1792, 4 vols. 12mo.

Dennis, George. The Cid; a short Chronicle, founded on the early poetry of Spain, Lon., 1845, 18mo. The Cities and Cemeteries of Etruria, 1848, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Cet ouvrage ne s'adresse pas seulement aux amateurs d'antiquités. A côté des recherches savantes dirigées par un esprit d'observation très éminent, il offre cet intérêt poétique presque toujours inséparable du récit d'un voyageur enthousiaste, qui sait en quelque sorte nous transporter au milieu de la contrée qu'il décrit, et nous faire partager toutes ses impressions. C'est à la fois un travail historique de grande valeur, et un guide précieux pour les personnes qui veulent visiter l'Italie avec fruit."—Bibliothèque Univ. de Genève.

"These volumes are a valuable storehouse of classical and antiquarian lore to every scholar; and the most general reader must be attracted by their pleasant, though somewhat discursive, style."—Edin. Rev.

See GRAY, MRS. HAMILTON.

Dennis, Jonas. Sermons, Exeter, 1800, 8vo.

Dennis, John, 1657-1734, a native of London, was educated at Caius College, and Trinity Hall, Cambridge. He obtained considerable notoriety as a dramatic and political writer and critic. Plays, Lon., 1697-1720. They consist of—A Plot and No Plot; Rinaldo and Armida; Iphigenia; Liberty Asserted; Orpheus and Euridice, a Masque; Appius and Virginia; The Comical Gallant, (an alteration of Shakspeare's Merry Wives of Windsor;) The Invader of his Country, (an alteration of Coriolanus;) Letters, 1718, 2 vols. 8vo. Select Works, consisting of Plays, Poems, &c., 1718, 2 vols. 8vo. Dennis was no gentle critic; he handled Addison's Cato without mercy, and his reflections upon Pope's Essay on Criticism secured him a place in the Dunciad. Dr. Johnson regretted that Dennis's works had not been collected. See his criticism on Cato, in Johnson's Lives of the British Poets, a life of Dennis in the Biog. Brit., and a sketch of his character in Disraeli's Calamities of Authors.

"Dennis attained to the ambiguous honour of being distinguished as 'The Critic,' and he may yet instruct us how the moral influences the literary character, and how a certain talent that can never mature itself into genius, like the pale fruit that hangs in the shade, ripens only into sourness."—Disraeli, ibid. supra.

Dennis, Samuel. Sermons, 1736, 4to.

Dennis, T. or J. Way of Curing Diseases, 1668.

Dennis, Rev. Thos. Psalms in Blank Verse, 1807.

Dennison, J. Legends of Galloway, 1825.

Dennison, Wm. Religious Doctrine, 1805.

Dennistone, Walter. Psalmi civ., Edin., 1696.

Dennistoun, George. Med. Con. Ess. Phys., 1784.

Denny, E. Theolog. treatises, Lon., 1849.

Denny, Sir E. Hymns and Poems, Lon., 12mo.

Denny, Henry. Monographia Pselaphidiorum et Seydmenidarum Britanniae, Norwich, 1825, 8vo. Monographia Anoplurorum Britanniae, Lon., 1842, 8vo.

"Do not depreciate any pursuit which leads men to contemplate the works of their Creator."—Sourin.

Denny, John. Diseases of Horses, Lon., 1802, 8vo.

Denny, Sir Wm. Pelecanicidium, or the Christian Adviser against Self-Murder, Lon., 1653, 8vo. In verse and prose, with plates by Barlow. Bindley sale, pt. 1, 1769, £13.

Densell. See HOLLIS, LORD.

Denston, B. L. The Atmosphere, Lon., 1806.

Dent, Arthur, minister of South Souberry, a Puritan. A Plaine Man's Pathway to Heaven, Lon., 1622.

"A practical treatise."—Bickerdeth's Christian Student.

Other theolog. treatises and sermons, 1582-1617.

Dent, Edward. Sermon, Lon., 1692, 4to.

Dent, Giles. Sermons, Lon., 1707-13.

Dent, John. The Lawyer's Panic, or, Westminster Hall in an Up roar, 1785, 8vo. Force of Love; a Novel, 1786, 2 vols. 12mo. The Candidate; a Farce, 1782, 8vo. Too Civil by Half; a Farce, 1783, 8vo. The Telegraph, 1795, 8vo.

Dent, John. A Catalogue of the Library of, Lon., 1825. 20 copies privately printed. Dent sale, 2 at £10 10s.; 4 at £12; 1 at £12 2s. 6d.

Denton, Daniel. A Brief Description of New York, with the Customs of the Indians, Lon., 1670, 4to. Very rare. Reprinted, (100 copies 4to.) New York, 1845, with Notes by Hon. Gabriel Furman.

This is supposed to be the first printed description in English of New York and New Jersey, then under one government. We know of but three copies of the original in the United States: one in the N. York State Library at Albany, one in the Library of Harvard University, and the one from which Mr. Furman printed his edition. A copy was sold at the Nassau sale for 18s.; in New York, recently, for $31!

Denton, J. Bailey. Model Mapping for Drainage and Irrigation, Lon., 2d ed., 1842, 8vo.

"We hope it will be generally taken up, and become a Parliamentary subject."—Lon. Surveyor's Journal.

Other works on Draining, 1849, '52.

Denton, John, 1625-1708, Prebendary of York, pub. some sermons and theolog. treatises.

Denton, Thomas, 1724-1777, Rector of Ashted, Surrey. Religious Retirement; from Gother. Immortality, 1755, 4to. The House of Superstition, 1762, 4to. The two preceding are poems, and are thought to be good imitations of Spenser. 8erm., 1775, 8vo. He compiled the supplemental vol. to the 1st ed. of the Biographical Dictionary.

Denton, Wm., M.D., 1665-1691, physician to Charles I. and Charles II. Horæ Subseque: rel. to Laws against Papists, Lon., 1664, 4to; another treatise, 1675, 4to. Jus Cæsaris et Ecclesiæ vere dictæ, (Anglice,) 1681, fol.

Denzil. See HOLLES, LORD.

Depalaine. Repository of the Lives and Portraits of Distinguished American Characters, Phila., vols. I. and II., Pt. 1; 18 portraits.

Depping, J. B. Evening Entertainments; or, Delinations of Manners and Customs, Lon., 1811, 2 vols. 12mo. Commended by Lon. Month. Rev. and Lon. Eccl. Rev.

De Puy, Henry W. 1. Kosuth and His Generals, Buffalo, 12mo. 2. Louis Napoleon and his Times, 1853, 12mo. 3. Ethan Allen and the Green Mountain Heroes of '76, 1853, 12mo.

De Quincey, Thomas, b. 1786, the son of an English merchant, is a native of Manchester, and was educated at Eton and Oxford. For the history of his early years we must refer the reader to the glowing pages of the Confessions of an English Opium-Eater. This famous autobiography was originally pub. in the Old London Magazine in 1821, and appeared in a vol. in 1822. The reader will also find much of interest in the Autobiographic Sketches, pub. by Mr. De Quincey, 1853, &c., and in a Memoir of his Life, Bost., 1855, by Dr. R. Shelton Mackenzie. The author has made some excellent translations from Jean Paul Richter and Lessing, which appeared in the London Magazine and Blackwood, and contributed many articles, on biography, metaphysics, and philosophy, to the periodicals of the day. Among his best-known articles are the lives of Shakspeare and Pope in the Encyclopædia Britannica; a paper on the Knocking at the Gate, in Macbeth; the Vision of Sudden Death; and Murder Considered as One of the Fine Arts. But we shall confer no small favour on the reader by a catalogue of the contents of an edition (the only complete one pub. in Great Britain or America) of the writings of this popular author, collected and edited by Mr. J. T. Fields and issued by the enterprising house of Ticknor & Fields, Boston, United States: Vol. I. Confessions of an English Opium-Eater: 1. The Confessions; 2. Suspiria de Profundis. II. Biographical Essays: 1. Shakspeare; 2. Pope; 3. Lamb; 4. Goethe; 5. Schiller. III. Miscellaneous Essays: 1. On the Knocking at the Gate, in Macbeth; 2. Murder Considered as One of the Fine Arts; 3. Second Paper on Murder; 4. Joan of Arc; 5. The English Mail-Coach; 6. The Vision of Sudden Death; 7. Dinner, Real and Reputed; 8. Orthographic Mutineers; 9. Sortilege on Behalf of the Glasgow Athenæum. IV. The Cæsars. V. Life and Manners: 1. Early Days; 2. London; 3. Ireland; 4. The Irish Rebellion; 5. Premature Manhood; 6. Travelling; 7. My Brother; 8. Oxford; 9. German Literature. VI. and VII. Literary Reminiscences: 1. Literary Novitiate; 2. Sir Humphry Davy; 3. William Godwin; 4. Mrs. Grant; 5. Recollections of Charles Lamb; 6. Walladmor; 7. Coleridge; 8. Wordsworth; 9. Southey; 10. Recollections of Grasmere; 11. The Saracen's Head; 12. Society of the Lakes; 13. Charles Lloyd; 14. Walking Stewart; 15. Edward Irving; 16. Talfourd; 17. The London Magazine; 18. Junius; 19. Clare; 20. Cunningham; 21. Attack by a London Journal; 22. Duelling. VIII. and IX. Narrative and Miscellaneous Papers: 1. The Household Wreck; 2. The Spanish Nun; 3. Flight of a Tartar Tribe; 4. System of the Heavens as Revealed by the Telescope; 5. Modern Superstition; 6. Coleridge and Opium-Eating; 7. Temperance Movement; 8. On War; 9. The Last Days of Immanuel Kant. X. Essays on the Poets and other English Writers: 1. The Poetry of Wordsworth; 2. Percy Bysshe Shelley; 3. John Keats; 4. Oliver Goldsmith; 5. Alexander Pope; 6. William Godwin; 7. John Foster; 8. William Hazlitt; 9. Walter Savage Landor. XI. and XII. Historical and Critical Essays: 1. Philosophy of Roman History; 2. The Essenes; 3. Philosophy of Herodotus; 4. Plato's Republic; 5. Homer and the Homerids; 6. Cicero; 7. Style; 8. Rhetoric. XIII. and XIV. Essays on Philosophical Writers and other Men of Letters: 1. Sir William Hamilton; 2. Sir James Mackintosh; 3. Kant in his Miscellaneous Essays; 4. Herder; 5. John Paul Frederick Richter; 6. Analects from Richter; 7. Lessing; 8. Bentley; 9. Parr. XV. Letters to a Young Man whose Education has been Neglected, and other Papers. XVI. and XVII. Theological Essays, and other Papers. XVIII. The Note-Book of an English Opium-Eater. XIX. and XX. Memorials, and other Papers.

A selection from his writings is now in course of publication at London and Edinburgh. Vols. vii. and viii. were pub. in May, 1858; vol. viii., (Edin. ed.,) Essays, Sceptical and Anti-Sceptical; or, Problems Neglected or Misconceived, 1858, cr. 8vo.

So far as this edition has proceeded, it will be seen that Mr. De Quincey has simply republished (with elucidatory notes) from the American edition. It is but proper to quote the following lines from a late biographical sketch of the author:

"In the Preface to this edition Mr. De Quincey makes a classification of his writings which it is useful to remember. The immense medley, which, in the American edition, is arranged on the loosest possible principle, may be distributed, he says, in the main, into three classes of papers: first, papers whose chief purpose is to interest and amuse, (autobiographic sketches, reminiscences of distinguished contemporaries, biographical memoirs, whimsical narratives, and such like;) secondly, essays of a speculative, critical, or philosophical character, addressing the understanding as an insulated faculty, (of these there are many;) and, thirdly, papers belonging to the order of what may be called 'prose-poetry': that is, fantasies or imaginations in prose, (of which class Mr. De Quincey cites the 'Suspiria de Profundis,' originally published in Blackwood, as the most characteristic specimen.) Under any one of the three aspects here indicated, Mr. De Quincey must rank high in the entire list of British prose-writers."—Knight's English Cyc., vol. ii. 568.

"It is astonishing how much more Boston [J. T. Fields] knows of my literary acts and purposes than I do myself. Were it not indeed through Boston, hardly the sixth part of my literary undertakings—hurried or deliberate, sound, rotting, or rotten—would ever have reached posterity: which, be it known to thee, most sarcastic of future cohorts, already most of them have reached."—Profr.

It is worthy of note that the occasional essays of a number of distinguished British authors have been first collected in America. We may instance Macaulay, Wilson, Carlyle, De Quincey, Talfourd, &c. In a review of De Quincey's writings pub. in the London Eclectic Review in 1851, it was stated that it was not probable that a collective edition of his works would ever appear; the author, in consequence of ill health, being disinclined to accede to the request of several publishers that he would prepare such a collection for publication. But, not discouraged by this unpromising announcement, Mr. Fields determined to collect his writings, and his firm (Ticknor & Fields) offered the author a share of the profits of the series. Mr. De Quincey could not withstand an enthusiasm so creditable to the projectors: he gave his aid to the enterprise, and the twenty volumes enumerated above are the result. Publishers of this stamp are an honour to an honourable profession.

As a political economist, Mr. De Quincey has gained as much credit as he has secured by his philosophical, biographical, and critical disquisitions. The Dialogues of Three Templars on Political Economy, chiefly in relation to the Principles (respecting value) of Mr. Ricardo, which appeared in the London Magazine for April and May, 1824, are thus commended by an eminent authority:

"They are unequalled, perhaps, for brevity, pungency, and force. They not only bring the Ricardian theory of value into strong relief, but triumphantly repel, or rather annihilate, the objections urged against it by Malthus in the pamphlet now referred to [The Measure of Value Stated and Illustrated] and his Political Economy, and by Say and others. They may, indeed, be said to have exhausted the subject."—McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Economy, p. 33.

The same critic thus comments upon De Quincey's Logic of Political Economy, (Lon. and Edin., 1844, 8vo.):

"This very clever work is intended to unravel intricacies and to expose sundry errors in the application of the Ricardian theory of value. It would, however, have been more popular and successful had it been less scholastic. It is right to be logical, but not to be perpetually obtruding logical forms and technicalities on the reader's attention. This sort of affectation is little noticed in a brief essay like the Templars' Dialogues; but in a goodly-sized volume like the present it becomes tiresome and repulsive."—Ubi supra, 20.

The general style of the Confessions is thus well described by an English critic:

"They have an air of reality and life; and they exhibit such strong graphic powers as to throw an interest and even a dignity round a subject which in less able hands might have been rendered a tissue of trifles and absurdities. They are, indeed, very picturesque and vivid sketches of individual character and feelings, drawn with a boldness yet an exactness of pencil that is to be found only in one or two prominent geniuses of our day. . . . They combine strong sense with wild and somewhat fantastic inventions, accuracy of detail with poetic illustration, and analytical reasoning and metaphysical research with uncommon pathos and refinement of ideas. . . . Much truth and fine coloring are displayed in the descriptions and details of the work: its qualities are all of a rich and elevated kind,—such as high pathos, profound views, and deep reasoning, with a happy vein of ridicule indulged at the writer's own expense."—Lon. Month. Rev., c. 238.

Mr. Gillilan, commenting upon the charge that this celebrated work owed its strength to the inspiration of Opium, replies, that "it is not opium in De Quincey, but De Quincey in opium" that wrote the Suspiria and the Confessions.

It is to be regretted that the eloquent author has not better learned the Art of Sinking—to the proper level of the everyday topics of literature, biography, or criticism, which he often sees fit to discuss. In these essays we see a striking instance of Cicero's declaration, "Rerum copia verborum copia gignit." With such an affluence of language, therefore, Mr. De Quincey can well afford occasional simplicity when the subject demands it.

Another prominent fault of this very learned critic, is an ostentation of learning, and a thorough contempt, which he is at no pains to conceal, for those whose opinions do not happen to coincide with his own. And yet, no man can build a larger superstructure upon a slender foundation—no man can more sophistically exalt a hypothesis into a fact, and such assumed fact into an infallible canon—than this orthodox stickler for the lex scripta.

Mr. De Quincey's conversation is described as fascinating beyond description. We give a short extract from the letter of a gentleman who visited him in 1854, at Lasswade, near Edinburgh, where he has resided for some years:

"For a half hour at least he talked as we have never heard another talk. We have listened to Sir Wm. Hamilton at his own fireside, to Carlyle walking in the parks of London, to Lamartine in the midst of a favoured few at his own house, to Cousin at the Sorbonne, and to many others, but never have we heard such sweet music of eloquent speech as then flowed from De Quincey's tongue. To attempt reporting what he said would be like attempting to entrup the rays of the sun. Strange light beamed from that grief-worn face, and for a little while that weak body, so long led upon by pain, seemed to be clothed with supernatural youth."

Dequair, Fred. Terra Australis incognita, or a New Southern Discoverie, 1617, 4to.

Derante, P. Med. con. to Phil. Trans., 1732.

Derby, Charles Stanley, Earl of, Lord of Man and the Isles. The Protestant Religion is a sure Foundation of a true Christian and a good Subject, a great Friend to human Society, and a grand Promoter of all Virtues, both Christian and moral, Lon., 4to, 1669, anon.; 1671, with author's name.

"His father lost his head, and he his liberty, for Charles the Second. The grateful king rewarded the son with the lord-lieutenancies of two counties."—Walpole's R. & N. Authors.

Derby, Ferdinando Stanley, 5th Earl of, was the author of a pastoral poem, communicated to the Antiquarian Repertory by Sir John Hawkins. It will be found in Park's Walpole's R. & N. Authors.

"One of our early bards, and not an unpromising one."—HORACE WALPOLE.

Derby, James Stanley, 7th Earl of, nephew of the preceding, beheaded 1651, was distinguished for his bravery in defence of Charles I. His widow, also, defended the Isle of Man against the republicans. Hist. and Antiq. of the Isle of Man. Pub. in Peck's Desiderata, vol. ii. 1732. Declaration, 1649, 4to. Message to Chas. II., 1649, 4to. Charge, 1651, 4to. Trial, 1651, 4to. Speech on the Scaffold, 1651, 4to.

"Among the sufferers for King Charles the First, none cast greater lustre on the cause than this heroic lord."—HORACE WALPOLE.

Derby, John. Comment on the four Evangel. and the Acts, with other theolog. pieces, by Zachary Pearce, D.D., Lon., 1777, 2 vols. 4to. Serms. by Z. Pearce, D.D., 1778, 4 vols. 8vo.

Derby, Richard. Sermon, 1718, 8vo.

Derney, Thos., R.N. Naval Poems, 1813, 4to.

Derham, Robt. Independence in Ch. Gov't destructive to English Law, Lon., 1646, 4to. Rights of Parliament, 1647, 8vo.

Derham, Saml. Imington Waters, with directions for drinking the same, Oxf., 1685.

Derham, Wm., 1657-1735, entered Trinity Coll., Oxf., 1675; Canon of Windsor, 1716. Physico-Theology, Lon., 1713, 8vo; many edit., 1798, 2 vols. 8vo. Astro-Theology, 1714, 8vo; 3d ed., 1719. These works have been greatly commended, and trans. into several languages. Christo-Theology, 1736, 8vo. Miscellanea Curiosa; being travels, voyages, &c. delivered in to the Royal Society, 1720, '26, '27, 3 vols. 8vo. See Rich's Amer. Bibl. Nova. This learned philosopher and divine pub. some other works, and many papers in Phil. Trans. See Watt's Bibl. Brit.

"Few men have had more accurate and extensive acquaintance with nature, in its grandest and minutest features, than Dr. Derham. He was equally at home when travelling among the stars, and when sojourning among the insects that sit in the breeze. . . In all the operations of nature he delighted to trace the hand of nature's God."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"What hath been communicated by our ingenious Derham will nobly serve religion as well as philosophy."—COTTON MATHER.

Dering, Edward. See DEERING.

Dering, Sir Edward. See DEARING.

Derkar, Thomas. See DROKER.

Dermody, Thomas, 1775-1802, a native of Ennis, in Ireland, displayed poetical powers at a very early age. In 1792 he pub. a vol. of poems written in his thirteenth year. In 1793 appeared The Rights of Justice, a polit. pamphlet. Poems, 1801, 2 vols. Peace; a Poem, 1801, 4to. Poems, 1802, 8vo. The Battle of the Bards; a Poem. He became a soldier, but disgraced himself by intemperance and died in poverty at Sydenham. In 1806 Mr. Jas. G. Raymond pub. his Life, &c., in 2 vols. cr. 8vo, and his poetical works, under the title of The Harp of Erin, in 1807, 2 vols. 8vo.

Dermott, L. Free Masonry, Lon., 1801, 8vo.

Derodon, David. Funeral of the Mass, 1673.

Derok, M. Method of Copying, 1796.

De Roos, F. F. Travels in the United States and Canada in 1826, Lon., 8vo.

De Ros, Lord, Colonel R. Army. 1. The Young Officer's Companion, Lon., 1851, 12mo; 2d ed., 1852, 12mo. 2. Journal of a Tour in the Crimea in 1855-56, 1855, p. 8vo.

De Ros, W. F. Yeomanry Regulations, Lon., 8vo.

Derrick, Chas. The British Navy, 1806, 4to.

Derrick, Samuel, 1721-1769, a native of Ireland, made some trans. from the Latin and French; edited Dryden's works, 1762, 4 vols. 8vo; pub. The Battle of Lora, a Poem; a collection of voyages, 1763, 2 vols. 12mo; and a view of the stage, under the name of Wilkes, 1759. Derrick's Jests were pub. in 1769, 12mo. He is best known by Letters, written from Liverpool, Chester, &c., Dublin, 1767, 2 vols. 12mo.

"If they had been written by one of a more established name, they would have been thought very pretty letters."—DR. SAMUEL JOHNSON.

Derrick, John. The Image of Ireland, Lon., 1581, 4to. Roxburghe, 3324, £9 9s. White Knight's, £13.

Derring, Edward. See DEERING.

Desaguliers, J. H. Jeweller's Accounts, 1734.

Desaguliers, John. Sermon, 1717, 8vo.

Desaussure, Judge H. W., of S. Carolina, 1775-1839. Reports Ct. Chan. and Ct. of H. in Equity, in S. Car. from the Rev. to 1813. Columbia, 1817-19, 4 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., revised and corrected by a member of the Philadelphia Bar, 4 vols. in 2, 8vo, Phila.

Deschery, David, M.D. The Stone, Lon., 1753, 8vo. Fevers, 1760, 8vo. Small-Pox, 1760, 8vo. Gout, 1760, 8vo.

Des Barres. Cape Breton, Lon., 1804, 8vo.

"Privately printed, and suppressed."

See Colonel Aspinwall's Cat., p. 55.

Des Barres, J. F. W. The Atlantic Neptune; pub. for the use of the Royal Navy of Great Britain, Lon., 1777, 2 vols. atlas fol.

"The most splendid collection of charts, plans, and views, ever published. It was executed at the expense of the British Government for the use of the British navy, and no expense appears to have been spared in the execution in order to render it a monument worthy of the nation."—Rich's Bibl. Amer. Nova, q. v. for collation.

Des Ecotais, Lewis. Memoirs, 1677, 8vo.

Deshler, C. D. Selections from the Poetical Works of Chaucer, N. York, 1847, 12mo.

De Sola, Rev. D. A. L., and Raphall, M. J. The Sacred Scriptures in Hebrew and Greek, Lon., 1844, 1 vol. 8vo: all that has been pub.

Des Maizeaux, Des Maiseaux, or Desmaiseaux, Peter, 1666-1745, a native of Auvergne, lived many years in England, where he died. He wrote the Lives of St. Evremont, Bayle, Boileau, Chillingworth, and John Hales, pub. a Collection of Pieces by Newton, Leibnitz, Clarke, Locke, &c. (Amst., 1720, 2 vols. 12mo,) and engaged in several other literary labours. Bayle's Dictionary, (in English), 2d ed., to which is prefixed a Life of the Author by Des Maizeaux, Lon., 1734-37, 5 vols. fol. This ed. is worth about £5, in good condition. We have already dwelt upon the merits and demerits of Bayle's Dictionary in our article BRACH, THOMAS, q. v.

Desmond, W. Chemical Philos., Lon., 1808.

Desmus, R. Merlinus Anonymus, an Ephemeris for the year 1653; ditto for 1655, Lon., 1654, 5vo, 8vo.

Despaunius, M. Neville Family, founded on Facts, 1815, 3 vols.

Dessian, J. On Navigation, 1802, '13.

Desvœux, A. V. A Philos. and Crit. Essay on Ecclesiastes, Lon., 1760, 4to. In German, at Halle, 1764, 4to.

"He deserves well of all the lovers of sacred literature for the pains which he has taken to elucidate one of the darkest parts of Scripture."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"The author has shown very considerable abilities as a critic."—Lon. Monthly Review.

Dethick, Henry. Carmina in Ferias Sacras, Lon., 1577, 4to.

Dethick, Sir Wm., Garter Principal King of Arms. Antiquities of Funeral Ceremonies; of Epitaphs, Mottoes, and the Christian Religion in England. See Hearn's Collections, 1771.

Dethycke. Gardener's Labyrinth, 1586, 4to.

Deuchar, A. British Crests, Edin., 1817, 8vo.

Deusberry, Wm. Theolog. treatises, 1654-56.

Deuwer, Giles. Introduc. to Frenche, Lon., 4to.

Devarius, M. Græcæ Lingua Particulis, 1718.

De Veil, Charles Maria, D.D., a learned converted Jew of Metz, in Lorraine, joined the Ch. of Rome, then the Ch. of England, and finally attached himself to the Baptists, among whom he preached until his death. Explicatio literalis Evang. sec. Matt. et Marcum, Lon., 1672, '78, 8vo; do. Cantici Cantioorum, 1679; do. Minor Proph., 1680, 8vo; do. Eccelesiastes, 1681; do. Auctorum Apostolorum, 1684. An English trans. of this last was pub. 1685, 8vo.

"All his expository works possess considerable value."—Orme's Bibl. Bib., q. v. for particular notices.

Deveil, Sir Thos. Life and Times, 1748, 8vo.

Devenish, Thos. The Duty of Love, and the Evil of Uncharitableness, 1649, 4to.

De Vere, Sir Aubrey. Song of Faith, Devout Exercises, and Sonnets, Lon., 1842.

Dedication.—"To WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, Esq.: My dear sir—To know that you have perused many of the following Poems with pleasure, and did not hesitate to regard them with your praise, has been to me cause of unmingled happiness. In accepting the Dedication of this Volume, you permit me to link my name—which I have hitherto done so little to illustrate—with yours, the noblest of modern literature. I may at least hope to be named hereafter as one among the friends of WORDSWORTH. As such, I trust you will ever regard your faithful
"CURRA CHASE, May 20, 1842."

Waldenses, 1842. The Search after Proserpine, and other Poems, 1843. Mary Tudor; a Drama, with Poems, 1847. English Misrule and Irish Misdeeds, 1848. Sketches of Greece and Turkey, 1850.

De Vere, Maximilian Schele, b. 1820, near Wexio, in Sweden; Member of the Oriental Society; a resident of the U.S. 1. Outlines of Comparative Philology, N. York, 12mo. 2. Grammar of the Spanish Language, N.Y., 12mo. 3. Stray Leaves from the Book of Nature, N.Y., 1850, 12mo. Contrib. to Putnam's Monthly, South. Lit. Mess., &c.

Deverell. Surgical con. to Phil. Trans., 1720.

Deverell, Mary. Serms., 1777, 8vo. Miscellanies, 1781, 2 vols. 12mo. Heroic Poem, 1786, 8vo. Queen of Scots; a Tragic, 1792, 8vo.

Deverell, Robt. Antiquarian works, Lon., 1802, '06. Discoveries in Hieroglyphics and other Antiquities, 1813, 6 vols. 8vo. Withdrawn after the sale of a few copies only. Fever, 4to.

Devereux. Views on the Mediterranean, 1847, imp. fol.

Devereux, Hon. Capt., R.N. Lives of the Earls of Essex, 1540-1646, Lon., 1852, 2 vols. 8vo.

Devereux, J. E. Factions in Ireland, 1808.

Devereux, Robert, second Earl of Essex, 1567-1601, the unfortunate favourite of Queen Elizabeth, is classed by Horace Walpole among the Royal and Noble Authors of England. See a list of his writings in vol. ii. 76, Park's ed. Many of his letters will be found in Birch's Memoirs of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, and in several collections of State Papers. The Verses written in his Trouble will be found in Ellis's Specimens; and the Earle of Essex, his Buzze, a poetical complaint, is in Park's Walpole's R. and N. Authors. Mr. Park is disposed to think that if Warton had read the Buzze, he would have set a higher estimation upon the Earl's claims as a poet:

"A few of his sonnets are in the Ashmolean Museum, which have no marks of poetic genius; but he is a vigorous and elegant writer of prose."—Warton's Hist. of Eng. Poetry.

Horace Walpole considers his long letter to the Queen from Ireland, on the condition of that country, &c., (see the Bacon Papers, vol. ii. 415.)

"Of all his compositions, the most excellent, and in many respects equal to the performances of the greatest geniuses."—R. and N. Authors, Park's ed., ii. 106.

Devereux, Robert, third Earl of Essex, 1592-1646, only son of the preceding, has also some claims as an author. A list of his Letters, Speeches, Proclamations, &c. will be found in Watt's Bibl. Brit., and some in Park's Walpole's R. and N. Authors.

"Essex had ever an honest heart, and though nature had not given him eloquence, he had a strong reason which did express him better."—ARTHUR WILSON: Hist. of King James, p. 162.

"He was in his friendships just and constant, and would not have practised foully against those he took to be his enemies."—LORD CLARENDON: Hist. of the Rebellion.

"He was in no way inclined to the sullen opinion of those men who disdain the muses."—WOOD: Athen. Oxon. See Park's Walpole's R. and N. Authors, iii. 6.

Devereux, Thomas P. Reports Supreme Ct. N. Car., 1826-34, Raleigh, 4 vols. 8vo, 1829-36; in Ct. of Equity, do., 1826-34, 2 vols. 8vo, 1838-40; T. P. D. and W. H. Battle. Reports in Superior Ct. of N. Car., 1834-40, 4 vols. 8vo, 1837-40; Equity Reports, 1834-40, 2 vols. 8vo, 1838-40.

Devereux, Walter, first Earl of Essex, 1540-1576, father of Elizabeth's favourite, was the author of A Godly and Virtuous Song, otherwise called The Complaynte of a Sinner, printed in the Paradise of dainty Devises, 1576. See these verses, collated with the MS. and printed copies, in Park's Walpole's R. and N. Authors, ii. 18.

De Vericour, L. R. Milton and Epic Poetry. Modern French Literature. Educational Reports. Other works. Historical Analysis of Christian Civilization, Lon., 1850, 8vo; 1853.

"The object of this work has been to trace an outline of the History of European Nations, and of Christian Civilization since the Christian Era, and to place the Science of History upon its lofty and real basis, viz.: the doctrine of Progress."

"An immense body of information is comprised in this volume, and this too embracing all the great points in the civil and ecclesiastical history of every country in Europe."

Appended to this vol. is an Historical Library or Catalogue of Historical Works, occupying twenty pages.

Devis, Ellin. Grammar, &c., Lon., 1777, '84.

Devis, James. Serm., 1756.

Devlin, J. Dacres. Helps to Hereford History, Civil and Legendary, 1848, 12mo.

"A little work full of antiquarian information, presented in a pleasing and popular form."—Nomencliformist.

Devonshire, Elizabeth Hervey, Duchess of, 1759-1824, distinguished for beauty, talents, and literary taste, printed an edit. at Rome of the poem of the passage of St. Gothard by Georgiana, the former Duchess of Devonshire, (v. post.) She also pub. beautiful edita. of the 5th satire of Horace, lib. i., and the Æneid of Virgil.

Devonshire, Georgiana, Duchess of, 1757-1846, also distinguished for her beauty and accomplishments, wrote The Passage of Mount St. Gothard, a Poem, pub. together with an Italian trans. by Sig. Polidori, Lon., 1802, fol. Another ed. in English and French by the Abbé de Lille, 1802, 8vo. An edit. was also pub. at Rome, v. ante.

Dew, Samuel. Serm., 1735, 8vo.

Dew, Thomas, late Pres. of the Coll. of William and Mary. A Digest of the Laws, Customs, Manners, and Institutions of the Ancient and Modern Nations, N.Y., 1853, 8vo.

"I greatly prefer it to any history for the use of schools which I have seen."—PROF. J. J. OWAN, N. York Free Academy.

Dew, Thomas R., d. 1846, graduated at William and Mary College, and at the age of 23 occupied the chair of Moral Science in the same institution. 1. Lectures on the Restrictive System, Richmond, 8vo. 2. Lectures on Ancient and Modern History; new ed., N. York, 1853, 8vo. 3. A volume on Slavery, in which he advocates the views held by John C. Calhoun.

Dewar, Daniel, D.D. Observations on the Irish, 1813, 8vo. Discourses illus. of the Designs of Christ'y, 1818, 8vo.

"The style is generally elegant, chaste, and classical."—Lon. Congreg. Mag.

The Church, 1845, 8vo. The Holy Spirit, His Personality and Divinity, Lon., 1847, 8vo.

"We earnestly commend the book to students of divinity."—Lon. Evangel. Mag.

The Nature, Reality, and Efficacy of the Atonement, 12mo.

"A candid, elaborate, and spirited defence of the truth as it is in Jesus."—Lon. Christian Instructor.

Other works.

Dewar, Ed. H. German Protestantism, Oxf., 1844.

Dewar, Henry, M.D. Profess. treatises, &c., 1803-17.

Dewell, T., M.D. Philos. of Physic, 1784, 8vo.

Dewees, William Potts, M.D., 1768-1841, Prof. of Midwifery in the University of Pennsylvania. Inaugural Essays; 2 edita. Medical Essays, Phila., 1823. System of Midwifery, 12th ed., 1854, 8vo, pp. 600.

"It is founded on the French system of Obstetrics, especially on that of Baudelocque. It takes a stand in advance of Denham, Osborne, Burns, and other English authorities in general use in our country at that period, and even of Baudelocque himself, in throwing aside from his excellent system much that was useless, and, it may be said, imaginative."—Memoir by H. L. Hodge, M.D., in Amer. Med. Journal.

A Treatise on the Physical and Medical Treatment of Children, 1825; 10th ed., 1854, 8vo, pp. 548. A Treatise on the Diseases of Females, 1826; 10th ed., 1854, 8vo, pp. 532. On the Practice of Medicine, 1830.

"He chose Baudelocque for his teacher, and often declared that he was indebted to that most distinguished French obstetrician for all that he knew himself of midwifery. The disciple was worthy of his master."—Supra; vide Williams's Med. Biog., 1845, 8vo.

D'Ewes, Sir Symonds, 1602-1650, a native of Coxdon, Dorsetshire, was educated at St. John's Coll., Camb.

At the early age of 18 he commenced collecting materials for a History of England. These were pub. after his death, revised by Paul Bowles, under the title of The Journal of all the Parliaments during the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, 1682, fol., and 1687, '93, and 1708.

"The Journals of the Parliaments, by Sir Symonds D'Ewes, is a work of authority connected with the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The prose is worth reading; it is animating, it is edifying, to see the piety and industry of these venerable men of former times."—Prof. Smyth's Lects. on Mod. Hist. And see Edin. Rev., lxxiv. 76.

Two Speeches: 1. The Antiquity of Cambridge; 2. The Privilege of Parliament, 1641, fol.; 1642. Other Speeches, &c. In 1845 was pub. Sir Symonds D'Ewes's Autobiog. and Corresp., edited by Halliwell, 1845, 2 vols. 8vo. These vols. should accompany the Diaries of Evelyn and Pepys.

Dewey, George W., b. 1818, at Baltimore, is a resident of Philadelphia. He has contributed a number of poems and prose essays to the periodicals of the day. See specimens in Griswold's Poets and Poetry of America.

"Of our younger and minor poets no one has more natural grace and tenderness than George W. Dewey. . . . He has not written much, but whatever he has given to the public is written well, and all his compositions have the sign of a genuineness that never fails to please."—International Magazine, iii. 286, 1861.

Dewey, Orville, D.D., b. 1794, in Sheffield, Berkshire co., Massachusetts, a Unitarian minister. Discourses on Various Subjects, 1835, 3 vols. The Old World and the New; or Journal of a Tour in Europe, 1836, 2 vols. Moral Views of Commerce, Society, and Politics, in 12 Discourses, 1838. Discourses on Human Life, 1841. Discourses and Reviews on Questions relating to Controversial Theology and Practical Religion, 1846. On Human Nature, Human Life, &c., 1847. On the Nature of Religion and on Business, 1847. Works, 1847, 3 vols. Many of Mr. Dewey's works have been repub. in London, 1838–51.

"His reasoning is generally comprehensive, and his illustrations often poetical. There is a happy mixture of ease and finish in his style."—Griswold's Prose Writers of America.

Dewhurst, Rev. Chas. Theolog. treatises, 1813–35.

Dewing, H. C. Mysteries of Paris, r. 8vo.

De Wint, Mrs. J. P. The Journal and Correspondence of Miss Adams, daughter of John Adams, President of the U. States, and wife of Col. Smith, Sec. to the American Legation at London, N. York, 1841–42, 2 vols. Mrs. De Wint was a daughter of Mrs. Adams.

De Witt, Benj., M.D., of N. York, d. 1819, aged 45. Oxygen, 1797. Oration, 1808. Minerals in N. York; pub. in Mem. of A. S., vol. ii.

De Witt, Samson, of Ithaca, N. York, d. 1834, aged 79. On Engineering, &c.

De Witt, Susan, d. 1824. The Pleasures of Religion; a Poem.

"It has been much read and admired."—Allen's Amer. Biog. Dict.

De Wolf, L. E. Constable's Guide, 1845, 12mo.

De Wolf, Wm. P. Rose's Chemical Tables, 1850,

r. 8vo.

Dexter, Samuel, of Boston, 1761–1816, Secretary of War of the U. States. Speeches. Political Papers.

Dey, R. Two Books over Lincoln; or a View of his Holy Table, Name, and Thing.

Diaper, Wm. Dryades; a Poem, and a trans. from Oppian into English Verse, 1713, '22.

Dibben, Thomas. Serms., 1711, '12.

Dibdin, Charles, 1745–1814, an actor and dramatist, is still better known by his famous Sea-Songs, which amount to nearly 1200 in number. A new ed., with a Memoir by T. Dibdin, illustrated by G. Cruikshank, was pub. in 1850, fp. 8vo.

"These Songs have been the solace of sailors in long voyages, in storms, in battles; and they have been quoted in mutinies to the restoration of order and discipline."—Dibdin's Life.

A list of 47 dramatic pieces, and a number of other publications, will be found in Biog. Dramat. He pub. in 1795 a complete History of the English Stage, 5 vols. 8vo. This work is not much valued. See COLLIER, J. P.

Dibdin, Charles, Jr., d. 1833, son of the preceding, also pub. a number of songs and dramatic pieces. See Biog. Dramat.

Dibdin, Thomas, 1771–1841, brother of the preceding, was also a dramatic poet and song-writer. His first piece, The Mad Guardian, was pub. under the assumed name of T. Merchant. See a list of his pieces, 39 in number, in the Biog. Dramat. He is said to have composed more than 1000 songs. In 1813 he pub. The Metrical Hist. of England, 2 vols. 8vo; and in 1828, 2 vols. 8vo, appeared his Reminiscences.

"Dibdin's Reminiscences will be found to contain a larger portion of curious history relating to the intrigues and cabals connected with the internal management of our national theatres than any other work extant."—Lon. M. Chronicle.

Dibdin, Thomas Frognall, D.D., 1775–1847, an eminent English bibliographer, was a nephew of Charles Dibdin, the naval song-writer, and a son of Captain Thomas Dibdin, celebrated by his brother as "Poor Tom Bowling, the darling of our crew."

The subject of our memoir, who was born at Calcutta, lost both of his parents when he was but four years of age, and being sent to England, was placed under the guardianship of his maternal uncle, Mr. William Compton. After passing through his preparatory studies at Reading, Stockwell, and Isleworth, he was matriculated at Oxford as a commoner of St. John's College. Selecting the profession of law, he became a pupil of Mr. Basil Montagu of Lincoln's Inn; but having determined after mature reflection to enter the Church, he was in 1804 ordained by Dr. North, Bishop of Winchester. For biographical details connected with Dr. Dibdin as a clergyman, we must refer the reader to his own Reminiscences, pub. in 1836, 2 vols. 8vo, and to the excellent obituary notice in the Gentleman's Magazine for Jan., 1848, to which sources we shall be indebted for some of the facts which it is our intention to record. Whilst at Oxford he wrote a number of essays, which were pub. in the European Magazine, and some poetical pieces, which were printed in a vol. in 1797, 8vo. The author's estimate of these productions does not seem to have been very high:

"I struck off 500 copies, and was glad to get rid of half of them as waste paper; the remaining half have been partly destroyed by my own hands. . . . My only consolation is that the volume is now EXCEEDINGLY RARE."—Bibliomania, edit. 1809. See Reminiscences, 176.

Whilst at Worcester he wrote some tales, one of which, La Belle Marianne, was privately printed in 1824. For a short time—the journal, indeed, was short-lived—Dibdin contributed to a weekly periodical entitled The Quiz, the articles connected with antiquity and art. While still engaged in legal pursuits, he pub., each on a large sheet, an analysis of Blackstone's Rights of Persons, and the Law of the Poor Rate. In 1802 he edited a Hist. of Cheltenham, and pub. the first edit. of his Introduction to the Greek and Latin Classics; in 1805 trans. Fenelon on the Education of Daughters; and in 1807 contributed to the Weekly Director, of which he also edited the essays entitled Bibliographiana, and the British Gallery. In the same year he edited (under the assumed name of Reginald Wolfe) Quarles's Judgment and Mercy for Afflicted Souls, and in 1808 superintended a new edit. of Sir Thomas More's Utopia. In 1809 Dr. Ferriar addressed to Richard Heber, Esq., the princely book-collector, a poetical epistle entitled The Bibliomania. This suggested to Dr. Dibdin his amusing and instructive volume of the same name. The first edition, printed in 1809, was a small octavo volume of 87 pages. It was reprinted and appended to the 3d edit., pub. in 1842, where it occupies but 64 pages. An enlarged edit. appeared in 1811, 8vo, with the addition of A Bibliographical Romance to the title. It was favourably received, and paid the author a profit of £200. It was pub. at £1 7s.; 19 large-paper copies were struck off in 2 vols. imp. 8vo, at ten guineas each. This edit. was in such demand before the publication of the 3d, that small copies were sold for eight guineas, and large paper for 50 guineas. We quote some opinions upon the merits of this favourite volume:

"It would be mere affectation to say that I have not derived much information from it. . . . Indeed your knowledge of bibliography has excited my surprise."—Dr. FERRIAR.

"Your books are no dead letters—no mere dry transcripts; but while they furnish beautiful ornaments, set the senses all in motion; exhibit a happy talent of reassembling and new-combining your wide-sought and infinite materials. To lead the dance of ideas, to race over such an immeasurable field of literature, can only be given to one of the most elastic and vigorous powers."—Sir S. EGMONT BRIDGES.

"I have not yet recovered from the delightful delirium into which your 'Bibliomania' has completely thrown me. Your book, to my taste, is one of the most extraordinary gratifications I have enjoyed for many years. You have given me down to two hundred pages at a sitting, and I can repeat the pleasure without losing it."—ISAAC DISRAELI.

"You have given us another Morte Encomium, seasoned with a salt which that work has not—with the united flavour of gaiety and good humour. Yet I fear that you, like many other doctors, will only make the disease worse."—FRANCIS DOUCE.

"The Bibliomania being once entered on, compelled me to become a 'borrower of the night for a dark hour or twain' to finish it. I can truly say that I was much amused and interested by it."—E. V. UTTERSON.

"I have been revelling for the last two days in the delights of your new edition of The Bibliomania."—Sir FRANCIS FREELING.

"A thousand thanks, my dear sir, for your lively satire."—WALTER SCOTT.

"To the extensive and amusing information contained in these works, [edits. of 1809 and 1811.] the larger volume especially, the limits of this notice are inadequate to render justice. All Mr. Dibdit's publications are indispensably necessary to the bibliographical student. Happy may be deemed himself who possesses a copy of this work."—Horne's Introduction to Bibliography, p. 521.

To these testimonies of the value of the Bibliomania could be added those of Earl Spencer, the Rt. Hon. Thos. Grenville, Sir M. M. Sykes, the Rev. Henry Drury, and others. Of illustrated copies, one belonging to Mr. Wm. Turner of Islington, was sold to Mr. Town of New York for 60 guineas, and the author remarks:

"I believe I have seen a similar copy on large paper, marked in a bookseller's catalogue at one hundred and twenty guineas."

The third edit. of the Bibliomania was pub. in 1842, r. 8vo, small paper, £3 3s.; large paper, £5 5s. This edit. is much the best, and contains a key to the assumed Characters in the Romances.

It is here proper to notice two privately-printed brochures of Dr. Dibdin; one, entitled Specimen Bibliothecæ Britannicæ, was printed in 1808; the other, Specimen of an English De Bure, in 1810. In 1807-11 he pub. three articles in the Classical Journal on the first Bible and Psalters printed at Ments; and in 1811 he printed privately the Lincolne Nosegay, a selection of poetical pieces.

The next great work of our enterprising bibliographer—The Typographical Antiquities of Great Britain—has already been noticed at length in our article AMES, JOSEPH, to which we refer the reader. The 66 large paper copies, imp. 4to, were pub. at £29 8s.; small paper, £14 14s. About a year after the publication of the 2d edit. of the Bibliomania, at the suggestion of Dr. Dibdin, the famous Roxburghe Club was established. It may be said to have sprung out of the sale of the Roxburghe Library. Earl Spencer was chosen President, and our author Vice-President.

We now come to notice the Bibliotheca Spenceriana, pub. in 4 vols. super-roy. 8vo, in 1814; small paper at £8 8s. and £9 9s., and large paper £18 18s. The germ of this splendid work was a small volume of 34 pp., of which 36 copies were printed, entitled Book Rarities, or a Descriptive Catalogue of some of the most curious, rare, and valuable books of early date, chiefly in the collection of the Rt. Hon. George John, Earl Spencer, K. G. It is devoted, with two exceptions, to the early-printed Dantes and Petrarchas at Spencer House. To the Bibliotheca Spenceriana a supplement was added in 1815, and Ædes Althorpiæ—a description of Spencer House and its treasures—pub. in 1822, may be considered vols. 5th and 6th, and the Catalogue of the Cassano Library, vol. 7th, of this interesting series. The author of this noble set of books might well say, on reviewing the results of his labours:

"I have done every thing in my power to establish, on a firm foundation, the celebrity of a Library of which the remembrance can only perish with every other record of individual fame."

In 1817, 3 vols. r. 8vo, appeared The Bibliographical Decameron, or Ten Days' Pleasant Discourse upon Illuminated Manuscripts, and subjects connected with Early Engraving, Topography, and Bibliography. The small-paper copies, of which there were 760, were sold at £7 17s. 6d. to subscribers; £9 9s. to non-subscribers; large paper, £15 15s. Overtures were made for its republication in French, but it was too late. The curious blocks from which the engravings were made had been destroyed by the author and his friends. Although a thorough-paced bibliomaniac, we have no sympathy with such barbarous waste. The Decameron is assuredly one of the most beautiful, as well as one of the most instructive, books in the language. We have space for the quotation of one opinion only:

"The volumes not only exceed my expectation, but even my imagination. I could never have conceived any work so interesting for its decorations. It is surely without a rival in the whole history of Typography."—ISAAC DUNAKI.

We must notice two illustrated copies of this work. One is in the library of Lord Spencer at Althorp. Among other rarities, it has many duplicate proofs of copperplates. It cost his lordship upwards of 150 guineas. The other copy was formerly in the possession of George Henry Freeling. He had extended his three volumes to eleven, which were bound in Morocco by the famous Lewis. Mr. Freeling, as will readily be believed, was enthusiastically fond of the Decameron.

"If the gods could read," he exclaimed, "they would never be without a copy of the Decameron in their side-pocket!"

In 1821 our author gave to the world the results of his nine months' exploration of continental libraries, in A Bibliographical, Antiquarian, and Picturesque Tour in France and Germany, 3 vols. r. 8vo. The money paid to engravers alone in the getting up of these volumes approached £5000.

"A work the most costly on the score of embellishment, and the most perilous on that of responsibility, in which a Traveller—relying upon his own resources exclusively—was ever engaged."—Author's Reminiscences.

"One of the most beautiful and covetable books of modern times."—ROBERT SOUTHBY.

"Your splendid work is one of the most handsome which ever came from the British Press."—WALTER SCOTT.

The Tour was pub. at £9 9s., small paper, and £16 16s., large paper. Of illustrated copies, perhaps the most remarkable is one which passed through the hands of Henry Drury, George Hibbert, and P. A. Hanrott. It sold at Hibbert's sale for £92 8s., and at Hanrott's for £178 10s. The gentlemen who paid this price for it was induced to part with it by "a very splendid offer," but what that was, we believe, has not transpired. An account of this beautiful copy may be seen in Bibliotheca Hanrottiana, No. 2412. A second edition of the Tour, in 3 smaller volumes, was pub. in 1829. It is a very meagre affair compared with the first impression, and pub. at only £2 15s. There is also a French trans. by M. Theodore Licquet, Paris, 1825, 4 vols. 8vo. In 1819 Dr. Dibdin projected a History of the University of Oxford, which it is much to be regretted should have failed for want of encouragement. This noble university is much to blame for its neglect of a matter in which it has so deep an interest. From June, 1822, to Dec., 1825, he contributed a number of articles to Valpy's Museum, a periodical of short continuance. In 1824 he pub. The Library Companion, or the Young Man's Guide and the Old Man's Comfort in the choice of a Library. A second vol. was contemplated, but the British Critic and the Westminster Quarterly Reviews criticized the work severely, and it was not continued. Nevertheless, it is a work of considerable value, and deserves a wider circulation than it has obtained. It was pub. at £1 7s.; a few copies on large paper at £5 5s. A second edit. appeared in 1825. From an anecdote recorded at page 391 of the first edit., concerning "certain buckskins," and which is omitted in the subsequent one, it has acquired the title of the "Breeches Edition," and is quoted as such in the Bibliophobia.

In 1820, and also in 1825, our author pub. a volume of sermons, two single sermons in 1830 and 1831, an edit. of Thomas à Kempis's Imitation of Christ in 1828, and a collection of sermons by various authors in 6 vols. in 1834. Of this collection, entitled The Sunday Library, or the Protestant's Manual for the Sabbath Day, more than 4000 perfect sets were sold. It was pub. at £1 10s., and a new edit. was issued in 1851 at the very low price of 16s.

Principal Authors.—Bp. Blomfield, Rev. Robert Hall, Bp. Heber, Jones of Nayland, C. W. Le Bas, Bp. Malthy, Bp. Mant, Dean Milman, Dr. Parr, Archdeacon Port, Rev. Sidney Smith, Archbishop Sumner, Bp. Van Mildert, &c.

In 1827 he issued a 4th edit. of his Introduction to the Greek and Latin Classics. Of this work the first edit. was pub. in 1803, the 2d in 1804, and the 3d in 1809. The 4th edit. was pub. at £2 2s.; large paper, £6 6s. It is a most valuable work, and will save the classical student much time and toil. In 1831 he pub. anonymously a pamphlet, entitled Bibliophobia: Remarks on the Present languid and depressed state of Literature and the Book Trade; in a Letter addressed to the Author of the Bibliomania; by Mercurius Rusticus, with Notes by Cato Parvus. This is an amusing, though to the true Bibliomaniac also a melancholy, volume. In 1833 our author pub. two small vols. entitled Lent Lectures.

"These subjects are well chosen, and Dr. Dibdin, who doubtless knows full well what a London audience is, tells them very plainly that he thinks it expedient not to attempt too much, but to set before them the strongest and most striking points of each subject."—British Magazine.

His Reminiscences of a Literary Life, which should be in the possession of every one aspiring to be a man of books, was pub. in 1836, 2 vols. 8vo. It is a most valuable storehouse of biographical and bibliographical anecdote. In 1838 appeared A Bibliographical, Antiquarian, and Picturesque Tour in the Northern Counties of England and Scotland, 2 vols. r. 8vo; small paper, £4 14s. 6d.; large paper, £8 18s. 6d. This is a handsome work, but much inferior to the Tour in France and Germany. To Dr. Dibdin, more than to any other individual, is to be ascribed the prevalence of the spirit of Bibliomania which raged with such violence in England from about 1812 to 1824. Did our space permit, we might perhaps occupy a few pages not unprofitably in considering the tempting subject of book-collecting, its use and abuse, its advantages and disadvantages, its excess and its proper limits. It is a subject much misunderstood by the ignorant, and often misrepresented by the contracted. Informed by knowledge and restrained by discretion, it is certainly one of the most useful, as well as amiable, of enthusiasms.

To quote from the author whose labours in this department we have now had under consideration :

"When the STUDY of BIBLIOGRAPHY shall be more generally cultivated, its uses will be more generally acknowledged. It will be found to rank among those branches of antiquarian research which are as conducive to correct taste and intelligence as any other."

But we should be disposed to claim much more than this for enlightened BIBLIOGRAPHY.

Into the particular merits or demerits as a bibliographer, of the author of The Decameron, we will not be expected to examine, in the brief limits to which we are confined. There can be no question, however, of the justice of the commendations which we now quote with entire approbation, and with which we shall conclude our article :

"No collection can be complete without Dr. Dibdin's volumes, which are, independent of the solid information they contain, frequently enlivened by literary anecdotes, and rendered generally interesting by great variety of observation and scintillations of remark."

"You have contrived to strew flowers over a path which, in other hands, would have proved a very dull one; and all *Bibliomane*s must remember you long, as he who first united their antiquarian details with good-humoured raillery and cheerfulness."—Sir Walter Scott to Dr. Dibdin.

Diceto, Radulph De. See RADULPH DE DICETO.

Dicey, Thomas. Hist. Account of Guernsey, with Remarks on Jersey and other Islands, Lon., 1750, 12mo. This work has been highly commended.

Dick, Sir Alex., 1703-1785, a distinguished Scottish physician. De Epilepsia, 1725. Account of his Life. Trans. R. Soc., Edin., 1790.

Dick, Andrew Coventry, Advocate. Dissertation on Church Polity, Edin., 1835, sm. 8vo; last ed., 1851, 12mo.

"An excellent piece of sound and eloquent argumentation."—Lowndes's Brit. Lib.

"A book very ably written, and containing the best arguments in favour of the voluntary system that I have ever seen."—Lord Aberdeen, in the House of Lords.

The Nature and Office of the State, Lon., 1848, 8vo.

Dick, John, D.D., 1764-1833, a native of Aberdeen, Prof. of Theol. to United Secession Church. False Teachers, Edin., 1788, 8vo. Inspiration of the Scriptures, 1800, 12mo; 1804, 8vo; Glasg., 1813, 8vo.

"Altogether the best essay in the language on the subject of inspiration."—Orme's Bibl. Bib., 1824.

"A sensible and well-written essay."—Horne's B.M. Bib.

Lectures on Theology, with a Memoir by his son, 2d ed., Edin., 1834, 4 vols. 8vo.

"A body of Christian theology, lucid, discriminating, comprehensive, orthodox."—Williams's Christian Preacher.

Lectures on the Acts of the Apostles, Glasg., 1805-08, 2 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., 1822, 8vo; 3d ed., 1848, sm. 8vo.

"Well written, though not critical."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"They contain altogether a useful illustration of many important passages of the Acts; they are full of good sense and orthodox divinity, conveyed in a perspicuous and easy style."—Lon. Eclectic Review.

A vol. of Dr. Dick's sermons has been published.

Dick, Robert, D.D. Serms., 1758, '62, Edin., 8vo.

Dick, Robert, M.D. Derangement of the Digestive Organs, Lon., 1843, cr. 8vo. Diet and Regimen, 1838, p. 8vo; 1839, 12mo.

"One of the most enlightened and philosophical writers of his class."—Lon. Monthly Review.

"It treats most ably of diet and physical cultivation, and also of moral and intellectual regulation."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

Dick, Rev. Thomas, LL.D., 1774-1857, b. near Dundee, Scotland, nobly earned the dignified title attached to one of his excellent volumes.—The Christian Philosopher. He was educated at the University of Edinburgh, and, after completing his studies, entered the ministry of the Secession Church. Much of his time was devoted to teaching, for which elevated and philanthropic calling few men have been better fitted. An interesting notice of this venerated benefactor of his race will be found in Professor C. D. Cleveland's (a personal and attached friend of Dr. Dick) English Literature of the 19th Century, in which work we find the following list of Dr. Dick's publications :

1. The Christian Philosopher, or the Connection of Science with Religion, 1823.
2. The Philosophy of Religion, or an Illustration of the Moral Laws of the Universe, 1825.
3. The Philosophy of a Future State, 1828.
4. The Improvement of Society by the Diffusion of Knowledge.
5. On the Mental Illumination and Moral Improvement of Mankind, 1835.
6. Christian Philosophy contrasted with Covetousness, 1836.
7. Celestial Scenery, 1838.
8. The Sideral Heavens, 1840.
9. The Practical Astronomer, 1845.
10. The Solar System, 1846.
11. The Atmosphere and Atmospheric Phenomena, 1848.
12. The Telescope and Microscope, 1851.

Several of these works have been trans. into other languages, and the Solar System into the Chinese. Dr. Dick has also contributed largely to the periodicals of the day. Messrs. E. C. & J. Biddle of Philadelphia pub. in 1850 a uniform edition of Dr. Dick's works in 10 vols. 12mo. Messrs. Applegate & Co. of Cincinnati also publish a fine edition, complete in 2 vols. r. 8vo. We have before us commendatory notices of Dr. Dick's volumes from no less than twenty-three British periodicals. From these we extract the following :

Notice of the Philosophy of Religion :

"In discussing these interesting and important topics, Dr. Dick assumes the truth of Divine Revelation, and taking nature and revelation as they stand, endeavours to show the philosophy—in other words, the reasonableness—of what has been done, so as to justify the ways of God to man. The design of such a work is lofty and benignant, and Dr. Dick has brought to his great argument a vast amount of illustration and proof, presented in a style condensed and perspicuous, and imbued with the feeling appropriate to such a theme. We commend it earnestly to the general reader, and not less so to the Christian preacher. Such modes of dealing with the foundation of things need to be more common in our pulpits."—British Quarterly Review.

Notices of Celestial Scenery :

"This familiar explanation of the most interesting phenomena is well calculated to unfold the wonders of astronomy to those who are unacquainted with the mysteries of that science; while those who have learned its principles will derive pleasure from the speculations on the different aspects of our system, as viewed from the sun and the several planets."—Lon. Athenaeum.

"An admirable book to put into the hands of youth and general readers."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

"This is an admirable book, not more valuable for the excellence of its intention, than for the taste, right feeling, and manly simplicity of its execution. It is one of the most beautiful and readable books we ever had in our hands."—Glasgow Chronicle.

"Dr. Dick is not a mere collector of the opinions of others; but one who has thought and investigated for himself."—Lon. Evangelical Magazine.

Notices of the Sideral Heavens :

"A very interesting compilation, made by a practical man, and one which we can have no fear of recommending as a fit sequel to the Celestial Scenery of the same author."—Church of England Quarterly Review.

"The grandeur of our author's conceptions, the beauty of his style, and the rationality of his conclusions, equally charm the mind. We most unhesitatingly recommend our readers to treat themselves with the gratification of perusing this sublime book. Our author is a Christian philosopher."—Lon. Herald of Peace.

"A popular work on astronomy, in which the author addresses himself to general students rather than to scientific readers; and he further improves his design by turning the thoughts of all to towards the omnipotent Deity, whose works he describes as far as they are cognizable by human faculties."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

"No one can peruse this volume without being inspired with profound admiration and awe, and filled with emotions of deep humility and reverence. The work is characterized by profound and elaborate research, suited to the high and imposing theme, and is pervaded by a reverential spirit towards the mighty Architect. We unhesitatingly commend the work to the perusal of every class."—Scottish Phil.

"We have seldom met with a more readable or instructive work. He who has fairly mastered its contents will find himself a sort of living encyclopedia of astronomical facts. It is pervaded, from beginning to end, by a feeling of the deepest piety towards that Being whose celestial architecture it is the author's object to bring before the wondering and adoring mind of the reader."—Grant's Journal.

Notices of Christian Beneficence contrasted with Covetousness :

"A treatise of singular merit and interest, which cannot be read without largely instructing the understanding, and deeply impressing and affecting the heart."—New Connection Magazine.

"It is, indeed, a truly excellent treatise. In every part it comes forcibly home to the judgment and conscience of the reader. . . . The style of Dr. Dick is correct, dignified, and impressive. The merit of the work lies in its eminent adaptation for usefulness. It is a manly, judicious, and scriptural statement of the reasons and grounds of liberality of conduct."—General Baptist Repository.

"We hope that what has not already been effected by sober argument and solemn appeals, will result in this case from what may be regarded as a volume of practical evidence, in which the working of these antagonistic principles is fairly set forth."—Lon. Educ. Rev. See also Chris. Month. Spec. ix. 149, (by Denison Olmsted).

Dick, Thomas Lauder. Con. on Natural Philos. to Annals Phil., 1815, '16, '17.

Dick, Sir Wm. His lamentable Case and distressed Estate, Lon., 1656, fol. A rare book, which has been sold at great prices. Dowdeswell, 312, £52 10s.; Dent, pt. 1., 837, £26 5s.; Sir P. Thompson, £28 17s. 6d.

Dick, Wm. Dropsies; Med. Com., 1786.

Dick, Wm. A Manual of Veterinary Science from the 7th edit. Encyc. Brit., Edin. and Lon., 1842, p. 8vo.

"All Farmers and Cattle-dealers, Shepherds, Stablers, Coach-contractors, every man who is interested in the study of Veterinary Medicine, should have Mr. Dick's manual in his possession."—Edin. Advertiser.

"Written and compiled with great care. . . . The views will be found sober, practical, and judicious."—Quar. Jour. of Agricult.

Dicken, Aldersey. Serms., Camb., 1823.

Dickens, Charles. Serms., 1757, '83.

Dickens, Charles, b. 1812, at Landport, Portsmouth, England, enjoys the reputation of being the most popular author of the day. His father, John Dickens, held a post in the Navy Pay Department, and was subsequently a reporter of parliamentary debates. Charles was intended for the profession of the law, but finding no pleasure in his studies, obtained his father's consent to "join the parliamentary corps of a daily newspaper." He was first engaged in the office of the True Sun, and subsequently formed a connexion with the Morning Chronicle, in the evening edition of which appeared the Sketches of Life and Character, afterwards pub. as Sketches by Boz in 2 vols., 1836, '37. The extraordinary merit of these papers was at once acknowledged, and an enterprising publisher engaged Mr. Dickens and Mr. Seymour, the comic draughtsman, "the one to write and the other to illustrate a book which should exhibit the adventures of a party of Cockney Sportsmen." Seymour committed suicide before the book was finished, and the illustrations were continued by Hablot K. Browne, under the signature of "Phiz." Never was a book received with more rapturous enthusiasm than that which greeted the Pickwick Papers! It may be said, without a trope, that from the peer in his palace to the Jehu on his box, the book became an immediate favourite with all classes of society. The public were equally delighted with the shrewd facetiousness of Samuel Weller, and the unsophisticated benevolence of his estimable master, and no less charmed with the oddities and affectations of the other members of the circle. The comparisons of Weller Junior—not always the most obvious—were quoted and duplicated, if not improved upon, and single gentlemen were continually admonished to profit by the example of the "old gentleman," and studiously beware of respectable matrons who mourned the loss of their conjugal partners.

An author so successful, and who seemed to possess a perennial spring of humour and a marvellous facility of character, not unfrequently caricature, drawing, was not permitted to forget his cunning: the publishers and the public alike insisted upon more *Pickwick*s and *Weller*s; and Nicholas Nickleby, Oliver Twist, The Old Curiosity Shop, and Barnaby Rudge, were eagerly read by hundreds of thousands of delighted readers. On the completion of Master Humphrey's Clock, in which the two preceding tales were included, Mr. Dickens visited America, where he had no reason to complain of a lukewarm reception.

Upon his return home he gave the world the result of the impressions produced by his tour, in his American Notes for General Circulation, pub. in 1842. This volume elicited a vol. pub. in N. York, 1843, 8vo, entitled Change for American Notes, in Letters from London to New York, by a Lady. In 1843 he commenced Martin Chuzzlewit, in which his friends, the Americans, were not forgotten. He visited Italy in 1844, where he remained for about a year, and on his return in 1845 he established a new morning newspaper, entitled The Daily News, which he conducted for a short time. It is now a leading journal. Among other contributions of Mr. Dickens, a number of sketches, styled Pictures of Italy, will be found in its columns.

Since the relinquishment of the Daily News, our author has given to the world Dombey and Son, David Copperfield, Bleak House, The Child's History of England, Memoirs of Joseph Grimaldi, and the Christmas Tales of The Cricket on the Hearth and The Haunted Man. The Chimes and the Christmas Carol had been previously published. To these literary labours of Mr. Dickens must be added Hard Times, For These Times, 1854, p. 8vo; Little Dorrit, 1857, 8vo; and papers in The Household Narrative of Current Events, and in Household Words, (of which vol. xviii. was pub. in 1858. The circulation of the latter in London alone was stated, in 1853, (not by those interested, so far as we are aware, to be 90,000 copies. But we presume that for London should be read England. This periodical has an extensive circulation in America, also.

New eds. of several of Mr. Dickens's works have been republished in London by Messrs. Ward & Lock, Chapman & Hall, and Bradbury; and several beautiful eds. are issued in Philadelphia by Messrs. T. B. Peterson & Bros. For critical notices of the merits and demerits of this popular author we refer the reader to Edin. Rev., lxxviii., lxxvi., lxxxi.; Lon. Quar. Rev., lix., lxiv., lxxi., lxxiii.; Westm. Rev., xxvii., xxxix.; N. Brit. Rev., iv., vii., xv.; Eclec. Rev., 4th Ser., i., xvii.; Blackw. Mag., iii., ix.; Fraser's Mag., xxi., xxv., xxvi., xlii.; Dubl. Univ. Mag., xii.; N. Amer. Rev., lvi., (by A. P. Peabody, D.D.), lviii., (by C. C. Felton,) lix., (by E. P. Whipple,) South. Lit. Mess., ii., iii., v., ix.; New Englander, l., (by J. P. Thompson;) Bost. Chris. Exam., xxvii., (by J. S.

Dwight), xxxii., (by A. P. Peabody;) Bost. Liv. Age, xxi.; N. York Eclec. Mag., v., vii., viii., ix., xvi.; N. York Eclec. Mus., i.; Phila. Mus., xxi., xxxii. From three or four of these reviews we append brief quotations:

"The popularity of this writer is one of the most remarkable literary phenomena of recent times, for it has been fairly earned without resorting to any of the means by which most other writers have succeeded in attracting the attention of their contemporaries. He has flattered no popular prejudice, and profited by no passing folly: he has attempted no caricature sketches of the manners or conversation of the aristocracy; and there are very few political or personal allusions in his works. Moreover, his class of subjects are such as to expose him at the outset to the fatal objection of vulgarity; and, with the exception of occasional extracts in the newspapers, he received little or no assistance from the press. Yet, in less than six months from the appearance of the first number of the Pickwick Papers, the whole reading public were talking about them—the names of Winkle, Wardell, Weller, Snodgrass, Bobson, and Yogg, had become familiar in our mouths as household terms; and Mr. Dickens was the grand object of interest to the whole tribe of 'Lee-hunters,' male and female, of the metropolis. Nay, Pickwick chintzes figured in linen-draper's windows, and Weller courtoys in breeches-makers' advertisements; Bos was might be seen rattling through the streets, and the portrait of the author of Pelham or Crichon was scraped down or pasted over to make room for that of the new popular favourite in the omnibuses. This is only to be accounted for on the supposition that a fresh vein of humour had been opened; that a new and decidedly original genius had sprung up; and the most cursory reference to preceding English writers of the comic order will show, that, in his own peculiar walk, Mr. Dickens is not simply the most distinguished, but the first."—Lon. Quart. Review, lix. 484; Oct. 1837.

"There is no misanthropy in his satire, and no coarseness in his descriptions—a merit enhanced by the nature of his subjects. His works are chiefly pictures of humble life—frequently of the humblest. The reader is led through scenes of poverty and crime, and all the characters are made to discourse in the appropriate language of their respective classes—and yet we recollect no passage which ought to cause pain to the most sensitive delicacy, if read aloud in female society. We have said that his satire was not misanthropic. This is eminently true. One of the qualities we most admire in him is his comprehensive spirit of humanity. The tendency of his writings is to make us practically benevolent—to excite our sympathy in behalf of the aggrieved and suffering in all classes; and especially in those who are most removed from observation. He especially directs our attention to the helpless victims of untoward circumstances or a vicious system—to the imprisoned debtor—the orphan pauper—the parish apprentice—the juvenile criminal—and to the tyranny, which, under the combination of parental neglect, with the mercenary brutality of a pedagogue, may be exercised with impunity in schools. His humanity is plain, practical, and manly. It is quite untainted with sentimentality. There is no mawkish walling for ideal distresses—no morbid exaggeration of the evils incident to our lot—no disposition to excite unavailing discontent, or to turn our attention from remedial grievances to those which we do not admit a remedy. Though he appeals much to our feelings, we can detect no instance in which he has employed the verbiage of spurious philanthropy. He is equally exempt from the meretricious cant of spurious philosophy."—Edin. Review, lxviii. 77, Oct. 1838.

"Dickens as a novelist and prose poet is to be classed in the front rank of the noble company to which he belongs. He has revived the novel of genuine practical life, as it existed in the works of Fielding, Smollett, and Goldsmith; but at the same time has given to his materials an individual coloring and expression peculiarly his own. His characters, like those of his great exemplars, constitute a world of their own, whose truth to nature every reader instinctively recognizes in connection with their truth to Dickens. Fielding delineates with more exquisite art, standing more as the spectator of his personages, and commenting on their actions with an ironical humour and a seeming innocence of insight, which pierces not only into, but through, their very nature, laying bare their most unconscious scenes of action, and in every instance indicating that he understands them better than they understand themselves. It is this perfection of knowledge and insight which gives to his novels their naturalness, their freedom of movement, and their value as lessons in human nature as well as consummate representations of actual life. Dickens's eye for the forms of things is as accurate as Fielding's, and his range of vision more extended; but he does not probe so profoundly into the heart of what he sees, and he is more led away from the simplicity of truth by a tricky spirit of fantastic exaggeration. Mentally he is indisputably below Fielding; but in tenderness, in pathos, in sweetness and purity of feeling, in that comprehensiveness of sympathy which springs from a sense of brotherhood with mankind, he is indisputably above him."—E. P. Whipple, N. Amer. Rev., lix. 392-393, Oct. 1849.

"The mention of the Waverley Novels and their broad Scottish dialect, leads unavoidably to the remark, that, unlike the author of these matchless productions, Mr. Dickens makes his low characters almost always vulgar. It is not easy to define vulgarity, but every one can feel it; and we know that Edie Ochiltree, Cuddie Headrigg, Bailie Nicol Jarvie, and Domine Sampson are not vulgar, in spite of their accent, language, and station; neither are Jeanie Deans, or Meg Merrilies, or the Mucklebackits; and while the author draws them with perfect truth, he often conveys through their mouths lessons of the greatest moral elevation. Every reader must have felt how much otherwise it is with Mr. Dickens.

"In the next place, the good characters of Mr. Dickens's novels do not seem to have a wholesome moral tendency. The reason is, that many of them—all the author's favourites—exhibit an excellence flowing from constitution and temperament, and not from the influence of moral or religious motive. They act from impulse, not from principle. They present no struggle of contending passions; they are instinctively incapable of evil; they are, therefore, not constituted like other human beings; and do not feel the force of temptation as it assails our less perfect breasts. It is this that makes them unreal.

'Faultless monsters, that the world ne'er saw.' This is the true meaning of 'the simple heart,' which Mr. Dickens so perpetually eulogizes. Indeed, they often degenerate into simpletons, sometimes into mere idiots. . . . Another error is the undue prominence given to good temper and kindness, which are constantly made substitutes for all other virtues, and an atonement for the want of them; while a defect in these good qualities is the signal for instant condemnation and the charge of hypocrisy. It is unfortunate, also, that Mr. Dickens so frequently represents persons with pretensions to virtue and piety as mere rogues and hypocrites, and never depicts any whose station as clergymen, or reputation for piety, is consistently adorned and verified. . . . We cannot but sometimes contrast the tone of Mr. Dickens's purely sentimental passages with that of Sir Walter Scott on similar occasions, and the stilted pomp with which the former often parades a flaunting rag of threadbare morality with the quiet and graceful ease with which the latter points out and enforces a useful lesson."—North British Review, vol. iv.

Dickens, John. Tin Plates, Lon., 1736, 8vo.
Dickenson, John. Deorum Consensus, Lon., 1591, 8vo. Aristas, 1594, 4to. Greene in Concept, &c., 1598, 4to.

Dickenson, John. Miscellanea ex Historiis Anglicanis, Lugd. Batav., 1606, 4to.

Dickenson, John. Sermon on Ps. lxxxii.
Dickenson, John. Sermon, 1779, 8vo.

Dickenson, Thomas. Sermons, 1712, '16, 8vo.
Dickie, J. See MITCHELL, J.

Dickins, John, Register of the Ct. of Chancery. Reports in Chancery, by J. Wyatt, Lon., 1803, 2 vols. r. 8vo.
"Mr. Dickins was a very attentive and diligent register, but his notes being rather loose, are not considered as good authority."—LORD REDEBALLE.

"From the author's official station great expectations were formed by the profession from the proposed publication of them: sed par turant montes, etc."—Bridgman's Legal Bibl.

Dickinson, Adam. N. Test. Grace, Lon., 1814.
Dickinson, Andrew. My First Visit to Europe, N. York, 1851, 12mo. A 2d ed. has been pub.

"A very readable book—fresh, unaffected, genuine. His narration is at once faithful, varied, and interesting."

Dickinson, Edmund, 1624–1707, Physician to Chas. II. and James II., is best-known as the publisher of Delphi Phoniscantes, &c., Oxon., 1655, 8vo., a learned dissertation, written to prove that the Greeks borrowed the story of the Delphic Oracles from the Holy Scriptures. But this treatise was really written by Henry Jacob, and appropriated by the dishonest medicus. See Athen. Oxon. in Orme's Bibl. Bib. Dickinson wrote a work entitled Physica Vetus et Vera, Lon., 1702, 4to. Parabola Philosophica, and a treatise on the Grecian Games, in Latin, pub. with an Account of his Life and Writings, by W. M. Blonbery, 1709, 8vo.; 1739.

Dickinson, Francisco. 20 Rare Secrets, 1649, 4to.
Dickinson, Capt. H. Instructions for forming a Regiment of Infantry for Parade or Exercise, 1798, 8vo.

Dickinson, John, 1732–1808, member of the Assembly of Penna., 1764; delegate to a general congress in New York, 1765; member of Congress from Penna., 1774; again in 1779; President of Delaware, 1780; President of the Supreme Executive Council of Penna., 1782–85; succeeded by Benjamin Franklin. Speech, 1764. Reply to a Speech of Joseph Galloway, 1765. Late Regulations respecting the British Colonies on the Continent of America, 1765. Letters from a Pennsylvania Farmer to the Inhabitants of the British Colonies, [12 Letters,] 1767–68. Reprinted, 1774. 9 Letters under the signature of Fabius; intended to promote the adoption of the Constitution, 1788; 14 ditto, to encourage a favourable feeling towards France, 1797. His Polit. Writings were pub. in 2 vols. 8vo. in 1801.

Mr. Dickinson's style was distinguished by perspicuity, vigour, and a flowing eloquence admirably suited to the exciting topics which commanded his pen. He was author of many of those able papers issued by the early American Congress which elicited the ardent eulogy of Lord Chatham.

The celebrated Petition to the King, erroneously ascribed by Chief Justice Marshall, in his Life of Washington, to Mr. Lee, was the production of John Dickinson.

"It won the highest admiration on both sides of the Atlantic, and will remain an imperishable monument to the glory of its author, and of the assembly of which he was a member, so long as fervid and manly eloquence, and chaste and elegant composition shall be appreciated."—THOMAS ALLIBONE BUDD: Life of John Dickinson in the National Portrait Gallery of Distinguished Americans, Phila., 1852, vol. II.

The "Second Petition to the King" was also written by John Dickinson.

Dickinson, Jonathan, 1688–1747, first President of the College of New Jersey, 1746–47, was for nearly forty years "the joy and glory" of the 1st Presbyterian Church of Elizabethtown, New Jersey. He pub. many sermons, and theolog. treatises, 1732–46. A third ed. of his Familiar Letters upon Important Subjects in Religion was pub. at Edin. in 1757, 12mo. and a collection of a number of his writings was issued in the same place in 1793, 8vo. See Pierson's Sermon on his death; preface to his sermons, Edin. ed.; Chandler's Life of Johnson; Allen's Amer. Biog. Dict.

Dickinson, R. Sheriffs, Coroners, Constables, and Collectors of Taxes, Springfield, 1810, 8vo. Justices of the Peace, Boston, 8vo.

Dickinson, Robert. Sermons, 1803–06, 8vo.
Dickinson, Robert. Sermons, Lon., 1818, 8vo.

Dickinson, Rodolphus. New and corrected Version of the New Test. with Notes, Boston, 1833, r. 8vo. Severely handled in the Amer. Month. Rev., March, 1833.

Dickinson, Samuel. Sermon, 1784, 8vo.
Dickinson, Wm. Sermon, Lon., 1619, 4to.

Dickinson, Wm. Ode in Artem Anatomicam ornatisimo doctissimoque viro Ricardo Mead, M.D., fol.

Dickinson, Wm. Antiquities in Nottinghamshire and the adjacent Counties, Newark, 1801–03, 4to, vol. i. This is an unfinished work, containing the Hist. of Southwell. The Hist. and Antiq. of the Town of Newark, Newark, 1806, 4to. See RASTALL, W. DICKINSON.

Dickinson, Wm. Justice of the Peace, 2d ed., Lon., 1822, 3 vols. 8vo. Justice Law of the last 5 years, 1813–17, 1818, 8vo.

"A very good and convenient Appendix, executed with sufficient care and skill to answer all the purposes for which it was undertaken."—Lon. Monthly Rev.

Practical Guide to the Quarter Sessions, and other Sessions of the Peace; 5th ed. by Mr. Sergeant Talford; 6th ed. with adds. by R. P. Tyrwhitt, 1845, 8vo.

Dicks, John. Gardener's Directory, 1769, fol.

Dickson, Rev. Adam. Treatise on Agriculture, Edin., 1762, 8vo; 2d ed., 1765; vol. ii., 1769, 8vo; new ed., 1785, 2 vols. 8vo. The Husbandry of the Ancients, Edin. and Lon., 1788, 2 vols. 8vo.

"This, though the best work on the subject in the English language, is inferior to that of Butel Dumont."—McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Economy.

"Dickson has ever been very justly reckoned to be a first-rate writer of the time."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Dickson, Alex. De Vmbra Rationis et Indicij, Lon., 1583, 16mo. Libellus de memoria verissima, &c., 1584, 12mo.

Dickson, Caleb, M.D. Fever, Lon., 1585, 8vo.

Dickson, David, 1583–1663, a native of Glasgow; minister of Irvine, 1618; Profes. of Divinity in the Univ. of Glasgow, 1643, and afterwards in that of Edinburgh. Explanation of the Epistle to the Hebrews, Aber., 1635, fol. and 12mo.

"Not so satisfactory as his work on the Psalms."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

Expositio analytica omnium Epistolarum, Glasg., 1646, 4to. Exposition of the Gospel according to St. Matthew, Lon., 1651, 12mo.

"Short, but sensible and evangelical."—Bickersteth's Christian Student.

A Brief Explication of the Psalms, 1653–55, 3 vols. 8vo, Glasg. and Lon., 1834, 3 vols. 12mo; with a Memoir of the author, by the Rev. Robert Wodrow.

"Very popular during the latter part of the seventeenth century."—Horne's Bibl. Bib.

"The exposition, though brief, is not so short as to be unsatisfactory."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"Of use for the justness and fertility of its observations."—Williams's Christian Preacher.

Therapeutica Sacra, Edin., 1695, 8vo.

"An experimental and profitable work."—Bickersteth's Christian Student.

Exposition of all the Epistles, 1659, fol.

Dickson was engaged in some other works. Edward Leigh—see a Treatise of Religion and Learning, Lon., 1656, fol.—commends Dickson highly, and Poole represents his expositions as "Brief, but perspicuous, ingenious, and judicious."

See Wodrow's Memoirs of Dickson; Law's Memorialla.

Dickson, David, M.D. Medical Essay, 1712, 8vo.

Dickson, David. Sermons, Edin., 1818, 8vo.

Dickson, D. M. Ann. of Med., 1799.

Dickson, J. Revelations of Cholera, Lon., 1848, 12mo.

Dickson, J. Breeding of Live Stock, Edin. and Lon., 1850, p. 8vo.

Dickson, James. Præ. Discourses, Edin., 1731, 8vo.

Dickson, James, d. 1822. Fasciculus Plantarum Cryptogamicarum Britanniae, Lon., 1783–1801, 4to. Dried Plants, 1787–99, sm. fol. Botanical Catalogue, 1797, 8vo. Con. to Trans. Linn. Soc., 1791, '94, '97, and to Trans. Hortie. Soc., 1815, '17, '18.

Dickson, James Hill. Letters on the improved mode of the Cultivation and Management of Flax, Lon., 1846, 8vo.

"The intelligence is very sound, and correctly estimated."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Dickson, R. W., M.D. Practical Agriculture; planting, live stock, &c., Lon., 1804, 2 vols. 4to.

"Much reputed for sound and correct information."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

The Farmer's Companion, 1811, 8vb. Improved System of Cattle Management, 1822, 2 vols. 4to. He edited a monthly Agricultural Journal, 1807, '08.

Dickson, Rev. Richard. New Interpretation of Psalm lxxviii., Oxf., 1812, 4to.

"These very learned and acute discussions well deserve the attention of all who are versed in Hebrew learning and biblical criticism."—British Critic.

Dickson, Richard. Law of Wills, Lon., 1830, 12mo.

Dickson, Samuel, M.D. Unity of Disease analytically proved, Lon., 1838, 8vo. Fallacy of the Art of Physic, 1838, 8vo. Fallacies of the Faculty; being the Spirit of the Chronic Treatment System, 2d ed., 1841, 8vo; 5th ed., 1846, r. 8vo; 6th ed., 1853, 8vo.

Dickson, Samuel Henry, Professor of the Practice of Medicine in the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia; for many years Prof. of the Institutes and Practice of Medicine in the Med. Coll. of the State of South Carolina. 1. Dengue: its History, Pathology, and Treatment, Phila., 1826, 8vo. 2. Essays on Pathology and Therapeutics; being the Substance of the Course of Lectures delivered in the Med. Coll. of S. Carolina, 1845, 2 vols. 8vo. 3. Essays on Slavery, 1845, and sundry Orations and Addresses. 4. Essays on Life, Sleep, Pain, &c., Phila., 1852, 12mo. 5. Elements of Medicine, 1855, 8vo, pp. 750. Dr. Dickson has contrib. to many medical and miscell. periodicals. It will be observed by the annexed notice that this distinguished physician and author was for some time connected with the Medical Department of the New York University:

"Dr. Dickson, recently of the Medical Department of the New York University, and whose ill-health induced the resignation of the chair he held there, has returned to Charleston; and we observe that his professional and other friends in that city greeted him with a public dinner on the 9th ult. Dr. Dickson, we believe, is one of the most classically elegant writers upon medical science in the United States. He ranks with Chapman and Oliver Wendell Holmes in the grace of his periods as well as in the thoroughness of his learning and the exactness and acuteness of his logic. Like Holmes, too, he is a poet, and, generally, a very accomplished littérateur. We regret the loss that New York sustains in his removal, but congratulate Charleston upon one of the best-known and most loved attractions of her society."—International Magazine, vol. i.

Dickson, Stephen. Chemical Essay, &c., 1787, '90, '96.

Dickson, Thomas. The Sovereignty of the Divine Administration Vindicated, with a Pref. by J. Seddon, 1766, 8vo.

Dickson, Thomas. De Sanguinis Missiones, Lugd. Bat., 1746, 8vo.

Dickson, Thomas, M.D. Physician to the London Hospital. Blood-letting, Lon., 1765, 4to. Con. to Med. Obs. and Inq., 1762, '70.

Dickson, Walter R. Domestic Poultry, Lon., 1833, '46, 12mo; new ed. with addits. by Mrs. Loudon, illus. by Harvey, 1853, p. 8vo.

"This is an excellent treatise on poultry, and deserves much notice."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

It is the most comprehensive work on the subject, and invaluable to all who raise poultry either for profit or pastime.

Dickson, Wm. Negro Slavery, Lon., 1789, 8vo. Mitigation of Slavery, 1814, 2 vols. 8vo; in conjunction with Hon. J. Steele. Other works. Trans. of serms. by Massillon, 1798, 3 vols. 8vo. Every one should read the serms. of the eloquent Bishop of Claremont.

"He is doubtless of the first rank as a writer. No one has carried the excellence of style to a higher degree of perfection. He attended to this branch of eloquence to the latest period of his life. . . . He retained in his old age all the purity of his taste, although he had lost the vivacity of his imagination."—ANNE MAURY: Principles of Eloquence.

"Bossuet is sublime, but unequal; Flechter is more equal, but less sublime, and often too flowery; Bourdaloue is solid and judicious, but he neglects the lighter ornaments; Massillon is richer in imagery, but less cogent in reasoning. I would not, therefore, have an orator content himself with the imitation of one of these models, but rather that he strive to combine in himself the different qualities of each."—M. CARVIER: Rhétorique Française.

"The heart was the object at which he aimed, and his eloquence gave him its complete control,—he convinced,—he touched,—he softened,—he led us his hearer captive—his eloquence was irresistible!"—CONSUM.

"We everywhere find the overflowing of a soul deeply penetrated, great knowledge of the human heart, just and delicate thoughts, brilliant ideas, elegant expressions, and a style at once lively, concise, and harmonious."—L'Avocat.

Dicuili, an Irish monk, b. 755–760? wrote a tract De Mensura Orbis Terræ, and a treatise on Grammar; the latter appears to be lost. The tract De Mensura, &c. was first pub. in 1807 by C. A. Walckenaer, Paris, 8vo, from two MSS. in the Royal (the Imperial) Library at Paris. In 1814 a new ed. was pub. by A. Letronne, Paris, 8vo, who consulted two MSS. in Italy. There is another MS. of this tract in the Imperial Library at Vienna.

"Dicuili's language is rude and perfectly destitute of ornament; but he exhibits an extensive acquaintance with books, and quotes Virgil, Lucan, and other Latin writers."—Wright's Biog. Brit. Lit., q. v.

Diefenbach, Dr. Ernest, late Naturalist to the New Zealand Company. New Zealand and its Native Population, Lon., 1841, 8vo. Travels in New Zealand, 1843, 2 vols. 8vo. A valuable work, containing an extensive Fauna of New Zealand, and a Grammar and Dictionary of the Language.

Diemar, E. M. The History and Amours of Rhodope, Lon., 1780, 4to.

Digby, Everard, d. 1592. Theoria Analytica, &c., Lon., 1579, 4to. De Duplici Methodo libri duo, 1580, 8vo.

"A work of considerable merit. The main object of it is to point out the advantages of method in the exposition of those principles and rules which lead the mind to sound reasoning."—Blakely's Hist. Sketch of Logic.

De Arte Natandi, 1587. A dissuasive rel. to the goods, &c. of the Church, 4to. A Short Introduction for to learn to Swimme, trans. by Chr. Middleton.

Digby, Sir Everard, 1581–1606, distinguished as "the handsomest man of his time," son of the preceding, executed as an accomplice in the Gunpowder Plot. Some of his papers were pub. with other pieces relating to the plot, 1678.

Digby, Francis. A trans. from Xenophon.

Digby, George, Earl of Bristol, 1612–1676, born in Madrid during his father's (John, Earl of Bristol) first embassy to Spain. Speeches, 1640, '41. Watt notes a speech by the Earl of Bristol, pub. 1674 and 1679. Elvira, a Comedy. 'Tis better than it was. Apology, 1642, 4to. Letter to the Queen, 1642, 4to. Letters between Lord George Digby and Sir Keffelm Digby, Kt., concerning Religion, 1651, 12mo. See other publications of his in Park's Walpole's R. and N. Authors. See also Athen. Oxon.; Biog. Brit.; Bp. Warburton's Introduc. to Julian.

"A singular person, whose life was contradiction."—HORACE WALPOLE.

Digby, John, Earl of Bristol, 1580–1653, father of the preceding. Verses on the Death of Sir Henry Unton. Other Poems. See Lawes's Ayres and Dialogues, Lon., 1653, fol. Trans. of P. du Moulin's Defence of the Catholic Faith, 1610. Political Tracts and Speeches.

"The Earl of Bristol was a man of grave aspect, of a presence that drew respect, and of long experience in affairs of great importance. He was a very handsome man."—Lord CLARENDON: Hist. of the Rebellion. See Park's Walpole's R. and N. Authors.

Digby, Sir John. Letter to Col. Kerr, Gov. of Plymouth, persuading him to betray his trust, 1645.

Digby, Lord John. Speeches, 1642, '60, 4to.

Digby, Sir Kenelm, 1603–1648, son of Sir Everard Digby, was equally distinguished for his supposed skill in occult philosophy, and for having married the famous beauty, Venetia Anastasia, daughter of Sir Edward Stanley, "A lady of an extraordinary beauty, and of as extraordinary a fame."—Lord CLARENDON.

Ben Jonson, who wrote ten pieces in her praise, thus laments her loss:

"Twere time that I dy'd too, now she is dead,
Who was my Muse, and life of all I said;
The spirit that I wrote with, and conceiv'd:
All that was good or great with me, she weav'd."

Aubrey gives a minute account of her appearance. See Bliss's Wood's Athen. Oxon., iii. 694–5.

Sir Kenelm was the author of a number of works: A Conference with a Lady about the Choice of Religion, Paris, 1638, 8vo; Lon., 1654. His and Mr. Montague's Letters concerning the Contribution, 1642, 4to. SIR THOMAS BROWNE'S (q. v.) Religio Medici, with observations, 1643, 12mo; 1682, 8vo. Obser. on the 22d Stanza in the 9th Canto of the 2d Book of Spenser's Fairy Queen, 1644, 8vo, "Containing," says his biographer, "a very deep philosophical commentary upon these mysterious verses." Discourse concerning the Cure of Wounds by the sympathetic Powder, 1644, fol., with instructions how to make the said powder. In French, Paris, 1658, 12mo; 1660, 8vo; Francaf., 1660, 8vo; Amst., 1661, 12mo. The Body and Soul of Man, Paris, 1644, fol. Of Bodies and of Man's Soul, &c., Lon., 1669, 4to. Institutionum Peripateticarum, Paris, 1651. Letters between him and Lord George Digby concerning Religion, 1651, 8vo. Infallibility of Religion, Paris, 1652, 12mo. Adhering to God, Lon., 1654. Controversial Letters, 1654. Peripatetical Institutions, trans. by T. White, 1656, 8vo. De Plantarum Vegetatione, 1661, 12mo; Latin, Amst., 1669, 12mo. Receipts of Surgery and Physick, also of Cordial and Distilled Waters and Spirits, 1665, '68, '75, 8vo; in Latin, by George Hartman, 1668, 8vo. Trans. into many languages. His Closet Opened, 1669, '77, 8vo. Chymical Secrets, pub. by G. Hartman, 1683, 8vo. Excellent Directions for Cookery, 1669. Remedies Souverains, &c., Paris, 1684, 12mo. Secrets pour la Beauté des Dames, &c., Haye, 1700, 8vo. See Biog. Brit.; Life of Lord Clarendon; Bliss's Wood's Athen. Oxon.; Bibl. Digbeiana, 1680, 8vo; Life of Sir Kenelm Digby, pub. from his own MS. by Sir N. Harris Nicolas, 1827, 8vo.

"A Gentleman absolute in all Numbers."—BEN JONSON.

"He possessed all the advantages which nature and art, and an excellent education could give him."—LORD CLARENDON.

Digby, Kenelm Henry. Broadstone of Honour, (on the Origin, Spirit, and Institutions of Christian Chivalry.) 1st Book called Godefridus; 2d Book, Tancredus; 3d Book, Morus; 4th Book, Orlandus, Lon., 1826, '27, 4p. 8vo. New ed., 1845–48, 3 vols. 12mo.

"He identifies himself, as few have ever done, with the good and great and heroic and holy in former times, and ever rejoices in passing out of himself into them."—ARCHDEACON HARE: Guesses at Truth.

"We have never read a volume more full than this [Morus] of loving gentleness and earnest admiration for all things beautiful and excellent."—STEELE.

Mores Catholicæ; or Ages of Faith, Anon., 1844–47, 3 vols. r. 8vo.

"That delightful writer, who has collected, like a truly pious pilgrim, the fragrance of ancient times; whose works I should certainly recommend to the English Aristocracy, and Irish, too."—ARCHBISHOP OF TUAM.

Digby, Wm., Dean of Clonfert. 21 Lectures on Divinity, Dubl., 1787, 8vo.

Digges, Sir Dudley, 1583–1639, eldest son of Thomas Digges, educated at University College, Oxford. Four Paradoxes, or Politique Discourses, &c. by Thos. and Dud. Digges, 1604, 4to. Defence of the E. India Trade, 1615, 4to.

"It contains some curious particulars, but wants the ingenuity and originality which distinguishes Mun's tract."—McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Econ.

Right and Privileges of the Subject, 1642, 4to. The Complete Ambassador, 1655, '65, fol.

"A pleasing variety of letters."—Bp. NICOLSON.

Digges, Dudley, 1612?–1643, third son of the preceding. An Answer to Observations upon some of his Majesty's late Answers and Expresses, Oxon., 1642; anon. The Unlawfulness of Subjects taking up Arms against their sovereign on what case soever, 1643, '47, 4to; 1662, 8vo. Review of the Observations upon some of his Majesty's late Answers and Expresses, Oxon., 1643, '44; anon.

Digges, Edward. Silkworms, Phil. Trans., 1665.

Digges, Leonard, d. about 1573, an eminent mathematician, father of Thomas Digges, a native of Barham, Kent, was educated at University College, Oxford. Tectonicon; measuring of Land, &c., Lon., 1556, 4to. A Prognostication to judge of the weather, &c., 1555, '40, '56, '64, '67; augmented by T. Digges, 1576, '78, '92, 1634, 4to. An Arithmet. Military Treatise named Stratiticos; augmented by T. Digges, 1579, '90, 4to.

"There is here a brief and good treatise on Arithmetic, and some Algebra of the school of Recorde and Scheubel; but the greater part of the work is on military matters."—Professor De Morgan's Arithmetical Books, Lon., 1847, 8vo.

"A most excellent mathematician, a skilful architect, and a most expert surveyor of land."—Athen. Oxon.

Digges, Leonard, 1588–1635, grandson of the preceding, was educated at University College, Oxford. Gerardo; from the Spanish of Gonçalo de Cespades, Lon., 1622, 4to. The Rape of Proserpine; from the Latin of Claudian, 1628, 4to. His commendatory verses to Shakespeare were prefixed to the works of the latter. See 1st folio, 1623; and Poems, 1640, 8vo.

"A great master of the English language, a perfect understander of the French and Spanish, a good poet, and no mean orator."—Athen. Oxon.

Digges, Thomas, d. 1595, son of the first-named Leonard, and father of Leonard the younger and of Sir Dudley, is known chiefly as the editor of his father's works, but pub. several works of his own. A Geometrical Treatise named Pantometria, by Leonard and Thos. Digges, Lon., 1571, 4to; 1591, fol. Alm. sive Scalæ Mathematicæ, 1573, 4to. Stratiticos. See DIGGES, LEONARD. England's Defence, 1680, fol. Celestial Orbs, 1592, 4to. Humble Motives, 1601, 8vo. See ARCHÆOL. vol. vi. Nova Corpora Regularia, 1634, 4to. Digges commenced a number of works which were never finished, in consequence of his becoming entangled in lawsuits. The vexations to which he was thus subjected were too much for the philosopher's equanimity; for after giving us a catalogue of six works which he had designed publishing, he thus breaks forth:

"All these, and other, long sithens, the author had finished and published, had not the infernal furies, enuing such his felicitie and happy societie with his mathematical muses, for many yeares so tormented him with law-brables, that he hath bene enforced to discontinue those his delectable studies." See Bliss's Wood's Athen. Oxon.; Stow's Survey of London, 1.71, 72, edit., Lon., 1720; Biog. Brit.; Brit. Bibliographer, where are some curious extracts from his works.

The mathematical genius of the various members of this family is remarkable. It is supposed that a spy-glass was in their possession, the invention of which and the instrument itself were kept secret.

"One of the most important names connected with the advancement of English mathematical science in the 16th century is that of Digges."—PROF. DE MORGAN.

Dighton, T. Kneeling at the Sacrament, 1618.

Dignan, Browne, M.D. Essay on the Political Principles of Public Economy, 1776, 12mo.

Dikes, T. 1. Sermon. 2. F. Penitentiary, 1811.

Diligent, J. Log of the Cumberland, 8vo.

Dilke, Charles Wentworth, b. 1789, the proprietor and for many years editor of the London Athenæum, was formerly a contributor to the Westminster and Retrospective Reviews and other periodicals. In 1814 he edited a valuable collection of Old English Plays, in 6 vols. A notice of Mr. Dilke will be found in Men of the Time, Lon., 1853, also in Knight's Eng. Cyc.

Dilke, Thomas. The Lover's Luck; a comedy, Lon., 1696, 4to. The City Lady, or Folly Reclaimed; a comedy, 1697, 4to.

Dill, E. M., D.D. Ireland's Miseries; the Grand Cause and Cure, Edin., 1852, 12mo.

"This is a book that will attract much attention."

Dillaway, Charles K., late principal in Boston Latin School, Mass., has pub. many useful educational works.

Dillenius, John James, M.D., 1687–1747, an eminent botanist, a native of Darmstadt, settled in England, and became Prof. of Botany in the University of Oxford. Catalogus Plantarum, &c., Francf., 1718, '19, 8vo. An improved ed. of Ray's Synopsis Stirpium Britannicarum, 1724. Hortus Elthamensis, &c., Lon. and Oxf., 1732, 2 vols. fol.

"Est opus botanicum, quo absolutius mundum non vidit."—LINNÆUS.

Historia Muscorum; a general History of Land and Water, &c. Mosses and Corals, Oxon., 1741, 2 vols. 4to. Dillenius came to England by the invitation of Dr. Wm. Sherard, who left £3000 to establish a botany professorship at Oxford, provided Dillenius should first fill the chair. See Biog. Brit.; Pulteney's Sketches of Botany in Eng.; Stoecker's Life of Linnæus; Rees's Cyc.; Nichols's Lit. Anecdotes.

Dillingham, Fras. Theolog. treatises, 1599–1617.

Dillingham, Wm., D.D. Theolog. and poet. works, 1661–1700.

Dillingham, Wm. H., 1790–1854, a native of Lee, Berkshire co., Mass., for many years a resident of Philadelphia. Tribute to Peter Collinson. Address and Oration before various societies, and many contributions to the periodicals of the day.

Dillon, Lord. Rosaline de Vere; a Romance, Lon., 2 vols. p. 8vo. The Life and Opinions of Sir Richard Maltravers, an English Gentleman of the 17th Century, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

"The original tone of thinking of these volumes cannot but cause them to be much read."—New Month. Mag., 1822.

Eccellino da Romano; a Poem, 8vo.

"There is a richness of diction and originality of ideas such as would have claimed for the author a high reputation even in the best days of our national poetry."—Lon. New Month. Mag., Sept. 1828.

Dillon, Hon. Arthur. A Winter in Iceland and Lapland, Lon., 1840, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

"These volumes, full of information, historical and descriptive, are the result of a journey not less creditable to Mr. Dillon's literary character than his courage. The history is a sort of sea romance."—Lon. Atlas.

Dillon, Hon. Henry Augustus, Viscount, Col., and M.P. Letter relative to the Roman Catholics of Ireland, Lon., 1805, 8vo. A Commentary on the Military Establishments and Defence of the British Empire, Lon., 1811, '12, 2 vols. 8vo.

Dillon, Sir J. Case of the Children of the Duke of Sussex elucidated; a Juridical Exercitation, Lon., 1832, 4to; of Sir A. d'Este, 1832, 8vo.

Dillon, John Joseph. Legal and Political treatises, Lon., 1800–13.

Dillon, John T. Travels through Spain, Lon., 1780, 4to. This work treats of Natural History and Physical Geography. Letters from Spain, 1781, 8vo. Art of Painting, 1782, 8vo. Survey of the S. Roman Empire, 1782, 8vo. Hist. works, 1788, '90. Oxen for Tillage in competition with Horses, from the French of De Monray, with Notes, 1796, 8vo.

"He labours hard, as all others on the same subject, to establish a fallacy, and a contradiction to the ordinations of nature."—Dodd's Agricult. Biog.

Dillon, R. C. Lectures on the 39 Articles, Lon., 12mo. Occasional Serms. 8vo. 20 Serms. 8vo.

"Good specimens of the style of preaching suited to a polished audience."—Lon. Evangel. Mag.

Dillon, Theobald. Military Plans, 1796.

Dillon, Wentworth, Earl of Roscommon, b. in Ireland about 1633, d. 1684, was a son of James, third Earl of Roscommon, by Elizabeth Wentworth, sister of the great Earl of Strafford. He studied for some time at the Protestant University of Caen, in Normandy, under Bochart, subsequently resided at Rome, returned to Ireland, and finally settled in London, where he was made master of the horse to the Duchess of York, and married the widow of Colonel Courtney, a daughter to the Earl of Burlington. He died in 1684 of an attack of the gout, repeating with great energy at the moment of his departure two lines of his own version of Dies Irae:

"My God, my Father, and my Friend,
Do not forsake me in my end!"

Essay on Translated Verse, 1684, 4to. Works, 1700, 8vo; with those of Rochester, 1709, 8vo. New ed. of his Works, with an Essay on Poetry by the Earl of Mulgrave and Duke of Buckingham, together with Poems by Mr. Richard Duke, 1717, 8vo. And his poems will be found in Johnson's and Chalmers's Collection of the Poets. They are few in number, but have considerable merit. His Essay on Translated Verse and his trans. of Horace's Art of Poetry have been highly commended. But no praise can be higher than that which Pope allows him—of being the only moral writer of King Charles's reign:

"Unhappy Dryden! in all Charles's days, Roscommon only boasts unspotted lays."

"It was my Lord Roscommon's Essay on Translated Verse which made me uneasy till I tried whether or no I was capable of following his rules, and of reducing the speculation into practice."—Dryden: Pref. to his Miscellanies.

"In the writings of this nobleman we view the image of a mind naturally serious and solid; richly furnished and adorned with all the ornaments of art and science; and those ornaments unaffectedly disposed in the most regular and elegant order."—Fenton.

"Of Roscommon's works the judgment of the public seems to be right. He is elegant, but not great; he never labours after exquisite beauties, but he seldom falls into gross faults. His versification is smooth, but rarely righteous, and his rhymes are remarkably exact. He improved taste, if he did not enlarge knowledge, and may be mentioned among the benefactors to English literature. . . . He is perhaps the only correct writer in verse before Addison."—Dr. Johnson's Life of Roscommon.

"Roscommon not more learned than good,
With manners generous as his noble blood;

To him the wit of Greece and Rome was known,
And every author's merits but his own."—Pope.

"Roscommon fills with elegant remark
His verse as elegant; unspotted lines
Flow from a mind unspotted as themselves."—

Hurd's Village Curate.

Dillwyn, Lewis W. Synopsis of the Brit. Confrævæ, Lon., 1802-09, 4to. Botanist's Guide through England and Wales; by D. Turner and L. W. D. Cat. of Plants near Dover; Trans. Linn. Soc., 1802. Cat. of recent shells, 1817, 2 vols. 8vo. See LISTER, MARTIN, M.D.

Dilworth, Thomas, d. 1780. Book-Keeper's Assist., 8vo; Schoolmaster's do., 12mo. Arithmetic, 12mo; Compendium of do, 1752, 12mo. Guide to English Tongue, 1761, 12mo. These were long popular.

Dimock, Henry. Sermon, Oxf., 1783, 4to. Notes on the Psalms and Proverbs, Gloucester, 1791, 4to; do. on Genesis, Exodus, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, and the Minor Prophets, 1804, 4to.

"Almost entirely critical. . . . The work, on the whole, does credit to the learning of the author, and affords some aid in interpreting the Bible."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

Dimond, Wm., the Younger, wrote a number of poems and dramatic pieces, 1800-13. See Biog. Dramat.

Dimsdale, Thomas, Baron, M.D., 1718-1800, a celebrated inoculator for the small-pox, pub. several treatises upon the subject, 1767-81, some of which formed part of a controversy between the author and M. Lettsom. See BLAKE, JOHN. Dr. Dimsdale was created Baron of the Empire by the Empress of Russia for his success in inoculating her Majesty and the Grand Duke. See Gent. Mag., lxxi., lxxxviii., 209, 669.

Dine, Wm. Poems on several occasions, 1771, 8vo.

Dinely, Sir John. Methods to get Husbands. Measure in Words and Syllables, 1793, 8vo.

Dingley, Robert, 1619-1659, a Puritan divine, Rector of Brixton. Spiritual Taste described, Lon., 1649, 8vo. Deputation of Angels, 1654, 8vo. Divine Optics, 1655, 8vo. Thunder, 1658, 12mo.

Dingley, Robert. Gems and Precious Stones, particularly such as the Ancients used to engrave on; Phil. Trans., 1747.

Dingley, Somerville. App. to 14th ed. of Burns's Justice of the Peace, Lon., 1785, 8vo. Parish Officer's Companion, 1786, 12mo.

Dingley, Wm. Sermon, Oxf., 1713, 8vo.

Dinmore, Richard. English Jacobins, 1796, 8vo.

Dinnies, Mrs. Anna Peyre, a daughter of Judge Shackelford of South Carolina, was married in 1830 to Mr. John C. Dinnies, then of St. Louis, now of New Orleans. Mrs. Dinnies has contributed largely to the periodicals of the day under the signature of "Moina." In 1846 she pub. in a vol., entitled The Floral Year, "one hundred compositions arranged in twelve groups to illustrate that number of bouquets gathered in the different months."

"Her pieces celebrating the domestic affections are marked by unusual grace and tenderness, and some of them are worthy of the most elegant poets."—Dr. R. W. Griswold: Female Poets of America, q. v. for specimens of her compositions.

"The holy fire of poetry burns pure and bright in her own heart, and she cherishes it to illuminate and bless her own hearth."—Mrs. Hale's Woman's Record.

Dinsdale, Joshua. Sermon, 1740, 8vo.

Dinsmore, Robert, b. 1757, in Windham, N.H. Incidental Poems, accompanied with Letters and a few Select Pieces, mostly Original, &c.; with a Sketch of the Author's Life, Haverhill, Mass., 1828.

Dinwoodie, Robertus. De Morbis Spontaneis ex Acido Humore oriundus, Lugd. Bat., 1730, 4to.

Dirom, Alex., Major, &c. A Narrative of the Campaign in India, Lon., 1793, 4to.

"A very amusing and entertaining detail of the operations which closed the late Indian war in 1792."

Corn Laws; with a Supp. by W. Mackie, 1796, 4to. Plans for the Defence of G. Britain and Ireland, 1797, 8vo.

Dirrill, Charles. Shakespeare's Tempest, 1797.

Disbrowe, J. Lett. to the Speaker of Parl., 1659, 4to.

Disney, Alex. Christian Holiness, 1800.

Disney, David. God's People, Edin., 1764.

Disney, John, 1677-1730, an excellent magistrate, who turned divine in 1719; Vicar of St. Mary, Nottingham, 1722. Penal Laws, Lon., 1700, 8vo. Primitive Sacra, 1701, 8vo. View of Ancient Laws against Immorality and Prophaneness, Camb., 1729, fol.: this is a new ed. of two Essays pub. 1708, '10, 8vo. Genealogy of the House of Brunswick-Lunenburg, 1714. Flora, and the Trans. of Mr. Gardiner, 3d ed., 1728, 8vo. Sermons, &c., 1711-27.

Disney, John, D.D., 1746-1816, Chaplain to Bishop Law, and Vicar of Swinderley, subsequently joined the Unitarians. He pub. many sermons, theolog. treatises, &c., 1781-1812. Memoirs of Dr. Sykes, 1785, 8vo; of Dr. Jortin, 1792, 8vo; of T. H. Hollis, 1780, 2 vols., 4to; new ed., 1808, 4to. Sermons, 1793-1816, 4 vols. 8vo.

"The style is generally clear, perspicuous, and well suited to common capacities."—British Critic.

Disney, John. Laws of Gaming, Horse Racing, &c., Lon., 1806, '09, 8vo. Abridg. of Election Law, 1812, 8vo. Acts of Parliament rel. to Co. and Bor. Elections, 1820, 8vo. 5 Letters to Sir S. Romilly, resp. the Penal Laws, 1810, 8vo. Dodson's Life of Sir M. Foster, 1812, 8vo.

Disney, John. Museum Disneianum; 3 parts, r. 4to, Lon., 1848-49. 127 Illustrations, engraved by George Measom, £4 14s. 6d. This fine collection is now in the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge, England; it has been long known and prized by the Archaeologist, and won the encomiums of Flaxman, Westmacott, Sir H. Ellis, &c.

"They are illustrated in a manner which every one must allow gives ample evidence of the learning and elegance of mind of their accomplished author."—Lon. Classical Museum, April, 1849.

"The antiquarian and the lover of the curiosities of by-gone ages will find in this book much to amuse and instruct him."—Lon. Art Journal, Sept. 1848.

Disney, Samuel. Discourses, Lon., 1788, 8vo.

Disney, W., D.D. Sermon, &c., 1790, 1800.

Disraeli, Rt. Hon. Benjamin, b. in London, 1805, is a son of Isaac Disraeli, author of the Curiousities of Literature, &c., (v. post.). When 18 years of age he visited Germany, and on his return pub. Vivian Grey, 1826, 2 vols.; 1827, continued, 3 vols.

"The history of an ambitious young man of rank, who, by dint of talent, personal advantages, and audacity, becomes the dictator of certain circles in high life, some of the recent occurrences and actors in which he has taken the liberty to describe with great freedom. Decidedly the cleverest production of the class to which it belongs."—London Magazine.

"We hail the author as a master in his art: and we may venture to appeal to the work he has produced, as at once a prognostic and accomplishment of original invention,—that rare faculty in the genius of this age."

"These volumes abound with passages not surpassed for their beauty in our literature. Delicacy and sweetness are mingled with impressive eloquence and energetic truth. The magic of the style simply consists in the emotions of the writer. He is a thinker who makes others think; and these volumes will be reperused at intervals with the delight of novelty."

"We must allow that the author has copied with considerable fidelity the tone of drawing-room life, and transmitted to us with great truth, by means of a few felicitous strokes, a number of portraits, which will easily be recognized as resemblances of living originals."—Lon. Monthly Review, July, 1826.

In 1826 Mr. Disraeli visited Italy and Greece. In 1831 he was a candidate—on the Radical side—for the borough of Wycombe, and he lost the election in two contests. He was a candidate in 1835 as a Conservative for the borough of Taunton, and fared no better than before; but in 1837 he was returned to Parliament as a Tory for the borough of Maidstone. In 1841 he was returned for Shrewsbury; in 1843 he supported Peel, but in the three following sessions was his bitter opponent and an advocate of Protection.

Upon the formation of Lord Derby's ministry in 1852, Disraeli became Chancellor of the Exchequer, and held that position for nine months. Since his retirement he has distinguished himself by parliamentary opposition to Whigs and Peelites.

Familiar with those scenes of life in which readers are the most interested, possessing a highly imaginative cast of mind and descriptive powers of no common order, it is no marvel that the author of Vivian Grey should be one of the most popular writers of his time.

We enumerate Mr. Disraeli's other productions. 2. Voyage of Capt. Popenilla, 1828. 3. The Young Duke, 1831. 4. England and France. 5. Contarini Fleming, 1833. 6. Alroy, the Wondrous Tale, and The Rise of Iskander, 1833. 7. The Revolutionary Epic; a Poem, 1834, 4to. 8. The Crisis Examined, 1834. 9. Vindication of the English Constitution, 1834. 10. Letters of Runnymede, 1836. 11. Henrietta Temple, 1836; last ed., 1857. 12. Venetia, 1837. 13. Alcaros; a Tragedy, 1839. 14. Coningsby; or, The New Generation, 1844.

"In whatever point of view we examine this work, it commands unmixt admiration. It is admirable as a novel of real life, as a picture of English society, as an exposition of political parties and principles, as a gallery of living portraits. The recommendation of such a novel to our readers would be a work of supererogation. Everybody will read it."—Quar. Journal.

15. Sibyl; or, The New Nation, 1845.

"Few will read the volumes for either the story or the plot."—Brit. Quar. Rev., II. 172.

16. Ixion in Heaven. 17. Tancred; or, The New Crusade, 1847.

"It is full of charming effects of style and fine delineations, when living characters are no longer the subjects. The descriptions of Oriental life are only to be compared with those of Anastasius or Eöthen."—Edin. Review, LXXXVI. 163.

"For our own part, we cannot see any use that is to be answered by such books as Tancred. It is as dumb as the poor choked hunchback in the Arabian Nights, when we ask what his business is. There are no characters in it. There is no dramatic interest, none of plot or incident. . . . Moralists tell us, that every man is bound to sustain his share in the weight of the world's sorrows and trials, and we honestly feel as if we had done our part by reading Tancred."—J. R. Lowell, in North Amer. Review, LXV. 225.

18. Lord George Bentinck, a Polit. Biog., 5th ed., 1852. "In this most interesting volume Mr. Disraeli has not only added to his reputation, but we verily believe must increase his influence even as a politician."—Dubl. Univ. Magazine.

"This biography cannot fail to attract the deep attention of the public. We are bound to say, that as a political biography, we have rarely, if ever, met with a book more dextrously handled, or more replete with interest."—Blackwood's Magazine.

An ed. of his works was pub. in 1853; and the last ed., in 10 vols. p. 8vo., comprising Nos. 1, 3, 5, 6, 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, 17, supra, appeared in 1857.

We are also indebted to Mr. Disraeli for a new ed. of Mr. Isaac Disraeli's valuable Commentaries on the Life and Reign of King Charles I., 1851, 2 vols. 8vo.; and he is now (1858) engaged in editing a new uniform ed. of his father's Works, with a Memoir and Notes.

"The years between Vivian Grey and Tancred have not been spent idly by Mr. Disraeli. He has written many works of fiction, all, we believe, successful, and some of them among the best of their time: some verse. In which he has rather tried than exercised his powers; and political essays, anonymous, but acknowledged, in which the thing to be said was evidently much less valued than the manner of saying it. The Adventures of Captain Popenilla deserve to be remembered as an admirable adaptation of Guilliver to later circumstances; and the Wondrous Tale of Alroy is a most imaginative attempt to naturalize in our language that rhymed and asonant prose which has so great a charm for Eastern ears, but which with us will scarcely win more admirers than have been gained by the attempts at English hexameters."—Edin. Review, LXXXVI. 139.

See a Critical Biog. of Mr. Disraeli by G. H. Francis, Lon., 1852, 12mo.

Disraeli, Isaac, 1766–1848, father of the preceding, and son of a Venetian merchant of Jewish extraction, was a native of Enfield, near London. He was educated at Amsterdam and Leyden, and travelled for some time in various parts of the Continent. Inheriting a handsome fortune, which gave him the command of his time, and possessing a strong attachment to literary investigations, we need not be surprised that this gentleman contributed so much valuable matter to the literature of his age. Two interesting letters of the young aspirant for literary honours and usefulness will be found in the Gent. Mag.: they are addressed to the Rev. Dr. Vicesimus Knox, and bear the date of 1786. In December of the same year he pub. in the Gent. Mag., Remarks on the Biographical Accounts of the late Samuel Johnson, LL.D., with an attempt to vindicate his character from late misrepresentations, signed I. D. I.

The youthful author made some attempts at poetry, but soon satisfied himself that he was not to look for distinction in this sphere. In 1790 he pub. A Defence of Poetry, with a Specimen of a New Version of Telemachus, 4to, and in 1803 a volume of Narrative Poems, 4to. Some of his poetical effusions will be found in the Gent. Mag., lxxi. 446, and in the vol. entitled The Claims of Literature.

Curiosities of Literature, vol. i., 1791; vol. ii., 1793; 2d ed., 1794, 8vo.; subsequently enlarged to 3 vols., (3d vol., 1817); 2d series, 1823. The later impressions were enlarged and improved; the 12th ed. was pub. in 1841, and the 14th in 1850. A Dissertation on Anecdotes, 1793, 8vo. Essay on the Manners and Genius of the Literary Character, 1795, 8vo. Miscellanies; or Literary Recreations, 1796, 8vo. Vaurien, a Satirical Novel, 1797; anon. Romances, 1799, 8vo. Flim Flams; or the Life of My Uncle, &c., 1805, 3 vols. 12mo. Calamities of Authors, 1812, '13, 2 vols. 8vo. Quarrels of Authors, 1814, 3 vols. 8vo. Inquiry into the Literary and Political Character of King James the First, 1816, 8vo. Commentaries on the Life and Reign of King Charles I., 1828–31, 5 vols. 8vo.; and a sequel. Eliot, Hampden, and Pym, 1832. The Genius of Judaism, 1833, p. 8vo. Amenities of Literature, 1841, 8vo. This work was intended as part of an extensive survey of English Literature, but partial blindness, induced by long-continued application, prevented the completion of this praiseworthy design.

But Mr. Disraeli did enough to entitle him to the lasting gratitude of posterity. No lover of letters, old or young, should be without the following volumes:

Curiosities of Literature, new ed., with Life, Lon., 1851, r. 8vo. An edit. in 3 vols. 8vo, with Life of the Author by his son, (see DISRAELI, Rr. HON. BENJAMIN); new ed., with Life by his son, Bost., 1858, 4 vols. 8vo. Miscellanies of Literature; consisting of: 1. Literary Miscellanies; 2. Calamities of Authors; 3. Quarrels of Authors; 4. Character of James I.; 5. The Literary Character, 1840, r. 8vo. Amenities of Literature; 2d ed., 1842, 3 vols. 8vo. The Life and Reign of Charles I.; a new ed., revised by B. Disraeli, Esq., 1851, 2 vols. 8vo. Our author pub. many articles in the Gent. Mag., and was a contrib. to Nichols's Lit. Anec.

In 1837 Mr. Bolton Corney pub. a vol. entitled Curiosities of Literature Illustrated, in which grave charges are adduced against Mr. Disraeli's literary character. We have already referred to this vol., (see CORNEY, BOLTON), and shall not here enter into any examination of the justice of these imputations.

We conclude with the quotation of some opinions upon Mr. Disraeli's literary merits.

Calamities of Authors.

"The middle of the book is much better than the two ends: it is one of those works which are designed for the breakfast-table and the sofa, and is so well adapted for its purpose, that he who takes it up will not readily lay it down. The matter is as amusing as any lover of light reading can desire, and of such a desultory kind that a comment might easily be made as extensive as the text."—ROBERT SOUTHBY, in Lon. Quar. Review, VIII. 93, 1812.

"That it will tend to melliorate the condition of authors, or deter a single young man, of scribbling propensities, from rushing into a profession so unprofitable, is rather to be hoped than expected."—British Critic, xlii. 12.

Commentaries on the Life and Reign of Charles the First, vols. iii. and iv., 1830.

"Mr. Disraeli seems not to have considered how much easier it is to accumulate great masses of materials than to impart to them a harmonious form. Almost any artist in marble can imitate the face; but to give it the divine art of life belongs only to a Canova or a Chantrey.

"We do not know how we can better convey to the reader our opinion of these volumes than by comparing them to the fragments of a broken mirror, reflecting an infinity of small objects. We perceive no master hand selecting the more precious materials, and disposing them according to a felicitous design."—Lon. Monthly Review, cxxiii. 195, 1830.

"By far the most important work upon the important age of Charles I. that modern times have produced. . . The well-known spirit of research of the author, and his acquaintance with the sources of secret history, have produced a work which we hesitate not to call indispensable for all desirous of forming an accurate judgment of the period of history it embraces."—Lon. Quar. Rev.

"The present is another delightful book added to the former productions of this esteemed writer, full not merely of his usual pleasant gossip of the olden time, but of curious personal political history. It is calculated to throw an impartial light upon the leading events in the reign of the first Charles—a reign more resembling a romantic tale, or a tragic drama, than almost any period which could be selected out of the history of any nation."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

New Series of the Curiosities of Literature, 1823, 3 vols. "We fear not to say, that no man who has perused these volumes attentively, can fail to be a great, a very great deal more knowing than he was when he began; and that the fault must be entirely his own, if he be not also a great deal wiser."—Blackwood's Magazine, xlii, 163, 1823.

"The numerous editions which have been printed of the Curiosities of Literature, amply attest the value of this instructive and amusing work on literary history and criticism."—T. H. HORN: Introduc. to Bibliography, 412.

"Mr. Dismell, from whose works the best-informed reader may learn much."—ROMAN SOUTHBY.

"His works must live in honour, and in freshness, as long as our history and literature survive, and no man will turn over their pages three hundred years hence, without saying to himself, 'This was a man of indefatigable zeal, of elegant feelings, and, above all, of lofty purity of character.'"—Blackwood's Magazine, xlii, 163, 1823.

"Mr. Dismell is and deserves to be a popular writer: his sentiments are liberal; his topics are various; his illustrations display command of reading; and his style is lively and poignant. Few writers instruct so amusingly and amuse so instructively."—Lon. Monthly Review.

"He is one of the most learned, intelligent, lively, and agreeable authors of our era; he has composed a series of works, which, while they shed abundance of light on the character and condition of literary men, and show us the state of genius in this land, have all the attractions for general readers of the best romances. . . I see it intimated that Dismell has the History of British Literature in contemplation; he cannot do a more acceptable service to the republic of letters, than write it."—ALLAN CUNNINGHAM: Biog. and Crit. Hist. of the Lit. of the last Fifty Years, 1853.

The distinguished author whose testimony shall conclude our article profited greatly by the works whose merit he thus handsomely acknowledges:

"That most entertaining and searching writer, Dismell, whose works in general I have read oftener than perhaps those of any other English writer whatever."—LORD BYRON.

New eda. of the Curiosities of Literature, Calamities of Authors, Quarrels of Authors, and Miscellanies, all revised, with Additional Notes, by the Rt. Hon. the Chancellor of the Exchequer, (Sir George Cornewall Lewis), are announced (1858) for immediate publication.

Disturnell, Josiah. Serm., Lon., 1791, 4to.

Ditton, Humphrey, 1675-1715, a mathematician of considerable eminence, a native of Salisbury, was elected Mathematical Master of Christ's Hospital principally by the influence of Sir Isaac Newton. Laws of Nature and Motion, Lon., 1705, 8vo. Fluxions, 1706, 8vo. Synopsis Algebraicum of Helvetius, with addita, &c., 1709. Perspective, 1712, 8vo.

"This gave the first hints of the new method afterwards enlarged upon and improved by Dr. Brook Taylor; and which was published in 1715."

Other mathemat. works, and the following theolog. treatise, which has been highly commended and trans. into several languages: A Discourse concerning the Resurrection of Jesus Christ, in three parts, with an Appendix, 1712, 8vo; 5th ed., 1740, 8vo.

"In this discourse the most solid reasoning on the subject of the resurrection will be found."—BISHOP WARREN.

"The two treatises of Humphrey Ditton and Gilbert West deserve particular attention."—Dr. Kippis's Note in Doddridge's Lectures. "He states the nature of moral evidence, and alleges, with much force, the proofs of the fact of the Saviour's resurrection."—Orme's Bib. Bib. See Biog. Brit.; Whiston's Memoirs; Gospel Mag., 1777.

Dix, Dorothea L., a zealous philanthropist, a native of Massachusetts, who has done much to ameliorate the condition of the prisoner and the lunatic, has pub. several works anonymously, among which are The Garland of Flora; Conversations about Common Things; Alice and Ruth; Private Hours; tracts for prisoners, &c.

Dix, Henry. Art of Brachygraphy, Lon., 1641, 8vo; and an edit., 1633. This system of short-hand resembles Willis's.

Dix, John. Lays of Home, Lon. Local Legends, 1839, fp. 8vo. Progress of Intemperance, 1839, ob. fol. Life of Thomas Chatterton, 1837, fp. 8vo; 1851. We have noticed this vol. under CHATTERTON, THOMAS.

Dix, John A. Resources of the City of N. York, N. York, 1827, 8vo. Decisions of the Supt. of Com. Schools, N. York, and Laws relating to C. Schools, Albany, 1837, 8vo. A Winter in Madeira, and a Summer in Spain and Florence, N. York, 1851, 12mo; 1855.

Dix, John H., M.D., of Boston, Mass. Strabismus, Phila., 1841. Morbid sensibility of the Retina, Boston, 1849, 12mo. Changes of the Blood in Disease; trans. from the French of M. Gibert, Phila., 8vo.

"The treatise of M. Gibert is elaborate, and exhibits a very good view of the relation of the blood to the morbid conditions of the system."—Western Lancet.

Dix, Thomas. Land Surveying, Lon., 1799, 8vo. Maps, 1805, 8vo. Juvenile Atlas, 1811, 4to.

Dix, Wm. S. Grain Machine, 1797, 4to. See Donaldson's Agricult. Biog., 82.

Dixon, Rev. Edmund Saul. Dovecote, &c., Lon., 1851, '53-54, 12mo. Ornamental and Domestic Poultry, 1848, '58, 12mo.

Dixon, Fletcher. Serm., &c., 1792, '93.

Dixon, Frederick. Geology and Fossils of the Tertiary and Cretaceous Formations of Sussex; edited by Prof. Owen, assisted by Professors Forbes, Bell, Mr. Lonsdale, &c., Lon., 1850, r. 4to. This valuable work contains much general information respecting the geology of England.

Dixon, Capt. George. Voyage round the World, but more particularly to the N. W. Coast of America, 1785-88, Lon., 1789, 4to. Voyage of Meares, 1790, 4to; further, do., 1791, 4to. Navigator's Assistant, 1791, 12mo.

Dixon, Henry. Mora. Essays, s. l. et c.

Dixon, John. Letters on Fisheries, 1802, 4to.

Dixon, Joseph, M.D. Con. to Med. Com., 1785.

Dixon, Joseph, D.D., R.C. Archbishop of Armagh. A General Introduc. to the Sacred Scriptures; repub., Baltimore, 1853, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Dr. Dixon has given us the first Catholic Introduction to Scripture which has appeared in our language, and has performed his task in a manner that reflects high credit on the office which he holds, and the place in which he occupies it."—Dublin Review.

Dixon, Joshua, M.D. The Literary Life of Wm. Brownrigg, M.D., 1801, 8vo.

Dixon, Joshua. Church Catechism Illustrated, 6th ed., Lon., 1841, 18mo. It contains 4000 Scripture references, and is an invaluable assistant to the Sunday-school teacher. Repub. in Boston. Revised and adapted to the Liturgy of the Church in America by Rev. George A. Smith.

Dixon, R. Law relative to Title Deeds and other Documents, Lon., 1826, 2 vols. 8vo. New Code relating to Real Property, 1827, 8vo.

Dixon, Richard. Serm., 1812, 4to.

Dixon, Robert, D.D. Consanguinity and Affinity, Lon., 1674, 8vo. Nature of the two Testaments, 1676, fol.

Dixon, Robert. Canidia, or the Witches, a (Poetical) Rhapsody in five parts, Lon., 1682, '83, 4to.

Dixon, Robert. Norfolk Scenery, 1810, '11, 4to.

Dixon, Roger. Consultum Sanitatus; a Directory to Health, Lon., 1663, 12mo. Advice to the Poor, 1645, 4to.

Dixon, Thomas. See DICKSON.

Dixon, William. Vegetable Balls Found in a Lake in Yorkshire; Phil. Trans., 1751.

Dixon, William. Distillation from Corn, 1811, 8vo.

Dixon, Wm. Hepworth, of the Inner Temple, b. 1821, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, settled in London in 1846, and soon became known by his writings in periodical works. Appointed editor of the Athenaeum in 1853. John Howard and the Prison-World of Europe, Lon., 1850, 12mo; 3d ed., 1850, 12mo; 5th ed., 1854, fp.

"A Life of Howard was certainly wanted, and our author has proved himself competent to execute the task."—Lon. Athenaeum.

"Adventures more extraordinary it is impossible to conceive; and they are recounted by Mr. Dixon with a succinctness, simplicity, and animation, that leave nothing to be desired. The book is more interesting than any romance."—Lon. D. News.

The London Prisons, &c., 1850, fp. 8vo.

"These volumes relate to kindred subjects; and are written by one who is in every way calculated to do justice to his theme. We only express our calm and settled conviction, when we state it as our opinion, that no works of equal interest, on the same subject, have seen the light in our day."—Lon. Evangelical Magazine.

William Penn, a Historical Biog., with an extra chapter on the "Macaulay Charges," 1851, p. 8vo; 3d ed., 1856.

"His style is good and easy. There is life in his narrative and vigour in his descriptions."—Edin. Review.

"As a biography the work has claims of no common order. Within the compass of a single volume Mr. Dixon has compressed a great variety of facts, many original, and all skillfully arranged so as to produce an authentic moral portrait of his hero. The literary merits of the volume include great research, and a narrative at once consecutive and vivid."—Lon. Athen., 1851, 346, and 1856.

Robert Blake, Admiral and General at Sea: based on Family and State Papers, 1852, 12mo; 2d ed., 1858.

"The subject is noble; and Mr. Dixon has treated it with rare vigour, spirit, and conscientiousness."—Lon. Leader.

The French in England: Both Sides of the Question on Both Sides of the Channel, 1852.

"The author wields a skilful pen, and tells his story with true historical fervour."—Lon. Genl. Mag.

Doane, Augustus Sidney, M.D., 1808-1852, a native of Boston, Mass., removed to New York in 1830, where he resided until his death. An edit. of Good's Study of Medicine. Trans. of Maygrier on Midwifery, Dupuytren's Surgery, Lugol's Scrofulous Diseases, Bayle's Descriptive Anatomy, Blandin's Topographical Anatomy, Meckel's Anatomy, Scutetten on Cholera, Ricord on Syphilis, Chausser on the Arteries, &c. Contributions to Surgery Illustrated, and to sundry medical journals. See a biographical notice of this learned physician in The International Mag., v. 427, N. York, 1852.

Doane, George Washington, D.D., LL.D., b. in Trenton, New Jersey, 1799, graduated at Union College, Schenectady, at 19; ordained Deacon by Bishop Hobart, 1821; Priest, 1823; Rector of Trinity Church, New York, for three years. In 1824 he was appointed Professor of Belles Lettres and Oratory in Washington College, Connecticut. In 1828 he resigned that office, and soon after assumed the charge of Trinity Church, Boston. In 1832 he was consecrated Bishop of the Diocese of New Jersey. He pub. a collection of poetical pieces in 1824, entitled Songs by the Way, and he has from time to time given to the world a number of theological treatises, discourses, &c. A collection of his Sermons and Charges was pub. in London in 1842, 8vo.

Some of Bishop Doane's poems have been greatly admired.

Dobbin, Orlando T., LL.D., Trinity College, Dublin. Tentamen Anti-Straussianum: The Antiquity of the Gospels asserted on Philological Grounds in Refutation of the Mythic Scheme of Dr. David Frederick Strauss: an Argument, Lon., 1845, 8vo.

"A work in no common degree acute, learned, eloquent, and what is rarer still in a region so often traversed—original."—Church of Ireland Mag.

"It leaves Dr. Strauss without a loophole whereby to escape, and establishes most unanswerably the antiquity of the Gospels."—Church and State Gazette.

"Complete, conclusive, and unanswerable."—Christ. Examiner.

Dobbs, Arthur, d. 1765, Governor of N. Carolina, 1753. Trade and Improvement of Ireland, Dublin, 1729, 8vo.

"This essay contains some interesting statements respecting the trade and population of Ireland, and its state at the period to which it refers."—McCulloch's Lit. of Brit. Econ.

Captain Middleton's Defence, 1744, 8vo. Countries adjoining to Hudson's Bay, 1744, 8vo. Several tracts were elicited by this work. See Lowndes's Bibl. Man., and Rich's Bibl. Amer. Nova, anno 1754.

Dobbs, Francis. The Patriot King, a Trag., 1774, 8vo. Universal Hist., Lon., 1787, 4 vols. 12mo; Summary of do., 1809, 9 vols. 8vo. Other works.

Dobbs, Richard. Sermon, 1762, 8vo.

Dobel, D. Primitive Christianity propounded; or an Essay to revive the ancient mode or manner of Preaching the Gospel, Lon., 1755, 8vo. Mr. Dobel insists that reading sermons is not preaching. See Lon. Monthly Rev., xii. 240, 1755.

Dobell, John. Selec. of 700 Hymns, 1812, 8vo; later eds. Baptism, 1807. Humanity, 1812, 8vo.

Dobell, Peter. Travels in China, Siberia, and Kamtschatka, Lon., 2 vols. 8vo.

"Full of curious facts, of new and interesting accounts of countries known to us very imperfectly, and in many particulars not known at all."—Lon. Spectator.

Dobie, A. English styles for Scotch Law practice, Lon., 1824, 8vo.

Dobney, J. T. Devotion for Schools, 3d ed., Lon., 1846.

Dobson's Dry Bobe, 1610, 4to. A copy is among Capell's Shaksperiana at Trinity College, Cambridge.

Dobson, John. 1. Dr. Pierce. 2. Sermon, 1663, '70.

Dobson, Joshua. Sermon, 1747, 8vo.

Dobson, Matthew, M.D., d. 1784. Medical Comment on Fixed Air, Lon., 1779, 8vo; 2d ed. by W. Falconer, M.D., 1785, 8vo. Con. to Med. Obs. and Inq., 1778; Phil. Trans., 1774-81.

Dobson, Robert, M.D. Profes. treatises, 1770, '75.

Dobson, Mrs. Susannah, wife of Matthew Dobson, M.D. Life of Petrarch, from the French of the Abbé de Sade, Lon., 1775, 2 vols. 8vo; Dublin, 1777, 12mo; Lon., 1840, 8vo. Literary Hist. of the Troubadours, Lon., 1779, 8vo; 1807; Ancient Chivalry, 1784, 8vo; both from the French of St. Palaye. Trans. of Petrarch's View of Human Life, 1791, 8vo. A Dialogue on Friendship and Society.

Dobson, W. S. R. Hooker's Works, Lon., 1825, 2 vols. 8vo.

Dobson, Wm. Prussian Campaign; a Poem, 1758.

Dobson, Wm. Kunopodia; a Practical Essay on Breaking or Training the English Spaniel or Pointer, 1814, 8vo.

Dobyns, John. Surgical con. to Phil. Trans., 1728.

Dochant, George. Catechism, Lon., 1653, 12mo.

Docharty, G. B. Institutes of Algebra, New York, 1852, 12mo.

"Professor Docharty presents the topics of Algebra in a natural order, and with great clearness of statement throughout. We can commend this book to the careful examination of teachers."—Methodist Quarterly Review.

Institutes of Arithmetic, 1854, 12mo.

Dockirray, Thomas. Serms., 1743, '54.

Docultree, Amos. Game of Rowlet, Lon., 1774.

Docura, Ann. Apostate Conscience, Lon., 1700.

Dod, Charles Roger, 1793-1855, originally intended for the bar. For thirty-seven years he was connected with the journals of London, and for twenty-three years he was connected with the Times newspaper. He superintended the reports of the debates in Parliament, and wrote the memoirs of the most distinguished persons who died during that time, for the same journal. The Parliamentary Companion, 1855: 24th year. Peerage, Baronetage, and Knightage, 1855: 15th year.

"The best publication of this kind that we have seen."—Westminster Rev.

Annual Biography. Electoral Facts, 1832-52; new ed., 1853. Manual of Dignities and Precedence, 1842, '44.

Dod, H. Psalms and Songs, Lon., 1620, 8vo.

Dod, John, 1547-1645, Rector of Fawesley, 1624, is generally called The Decalogist, from his Comment on the Ten Commandments. Although a Puritan, he was a zealous Royalist. Expos. of the Ten Commandments by Dod and Robt. Cleaver, Lon., 1606, 4to; 1626; 8th ed., 1632. Serms., 1614, '18, '21. Expos. of the Book of Proverbs, by Dod, Robt. Cleaver, and Wm. Flinde, 1606, 4to; 1611. Expos. of the Lord's Prayer, 1635, fol.

"John Dod was by nature a witty, by industry a learned, by grace a godly, divine."—Fuller's Worthies of Cheshire.

"He was in learning excelled by few; and in unaffected piety by none. He was particularly eminent for his knowledge of the Hebrew language, which he taught the famous John Gregory of Christ Church, in Oxford."—GRANGER.

Dod, John. Sermon, Lon., 1777, 8vo.

Dod, Rev. Marcus. On the Incarnation of the Eternal Word. New ed., with a Notice by the late Rev. Thomas Chalmers, D.D.

Dod, Pierce, M.D. Profes. treatises, 1729-43.

Dod, Samuel. Sermon, Lon., 1714, 4to.

Dod, Thomas. Sermon, Oxon., 1717, 8vo.

Dodd, A. Charles. The Contrast; strictures on Dr. Price's Addit. Observ. on Civil Liberty, &c., Lon., 1777, 8vo.

"A very illiberal and indecent performance."—Lon. Monthly Review.

Dodd, C. E. Law of Elections, Lon., 1826, 8vo.

Dodd, Charles, or Richard Tootle, d. about 1745, a Roman Catholic priest and historian, residing at Harvington, Worcestershire, was the author of The Church Hist. of England, 1500-1688, the labour of thirty years. It bears the imprint of Brussels, (1737, '39, '42, 3 vols. fol.) but is supposed to have been printed at Wolverhampton, Staffordshire. This work was formerly entirely neglected, but within the last few years has been sold for as high as £10 10s. The publication of a new ed. by the Rev. M. A. Tierney, with Notes, Additions, and Continuation, to be comprised in fourteen vols. 8vo, was commenced in 1839, and its completion was promised by the end of 1842. It is now thirteen years later, (1855,) and but 5 vols. have appeared, 1839-43, vol. 5th being supplemental to Dodd, and written by Mr. Tierney. Whence the delay? The publication price of the new ed. was 12s., small paper; 21s., large paper, per vol.

"A book of rare occurrence, and interesting chiefly to the curious in biography. It was published as an antidote to Burnet, and is avowedly written as a defence of the Roman Catholics. The author was a caustic and not unqualified writer. His love of ridicule is apparent; his reflections upon some of our early Reformers are sometimes both unfounded and severe."—Dobson's Library Companion.

"It is very rare and curious. Much of our own domestic history is interwoven in that of the fugitive papists, and the materials of this work are frequently drawn from their own archives, preserved in their seminaries at Douay, Valladolid, &c., which have not been accessible to Protestant writers. Here I discovered a copious nomenclature of eminent persons, and many literary men, with many unknown facts, both of a private and public nature. It is useful at times to know whether an English author was a Catholic."—Dierack's Quarrels of Authors.

In the new edit. the biographical part is not intermixed with the history, but is intended to form a distinct series in the vols. after the 5th. In 1741 appeared A Specimen of Amendments candidly proposed to the compiler of a work which he calls The Church History of England, 1500-1688; by Clerophilus Alethea. This elicited An Apology for the Church History of England, 1500-1688; being a reply to a quarrelsome libel entitled A Specimen of Amendments, &c., 1742, 8vo. Dodd also wrote Certamen utriusque Ecclesie, &c., 1724, 4to. See the Somers Collection of Tracts, vol. xiii.

Dodd, George. Days at the Factories, Lon., 1843, 8vo. Manufactories of Great Britain, 1844, '45, 6 vols. 18mo.

"A book eminently suited to the times. . . . It should be read by all who would know how it is that England has acquired the character of being the greatest workshop of the world."—British Friend of India Magazine.

The Curiosities of Industry and the Applied Sciences, 1852, 8vo.

Dodd, James A., b. 1807, in Virginia, a self-made mathematician, was chosen Prof. of Mathematics, Nat. Philos., and Astronomy, in the Centenary Coll., Miss., 1841; in Transylvania Univ., 1846; President pro tem., 1849-55. Elementary and Practical Arithmetic. High School Arithmetic. Elementary and Practical Algebra. Algebra for High Schools and Colleges. Elements of Geometry and Mensuration. Contrib. to Quarterly Review of the Meth. E. Church South, &c.

Dodd, James S. Satirical Lecture on Hearts, &c., 8vo. Nat. Hist. of the Herring, Lon., 1752, 8vo. Trans. of Dr. Margat's New Prac. of Physic, 1774, 12mo. Hist. of Gibraltar, 1781, 8vo.

Dodd, Mary Ann Hanmer, b. 1813, at Hartford, Connecticut, has contributed many poetical pieces of uncommon merit to The Hermethean, The Ladies' Repository, and The Rose of Sharon. A volume of her poems was pub. at Hartford in 1843. We may instance The Lament, The Mourner, To a Cricket, The Dreamer, and The Dove's Visit, as compositions of rare excellence.

Dodd, Philip Stanhope. Hints to Freshmen at the University of Cambridge, 3d ed., 1807, 12mo.

Dodd, Ralph. Cannals, Lon., 1795, 8vo. Reports, 1798, 4to. Letters, 1799. Water, 1805, 8vo. Dry Rot, 1815, 8vo.

Dodd, William, D.D., 1729-1777, a divine of the Church of England, equally noted for his great abilities and his melancholy end, was a native of Bourne, Lincolnshire, of which parish his father was vicar, and educated at Clare Hall, Cambridge. He was ordained in 1753, and soon distinguished himself as one of the most eloquent preachers in London. After various preferments, Dr. Squier, Bishop of St. David's, procured for him a collation to a prebend of Brecon, and in the same year he received the appointment of tutor to Philip Stanhope, afterwards Earl of Chesterfield. He was made one of the king's chaplains in 1764. Dodd was exceedingly fond of display, and lived in a style altogether unsuited to his moderate circumstances. Finding himself deeply involved in debt, he determined to make a bold effort to secure the rectory of St. George's, Hanover Square, which had fallen to the disposal of the crown. To her great surprise, the lady of Lord Chancellor Apsley received an anonymous letter offering to present her with £3000 if she would obtain for Dr. Dodd the vacant parish. This insulting proposal was traced to the aspirant himself, and the king ordered his name to be struck from the list of his chaplains. In 1777 he forged the name of his former pupil, Lord Chesterfield, to a bond for £4200. Detected in this crime, he was cast into prison, tried, and convicted, and—withstanding the most strenuous efforts to save his life—executed at Tyburn on the 27th of June.

Dodd's publications—a list of which will be found in Watt's Bibl. Brit.—are numerous. We notice the following: Discourses on the Miracles and Parables of Christ, Lon., 1757, 4 vols. 8vo. Serms. to Young Men, 1772, 3 vols. 8vo; 1st Amer. ed., Phila., 1848, 24mo. An excellent work. The Visitor, Lon., 1764, 2 vols. 12mo. Comfort for the Afflicted, 4th ed., 1789, 12mo. Thoughts in Prison, in 5 parts, 1777, 8vo; many eds. Reflections on Death, 3d ed., 1769, 18mo. The Beauties of Shakspeare, 1780, 3 vols. 12mo; new ed., 1810, '16. Comment on the Old and New Test., with the Notes and Collections of John Locke, Dr. Waterland, Lord Clarendon, &c., pub. in numbers, 1765, &c.; 3 vols. fol., 1770.

"This work, as giving in general the true sense of the Scriptures, is by far the best Comment that has ever yet appeared in the English language."—Dr. ADAM CLARKE.

Perhaps this is rather extravagant. We have already noticed the reprint of this work, (6 vols. 4to, 1801-03,) with some alterations by Dr. THOMAS COKE, q. v. The name of John Locke in the title-page is an error. The notes ascribed to him were really written by Dr. RALPH CUDWORTH; see the name in the Biog. Brit., last ed.

Beauties of History, 1795, 12mo. A Common Place Book to the Holy Bible, by John Locke, Esq., revised and improved by Wm. Dodd, 1805, 4to; 1824. The authenticity of this work is questionable.

"It certainly is a very useful book."—Horne's Bibl. Bib.

For further particulars respecting Dr. Dodd, see Memoirs prefixed to his Thoughts in Prison; Hist. Mem. of his Life and Writings, by Isaac Reed, 1777, 8vo; Jones's Life of Horne; Gent. Mag., lx., 1010, '86, '77; Boswell's Life of Dr. Johnson.

Doddie, John. Associate Synod, 1800.

Doddridge, Doderidge, or Dodridge, Sir John, 1555-1628, an eminent English lawyer, was a native of Barnstaple, Devonshire, and educated at Exeter College, whence he was removed to the Middle Temple, appointed his majesty's principal sergeant at law, 1607; Judge of the Court of King's Bench, 1613. Among his works are Complete Parson, 1602; last ed., 1641, 4to. The Lawyer's Light, 1602, 4to. Hist. Account of the Estate of the Principality of Wales, Duchy of Cornwall, and Earldom of Chester, 1630, 4to.

"In this treatise, Sir John, with a great deal of industry and exactness, calculates the ancient and present revenues of the palatinate; but is not curious in clearing up its original history."—Bishop Nicolson's Eng. Hist. Lib.

English Lawyer, 1631, 4to. The Laws of Nobility, Knights, &c., Lon., 1658, 12mo. This is an enlarged ed. of Bird's Magazine of Honour. Opinion, etc. rel. to the power of Parliament, 1672, 12mo. Sheppard's Touchstone and Wentworth's Executors have been ascribed to Judge Doddridge.

Doddridge, Philip, 1702-1751, was the twentieth child of a London merchant, and lost both of his parents at an early age. His mother had been in the habit of teaching him portions of Scripture history, by means of the figured Dutch tiles of the chimney of her apartment. To such faithful instruction it was owing that we find him at the age of fourteen visiting the poor, calling their attention to the subject of personal religion, and dividing his pocket-money with the necessitous. At a private school at St. Alban's, his application and piety attracted the notice of Dr. Samuel Clarke, who kindly undertook the charge and expense of his education. In 1719 he entered the dissenting academy of John Jennings at Kibworth; and afterwards continued his studies at Hinckley in Leicestershire. He evinced great conscientiousness in declining, on account of scruples as to subscribing to the thirty-nine articles, the liberal offer of the Duchess of Bedford, to support him at the university, and procure him preferment in the church, if she should live until he had taken orders. He met with much discouragement in his efforts to qualify himself for the office of a dissenting preacher. He says:

"I waited on Dr. Edmund Calamy to beg his advice and assistance, that I might be brought up a minister, which was always my great desire. He gave me no encouragement in it, but advised me to turn my thoughts to something else. Resolving 'to follow Providence, and not force it,' he was about applying himself to the study of the law; but before deciding he sat apart one morning to earnest solicitation for divine guidance: whilst thus occupied, he received a letter from the generous Dr. Clarke, who offered to advance him to a pastoral office. Looking upon this timely offer 'almost as an answer from Heaven,' he accepted it joyfully."

In his studies, he was uncommonly diligent and methodical. At fourteen years of age he commenced keeping a diary, in which he "accounted for every hour of his time." Whilst studying Homer, he made annotations sufficient to fill a large volume; and his interleaved Bible exhibits a vast quantity of extracts and remarks, in illustration of the text, taken from the works of eminent commentators. Thus did he lay the foundation of his own admirable exposition. He was never too busy, however, to seek assistance of the Father of Lights, "without whose help all labour is ineffectual, and without whose grace all wisdom is folly." (See Dr. Johnson's prayer on commencing the Rambler.) He says:

"I found that an hour spent every morning in private prayer and meditation gave me spirit and vigour for the business of the day, and kept my temper active, patient, and calm."

Among his private papers, written about this period, was a solemn pledge to devote himself, his time, and his abilities, to the service of religion, (this he read over once a week,) and a set of rules for his general guidance. By aid of these monitors he enforced upon himself

"The necessity of early rising, of returning solemn thanks for the mercies of the night, and imploring divine aid through the business of the day; of divesting his mind, while engaged in prayer, of every thing else, either external or internal; of reading the Scriptures daily; of never trifling with a book with which he had no business; of never losing a minute of time, or incurring any unnecessary expense, so that he might have more to spend for God; of endeavouring to make himself agreeable and useful, by tender, compassionate, and friendly deportment; of being very moderate of man, and of never doubting any thing, unless he could prove that another man would be more fit than the present, or that some other more important duty required his immediate attention."

When we thus behold the foundation upon which this excellent young man began to build his character, we need not be surprised at the lofty elevation and striking beauty to which the superstructure attained. In July, 1722, in his twentieth year, he commenced preaching to a small congregation at Kibworth. Here he pursued his biblical studies, and came to have enjoyed both these and his professional labours.

"One day growth away after another and I only know that it passed pleasantly with me. I am willingly give up the charms of London, the luxury the company the popularity of it. In the secret pleasure of rational employment and self-approbation, I shun from applause and reproach, from envy and contempt, and the destructive habits of vanity and ambition."

His favorite authors in his retirement were Tillotson, Baxter, and Howe. In 1727 he was chosen assistant preacher at Market Harborough. Two years afterwards, by the solicitation of Dr. Wall, he established an academy for the education of young men designed for the ministry. Among his pupils, were Dr. Kippis, the editor of the Biographia Britannica, Dr. Hugh Farmer, author of the Essay on the Demoniacs of the New Testament, and Newton Cappa. In December, 1729, he took charge of a congregation at Northampton, and in the following March was ordained. In December, 1729, he was married to a lady named Maria. On this occasion he drew up the following rules, which we commend to all our married readers, and to all who design entering into that happy relation:

"It shall be my daily care to keep up the spirit of piety in my conversation with my wife. I recommend her to the divine blessing, to manifest an obliging tender disposition towards her, and particularly to avoid every thing which has the appearance of selfishness, to which amidst my various cares and labours, I may, in some unguarded moments, be liable."

He contracted a cold in December, 1730, whilst travelling to St. Alban's to preach a funeral sermon on Dr. Clarke. The next July he preached his last sermon. A voyage to Lisbon was recommended, but his ardent means presented an obstacle to this step. Upon this becoming known, a sturgesman of the Church of England set on foot a subscription for his relief. A large sum was raised, and Doddridge embarked on the 30th of September, 1731, the voyage proved of no benefit, and he expired at Lisbon, a fortnight after he had landed: his remains were interred in the burial-ground of the British Factory. In person he was rather above the middle height, and very slender. His manners were very easy and polite, his conversation was agreeable and at times brilliant. Like most men of decided talent, of ardent piety, and extensive usefulness, he was very fond of business, and excelled in sprightly sallies, and has been described as taking "as much delight in innocent mirth as a child," and as being "by far the most lively and amusing member of the circle in which he moved." We have referred to his habit of early rising: unless severely indisposed he quitted his bed winter and summer at five o'clock.

"I am generally employed with very short intervals from morning to night, and have seldom more than six hours to bed, yet, such is the goodness of God to me, that I seldom know what it is to be weary."

He attributes the greater part of his literary productions to his having invariably risen at five instead of seven o'clock. "A practice which if pursued for forty years, would add a fourth of that period to a man's life." Dr. Doddridge is best known as an author by his excellent Family Expositor, and his Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul. These works have been frequently reprinted, and so long as the Bible and human nature exist, must always be popular on the whole, though, like all man's works, not without imperfections.

"One part of Dr. Doddridge's Family Expositor, which must have cost him tremendous pains, was his having everywhere interwoven the text with the paraphrase, and carefully distinguished the former from the latter by the latter's character. By this method it is impossible to read the paraphrase without the text, and every one may immediately see, not only the pertinence drawn to which, any of the passages are, but also, what are the words of the original, and what merely the sense of the commentator. Nor was our author content with merely inserting the old translation, but gave an entire new version of the whole Testament, the merit and usefulness of which will in many respects be acknowledged. This translation was extracted from the paraphrase, and published in 1736, in two volumes 12mo, with some alterations and improvements by the editor, together with an introduction, and a number of very short notes." Dr. Kippis, in Reg. Brit.

Dr. Isaac Watts thus speaks of our author, in a letter to Rev. Mr. Leaguerville of Amsterdam, who wrote to Dr. Watts respecting a translation of some of Doddridge's works in the Dutch tongue:

"I have no need to give you a large amount of his knowledge, in the manner, in which I commend him to be great and as to the doctrine of divinity and the gospel, not any man of greater skill than himself, and has to be his model. If you have read that same of him, the Rise and Progress, &c., you will be of

For the latest production Doddridge rears of many eminent divines, and the Duchess thus writes to the author respecting it:

"I say with truth assure you, that I never was with any thing I ever met with as with that book to any 100 I had given one to every servant to a

The Family Expositor has been translated every European language. At St. John's bridge, the Evidence of Christianity has as a text book.

"No single work is equal to the admirable one by Doddridge."—Scotsman

"And first, as an universal storehouse, treasure in the midst of his theological pursuits, Doddridge (On the Principal Subjects in Pneumatology, Ethics, &c.) of Durham's Charge

"I sincerely know a more useful book."—Dr. P. Moore

The Practical Discourses on Regeneration are distinguished by the antithesis and excellent character of statement and observations throughout.—Dr. Ralph Wadsworth

Sermons on the Power and Grace of Christ

"I have read them with much pleasure and am are satisfied."—Dr. Wadsworth

"After all, the young composer may find the of Dr. Doddridge more improving models. He c now and scribble phrenology."—Dr. E. Williams

"His Family Expositor is a masterly work. The mastery is in the list of books recommended by and Tenth, and almost every other theological many of the Four Gospels is acknowledged to I great judgment, independently of the very val and notes that accompany it."—F. E. Hodge

Mr. Orme remarks

"Of a book so well known and so generally Family Expositor it is scarcely necessary to speak, adapted to the object which the author had this no book can be read in a Christian family with the translation frequently serves the soul the paraphrase is often too diffuse, and in the no discover an ability to prove a fine thought but the sacred writer. His Harmony which was his labour, is often unsatisfactory has too many tran not so judicious in the arrangement as Blackrig

"Of all our author's writings, the Family Exp important and valuable."—Dr. Kippis

Dr. Dibdin declares that

"The Family Expositor should find a place up upon the table of every minister: where the most thin are enjoyed. Doddridge's heart was made the feelings of our nature, and was wholly devoted of such a soul. Whatever he did, he appears to glory of that."

"His character and writings will long continue and honored by all who prefer scriptural truth time."—Monks

Dr. Francis Hart, Regius Professor at Oxford to the excellence of the Rise and Archdeacon Wingham wrote thirteen pre founded upon that work.

"To reading the New Testament, I receive Family Expositor as an impartial interpreter and other expositions and commentaries ought to be to the house of their respective authors, for the learner such an elegance of expression, system and copiousness of erudition, but I have of copies to many advantages, whether you regard reason, the fulness and perspicuity of his version of his general and historical information, the doctrinal contents, or lastly the purity and part of his moral and religious applications. He has done to have done, ample use of the monumental him end, to the explanation of grammatical d profited much more from the philological writers: least than could almost have been expected b an undertaking in the Family Expositor."—Rev. of Durham

Doddridge is now my prime favourite among

Rev. Robert Hall's Letters.

"He was author of one of the finest addresses in language. It is in Orime's life of him. The sub motto, Domine exornas hominem, which, in its prin is, to be sure, not very suitable to a Christian div phrased it thus "Live while you live, the Harmony would And when the pleasure of the present. Live while you live, the sacred Promise And give to God each moment as it fls Lord, to my laws let both called by: I live in pleasure, when I live to thee."

Dr. Doddridge's works are 1. Sermon on Amos ii. 1723, 8vo. 2. Ten Sermons on Grace of Christ; or, Evidence of his gl 1734, 12mo. 3. Absurdity and Wickedness for Conscience's sake; a Sermon on Luke ix. 5

4. Sermon on 2 Cor. iv. 5, 1737, 8vo. 5. Sermon on 2 Kings iv. 26, 1737, 8vo. 6. Sermon, Northampton, 1738. 7. Discourse at the Interment of the Rev. J. Newton, Lon., 1741, 8vo. 8. The Evil and Danger of Neglecting the Souls of Men; a Sermon, Lon., 1742, 8vo. 9. Compassion to the Sick Recommended and Urged; a Sermon on Pa. xli. 1-3. 10. On the Flight of the Rebels; a Sermon on Luke i. 74, 75, 1745, 8vo. 11. Four Sermons on the Religious Education of Children, 1743, 8vo. 12. Funeral Sermon on 2 Kings iv. 26, 1737, 8vo. 13. Eighteen Practical Sermons on Regeneration; to which are added 2 Sermons on Salvation by Grace through Faith. 14. On occasion of a second Shock of an Earthquake; a Sermon on Matt. xi. 23, 24, 1750, 8vo. 15. Tracts, 1761, 3 vols. 12mo. 16. Of the Evidences of Christianity, in Answer to Christianity not Founded on Argument, Lon., 1742, '43, 8vo. 17. Three Letters to the Author of Christianity not Founded on Argument, Lon., 1743, 8vo. 18. A Sermon on the Heroic Death of Colonel James Gardiner, Lon., 1746, 8vo. 19. Some remarkable passages in the Life of Col. James Gardiner, from his birth, January 10, 1687, to his death, in the Battle of Prestonpan, September 21, 1745; with an Appendix relating to the ancient family of the Munroes of Fowls, 8vo. Several editions. 20. The Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul, Lon., 1750, 12mo. The most popular of his detached works. It has gone through numerous editions, and has been translated into the Dutch, German, Danish, and French languages. 21. A Funeral Sermon, Lon., 1750, 8vo. 22. Hymns, Salop, 1755, 8vo. 23. The Family Expositor; or a Paraphrase and Version of the New Testament, with Critical Notes and Practical Improvements, Lon., 1760-62, 6 vols. 4to. The same, with his Life by Dr. Kippis, Lon., 1808, 4 vols. 4to, or 6 vols. 8vo. New ed., 1840, 4 vols. 8vo; and 1839, imp. fol. This masterly work has been often reprinted. An abridgment of it was published by the late Rev. S. Palmer, entitled The Family Expositor abridged, according to the plan of its Author; containing his Version, and the most useful Explanatory Notes, with Practical Reflections at the end of each Section entire, 2 vols. 8vo. 24. Course of Lectures, published after his Death, by the Rev. Samuel Clarke, 1763, 4to. Republished by Kippis, with very extensive and valuable additions, Lon., 1794, 2 vols. 8vo. 25. Of a Person who had no Ear for Music, naturally singing several times when in a delirium, Phil. Trans., 1747. 26. Of a Wether giving Suck to a Lamb; and of a Monstrous Lamb, Ib.

We also notice: Memoirs of his Life, Character, and Writings, Salop, 1766, 8vo. His whole works by D. Williams and the Rev. E. Parsons, Leeds, 1802, 10 vols. r. 8vo, £6. Sermons to Young Persons; new edit., Lon., 1803, 12mo. Sermons, 1826, 4 vols. 8vo. Private Correspondence and Diary, 1829, 5 vols. 8vo.

"These volumes must rank with our first English classics, and must go down to posterity as specimens of the English language rarely surpassed."—Lon. Evangel. Mag.

Miscellaneous Works, with an Introduction. Essay by the Rev. T. Morell, 1839, imp. 8vo. See also The Life and Labours of Doddridge by John Stoughton, Lon., 1851, 12mo; 2d ed., 1852. We do not feel willing to conclude this article without quoting a few more testimonies to the value of the writings of this truly excellent man:

"All Dr. Doddridge's addresses to his fellow-sinners breathed at once the ardour of piety, and the tenderness of benevolence, by which that spirit, under the guidance of a sound and divinely-enlightened understanding, was ever animated."—DR. WARDLAW.

"Clearness of thought, unaffected learning, fidelity to the souls of men, and deep and chastened devotion, characterize the sermons of Dr. Doddridge."

"The Family Expositor is a very judicious work. It has long been highly esteemed, and is worthy of all the credit it has among religious people."—DR. ADAM CLARKE.

"In the critical part of the New Testament, I know of none better than Hammond or Whitby; and for the harmony, commentary, and short notes, Doddridge will prove most useful."—KNOWLES.

"It is unnecessary to speak its praise. Hervey thought he occasionally leaned to the trimming side; but who is unexceptionable! Perhaps there is more feebleness than positive trimming in his doctrinal statement."—Bickersteth's Christian Student.

The same writer thus refers to the Course of Lectures on Pneumatology, Ethics, and Divinity, with Lectures on Preaching:

"Much may be learned from this learned and devout writer: he has many judicious criticisms on different authors; but there is a tone of excessive candour, bordering upon Latitudinarianism, especially in giving too great weight to objections, when treating upon the Evidences and Doctrines. His criticisms on theological writers in his preaching Lectures, not duly respecting Evangelical Doctrine, fall in discrimination. See his Criticisms on Tillotson, Barrow, Atertbury."—BICKERSTETH, ubi supra.

Sir James Stonehouse remarks, in his Correspondence, that Doddridge's three Sermons on the Evidences of the Gospel, and his Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul, particularly, were of great use in removing his prejudices against Christianity, and forming him to the love and practice of religion.

We may give another instance of the benefit resulting from the Sermons on the Evidences of Christianity:

"It gave the author singular pleasure to know that these sermons were the means of convincing two gentlemen, of a liberal education and distinguished abilities, that Christianity was true and divine; and one of them became a zealous preacher, and an ornament of the religion he had once denied and despised."—Middleton's Evangel. Biog.

The Sermons on the Evidences are pub. by the London Tract Society for 3d. McIlvaine's Evidences of Christianity is one of the best manuals on the subject, and has been the means of convincing many skeptics of the truth of the Gospel. Such books should be widely circulated among unbelievers, or those who have lingering doubts upon this all-important subject.

"Doddridge was a burning and shining light which, in days of more than ordinary coldness, Divine Providence was pleased to enkindle, in order to impart both warmth and illumination to the professed Christian world."—Boswor. Jass.

Dodds, James. A Century of Scottish History, 8vo. "It displays much judgment and discrimination."—Witness.

Dodgson, Charles, D.D., d. 1795, Bishop of Ossory, 1765; trans. to Elphin, 1775. Serms., 1761, '68.

Dodginton, George Hubb, Lord Melcombe, 1691-1762, a statesman of considerable notoriety in his day, is best known by his Diary, 1749-61, pub. by Mr. H. P. Wyndham, Lon., 1785, 8vo; 1823.

"The Diary of Dodginton, Lord Melcombe, must by no means be neglected, for by its means we are allowed a slight glance into the intrigues and cabals of the times. It is generally amusing, and sometimes important."—Prof. Smyth's Lect. on Mod. Hist.

"An admirable picture of himself, and an instructive lesson for future statesmen."—Edin. Review.

Dodginton pub. some poetical and political pieces; see Park's Walpole's R. and N. Authors.

"Mr. Dodginton has written some very pretty love-verses, which have never been published."—LORD LYTTELTON: Note to an Eclogue entitled Hope, inscribed to Dodginton.

Dodginton, J. Govt. of France, Lon., 1657.

Dodritius, J. Acta in Comitibus Parliamentaribus, Londini, Anno MDXCIII, Contra Catholicos et Puritanos, 1593, 8vo.

Dods, John Bovee, b. 1795, in the State of N. York. 1. Thirty Sermons, 8vo. 2. Philosophy of Mesmerism. 3. Philosophy of Electrical Psychology. 4. Immortality Triumphant, &c. 5. Spirit Manifestations Examined and Explained, N. Y., 1854.

"No one whose mind is given to an investigation of the matter, should neglect the perusal of this volume. It is both curious and instructive."—GEO. RIPLEY.

Dods, Mrs. Margaret. The Cook and Housewife's Manual, 10th ed., Edin., 1853, 12mo.

"A valuable compendium of culinary knowledge."—Edinburgh Courant.

"The book is really most excellent miscellaneous reading."—Blackwood's Magazine.

Dodsley, Robert, 1703-1764, a bookseller and author of considerable note, a native of Mansfield, Nottinghamshire, was an apprentice to a tradesman, and subsequently a footman. In 1732 he pub. a volume of poems under the title of The Muse in Livery, or the Footman's Miscellany. His next essay in literature was a dramatic piece entitled The Toy Shop, the MS. of which he sent to Pope for his perusal and opinion. The great poet saw the merit of the production, recommended the piece to Mr. Rich, the manager of Covent-garden Theatre, and became henceforth the author's friend and patron. Dodsley now determined to set up a bookstore, and his success proved that he had not been too sanguine in his expectations. He soon gave to the world two more dramatic pieces, The King and the Miller of Mansfield, and The Blind Beggar of Bethnal Green. In 1741 he commenced the Weekly Register, of which 24 numbers were pub. A Select Collection of Old Plays, edited by Thomas Coxeter, 1744, 12 vols. 12mo; 2d ed., by Isaac Reed, 1780, 12 vols. cr. 8vo. Many copies of this ed. were destroyed by fire. A few copies, large paper, were printed, which have been sold at very high prices. New ed., with addit. Notes and Corrections by Isaac Reed, O. Gilchrist, and the editor, J. P. COLLIER, (q. v.) 1825-27, 12 vols. cr. 8vo. This collection contains sixty of the best and scarcest of the old English Plays, beginning with the Moralities or Mysteries. Much valuable information is interspersed throughout the volumes.

"We may here perceive how this noble generation of poets, some of whose names are not familiar to us, have moulded our language with the images of their fancy, and strengthened it by the stability of their thoughts."—DANIEL.

"No species of Fiction is so delightful as the Old English Drama; even its inferior productions possess a charm not to be found in any other kind of Poetry."—T. B. MACAULAY.

The Preceptor, 1748, 2 vols. 8vo. This is a collection of miscellaneous pieces. Dr. Johnson furnished the Preface, and The Vision of Theodore the Hermit. Trifles, 1748; A Collection of Dodsley's dramatic pieces. The Economy of Human Life, 1751, 8vo; several eds. This excellent moral work, written by Dodsley, was attributed to Lord Chesterfield. Public Virtue, 1754, 8vo, by Dodsley. The Annual Register, commenced in 1758 at the suggestion of EDWARD BURKE, (q. v.) who had charge of it for some time. It is still pub. In this year he produced at Covent-garden Theatre his tragedy of Cleone, of which Johnson said that "if Otway had written it, no other of his pieces would have been remembered." Fables of Esop, &c., 1760. A Collection of Poems by several hands, 1763, 6 vols. 8vo. Fugitive Pieces, 1765, 2 vols. 8vo. To the periodical entitled The World, established by Dodsley and Moore, the former contributed No. 32. Miscellanies; Cleone, Melpomene, &c., 1772. Dodsley purchased of Johnson in 1738, London, (his first original composition, pub. in a vol.) for ten guineas; and in 1749 gave him fifteen guineas for The Vanity of Human Wishes. Dodsley's Poems, which possess great merit, are pub. in vol. xv. of Chalmers's Collection of the Poets, and the reader will find interesting particulars concerning him in the Biog. Brit., and in Boswell's Life of Johnson.

Dodson, James. The Antilogarithmic Canon, 1742, fol. Mathemat. Repository, Lon., 1748-55, 3 vols. 12mo.

Dodson, Jeremiah. Serms., Lon., 1688, 4to.

Dodson, John, LL.D. Dalrymple Case, Lon., 1811, 8vo. Admiralty Reports, T. T. 1811 to E. T. 1822, Lon., 1815-28, 2 vols. 8vo. Dodson's reports were continued by Dr. Haggard. Dodson's were a continuation of Edwards's.

Dodson, Joseph. Serms., Lon., 1720, '28.

Dodson, Michael, 1732-1799, an English lawyer. New trans. of Isaiah, with Notes supplementary to those of Dr. Lowth, &c., Lon., 1790, 8vo.

"Dodson thought he discovered numerous and very considerable mistakes and defects in Bishop Lowth's version."

See Orme's Bibl. Bib. and Horne's Bibl. Bib. for an account of the controversy connected with this work. Memoirs of Rev. H. Farmer. He pub. eds. of Sir M. Foster's Trial of the Rebels, 1762, '76, '92, and his Life in 1811. See Watt's Bibl. Brit.

Dodson, Wm. Draining of the Great Level of the Fen called Bedford Level, Lon., 1665, 4to.

Dodswell, Dr. Hydatides in Sheep, &c., 1778.

Dodsworth, Roger, 1585-1654, a learned and industrious antiquary, wrote 122 folio vols. (never pub.) which, with 40 more collected by him, are now in the Bodleian Library. See Bishop Nicolson's Eng. Hist. Lib. 22. He designed using some of these materials in a History of the Antiquities of Yorkshire, but the project was not completed. He was the coadjutor of SIR WILLIAM DUGDALE (q. v.) in the Monasticon Anglicanum, Lon., 1655, '61, '71, 3 vols. fol.

"He was a man of wonderful industry, but less judgment; always collecting and transcribing, but never published any thing."—Woon.

Mr. Gough says that in the first part of this description Wood draws his own character. See Gough's Topography, vol. i.; Archæol. vol. i.

Dodsworth, Wm. Cathedral of Salisbury, 1792. Hist. Acct. of the Church of Sarum, &c., 1814, r. 4to.

Dodsworth, Wm. Discourses on the Lord's Supper, 1835, 12mo; 3d ed., 1841, 12mo. The Church of England; a Protest against Romanism and Dissent, 1836, 18mo. Why have you become a Romanist? a Letter to Mr. Sibthorp, 2d ed., 1842, 8vo. We suppose that Mr. Sibthorp's answer was not satisfactory, as Mr. Dodsworth has followed him to Rome to see for himself. Priest's Companion; new ed., 1846, 12mo. Signs of the Times, 1849, 12mo. Anglicanism considered in its Results, 1851, 12mo. Comments on Dr. Pusey's Letter to the Bp. of London, 2d ed., 1851, 8vo. Further Comments, 1851, 8vo. Other works.

Dodwell, Col. Edward. Classical and Topographical Tour through Greece, 1801, '05, '06, Lon., 1818, 2 vols. 4to. 70 Plates. Pub. at £10 10s.

"By far the best work on Greece."—DR. E. D. CLARKE.

"This work displays great research, aided and directed by much preparatory knowledge, and a sound judgment and good taste."—Steenstrup's Voyages and Travels.

Thirty Views in Greece, 1821, r. fol., pub. at £18 18s. Cyclopan or Pelasgic Remains in Greece and Italy, 131 drawings, 1834, imp. fol. Pub. at £6 16s. 6d.

Dodwell, Henry, 1641-1711, was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, of which city he was a native. In 1674 he adopted London as his residence, and in 1688 was elected Camden Professor of History at Oxford. He lost this post in 1691, in consequence of his refusal to take the oaths of allegiance to William and Mary. He was a man of great learning and remarkable industry. Of his many publications we notice the following: Two Letters of Advice, Dublin, 1672, 8vo. Separation of Churches from Episcopal Govt. proved Schismatical, Lon., 1679, 4to. Reply to Rd. Baxter's pretended Confutation of the above, &c., 1681, 8vo. Dissertationes Cyprianicæ, 1682, fol. This is generally appended to Bp. Fell's ed. of St. Cyprian, Oxf., 1684, 8vo. Discourse concerning the one Altar and the one Priesthood, insisted upon by the Ancients in their arguments against Schism, Lon., 1683, 8vo. De Jure Laicorum, &c., 1686, 8vo. Prælectiones Academicæ in Schola Historiæ Camdenianæ, Oxf., 1692, 8vo.

"Highly serviceable to all such as shall hereafter engage in these studies."—Bp. NICOLSON.

Annales Velleiani, Quintilianei, Statiani, Oxf., 1698, 8vo; 1708, 8vo; Lugd. Bat., 1719. Annales Thucydidei at Xenophonæ, &c., Synopsis Chronologica, Oxf., 1702, 4to.

"Dodwell's learning was immense; in this part of history especially (that of the Upper Empire) the most minute fact or passage could not escape him; and his skill in employing them is equal to his learning. The worst of this author is his method and style; the one perplexed beyond imagination, the other negligent to a degree of barbarism."—Gibbon's Miscellaneous Works.

De Veteribus Græcorum Romanorumque cyclicis, &c., Oxf., 1701, 4to. An Epistolary Discourse, proving, from the Scriptures and first Fathers, that the Soul is a principle naturally mortal, but immortalized actually by the pleasure of God to punishment, or to reward, by its union with the divine baptismal spirit. Wherein is proved that none have the power of giving this immortalizing spirit since the Apostles, but only the Bishops, Lon., 1706, 8vo.

"Its absurdity is so evident, that only the character of Dodwell, and the seriousness and labour with which he defended it, could persuade us to think that he believed it himself. The work is very curious, as a specimen of the torture to which a corrupted creed or system is capable of putting the Scriptures. It contains some singular remarks on the scriptural distinction between soul and spirit which is the foundation of his whole hypothesis."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

This work elicited several treatises in support of, and in opposition to, Dodwell's sentiments. Among the writers were John Broughton, D.D., H. Layton, W. Coward, M.D., F. Gregory, Saml. Bold, Danl. Whitby, Jos. Pitts, Edmund Chishull, Thomas Mills, and Dr. Samuel Clarke. The last named was the most distinguished of the opponents. Dodwell believed that all who were not circumcised under the law, and all who are not baptized under the gospel, are condemned to annihilation or to eternal sleep. Joseph Hallett held the same opinion. See Dodwell's Life, with an Account of his Works, and an Abridgment of them that are published, and of several of his MSS. by Francis Brokesby, 1715, 2 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., 1723, 2 vols. 8vo.

Dodwell, Henry, eldest son of the preceding, a barrister, was skeptical in his opinions, and pub. in 1742 a tract entitled Christianity not founded in Argument. It was answered by Doddridge, Leland, and the author's brother William.

Dodwell, Wm., 1709-1785, younger brother of the preceding, became Rector of Shottesbrooke, Vicar of Bucklersbury, Prebendary of Salisbury, and Archdeacon of Berks. He pub. many serms. and theolog. treatises, 1743-67. Sermon on a Rational Faith, 1745, 8vo. This is an answer to his brother HENRY's (q. v.) Christianity not founded on Argument. Practical Discourses, 1784-89, 2 vols. 8vo. Free Answer to Dr. Middleton's Inquiry into the Miraculous Powers of the Primitive Church, 1749, 8vo. The Sick Man's Companion, or the Clergyman's Assistant in Visiting the Sick, 1767, 8vo. This and Paley's work are recommended to candidates for holy orders by Bishop Van Mildert. The Athanasian Creed vindicated and explained in three Charges, Oxf., 1802, sm. 8vo.

Doe, Charles. Works of Grace, Lon., 8vo.

Dogget, Thomas, an actor and author, d. 1721. The Country Wake, a Comedy, 1696, 4to. Altered into a Ballad Farce, under the title of Flora, or Hob in the Well.

Dogherty, Mrs. Ronaldsha, 1808, 3 vols. Castle of Walforth and Montague, 1812, 4 vols.

Dogherty, Hugh. The Discovery, 1807, 12mo.

Dogherty, Thomas, d. 1805. The Crown Circuit Assist., Lon., 1787, 8vo; Supplet., 1787, '90, 8vo. New ed. of Sir Matt. Hale's Historia Placitorum Coronæ; the Hist. of the Pleas of the Crown, 1800, 2 vols. r. 8vo.

Doig, David, d. 1800, aged 81. Two Letters on the Savage State; addressed to the late Lord Kames, Lon., 1792, 12mo. Poem, 1796, 4to. Dissert. on the Ancient Hellenes, in Trans. Roy. Soc., 1794.

Doig, David. To this gentleman we are indebted for the able article on Philology in the 7th ed. Encyc. Brit.

"A production evincing uncommon learning, research, and ingenuity."—Bath Herald.

Dolben, John, 1625-1686, educated at Christ Church, Oxford; Prebendary of St. Paul's, 1661; Bishop of Rochester, 1666; Archbishop of York, 1683.

"He was not very careful to print his sermons, which much deserve to be printed."—Athen. Oxon.

We know of only three that were pub., viz.: two in 1665; and one in 1666, all in 4to.

Dolben, Sir John, D.D., Prebend of Durham. Concilio ad Clerum, on Heb. xii. 1, 1726, 4to.

Dolby, Richard. The Cook's Dictionary and Housekeeper's Directory, Lon., p. 8vo.

"It appears to contain all that the veriest gourmand in Christendom would sigh for, in a life like Methusalem's, with a throat a yard long, and palate all the way."—Lon. Lady's Mag.

Dolby, Thomas. The Shaksperian Dictionary, Lon., 1832, 8vo and 12mo. An excellent book.

Doleman, John. Trans. of the Questions of Cicero, 1561, 8vo.

Doleman, Nic. or Robert. See PARSONS, ROBERT.

Doler, Sir Daniel. Charges to Grand Juries, Lon., 1625, '26.

Dolland. See DOLLOND.

Dollman, Francis T. Examples of Ancient Pulpits existing in England, Lon., 1849, r. 4to; 30 plates, three of which are highly finished in colours, restored accurately from the existing indications.

Dollond, John, 1706-1761, the discoverer of the laws of the dispersion of light, and the inventor of the achromatic telescope. He pub. a number of papers on telescopes, &c. in Phil. Trans., 1753, '58.

Dollond, Peter, 1730-1820, son of the preceding. Account of the Discovery made by John Dollond, &c., Lon., 1789, 4to. Con. to Phil. Trans. on Light, &c., 1772, '79, '95.

Dolman, Nic. or Robert. See PARSONS, ROBERT.

Domekins, George Peter. Philosophiæ Mathematicæ Newtonianæ Illustratæ, Lon., 1730, 2 vols. 8vo.

Domerham, Adam de. Historica de Rebus Gestis Glastoniensibus, Edit. Th. Hearne, Oxon., 1727, 2 vols. 8vo.

Domelt, Philobeth. Sermon, 1741, 8vo.

Domier, Wm., M.D. Observ. on Malta as a place for invalids, Lon., 1810, 8vo.

Dominicet, R., M.D. Water Baths, &c., Lon., 1780, 8vo. Medical Anecdotes of the last 30 years, illustrated with Medical Truths, 1781, 8vo. Amptill Medicine Baths, 1788, 8vo.

Dominick, Andrew, D.D. Sermon, 1662, 4to.

Don, David. Prodromus Floræ Nepalensis; Plants in Nepal and adjacent Countries, 1825, 12mo. This work contains systematical descriptions in Latin of 371 genera and 864 species of plants. At the end is an Index, with reference to the Linnæan classes and orders.

"An exceedingly useful work."—News of Literature and Fashion.

Don, George. System of Gardening and Botany, Lon., 1831-38, 4 vols. r. 4to, pp. 3250; many illustrations. This invaluable work, founded on Miller's Gardener's Dictionary, although pub. at £14 8s. per copy, and costing in paper and print alone upwards of £8, can now be had for about thirty shillings. The excellence of the work need not be enlarged upon. Every one who has a garden or field should have Don's Dictionary.

Don, James. Hortus Cantabrigiensis; 13th ed. by P. N. Don, Lon., 8vo. This edition includes the additions and improvements of the former editors, Pursh, Lindley, and Sinclair.

Donald, James. Land Drainage, &c., Lon., 1851, 12mo.

"A most valuable addition to the former treatises on draining: the author shows a true practice, and a large comprehension."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Donald, Robert. New System of National and Practical Agriculture, Guilford, 1822, 12mo. Written in hexameter verse! Other pieces are included.

"The poetry is nothing, but the practical ideas perfectly sound and correct."—Ubi supra.

Donaldson. Picktooth for Swearers, or a Looking-glass for Atheists and Profane Persons, Edin., 1698, 12mo. In verse.

Donaldson, James. Tilling and Manuring the Ground in Scotland, Edin., 1697, 12mo. Husbandry Anatomized, Lon., 1697, 12mo. Highly commended by Scotch agricultural writers.

Donaldson, James. Modern Agriculture, Edin., 1793-96, 6 vols. 8vo. Other agricult. works.

"He treats the subjects that come under his view in a very judicious and enlightened manner."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog., q. v.

Donaldson, John, 1737-1801, an artist, a native of Edinburgh. Elements of Beauty, &c., Edin., 1780, 8vo. Vol. of Poems.

Donaldson, John. Works on Political Economy, &c., 1790-96.

Donaldson, Professor John, an eminent agriculturist. Treatise on Manures and Grasses, Lon., 1842, 8vo; 2d ed., 1846, 8vo.

"By far the best treatise on manures that has appeared."—London's Gardener's Mag., April, 1842.

Cultivated Plants of the Farm, 1847, 12mo. The Enemies to Agriculture, 1848, 12mo. Land Steward and Farm Bailiff, 1848, 8vo. Bayldon's Art of Valuing Rents and Tillages; 5th ed. rewritten and enlarged by J. Donaldson.

"Rewritten by one of the best practical agriculturists in the country."—Gardener's Mag.

"The work should be read by every one having an interest in the soil, whether as landlord, tenant, or agent."—Mark Lane Express.

Improved Farm Buildings, with 72 designs, 1851, 4to.

Clay Lands and Loamy Soils, 1852, 12mo. Soils and Manures, 1852, 12mo. Agricultural Biography, 1480-1854, Lon., 1854, 8vo. This excellent work includes the lists of Weston and Loudon, and contains other works not known to them. We have frequently had occasion to quote it in the present volume, and are pleased to acknowledge our obligations.

Donaldson, Rev. John Wm. Latin, Greek, and Hebrew Grammars, and others educational and classical works, Lon., 1839-53.

Donaldson, Joseph. Recollections of a Soldier, Edin., 12mo.

"We cordially recommend the work."—Scottish Guardian.

Donaldson, T. L. Works on Architecture, 1833-47.

Donaldson, Thomas. Sermon, 1784, 8vo.

Donaldson, Thomas. Poems, 1809, 8vo.

Donaldson, Walter, a native of Aberdeen, of the 17th century. Synopsis Moralis Philosophiæ, 1604, 8vo; France, 1623, 12mo. Synopsis Locorum communium, &c., France, 1612. Synopsis Œconomica, Paris, 1620.

Donaldson, Wm. Agriculture considered as a Moral and Political Duty, in Letters to his Majesty, 1775, 8vo.

"The letters are wholly retrospective and argumentative, and bring forward no new plan of comprehension, nor make any suggestion of importance."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Donat, Mrs., and Mrs. Hudson. Cookery, 1804, 8vo.

Done, Wm. Stafford, D.D., Prebendary of Lincoln, and Archdeacon of Bedford. Sermons, Lon., 1786, 8vo.

Dongworth, Richard. Sermon, Lon., 1708, 4to.

Donkin, Major. Military Collections and Remarks, N. York, 1777, 8vo.

"Published for the benefit of the Children and Widows of the valiant soldiers inhumanly and wantonly butchered, when peaceably marching to and from Concord, April 19, 1775, by the Rebels."—Introduction.

"This work contains several anecdotes, &c., relative to the War of Independence."—Rich's Bibl. Amer. Novæ.

A volume of great rarity.

Donn, Abraham, of Bidford, 1718-1746. Mathemat. works pub. by his brother, Benjamin Donn.

Donn, Benjamin, of Bidford, 1729-1798, brother of the preceding. Mathemat. Essays, 1758, 8vo. Map of Devon and Exeter, Lon., 1765, fol. Other works, 1766-74.

Donn, James. See DON.

Donne, B. The use of Georganon.

Donne, Benj. English History, 1812, 18mo.

Donne, Daniel. Sermons, 1623.

Donne, John, 1573-1631, an eminent divine and poet, was a native of London, and educated in the principles of the Church of Rome, of which his parents were devoted adherents. He studied both at Oxford and Cambridge, and distinguished himself greatly by his remarkable proficiency. In his 19th year he subjected the respective claims of the Church of England and that of Rome to a careful examination, which resulted in his embracing the communion of the former. He pursued for some time the study of the law, but upon inheriting some £3000 from his father, he determined to follow his taste, and devote himself to literary pursuits. Having the good fortune to secure the post of secretary to Lord Chancellor Ellesmere, he gained the affections of his lady's niece, a daughter of Sir George Moore, Lieutenant of the Tower, and a private marriage was the result. Great was the indignation of the stern father, and the young bridegroom lost his situation, and was actually for a time imprisoned in the Tower.

When 42 years of age, at the urgent solicitation of King James I., he was ordained, and soon became so famous as an eloquent preacher, that he had the offer of 14 different livings within the first year of his ministry. In 1621 he was appointed Dean of St. Paul's. He enjoyed great reputation as a poet, being placed at the head of the Metaphysical School; and after long neglect has received some attention within the last few years; but his poetry is not of a character calculated to gain extensive popularity. He excelled in complimentary addresses, epigrams, satires, elegies, and poems of a theological character.

Among his most remarkable productions are: Pseudo-Martyr, Lon., 1610, 4to. Polydoron, 1631, 12mo. Juvenilia; or Paradoxes and Problems, 1633, 4to. A Paradox or Thesis on Self-homicide, 1644, 4to. Paradoxes, Problems, Essays, and Characters, 1652, 8vo. His sermons, which, perhaps, have been more generally admired than his lighter works, were pub. in 3 vols. fol., 1640, '49, '60. They are now very rare, especially the 3d vol. A collective edit. of his poems, including Elegies on the author's death, was pub. in 1633, 4to; 1635, '39, '51, '69, 12mo; with some Account of the Author, 1719, 12mo. A new ed. of his Works, including his Sermons, Devotions, Poems, Letters, &c., with a new Memoir by the Rev. Henry Alford, was pub. in 1839, in 6 vols. 8vo, Oxford. We presume that this edition was suggested by the following query in the London Quarterly:

"We cannot, in passing, forbear repeating Mr. Coleridge's question, (Table Talk, p. 88, 2d edit.), 'Why are not Donne's volumes of sermons reprinted at Oxford?' Surely the character of some of his juvenile poems cannot be the reason! . . . Why does Oxford allow one hundred and thirty sermons of the greatest preacher, at least, of the seventeenth century—the admired of all hearers—to remain all but totally unknown to the student in divinity of the Church of England, and to the literary world in general?"—ibid. 6, 1837.

The reader should peruse Isaak Walton's Life of Donne: his description of him as a preacher is truly eloquent:

"A preacher in earnest; weeping sometimes for his auditory, sometimes with them; always preaching to himself like an Angel from a cloud, but in none; carrying some, as St. Paul was, to heaven in holy rapture; and enticing others by a sacred art and courtship to amend their lives; here picturing a vice so as to make it ugly to those that practised it, and a virtue so as to make it beloved even by those who loved it not; and all this with a most particular grace and an inexpressible addition of comeliness."

Dryden calls Donne

"The greatest wit, though not the greatest poet, of our nation."

See Biog. Brit.; Walton's Life by Zouch; Drake's Shakespeare and his Times; Retrospect, Rev., viii, 31, 1823.

Donne, John, LL.D., son of the preceding. The Humble Petition of Covent Garden against Dr. John Barber, a physician, 1662. Dr. John Donne, Jr., does not seem to have maintained the family honour:

"He was no better all his lifetime than an atheistical buffoon, a banterer, and a person of over-free thoughts."—Wood.

Donne, William Bodham. 1. Essays on the Drama, Lon., 1857, p. 8vo. 2. School History of Rome, 1857.

Donnegan, James, M.D. Greek and English Lexicon, Lon., 1826, 8vo; 4th ed., 1842, 8vo; 1846.

"An important acquisition to such of our countrymen as are desirous of gaining a knowledge of the Greek language."—Dr. Maltby, Bishop of Durham.

Donnel, J. A., M.D. Hydrophobia, 1813, 8vo.

Donoghue. Poems, 1797, '99.

Donoughmore, Earl of. See HUTCHINSON, RICHARD H.

Donovan, Edward. Works on British Natural Hist., viz.: Insects, 16 vols.; Birds, 10 vols.; Shells, 5 vols.; Fishes, 5 vols.; Quadrupeds, 3 vols.; together 39 vols. 8vo, pub. at £6 6s. 9d. Nat. Hist. of the Insects of China; new ed. by J. O. Westwood, 1842, 4to, pub. at £6 6s. Nat. Hist. of the Insects of India, by J. O. Westwood, 1842, 4to.

"Donovan's works on the Insects of India and China are splendidly illustrated, and extremely useful."—Naturalist.

"A great number of species are here delineated for the first time."—SWAINSON.

Instructions for preserving Natural Subjects. Descriptive Excursions through South Wales and Monmouthshire, 1805, 2 vols. 8vo.

"A work of high and various merit."—Lon. Annual Review.

Naturalist's Repository of Exotic History, 5 vols. r. 8vo, pub. at £10 10s. Other works.

Mr. D. was so fortunate as to be able to add to his valuable collection that of E. M. DA COSTA, q. v.

Donovan, John. Scorbutic Diseases, &c., 8vo.

Donovan, Michael. Treatise on Chemistry, 4th ed., 1845, 2 vols. 12mo.

"The best existing compendium of chemical knowledge."—Edin. Z. Courant.

Donovan, Patrick. Discursus, &c. S. Patricii Iber-norum Apostoli, Duaci, 1617, 12mo.

Donnelly, R. Chancery Cases, 1837, 8vo.

Doolittle, Mark, a lawyer, was born in Massachusetts in 1781, graduated at Yale College, 1804. Agricultural Address, 1826, 26 pp. 8vo. Temperance a Source of National Wealth, pp. 13, 8vo. Hist. of the Congregational Church of Belchertown, Mass., 282 pp. 12mo.

Doolittle, Samuel, d. 1717. Serms., &c., 1692, '93.

Doolittle, Thomas, 1630–1707, an eminent Non-

Conformist divine, pub. a number of theolog. works, 1665–98. The Complete Body of Practical Divinity, 1723, fol.

"I am willing this should be a fire-kindler for you and put you in the way to set conscience about its work when you come to that application with which your sermons are still to be enlivened."—CORRON MATHEN.

Dopping, Dr., Bishop of Meath, Ireland. Modest-nendi Parliamentum in Hibernia, Dubl., 1692, 12mo; 1722, 8vo. Funl. Sermon on the Death of the Archbp. of Dublin, 1694, 4to.

Doran, John, LL.D., b. 1807, in London,—family originally of Drogheda, in Ireland. He was educated chiefly by his father. His literary bent was manifested at the age of 15, when he produced the melodrama of (1) the "Wandering Jew," which was first played at the Surrey Theatre in 1822 for Tom Blanchard's benefit. His early years were spent in France. He was successively private tutor in four of the noblest families in Great Britain. 2. History of the Borough and Castle of Reading, Berks, 1832. This work obtained for him the degree of M.A., and subsequently LL.D., by the University of Marbury. 3. Anthon's Xenophon's Anabasis, with Notes, 1846. 4. Life of Dr. Young; which is prefixed to Tegg's valuable edition of that poet's works. 5. In connexion with Mrs. Romer, Filia Dolorosa, 1853. Although Mrs. R.'s name appears on the title-page, she had written but a few pages when she was attacked by a fatal illness: the work was chiefly written by Dr. Doran. 6. Table Traits and Something on them. 7. Habits and Men. 8. Knights and their Days. 9. Queens of England of the House of Hanover. 10. Monarchs retired from Business. 11. History of Court Fools.

"Any thing more quaint, subtle, and surprising than Dr. Doran's tale of the origin of court fools is scarcely to be found in the pages of the greatest and most genial humourists."—Lon. Athen.

The above works, Nos. 6–11, have passed through various edits. and have been reprinted in the U.S. Edited a weekly paper for nearly eleven years, and Bentley's Ballads, to which he contributed some original pieces; also Last Journals of Horace Walpole, 1772–1782. Contrib. largely, in prose and verse, to various periodicals.

Dorchester, Nicholas. The Confession of the Banished Ministers, Wyttonburge, 1554, 16mo.

Dore, James. Serms., &c., 1786–1806.

Dorisslaus, Jo. J. C. Praelium Nuportanum, Lon., 1640, 4to.

Dorman. Sir Roger de Coverley, 1740, 8vo.

"A wretched play."—Bug. Dramat.

Dorman, Thomas, a R. Catholic writer, d. 1572–77? pub. several controversial tracts, 1564, '65, '67. See Athen. Oxon.

Dorman, or Dormer, Wm. 12 Serms. preached at the Rolls Chapel, Lon., 1743, sm. 8vo.

Dormer, John, a Soc. Jes. Usury Explained; or Conscience quieted in the Case of putting out Money to Interest, anon., Lon., 1696, 8vo.

Dornan, Robert. Emancipation; a Poem, Lon., 1814, 8vo.

Dorney. Certain Speeches, 1653.

Dorney, Henry. Divine Contemplations, 1684, 8vo.

Dorney, John. Siege of Gloucester, 1643, 4to.

Dornford, J. Hist. and Polit. works, 1785–90.

Dornford, Robert. Gospel Light, 1652, 12mo.

Dorr, Benjamin, D.D., b. 1796, in Massachusetts, grad. at Dartmouth Coll., 1817; ordained Deacon by Bp. Hobart, 1820, and Priest, 1823; Rector of the United Churches of Lansingburg and Waterford, N. Y., 1820–29; Rector of Trinity Church, Utica, N. Y., 1829–35; succeeded Rt. Rev. Bishop White in Christ Church, Phil., 1837; recd. honorary degree D.D. from Univ. of Penn., 1838; elected Bishop of Maryland, 1839, but declined accepting the office. Hist. Pocket Prayer Book, written by itself, 16mo. Churchman's Manual, 12mo. Recognition of Friends in Another World, 32mo. History of Christ Church, Phila., 12mo, pp. 430. Sunday School Teacher's Encouragement, 32mo, pp. 62. Prophecies and Types, 12mo, pp. 72. Invitation to the Holy Communion, 16mo, pp. 144. Travels in the East, 1856, 12mo.

"Dr. Dorr's works have had an extensive circulation among churchmen in the United States, and have been republished in England and the British Provinces."

Dorr, Julia C. R., b. 1825, at Charleston, South Carolina, the daughter of Mr. Wm. Y. Ripley, and wife of Mr. Seneca M. Dorr, has resided since her marriage at Chatham Four Corners, Columbia county, New York. She commenced publication in 1848, and since then has contributed many prose and poetical articles to the periodicals of the day. Her writings have been much admired.

Dorrei, Hadrian. Willobie his Avise, or the true

Picture of a modest Maide, and of a chaste and constant Wife, Lon., 1609, 4to.

Dorrell, John. See DARRELL.

Dorrington, Theop. Reformed Devotions, Lon., 1687, 8vo; 1701. Family Devotions, 3d ed., 1703, 4 vols. 8vo. Other works.

Dorset. Essay on Defensive War. Philosophic Venus. Condolence; an Elegiac Poem.

Dorset, Mrs. Peacock at Home and other Poems, 1809.

Dorset and Pembroke, Anne, Countess of. See CLIFFORD.

Dorset, Charles Sackville, Earl of, 1637-1706, was a great favourite with the wits of the day. He wrote a few satires and songs, which possess considerable merit. His most celebrated piece was a Song written at Sea during the Dutch war, 1665, the Night before an Engagement, "To all you Ladies now on land," &c.

"I would instance your lordship in satire, and Shakspeare in tragedy."—Dryden to Dorset.

"There is a lustre in his verses like that of the sun in Claude Lorraine's landscapes."—Pope.

His poems will be found in Johnson's Collection.

"He was a man whose elegance and judgment were universally confessed, and whose bounty to the learned and witty was generally known."—Life by Dr. Johnson.

Dorset, Charles Sackville, Duke of, 1711-1769, pub. a number of prose and poetical compositions, a list of which will be found in Park's Walpole's R. and N. Authors.

Dorset, Edward Sackville, Earl of, 1590-1652. Speeches, 1620, '42, '43, '44.

"A person of acute parts, who had a great command of his pen, and was of able elocution."—Wood.

"His wit was pleasant, sparkling, and sublime."—LORD CLARENDON.

Dorset, Richard Sackville, Earl of, d. 1677, wrote a poetical address to the Memory of Ben Jonson.

Dorset, Thomas Sackville, Earl of, and Lord Buckhurst, 1536-1608, was not more distinguished for his high official position—Lord High Treasurer of England—than for the excellence of his poetical compositions. We have already referred to his masterpiece, The Induction to the Mirrour for Magistrates, (see BALDWIN, WILLIAM,) and he wrote two pieces of considerable length in this celebrated collection. Warton gives Sackville the merit of being the primary inventor of the design, but Haslewood confers it upon Baldwin. See authorities referred to in article BALDWIN, WILLIAM. Sackville is the author, or joint-author with Thomas Norton, of the first tragedy of any consideration in the English language: Ferrer and Porrex, commonly called Gorboduc, 1565, 4to. Warton questions Norton's claim to any share in the authorship, but the three first acts are attributed to him. Gorboduc is in five acts, and in regular blank verse, though Wood tells us that it is written in "old English rhyme!"—so much had it become neglected. Pope determined to revive it, and Spence added the design by acting as editor, and a new edit. was pub. in 1736, 8vo. Warton considers the plot to be "naked and uninteresting," but remarks:

"Yet it must be granted that the language of Gorboduc has great purity and perspicuity; and that it is entirely free from that tumid phraseology which does not seem to have taken place till play-writing had become a trade, and our poets found it their interest to captivate the multitude by the false sublime, and by those exaggerated imageries and pedantic metaphors which are the blemishes of the scenes of Shakspeare, and which are at this day mistaken for his capital beauties by too many readers. Here also we have another and a strongest reason why this play was never popular."—History of English Poetry.

The same eminent authority conceives the Induction to the Mirrour for Magistrates to have been the model of Spenser in the representation of allegorical personages, and he remarks that The Complaint of Henry, Duke of Buckingham, is written "With a force and even elegance of expression, a copiousness of phraseology, and an exactness of versification, not to be found in any other part of the collection."

Lord Buckhurst's Poetical Works were reprinted in 1820. A Latin Epistle of his lordship's will be found prefixed to Bartholomew Clarke's Latin trans. of Castiglione's Courtier. "Gorboduc is full of stately speeches and well-sounding phrases, climbing to the height of Seneca his style, and as full of notable moralities, which it doth most delightfully teach, and so obayne the very end of poeie."—Sir Philip Sidney's Defence of Poetrie.

"In his graver years, the brilliancy of his imagination grew more correct, not less abundant."—Hor. Walpole's R. and N. Authors. q.v.

See Collins's Peerage by Brydges; Biog. Brit.; Brit. Bibliog.; Athen. Oxon.; Puttenham's Art of Poetry.

Dorsey, Clement. Test Law of Maryland, Balt., 1838, 8vo. Statutory, &c. Law, 1692-1839, 3 vols. 8vo.

Dorsey, John L. Insolvency, Balt., 1832, 8vo.

Dorsey, John Syng, M.D., 1783-1818, an eminent physician of Philadelphia. Elements of Surgery, 1813, 2 vols. 8vo. Cooper's Surgery, with Notes. Con. to periodicals. See Thacher's Amer. Med. Biog.

Dorsey, W. Ejectment in Maryland, with Notes and References to the Present Time, by R. W. Gill, 1841.

Dorville. Pauline, 1794, 2 vols. 12mo.

Dossie, Robert. Works on Chemistry, Surgery, &c., Lon., 1758-70. Memoirs of Agriculture, &c., 1768-82, 3 vols. 8vo: commended by Donaldson's Agric. Biog.

Doubleday. Con. to Med. Obs. and Inq., 1778.

Doubleday, Edward, 1810-1849. 1. Nomenclature of British Birds, Lon., p. 8vo. 2. Genera of Diurnal Lepidoptera, 40 parts imp. 4to; 80 coloured plates: commended by Lon. Ecol. Rev.

Doubleday, Thomas. True Law of Population, Lon., 8vo; 3d ed., 1858. Financial and Monetary History, 1688-1847, 8vo, 1847.

"A very able, painstaking, and useful exposition of the origin, progress, and evil consequences resulting from our funding system."—Lon. Atlas.

Other works.

Douce, Francis, 1757-1834, an antiquary of great learning, "The Person of old English and French Literature," was for some time keeper of the MSS. in the British Museum. Mr. Nollekens, the sculptor, left him a large legacy, which placed him in very comfortable circumstances, though it does not seem to have softened his irritable temper.

"Nullius addictus jurare in verba magistri, seemed, of all others, to be the motto by which he was guided—the pivot upon which his intellectual machinery turned. This necessarily at times led him into errors, if not into scrapes. He would neither bend nor bow to any man breathing."—Dibdin's Reminiscences.

He is introduced in the BIBLIOMANIA under the name of PROSPERO, and many references to him and his valuable library will be found in the two works just named, and also in The Bibliographical Decameron. An interesting obituary notice by Wm. Weller Singer will be found in the Gent. Mag. for Aug., 1834. In addition to the two works pub. under his own name, Mr. Douce contributed largely to many works pub. by others, and a number of papers to the Archaeologia and to the Gent. Mag.

He left a large collection of valuable MSS., which—in consequence of a hostile review of his Illustrations of Shakspeare in the Edin. Review—he ordered to be kept in a sealed box in the British Museum until January 1, 1900, when they are to be brought to light.

The Illustrations of Shakspeare and of Ancient Manners, with Dissertations on the Clowns and Fools of Shakspeare, on the collection of popular tales entitled Roma Manorium, and on the English Morris Dance, was first pub. in 1807, 2 vols. 8vo; new ed., 1839, 8vo. The engravings are by Jackson.

"This petty sort of antiquarianism probably is not the object of any one who takes up the volumes of Shakspeare; and the scanty elucidation which the poet now and then receives makes us but poor amends for the quantity of trash which is obtruded upon us, with or without the apology of a difficulty. One great evil of this is the encouragement of pedantry and laborious trifling. . . . Of these merciless annotators, however, some are more intolerable than others. . . . Mr. Douce, we suppose is as good as any of them. Yet we think him, upon the whole, very feeble and very dull: and must set down his book among those which it is impossible to peruse without feelings of compassion for the incredible labour which has been expended with so little return either of instruction or amusement. We shall give a few specimens both of what appears trifling and foolish, and of what is curious and new, in these volumes."—Edin. Rev., 1808, xlii. 409.

"I look upon this work as a sort of Horæ Shaksperianæ, from which fruit of every hue and flavour may be safely plucked and eaten. The research and learning bestowed upon it are immense. I once attempted, during the Horæ Subscriptæ of a watering-place, to make a catalogue of the authors consulted in it; but my courage or patience failed. My own copy, smartly bound antique-wise by poor George Faulkener, was presented to a young and intelligent Frenchman, who was perfectly SHAKESPEARE-MAN, and who devoured its pages with the voracity of an alderman over a Jamaica turtle."—DIBDIN: Library Companion.

"In the criticisms which have been passed upon Mr. Douce's Illustrations of Shakspeare and Ancient Manners, it has not, I think, been generally noticed that this work is distinguished for the singular diffidence and urbanity of criticism, as well as depth of learning which it evinces, and for the happy illustrations of the subjects discussed by means of fac simile wood-cuts."—Bibliomania.

Mr. Douce's Dissertation on the Dance of Death, accompanied with fifty-four engravings on wood, pub. by Pickering, 1833, 8vo, should be carefully perused by all who take an interest in the works of Hans Holbein, Macabre, &c. In this vol. will be found an ample list of all the Paintings of the Dance of Death.

Jackson, in speaking of the original edition, (Lyons, 1538,) remarks:

"So admirably are these cuts executed—with so much feeling and with so perfect a knowledge of the capabilities of the art—that I do not think any wood engraver of the present day is capable of surpassing them. The manner in which they are engraved is comparatively simple; there is no display of fine work merely to show the artist's talent in cutting delicate lines. Every line is expressive; and the end is always obtained by the simplest means."—Holbein's Dance of Death is unquestionably a masterpiece.—Papillon.

Douch, John. England's Jubilee; a Sermon, 1660, 4to.

Doudy, Samuel. Med. con. to Phil. Trans., 1696.

Donespe, E. P. de la. Sermon, 1777, 4to.

Dougall, John, d. 1822. Mod. Preceptor, &c., 1810, '13.

Dougall, Wm. Con. to Med. Comm., 1785.

Doughty, Charity. Sermon, 1742, 8vo.

Doughty, Gregory. Sermon, Camb., 1724, 4to.

Doughty, John, 1598?–1672, Rector of Cheam, Surrey, and Prebendary of Westminster. He pub. some sermons and theolog. works, the best-known of which is Analecta Sacra, &c., Lon., 1658, 8vo, 1660, which has often been reprinted on the Continent.

"Doughty endeavours to illustrate various parts of the Old and New Testament by the manners and customs of the ancient Gentiles. He was well acquainted with them; but is more successful in elucidating the Old than the New Testament Scriptures."—Orme's Bib. Bib.

Doughty, John. Sermons, Lon., 1744, '52, '61.

Doughty, Thomas. Sermons, 1728, '38.

Douglas. Botanical papers in Trans. Hort. Soc., &c.

Douglas, Dr. Con. to Med. Obs. and Inq., 1778.

Douglas, Mrs. Life of Prof. Gellert, &c., 1803.

Douglas, Rev. Mr. Edwin, a Trag., 1784, 8vo.

Douglas, Alex. Poems. Cuper Fife, 1806, 8vo.

Douglas, Andrew, M.D. Profes. treatises, 1785, '89.

Douglas, Archibald, M.D. Profes. treatises, 1758, '84.

Douglas, Charles. The Sea, Phil. Trans., 1770.

Douglas, Charles A., M.D. Profes. treatises in Ed. Med. Ess., 1738.

Douglas, David. De Naturæ Mirabilibus Opusculum, Paris, 1524, 4to.

Douglas, Lady Eleanor. The Day of Judgment's Model, 1646, 4to.

Douglas, Francis. Four Letters on Celibacy and Marriage, Lon., 1771, 8vo, anon. East Coast of Scotland, 1782, 12mo.

Douglas, Hon. Fred. Sylvester North, d. 1819. Resemblance between the Ancient and Mod. Greeks, 1813.

Douglas, Gawin, or Gawn, 1475–1522, Bishop of Dunkeld, was third son of Archibald, fifth Earl of Angus. He completed his studies at the University of Paris, entered the church, and in the tumultuous events of the day was distinguished for his "moderation and peaceableness." As a poet, Bishop Douglas is entitled to great respect. His principal original composition is The Palace of Honour, which will forcibly remind the reader of Bunyan's great allegory.

"The object of The Palace of Honour is to show the instability and insufficiency of worldly pomp; and to prove that a constant and undeviating habit of virtue is the only way to True Honour and Happiness, who reside in a magnificent palace situated on the summit of a high and inaccessible mountain."

King Hart, the only other poem of much extent written by Douglas, presents us with scenes of life represented under appropriate metaphors.

Bishop Douglas, however, is best known by his trans. of Virgil's Æneid into Scottish verse, executed in 1513; first pub. 1553. It is remarkable as being the first version of a classic (unless we call Boethius a classic) into any British tongue. We quote some opinions upon this version from two celebrated critics:

"This translation is executed with equal spirit and fidelity; and is a proof that the lowland Scotch and English languages were now nearly the same: I mean the style of composition; more especially in the glaring affectation of anglicising Latin words. The several books are introduced with metrical prologues, which are often highly poetical; and show that Douglas's proper walk was original poetry."—Warton's Hist. of Eng. Poetry.

"Without pronouncing it the best version of this poem that ever was, or ever will be, executed, we may at least venture to affirm, that it is the production of a bold and energetic writer, whose knowledge of his original, and prompt command of a copious and variegated phraseology, qualified him for the performance of so arduous a task. And whether we consider the state of British literature at that era, or the rapidity with which he completed the work, [sixteen months,] he will be found entitled to a high degree of admiration."—Dr. Irving's Lives of the Scottish Poets.

Mr. Hallam does not speak of Douglas's poetry with so much ardour as Warton displays:

"Warton did well to explain his rather startling expression, that the lowland Scotch and English languages were then nearly the same; for I will venture to say, that no Englishman, without guessing at every other word, could understand the long passage which he proceeds to quote from Gawin Douglas. It is true that the differences consisted mainly in pronunciation, and consequently in orthography; but this is the great cause of diversity in dialect. The character of Douglas's original poetry seems to be that of the Middle Ages in general.—prolix, though sometimes animated, descriptive of sensible objects."—Introduc. to Lit. Hist.

The original edit. of the trans. of the Æneid was pub., as we have stated, in 1553, Lon., 4to. New edit., with a glossary by Ruddiman, Edin., 1710, sm. fol. The Palace of Honour, 1553, fol.; 1579, 4to; 1827, 4to: presented to the members of the Bannatyne Club, by John G. Kinneir, Esq. He trans. Ovid's De Remedio Amoris, which appears to have been the earliest of his works. King Hart was pub. for the first time from an original MS. by Mr. Pinkerton. Select Works, with Memoirs of the Author, a Gloss., and Notes by Rev. Mr. Scott, 1787, 12mo.

Douglas, Gen. Sir Howard, Bart., D.C.L., b. 1776, at Gosport, has distinguished himself both in civil and in military life. Military Bridges, 1816, 8vo; 3d ed., 1863, 8vo. Treatise on Naval Gunnery; 4th ed., 1855, 8vo. This ed. contains a chapter on the Siege of Sebastopol, 1855, and the operations in the Crimea generally. Obs. on Carnot's System of Fortifications, 8vo. Considerations on the Value and Import of the Brit. Amer. Provinces, Lon., 1831, 8vo. Naval Evolutions, 1832, 8vo: see CLERK, JOHN.

"The work of Sir Howard Douglas has not only stood its ground for thirty years and more, but (harder task) has operated on the Admiralty. The new edition contains an account of all the improvements that have taken place in the theory and practice of naval gunnery since the appearance of its predecessor."—Lon. Spectator.

Douglas, George, M.D. Fossil, Vegetable, and Animal substances used in Physic, Lon., 1735, 8vo. Anatomy, Edin., 1763.

Douglas, George. Mathemat. works, 1776–1809.

Douglas, James. 1. A Prophecy. 2. Strange News from Scotland, 1651, 4to.

Douglas, James, Duke of Queensberry. Speech to the Parliament of Scotland, Lon., 1702, fol.

Douglas, James, M.D., 1675–1742, a physician of great reputation, highly commended by Haller. Myographiæ Comparatæ Specimen, Lon., 1707, 12mo. Bibliographiæ Anatomicæ Specimen, 8vo. Lateral Operation, 1726, 8vo; Appendix, 1731, 8vo. Lillium Sarnese, 1725, fol. Other works. Many of his works were trans. into Latin and other languages.

Douglas, James. Con. to Ed. Med. Ess., 1731.

Douglas, Rev. James. Tactica, 1781, 2 vols. 8vo. Travelling Anecdotes, 1782, 2 vols. 8vo. Nenia Britannica, 1786–93, fol. Dissert. on the Urbis Rutupiæ of Ptolemy, 1787, 4to. Other works.

Douglas, James, (Lord Mordington,) and Martin Laycock. Proposals for the Farm. of H. Coaches, fol.

Douglas, Jane. Genuine Memoirs of, 1761, 12mo.

Douglas, Lady Jane. Letters of, 1767, 8vo.

Douglas, James, of Clavers, a layman, is the author of many valuable works, principally theological. We notice The Truths of Religion; Errors regarding Religion; Popery and Infidelity; Thoughts on Prayer; On the Philosophy of Mind; The Structure of Prophecy.

"Our respect for the venerable writer, and our admiration of these Lectures, are so profound, that we can no longer defer an earnest recommendation of them to the reader."—Lon. Elec. Rev.

Douglas, John, Surgeon to the Westminster Infirmary, brother to JAMES DOUGLAS, M.D., (q. v.) pub. a number of valuable profes. works, a list of which will be found in Watt's Bibl. Brit.

Douglas, John. Con. to Ed. Med., 1731, '38.

Douglas, John, 1721–1807, educated at Balliol College, Oxford, Canon of Windsor, 1762; Dean of Windsor, 1786; Bishop of Carlisle, 1787; trans. to Salisbury, 1791. The learned bishop was one of the most eminent literary characters of his day, and his exposures of the sophistry of Hume, and the forgery of Lauder, to say nothing of his keen critique on Bower's marvellous relations—prove that his reputation was not undeserved. Wm. Lauder astonished the literary world in 1791 by publishing an essay to prove that Milton was a mere plagiarist, that Paradise Lost was borrowed from other quarters. To this essay Douglas pub. an answer in the same year, entitled Milton not Plagiarist; or a Detection of the Forgeries in Lauder's Essay. The bishop completely established his position. See LAUDER, WM. In 1756, '57, '58, Douglas pub. his four tracts against Bower. He undertook to prove that the History of the Popes was in fact a trans. from a Popish history! In 1756 he demolished David Hume's argument against the Christian miracles, in his Criterion or Miracles Examined. This work has been several times reprinted.

"In this excellent work the sophistries of Hume are ably and concisely refuted; the delusions of paganism and popery are canvassed with great acuteness; and the miracles recorded in the gospel history are vindicated by unanswerable arguments."—BUSKOP VAN MILDRETT.

Bishop Douglas pub. and edited several other works, and was the author of a number of political pamphlets and fugitive papers. His Select Works, with a Memoir by the Rev. W. Macdonald, were pub. in 1820, Salisbury, 4to.

Douglas, John. Letter to Henry Brougham, Esq., on Law Reform in Scotland, Lon., 1830, 8vo.

Douglas, Niel. Serms., Poetry, &c., 1791, '99.

Douglas, Robert. Generation of Heat in Animals, Lon., 1747, 8vo.

Douglas, Sir Robert. Peerage of Scotland, Edin., 1764, fol. Continued by J. P. Wood, 1813, 2 vols. fol., £10 10s. Baronetage of Scotland, 1798, fol. Original ed. not pub.

Douglas, Robert. Variation of the Compass, Phil. Trans., 1776.

Douglas, Robert, D.D. Oaths, 1783, 8vo. General View of the Agricult. of the counties of Roxburgh and Selkirk, Edin., 1798, 8vo; Lon., 1802, 8vo.

"Always reckoned the best of the Scotch reports."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Douglas, Robert, Surgeon R.N. Adventures of a Medical Student, with a Memoir of the Author, Lon., 1848, 3 vols. p. 8vo; 1850, p. 8vo.

"This volume will be welcome in every circulating library, club, and mess-room."—United Service Gazette.

Douglas, Sylvester, Rt. Hon. Lord Glenberrie, M.P., 1747–1823. Speech, 1799, 8vo. Controverted Elections, 1775–77, 4 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., 1802, 4 vols. 8vo.

"A collection of excellent reports on the law of parliamentary elections."—HARGRAVE.

Reports in K. B., 4th ed., by W. Frere, 1813, 2 vols. 8vo; (1st Amer. ed., Phila., 1807, 8vo;) ditto, vols. iii. and iv., by H. Roscoe, 1831, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Douglas's Reports are of the highest authority, and his manner is preferred by many to that of Sir James Burrow."—Hoffman's Leg. Stu., 419.

Life of John Mercer, 1806, 8vo. Con. to Phil. Trans., 1768, '73.

Douglas, Thomas. Vitis Degeneris; Ancient Ceremonies, Lon., 1668, 12mo.

Douglas, Thomas, Earl of Selkirk. See SELKIRK.

Douglas, Wm. De Lue Venera, 1687.

Douglas, Capt. Wm. Trial, &c., 1767, 8vo.

Douglas, Wm. Serms., 1812, 4to.

Douglas, Wm., M.D., d. 1752, a native of Scotland, settled in Boston, Mass., where he obtained considerable professional reputation. Treatises on the Small Pox, 1722, '30. An Epidemic Fever, 1736. Midwifery. Brit. Settlements in N. America. Pub. in numbers, Boston, Jan., 1749; May, 1749, forming vol. i. Vol. ii. was pub. in 1753. Both vols. reprinted in London, 1755, 8vo; again, 1760. The death of the author left the work incomplete.

"In his history of the American colonies, he is often incorrect; and it was his foible to measure the worth of men by his personal friendship for them." See Whitney's Hist. Worcester; Allen's Amer. Biog. Dict.

"The honest and downright Dr. Douglas."—ADAM SMITH.

Douland, or Dowland, John, d. 1615? an English musician, pub. several musical treatises, among which was a trans. of Ornithopareus's Micrologus, or Art of Singing, Lon., 1609, fol.

"This treatise, though the best of the time, seems too meagre and succinct to have been of great use to the students of such music as was then practised."—Burney's Hist. of Music, q. v.; and also Hawkins's Hist. of Music.

"We are assured that John Douland was the rarest musician that his age did behold."—WOOD.

Douland, or Dowland, Robert, contributed to John Douland's Lute Playing, 1610, fol., and pub. a Musical Banquet, 1610, fol.

Douley, George. Theolog. Dialogues, 1616, 8vo.

Doulevy, Andrew. Catechism, Paris, 1642.

Dounneus. See DOWNNES, ANDREW.

Dounamus, Georgius. See DOWNNAME.

Douthwaite, T. The Impartialist; in Poems, 1775.

Doutre, Joseph, b. 1825, near Montreal, Canada. At eighteen years of age he wrote a French historical novel, entitled Les Fiancés de 1812. He has been the first Laureate of the Canadian Institute.

Dovaston, J. Fita-Guardine; a Ballad, 1812.

Dove. Almanack for 1662, Camb., 8vo.

Dove, Henry, D.D., d. 1694, '98. Serms., 1680–86.

Dove, James. Religious Experience, 1804, 8vo.

Dove, John, D.D. Serms., Lon., 1597, 16mo. Ch. Government, 1606, 4to. Comment on Canticles, 1613, fol. Atheism, 1640, 8vo.

Dove, John, d. 1772, who went by the name of the "Hebrew Taylor," from his learning and trade, pub. a number of theolog. treatises, among which are The Importance of Rabbinical Learning, Lon., 1746, 8vo, and Plain Truth, or Quakerism Unmasked, 1756, 8vo.

Dove, John. Strictures on Agriculture.

"The author does not state any practical knowledge, and is little noticed."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Shoal of Pumice Stones on the Sea, Phil. Trans., 1728.

Dove, Richard. Serms., 1761, 8vo.

Dove, Wm. Con. to Med. Comm., 1793.

Dover, Lord. See ELLIS, GEORGE J. W. A.

Dover, John. The Roman Generals, 1667, 4to.

Dover, Robert. Annals Dvbrentia; see Blise's Wood's Athen. Oxon., iv. 222, 223, and Bib. Anglo-Poet., 891.

Dover, Thomas. See DOVER, JOHN.

Dover, Thomas. Medical treatises, 1732, '33.

Dover, Wm. His Case, Lon., 1741, 8vo.

Dow, Lieut. Col. Alexander, a native of Perthshire, d. 1779. Hist. of Hindostan, from the Persian of Ferishta, Lon., 1767, '68, 2 vols. 4to; a continuation being vol. iii., 1772, 4to; 1803, 3 vols. 8vo.

"Ferishta was employed for twenty years in the composition of his history."—TURNER.

Dow is charged with borrowing freely from Bernier's Travels. Tales from the Persian of Inatulla, 1768, 2 vols. 12mo. Zingis, a Tragedy, 1769, 8vo. Sethona, a Trag., 1774, 8vo.

Dow, or Dowe, Bartholomew. A Dairie Books for all good Huswives, Lon., 1588, 8vo. Also printed with The Householder's Philosophie, &c.

Dow, Christopher. Theolog. treatises, 1636, '37.

Dow, John. Trial of A. McKinlay, 1818.

Dow, Lorenzo, 1777–1834, of Coventry, Connecticut, a travelling preacher of great zeal and equal eccentricity. Experience and Travels in Europe and America, and Poetical Writings, Cincin. Works, ed. by Dr. Dowling, N. York, 8vo.

Dow, P. P. Reports C. in H. of Lords, Lon., 1814–19, 6 vols. r. 8vo; do., 1827–32, 2 vols. r. 8vo; 1830–32 by P. D. and C. Clark.

Dowall, James. 1. Vindication. 2. Appeal, 1681, &c.

Dowcett, Abraham. Declaration agst. Ralph, 1648.

Dowdall, W. Revenue of Ireland, Lon., 1720–29.

Dowding, W. C. Theolog. Lectures, Lon., 1842, 12mo.

Dowdeswell, George M. Law of Life and Fire

Insurances, Lon., 1846, 12mo.

"This is a text-book of the right sort. Instead of a crude string of marginal notes, not very honestly called from the digest, and very clumsily coupled with links by the author, Mr. Dowdeswell has written a treatise on the subject he professes to explain."—4 Law Mag., N. S., 354.

4th ed. of Smith's Comp. of Mercantile Law, 1848, r. 8vo.

6th ed. of Bayly on Bills of Exchange, 1849, 8vo. G. M. D. and J. G. Malcolm; 4th ed. of Starkie on the Law of Evidence, 1853, r. 8vo. Amer. ed., Phila. 1853.

"The fourth edition of Starkie is to the existing law what the first edition was to the law in 1824."—Jurist, Dec. 1852.

Dowel, John. The Leviathan Heretical; or a Discourse against Hobbes, Oxfr., 1683, 12mo.

Dowglass, Robert. Serms., &c., 1651, '60.

Dowle, John. Serms., Lon., 1630, 8vo.

Dowley, Peter. Letter to Dr. Wells, Oxon., 1708.

Dowling, A. S. Statutes, Lon., 1830–32, 2 vols. 12mo.

Reports of Cases, 1833–42, 9 vols. 8vo; A. S. D. and V.; Continuation, 1842, '43, 2 vols. 8vo; A. S. D. and J. J.

Lowndes; Continuation, 1844, '45, 2 vols. 8vo.

Dowling, Daniel. Book-keeping, 1766. Key to the latest ed. of Hutton's Mathemat., 1813, 3 vols. 8vo.

Dowling, E. A. Hebrew tongue, Lon., 1797, 8vo.

Dowling, J. Common Law Practice, Lon., 1834, 12mo.

J. D. and Ryland A. Reports K. K., 1822–31, 9 vols. 8vo;

do. rel. to Magistrates, 1823–31, 4 vols. 8vo.

Dowling, John, D.D., b. May 12, 1807, in Sussex,

England, settled in the United States in 1832. Since 1838

he has been highly successful as a writer and preacher.

He is the author of many works, the following being the principal:

1. A Vindication of the Baptists from the charge of Bigotry, 8vo. 2. An Exposition of the prophecies supposed by William Miller to predict the second coming of Christ, 1840, 18mo. 3. A Defence of the Protestant Scriptures from the attacks of Popish Apologists, &c., 1843.

4. History of Romanism from the earliest corruptions of Christianity to the present time, 8vo, 734 pp., N. Y., 1845.

In less than ten years 25,000 of this large work were sold.

5. Judson Offering, 18mo. 6. Power of Illustration, &c.,

18mo. Edited the Conference Hymn Book, Baptist Noel's work on Baptism, with an Introductory Essay. Works of Lorenzo Dow. Conyers Middleton on the Conformity of Popery and Paganism. Memoir of the Missionary Jacob

Thomas. Translated from the French the Rev. Dr. Cotes's

Un mot en passant à ceux qui ont abandonné l'église Romaine.

"If the reader wishes to be acquainted with the errors of Romanism, he has only to open the pages of Dowling's History. If the reader is anxious to read an epitome of the history of the Popes, their ambition, their intrigues, their avariciousness, their tyranny, their superstitions, and their mummeries, he can here find all proved and authenticated by the most accredited authors of the Church of Rome."—L. GIUSTINIANI.

Dowling, John G. Introducto to the Critical Study of Eccles. Hist., Lon., 1838, 8vo.

"A useful work, with partialities."—BICKERSTETH.

Notitia Scriptorum post annum 1700, 8vo, 1839. Serms., 1841, 8vo.

Dowling, Wm. Quadrupeds and Birds, 1849.

Dowman, George, M.D. Scirrhus, 1748, 8vo.

Downame, or Downham, George, D.D. d. 1634, educated at Cambridge, and Fellow of Christ Church, 1585; Bishop of Derry, 1616. A Treatise proving that the Pope is Antichrist, 1603, 4to. Lectures on Ps. xv., 1604, 4to. "Wherein the question of usury is fully and plainly decided." Abstract of Duties, &c., 1620, 8vo; 1635. Justification, 1623, fol.

"A full reply to the cavils of the Romanists."—BICKERSTETH.

Christian's Freedom, 1635, 8vo; new ed., 1836, 8vo. Prayer, 1640, 4to. Other works.

"A learned and godly bishop."—Leigh's Treatise of Religion and Learning.

Downame, John, d. 1644, brother of the preceding, and also a divine. Spiritual Physick, 1600, 8vo. Lect. upon the first four chap. of Hosea, 1608, 4to. The Christian Warfare, in 4 parts, 1609–18, 4to; together, 1634, fol.

"One of the best pieces of practical divinity extant."—HERVEY. Godliness, 1622, fol. Concordance or Table of the Bible, 1639, fol. Sacred Divinitie, 4to. The Sacrament, 1645.

Downe, B. Modern Geography, 1804.

Downe, Darby. Health; a Poem, 1724, 8vo.

Downe, John, an eminent divine, nephew to Bishop Jewel, and highly commended by Bishop Hall. Serms. and Tracts agst. Transubstantiation, Oxf., 1633, 4to. Justifying Faith, 1635, fol.

Downes. A Popish King; a Sermon, 1745, 8vo.

Downes, Andrew, 1550?–1627, Greek Prof. at Cambridge, 1586. Praellections in Lysiam, Cantab., 1593, 8vo. Praellections in Demosthenis Philippicam vi. de Pace, Lon., 1621, 8vo. He was one of the trans. of the Bible, and some notes of his on Chrysostom will be found in Sir Henry Savile's edition of that author.

Downes, George. Three Months in the North, Lon., 12mo. Letters from the Continent, 2 vols. p. 8vo; from Mecklenberg and Holstein, 1820, 8vo.

"Not so full and various as might have been expected: on manners and German literature it is most instructive."—Stevenson's Voyages and Travels.

Downes, Henry, D.D., Bishop of Killala, 1716; trans. to Elphin, 1720; to Meath, 1724; to Derry, 1726. Serms., 1697–1725.

Downes, Henry. Serms., 1784, 2 vols. 8vo.

Downes, John. Hypochondriacs, 1660, 4to.

Downes, John. Roscius Anglicanus; or, An Historical Review of the Stage, Lon., 1708, 8vo.

"But for this work we should have known little or nothing of some celebrated actors."—GRANQA.

Downes, John. Serms., 1741–61.

Downes, John, b. 1799, in Brooklyn, distinguished mathematician; assisted in preparing the American Nautical Almanac since its first publication; author of Logarithms and Logarithmic Sines and Tangents, with other Tables, 1858, 4to.

Downes, Jos. Speech of J. Foster, 1799, 8vo.

Downes, Robert, Bishop of Leighlin and Ferns. Serms., 1750, 4to.

Downes, Samuel. Lives of the Compilers of the Liturgy, and an historical account of its several reviewers. Bishop Sparrow's Rationale, ed. 1722.

Downes, Theop. On Allegiance, 1691, 4to, &c.

Downes, Thomas. A copious Index to Pennant's account of London, imp. fol.

Downey, Thomas. Naval Poems, 1813, 4to.

Downham. See DOWNAME.

Downham, G. Rex Mons est Deus, 1643.

Downie, Murdo. Marine Survey East Coast of Scotland, Lon., 1792, 4to. The Atmosphere, Aberdeen, 1800, 8vo.

Downing, Andrew Jackson, 1815–1852, a native of Newburgh, N. York, perished in the conflagration of the steamboat Henry Clay, on the Hudson River, July 28, 1852. Fruits and Fruit Trees of America, N. York, 14th ed., 1852, 8vo. Sale in America to 1853, 15,000 copies.

"Downing's Fruit and Fruit Trees of America deserves to be more generally known in Europe."—Trübner's Bibl. Guide to Amer. Lit., Lon., 1856, 12mo.

Landscape Gardening and Rural Architecture, N. York, 8vo. Sale in America to 1853, 9000 copies.

"By these admirable works Mr. Downing has done much to improve the taste of our rural inhabitants, and at the same time to promote the best and most judicious selection and culture of Fruit Trees."—CHANCELLOR KING.

"Mr. Downing has here produced a very delightful work, [Landscape Gardening], and has convinced us that sound criticism and refined judgment in matters of taste are not confined to this side of the Atlantic."—Lon. Art Union Journal.

"A masterly work."—LOUDON.

"The standard work on this subject."—Silliman's Journal.

The treatise upon Landscape Gardening is a most comprehensive work upon the subject; treating of History and General Principles, Ancient, Modern, Natural Styles, Influence of Poets, &c. Examples Abroad and in America, Beauties, Capacities, Picturesque Simple Beauty, Wood and Plantations, Grouping, Classification, leading Characteristics. Trees, History and Descriptions of finest deciduous Evergreens, Vines, and Climbing Plants. Formation of Walks, Roads, Fences, Hedges, Landscape or Rural Architecture, Characteristic Features of Country Houses, Roman, Italian, Swiss, Tudor, Old English, Elizabethan, Lodges, Embellishments, Rustic, Floral, Seats, Bridges, Rockwork, Dials, Vases, Fountains, Decorations, &c.

Cottage Residences, N. York, 8vo. Sale in America to 1853, 6250 copies. Architecture of Country Houses, N. Y., 8vo. Sale in America to 1853, 3500 copies.

Rural Essays, by the late A. J. Downing, with a Memoir of the Author, edited by George Wm. Curtis, and a letter to his friends by Frederika Bremer, N. York, 1854, 8vo. This volume contains, with one or two exceptions, all of Mr. Downing's editorial papers in The Horticulturist. Mr. Downing also edited London's Gardening for Ladies, N. York, 12mo, and Wightwick's Hints to Young Architects, N. York, 8vo.

"Mr. Downing has practical knowledge and true taste, and evidently loves his pursuits. These qualities give freshness, charm, and value to whatever he writes on his favourite topic."—Amer. Quarterly Review.

Downing, Bladen. Sermon, Lon., 1814.

Downing, C. T. Fanqui, or Foreigner in China in 1836 '37, 3 vols. p. 8vo; 1838, '40.

"An account of the habits, manners, manufactures, and laws of China."—Lon. Atlas.

Downing, Calybutte, 1606–1644, a Puritan divine. State Ecclesiastical, Oxf., 1632, 4to. Considerations, Lon., 1641, fol. Sermon, 1641, 4to. Discourse, 1641, 4to. Discovery, 1641, 4to. Diometrical opposition between Presbytery and Prelacy, 1644, 4to.

Downing, Clement. Indian Wars, Lon., 1737, 12mo.

Downing, George. Sermon, Lon., 1760, 8vo.

Downing, George. Newmarket; a Com., 1763, 12mo. The Parthian Exile; a Trag., 1774, 8vo. The Volunteers, 1780, 8vo.

Downing, John. Case of, Lon., 1796, 8vo.

Downing, Joseph. Disorders of H. Cattle, 1797.

Downing, Sir George. Political tracts, 1664–72.

Downman, Rev. Hugh, M.D., 1740–1809, born near Exeter, educated at Balliol College. Infancy, a Poem in 6 Books: 1, 1774; 2, 1775; 3, 1775; all 4to; whole 6, 1788, Edin., 12mo. It went through 7 edits. during his lifetime. Land of the Muses and other Poems, 1768, 4to. Edithe; a Com., Lon., 1785, 8vo. L. J. Brutus; a Trag., 1779. Poems, 1790; do. to Theopila, 1805, 8vo. Tragedies, 1792, 8vo. He trans. The Death Song, &c. from Wormius, and four tragedies from Voltaire.

Downiche, Anne. The Frenche Historie, in verse, Lon., 1589, 4to. A rare book. Bibl. Anglo-Poet., 225. £25; resold at Saunders's, 1818, £13 2s. 6d.

Downing, Wm. Parliamentary Visitor for demolishing the Superstitions and Ornaments of Churches, &c. within the county of Suffolk in the years 1643 and 1644; his Journal, 1786, 4to. Here's a curious book, indeed! The iconoclast must have some strange tales to tell.

Dowson, James. De Numerorum Figuratum Resolutione, Lon., 1614, 8vo.

Doyle, Major, is said to be the author of A New Military Journal, Lon., 1803, 4to. Instructions, 1804. Military Catechism, 8vo.

Doyle, James, d. 1834. R. Catholic Bishop of Kildare and Leighlin. Letter to Archbishop Magee. Letter to Daniel O'Connell on Poor Laws for Ireland. Bishop Doyle pub. many pamphlets, letters, &c. on theological and political subjects.

Doyle, Martin. Cyclopædia of Practical Husbandry and Rural Affairs, Dubl., 1829, p. 8vo. New ed., enlarged, 1851, 8vo.

"A plain and very sensible matter-of-fact exposition of current and known intelligence in a very acceptable and useful manner."—Donaldson's Agricult. Mag.

Practical Gardening, 1838, 12mo. Flower Garden, 4th ed., 1845, 12mo. Labouring Classes in Ireland, 1846, 12mo. Catechisms of Gardening and Cottage Farming, 1851, 18mo. Works, 2 vols. 12mo.

Doyle, Wm. Some Account of the British Dominions beyond the Atlantic, Lon., 1770, 8vo.

"The author proposes a new scheme of geography, calling South America, Atlantis; North America, Sebastia; and classes the American colonies under the names of Neanglia, Jacobea, and Mesia, or Midensia."—Lon. Monthly Review, xii. 413; 1770, q. v.

The collector of works on America should procure this curious volume.

D'Oyley, Catherine. The History of the Life and Death of our Blessed Saviour, Southamp., 1794, 8vo.

D'Oyley, Charles. The European in India, 1813, 4to. The Illustrations are by D'Oyley, but the Preface and History are by T. W. Blagdon and Capt. T. Williamson.

D'Oyly, George, D.D., 1778–1846, educated at, and Fellow of, Bene't College, Cambridge, Rector of Buxted, 1815; of Lambeth and Sundridge, Kent, 1820. Letters to Sir Wm. Drummond rel. to his Œdipus Judaicus, 1812, '13, 8vo. Two Discourses, 1811, 8vo. Life of Archbp. San-croft, 1821, 2 vols. Serms., chiefly Doctrinal, 1827, 8vo. Occasional serms. and pamphlets. Serms., with a Memoir by his son, 1847, 2 vols. 8vo. Dr. D'Oyly was a contributor to the London Quarterly Review. In 1813, in conjunction with the Rev. Richard (now Bishop) Mant, he commenced the preparation of an annotated Bible, to be pub. by the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge. The 1st number appeared Jan. 1, 1814; complete, Oxf. and Lon., 1814, 3 vols. 4to. It has been frequently reprinted at Cambridge and Oxford alternately, and the sale has probably not fallen short of 40,000 copies. New edit., Lon., 1848. Vol. i., Old Test. and Apoc. Vol. ii., N. Test., r. 8vo. Pub. also with the sacred text in 3 vols. r. 8vo, 1850.

"Of the labour attending this publication some idea may be formed, when it is stated that the works of upwards of one hundred and sixty authors have been consulted for it, amounting to several hundred volumes. On the fundamental articles of Christian verity.—The Delty and atonement of Jesus Christ, and the personality and offices of the Holy Spirit,—this work may be pronounced to be a library of divinity."—T. H. Horne's Bibl. Bib. See the comments in Bickersteth's Christian Student.

The purchaser should also procure the Rev. Dr. Wilson's Index to this commentary. It is more complete than the one annexed to the work. The Rev. Mr. Bellamy's Concordance also should accompany it. The Rt. Rev. Bishop Hobart of New York pub. an edit. of this Bible, with additional notes, New York, 1818–20, 2 vols. 4to.

"He has greatly enhanced the value of this work by numerous additional notes, selected from the writings of upwards of thirty of the most eminent divines, (not noticed by Drs. Mant and D'Oyly,) whose names are a sufficient pledge for the orthodoxy of the annotations taken from their writings. . . . Many other notes are likewise selected from several of the authors cited by Bp. Mant and Dr. D'Oyly. Bp. Hobart's additional notes are twofold: 1. Critical and Explanatory; and 2. Practical. The latter are most numerous, and are greatly calculated to increase the value of this commentary."—T. H. Horne, ubi supra.

See a biographical notice of Dr. D'Oyly in Lon. Gent. Mag., March, 1846, and Memoir by his son, prefixed to his Serms. pub. in 1847.

D'Oyly, Robert. Four theolog. Dissertations, 1728. "This is a book which contains some original and curious disquisitions, but not always in accordance with received opinions. The discussions are conducted in a manner somewhat similar to those of Delany."—Orms: Bibl. Bib.

The Dissertations are recommended by Dr. A. Clarke. Doyley, Dr. Antiquity of Arms. See Hearne's Collection, p. 175, 1771. Etymology, Dignity, and Antiquity of Dukes, Ib., p. 183.

Drage, Wm. Medical treatises, Lon., 1665–68. Drage, or Drage, Wm., Clerk of the California. Voyage of the California for the discovery of a Northwest passage, &c., Lon., 1748, 2 vols. 8vo.

"A pedantic, disputatious, dogmatist performance."—Barrow's Arctic Voyages, p. 287, 1818.

The Great Probability of a N. West Passage, 1768, 4to.

Drakard, John. Life of Col. Wardle, 1810.

Drake. Introduction to English, 1688, 8vo.

Drake. The Innocent Vindicated, 1718, 8vo.

Drake, Mrs. Defence of the Female Sex, 1696

Drake, Benjamin, 1794–1841, "a native of Mason county, Kentucky, a resident of Cincinnati, Ohio, a most amiable and excellent man, a lawyer by profession, for many years edited a literary and family newspaper, published weekly at Cincinnati, and largely circulated in Ohio. It was a paper of high moral tone and literary merit, conducted with ability and good taste—filled with cheerful, attractive contributions, well-wrought fictions, and sound criticism.

His published writings, other than the above, were, with their dates:

1827. Cincinnati in 1826. By B. Drake and E. D. Mansfield, pp. 100, 12mo.

1830. The Western Agriculturist and Practical Farmer's Guide; a compilation.

1838. The Life and Adventures of Black Hawk, with Sketches of Keokuk, the Sac and Fox Indians, and the late Black Hawk War, pp. 228, 12mo. Tales and Sketches from the Queen City, pp. 180, 12mo. This is a volume of cheerfully and tastefully written fictions and sketches of life and manners in the West. It is creditable to the writer's talents, and commendable for its purity of thought and sentiment.

1840. Life of General William Henry Harrison; a small vol. of perhaps 250 pages, prepared by B. Drake, jointly with Col. Charles S. Todd of Frankfort, Kentucky.

1841. Life of Tecumseh, and his brother the Prophet, with a Historical Sketch of the Shawnee Indians, pp. 235, 12mo. This is the most elaborate of Mr. Drake's works, and is a carefully-prepared memoir from facts, the most of which were collected by himself in the country where Tecumseh had lived and acted, and from a great number of respectable persons who had known that chief."

For the above notice we are indebted to a well-known and highly-respected man of letters, Judge James Hall, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Drake, Charles D., son of Dr. Daniel Drake. Treatise on the Law of Suits by Attachment in the U. States, Boston, 1854, 8vo; 2d ed., 1858, 8vo.

"The members of the profession owe much to Mr. Drake for his successful labours in producing this valuable treatise upon a branch of the law hitherto untouched by any writer."

Drake, Daniel, M.D., 1785–1852, a native of Plainfield, New Jersey, a resident of Cincinnati, Ohio, was a brother of Benjamin Drake. "When he was quite young, his parents removed to Mason county, Kentucky, where he received such an education as the common county schools afforded. When grown he went to Cincinnati, then a village, where he studied medicine; attended two courses of lectures at the Medical School of the University of Penna., at Philadelphia, where he graduated; became a very distinguished practitioner and teacher of medicine; was a professor in the Ohio Medical College, Cincinnati; Cincinnati Medical College, do.; Transylvania Medical College, Lexington, Ky.; Louisville Medical College, Louisville, Ky.; Jefferson Medical College, Philada.—all distinguished schools; where he was associated with the most eminent men of the profession, and held equal rank with the foremost. He was a teacher of medicine nearly all his professional life; an able, instructive, and popular lecturer. He was an original thinker, with an active, vigorous mind, an ardent temperament, unwearied industry, and a perseverance and energy of purpose wholly indomitable, and capable of extraordinary achievement. A philanthropist in the largest sense, he devoted himself freely and habitually to works of benevolence and measures for the amelioration of distress, the extension of religion and intelligence, the good of his fellow-creatures, the honour and prosperity of his country. His habits were simple, temperate, abstemious; his labours incessant.

List of his books, with the dates of publication:

1810. Notices concerning Cincinnati, pp. 64, 12mo.

1815. Picture of Cincinnati, pp. 250, 12mo.

1832. Practical Essays on Medical Education, and the Medical Profession in the United States, pp. 104, 12me. A Practical Treatise on the History, Prevention, and Treatment of Epidemic Cholera, designed for both the Profession and the People, pp. 180, 12mo.

1850. A Systematic Treatise, historical, etiological, and practical, on the principal diseases of the Interior Valley of North America, as they appear in the Caucasian, African, Indian, and Esquimaux varieties of its population, pp. 878, 8vo. Cincinnati: published by W. B. Smith.

1854. The second volume of the same, posthumously published, Phila., Lippincott, Grambo & Co., pp. 985, 8vo. This is probably the most important and valuable work ever written in the United States. The subject is large. The work could not be compiled. The subject was new, and the materials were to be collected from original sources, from observation, personal inspection, oral evidence, &c. It occupied many years; and was, probably, in contemplation during the whole or the most part of Dr. Drake's long professional life. For many years he spent the vacations between the winter courses of lectures in travelling over this great valley, taking a district at a time, exploring each district thoroughly, noting distinctly and minutely its physical character, peculiarities, climate, soil, mountains, hydrography, productions, every thing which could affect health or longevity. He visited physicians and intelligent men, and collected facts and opinions—and established correspondences. In this great work, he describes the whole interior of our country, from Canada to Texas, by districts, most elaborately, giving by far the best, most detailed, most reliable, topographical and physical description extant. Then he gives the prevailing diseases of each locality, with the local remedies and practice—classifying and defining the effects of locality, soil, climate, food, &c.; the diseases of the North and South, of the sea-coast, the interior, and the lake—of mountain and valley, &c.

He edited for many years, very assiduously and ably, a Western Journal of Medical Science, published periodically at Cincinnati."

For the above notice we are indebted to Judge James Hall of Cincinnati, Ohio. See DRAKE, BENJAMIN.

An excellent memoir of Dr. Drake, by his friend Edward D. Mansfield, LL.D., has been issued by Applegate & Co., Cincinnati, 1855, 12mo, pp. 408.

Drake, Edw. Cavendish. A Collection of authentic Voyages and Travels from the best writers, Lon., 1770, fol.

Drake, Sir Francis, 1546-1596. A list of works, giving an account of the voyages of this eminent navigator, will be found in Lowndes's Bibl. Manual. Some of these were compiled from his own notes, or we should have been unable to introduce his name, even thus briefly.

Drake, Francis, d. 1770, a surgeon and antiquary of York, England. Eboracum, or The History and Antiquity of the City of York, the Cathedral Church, and Lives of the Archbishops, of that See, from its original to the present time, Lon., 1738, fol.

"Drake is among the most tolling of topographers; but his history of the City merits the gratitude of the townsmen. It is a folio, teeming with text, and full of copper-plate embellishments."—Dibdin's Northern Tour.

A magnificent copy, extensively illustrated, and expanded to six vols. folio, was sold at Mr. Fauntleroy's sale for £136 10s. It was purchased by Mr. Hurd; subsequently it fell into the hands of Mr. Henry G. Bohn—always on the lookout for book treasures—and he offered it at the comparatively low price of £80. Drake and Mr. Cæsar Ward are said to have been the sole authors of The Parliamentary or Constitutional History of England, 1751, 24 vols. 8vo. Med. con. to Phil. Trans., 1748.

Drake, James, M.D., 1667-1707, an eminent political writer, physician, and anatomist. His principal works are: Hist. of the Last Parliament, Lon., 1702, 8vo. Historia Anglo-Scotia, 1703, 8vo. These two works gave great offence, (the latter to the Scots,) and were burnt by the hands of the common hangman. Memorial of the Ch. of England, written in conjunction with Mr. Polly, 1704, 8vo. This offended the Queen and Parliament, and great efforts were made to discover the author. In 1706 he was prosecuted for pub. Mercurius Politicus, a newspaper offensive to the government. The Sham Lawyer, a Comedy. Anthropologia Nova; or A New System of Anatomy, 1707, 2 vols. 8vo; poeth., pub. by Dr. Wagstaffe, 2d ed., 1717. Appendix, 1728. This is a work of merit.

"If Dr. Lower has been so much and so deservedly esteemed for his solution of the systole of the heart, Dr. Drake, by accounting for the diastole, ought certainly to be allowed his share of reputation, and to be admitted as a partner of his glory."—Dr. Wagstaffe.

Drake, James. Medical Orations, 1742, 4to.

Drake, Joan. Mrs. Drake revived, 1647, 12mo.

Drake, Joseph Rodman, 1795-1820, a native of New York, began to contribute poetical compositions to the periodicals at a very early age. The first four of the Croaker Pieces, (pub. in the N. York Evening Post, March 10-20, 1819,) were written by him; after the fourth number, Fitz-Greene Halleck was admitted as a partner, and the literary firm was henceforth Croaker & Co. The lively satire of these sallies gave them a great reputation at the time of their publication. Drake's longest poem is The Culprit Fay; his best-known composition, The American Flag. Their poetical merit is unquestionably of a high order. In 1836 a collection of Drake's poetical pieces was pub. by Commodore Dekay, son-in-law of the author.

"The extraordinary mental power and genius of Dr. Drake were manifested at a very early period; when not over seven years of age, he had acquired much literary information; and at the age of fourteen he had written many verses of merit. . . . He possessed great tenacity of recollection and power of quick discrimination. His thoughts flowed gracefully, and his power of language was prompt. Indeed his peculiarity was that of instantaneous creation; for thought, imagination, truth, and imagery, seemed to combine and produce their results in a moment."—N. F. Willis.

Drake, Nathan, Vicar of Sheffield from 1695 to 1713. Serms., 1695, '97, 4to.

Drake, Nathan, M.D., 1766-1836, a native of York, England, and a descendant of the preceding, was educated at the University of Dublin. In 1792 he settled at Hadleigh, Suffolk, where, for the long term of forty-four years, he ministered to the health of his patients and the mental and moral welfare of his race. The following list of his literary works we extract from the Lon. Gent. Mag., Aug., 1836: The Speculator; a Periodical Paper written in conjunction with Dr. Edward Ash, 1790, 8vo. Poems, 1793, 4to. Literary Hours, 1st ed., 1798, 8vo; 4th ed., 1820, 3 vols. 8vo. Essays illustrative of the Tatler, Spectator, and Guardian, 1805, 3 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., 1812. Essays illustrative of the Rambler, Adventurer, Idler, and other periodical papers to the year 1809, 2 vols. 8vo. The Gleaner; a series of Periodical Essays selected from authors not included in the British Essayists, 1811, 4 vols. 8vo. Shakespeare and his Times, 1817, 2 vols. 4to. Winter Nights, 1820, 2 vols. 8vo. Evenings in Autumn, 1822, 2 vols. 8vo. Noontide Leisure, 1824, 2 vols. 8vo. Mornings in Spring, 1828, 2 vols. 8vo. We regret that we have not space to enlarge upon the merits of Dr. Drake's invaluable works. They have done much to stimulate a taste for useful and elegant literature. In addition to the publications named above, he pub. a number of professional treatises, and left in MS. A Selected Version of the Psalms, with copious Notes and Illustrations.

We have been surprised and mortified to notice the shameful ignorance prevailing in America respecting the publications of this eminent writer. We remember on one occasion listening to an hour's dissertation on Shakespeare, from a well-known public lecturer, who confessed, when we recommended to him the study of Drake's Shakespeare and his Times, that he had never heard of such a book! Yet that high authority, Archdeacon Nares, thus commends this invaluable storehouse of Shakespearean information:

"No work has hitherto appeared, and we may venture almost to pronounce that none can in future be produced, in which so much of agreeable and well-digested information on this subject will be found, as in this masterly production of Dr. Drake. . . . It may be considered as a magnificent temple, dedicated to the genius of Shakespeare. . . . Its publication will form an epocha in the Shakespearean history of this country. So abundant is the light thrown by it upon the singularly interesting period in which the poet lived, that not only every admirer of his writings, but every person who is curious on the subjects of our literature, manners, customs, and their history, must occasionally resort to it for information." Read the whole of this interesting review in Lon. Gent. Mag., 83, Pt. 2: p. 211, 334.

We must find room for one or two opinions upon this literary benefactor of his age:

"In 1803 I got a bright new book, fresh from the press in those days, on which I still reflect with pleasure; namely, Drake's Literary Hours. It became my favourite companion for years afterward, and it was this work, more than all others, which at that early age fixed my affections on literary pursuits."—Gillies's Literary Veteran.

"If I were called to name the writer in the lighter walks of English literature, who, by his essays and ingenious illustrations of our standard authors, is most calculated to refine the taste and to excite an ardent thirst for reading and literary pursuits, I should name Dr. Nathan Drake."—Cleveland's Eng. Lit. of the Nineteenth Century.

Drake's works should have years ago been republished in America.

Drake, R. Essay on the Gout, Lon., 1758, 8vo.

"A work of no merit, being little more than a quack advertisement."—Dr. Wall's Bibl. Brit.

Drake, Rev. Roger. Vindictæ, &c., Lon., 1641, 4to. Sacred Chronology, 1648, 8vo. Holy Mount, 1653, 12mo. The Sacrament, 1658, 8vo.

Drake, Roger, D.D. Serms., 1676, '77.

Drake, Samuel, D.D. Serms., &c., 1670-1724. New ed. of Archbp. Parker's De Antiquitate Britannicæ Ecclesiæ, 1729, fol.

Drake, Samuel G., b. 1798, in New Hampshire, author and bookseller, was the first to establish an Antiquarian Bookstore in the U. S., (Boston, 1828.) Hist. of Indian Wars, 1825, 12mo. Indian Biography, 1832, 12mo. Book of the Indians, 1833. New ed., enlarged, 1852, 8vo. Old Indian Chronicle, 1836, 18mo. New Eng. Hist. and Gen. Regr., 8 vols. 8vo. Hist. and Antiquities of Boston, 1855, pp. 768. Contrib. to numerous periodicals.

"The Book of the Indians is a work of high authority for facts."

Drake, Rev. W. Antiquarian papers in Archæol., 1777, '79, '89.

Drake, Sir Wm. Speech in Parl., Lon., 1641, 4to.

Drake, Wm. Serm., York, 1745, 8vo.

Drake, Rev. Wm. Theolog. and educational works, Lon., 1847-53.

Drallac, John. See COLLARD, JOHN.

Dransfield, Wm. Short Serms. for Families and Villages, Lon., 1824-33, 3 vols. 12mo; many eds.

"The sentiments are strictly scriptural and evangelical, expressed in a clear and perspicuous style, and the subjects of which they treat of the greatest importance."—Lon. Congreg. Mag. Guide to the Choice of Books, 12mo. Family Worship, 6th ed., 1848, p. 8vo.

Drant, Thomas, D.D., d. about 1578? a divine of some celebrity—"better known as the first English metrical translator of Horace in 1567, a work of excessive rarity when found in a perfect state," (Dibdin)—was a zealous opponent of Popery. See a notice of, and extracts from, his Three godly and learned Sermons, 1584, 8vo, in Dibdin's Library Companion. He pub. several other original works and translations.

"Drant is equally bold and familiar with Latimer—but more quaint, with greater affectation of learning and with less warmth of eloquence than Fox." See Tanner; Phillips's Theatrum Poetarum; Warton's Hist. of Eng. Poetry; Brit. Bibliographer.

Drant, Thomas. Serms., 1637.

Draper, Charles. Fables, Lon., 1761, 12mo.

Draper, Lt. Col. E. A. Address to the Public in the case of Brig. Gen. Picton, &c., 1806.

Draper, Henry. Lectures on the Liturgy, Lon., 1806, 8vo; on the Collects, 1813, '14, 3 vols. 8vo.

"A perspicuous, sensible, evangelical exposition."—Lon. Eclectic Review.

"Contains no small portion of the jargon of the conventicle."—Lon. Critical Review.

Draper, John Wm., b. 1811, near Liverpool, England; graduated at the University of Pennsylvania, 1836; Prof. of Chemistry in the University of N. York, 1839; has pub. many valuable treatises on chemistry, physiology, and mixed mathematics. Some of his memoirs on the chemical action of light have been trans. in France, Germany, and Italy. Human Physiology, Statical and Dynamical; or, The Conditions and Course of the Life of Man: being the Text of the Lectures delivered in the Medical Department of the University of New York; illustrated by nearly 800 fine wood-cuts from photographs; new ed., N. York, 1858, 8vo, 650 pages.

"Stands first of our physiological treatises."—Lon. Med. Times.

"Deserves to be in the library of every student of physiology."—Lon. Athen.

Draper, Lyman C., b. 1815, near Buffalo, N. York. Since 1833 he has been actively engaged in collecting facts relating to the History and Biography of the Western States of the U.S., and the result of his researches present perhaps the most valuable collection of material for a series of border-biographies ever made. Such a series is now (1858) in course of preparation by Mr. D., assisted by Benson J. Lossing, Esq. He edited with ability vols. I., II., and III. of the Hist. Soc. of Wisconsin Collection.

Draper, W. H. The Morning Walk and other Poems, Lon., 1751, 8vo.

Draper, Sir Wm., Lt. Genl. and K. B., 1721-1787, Lt. Govr. of Minorca, 1779, visited America in 1769, in which year he married Miss De Lancey, daughter of the Chief Justice of New York. This lady died in 1778, leaving a daughter, born 1773.

Sir Wm. is best known by his controversy with Junius, an account of which will be found in Woodfall's edit. of Junius's Letters, Lon., 1812. Answer to the Spanish Arguments, Lon., 1764, 8vo. Observs. on Murray's Defence, 1783, 4to.

Draper, Wm. Serms., Lon., 1791, 8vo. 20 Serms., 1796, 8vo.

"They are written in plain and easy language, and are well adapted to the abilities of country congregations."

Reading Lessons for Children. Pts. I and 2, 1812, 8vo.

Drapes, Edward. Theolog. treatises, 1646-49, 4to.

Draxe, Thomas. Theolog. works, &c., Lon., 1608-16.

Dray, Thomas. Chronic Diseases, 1772, 8vo.

Drayton, J. B. Poems, 1813, 12mo.

Drayton, John, d. 1822, aged 60, Governor of S. Carolina, 1800-02, and 1808-10, and U. States District Judge, pub. the historical material collected by his father under the title of Memoirs of the American Revolution from its commencement to 1776, inclusive, as relating to the State of S. Carolina, &c., 1821, 2 vols. 8vo. He had previously pub. View of S. Carolina, 1802, 8vo.

Drayton, Michael, 1563-1631, a native of Hartshill, Warwickshire, is said to have studied for some time at Oxford: this has been questioned, but we think that the testimony of Sir Aston Cokain confirms the statement. For his education he appears to have been indebted to Sir Henry Goodere, and among his most eminent patrons were the Countess of Bedford, and Sir Walter Aston. To the hospitality of the latter he refers, when complaining of his want of success in gaining the smiles of the court upon the accession of James I.:

"I have neglected my papers [the Poly-Olbion] sometimes two years together, finding the times since his majesty's happy coming in, to fall so heavily upon my distressed fortunes, after my zealous soul had laboured so long in that which, with the general happiness of the kingdom seemed not then impossible somewhat also to have advanced me. But I instantly saw all my long-nourished hopes even buried alive before my face: so uncertain in this world be the end of our dearest endeavours! And whatever is herein that tastes of a free spirit, I thankfully confess to proceed from the continued bounty of my truly noble friend Sir Walter Aston; which hath given me the best of those hours, whose leisure hath effected this which now I publish."

He takes care that the name of his benefactor shall never be forgotten, so long as his own great poem shall be fresh in men's memory:

"Trent, by Tizall graced, the Astons' ancient seat,

Which oft the Muse hath found her safe and sweet retreat."

The Earl of Dorset proved as kind to his age, as Sir Walter Aston had to his earlier years, and under the roof of this generous nobleman he spent his declining days in repose and comfort, beloved by his associates, and admired by his countrymen at large.

In 1593, he pub. a collection of pastoral pieces under the title of Idea: the Shepherd's Garland, fashioned in 9 Eglogs, &c., 4to. Reprinted as Pastorals, &c., with the Man in the Moon, &c., 1619, fol. A few years later he gave to the world the Barrons' Warres, 4to, (some copies dated 1596,) and England's Heroical Epistles, 1598, 8vo. The Downfall of Robert of Normandy, Matilda, and Gaveston were also written before 1598. In 1613, fol., appeared the first of his principal work The Poly-Olbion, containing 18 songs. This was reprinted in 1622 with the addition of 12 songs, making 30 songs in the whole, or 30,000 lines, written in Alexandrian couplets! This folio is adorned with 30 maps. In 1627 he pub. The Battaille of Agincourt, Nymphidia, The Court of Fayrie, The Moon Calfe, Elegies, &c., fol., and in 1630 he pub. The Muses Elizium, 4to. Many of his smaller poetical pieces were issued separately, as his Holy Hymnes, Moyeses, The Owl, &c. Collective editions of his poems were pub. in 1605, 8vo; 1609, fol.; 1610, 8vo; 1613, 8vo; 1619, fol.; 1630, 8vo; 1637, 12mo. Works, 1748, fol; 1752, 4 vols. 8vo. See particulars of editions of his separate and collected works in Lowndes's Bibl. Man.

Among the most admired of his compositions, with the exception of his principal performance, seem to have been the Heroical Epistles. They are now held in light estimation, but the Nymphidia can never become obsolete until the spirit of true poetry shall have lost its charms. In 1814 (r. 8vo) Sir S. Egerton Brydges reprinted 100 copies at the Lee Priory Press.

Burton, the antiquary of Leicestershire, his "near countryman and old acquaintance," considers that the name of Drayton alone exalted the poetical eminence of England to an equality with Italy itself!

"Though those Transalpinæ account us Tramontani rude and barbarous, holding our brains so frozen, dull, and barren, that they can afford no inventions or conceits, yet may he [Drayton] compare either with their old Dante, Petrarch, or Boccaccio, or Neoteric Martiella, Pignatello, or Stigliano. But why should I go about to commend him whom his own works and worthiness have sufficiently extolled to the world?"—Description of Leicestershire.

Drayton was not entirely neglected in the generation succeeding his own:

"The Barons' Wars contains several passages of considerable beauty, which men of greater renown, especially Milton, who availed himself largely of all the poetry of the preceding age, have been willing to imitate."—Hallam's Introduc. to Lit. Hist.

His principal performance, The Poly-Olbion, is indeed a most singular production. Imagine a poet gravely proposing as the subject of his muse—A Chorographical description of all the tracts, rivers, mountains, forests, and other parts of this renowned Isle of Great Britain; with intermixture of the most remarkable stories, antiquities, wonders, &c. of the same.

None but a great poet could have made such a subject attractive, and none but a thorough philologist could have forced poetry to perform so well the office of prose. Bishop Nicolson greatly prefers the first portion to its successor:

"The first eighteen of these songs had the honour to be published with Mr. Selden's notes; the other twelve being hardly capable of such a respect."—English Hist. Lib.

It was indeed no small advantage to the poet to have so distinguished an annotator.

"Drayton was honoured by a commentator who must have given fame to any writer. If Selden's taste was equal to his learning, Drayton is indeed most highly distinguished."—Dr. Vicesimus Knox's Essays.

Headley remarks:

"His Poly-Olbion is one of the most singular works this country has produced, and seems to me eminently original. The information contained in it is in general so acute, that he is quoted as an authority both by Hearne and Wood. His perpetual allusions to obsolete traditions, remote events, remarkable facts and personages, together with his curious genealogies of rivers, and his taste for natural history, have contributed to render his work very valuable to the antiquary."—Select Beauties of Ancient English Poetry.

"His Poly-Olbion is certainly a wonderful work, exhibiting at once the learning of an historian, an antiquary, a naturalist, and a geographer, and embellished by the imagination of a poet."—Eliz's Specimens of the Early English Poets.

Bp. Nicolson commends the accuracy of The Poly-Olbion: "It affords a much truer account of this kingdom, and the dominion of Wales, than could well be expected from the pen of a poet."—English Hist. Lib.

"Drayton is a sweet poet, and Selden's notes to the earlier part of the Poly-Olbion are well worth your perusal. . . . Yet there are instances of sublimity in Drayton."—COLERIDGE.

"There is probably no poem of this kind in any other language, comparable together in extent and excellence to the Poly-Olbion; nor can any one read a portion of it without admiration for its learned and highly-gifted author. Yet perhaps no English poem, known as well by name, is so little known beyond its name; for while its immense length deters the common reader, it affords, as has just been hinted, no great harvest for selection, and would be judged very unfairly by partial extracts. It must be owned also, that geographical antiquities may, in modern times, be taught better in prose than in verse; yet whoever consults the Poly-Olbion for such objects will probably be repaid by petty knowledge which he may not have found anywhere else."—Hillam's Introduc. to Lit. Hist. See also Warton's Hist. of Eng. Poetry; Biog. Brit.; Censura Litteraria; Brydges's Imaginative Biog.; Disraeli's Amenities of Lit.; Drake's Shaksp. and his Times; Phillips's Theatrum Poetarum.

One of the most poetical tributes offered to Drayton's muse, is that of Dr. Jas. Kirkpatrick:

"Drayton, sweet ancient Bard, his Albion sung,
With their own praise her echoing Valleys rung;
His bounding Muse o'er every mountain rode,
And every river warbled where he flow'd."

See Pierre, canto II.

Drayton, Thomas, D.D. The Promises, Lon., 1657.
Drayton, Chief Justice Wm. Henry, 1742-1779, one of the principal promoters of American independence, and President of the Provincial Congress, died suddenly in Philadelphia, while attending to his duties as a member of Congress. He compiled a History of the American Revolution, &c., which was pub. by his son. See DRAYTON, JOHN. His descendants now living amply sustain the honour of the family. See Ramsay's Hist. of the Revolution in S. Carolina, 1785, 2 vols. 8vo.

Drebel, Cornelius, 1572-1634, a native of Holland, died in London, where he distinguished himself by his knowledge of natural philosophy. The principal of his works is entitled De Natura Elementorum, Hamb., 1621, 8vo.
Drelingcourt, P. Speech, Dublin, 1822, 4to.

Drennan, Wm., M.D. A Letter to Earl Fitzwilliam, and two to Wm. Pitt, 1795, '99.

Drew, Edward. Serm., Lon., 1803, 8vo.

Drew, G. S. 8 Serms., Lon., 1845, 8vo; 1849.

"The composition is clear and forcible; the sentiments are evangelical; and the tendency of each discourse is to enlighten and impress."—Lon. Biblical Rev.

Serm., 1849, 8vo. Evening Classes for Young Men; 2 Lect., 1852, 12mo.

Drew, John. Address, 1649; Plea, 1651; both theolog.

Drew, John. Manual of Astronomy, Lon., 1845, r. 18mo; 2d ed., 1853, 12mo.

Drew, Rich. A Balance Level, Nic. Jour., 1808. The Society of Arts voted Mr. Drew ten guineas for this invention.

Drew, Robert. Serms., 1725, '35, 8vo.

Drew, Samuel, 1765-1833, a shoemaker of Cornwall, a converted infidel, became editor of The Imperial Magazine. Remarks on Paine's Age of Reason, 1798, 1803, '20. The Immateriality and Immortality of the Human Soul, 1802, 8vo; 8th ed., 1848, 12mo. Trans. into French. "This work on the soul is truly wonderful, and nothing like it was ever published."—Prof. Kidd, in a Letter to J. H. Drew.

"His masterpiece of metaphysical argument is contained in his Essay on the Soul, from which he has been styled The English Plato."—Lon. Christian Remembrancer.

Life of Dr. Coke, 2 vols. Identity and General Resurrection of the Human Body, 1809, 8vo. Being and Attributes of God, 1820, 2 vols. 8vo. Remains, Sermons, &c., edited by his son, 8vo. Life of, by his son, 8vo.

"Incident, anecdote, or sentiment, is in every page; and the piety, not enthusiasm, but religious philosophy, that runs throughout, gives a charm to the whole."—Lon. Chr. Advocate.

Drew, Wm. Fontanieu's Art of making coloured crystals to imitate Precious Stones, Lon., 1789, 8vo.

Drew, Wm. A., b. 1798, in Massachusetts, an agricultural writer. Glimpses and Gatherings during the Great London Exhibition of 1851, 12mo, pp. 404. Contrib. to various religious and agricultural journals.

Drewe, Major Edward, of 35th Regt. Military Sketches, 1784, 8vo.

Drewitt, Thomas. Theolog. treatises, 1799, 1801.

Drewry, C. S. Patent Law, Lon., 1838, 8vo. Injunctions, 1841, 8vo; Supp., 1849. New ed., with Supp., 1849.

Drinker, Anna, a native of Pennsylvania, better known by the nom de plume of Edith May, has attained considerable distinction as a poetess. Her contributions to the Home Journal were highly commended by N. P. Willis. Poetical Works, 1851, 8vo; 2d ed., 1854.

"Her dramatic power, observation of life, imagination, fancy, and the easy and natural flow of her verse, which is nowhere marred by any blemish of imperfect taste, entitle this very youthful poet to a place in the common estimation inferior to none occupied by writers of her years. And there are scattered through her poems gleams of an intelligence which they do not fully disclose, and felicities of expression betraying latent power greater than is excited, so that we are not authorized to receive what she has accomplished, brilliant as it is, as a demonstration of the entire character and force of her faculties."—Grinnold's Female Poets of America, 1853.

Tales and Poems for Children, 1855, 12mo.

Drinkwater, John, Capt. 72d Regt. Hist. of the late siege of Gibraltar, with a Description and Account of that Garrison from the earliest Periods, Lon., 1785, 4to; new ed., 1844, p. 8vo.

"A book so replete with interest and information, as to be truly a legend of the United Services of the day."—United Service Mag.

"One of the most interesting and instructive military histories in our language. No officer should be without a copy."—Naval and Military Gas.

Drisler, Henry, b. 1818, on Staten Island, New York; graduated at Columbia College, New York City, 1839; appointed Tutor in Ancient Languages in the same institution, 1843; Adjunct Professor, 1843, and Professor of Latin, 1847. Assisted Professor Anthon in several of his classical works; re-edited, with considerable additions, Liddell and Scott's edition of Porson's Greek Lexicon, New York, 1851-52, 8vo. The sale of this invaluable lexicon reached 25,000 copies in two years after publication, (1851-53.) Had in press a greatly-enlarged edition of Yonge's English-Greek Lexicon, which was destroyed by fire. It is now (1858) being re-stereotyped. Professor Drisler has in a forward state of preparation a Greek-and-English Lexicon for the use of schools.

Driver, Abr. and Wm. Agricult. of Hants, 1794.

"It claims no particular notice."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Driver, Wm. See DRIVER, ABR.

Drope, Francis. Short and sure guide in the practice of raising and ordering Fruit Trees, Oxf., 1672, 8vo.

Drope, John. Hymenean Essay, Oxf., 1622.

Drought, Rev. Robert. Anacreon, with trans., &c. by the Rev. Hercules Younge, 1802, 12mo.

Drouville, J. B. Lancers, 1811, 4to.

Drury, J. H. Great Yarmouth, 1826, 8vo.

Druitt, Robert. Church Music, Lon., 1845, 8vo.

Druitt, Robert. Difficult Subjects in Anatomy and Surgery, 2d ed., Lon., 1846, '48. Surgeon's Vade Mecum, 6th ed., 1853, 12mo. Principles and Practice of Minor Surgery. New Amer. ed., by F. W. Sargent, M.D., author of Modern Surgery, &c., Phila., 8vo.

"An unsurpassable compendium, not only of surgical, but of medical, practice."—Lon. Med. Gaz.

"It is a useful handbook for the practitioner, and we should deem a teacher of surgery unpardonable who did not recommend it to his pupils. In our own opinion, it is admirably adapted to the wants of the student."—Provincial Medical and Surgical Journal.

Drummond, (in association with Bromley.) Obi; or the History of Three-fingered Jack, 1800.

Drummond, Dr. Abernethy. Appendix to the Church Catechism, Lon., 1759, 8vo.

Drummond, Alex. Travels, Lon., 1754, fol.

Drummond, Alex. M. Febribus, Edin., 1770, 8vo.

Drummond, Rev. D. T. K. Corresp. between, and Bp. Terrot, Edin., 1842, 8vo. Episcopacy in Scot., 1845. Other works.

Drummond, Edward. Voyage up the Gambia. See Moore's Travels, p. 175.

Drummond, E. A. H., D.D., 1758-1830. Serm., 1792, 4to. Catech. Ques. prior to Confirmation, Lon., 1813, 8vo; 1818.

Drummond, George H. Theolog. works, &c., 1790-1804.

Drummond, Mrs. H. Theolog. works, Edin., 1845, 8vo.

Drummond, Henry. Dialogues of Prophecy, 1827-29, 3 vols. 8vo. Defence of the Students of Prophecy, Lon., 1828, 8vo. Social Duties, or Christian Principles, 1839, sm. 8vo. Revealed Religion, 1845, 8vo.

"Contains many striking passages of great power, depth, and truth."—English Churchman.

Drummond, Henry H. Obs. on Edin. Rev., 1810.

Drummond, James L., M.D. Letters to a Young

Naturalist on the Study of Nature and Natural Theology, Lon., 1832, 12mo.

"Happily calculated to generate in a young mind, to sustain in the matured, and to renovate in the old, an ardent love of nature under all her forms."—Lon. Monthly Review.

First Steps to Botany, 1833, 12mo.

"Adapted to make the study at once attractive and improving in a high degree."—Lon. Eclectic Review.

First Steps to Anatomy, 1845, 8vo.

"The work of a master throwing off the results of his own knowledge."—Lon. Spectator.

On Natural Systems of Botany, 1845, 12mo.

Drummond, Lord John. His Case, 1715, 8vo.

Drummond, John. Case of A. Oswald, 1715, 8vo.

Drummond, John, M.D. Ed. Med. Ess., 1731.

Drummond, John. Grammar, 1767.

Drummond, Dr. R. Grammatical Illustrations, Bombay, 1808, fol.

Drummond, Robert Hay, 1711–1776, son of the Earl of Kinnoull, educated at Christ Church, Oxford, Bishop of St. Asaph, 1748; trans. to Salisbury, 1761; Archbishop of York, 1761. Serms., a Letter on Theological Study, and Memoirs of his Life, by his son, George Hay Drummond, Edin., 1803, 8vo. These sermons had before been pub. separately.

Drummond, T. Med. Com., 1789–93.

Drummond, T. Theolog. treatises, 1805–09.

Drummond, T. Theolog. letters, 1812, 12mo.

Drummond, T. B. Forms of Proceedings, &c., 1826.

Drummond, Thomas. Poems, 1756, 8vo.

Drummond, William, of Hawthornden, 1585–1649, is distinguished as the first Scottish poet who wrote well in English. He was the son of Sir John Drummond, was educated at the University of Edinburgh, and studied civil law in France; but upon the death of his father retired to his beautiful seat at Hawthornden, one of the loveliest spots in the world. Here it was that Ben Jonson paid him his memorable visit in 1619. Poems, Edin., 1616, 4to. Other edits. see Lowndes's Bibl. Man. Cypress Grove, a moral treatise in prose. Flowers of Zion, or Spiritual Poems, 1623, '30, 4to. Hist. of Scotland, 1423–1542, Lon., 1655, fol.; 1681, 8vo. Memorials of State, Familiar Epistles, Cypress Grove, &c., 1681, 8vo. Polemo Middinia, Oxf., 1691, 4to. The first macaronic poem by a native of Great Britain. Works, Edin., 1711, fol.; 1791, sm. 8vo. New edit., with Life by Peter Cunningham, 1833, 12mo. Among the most admired of Drummond's compositions are The River of Forth Feasting, On Spring, To the Nightingale, The Praise of a Solitary Life, To his Lute, and Tears on the Death of Mæliades.

The Forth Feasting is designed to compliment King James II. on his visit to Scotland in 1617.

"It attracted the envy as well as the praise of Ben Jonson, is superior in harmony of numbers to any of the compositions of the contemporary poets of Scotland, and in its subjects one of the most elegant panegyrics ever addressed by a poet to a prince."—LORD WOODHOUSELEE: Life of James.

"Drummond's sonnets, I think, come as near as almost any others to the perfection of this kind of writing, which should embody a sentiment, and every shade of a sentiment, as it varies with time and place and humour, with the extravagance or lightness of a momentary impression."—HALLIET.

"The sonnets of Drummond of Hawthornden, the most celebrated in that class of poets, have obtained probably as much praise as they deserve. But they are polished and elegant, free from conceit and bad taste, in pure unblemished English; some are pathetic or tender in sentiment, and if they do not show much originality, at least would have acquired a fair place among the Italians of the sixteenth century."—HALLAM: Introduc. to Lit. Hist.

As a prose writer, though not without great merit, Drummond is not so much admired as in the more congenial walks of poetry. Yet who can linger over the solemn cadence of the Cypress Grove, as the moralist argues against unreasonable fears of the "last enemy," without being continually reminded of that rare old master of impressive thought and eloquent language—the wise Leech of Norwich, Sir Thomas Browne?

Drummond, Sir William, d. 1828. Govt. of Sparta and Athens, Lon., 1794, r. 8vo. Trans. of the Satires of Persius, 1798, 8vo. Acad. Questions, 1805, 4to, vol. i. Herculanensis, 1810, 4to; in conjunction with R. Walpole, Esq. Punic Inscrip., 1811, r. 4to. Œdipus Judaicus, 1811, 8vo.

"The learned baronet gravely maintains that the whole Old Testament is allegorical; and that a great, if not the leading, object of it, is to teach a correct system of astronomy."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

This curious work was answered by Drs. D'Oyly, Townsend, and in the Lon. Quart. Rev., ix. 329. Odin, part I, 1817, r. 4to. Origines, or remarks on the origin of Empires, States, and Cities, 1824–29, 4 vols. 8vo.

"Every reader of these pages cannot hesitate to attribute to him the most patient industry of antiquarian research, and the application of great learning and skill to the varied difficulties of his undertaking."—British Critic.

Drummond, William H., D.D. Battle of Trafalgar; a Poem, 1806, 12mo. Trans. of Lucretius, 1809, cr. 8vo. Giant's Causeway; a Poem, 1812, 8vo.

Drury. Resurrection, 1812, 8vo.

Drury, Anna Harriet. Annesley and other Poems, Lon., 1847, 8vo.

"We at once and unhesitatingly couple her name with the famous names of Goldsmith and Crabbe."—Lon. Literary Gaz.

Friends and Fortunes; a Moral Tale, 1849, 12mo: 2ded. 1853. The Inn by the Seaside, 1852, 8vo. Light and Shade, 1852, 12mo.

Drury, Charles. Farmers' Discovery in Agriculture, Lon., 1810, 8vo; enlarged, 1815, 8vo.

"A person of fruitful ideas, but puny and meagre, and had not a large grasp of original conception."—Donaldson's Agricult. Big.

Drury, Drew. Illustrations of Natural History, Lon., 1770, '73, '82, 3 vols. 4to, £7 17s. 6d., plain; £15 15s., coloured. Highly commended by Linnæus, Fabricius, and others.

"Opus entomologicus splendidissimus."—REV. WM. KINER.

"A most beautiful and valuable work on entomology."—HARTWORTH.

New ed., entitled Illustrations of Foreign Entomology, edited by J. O. Westwood, 1837, 3 vols. 4to, £6 16s. 6d.; nearly 700 figures, engraved by Moses Harris.

"The exquisite work of Drury displays the complete insect in a degree of perfection that leaves nothing to be desired."—SIR JAMES EDWARD SMITH, Pres. of the Linnæan Society.

"Very accurate and excellent figures."—SWAINSON'S Zoological Illustrations.

"Drury's work has not been surpassed in beauty and accuracy of execution by any of the sumptuous efforts of the present day."—ENCYC. BRIT.: Art. Entomology.

"A few years ago, a new edition, with impressions from the original plates, was published under the editorial care of Mr. Westwood, by Mr. Henry Bohn, the bookseller. It is not easy to speak of this edition in terms of too high commendation."—SIR WILLIAM JARDINE.

Drury, Edward. Office of a Bishop, 1709.

Drury, Capt. O'Brien, R.N. Observations on Magnetic Fluid; Trans. R. Irish Acad., 1788.

Drury, Robert. Madagascar; or Robert Drury's Journal during 15 Years Captivity there, Lon., 1722, 8vo.

"The most authentic account of that country that has ever appeared."—WALL'S Bibl. Brit.

Drury, W. B. Reports, 1838, '39, Dubl., 1840, 8vo, and F. W. Walsh; Reports Irish Chancery, 1839–42, 2 vols. 8vo, and R. E. Warren, ditto, 1841, 4 vols. 8vo.

Drury, Wm., teacher of Poetry and Rhetoric in the English College of Douay in the 17th century. Drammatica Poemata, Douay, 1628, 8vo; 1658, 12mo.

Dryander, Jonas, 1748–1810, a Swedish naturalist, resided for many years in London, where, at the time of his death, he was Vice Pres. of the Linnæan Society, of which he was one of the principal founders. He wrote several botanical treatises, edited some works of a similar character, and drew up Catalogus Bibliothecæ Historico-Naturalis Josephi Banks, Baroneti, 5 vols. 8vo, Londini, 1798.

"An excellent and admirably arranged catalogue: the most comprehensive of the kind ever published. It contains a collation of all the articles in the library, and is illustrated with much curious and important information."—LOWNDES.

Drych, Theophilus Evans. Y Prif Oesoedd yn Ddwy Ran. Argraphwyd, 1716, 8vo. Concerning Wales.

Dryden, Charles, drowned 1704, whilst attempting to swim across the Thames, near Datchett, was the eldest son of the great poet. He was educated at Westminster and King's College, Cambridge. A few Latin and English fugitive poems comprise his contributions to the literature of his country.

Dryden, John, b. Aug. 9, 1631, d. May 1, 1700, a native of Aldwinckle, Northamptonshire, was a son of Erasmus Driden, (the poet preferred the substitution of y.) a rigid Puritan, of an ancient family of great respectability in Northamptonshire. The grandfather of the poet, Sir Erasmus Driden, was created a knight by James I. He had the good fortune to be placed at Westminster School, under the tutorship of the famous Dr. Busby, the stimulating properties of whose classic rod are well known to fame. Whilst there he translated the third Satire of Persius, and wrote an elegy on the death of Lord Hastings. In 1650 he was removed to Trinity College, Cambridge, where he took the degree of B.A. in January, 1653–54; in 1657 he was made A.M. by a dispensation from the Archbishop of Canterbury. In the same year he removed to London, where he obtained employment as secretary to a relative, Sir Gilbert Pickering. At this time he was a great admirer of Oliver Cromwell, and on his death in 1658 Dryden commemorated the event in his Heroic Stanzas on the late Lord Protector. He dried his tears, however, in time to enable him to welcome a new sovereign in Astræ Redux, a Poem on the Restoration, 1660. This was followed by A Panegyric to his sacred Majesty, King Charles II., on his Coronation, 1661. In 1662 he produced his first play, The Wild Gallant, which does not seem to have impressed the public very favourably. Not discouraged, however, he soon afterwards gave to the world The Rival Ladies, and The Indian Emperor. The last made him famous; but, alas, it made him also a married man! It was written in conjunction with Sir Robert Howard, through whose means he became acquainted with Lady Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the Earl of Berkshire. Poets of course must make love to such of the opposite sex as they happen to encounter; here was the daughter of an earl, evidently, too, not ill pleased with his respectful homage. In an evil day he wooed and won. The parties soon discovered that they were totally unsuited to each other; so her ladyship railed, and the poet revenged himself by

"Vending such bitter sarcasms against the matrimonial state as too plainly bore evidence to his domestic misery."

In 1667 appeared Annus Mirabilis, the Year of Wonders, being an account of the events of 1666. Here we have such matters noted down as the Great Fire, the Dutch War, &c. None but a great poetical genius could have triumphed over the prosaic impediments to success in a piece of this character. The following verses, describing the unhappy condition of those London citizens whose houses had been destroyed by the fire, and those who were spending their last night under their loved roofs, are truly graphic:

"Those who have homes, when home they do repair,
To a last lodging call their wandering friends;
Their short uneasy sleeps are broke with care,
To look how near their own destruction comes.
Those who have none, sit round where once it was,
And with full eyes each wonted room require:
Haunting the yet warm ashes of the place,
As murder'd men walk where they did expire."

Dryden's was now a great name with the wits, and in 1668 he succeeded Sir William Davenant as poet-laureate. His excellent essay upon Dramatic Poetry, published in the same year, proved that the author was not unworthy of his new honours. But we are sorry to add, that as a dramatic author he displays—indeed ostentatiously obtrudes—faults of the gravest character. No writer seems to be fonder of what is unholy, unlovely, and of bad report. The becoming decencies of domestic life, the sanctity of the matrimonial tie, the respect due to the ministers of the Christian faith, and the awful consideration of accountability to the Supreme Being, would be deemed strange matters in Dryden's dramatic circles.

"Unhappy Dryden! in all Charles's days,
Rose common only boasts unspotted lays!"—POPE.

The following is a list of the plays, with their appropriate dates, of which Dryden was sole or joint author:

1. THE WILD GALLANT, Comedy, 1662.
2. THE RIVAL LADIES, Tragi-Comedy, 1664.
3. THE INDIAN EMPEROR, Tragi-Comedy, 1667.
4. SECRET LOVE; or, THE MAIDEN QUEEN, Tragi-Comedy, 1668.
5. SIR MARTIN MAR-ALL, Comedy, 1668.
6. THE TEMPEST, altered by Davenant and Dryden from Shakespeare, Comedy, 1670.
7. TYRANNICK LOVE; or, THE ROYAL MARTYR, Tragedy, 1670.
8. AN EVENING'S LOVE; or, THE MOCK ASTROLOGER, Comedy, 1671.
9. THE CONQUEST OF GRANADA, Tragedy, 1672.
10. ALMANZOR AND ALMAHIDE; or, THE CONQUEST OF GRANADA, part 2, 1672.
11. MARRIAGE A-LA-MODE, Comedy, 1673.
12. THE ASSIGNATION; or, LOVE IN A NUNNERY, Comedy, 1673.
13. AMBOYNA, Tragedy, 1673.
14. THE STATE OF INNOCENCE AND FALL OF MAN, Opera, 1676.
15. AURENGZEBE, Tragedy, 1676.
16. ALL FOR LOVE, Tragedy, 1678.
17. ŒDIPUS, by Dryden and Lee, Tragedy, 1679.
18. THOILUS AND CRESSIDA, Tragedy, 1679.
19. THE KIND KEEPER; or, MR. LIMBERHAM, Comedy, 1680.
20. THE SPANISH TYRANT, Tragi-Comedy, 1681.
21. THE DUKE OF GUISE, by Dryden and Lee, Tragedy, 1683.
22. ALBION AND ALBANIUS, Opera, 1685.
23. DON SEBASTIAN, Tragedy, 1690.
24. AMPHTRYON, Comedy, 1690.
25. KING ARTHUR, Opera, 1691.
26. CLEOMENES; or, THE SPARTAN HERO, Tragedy, 1692.
27. LOVE TRIUMPHANT, Tragi-Comedy, 1694.

"He also brought upon the stage a play of which he only wrote one scene, called The Mistaken Husband, Comedy, 1675."

See Biog. Dramat.; and for lists of Dryden's various publications, first editions, &c., see Watt's Bibl. Brit. and Biog. Brit. To the latter work, to Johnson's and Scott's Lives of the poet, and to the sources noticed below, we must also refer the reader for the details of Dryden's literary life, his friendships and his quarrels, his successes and defeats, his trials and his consolations. He was truly "a man of war from his youth," and his controversies with the Buckinghams, Rochesters, Shadwells, and Settles of the day, present any thing but a flattering picture of the manners and minor morals of that period. We have already animadverted upon Dryden's share of culpability in those abuses of the drama which provoked the righteous indignation of Jeremy Collier. We were pleased to be able to record also the acknowledgment and repentance of the erring dramatist.

That his religious impressions became more lively towards the close of his life, we have good reason to believe. Shortly after the accession of King James he became a convert to the Church of Rome, in whose communion he yielded up his last breath. His sincerity, indeed, has been much doubted both by contemporaries and posterity; but we are loath to suspect hypocrisy where the other presumption is at all tenable. Scott is willing to lean on the side of charity, and the comments of Dr. Johnson exhibit an excellent specimen of his rare powers of comprehensive yet terse argumentation:

"That conversion will always be suspected that apparently concurs with interest. He that never finds his error till it hinders his progress towards wealth or honour will not be thought to love truth only for herself. Yet it may easily happen that information may come at a commodious time; and, as truth and interest are not by any fatal necessity at variance, that one may by accident introduce the other. When opinions are struggling into popularity, the arguments by which they are opposed or defended become more known; and he that changes his profession would perhaps have changed it before, with the like opportunities of instruction. This was the then state of Popery; every artifice was used to show it in its fairest form; and it must be owned to be a religion of external appearance sufficiently attractive."—Life of Dryden.

The Revolution dissipated the hopes which the polemical poet had entertained of bettering his embarrassed fortunes; and when, two years later, he was called to his last account, he left not enough of the substance for which he had so laboriously toiled to carry him in peace to the "house appointed for all living."

Without crediting the "wild story" of the drunken brawl and "tumultuary and confused" proceedings which are alleged to have interrupted the funeral cortège and delayed the solemn services for the departed, there seems no reason to doubt that the body of the most illustrious Englishman of the day was obliged to wait for its last asylum until the completion of a hasty subscription enabled the survivors to discharge the expenses connected with its interment. He lies in Westminster Abbey, between the graves of Chaucer and Cowley.

Of the family of the poet, his widow died insane, after surviving her husband fourteen years. Charles, the eldest son, was drowned in the Thames, as already mentioned. John, the second son, died at Rome in 1701. Erasmus Henry, the third son, died in 1710; he succeeded to the title of baronet, which passed to his uncle, the brother of the poet, and thence to his grandson. The present representative of the family (1855) is Sir Henry Edward Leigh Dryden, of Canons-Ashby.

It is now proper that we should particularize those productions of Dryden, in addition to those already noticed, which have secured him so high and so permanent a position in the republic of English letters. In accordance with our custom, we shall adduce the opinions of those who by their own reputation have earned a right to a respectful hearing when they pronounce upon the merits or demerits of others. The limited space to which we are necessarily confined will be a sufficient apology for the paucity and brevity of our quotations.

Absalom and Achitophel, 1681, (of the 2d part, 1684, all but 200 lines of Dryden's was written by Nahum Tate,) is a poetical satire against the party which by the management of Lord Shaftesbury placed the Duke of Monmouth at its head. The Duke of Buckingham was the ostensible author of The Rehearsal, 1671, in which Dryden was ridiculed under the name of Bayes. The poet now returned the compliment by representing Buckingham in the character of Zimri, in Absalom and Achitophel. To the second part, Dryden contributed about 200 lines, in which he introduces Settle and Shadwell under the names of Doeg and Og. He never cared for disparity of numbers:

"His antagonists came on with infinite zeal and fury, discharging their ill-aimed blows on every side, and exhausted their strength in violent and ineffectual rage; but the keen and trenchant blade of Dryden never makes a thrust in vain, and never strikes but at a vulnerable point."—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

"Of this poem, in which personal satire was applied to the support of public principles, and in which therefore every mind was interested, the reception was eager, and the sale so large, that my father, an old bookseller, told me he had not known it equalled but by Sacheverell's trial."—DR. JOHNSON.

"The greatest of his satires is Absalom and Achitophel, that work in which his powers became fully known to the world, and which, as many think, he never surpassed. . . . The spontaneous ease of expression, the rapid transitions, the general elasticity and movement, have never been excelled."—HALLAM: Introd. to Lit. History.

The Medal, a satire against sedition, 1681, may be considered as a continuation of the preceding. It drew forth bitter responses, and Shadwell's zeal against the satirist was rewarded by his becoming the hero of Mac Flecknoe, pub. in the ensuing year.

In this year, also, he gave to the world Religio Laici, which professes to be a defence of the Holy Scriptures against deists, papists, and Presbyterians.

Of a far different character, however, are the dogmas espoused in The Dialogues of the Hind and Panther, 1687, which is a defence of his newly-adopted church against the Church of England. We need have no doubts of the result of a controversy between the milk-white Hind—the Church of Rome—and the Spotted Panther—the Church of England. Its effect, however, was rather to injure than aid the cause which the poet had so much at heart:

"A fable which exhibits two beasts talking Theology, appears at once full of absurdity; and it was accordingly ridiculed in the City Mouse and Country Mouse, a parody written by Montague, afterwards Earl of Halifax, and Prior, who then gave the first specimen of his abilities."—DR. JOHNSON.

But Mr. Hallam defends the poet's rather unusual vehicle for polemical debate:

"The first lines in the Hind and Panther are justly reputed among the most musical in our language; and perhaps we observe their rhythm the better because it does not gain much by the sense; for the allegory and the fable are seen, even in the commencement, to be awkwardly blended. Yet notwithstanding their evident incoherence, which sometimes leads to the verge of absurdity, and the facility they give to ridicule, I am not sure that Dryden was wrong in choosing this singular fiction. It was his aim to bring forward an old argument in as novel a style as he could; a dialogue between a priest and a person would have made but a dull poem, even if it had contained some of the excellent paragraphs we read in the Hind and Panther. It is the grotesqueness and originality of the fable that gives this poem its peculiar zest, of which no reader, I conceive, is insensible; and it is also by this means that Dryden has contrived to relieve his reasoning by short but beautiful touches of description, such as the sudden stream of light from Heaven which announces the conception of James's unfortunate heir, near the end of the second book."—Introd. to Lit. History.

In 1693 appeared the folio which contained a trans. of Juvenal, partly by Dryden, and of Persius, entirely by Dryden.

"A version completely surpassing all before and all who have succeeded him."—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

His trans. of Virgil, pub. in 1697, has always been held in the highest estimation by many critics, but perhaps an equally erudite verdict could be produced against it. Dr. Felton defends him against the critics:

"Those who excel him, where they observe he hath failed, will fall below him in a thousand instances where he hath excelled."

Dissertation on Reading the Classics, 1730, p. 130. And Pope remarks in reference to Dryden's translation of some parts of Homer:

"Had he translated the whole work, I would no more have attempted Homer after him than Virgil: his version of whom (notwithstanding some human errors) is the most noble and spirited translation I know in any language."—Preface to Pope's trans. of Homer's Iliad.

Dr. Trapp (see his trans. of Virgil into blank verse, 1735) and Mr. Hallam may be cited as dissentients from such florid panegyric.

In 1700 appeared his Fables, Ancient and Modern, translated into verse, and modernized from Homer, Ovid, Boccaccio, and Chaucer. These are probably the best-known to the present generation of all Dryden's pieces. Though not without faults of haste and carelessness, the merits of this collection are not to be questioned. In addition to the larger pieces, there are a number of "Short original poems, which, with his prologues, epilogues, and songs, may be comprised in Congreve's remark, that even those, if he had written nothing else, would have entitled him to the praise of excellence in his kind."—DR. JOHNSON.

The most celebrated of these compositions is the Ode for St. Cecilia's Day, commonly known by the name of Alexander's Feast.

"The ode for St. Cecilia's Day, perhaps the last effort of his poetry, has been always considered as exhibiting the highest flight of fancy, and the exactest nicety of art. This is allowed to stand without a rival. If indeed there is any excellence beyond it in some other of Dryden's works, that excellence must be found. Compared with the ode on Killigrew, it may be pronounced perhaps superior on the whole, but without any single part equal to the first stanzas of the other."—DR. JOHNSON.

Mr. Hallam considers that both of these odes have been much overrated:

"Dryden's fame as a lyric poet depends a very little on his Ode on Mrs. Killigrew's death, but almost entirely on that for St. Cecilia's Day, commonly called Alexander's Feast. The former, which is much praised by Johnson, has a few fine lines, mingled with a far greater number ill conceived and ill expressed; the whole composition has that spirit which Dryden hardly ever wanted, but it is too faulty for high praise. The latter used to pass for the best work of Dryden, and the best ode in the language. Many would now agree with me that it is neither one nor the other, and that it was rather overrated during a period when criticism was not at a high point. Its beauties indeed are undeniable; it has the raciness, the rapidity, the mastery of language which belong to Dryden; the transitions are animated, the contrasts effective. But few lines are highly poetical, and some sink to the level of a common drinking-song. It has the defects, as well as the merits, of that poetry which is written for musical accompaniment."—Introd. to Lit. Hist.

If there be a doubt whether Dryden can claim a place in the first class of poets, there can be no question of his pre-eminence as a writer of prose. A few opinions upon this department of his labours, together with some comments upon his general characteristics as an author, must conclude our article.

"The matchless prose of Dryden, rich, various, natural, animated, pointed, lending itself to the logical and the narrative, as well as the narrative and picturesque; never balking, never cloying, never wearying. The vigour, freedom, variety, copiousness, that speaks an exhaustless fountain from its source: nothing can surpass Dryden."—LORD BROUGHTAM.

The great Edmund Burke studied the prose of Dryden with no little interest and profit. His principal prose compositions are his Essay on Dramatic Poetry, and his admirable Prefaces and Dedications.

"Dryden may be properly considered as the father of English criticism, as the writer who first taught us to determine upon principles the merit of composition. Of our former poets, the greatest dramatist wrote without rules, conducted through life and nature by a genius that rarely misled and rarely deserted him. Of the rest, those who knew the laws of propriety had neglected to teach them."—DR. JOHNSON.

"Dryden as a critic is not to be numbered with those who have sounded the depths of the human mind, hardly with those who analyze the language and sentiments of poets, and teach others to judge by showing why they have judged themselves. . . . The style of Dryden was very superior to any that England had seen. He seems to have formed himself on Montaigne, Balzac, and Voltaire; but so ready was his invention, so vigorous his judgment, so complete his mastery over his native tongue, that in point of style he must be reckoned above all the three. He had the ease of Montaigne, without his negligence and embarrassed structure of periods; he had the dignity of Balzac, with more varied cadences, and without his hyperbolic tumour; the unexpected turns of Voltaire, without his affectation and air of effort."—HALLAM, ad. supra.

"The prose of Dryden is the most numerous and sweet, the most mellow and generous, of any our language has produced."—DR. WATSON: Essay on Pope.

There is no modern writer whose style is more distinguished. Energy and ease are its chief characters. . . . His English is pure and simple, nervous and clear, to a degree which Pope has never exceeded, and not always equalled."—DR. BEATTIE'S Essays.

Pope's admiration of Dryden is well known. He declared that "He could select from his works better specimens of every mode of poetry than any other English writer could supply."

"As to his writings, I may venture to say in general terms, that no man hath written in our language so much, and so various matter, and in so various manners, so well. . . . His prose had all the clearness imaginable, together with all the nobleness of expression, all the graces and ornaments proper and peculiar to it, without deviating into the language or diction of poetry. I have heard him frequently own with pleasure, that, if he had any talent of English prose, it was owing to his having often read the writings of the great Archbishop Tillotson. His versification and his numbers he could learn of nobody: for he first possessed those talents in perfection in our tongue; and they who have succeeded in them since his time have been indebted to his example; and the more they have been able to imitate him, the better they have succeeded."—CONGREVE: Dedication of Dryden's Dramatic works to the Duke of Newcastle.

"I cannot pass by that admirable English poet, without endeavouring to make his country sensible of the obligations they owe to his Muse. Whether they consider the flowing grace of his versification, the vigorous sallies of his fancy, or the peculiar delicacy of his periods, they will discover excellencies never to be enough admired."—DR. GARTN: Pref. to the trans. of Ovid's Metamorphoses.

See Biog. Brit., where will be found also Hayley's and Churchill's tributes to Dryden, and many other panegyrics well worth perusal. The celebrated controversy between Miss Seward and Mr. Weston, respecting the comparative merits of Dryden and Pope, will be found in Gent. Mag., 1789, '90. The opinions of two distinguished modern critics, one upon the merits of our author as a poet, the other respecting his excellencies as a writer of prose, must conclude our citations:

"He is a writer of manly and elastic character. His strong judgment gave force as well as direction to a flexible fancy; and his harmony is generally the echo of solid thoughts. But he was not gifted with intense or lofty sensibility; on the contrary, the grosser any idea is, the happier he seems to expatiate upon it. The transports of the heart, and the deep and varied delineations of the passions, are strangers to his poetry. He could describe character in the abstract, but could not embody it in the drama; for he entered into character more from clear perception than fervid sympathy. This great High-Priest of all the Nine was not a confessor to the finer secrets of the human breast. Had the subject of Elissa fallen into his hands, he would have left but a coarse draught of her passion."—Campbell's Essay on English Poetry.

"The prose of Dryden may rank with the best in the English language. It is no less of his own formation than his versification; it is equally spirited and equally harmonious. Without the lengthened and pedantic sentences of Clarendon, it is dignified when dignity is becoming, and is lively without the accumulation of strained and absurd allusions and metaphors, which were unfortunately mistaken for wit by many of the author's contemporaries."—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

It is difficult to conclude with so many valuable comments around us yet lacking a place, but there must be an end to all articles. The reader can peruse the subject at his pleasure, and, to aid his investigations, we recommend to him the consultation of the following works, in addition to the many cited above. The biographies, explanatory prefaces, and critical annotations to be found in many of the specified editions of the poet's works, will prove invaluable auxiliaries to the proper understanding of his productions, and the literary and political history of the time:

Miscellaneous Works, Lon., 1702-09, 6 vols. 8vo; 1718, 6 vols. 12mo. Plays, 1725, 6 vols. 12mo. Poems and Translations, 1743, 2 vols. 12mo. Miscellaneous Works, with Explanatory Notes and Observations; also an account of his Life and Writings, 1760, 4 vols. 8vo: edited by Samuel Derrick. Critical and Miscellaneous Prose Works; with Notes and Illustrations, an Account of the Life and Writings of the Author, a Collection of his Writings; by Edmund Malone, 1800, 4 vols. 8vo. Works, now first collected, with Notes, Historical, Critical, and Explanatory, and a Life of the Author, by Walter Scott, 1808, 18 vols. r. 8vo; 2d edit., 1821, 18 vols. Poetical Works, with Notes by Warton; edited by Mr. Todd, 1812, 4 vols. 8vo. Poems, with Memoir by Rev. John Mitford, 1834, 5 vols. 12mo; and Boston, 1854, 5 vols. 12mo, &c. Poetical Works, containing original Poems, Tales, and Translations; with Notes by the Rev. Joseph Warton, D.D., the Rev. John Warton, and others, 1851, r. 8vo. Poetical Works, with Life, Critical Dissertation, and Explanatory Notes, by the Rev. George Gilfillan, Edinburgh and New York, 1855, 2 vols. r. 8vo. Reviews of Dryden's Works, and of various editions: Scott's edition, Edin. Rev., xiii. 116; Analect. Mag., ii. 148. Works, Edin. Rev., (T. B. Macaulay), xvii. 1; Blackw. Mag., (John Wilson), lvii. 133, 503. Dramatic Works, Retrospr. Rev., i. 113. Poetical Works, Museum, xiii. 162. Prose Works, Retrospr. Rev., iv. 55. Life and Times of Dryden, Eclec. Rev., 4th s., xi. 47. Dryden on Chaucer, (John Wilson), Blackw. Mag., lvii. 617, 771. Dryden and Pope, Blackw. Mag., ii. 679; (John Wilson), lvii. 369. Dryden and his Times, Westm. Rev., lxxiii., number for April, 1855.

Dryden, John, 1668?-1701, second son of the preceding, trans. the 14th satire for his father's Juvenal, and wrote a Comedy, for which his father wrote a preface, entitled The Husband his own Cuckold, Lon., 1696, 4to. In 1776 was pub., from his MS., Voyage to Sicily and Malta, 8vo.

Dryden, John, Surgeon. Med. Com., 1788.

Drysdale, John, D.D., 1718-1788, a native of Kirkcaldy, minister of the Tron Church, Edinburgh. Serms., with Life by A. Dalziel, Edin., 1793, 2 vols. 8vo.

"The style is everywhere forcible and impressive, and, at the same time, pure, perspicuous, and elegantly simple."—DR. WM. MOONIE.

"He possessed a most uncommon fertility of original thought."—PROF. DALZIEL.

Drysdale, Wm. Papery Dissected, 1799, 8vo.

Dryswich, Ambrose. The Setting Sun; a Poem, Lon., 1812, 8vo.

Duane, James, d. 1797, first Mayor of N. York after its recovery from the British, member of Congress and Judge, pub. a Law Case. See Documentary History of N. York.

Duane, Matthew. Coins of Macedonia. The Plates by Bartolozzi, 4to. Brockett, 1237, £2 2s. See Lowndes's Bibl. Man., ii. 614.

Duane, Wm., of Philadelphia, 1760-1835, a native of the province of New York. 1. Mississippi Question, Phila., 1803, 8vo. 2. Military Dictionary, Phila., 1810, 8vo. 3. An Epitome of the Arts and Sciences, 1811. 4. Visit to Colombia in 1822, '23, 8vo.

Duane, Wm., b. 1807, at Philadelphia. 1. Passages from the Remembrancer of Christopher Marshall, containing a Revolutionary Journal; edited by Wm. Duane, Phila., 1839, 12mo. New ed., enlarged, entitled Passages from the Diary of Christopher Marshall, 1849. 2. View of the Relation of Landlord and Tenant in Pennsylvania, 1844, 8vo. "It does infinite credit to the author, not only from the clearness of its style, but its lucid and judicious arrangement of the decisions upon the subject."

3. A View of the Law of Roads, Highways, Bridges, and Ferries in Pennsylvania, 1848, 12mo. 4. Coffee, Tea, and Chocolate; their influence upon the health, the intellect, and the Moral Nature of Man; translated from the French, 1846, 12mo.

Duane, Wm. J., of Phila., b. 1780, at Clonmel, Ireland. 1. The Law of Nations investigated in a Popular Manner, Phila., 1809, 8vo. 2. Letters to the People of Penna. on Internal Improvements, 1811, 8vo. 3. Narrative and Correspondence of the Removal of the Deposites, 1838, 8vo.

Du Barry, Edmond L., M.D., Surgeon U.S. Navy. The United States: its Power and Progress; trans. from the French of Guillaume Tell Poussin, Phila., 8vo.

Dubois, Edward. The Wreath; translations, 1799, 8vo. Old Nick, 1802, 3 vols. 12mo. Boccaccio's Decameron, 1804, 2 vols. 8vo. Francis's Horace, with addit. Notes, 1807, 4 vols. 12mo. My Pocket-Book, 1807, 12mo.

Dubois, J. A. 1. The Character, Manners, Customs, and Institutions of the People of India, Lon., 4to; Phila., 2 vols. 8vo. 2. Letters on Christianity in India, Lon., 8vo.

Dubois, P. B. Reflections, Oxon., 1731, 8vo.

Dubois, Peter. Serms., 1732, '37, 8vo.

Dubose, Catherine A., a daughter of the Rev. Wm. Richards, is a native of England, but arrived in America whilst yet a child. In 1849 she was married to Mr. Charles W. Dubose, a lawyer of Georgia. Within the last year or two she has contributed a number of poetical pieces to the Southern Literary Gazette, edited by her brother, Mr. Wm. C. Richards, of Charleston, South Carolina. Mrs. Dubose is also a sister of Mr. Thomas A. Richards, a painter and poet, resident in New York.

Dubost. Appeal to the Public, 1810, 8vo.

Dubost, Chr. Merchant's Assist., Lon., 1804, 8vo. Elements of Com., 1808, 2 vols. 8vo. Commer. Arithmetic, Lon., 12mo.

"A very neat, clear, and precise treatise."—Lon. Month. Review.

Dubourdieu, John. Serms., &c., 1696-1724.

Dubourdieu, John. Statistical Survey of the County of Antrim, Dublin, 1812, 2 vols. 8vo.

Dubue, M. Alcohol, Phil. Mag., 1814.

Ducarel, Andrew Coltee, 1713-1785, an eminent antiquary and civilian, commissary of St. Catherine's and Canterbury, pub. a number of topographical and antiquarian works, a list of which will be found in Watt's Bibl. Brit., and notices in Nichols's Literary Anecdotes. Two of his best-known works are: Anglo-Gallic, Norman, and Aquitain Coins, Lon., 1757, 4to. A new edit. has been long promised. Anglo-Norman Antiquities considered in a Tour through Normandy, 1767, fol.

"A valuable work on this particular subject."—Stevenson's Voyages and Travels.

Ducarel, P. J. Orig. Poems and trans., 1807, cr. 8vo. De Wyrhale, 8vo. Paraphrase of the Psalms, &c., 8vo.

Duchal, James, 1697-1761, an Irish Nonconformist divine, settled successively at Cambridge, Antrim, and Dublin. Arguments for the truth of the Chris. Relig., &c., Lon., 1753, 8vo.

"A work of singular merit."—KIRKPATRICK.

Serm., 2d ed., 1765, 3 vols. 8vo.

"Our author's style is in general nervous and clear."—Lon. Critical Review.

Duché, Jacob, D.D., d. 1798, aged about 60, Rector of Christ's Church and St. Peter's, Philadelphia, was a native of that city. His pulpit oratory was greatly admired. Serm., 1775, 8vo. Caspius's Letters, Phila., 1774, 12mo; Bath, England, 1777, 2 vols. 8vo. See Rich's Bibl. Amer. Nova, 1774, '77. Letter to Gen. Washington on the Declaration of Independence, Bath, 1777, 4to. Discourses on various Subjects, Lon., 1779, 2 vols. 8vo; 1790. Three edits. Serm., 1781, 8vo.

"His discourses have great warmth and spirit; and at times are in the strain of our old divines."—Lon. Monthly Review.

Duck, Arthur, 1580-1649, an eminent English civilian, Chancellor of London, and Master of the Requests. Vita Henrici Chichele, &c., Oxon., 1617, 4to. In English, and added to Bates's Lives, Lon., 1681, 4to; and again pub., 1699, 8vo. De Usu et Auctoritate Juris Civilis Romanorum in dominiis principum Christianorum, Lon., 1653, 79, 8vo; several edits. at home and abroad; added to De Ferrière's Hist. of the Civil Law, Lon., 1724, 8vo. In this work Duck had the assistance of the learned Dr. Gerard Langbaine.

Duck, Stephen, who drowned himself in the Thames in a fit of insanity, was originally a thresher, but became a clergyman of the Church of England. He wrote a good deal of poetry, which is only remarkable from the humble condition and limited opportunities of the author. The reader will find his biography in Southey's Lives of Uneducated Poets. Poems, Lon., 1730, 8vo; 1736, 4to; 1738, 8vo. Truth and Falsehood, a Fable, 1734, fol. Alick and Isabel, a Poem, 1740, fol. Cæsar Camp, a Poem, 1756, 4to. Poems, with Memoirs of his Life by Spence, 1794, 12mo. Swift indulges in some humour at the expense of Duck's poetical pretensions.

Duckett, Sir George. Trans. of Michaelis's Burial and Resurrection of Jesus Christ, Lon., 1827, 12mo. Michaelis shows that the testimony of the evangelists is sufficient to place the resurrection of Christ beyond the reach of doubt. See a review in British Critic and Theolog. Rev., v. 631.

Duckett, Thomas. Proceedings concerning the improvement of all manner of Land, &c., 1659.

Ducy, Sir Simon. Speech against the 12 Bishops accused of High Treason, Lon., 1642, 4to.

Duddell, Benj. Treatises on the Eye, Lon., 1729-36.

Dudgeon, G. Overseers of the Poor, Lon., 1838, 8vo.

Dudgeon, Wm. Unity of God, &c., 1737, 8vo.

Dudley. See NOXII.

Dudley, Dean, b. 1823, in Kingfield, Maine, a member of the Boston Bar. 1. The Dudley Genealogies, Bost., 1848, 8vo. 2. Pictures of Life in England and America, 1851, 8vo.

Dudley, Earl. Letters to the Bishop of Llandaff, 2d ed., Lon., 1840, 8vo.

"A most interesting volume."—Lon. Lit. Gazette.

Dudley, C. W. Reports Cases Ct. Appeals S. Carolina, 1837, '38, Columbia, 1838, 8vo; ditto, Cases at Law, 1837, '38, Columbia, 1838, 8vo.

Dudley, Dud. Metallum Martis, Lon., 1665, 12mo.

Dudley, Edmund, 1462-1510, executed for high treason, wrote a book, still in MS., entitled The Tree of the Commonwealth.

Dudley, F. Amoroso, a Novel, 1810.

Dudley, G. M. Reports Cts. Law and Chancery of Georgia, N. York, 1837, 8vo.

Dudley, Sir Gamaliel. Letter to Prince Rupert, Oxon., 1644, 8vo.

Dudley, Howard. Hist. and Antiq. of Horsham, 1836, sm. 8vo. Composed, printed, and the Illustrations engraved and lithographed from original Sketches by a youth under sixteen.

Dudley, Rev. Sir Henry Bate, 1745-1824, Bart., LL.D., Prebendary of Ely, was distinguished as a political, literary, and convivial character, and still more as a most energetic magistrate. He established several influential journals, and wrote eight dramatic pieces, for a list of which see Biog. Dramat. The Rival Candidates, a Comic Opera, was pub. in 1775, 8vo, and The Travellers in Switzerland, also a Comic Opera, in 1793, 8vo; and again in 1794, 8vo. Sir Henry also wrote some tracts on political economy. See a biographical notice of this gentleman in the Gent. Mag., vol. xciv., pt. 2, 273, 638.

Dudley, Lady Jane. See GNXX.

Dudley, John, Duke of Northumberland, &c., 1502-1553, father-in-law of the preceding, and also executed for high treason. Sayings upon the Scaffold, Lon., 1553, 8vo; and a. a.

Dudley, John, Archdeacon of Bedford. Sermon on Phil. iii. 16, 1729, 8vo; two do. on the Privileges of the Clergy, 1731, 8vo.

Dudley, John. Serm., Lon., 1807, 4to. Metamorphosis of Sona; a Hindoo Tale, 1811, 8vo.

Dudley, John. Identity of the Niger and the Nile, 1821.

Dudley, Rev. John. Naoology; or a Treatise on Sacred Structures, Lon., 1846, 8vo. The Anti-Materialist; denying the Reality of Matter, 1849, 8vo.

Dudley, Joshua. His Memoirs, Lon., 1772, 8vo.

Dudley, Sir Matthew. On Insects in the Bark of decaying Elms and Ashes, Phil. Trans., 1705.

Dudley, Paul, 1675-1751, Chief Justice of Massachusetts, pub. 12 treatises on Nat. Hist., &c. in Phil. Trans., 1720-35, and a theolog. essay against the Church of Rome.

Dudley, Robert, 1532?-1588, Earl of Leicester, son to John, Duke of Northumberland, and a favourite of Queen Elizabeth. Speeches; preserved in the Cabala, Strype's Annals, and Peck's Desiderata Curiosa. Laws and Ordinances, Lon., 4to. See Secret Memoirs of the Earl of Leicester, 1709, 8vo; His Life, 1727, 8vo; Secret Memoirs of Queen Elizabeth, 1706, 8vo.

Dudley, Sir Robert, 1673-1639, son of the preceding, by the Lady Douglas Sheffield, lived in great magnificence at his castle in Florence, where he ended his days. Voyage to the Isle of Trinidad; see Hakluyt's Voyages, p. 574, 1598. Catholicism. A Proposition; see Rushworth's Collections. Del l'Arcano del Mare, 1636, '46, fol.; 1661.

Dudley, Sir Wm. His Case, fol.

Duer, John, LL.D., 1782-1858, an eminent jurist, a native of Albany, N.Y. His publications are: 1. A Lecture on the Law of Representations in Marine Insurance, with Notes and Illustrations, N. York, 1844, pp. 266. Mr. Arnold praises this work as "vigorous, learned, and original" (Arnold on Mar. Ins., Lon., 1848, vol. i. 489, note.)

2. The Law and Practice of Marine Insurance deduced from a critical examination of adjudged cases, the nature and analogies of the subject, and the general usage of commercial nations, vol. i., pp. 775, N. York, 1845; vol. ii., pp. 808, N. York, 1846, 8vo. A full review and critical analysis of this elaborate work, from the pen of Professor Moore of the University of Edinburgh, will be found in the London Magazine and Quarterly Review of Jurisprudence, for November, 1848. The writer says:

"We are confident that this work of Dr. Duer on the important contract of Marine Insurance will not suffer by a comparison with the writings of any other jurist. It is, so far as it has gone, the most complete and able treatise on the subject which has ever appeared in our language."

3. A Discourse on the Life, Character, and Public Services of James Kent, late Chancellor of the State of New York, delivered by request before the Judiciary and Bar of the City and State of N. York, April 12, 1848: N. York, D. Appleton & Co., 1848.

"A most able and interesting eulogy."—W. C. BRYANT.

4. Reports of Cases argued and determined in the Superior Court of the City of N. York; vol. v. Mr. Duer was one of the revisers of the laws of New York; and in conjunction with his colleagues, the Hon. Benjamin F. Baker and the Hon. John C. Spencer, has published three editions of the Revised Statutes of that State. He was Chief-Justice of the Superior Court of the city of New York, and official reporter of its decisions, at the time of his death.

Duer, William Alexander, 1780-1858, brother of the preceding. Their father was Col. Wm. Duer, a prominent delegate to the Continental Congress, and their mother was a daughter of Lord Stirling, of the Revolution. Both brothers occupied a high position in their native State. They died within a few weeks of each other. He was the author of two pamphlets addressed to Cadwallader D. Colden on the Steamboat Controversy.

Duffay. Oil of Olives as a Cure for the Bite of Vipers; Phil. Trans., 1738.

Duff, A. Feudal Rights, Edin., 1838, 8vo. Deeds, chiefly affecting Movables, 1840, 8vo. Comment on Recent Stat. in Conveyancing, 1847, 8vo.

Duff, Alexander, D.D., b. 1808, Perthshire, Scotland, of the Free Church of Scotland Mission, Calcutta. Missions the Chief End of the Christian Church, Edin., 1839, 18mo. On India and India Missions, 1839, 8vo.

"India and India Missions will doubtless take a high place in the Christian literature not merely of the day but of the age, and greatly extend the missionary spirit and seal of the country."—Guardian. See also Presbyterian Review.

The Jesuits: their Origin, &c. 2d ed., 1845, 8vo. Missionary Addresses, 1850, fp. 8vo. Addresses at the Assen. of the Free Church, 1851, fp. 8vo. Other works on Missions. The Indian Rebellion: its Causes and Results, 1858, 8vo.

Duff, James Grant. A Hist. of the Mahrattas, Lon., 1826, 3 vols. 8vo.

"Besides the records of the Mahratta Governments of Poona and Satara, and those of the English East India Company, the authorities for this work are from a great variety of authentic sources, hitherto inaccessible to the public."

Duff, P. North American Accountant, N. York, 8vo. A comprehensive and valuable work.

Duff, Rev. W. Original Genius, 1767, 8vo. Criticisms on Poetry, 1770, 8vo. History of Rhedi. Letters, 1807, 8vo.

Duff, Wm. His Case, 1739, 8vo. Hist. of Scotland from Robert Bruce to James VI., Lon., 1750, fol.

Dufferin, Lady, granddaughter of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, and sister of the Hon. Mrs. Norton, has written many popular songs and ballads, of which the Irish Emigrant's Lament is the best known.

Dufferin, Lord. Letters from High Latitudes: being some account of a Yacht-Voyage to Iceland, Jan Mayen, and Spitzbergen in 1856, Lon., cr. 8vo. Highly commended.

Duffett, Thomas. New Poems, Songs, Prologues, and Epilogues, Lon., 1676, 8vo. See a list of his plays in Biog. Dramat. He ridiculed Dryden, Shadwell, and Settle. "A vein of scurrility and personal ill-nature is apparent."

Duffie, C. R. Serms. for Children, N. York, 18mo. Serms., 2 vols. 8vo.

Duffield, George, 1732-1790, a Presbyterian minister of Philadelphia. Tour with Mr. Beatty along the frontiers of Penna. Thanksgiving Sermon for the restoration of Peace, 1783.

Duffield, George, b. 1794, in Pennsylvania. Spiritual Life, 8vo. Dissertation on the Prophecies, 16mo. Millenarianism Defended, 16mo. Fugitive Discourses on Slavery, Capital Punishment, &c. Claims of Episcopal Bishops Examined, 16mo. Obligation and Perpetuity of the Christian Sabbath, 16mo. Contributor to the Biblical Repository, Presbyterian Mag., &c.

Duffield, John. Singular conduct of Sir W. Lewes, 8vo.

Duffief, N. G. Nature Displayed in teaching French, 19th ed., Lon., 1841, 2 vols. p. 8vo; 21st ed., Phila., 2 vols. 8vo; Spanish, 1826, 2 vols. 8vo.

"The greatest merit of Mr. Duffief's system is, in our opinion, its being so perfectly adapted to English people."—Lon. Magazine.

Pronouncing Fr. and Eng. Dict., new ed., 1847, p. 8vo.

Dufour, Alex. Letter resp. the Naval Pillar, 1799.

Dufour, W. Diseases of the Urinary Passages, &c., Lon., 1794, 1801, '08, 8vo. Cure of Rupture, 8vo.

Dufton, Wm. Deafness and Diseases of the Ear, Lon., 1844, 12mo. Amer. ed., Phila., 1848, 12mo.

Duganne, Augustine J. H., born 1823, in the city of Boston, is the author of many contributions to our national literature, both in verse and prose.

"Of the former he has pub.: Home Poems, Ticknor, Boston, 1844, 18mo. The Iron Harp, Philada., 1847, 18mo. The Lydian Queen, a Tragedy, produced at the Walnut St. Theatre, Phila., 1848. MDCCCXLVIII., or the Year of the People, 1849. Parnassus in Pillory, a Satire, Adriance & Co., N. York, 1851. The Mission of Intellect, a Poem, delivered at Metropolitan Hall, Jan. 20, 1852. The Gospel of Labour, a Poem, delivered before Mercantile Library, N. York, 1853. The True Republic; delivered in N. York, 1854. Poetical Works, Phila., 1856, 8vo; illustrated; the first complete collection of his poems. Prose-Writings: a series of critiques on contemporary authors, published in Sartain's Magazine under the title of 'Revised Leaves': several Dramas, twenty or thirty Novelettes and Romances, and a large number of papers upon a variety of subjects, under various noms de plume, in the different magazines and journals of the day." We subjoin a criticism from the pen of Wm. H. Burleigh:

"Mr. Duganne's lyrical powers are characterized by a nervous energy, a generous sympathy with humanity, a wonderful command of language, and an ardent hatred of wrong and oppression in all their forms. These poems we have read with a keen delight and a growing admiration of their author's genius. They have a distinct character of their own—and are evidently the strong, unrestrained, and indignant utterances of a bold spirit, deeply penetrated with a love for its kind, and intolerant of all despotisms."

Dugard, Samuel. Theolog. treatises, 1673, '87.

Dugard, Thomas. Death and the Grave, 1649.

Dugard, Wm., 1605-1662, an eminent schoolmaster, pub. a Greek Lexicon and other educational works, 1660, &c.

Dugdale, Gilbert. The Time Triumphant, or the Arrival of King James into England, Lon., 1604, 4to.

Dugdale, Sir John, son of Sir William Dugdale. A Catalogue of the Nobility of England according to Precedencies, Lon., 1685, a single folio sheet; reprinted with addits. in 1690.

Dugdale, Richard. Wicked Plots carried on by Seigneur Genelamon, 1679, &c.

Dugdale, Stephen. His Information at the Bar of Commons, 1680, fol.

Dugdale, Sir William, 1605-1686, one of the most distinguished of the many learned antiquaries of whom England can boast, was a native of Shustoke, near Coleshill, Warwickshire. He was educated at the free-school of Coventry, and afterwards instructed in civil law and history by his father. In 1638 he settled in London, and formed an acquaintance with several noted antiquaries, whose influence promoted his taste for the departments of learning in which they delighted. By the aid of Sir Henry Spelman he was created a pursuivant-at-arms extraordinary, by the name of Blanch Lyon; in 1640 was made Rouge-Croix-pursuivant in ordinary, and in 1677 was solemnly created Garter principal king-at-arms. The next day, much against his will, the king conferred upon him the honour of knighthood. To this step Charles II. was no doubt incited by gratitude, as much as by the extraordinary merits of the antiquary, for Dugdale had been one of the most devoted adherents of Charles I. We proceed to notice his principal works: 1. Monasticon Anglicanum, Londini, 1655, '61, '73, 3 vols. fol. Vols. i. and ii. were collected and written by Roger Dodsworth, but arranged, supplied with indexes, and corrected through the press, by Dugdale. Dodsworth died before the tenth part of the first vol. was printed. The general preface to the Monasticon was written by Sir John Marsham. Vol. I. was reprinted with addits. in 1682, and the whole work was epitomized in English, page by page, by James Wright, the historian of Rutlandshire, in 1695, 1 vol. fol. Another edit., abridged, in English, was pub. in 1718, fol., and two additional vols., entitled The History of the Ancient Abbays, Monasteries, Hospitals, Cathedrals, and Collegiate Churches, were pub. in 1722, '23, fol., by Capt. John Stevens. Mr. Peck announced a fourth vol. as nearly ready in 1735, (never pub.,) and left some MS. vols. in 4to, now in the British Museum. See Nichols's Literary Anecdotes, and Ayscough's Catalogue, vol. i., p. 55-67. A new edit. of the Monasticon, considerably enlarged and improved by John Caley, Henry Ellis, and the Rev. B. Bandinel, D.D., was pub. in 54 parts, 1817-30, at £141 15s.; on imp. fol., large paper, proofs, £283 10s. Re-issue, 1846, 8 vols. fol., £31 10s.; in 1849 at 20s. pr. part. Pub. as Coney's Architecture of the Middle Ages, in parts, containing 12 plates, at one guinea each. The new edit., 1817-30, (again, 1846, &c.) of the Monasticon, contains 241 views of ecclesiastical edifices—Monasteries, Abbays, Priories, &c.—engraved by Coney after the originals by Hollar and King.

"Cette édit. renferme toute la substance de la continuation de Stevens, d'autres augmentations et les notes des éditeurs; en outre, beaucoup de nouvelles figures sont ajoutées aux anciennes, que l'on a copiées avec exactitude. Tels sont les avantages qui la font préférer aux premières édit."—BRUNET: Manuel, &c.

"This New Edition is the only one which can be hereafter consulted for information, or quoted for authority, on subjects connected with Church History and Ecclesiastical Property. . . It may be honestly avowed that the annals of the Press, in no country throughout Europe, can boast of a nobler performance; whether on the score of accuracy and fulness of intelligence, or of splendour of paper, type, and graphic embellishments."—Dubin's Library Companion.

To give some idea of the vast expense of the new edit., we need only mention that the cost of drawing and engraving the plates was SIX THOUSAND GUINEAS!

Of the value of this great work it would be difficult to speak in terms of exaggeration:

"Next to Doomsday Book, it is the most ancient and ample record of the history and descent of the greatest portion of the landed property of this country, and has been admitted as evidence in a court of justice, where the original documents had perished. To the Clergy this work possesses an interest not only of an antiquarian and historical character, but one which has a more solid claim to their notice. By its means they are frequently enabled to settle, without employing the costly machinery of the law, disputed questions respecting the property of the Church; and a reference to a very copious index added by the Editors to the Work, will show at once that there is scarcely a single parish which is not mentioned in its pages.

"The Clergy, the Lawyer, the Antiquary, the Historian, the Architect, and Topographer, as well as the possessor of real property, will find the MONASTICON ANGLICANUM one of the most interesting and indispensable works that has ever issued from the press of this country."

The reader will find some valuable remarks on this work, and many interesting particulars respecting the author, in The Life, Diary, and Correspondence of Dugdale, by Wm. Hamper, 1827, r. 4to.

2. The Antiquities of Warwickshire, 1656, fol. This work was the result of twenty years' indefatigable research.

"It must stand at the head of all our county histories."—GROVES.

"There are works which scrupulous accuracy, united with stubborn integrity, has elevated to the rank of legal evidences; such is Dugdale's Warwickshire."—DR. WHITAKER.

Second edit., revised, augmented, and continued by Wm. Thomas, D.D., 1730, 2 vols. fol.

Mr. Gough charges Dr. Thomas with being careless in his authorities, and giving himself very little pains to obtain information. The Antiquities of Warwickshire Illustrated, Coventry, 1765, fol. This wretched affair was pub. by a bookseller, who could not be punished by banishment to Coventry, as he already graced that famous locality.

3. The History of St. Paul's Cathedral in London, from its first foundation, Lon., 1658, fol.; 2d edit., corrected by the author's own hand, with autobiog. details, by Edward Maynard, D.D., 1716, fol. New edit., with a continuation and addit. matter, and some new plates, by Sir Henry Ellis, 1818, fol. This edit. is printed in double columns, and the plates, principally by W. Finden, are faithful copies from the originals. The addit. plates are illustrations of the present cathedral. 4. The History of Imbanking and Draying of divers Ferns and Marshes, 1662, fol. This valuable work was published.

"At the instance of the Lord Gorges and others, who were the principal adventurers in that costly and laudable undertaking for draining the great level extending into a considerable part of the counties of Cambridge, Huntingdon, Northampton, Norfolk, and Suffolk."—Wood.

Second edit., revised and corrected, with three indexes, by Charles Nelson Cole, 1772, fol. 5. Origines Juridicales; or Hist. Memoirs of the English Laws, Courts of Justice, Forms of Trial, &c., 1666, fol.; 2d edit., with addits. in the Savoy, Lon., 1671, fol.; 3d edit., with addits., Lon., 1680, fol.

"Our first inquiries after the History of the Laws of this kingdom ought to begin with the careful reading of Sir William Dugdale's Origines Juridicales; which we shall find so accurately penned, and with so good a mixture of learning and judgment, that 'twill almost do the work alone. I cannot give a better view of this most elaborate treatise, than by telling the reader that it fully answers its title-page."—BISHOP NICOLSON: Eng. Hist. Lib.

6. Chronica Juridicalia, 1658, 8vo. A good abridgment of the above. The compiler was faithful, in one sense at least, for he transfers Sir William's materials by wholesale to his own pages, at which unblushing piracy old Anthony Wood waxes wroth: "Published," says he, "by some downright plagiarist, purposely to get a little money."

7. The Baronage of England, 1675, 76, 3 vols. in 2, fol. "A work abounding in the most valuable information."—REV. J. HUXTER: Hist. of Hallowshire.

"A work which will exist to the latest age, as a monument of its author's historical knowledge and antiquarian learning."

"The Baronage is distinguished by the most laborious research and extraordinary accuracy, and confers honour upon its author."—SIR N. HARRIS NICOLSON.

8. Short View of the late Troubles in England, Oxf., 1681, fol. 9. The Antient Usage in bearing of Arms, Oxf., 1682, 12mo; 1683, '85, '90. New edit., with addits. by T. C. Banks, 1811, fol. 10. A Perfect Copy of all Summons of the Nobility to the Great Councils and Parliaments of this Realm, Lon., 1685, fol. Sir William also pub. a second vol. of Sir Henry Spelman's Councils in 1664; John Selden's Discourse concerning the office of Lord Chancellor of England in 1672, fol.; and wrote part of the folio pub. in 1716, fol., giving an account of a number of Cathedral and Collegiate Churches. He was the chief promoter of Somner's Saxon Dictionary, Oxon., 1659, fol. We have already referred the reader to Hamper's Life of Sir William Dugdale: we also notice a life of him in the Heraldic Miscellanies, pub. by the Rev. James Dallaway; another Life from an original MS., 1713, 8vo, and letters between Dugdale and Sir Thomas Browne in the posthumous works of the latter, 1712, 8vo. We may appropriately conclude our notice of this great man with the fervid eulogy of a Hercules in the same field of research:

"What Dugdale hath done is prodigious. His memory ought to be venerated and had in everlasting remembrance."—ANTHONY WOOD.

As an illustration of the term "prodigious," we may remark that Sir William left 27 folio MS. vols., written by his own hand, to the University of Oxford; and these contain the collections for only two of his works, viz.: The Antiquities of Warwickshire, and the Baronage of England. Of 16 other MS. vols., part of his legacy, some were also in his own handwriting. These monuments of industry, learning, and research are now in the Bodleian Library, the Heralds' College, and the Ashmolean Museum. Sir William's daughter was married to the famous Elias Ashmole: of this learned antiquary, and his widow, we have already discoursed at length on a preceding page. See ASHMOLE, ELIAS.

If any of our countrymen—who are not generally supposed to feel the most lively interest in the records of the past, save as they pertain to the title-deeds and other securities of real estate—feel inclined to blame us for lingering long over the names of the Ashmoles, the Camdens, the Goughs, and the Nicholes, of whom a utilitarian age is not worthy, we shall commend to their meditations the following true maxim, with the hope of a profitable result:

"A contempt for antiquity is rightly considered as the mark of a mean and narrow intellect, of an uneducated and illiberal mind."

Where would have been the history, the art, the philosophy, of past ages, had there been no provident conservators, wise for all generations, to transmit these precious relics to their descendants?

Dugmore, Thomas. Manor of Milbourne, 1800, 8vo. Dugud, Patrick, M.D. Convulsive Disorder; Med. Com., 1777. Virtue of the Wild Cabbage; Ess. Phys. and Med., 1760.

Dugué, Charles Oscar, b. 1821, in New Orleans; educated in Paris. 1. Essais Poétiques, with a Preface by A. Rouquette, of Louisiana. In 1850 he pub. two dramatic works, Mila, or The Death of La Salle on the discoveries of the mouth of the Mississippi River; and Mingo, or The Dying Swan, a celebrated Indian Chief.

Duhigg, Bart. King's Inn Remembrancer, Dubl., 1805, 8vo. Hist. of the King's Inns, 1807, 8vo.

Duhring, Henry, M.D. Art of Living, Lon., 1843, p. 8vo. Remarks on the United States, 1843, p. 8vo. Essays on Human Happiness, 1848, fp. 8vo.

"Happy is life, when sound health, pure feelings, rational thoughts, and noble deeds combine to exalt its earthly course. Then man reveals in himself the image of the Deity, and his home becomes a Paradise."

Duigenan, Patrick, 1735-1816, an Irish civilian, M.P. for Old Leighlin, and afterwards for Armagh. Lachrymæ Academicæ. Political pamphlets and Speeches, 1786-1810.

Duillier, N. F. Latitude at Sea, 1705.

Duke, Rev. Edward. Profusiones Historiæ, or Essays illustrative of the Halle of John Halle of Salisbury, Salisb., 1837, 8vo; vol. i.; all pub.

"We have never encountered any antiquarian disquisitions that were so amusing, delightful, and instructive."—Lon. Monthly Rev. Druidical Temples of the county of Wilt, Lon., 1846, 12mo.

"His collections on the literature of Wiltshire are nowhere surpassed."—Salisbury Journal.

Duke, Francis. Free Grace, 1655, '56, 4to.

Duke, George. The Law of Charitable Uses, with the learned readings of Sir Francis Moore, Lon., 1676, fol. "It was always considered as a standard authority upon this branch of the law."—Bridg. Leg. Bibl.

After being neglected for more than a century, this work was revived and continued by Mr. R. W. Bridgman, Loc., 1805, 8vo.

Duke, Richard, d. 1711, Prebendary of Gloucester, was educated at, and Fellow of, Trinity College, Cambridge. He was intimate with Otway, engaged with some others in the translations of Ovid and Juvenal, and wrote a number of poems.

"In his Review, though unfinished, are some vigorous Hæst. His poems are not below mediocrity; nor have I found much in them to be praised."—Dr. Johnson's Life of Duke.

Serm., 1703; two serms., 1704; fifteen, 1714, 8vo.

"In his sermons, besides liveliness of wit, purity and correctness of style, and justness of argument, we see many fine allusions to the ancients, several beautiful passages handsomely incorporated in the train of his own thoughts; and, to say all in a word, classic learning and a Christian spirit."—Dr. H. FETTER, on Reading the C

Duke, R. T. W., and Francis H. Smith. American Statistical Arithmetick, Phila. See SMITH, FRANCIS H.

Duke, Wm. Lectures on the Sacraments, 1789.

Dulaney, Daniel. Considerations on the Policy of imposing taxes in the Brit. Colonies, Lon., 1766, 8vo.

Dumbell, John. Mathemat. treatises, 1808, '09.

Dummer, Jeremiah, d. 1729, a native of Boston, wrote several theolog. treatises, a defence of the New England Charters, Lon., 1728, 8vo, and 1766; and a Letter to a Noble Lord concerning the expedition to Canada, 1712.

Dumon, Wm. Cantus: The Former Book of the Musick of William Dumon, 1591, 4to.

Dun, Lord. See ERSKINE, DAVID.

Dun, Barclay. Quadrilles, 1818.

Dun, James. Serm., Edin., 1792, 8vo.

Dun, John. Serm., Kilm., 1790, 2 vols. 8vo.

Dunbar, David. Covenants, Lon., 1646.

Dunbar, George, 1774-1851, appointed Professor of Greek in the University of Edinburgh, 1805, discharged the duties of this post until within a few months of his death. He pub. a number of useful educational works, 1812-44, the principal of which is his Greek-English and English-Greek Lexicon, the fruit of eight years' laborious application, 1840, 8vo; 3d ed., 1853, 8vo. The following commendation of a distinguished Grecian must have been highly gratifying to Professor Dunbar:

"My Dear Lord:—I am greatly obliged to you for having permitted me to see Professor Dunbar's Greek Lexicon. It is infinitely the best work which I have ever seen. It has already been of great service to me, who, as you know, am an humble but a most ardent votary of Greek literature. It will tend more to extend the study of Greek than any work now extant."—The Marquis of Wellesley to Lord Brougham, August 17, 1841.

Dunbar, James, LL.D., Prof. of Philos. in the Univ. of Aberdeen. Essays on the Hist. of Mankind in rude and uncultivated Ages, Lon., 1781, 8vo; 2d ed., with addits., 1782, 8vo.

"A very ingenious book."—Dr. JOHNSON.

Dunbar, John. Epigrammatum, Lon., 1616, 8vo.

Dunbar, William, 1465?-1530, a native of Salton, East Lothian, Scotland, was educated at the University of St. Andrew's, and afterwards, becoming a Franciscan friar, travelled in Scotland, England, and France, as a mendicant preacher. He was subsequently employed in a diplomatic capacity by James IV., and resided at his court in receipt of a pension. Of his poems but little was known until the beginning of the last century, when many of them were printed from the MSS. in which they had long reposed. Some of his pieces had been pub. by Chapman and Millar in 1508. Thirty of Dunbar's productions are to be found in the Ancient Scottish Poems, pub. from the MS. of George Bannatyne. In 1834 a complete edit. of his works was pub. by David Laing. He excels both in moral and humorous poetry; and is peculiarly happy in enlisting allegory in the advocacy of truth. His principal allegorical poems are, The Thistle and Rose, The Dance of the Seven Deadly Sins through Hell, and The Golden Terge. The Twa Married Women and the Widow exhibits a specimen—not the most delicate in the world—of his vein of humour. Whether the Friars of Berwick be really his, seems matter of some doubt. The Merle and Nightingale may be cited as a poem of great merit.

Sir Walter Scott declares that Dunbar is "unrivalled by any poet that Scotland has yet produced," and Mr. Ellis also styles him the "greatest poet that Scotland has produced." This is surely high praise. For an elaborate review of Dunbar's poetry, we must refer the reader to Warton's Hist. of English Poetry. See also Biog. Brit.; Pinkerton's Ancient Scottish Poets; Lives of the Scottish Poets. Warton remarks, after an examination of the Dunbar:

"I have been prolix in my citations and explanations of this poem, because I am of opinion that the imagination of Dunbar is not less suited to satirical than to sublime allegory; and that he is the first poet who has appeared with any degree of spirit in this way of writing since Piers Plowman. His Thistle and Rose and Golden Terge are generally mentioned as his capital works. But the natural complexion of his genius is of the moral and didactic cast."—Hist. of English Poetry.

But Mr. Pinkerton thinks that this judgment must not be taken too strictly:

"The Golden Terge is moral; and so are many of his small pieces: but humour, description, allegory, great practical genius, and a vast wealth of words, all unite to form the complexion of Dunbar's poetry. He unites in himself, and generally surpasses, the qualities of the chief old English poets: the morals and satire of Langland; Chaucer's humour, poetry, and knowledge of life; the allegory of Gower; the description of Lydgate."—Scottish Poets.

The Golden Terge, though moral in its design, is a parody on the Popish litanies; surely an unfit subject for such a purpose.

Mr. Ellis unites in the general commendation of Dunbar's poetry:

"Dunbar's peculiar excellence is much good sense and sound morality, expressed with force and conciseness. His style, whether grave or humorous, whether simple or ornamented, is always energetic; and though all his compositions cannot be expected to possess equal merit, we seldom find in them a weak or redundant stanza."—Specimens of Early English Poetry.

Dunbar, Wm., d. 1810, at his seat at Natchez, Mississippi, was distinguished for his acquisitions in Astronomy and Natural Science. He was a member of the American Philosophical Society of Philadelphia, and contributed some pages to its Transactions; see vol. vi.: Signs among Indians; Meteor. Observ., 1800; Description of the Mississippi.

Duncan, Alexander, D.D. Infidelity, Edin., 1774, 12mo. Hist. of the Revolution, 1688, 1790, 8vo. Devout Communicant's Assist., Berwick, 1792, 8vo. Essays, Edin., 1799, 8vo.

Duncan, Andrew. Grammatica Latina, Edin., 1595, 8vo. Rudimenta Pietatis, 1595, 16mo. Studiorum Puerilium Clavis, 1597, 8vo.

Duncan, Andrew, M.D., 1745–1828, a native of Edinburgh, delivered clinical lectures in the University of that city, and afterwards private courses for fourteen years, on the theory and practice of medicine. He pub. several professional treatises, a list of which will be found in Watt's Bibl. Brit.

Duncan, Andrew, Jr., M.D. Edinburgh New Dispensatory, Edin., 1803, 8vo; 1804, '08, '18. Other professional publications.

Duncan, Archibald, R.N. Martner's Chronicle, 1804. Brit. Trident; register of Naval Actions, 1805, 4 vols.

Duncan, Daniel, 1649–1735, an eminent physician, a native of Languedoc, died in London. He was the author of Explication nouvelle et mécanique des Actions Animales, Paris, 1678; La Chymie Naturelle, 1681, 8vo; and some other works.

Duncan, Daniel, D.D., d. 1761, son of the preceding, wrote Collects upon some of the Articles, 1754, and some other theolog. treatises.

Duncan, Francis, M.D. Bowels, 1801, 8vo.

Duncan, Henry, D.D., founder of Savings-Banks. Essays on the Advantages of Savings-Banks, Lon., 1816, 8vo. Cottage Fireside, new ed., Edin., 1839, 18mo. Sacred Philosophy of the Seasons, Edin., 1836, '37, 4 vols. sm. 8vo; new ed., 1853, 12mo.

"We know of no work more staple in its teachings, and of none that collects more glory about the revolving months than this."—Lon. Spectator.

See Memoir of Dr. Duncan by his son, Rev. J. G. Duncan, 1848, 12mo; new ed., 1853.

Duncan, James. The Scotch History, Glasg., 1805, 12mo; 3d ed., by his grandson, James Duncan, 1816; 4th ed., 1819.

Duncan, James F. Popular Errors on the subject of Insanity examined and exposed, Lon., 1853, fp. 8vo.

Duncan, John, D.D. Essay on Happiness, a Poem. Serms. and theolog. treatises, 1769–1803.

Duncan, John. Weaving, Glasg., 1808, 8vo.

Duncan, Rev. John, LL.D. Declaration against the Pope's Supremacy, by K. Edward VI.; republ., Lon., 1810, 8vo.

Duncan, John. Essay on Genius, or the Philos. of Literature, Edin., 1814, 8vo. Philos. of Human Nature; Origin of Evil, 1815, 8vo.

Duncan, John M. Travels through part of the U. States and Canada, 1818, '19, Glasg., 1823, 2 vols. p. 8vo. Dedicated to Professor Silliman of Yale College. Sabbath among the Tuscaroras.

Duncan, John Shute. Botano-Theology, an arranged Compendium, Oxf., 1825, 8vo; 2d ed., 1826.

"An exceeding pleasant and interesting book."—London's Brit. Lib.

Duncan, Jonathan. Prosecutions for Religious Opinions, Lon., 8vo. Religions of Profane Antiquity, 1838, fp. 8vo.

"A very complete key to the old systems of heathenism, as developed especially in Greece and Rome."—Lon. Monthly Rev.; and see Lon. Spectator.

Dukes of Normandy, from Rolle to the Expulsion of King John, 1839, 12mo.

"A useful supplement to the ordinary histories of England."—Lon. Athenaeum.

And see Lon. Parthenon, Examiner, and New Monthly Magazine.

Trans. of Felix Bodin's Summaries of the Hist. of England and France, 1840, 2 vols. 18mo.

"A very accurate view of the constitutional history of England."—Lon. Athenaeum.

Religious Wars of France, 1840, fp. 8vo.

"Well written and concise; its dates exact and well placed."—Lon. Courier.

Hist. of Guernsey, with Notes on Jersey, 1842, 8vo.

Duncan, Mrs. M. G. L. Memoir of G. A. Lundie, 18mo; of Geo. B. Phillips, 18mo; of Mary Lundie Duncan, 4th ed., 1845, fp. 8vo.

"A most sweetly-drawn picture, that cannot be too extensively contemplated."—Lon. Christian Ladies' Mag.

The Children of the Manse, 18mo. America as I found it, 16mo.

"A very readable book."—Advocate and Guardian.

Duncan, Mark, d. 1640, a Scottish physician, an ancestor of the preceding Dr. Daniel Duncan, was principal of the Calvinist College at Saumur. His best-known work is Institutiones Logicae, libri quinque, Salmurii, 1612, 8vo.

"This work is much commended by Burgeadellus and others. Joseph Scaliger also mentions our author in a manner which seems to indicate no common respect. Speaking of the west of Scotland, he particularises it as the district which produced Duncan and Buchanan; and Tomasinus (Parnassus Euganeus, p. 8) classes him among the distinguished literary characters of the age."

Duncan, Mark, or Cerisantes, d. 1648, a son of the preceding, wrote some poetical pieces pub. in miscellaneous collections, the most remarkable of which is Carmen gratulatorium in nuptias Caroli R. Ang. cum Henrietta Maria filia Henrici IV. R. Fr.

Duncan, Mrs. Mary Lundie. Rhymes for my Children, Lon., 32mo. For a notice of a Memoir of Mrs. M. L. Duncan, see DUNCAN, Mrs. M. G. L.

Duncan, Robert, 1699–1729, a native of Edinburgh, minister of Tillycoultry, 1728. An Exposition of the Epistle to the Hebrews, Edin., 1731, 8vo; new ed., 1844, 8vo.

"It may be considered rather as an abridgment of Owen on the Hebrews, than as an original work. It is not, indeed, a professed abridgment; but it everywhere shows the use that the author made of that elaborate and useful work."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

Duncan, Wm. Physiologia, Tolos., 1651, 4to.

Duncan, Wm. Kings of Scotland, Glasg., 1722, 8vo.

Duncan, Wm., 1717–1760, a native of Aberdeen, Prof. of Philos. in the Marischal College, 1752, trans. the select orations of Cicero, (1777,) and Caesar's Commentaries, 1752, fol.; also in 2 vols. 8vo; often reprinted. His work entitled Elements of Logic was pub. in 1748, and the 6th ed., 1770, Lon., 12mo.

Duncan, Wm. Syntax, &c. of Greek, 1812, 8vo.

Duncan, Wm. New and improved edit. of A. Dickinson's Greek Testament, Edin., 1880, 12mo.

"Mr. Duncan has annexed a copious selection of the most important of Griesbach's various readings and emendations, which appear to have been made with great care."—Horne's Bibl. Ess.

Duncombe, Giles. Trysals per pais, or the Law of England concerning Juries by Nisi Prius, &c., Lon., 1682, 8vo; 8th ed., with addita, 1766, 2 vols. 8vo; 9th ed., Dublin, 1793, 2 vols. 8vo.

Duncombe, Henry J. Serm., Lon., 1837, 8vo.

Duncombe, John, 1730–1785, Vicar of Herne. Three Serms., 1776. The Femininead, 1754. Trans. of Select Works of the Emperor Julian, &c., 1784, 2 vols. 8vo.

"The Philosophical Fable which Julian composed under the name of the Cæsars, is one of the most agreeable and instructive productions of ancient wit."—Ginsom.

The Hist. and Antiq. of Reculver and Herne; principally written by J. D. It forms the 18th No. of the Bibl. Top. Brit. Mr. D. contributed to the Gent. Mag. for twenty years, under the signature of Crito, &c. He pub. and edited several other works. See Watt's Bibl. Brit.

Duncombe, Mrs. John, wife of the preceding, d. 1812, wrote the story of Fidella and Honoria in the Adventurer, contributed to the Poetical Calendar and Nichols's Poems, and in 1808 pub. a novel entitled The Village Gentleman and the Attorney-at-Law.

Duncombe, John, inventor of the Dendrometer. Treatise upon the Dendrometer, Lon., 1769, 8vo; 1771, 8vo. Conjointly with Thos. Whittell, The Antiq. of Richborough and Reculver, abridged from the Latin of Archdeacon Botely, 1774, 12mo. New Arithmet. Dictionary, 1774, 8vo.

Duncombe, Wm., 1690–1769, father of the first-named John Duncombe, is best known by his trans. of Horace, made in conjunction with his son, pub. in 2 vols. 8vo, 1757–59. He made some other trans. from the Latin and French, collected Archbishop Herring's sermons, and pub. several other poetical, political, historical, and theolog. works. See Watt's Bibl. Brit.

Duncon, Eleaz. De Adoratione Dei versus Altare Determinatio Cantab. habita, anno 1633, '60, 8vo.

Duncon, John. Life and Death of Lady Falkland, 1648, 12mo. See Gibbon's Memoirs of Pious Women.

Duncon, Samuel. Political tracts, 1652–59.

Duncumb, John. Serms., 1796, '97. Pasture Lands, 1801, 8vo. Hist. and Antiq. of Hereford, 1804–12, 2 vols. 4to. The only hist. of this county pub. Agricult. and Rural Economy of Herefordshire, 1805, 8vo.

Dundas, Sir David, General R. A., 1735?–1820, a distinguished officer, in 1809 succeeded the Duke of York as Commander-in-chief. Principles of Military Movements, chiefly applied to Infantry, Lon., 1788, 4to. Adopted and printed as Rules and Regulations for his Majesty's Forces. General Dundas also planned the Rules and Regulations for the Cavalry.

Dundas, Rt. Hon. Henry, Lord Viscount Melville, 1741?–1811, First Lord of the Admiralty, &c. Speeches, Letters, and Opinions upon Politics, the Slave-Trade, and East India Trade; pub. separately, 1794, '96, 1800, '13.

Dundas, James, M.D. Ed. Med. Ess., 1738.

Dundas, John. Abridgt. of the Acts of the General Assen. of the Ch. of Scot., 1638–1720, Edin., 1721, 8vo. Processes against J. Simpson, 1728, 8vo.

Dundonald, Earl of. See COCHRANE, ALEx.

Dungall, a celebrated astronomer of the 9th century, supposed to have been a native of Ireland, emigrated to France, where he died. A long letter of his to Charlemagne, in answer to some queries of that monarch respecting two eclipses of the sun, will be found in D'Acheri's Spicilegium, vol. iii., 324, of the fol., and vol. x. of the 4to edit. A Defence of Images, 1608, 8vo; also in the Biblioth. Max. Patr., xiv. 196. He wrote some poetical pieces, one of which is in a collection pub. by Martene and Durand, 1729.

Dunglison, Robley, M.D., LL.D., a distinguished benefactor to Medical Science and Literature, and one of the most popular authors of the day, was born in 1798, in Keswick, Cumberland county, England. He commenced the practice of medicine in London in 1819; Professor of Medicine in the University of Virginia, 1824–33; Professor of Materia Medica, Therapeutics, &c. in the University of Maryland, 1833–36; Professor of the Institutes of Medicine and Medical Jurisprudence in Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, from 1836 to the present time, (1858.) Dr. D. is one of the vice-presidents of the American Philosophical Society, and a member of numerous scientific and literary societies at home and abroad. We annex a list of his many valuable contributions to medical science:

AUTHOR OF: 1. Commentaries on Diseases of the Stomach and Bowels of Children, Lon., 1824, 8vo.

2. An Introduction to the Study of Grecian and Roman Geography, by Geo. Long, Esq., and himself, Charlottesville, 1829, 8vo; the Roman by Dr. D.

3. Human Physiology, with numerous illustrations, Phila., 1832, 2 vols. 8vo; 8th ed., 1856.

4. A new Dictionary of Medical Science and Literature, containing a concise account of the various subjects and terms, with the Synonymes in different languages, &c., Boston, 1833, 2 vols. 8vo. The second and subsequent editions were published in Philadelphia in one volume; 15th edit., 1858.

5. On the Influence of Atmosphere and Locality, Change of Air and Climate, Seasons, Food, Clothing, &c. on human health, constituting Elements of Hygiene, Phila., 1835, 8vo. The second edition was published under the title of Human Health, &c., Phila., 1844, 8vo.

6. General Therapeutics, or Principles of Medical Practice, with tables of the chief remedial agents and their preparations, and of the different poisons and their antidotes, Phila., 1836, 8vo. To the second edition—in two volumes—Materia Medica was added. The 6th edition was published in 1857. In all the editions, except the first, there were numerous illustrations.

7. The Medical Student, or Aids to the Study of Medicine, including a glossary of the terms of the science, and of the mode of prescribing, bibliographical notices of medical works, the regulations of different medical colleges of the Union, &c., Phila., 1837, 8vo; 2d edition, modified, Phila., 1844.

8. New Remedies; the method of preparing and administering them; their effects on the healthy and diseased economy, &c., Phila., 1839, 8vo; 7th edit., 1856.

9. The Practice of Medicine, or a Treatise on Special Pathology and Therapeutics, Phila., 1842, 2 vols. 8vo; 3d edit., 1848.

10. An Appeal to the People of Pennsylvania on the subject of an Asylum for the Insane Poor of the Commonwealth, Phila., 1838, 8vo.

11. A Second Appeal on the same subject, Phila., 1840, 8vo.

12. A Public Discourse in Commemoration of Peter S. Duponceau, LL.D., late President of the American Philosophical Society, delivered before the Society on the 25th of October, 1844, Phila., 1844, 8vo.

13. On the Blind, and Institutions for the Blind in Europe; a Letter to the President of the Board of Managers of the Pennsylvania Institution for the Blind, Phila., 1854, 8vo.

14. Numerous Introductory Lectures to his Class in the Universities of Virginia and Maryland, and in Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia; and Charges to Graduates: the Introductory of 1854, '55, comprising Recollections of Europe in 1854.

EDITOR OF: 1. On the Use of the Moxa as a Therapeutical Agent, by Baron D. J. Larrey, translated from the French, with Notes and an Introduction, containing a history of the substance, Lon., 1822, 8vo.

2. Formulary for the preparation and mode of employing several new remedies, viz.: Morphine, Iodine, &c., translated by Charles Thomas Haden, Esq.; 2d edit., with numerous alterations and additions, Lon., 1824, 12mo.

3. Appendix to do., Lon., 1824, 12mo. The Formulary was reprinted in Phila., 1825.

4. The Surgeon's Vade Mecum of Dr. Hooper; 3d edit., greatly enlarged, Lon., 1824, 12mo. Dr. Dunglison's name did not appear.

5. Medical Clinics of the Hospital Necker, by M. Bricheateau; translated by Dr. D., but not so stated, Phila., 1837, 8vo.

6. Outlines of Physiology, with an Appendix on Phrenology, by P. M. Roget, M.D., &c.; revised, with numerous notes, Phila., 1839, 8vo. Name not on the title-page.

7. Outlines of a course of Lectures on Medical Jurisprudence, by Thomas Stewart Traill, M.D., F.R.S.E.; revised, with numerous notes, Phila., 1841, 8vo. Name not on title-page.

8. The Cyclopaedia of Practical Medicine, by Drs. Forbes, Tweedie, and Conolly; thoroughly revised, with numerous additions, Phila., 1845, 4 vols. 8vo.

9. The London Medical Repository, edited by James Copland, M.D., and Robley Dunglison, M.D. Vols. 19 and 20, and new series, vol. 1., Lon., 1823, '24.

10. The Medical Intelligencer, or Monthly Compendium of Medical, Chirurgical, and Scientific Knowledge, vol. iv., Lon., 1823, 8vo. The earlier volumes were edited by Messrs. Armstrong, Alcock, Haden, and others.

11. The Virginia Literary Museum and Journal of Belles-Lettres, Arts, Sciences, &c., edited at the University of Virginia, by Professors Geo. Tucker and Dunglison, Charlottesville, 1830, 8vo. Names not on title-page.

12. The American Medical Library and Intelligencer; a concentrated Record of Medical Science and Literature, Phila., 1837 to 1842, inclusive, 8vo. A Journal, and a reprint of valuable foreign works.

CONTRIBUTOR TO: The Monthly Magazine, Lon., 1817, '18; The Annals of Philosophy, Lon., 1820; The London Medical Repository, 1823, '24; The Quarterly Journal of Science and the Arts, 1824; The London Quarterly Review, 1823; The Eclectic Review, 1823, '24; The Universal Review, 1824; The American Quarterly Review, 1827, and afterwards; The Virginia Literary Museum, 1830; The Baltimore Medical and Surgical Journal, 1834; The North American Archives of Medical and Surgical Science, 1834, '35; The American Journal of the Medical Sciences, 1832, and afterwards; The American Cyclopædia of Medicine and Surgery, 1834, '35; The British and Foreign Medical Review, 1836; The Medical Examiner, Phila., 1838, and afterwards; &c.

So great has been the demand for Dr. Dunglison's works, that of the Medical Lexicon, General Therapeutics and Materia Medica, Practice of Medicine, Human Physiology, Human Health, and New Remedies, the sale to 1858, we have reason to believe, had been upwards of one hundred thousand volumes! Of the many notices before us of these valuable works from British and American authorities, we have room for a few only, and these must be abbreviated.

Medical Lexicon, 12th ed., 1855; 15th ed. enlarged, 1858.

"An admirable work, and indispensable to all literary medical men. The labour which has been bestowed upon it is something prodigious. . . . Revised and corrected from time to time, Dr. Dunglison's Medical Lexicon will last for centuries."—Brit. and For. Med. Chir. Rev.

"A miracle of labour and industry in one who has written able and voluminous works on nearly every branch of medical science. . . . It is almost as indispensable to the other learned professions as to our own. . . . From a careful examination of the present edition, we can vouch for its accuracy, and for its being brought quite up to the date of publication."—Dubl. Quart. Jour. of Med. Science.

"The most comprehensive and best English dictionary of medical terms extant."—Buffalo Med. Jour. See also Lon. Med. Gaz.; Amer. Jour. of the Med. Sciences; Boston Med. Jour.; Edin. Jour. of Med. Science; Lon. Med. Times and Gazette.

General Therapeutics and Materia Medica, 6th edit., 1857.

"As a text-book for students, for whom it is particularly designed, we know of none superior to it."—St. Louis Med. and Surg. Jour.

"We consider this work unequalled."—Boston Med. and Surg. Journal. See also Chambers Med. Journal and Review; Western Lancet; N. Orleans Med. and Surg. Jour.; N. York Jour. of Med.

The Practice of Medicine, 3d edit., 1848.

"Upon every topic embraced in this work, the latest information will be found carefully posted up."—Med. Examiner.

"It is certainly the most complete treatise of which we have any knowledge."—Western Jour. of Med. and Surg. See also Boston Med. and Surg. Jour.; Southern Med. and Surg. Jour.

Human Physiology, 7th edit., 1850; 8th ed., 1856.

"It has long since taken rank as one of the medical classics of our language. To say that it is by far the best text-book of physiology ever published in this country, is but echoing the general testimony of the profession."—N. York Jour. of Med.

"It is the completest work on Physiology in the English language, and is highly creditable to the author and publishers."—Canadian Med. Jour.

"The best work of the kind in the English language, and is highly creditable to the author and publishers."—Silliman's Jour. See also Amer. Med. Jour.; Western Lancet.

New Remedies, with Formulas for their Administration, 6th edit., 1853.

"The great learning of the author, and his remarkable industry in pushing his researches into every source whence information is derivable, have enabled him to throw together an extensive mass of facts and statements, accompanied by full reference to authorities; which last feature renders the work practically valuable to investigators who desire to examine the original papers."—Amer. Jour. of Pharmacy. See also New York Med. Gaz.; Southern Med. and Surg. Jour.

Dunham, S. Astley, LL.D., d. 1858, in London. Hist. of Poland, 1836, 12mo.

"A very carefully and competently written compendium."—Lon. Eclectic Review.

Hist. of Spain and Portugal, 1832, 5 vols. 12mo.

"The very best work on the subject with which we are acquainted."—Lon. Athenæum. See also Athen., 1858, 111.

"A work of acuteness and information."—Wm. H. Parsons.

Hist. of Europe during the Middle Ages, 1833-36, 4 vols.

"A work which may be regarded as a sacrifice of a very learned and very laborious writer to the wants and curiosity of the world."—Lon. Athen.

Hist. of the Germanic Empire, 1837, 3 vols. 12mo.

"This compendium is masterly; being clear, rich, and extensive."—Lon. Monthly Review.

Hist. of Denmark, Sweden, and Norway, 1839, '40, 3 vols. 12mo. These valuable works are all pub. in Lardner's Cyclopædia. Lives of English Dramatists, by R. Bell, Esq., Dr. Dunham, &c., 1837, 2 vols. 12mo. The Early Writers of Great Britain, by the same, 1840, fp. 8vo.

Dunkin, A. J. Report of the Brit. Arch. Assoc., Lon., 1845, 8vo. Memoranda of Springhead, 1848, 8vo.

Dunkin, John. Divinity of the Son of God, 1783, 8vo.

Dunkin, John. Hist. and Antiq. of Bromley, 1815, 8vo; of Bicester, 1816, 8vo. Hist. and Antiq. of the Hundreds of Bullington and Ploughley, Oxfordshire, 1823, 2 vols. 4to. Printed at the expense of Sir G. P. Turner; only 70 copies intended for sale. Hist. and Antiq. of Dartford, Kent, 1844, 8vo.

Dunkin, Wm., D.D. Epistles, Dubl., 1741, '60. Poetical Works, Epistles, &c., 1774, 2 vols. 4to.

Dunlap, Andrew, 1794-1835, a native of Mass. Admiralty Practice in Civil Cases of Maritime Jurisdiction, Phila., 1836, 8vo; 2d ed., N. York, 1850.

"This work is pronounced, by the most competent judges, to be learned, accurate, and well digested."—1 Kent's Com., 381. Note.

Dunlap, J. D. Book of Legal Forms, Phila., 1852, 8vo.

Dunlap, John A. Justice of Peace in N. York, 8vo. Abridgt. of 12th and 13th Books of Coke's Reports, N. York, 1813, 8vo. Prac. Supr. Ct. of N. York in Civ. Act., Albany, 1821-23, 2 vols. 8vo; 1841.

"The author has executed his laborious task with an accuracy and extent of learning which support his well-earned reputation as a lawyer."—18 N. Amer. Rev., 211.

Lloyd's edit. (3d) of Paley's Agency; 3d Amer. edit.

"The care and labour bestowed upon Dunlap's Paley's Agency cannot fail to render it a standard work of great utility."—Penn. Law Journal.

Dunlap, S. F., son of Andrew Dunlap, (ante.) b. 1825, in Boston. 1. The Origin of Ancient Names, Camb., 1856, 8vo; reprinted from the Chris. Examiner, July, 1856. 2. Vestiges of the Spirit-History of Man, N.Y., 1858, 8vo. Edited, with Notes, Dunlap's Admiralty Practice.

Dunlap, William, 1766-1839, manager of the Park Theatre, N. York, a dramatic author and a painter, was a native of Perth Amboy, N. Jersey. Life of George Frederick Cooke, Lon., 1813, 2 vols. 8vo; and a 2d ed.

"Those who desire a faithful portrait of this strange genius may be safely referred to the Life published by Dunlap, a close observer and a truthful writer."—Wood's Personal Recollections of the Stage, Phila., 1855, 12mo.

"Very little reliance can be placed on the theatrical and other anecdotes recorded in these volumes."—Loveland's Bibl. Man.

"We have seldom been more amused and instructed than by the perusal of these volumes."—Lon. Theatrical Inquirer.

The American Theatre, N. York, 1832, 8vo; Lon., 1833.

Hist. of Arts and Designs in the U. States, N. York, 1834, 2 vols. 8vo. Thirty Years Ago; a Novel, 1836. Hist. of N. York, for Schools, 1837, 2 vols. 12mo; abridged, 1844, 2 vols. 18mo. New Netherlands Province of New York, 1840, 2 vols. 8vo. See Duyckinck's Cyc. of Amer. Lit.

Dunlop, Bell, and Murray. Decis. Ct. Sess., 1835-40, 5 vols. 8vo, Edin., 1836-40; ditto, 1840, '41, 1841, 8vo, by Dunlop and Donaldson.

Dunlop, Alexander, 1684-1742, an American, Professor of Greek, Univ. Glasgow. Greek Grammar, 1736; many edits. Long used in the Scotch universities.

Dunlop, Alexander. Treatise on the Law of Scotland relative to the Poor, Edin., 1828, 8vo.

"Decidedly the best work on the subject."—McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Economy.

Answer, &c. rel. to Claims Ch. of Scotland, 3d ed., 1840, 8vo. Law of Patronage of Parochial Ministers in Scotland, 8vo. Parochial Law in Scotland, 3d ed., 1841, 8vo.

"As an able and accurate exposition of the law, Mr. Dunlop's Treatise deserves every commendation, and may be considered as our safest authority."—1 Ed. L. J., 218.

Dunlop, James. Laws of Pennsylvania, 1700-1853, chronologically arranged, with Notes and References to all the Decisions of the Supreme Ct. of Penna., giving construction to said Laws, with a copious Index, 3d ed., Phila., 1853, 8vo. Highly commended by the Hon. Judges Gibson, Grier, Coulter, Rogers, Burnside, Woodward, Thompson, Hepburn, Lowrie, &c. Digest of the General Laws of the U. States, Phila., 1858, r. 8vo. Highly commended.

Dunlop, John. 1. History of Fiction, Lon., 1814, 3 vols. p. 8vo; 2d ed., 1816; 3d, 1845.

"He has executed a defective plan, in what we are inclined to think rather a superficial manner."—Lon. Quar. Rev., xiii, 384.

"Upon the whole, though we wish to see the History of Fiction executed on a very different plan, and with a greater spirit of philosophical inquiry and critical acuteness, we recommend the present publication as an agreeable and curious Miscellany, which discovers uncommon information and learning."—Edin. Rev., xxiv, 58.

2. History of Roman Literature, 1822-28, 3 vols. 8vo.
3. Memoirs of Spain during the Reigns of Philip IV. and Charles II., 1621-1700, Edin., 1834, 2 vols. 8vo. If the reader will procure this work, Watson's Philip II. and III., Robertson's Charles V., and Coxe's Bourbon Kings, he will have a continuous history of Spain to 1788.

"Mr. Dunlop's work abounds with important instruction to the philosopher and the politician; and we gladly acknowledge our obligations for this valuable contribution to Spanish history. He has collected matter previously dispersed through a great number of works, into one consecutive, agreeable, and lively narrative."—Lon. Atheneum.

Mr. Dunlop has pub. some other works.

Dunlop, Robert Glasgow. Travels in Central America, with Journal, &c., Lon., 1837, p. 8vo.

"It abounds with valuable statistical and general information of the towns, the people, the climate, and the products."—Colonial Magazine.

"Solid information is the distinguishing feature of the above."—Lon. Spectator.

Dunlop, Wm., 1692-1720, a native of Glasgow, Prof. of Divinity and Ch. History, Univ. Edinburgh, 1716.

A Collection of Confessions of Faith, Catechisms, Directions, Books of Discipline, &c. of public authority in the Ch. of Scotland, with the Acts of Assembly, &c., Edin., 1719-20, 2 vols. sm. 8vo. A most valuable work. Some copies of the preface were struck off separately, under the title of A Full Account of the several ends and uses of Confessions of Faith, &c., 1721, 8vo; again, 1775, 12mo. "Sensible and scriptural."—Dickens's Chrs. Student.

It was answered by Moses Lowman in 1721, 8vo. Serms. and Lectures, 2 vols. 8vo; 1716-22; again, 1725. Glasg., 1747, 2 vols. 12mo. Though Professor Dunlop died at the early age of 28, he had attained great reputation as a powerful and pathetic preacher:

"When he preached, he had very crowded and attentive auditories. When he flamed in the pulpit, and triumphed over his captivated hearers, it was not by mere artificial rhetoric, but from the real sentiment and affections of his own soul transferred into theirs. Argumentative, copious, and fervent."—Dr. E. Williams's Chrs. Preacher.

Dunn. Index to the Journals of the H. of Commons, vol. xxv. to lv., inclusive, Lon., 2 vols. fol. Comes down to end of the year 1800.

Dunn, Lady. Recluse, a Novel, 2 vols. r. 12mo.

Dunn, Edward. V. Disease, Lon., 1724, 8vo.

Dunn, Edward. Theolog., &c. works, 1796-99.

Dunn, Henry. Educational works, &c., 1829-48.

Dunn, John. Manners, Customs, and Usages, &c. of the Nations of Asia, Africa, and America, from the French of Lambert, Lon., 1750, 2 vols. 8vo.

Dunn, Sir Patrick. His Case, &c., fol.

Dunn, S. Theolog. and biog. works, 1837-47.

Dunn, Samuel, Prof. of Mathemat. at Crediton and Chelsea, pub. several works upon astronomy, navigation, mathematics, &c., 1759-93, and papers in Phil. Trans., 1761-64.

Dunne, Charles. The Chirurgical Candidate, or reflections on surgical education, Lon., 1808, 8vo.

Dunne, John. Notices rel. to some of the Native Tribes of N. America; in Trans. R. Irish Acad., 1803.

Dunning, Capt. Scheme for preventing the Progress of the Plague, fol.

Dunning, John, Lord Ashburton, 1731-1783, one of the most distinguished of modern lawyers. Defence of the United Company of Merchants, being an answer to the Dutch Memorial, 1762, 4to. Letters to the Proprietors of the E. India Stock, occasioned by Lord Clive's Letter on his Jaghire, 1764, 8vo.

Dunning, Richard. Office of Overseer of the Poor, 1686.

Dunning, Richard. Cow Pox, &c., 1800-06.

Dunscombe, T. Tribute to Dr. Evans, 1792, 8vo.

Dunsford, Martin, d. 1807. Hist. Memoir of the Town and Parish of Tiverton, 2d ed., Lon., 1790, 4to.

Duns Scotus, John, supposed to have been born about 1265, died at Cologne, 1308, is believed to have been a native of Dunstance, near Alnwick, Northumberland. Others, however, claim him as a native of Dunse, Berwickshire, Scotland, and still others assert him to have been an Irishman. Whilst young he joined the Minorite friars, who sent him to Oxford, where he was admitted into Merton College, of which he became Fellow. In 1301 he succeeded William Varron as Prof. of Theology at Oxford, and taught with such eloquence and acceptance, that 30,000 scholars thronged around his chair. We cannot, however, vouch for the correctness of the numbers. In 1304 he removed to Paris, and about 1307 was placed at the head of the theological school of that famed city of learning. He is said to have been the first teacher of the doctrine of the immaculate conception of the Virgin Mary. He was for some time a follower of Thomas Aquinas, but differing from him on the question concerning the efficacy of divine grace, he established a new school: the disputes of the Thomists and Scotists henceforth are matters of history, trifling as their subjects often were. Scotus was so noted for his acuteness as to acquire the name of the "Subtle Doctor." He wrote many works on theology, on metaphysics, &c., a collective edit. of which (save a few still in MS.) was pub. by Luke Wadding in 1639, Lyons, 12 vols. fol.

The reader who wishes to sharpen his wits in dialectics will find ample employment in these volumes for the long evenings of several winters. To encourage him to embark upon so fascinating an amusement, we give a specimen of the eulogies which were lavished upon the Subtle Doctor by his followers:

"He was so consummate a philosopher, that he could have been the inventor of philosophy, if it had not before existed. [How unfortunate!] His knowledge of all the mysteries of Religion was so profound and perfect, that it was rather intuitive certainty than belief. He described the divine nature as if he had seen God;—the attributes of celestial spirits as if he had been an angel;—the felicities of a future state as if he had enjoyed them;—and the ways of providence as if he had penetrated into all its secrets. He wrote so many books, that one man is hardly able to read them; and no one man is able to understand them. He would have written more, if he had composed with less care and accuracy. Such was our immortal Scotus, the most ingenious, acute, and subtle of the sons of men."

See Bale, Pitts, and Tanner; Cave, vol. ii.; Henry's Hist. of Great Britain; Wood's Annals; Mackenzie's Scotch Writers; Biog. Brit.; Bruckeri Hist. Philos., tom. iii., p. 828.

The candid confession that no man could understand the Subtle Doctor's profundities reminds us of a saying attributed to Hegel, when dying;—that of all his numerous disciples only one had understood him,—and he misunderstood him!

Dunstable, John, d. 1458, an English musician, author of De Mensurabili Musica, quoted by Morley, Franchinus, and Ravenscroft, but now lost. The two last give some fragments of Dunstable's musical compositions. In the Bodleian Library there is a geographical tract by Dunstable.

Dunstan, St., 925-988, a native of Glastonbury, Somersetshire, Bishop of Worcester, of London, and finally Archbishop of Canterbury about 959, extended the Papal influence throughout England, and, as the representative of Rome, ruled the kingdom with a rod of iron. But Ethelred was not so easily governed as his predecessor Edgar had been, and Dunstan retired to his cloisters to die of chagrin and mortification. A vol. of his works was pub. at Douay in 1626, 8vo, and Launcelot Colston pub. one of his treatises with the Philosophia Maturata, Lon., 1663, 12mo.

Dunstanville, Francis, Lord De. Carew's Survey of Cornwall, Lon., 1811, 4to. See CAREW, RICHARD. Speech at the County Meeting of Bodmin, 1809, 8vo.

Dunstar, Samuel. Anglia Rediviva; being a full description of all the Shires, Cities, Principal Towns, and Rivers in England, Lon., 1669, 8vo.

Dunster, Charles, Rector of Petworth, Sussex. Milton's Paradise Regained, with Notes, Lon., 1795, 4to. Considerations on Milton's Early Reading, and the Prima Stamina of his Paradise Lost, 1800, 8vo. A valuable work. He gives extracts from Joshua Sylvester's works. Obserr. on St. Luke's Gospel, 1805, 8vo; on St. Matthew's, 1806, 8vo; on St. Luke's, 1808, 8vo. Synopsis of the three first Gospels, &c., 1812, r. 8vo. Other works.

Dunster, Rev. D. Trans. of Drexellus on Eternity, edited by Rev. H. P. Dunster, Lon., 1844, 12mo.

"Of singular merit, and excellently adapted to awaken the attention to a subject so important."

Dunster, H. P. Stories from Froissart, Lon., 1847, 18mo. See BERNERS, LORD. Fragments of History, 12mo.

Dunster, Henry, d. 1659, first President of Harvard College, in conjunction with Richard Lyon, improved the new version of the Psalms made by Eliot, Welde, and Mather, printed in 1640.

Dunster, Samuel, D.D. Traps. of Horace's Satires and Art of Poetry into English verse, Serm., Lon., 1708, 8vo.

Dunsterville, Edward. Funl. Serm., 1642.

Dunthorne, Rev. Richard, 1711-1776. Astronomical con. to Phil. Trans., 1747, '49, '51, '62.

Dunton, John. A True Journal of the Sally Fleet, Lon., 1637, 4to. See Oxford Collec. Voy. and Trav.

Dunton, John, 1659-1733, an eccentric bookeller, being unsuccessful in business, turned author, and pub. several works. The Dublin Scuffle, 1699, 8vo.

"This curious production may be considered as the earliest attempt at Irish topography."

The Athenian Mercury, or a Scheme to answer a Series of Questions Monthly, the Querist remaining concealed. Continued to about 20 vols.; reprinted by Bell, under the title of The Athenian Oracle, 1728, 4 vols. 8vo.; abridged, 1820, 8vo. Athenianism, or the Projects of Mr. John Dunton. This contains 600 Treatises in Prose and Verse, The Life and Errors of Mr. John Dunton, with the Lives and Characters of more than a thousand Contemporary Divines, and other Persons of Literary Eminence, Lon., 1705, 8vo. We here find an account of his visit to Boston, New England, (in 1685,) where he resided for 8 months, and sketches of the ministers, booksellers, and other citizens of Boston and Salem. New edit., with selections from Dunton's other works, 1818, 2 vols. 8vo. Religio Bibliopole, or the Religion of a Bookseller, 1728, 8vo. See BRIDGWATER, BENJAMIN. The Danger of Living in a Known Sin, and the Hazard of a Death-Bed Repentance, 1738, 8vo. See a list of Dunton's many pieces in Lowndes's Bibl. Man.

"Dunton's Life and Errors is a most curious Work, abounding in Literary History of an interesting nature."—Noble's Granger.

Duponceau, Peter S., 1760–1844, a native of the Isle of Rhé, on the western coast of France, was for some time secretary to Count de Gébélin, author of the Monde Primitif. Baron Steuben, however, prevailed upon him to resign this quiet post, and accompany him to America as his secretary and aide-de-camp. They landed at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, Dec. 1, 1777, and on the 18th February ensuing, Mr. Duponceau was appointed a captain by brevet in the army of the United States. In 1780 his ill health obliged him to leave the army, and in October, 1781, he was appointed secretary to Robert R. Livingston, head of the Department of Foreign Affairs. After holding the office for about 19 months, Mr. Duponceau commenced the study of the law, and was admitted an attorney in June, 1785. In his new profession he soon rose to great eminence, and felt unwilling to resign his increasing business for the office of Chief Justice of Louisiana, which was tendered to him by President Jefferson. Mr. Duponceau remained a resident of Philadelphia until his death, taking an active interest in legal, philosophical, and philological pursuits, and esteeming as not the least of the rewards of his labours, an election to a Corresponding Membership of the French Institute. The same learned body awarded to him the prize of "Linguistique," founded by Volney, for a Memoir on the Indian Languages of North America, (in French,) which was subsequently pub. in Paris. Mr. D. pub. several other works, and was the author of many memoirs communicated to literary and scientific societies, addresses, essays, and minor pieces. See Encyc. Amer., xiv. 242. A Dissertation on the Nature and Extent of the Jurisdiction of the Courts of the U. States; to which are added a brief Sketch of the National Judiciary Powers exercised in the United States prior to the adoption of the present Federal Constitution, by Thomas Sergeant, and the author's Discourse on Legal Education, Phila., 1824, 8vo.

"A work that should be profoundly studied by all American authors."—N. Amer. Review, xx. 63, 1825.

"The learned author of this Dissertation is well known as a scholar and a philosopher, who thinks deeply and accurately. The volume has been extensively read, and will continue so to be."—Hoffman's Legal Student, 508.

Eulogium in Commendation of the Hon. W. Tilghman, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Penna., 1827, 8vo. A brief View of the Constitution of the United States, addressed to the Law Academy of Philadelphia, 1834, 12mo. Dissertation on the Nature and Character of the Chinese System of Writing, 1838. This was the last of his works. He contends that the Chinese language is not ideographic, as was generally maintained, but lexigraphic. See a review, N. Amer. Rev., xlviii. 271.

A specimen of Mr. Duponceau's philological criticism may be seen in his Notes to the new edit. of John Eliot's Grammar of the Massachusetts Indian Language, Boston, 1822, 8vo. This is a reprint of Eliot's Indian Grammar, pub. in 1666.

Dupont, John. Serms., Lon., 1757, 8vo.

Dupont, James, D.D., 1606–1679, an eminent Greek scholar, educated at, and Fellow of, Trinity College, Cambridge, Regius Prof. of Greek, 1632; Master of Magdalen College, Cambridge, 1668. Gnomologia Homeri, 1660. Tres Libri Salomonis, &c., 1646, 12mo. Metaphrasis Libri Psalmorum, &c., 1666, 4to. Musæ Subsecivæ, 1676, 8vo. Serms., 1660, 4to. Three Serms., 1676, 4to. Lectures on Theophrastus's Characters, 1712.

Duport, John, d. 1617, Preb. of Ely, 1609, was one of the trans. of K. James's version of the Bible.

Duppa, Brian, 1588–1662, educated at Christ Church, Oxford, Bishop of Chichester, 1638; trans. to Salisbury, 1641; Bishop of Salisbury, 1660. 1. The Soul's Soliloquies, 1648, 8vo. 2. Angels Rejoicing for Sinners Repenting, 1648, 4to. Both the above are sermons. 3. A Guide for the Penitent, 1660, 8vo. 4. Holy Rules and Helps to Devotion, 1674, 12mo. He is said to have assisted K. Charles in composing the Eikon Basilike.

Duppa, Richard, d. 1831, aged 64, educated at Trin. Coll., Oxf. Journal at Rome, Lon., 1799, 8vo. 12 Heads from the Last Judgment of M. Angelo, 1801, imp. fol. Head from Raffaelo, 1803, fol. Life and Works of Angelo, 1806, imp. 4to; new ed., 1846. Life of Raffaelo, 1816, 8vo. Price of Corn, 1815, 8vo. Introduce. to Greek, 1815, 8vo. Dr. Johnson's Diary into N. Wales, with Notes, 1816, 8vo, incorporated in Croker's Boswell Travels on the Continent, 1829, imp. 8vo. Linnæan System of Botany, 3 vols. 8vo. Other works. Mr. Q. De Quincey's Life of Raffaelo is included in the new edit. (1846, 8vo) of Duppa's Life of M. Angelo.

"In this volume we have combined at once a sketch of painting during its brightest era, and an account of the two great masters who may emphatically be described as the restorers of art in Europe."—Edin. Review.

Du Pratz, M. Le Page. Hist. of Louisiana, or of the Western Parts of Virginia and Carolina, Lon., 1763, 2 vols. 8vo.

"This author seems to have paid particular attention to geology, mineralogy, and other branches of natural history."—Lowndes's Bibl. Man.

Dupre, Edward. Serms., 1782, 4to.

Dupre, John, D.D., d. 1835, aged 82. Serms., 1781, 4to. Serms., 1782–87, 2 vols. 8vo. Discourses, 1815, 2 vols. 8vo.

Dupre, Wm. Lexicographia Neologico-Gallica, 1801. Dupuis, Joseph. Journal of a Residence in Ashantee, Lon., 1824, 4to.

"These papers throw much light on the subject of African discovery, and will be of great use to future travellers."

"The work of a man of considerable talent."—Edin. Review.

Dupuis, Thomas S., 1733–1796, an English musical composer. Two of his anthems will be found in Page's Harmonia Sacra. A selection from his works was pub. in 2 vols. by his pupil, Mr. Spencer, nephew and son-in-law of the Duke of Marlborough.

Dupuy, Eliza A., born at Petersburg, Va., a descendant of one of the oldest Huguenot families in that State. She has written many works, of which the following are the principal: 1. The Conspirator; of this there have been 24,000 copies sold. 2. Emma Walton, or Trials and Triumphs. 3. Celeste. 4. Florence, or the Fatal Vow. 5. Separation. 6. Concealed Treasure. 7. Ashleigh. 8. The Country Neighbourhood, N. Y., 1855.

Duquerry, Henry. Speech in H. of Commons on Negotiation with France, 1795, 8vo.

Duquesne, M. Voyage to the E. Indies, 1690, '91, a descrip. of Maldives, Cocos, Andaman, &c., Lon., 1696.

Durand, David, 1679–1763, a native of Languedoc, pastor of the French Church in the Savoy, London, pub. a number of works upon theology, painting, natural history, &c., 1717–53. Serms., Rotterdam, 1711, sm. 8vo. Hist. du seizième Siècle, Lon., 1725–32, 7 parts, 8vo.

Durant, J. Coal Mine, &c., Phil. Trans., 1746.

Durant, John, b. 1629, a Nonconformist divine, ejected 1662. Salvation of the Saints, Lon., 1653, 8vo.

"A delightful millenarian writer."

Six Serms., 1655, 8vo. Spiritual Seamen, 1655. Comfort and Counsel, 1658, 8vo. Altum Silentium, 1659, 12mo. A Cluster of Grapes taken out of the Basket of the Woman of Canaan; being the sum of certain Serms., 1660, 8vo.

Durant, John. Art in Nature, 1697, 8vo.

Duranti, Saml. Serms., 1623, 8vo.

Durbin, J. P., D.D., a distinguished Methodist divine, was born in Bourbon county, Kentucky, in 1800; entered Miami University, 1822; subsequently studied at the college in Cincinnati, and was appointed Professor of Languages in Augusta College, Ky.; Chaplain U. States Senate, 1831; editor Christian Advocate and Journal, 1832; President of Dickinson College, Carlisle, 1834–45; received the degree of D.D., 1837; visited Europe, Asia, and Africa, 1842, '43; pastor of a congregation in Phila., 1845; Secretary of the Board of Foreign and Domestic Missions, 1850; this office he still retains, (1858.) He has been elected to the general conference of the Church on four several occasions, viz.: in 1844, '48, '52, and '56. See Men of the Time, N.Y., 1852. Author of Observations in Europe, principally in France and Great Britain, N. York, 1844, 2 vols. 12mo.

Highly commended as combining information and entertainment to a remarkable degree. Also, Observs. in Egypt, Palestine, Syria, and Asia Minor, 1845, 2 vols. 12mo. Edited the American edit. of Wood's Mosaic History of the Creation, with copious Notes, New York, 1831, 8vo. Contributed to sundry periodicals. For further particulars respecting Dr. Durbin, see the National Magazine, pub. by Messrs. Carlton and Phillips, New York.

Durel, John, D.D., 1625-1683, a native of St. Helier's, Isle of Jersey, entered Merton Coll., Oxf., 1640; Prob. of Salisbury and Canon of Windsor, 1663; Dean of Windsor, 1677. During the Commonwealth he retired to France; at the Restoration became minister of the French Church in the Savoy, London. Respecting the Savoy, see Strype, Wood's Athen. Oxon., or Cunningham's Hand Book of London. A View of the Govt. and Pub. Worship of God in Reformed Churches beyond the Seas; wherein is shewed their Conformity and Agreement with the Ch. of England, Lon., 1662, 4to; abridged, 1705, 8vo. This book excited a warm controversy; see Athen. Oxon. Sanctæ Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ, &c., 1669, 4to. Theoremata Philosophiæ. Among the pieces in this collection is a French trans. of the Whole Duty of Man, partly written by Mrs. Durel. The Liturgy of the Ch. of England asserted, in a Sermon, preached in French; trans. into English by G. B., Lon., 1662, '68, 4to. In Latin, 1670, 8vo.

Durell, David, D.D., 1728-1775, a native of the Isle of Jersey, educated at Pembroke Coll., Oxf., became Fellow and Principal of Hertford Coll. The Hebrew Text of the Parallel Prophecies of Jacob and Moses, relating to the twelve Tribes, with trans., notes, &c., Oxf., 1764, 4to. Critical Remarks on the Book of Job, Proverbs, Psalms, Ecclesiastes, and Canticles. See an analysis of this work in the Lon. Monthly Review, O. S., xlvii. 119-129.

"Many of the observations in these volumes are of considerable value. Dr. Durell was a bold critic, and dealt freely, and sometimes successfully, in emendations of the text, and in new arrangements of the words and letters. . . . His works deserve a place in every critical library."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

Durell, Philip. A Particular Account of the Taking of Cape Breton from the French, Lon., 1745, fol.

Durfee, Job, 1790-1847, b. in Tiverton, R.I. Whitcheer; a Poem, 1832, 12mo. Complete Works of, with a Memoir by his Son, Providence, 1849, 8vo.

D'Urfe, Thomas, d. at an advanced age, 1723, was a descendant of an ancient French Protestant family who settled in Exeter, where Tom—as he is always styled—first saw the light. In early life he selected the law as a profession; but a taste for light literature indisposed him to serious application to legal research, and the gay company which he frequented left him little leisure for such profitable occupation of his time. Besides, he possessed the dangerous accomplishments, seldom combined, of being able to write and sing a good song. He also commenced composing dramatic pieces,—The Siege of Memphis, 1672; Madam Fickle, 1677; Bussy D'Ambois, 1691, and 29 others,—see list in Biog. Dramat.—which, fortunately, are now forgotten.

Towards the close of his life he was a sufferer from the res angusta domi; and—to quote his own language—"after having written more odes than Horace, and about four times as many comedies as Terence, he found himself reduced to great difficulties by the importunities of a set of men, who of late years had furnished him with the accommodations of life, and would not, as we say, be paid with a song." See Guardian, No. 67.

By the influence of Addison, D'Urfe's play of The Plotting Sisters was acted for his benefit, and seems to have produced a handsome result. In the Guardian, No. 67, Addison makes a strong appeal for a good benefit to the veteran wit and poet. D'Urfe excelled in song, satires, and irregular odes. A collection of these was pub. in three volumes, under the singular title of Laugh and be Fat, or Pills to Purge Melancholy. These were republished, and three vols. added, by subscription in 1719, '20, under the title of Wit and Mirth, or Pills to Purge Melancholy, 6 vols. 12mo. It would appear that to the first collection, at least, there had been other contributors besides D'Urfe.

"I cannot sufficiently admire the facetious title of these volumes, and must censure the world of ingratitude, while they are so negligent in rewarding the jocosse labours of my friend Mr. D'Urfe, who was so large a contributor to this treatise, and to whose humorous productions so many rural squires in the remotest parts of this island are obliged for the dignity and state which corpulency gives them."—SIR RICHARD STANLEY: Guardian, No. 29, April 14, 1713. Ride at sepiæ.

A collection of his Poems, consisting of Satyrs, Elegies, and Odes, was pub. in 1690, 8vo. Stories, Moral and Co- mical, 1691, 8vo. Tales, Tragical and Comical, 1704, 8vo. New Operas, with Comical Stories and Poems, 1721, 8vo. See Lowndes's Bibl. Man. for separate publications. To the Essay towards the Theory of the Intelligible World, Swift is said to be indebted; particularly for the idea of his marbled pages. These volumes are now scarce. Mr. Henry G. Bohn, London, some years since advertised a collection, 14 vols. in all, uniformly bound in morocco, at £16 16s. The higher such books are held in price, the better for the public. We want no People's Editions of writers of this class.

D'Urfe's Tory songs did much to strengthen the royal cause, and his Protestant lays helped to bring popery into disrepute. In the style both of his personal character and his writings, no man could have better suited the dissolute circles in which he spent his youth and middle age, than Tom D'Urfe.

"I myself remember King Charles leaning on Tom D'Urfe's shoulder more than once, and humming over a song with him. It is certain that monarch was not a little supported by 'Joy to great Cæsar,' which gave the whigs such a blow as they were not able to recover that whole reign. My friend afterwards attacked popery with the same success, having exposed Bellarmine and Porto-Carrero more than once, in short satirical compositions which have been in every body's mouth. . . . Many an honest gentleman has got a reputation in his country, by pretending to have been in company with Tom D'Urfe."—ADDISON: Guardian, No. 67, May 23, 1713.

Durham, James, 1622?-1658, a captain in the army, was ordained a minister at Glasgow, 1647; Prof. of Divinity there, 1650. Text. to the Ch. of Scot., 1659, 8vo; Edin., 1680, 12mo. Expos. of Job, Glasg., 1659, 12mo. Revelation, Amat., 1660; Edin., 1680, 4to; Glasg., 1788, 4to.

"He shortly interprets the text, endeavours to point out the application of the distinct prophecies, and supports his views by historical references. He also occasionally indulges in conjecture respecting the future."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"Very spiritual and evangelical."—BURKES.

7th ed., Glasg., 1769, 8vo. 62 Sermons on Isaiah liii., Edin., 1683, 4to; 1723, fol. Clavis Cantici; or an Expos. of the Song of Solomon, Lon., 1669, 4to; Edin., 1724, 4to; Aberd., 1840, 8vo.

"A favourite work with those persons who enter fully into the mystical design of the sacred writer, and approve of its entire application to Christ and the church."—Orme: ubi supra.

Expos. of the Ten Commandments, Lon., 1675, 4to. The Unsearchable Riches of Christ, Glasg., 1685, 12mo. Heaven upon Earth, Edin., 1685, 12mo.

"The expository works of Durham are highly respectable, not for their display of learning or critical knowledge, but for their good sense, enlightened piety, and practical acquaintance with the Scriptures."—Orme: ubi supra.

Durham, James. 7 Serms. on Rev. xiv. 13, with a vindication of W. Guthrie, Lon., 1682, 12mo.

Durham, James George. Christy's Friend of Man, Lon., 1803, 8vo. The Providence of God, 1804, 8vo.

Durham, Simeon of. See SIMON.

Durham, Wm., 1611-1686, a native of Gloucestershire, Rector of St. Mildred's, London, &c. Family Instruction. Life of Dr. Harris, Prest. of Trin. Coll., Oxf., 1660, 12mo. Sermons on 1 Cor. xvi. 13, Lon., 1671, 4to; on Hebrews xiii. 16, 1679, 4to.

Durivage, Francis Alexander, b. at Boston, 1814. 1. Cyclopædia of History, 8vo, pp. 780. 2. Stray Subjects, Phila., 12mo. 3. Life Scenes, Boston, 12mo. 4. Translated, in connection with W. S. Chase, Lamartine's History of the Revolution of 1848. Mr. D. is the author of several Plays and Poems, and has contributed largely to the periodical literature of the U. S.

Durnford, Charles, and E. H. East. Reports in Ct. of K. B., 1785-1800, Lon., 1787-1800, 8 vols. fol.; 1794-1802, 8 vols. 8vo. New ed. (5th) with references, 1817, 8 vols. 8vo. 3d Amer. ed., N. York, 1834, 8 vols. in 4, 8vo. Durnford and East commenced the practice of periodical reports.

"These gentlemen have acquired a great share of approbation and the reputation of great attention."—BRIDG. Leg. Bib., 105.

No English Reports are more frequently cited in American courts than those of Durnford and East.

Durnford, W. Trafalgar; a Poem, 1807.

Durston, Wm., M.D. Med. con. to Phil. Trans., 1669, '70.

Dury, Alex. De Terræ Motu, Genev., 1721, 4to.

Dury, John, a Scotchman and a Jesuit. Confutatio Responsionis G. Whitakeri, &c., Paris, 1582, 8vo.

Dury, John, a Scotch divine, who laboured to unite the Lutherans and the Calvinists, and subsequently to promote a union between all Christians. Among his works are Consultatio theologico super negotio Pacis Ecclesiæ, Lon., 1641, 4to. A Model of Ch. Government, 1647, 4to. Earnest plea for Gospel Communion, 1654. Summary

Platform of Divinity, 1854. See a list of others in Watt's Bibl. Brit. The piety, seal, and excellent design of Dury entitle his memory to great respect. See Tanner; Mosheim; Benselius's Sketch of Dury, Helmsstadt, 1744; Burnet's Life of Bedell; Ward's Gresham Professors.

Dusautoy, Frederick. 20 Serms. suitable to the times, on the first part of the Book of Common Prayer, Lon., 1845, 12mo.

Dusautoy, J. A. Reckoner, 1805, 8vo.

Dutens, Lewis, 1729-1812, a native of Tours, in France, took orders in the Church of England, and became Rector of Elsdon, Northumberland. Among his works are the following: Recherches sur l'Origine des Decouvertes, &c., Paris, 1766, 2 vols. 8vo; trans. into English, and pub. at London, 1769, 8vo. Mémoires d'un Voyageur, &c.,—i.e. Memoirs of a Traveller now in Retirement; containing Historical, Political, and Literary Anecdotes relative to Several of the Principal Personages of the Age, Lon., 1806, 3 vols. 8vo. An interesting work. Bibliothèque Complète et Choisie dans toutes les Classes et dans la plupart des Langues, Lon., 1812, 8vo. See a notice of these and other works of Mr. Dutens in Gent. Mag., lxxxii., Pt. 2, 197, and a long Memoir of him, afterwards printed in 4to, from Mr. Nichols, in same vol., 391.

Dutfield, James. Moths, &c., 1748, '49, 4to.

Duthy, John. 1. Provisions. 2. Corn, 1800, '01.

Dutton, Francis. South Australia and its Mines, Lon., 1846, 8vo.

"The best book which has yet issued from the press, descriptive of the resources of this thriving colony."—Lon. Mining Journal.

Dutton, H. F. History made Easy, 1799-1809, 3 vols. 12mo.

Dutton, Hely. Obs. on Archer's Statist. Survey of the Co. of Dublin, Dublin, 1802, 8vo. Statist. and Agricult. Surveys of the Counties of Clare and Galway, Dublin, 1809 and 1814, 8vo.

"The condition and usages of these remote and benighted parts of Ireland are very sensibly delineated by the author, who seems to have well known the statistics and circumstances which required the representation."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Dutton, Henry. Connecticut Digest, N. Haven, 1833, 8vo. The arrangement of this Digest is analytical instead of alphabetical, viz.: 1st, Rights of Persons; 2d, Of Things; 3d, Of Wrongs and their Remedies; 4th, Of Chancery; 5th, Of Crimes.

Dutton, John, alias Prince Dutton. Farewell to Temple-Bar, 1694, 4to.

Dutton, M. R., 1783-1825, of N. Haven, Connecticut, pub. a Course of Mathematics.

Dutton, Matthew. Abridgt of Irish Statutes, Dublin, 1718, 4to. Office of Sheriffs, &c. in Ireland, 1709, '21, 8vo. Law of Landlord and Tenants in do., 1726, 2 vols. 8vo; of Masters and Servants, 1723, 8vo; of a Justice of the Peace, 1726; by Warren, 1727, 8vo.

"Like all the other books of this author, it merits little praise."—Prof. to Smyth's Justice, 6.

Dutton, Thomas, Guy Nott, and John Glover. Warnings of the Eternal Spirit to the City of Edinburgh in Scotland, Lon., 1710, 8vo.

Dutton, Thomas. Pizarro in Peru, from the German of Kotzebue, Lon., 1799, 8vo. The Literary Census; a Satirical Poem, 1798, 8vo. The Wise Man of the East; a Satirical Poem, 1800, 8vo. Dramatic Censor, or Weekly Review, Lon., 1800, '01, 4 vols. 8vo. Geo. III., 1802, 8vo. Other works.

Duval. Digest of the Laws of Florida, 1846.

Duval, Francis. Reasons for refusing to continue a member of the Ch. of Rome, and for joining the Ch. of England; addressed to his children, Lon., 1846, 12mo.

Duval, M. Sup. to Smith's Optics, 1785, 4to.

Du Val, Michael. Rosa Hispani-Anglica, &c., 4to.

Duverger. Works on French, Lon., 1784-1812.

Duyckinck, Evert A., of the city of New York, has gained considerable reputation as a critic and accomplished essayist. He was the first editor of the New York Literary World, (pub. 1847-53), and, after occupying the chair for about two years, resigned his post to Mr. Charles Fenno Hoffman. In about a year after this change Mr. Duyckinck became proprietor and again editor of the periodical. He was assisted in his labours by his brother, George L. Duyckinck. In conjunction with his friend Cornelius Mathews, Mr. E. A. D. edited Arcturus, a Journal of Books and Opinions. This periodical was continued for about two years. Mr. D. has also contributed to the New York Quarterly Review, (pub. 1837-42), the Democratic Review, the Morning News, and other periodicals. A highly-complimentary notice of this gentleman will be found in E. A. Poe's Literati. Mr. E. A. Duyckinck and his brother, Mr.

George L. Duyckinck, also an accomplished scholar, are the authors of the Cyclopedia of American Literature, embracing Personal and Critical Notices of Authors, and Selections from their Writings, from the Earliest Period to the Present Day, with portraits, autographs, and other illustrations, N. York, 1856, 2 vols. r. 8vo. This work has been highly commended by Washington Irving, Edward Everett, Wm. H. Prescott, Hon. George Bancroft, and other eminent scholars; and it well deserves a place in every American library. We acknowledge our indebtedness to it for many facts in regard to American authors. Dr. Griswold wrote a criticism on it, which appeared in the New York Herald, Feb. 13, 1856, and which he afterwards pub. in pamphlet form. Edited Wit and Wisdom of Sydney Smith, with a Memoir, 1856, 12mo.

Duyckinck, George L., of the city of New York, has contributed a number of essays and reviews to the periodicals of the day. Life of George Herbert, N.Y., 1858.

Dwarris, F. Juvenile Essays in Verse, 1805. A General Treatise on the Statutes, their rules of construction, and the proper Boundaries of Legislative and Judicial Interpretation, Lon., 1830, '31, 2 vols. 8vo. See Lieber's Hermeneutics. Criminal Justice in the W. Indies, 1827, 8vo.

Dwight, Rev. H. G. O. Christianity revived in the East, N. York, 12mo; Lon., 1850, p. 8vo. Memoir of Mrs. Elizabeth O. Dwight, N. York, 12mo.

Dwight, Henry C., of New Haven, Conn., d. 1832. Travels in the North of Germany in the years 1825, '26, N. York, 1826.

"This work contains many valuable details, not unmingled, however, with mistakes, which a longer residence, a closer observation, or more preparatory study, might have enabled a foreign tourist to avoid."—North American Review.

Dwight, John S., Translator, in conjunction with others, of Select Minor Poems from the German of Goethe and Schiller, with Notes, Boston, 12mo, pp. 439, being vol. iii. of Ripley's Specimens of Foreign Standard Literature, Boston, 14 vols. 12mo.

"With a proper allowance for the difficulties of the task, we may, with a good conscience, congratulate Mr. Dwight on his general success. Many of the translations are extremely well done."—GEORGE BANCROFT, in N. Amer. Rev., xlviii, 500.

Dwight, M. A. Grecian and Roman Mythology, with Preface by Prof. Tayler Lewis, N. York, 1849, 12mo, and some on large paper, 8vo.

"Admirably adapted to make the subject intelligible and attractive to teachers and pupils in classical schools, and in the higher English seminaries."—PROF. W. S. TYLER, of Amherst College.

Dwight, N. Lives of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence, N. York, 12mo.

Dwight, Samuel. De Vomitione, &c., Lon., 1722, 8vo. De Hydropibus, 1725, 8vo. De Febribus, 1731, 8vo.

Dwight, Sereno O., D.D., 1786-1850, a native of Greenfield, Connecticut, was a son of Dr. Timothy Dwight, President of Yale College. In 1803 he graduated at Yale College, where he was for some time a tutor. He subsequently studied law, which he resigned for divinity. His best-known publications are a life of his great-grandfather, Jonathan Edwards, and an edition of his works, 1830, 10 vols. 8vo; and the Hebrew Wife, (an Illustration of the Jewish Laws of Marriage), pub. in 1836. See International Mag., N. York, 1850, ii. 195. A vol. of Dr. Dwight's Select Discourses, with a Memoir of his Life, by W. T. Dwight, D.D., has been pub. since his decease.

Dwight, Theodore. Hist. of the Hartford Convention, 1833, 8vo. See N. American Rev., xxxix. 208. Mr. Dwight was secretary of the Convention. Character of Thomas Jefferson, 1839, 12mo. Dict. of Roots and Derivations. Schoolmaster's Friend. The Father's Book, 12mo. The Roman Republic of 1849, 12mo.

Dwight, Theodore, Jr. Hist. of Connecticut, N. York, 1841, 18mo. Summer Tour in Northern and Middle States.

Dwight, Timothy, D.D., May 14, 1752-January 11, 1817, was a native of Northampton, Massachusetts. His father was a merchant, a man of exemplary character and cultivated mind, who had been so fortunate as to obtain in marriage the hand of Mary, the third daughter of the celebrated Jonathan Edwards. We say fortunate,—for Mrs. Dwight was worthy of her illustrious parentage, and under her assiduous care the young Timothy had more than the mere name to remind him of his scriptural namesake. When 13 years of age he entered Yale College, and in 1769 graduated with distinguished honours. His varied acquirements eminently qualified him for the office of tutor in his alma mater; and when he resigned this post at the age of 25, the students almost to a man signed a petition to the corporation that he should be called to the presidential chair. The presentation of this request was only prevented by the interference of the object of such flattering regard.

When about 19, Dwight commenced the composition of his principal poem, an epic in eleven books, entitled The Conquest of Canaan; completed in 1774, when the author was not quite 23 years of age.

"We are inclined to think there is something too unpoetical in the author's adaptation of manners to the persons of his poem. He has studied (to use his own words) 'a medium between absolute barbarism and modern refinement. In the best characters, he has endeavoured to represent such manners as are removed from the peculiarities of any age or country, and might belong to the amiable and virtuous of every age.' . . . Corresponding with the laws which the author prescribed to himself in his Conquest of Canaan, he made every thing too common. There is little that is really distinctive, little that is truly oriental, about any of his persons or scenes. A certain equable current of unexceptionable, and oftentimes pleasing, thoughts and expressions flows through the poem. It is occasionally animated, and, in description, sometimes picturesque and poetical. The verification, though greatly monotonous, having little variety in the pauses, is for the most part uncommonly smooth. In the expression of strong emotion, there is avoidance of all offensive extravagance, if it do not reach the genuine ardour or pathos of the highest order of poetry. Having said thus much, we fear we have said all that is due to this poetical work; nor do we say this to deduct any thing from the high and well-deserved reputation of President Dwight. It is but the lot of a single man to excel in every thing; and it is often our misfortune to make a false estimate of our own powers, and to stake too much of our intellectual wealth on the race in which we are unable to reach the goal."—S. WILLIAMS, N. Amer. Rev., vii. 547.

"Some of the passages which I have quoted from the Conquest of Canaan are doubtless equal to any American poetry produced at this period."—Griswold's Poets and Poetry of America, to which we acknowledge our obligations for many of the facts narrated in this article.

In 1777 Dwight was licensed to preach in the Congregational Church, and in the same year entered the army as a chaplain; resigned his commission in 1778; became pastor of the Congregational Church in Greenfield, Conn., 1783; President of Yale College from 1795 until his death in 1817. Besides acting as President, Dr. Dwight discharged the responsibilities appertaining to the posts of stated preacher, professor of theology, and instructor of the Senior Class. The following is a list of his works:

1. America, a Poem in the style of Pope's Windsor Forest, 1772.
2. The History, Eloquence, and Poetry of the Bible, 1772.
3. The Conquest of Canaan, an Epic Poem, 1785.
4. An Election Sermon, 1791.
5. The Genuineness and Authenticity of the New Testament, 1793.
6. Greenfield Hill, a Poem, 1794.
7. The Triumph of Infidelity, a Satire, 1797.
8. Two Discourses on the Nature and Danger of Infidel Philosophy, 1797.
9. Serm. on the death of Eliza Goodrich, 1797.
10. The Duty of Americans in the Present Crisis, 1798.
11. Discourse on the Character of Washington, 1800.
12. Discourse on some Events in the last Century, 1801.
13. Serm. on the death of E. G. Marsh, 1804.
14. Serm. on Duelling, 1805.
15. Serm. at the Andover Theolog. Seminary, 1808.
16. Serm. on the ordination of E. Pearson, 1808.
17. Serm. on the death of Governor Trumbull, 1809.
18. Serm. on Charity, 1810.
19. Serm. at the ordination of N. W. Taylor, 1812.
20. Serm. on two days of Public Fasting, 1812.
21. Serm. before the Amer. Bd. of Foreign Missions, 1813.
22. Remarks on a Review of Inobiquin's Letters, pub. in Lon. Quar. Rev. for Jan., 1814, addressed to the R. H. George Canning, Esq., by an Inhabitant of New England, 1815.
23. Observations on Language, 1816.
24. Essay on Light, 1816.
25. Theology Explained and Defended, in a Series of 173 Sermons, Middletown, Conn., 1818, &c., 5 vols. 8vo; Lon., 1819, 5 vols. 8vo; 1822, 5 vols. 8vo; 1823, 5 vols. 8vo; 1824, 5 vols. 18mo; 1827, 5 vols. 18mo; 1828, 6 vols. 24mo; 1840, 5 vols. 18mo; 5 vols. 8vo; 1 vol. imp. 8vo.
26. New Amer. edit., with Memoir of the Author, N. York, 1846, 4 vols. 8vo.
27. Travels in New England and New York, New Haven, 1821, 4 vols. 8vo; N. York, 1822, 4 vols. 8vo; Lon., 1823, 4 vols. 8vo.

These notes of travels are the results of historical, topographical, and statistical collections made during trips in the summer vacations.

"The work before us, though the humblest in its pretences, is the most important of his writings, and will derive additional value from time, whatever may become of his poetry and of his sermons. . . . A wish to gratify those who, a hundred years hence, might feel curiosity concerning his native country, made him resolve to prepare a faithful description of its existing state. He made notes, therefore, and collected on the spot. . . . The remarks upon natural history are those of an observant and sagacious man who makes no pretensions to science; they are more interesting, therefore, than those of a merely scientific traveller; and, indeed, science is not less indebted to such observers, than history to the faithful chroniclers and humble annalists of former times."—ROBERT SOUTHBY, in Lon. Quar. Rev., xxx. 1.

One would hardly suppose, from the disparaging reference which Mr. Southby makes to Dr. Dwight's "Sermons," that his "Theology" was even at that time (1823) in high estimation with the best judges; yet such was the case: nor is there much danger that this profound and comprehensive work will ever lose the position which it has so justly acquired:

"No production of the transatlantic press has met with so favourable a reception in this country, and experienced so extensive a circulation, as this work of President Dwight. Nor is its popularity likely to be ephemeral. It bears the impress of a most powerful mind, and will pass down to posterity, both in the Old and New World, as the work of one of the master-spirits of the Christian Church."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"Few books have been more cordially received, or more widely circulated, than this work of Professor Dwight. The doctrinal sentiments which it contains are those of moderate Calvinism; the arrangement is distinct and methodical, [Mr. Orme thinks otherwise:] the general style and manner clear and neat, well adapted to the development of a scheme of didactic theology. It is not a work of extraordinary depth or originality of thought; but is worth reading, and is very useful as a book of reference."—Williams's Christian Preacher.

"Dwight's theology, while we agree not in its statements on church government, and long to see in it more of that divine unction which draws the heart to the full enjoyment of communion with God in Christ, is still the work of a powerful and intelligent mind, holding scriptural views of divine truth."—Bickerstaff's Christian Student.

The reader should peruse the Life of Dr. Dwight, by his son Sereno O. Dwight, D.D., (see the name), the biography by Dr. Sprague, and consult Griswold's Prose Writers of America, and Poets and Poetry of America, for specimens of the compositions of a writer whose name casts no feeble lustre upon the literary annals of America.

Dwyer, P. W. The Shield of G. Brit. and Ireland; a Poem, Lon., 1803, 4to. The Soldier of Fortune; a Comedy, 8vo.

Dyason, Wm. Poet. and Prose Works, 1804, 7 vols.

Dyce, Rev. Alexander, b. at Edinburgh, June 30, 1797, is a son of General Dyce, who was attached to the East India service. He was educated at Edinburgh and Oxford; took holy orders, and served as curate at Lanteglos in Cornwall, and Nayland in Suffolk. In 1827 he made London his permanent residence. In this year he published Specimens of British Poetesses, selected and chronologically arranged, cr. 8vo. The Select Translations from Quintus Smyrnaeus gave the world an opportunity to judge of Mr. Dyce's classical scholarship, and he has evinced his critical acumen and intimate acquaintance with the mysteries of old English literature by his editions of Greene, Webster, Shirley, Middleton, Skelton, Beaumont and Fletcher, Marlowe, Peele, Bentley, Collins, Shakespeare, Pope, Akenside, Beattie, Kemp's Nine Days' Wonder, the tragedies of Timon and Sir Thomas More, Wotton's Poems, Porter's Anglican Women of Abington, and some of Dryden's Poems. To these must be added Specimens of English Sonnets from the Earl of Surrey to Wordsworth, Remarks on Collier's and Knight's editions of Shakespeare, A Few Notes on Shakespeare,—a review of Mr. Collier's newly-discovered folio,—pub. in 1853, and his new and complete ed. of the works of William Shakespeare. The text revised. With account of the Life, Plays, and editions of Shakespeare, Notes, &c., 6 vols. demi 8vo. Fine Portrait, from the Stratford Bust. Completed, 1858.

"The long and anxiously expected labours of Mr. Dyce have at last furnished what was most wanted—an edition of the great poet presenting the most perfect text now to be obtained, with brief annotations, sufficient for all practical purposes."—Lon. Athen.

"Mr. Dyce not unfrequently injures the real value of his own knowledge by displaying something of the same enervating and self-satisfied temper with which Steevens was accustomed to assail his brother commentators."—Knight's Eng. Cyc., Dic. Biog., vol. ii.

Mr. Dyce is said to be now engaged upon a translation of Athenæus. We have already had occasion to refer to some of the labours of this industrious commentator, and shall have other opportunities as we pass under review the authors whose merits he has illustrated and whose obscurities he has explained. As to the erudition and critical taste of Mr. Dyce in the department of literature which he has selected, we presume there will be no question, save perhaps on the part of that rivalry which is always slow to perceive merit in dissent. The following brief testimonies from three eminent authorities must suffice for the present article:

"We take this opportunity of expressing our very high opinion of the diligence, skill, and judgment of the Rev. Alexander Dyce, whose editions of Peele, Greene, and Webster, leave little to desire, and still less to improve."—Lon. Quar. Rev.

"We think that no materials ever laid before the public are so well calculated to advance the intelligent study of our immortal poet [Shakespeare] as Mr. Dyce's unpretending and excellent editions of Peele and Greene."—Edin. Rev.

"The acknowledged reputation of Mr. Dyce as a reformer of cerrupt texts is too widely extended to be increased by our eulogy. Suffice it then to state that he has spared neither industry nor pains to produce a perfect copy of these immortal dramas, [Plays of Beaumont and Fletcher.]—Lon. Literary Gazette.

The same excellent periodical thus compliments Mr. Dyce's last publication—A Few Notes on Shakespeare, 1853: "Mr. Dyce's Notes are peculiarly delightful, from the stores of illustration with which his extensive reading, not only among our writers, but among those of other countries, especially of the Italian poets, has enabled him to enrich them. All that he has recorded is valuable. We read his little volume with pleasure and close it with regret."

Dyche, Thomas. Educational Works, 1710, 4to. Dyckman, Jacob, M.D., 1788–1822, a native of Yonkers, West Chester co., N. York, practised medicine in the city of N. York. Pathology of Human Fluids. Duncan's Dispensatory, 1818. Adipocire; Trans. N. Y. Lyceum. He contemplated writing a work on the Vegetable Materia Medica of the U. States, and had made collections for this purpose.

Dyde, W. Hist. and Antiq. of Tewkesbury, Tewk., 1790, 8vo; 2d ed., with addits., 1798, 8vo.

Dyer, Sir Edward, b. about 1540? d. a few years after the accession of James I., was employed in several foreign embassies by Elizabeth. He was educated at Oxford, studied chemistry, associated with Dr. Dee and Edward Kelly, and was thought to be a Rosicrucian. He wrote pastoral odes and madrigals, some of which will be found in England's Helicon, republ. in the Brit. Bibliographer. A number of his compositions are still in MS. See Athen. Oxon.; Brydges's Phillips's Theatrum Poetarum; Brit. Bibliog.; Ellis's Specimens; Gent. Mag., 1813, p. 525.

Dyer, George, of Clifford's Inn, 1755–1841. An Enquiry into the Nature of Subscription to the 39 Articles, 1790, 8vo; enlarged 1792; against subscription. Poems, 1792, 4to. Poems and Critical Essays on Poetry, 1802, 2 vols. 8vo. Poetics, 1812, 2 vols. 8vo. Four Letters on the Eng. Constitution, 1813, 8vo. History of the University and Colleges of Cambridge, including notices relating to the Founders and Eminent Men, 1814, 2 vols. 8vo. The Privileges of the University of Cambridge, together with additional observations on its History, Antiquities, Literature, and Biography, 1824, 2 vols. 8vo. Other works. He contributed the original portions (save the preface) to Valpy's Classics, 141 vols. On this work he was engaged from 1819 to 1830. He edited two plays of Euripides and the Greek Testament. Charles Lamb says of Dyer, besides a notice which we do not care to repeat, of two vols. of his poems, publ. in 1802:

"D. is delightful everywhere, but he is best in such places as these. . . . When he goes about with you to show you the Halls and Colleges, you think you have got with you the interpreter of the House Beautiful."—ELLIS.

Dyer, George, of Exeter. Restoration of the ancient Modes of bestowing Names on the Rivers, Hills, &c., Exeter, 1805, 8vo.

Dyer, Dier, or Deyer, Sir James, 1511–1582, an eminent lawyer of the Middle Temple, London, Speaker of the H. of Commons, 1562; Chief Justice Common Pleas, 1559, '60. Reports K. B., C. P., Ex. and Ch., 4 Hen. VIII.—24 Eliz., (1513–1582.) In French, Lon., 1585, fol., 1592, 1601, '02, '06, '09, '21, '72. With addits. of Lord Treby's, 1688, fol. In English, by John Vaillant, with addits., 1794, 3 vols. 8vo. Abridgt. in English by Sir Thomas Ireland, 1651, 8vo. Abridgt. in French, and law tracts. His Reading on Wills was publ. with Brograve on Jointures, and Ridsen on Forcible Entries, 1648, 4to. Dyer's Reports have been highly commended:

"Unto the painfull and diligent student they will both now sufficiently delight to read, and afford plentiful store of matter worthy his travail."—LEACH CORN.

"Some humours do more fancy Plowden for his fulness of argument and plain kind of proof; others do more like Dyer for his strictness and brevity."—Fulbeck's Directions.

Dyer, Rev. John, 1700–1758, son of Robert Dyer, a Welsh solicitor, was educated at Westminster School. He was for a short time employed in the study of the law, but abandoned it for the life of an itinerant artist. He subsequently took holy orders, and had conferred on him the livings of Calthorpe, Coningsby, Bedford, and Kirkby. Grongar Hill; a Poem, 1727.

"Grongar Hill is the happiest of his productions: it is not, indeed, very accurately written; but the scenes which it displays are so pleasing, the images which they raise are so welcome to the mind, and the reflections of the writer so consonant to the general sense or experience of mankind, that when it is once read, it will be read again."—DR. JOHNSON: Life of Dyer.

The Ruins of Rome, a Poem in Blank Verse, Lon., 1740, 4to. This was elicited by a visit to Italy; it was not so much admired as its predecessor. The Fleece, a Poem in four books, 1757, 4to. This work treats of "The care of sheep, the labours of the loom."

Dr. Johnson considers the subject an impracticable one for poetry:

"The woolcomber and the poet appear to me such discordant natures, that an attempt to bring them together is to couple the serpent with the fowl. . . . Let me, however, honestly report what ever may counterbalance this weight of censure. I have been told that Akenstide, who, upon a poetical question, has a right to be heard, said, 'That he would regulate his opinion of the reigning taste by the fate of Dyer's Fleece, for, if that were ill received, he should not think it any longer reasonable to expect fame from excellence.'"—THE SUPRA.

Dr. Drake considers Johnson's "stern critique" as unjust, and devotes several pages to Dyer's vindication:

"But for the harsh censure of the author of the Rambler, the pages of Dyer would now, perhaps, have been familiar to every lover and judge of nervous and highly finished description. . . . To refute his strictures upon Dyer can prove a task of no very formidable kind, and may restore to due rank a poem which contains a vast variety of landscapes, drawn and coloured in the most spirited and fascinating style." See Drake's Literary Hours, i. 109, et seq.; ii. 35.

A collective edit. of Dyer's works was publ. in 1761, 8vo. Dyer, Richard. A Bleeding Saviour; on 1 Cor. v. 7, Lon., 1676, 8vo.

Dyer, Samuel, 1725?–1772, a man of considerable learning, revised in 1758 the English edit. of Plutarch's Lives. In this he trans. anew the lives of Demetrius and Pericles. Malone asserts him to have been the author of the Letters of Junius, but offers no proof to support this assumption.

Dyer, Thomas H. Life of John Calvin, and extracts from his Correspondence, Lon., 1849, p. 8vo.

"A careful, painstaking, and elaborate book, grounded upon original documents, especially Calvin's epistles, and the various biographies of him that have appeared from the time of Bæza to the three contemporary German volumes of Dr. Henry."—Lon. Athenæum.

Dyer, Wm., d. 1696, aged 60, a Nonconformist divine, was ejected in 1662. Late in life he became a Quaker. Serms., &c., 1663, '66, '83. Dyer's style has been thought to resemble Bunyan's.

Dygbej, or Dygbeius. See DREY.

Dyke, Daniel, d. about 1614, a Puritan divine of great learning and piety, educated at Cambridge, was minister of Coggeshall, Essex, and at one time settled at St. Alban's. He was suspended in 1588. Self-Deceiving, Lon., 1614, 4to. Repentance, 1631, 4to.

"These treatises are very searching. His doctrine falls as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass. His works are well written for the times."—Williams's Christian Preacher.

Six Evangelical Histories, 1617, 4to. Philemon, 1618, 4to. Christ's Temptation, 1631, 4to. Works, (6th edit. of some of them,) publ. by Jeremiah Dyke, 1635, 4to.

Bishop Wilkins considers Dyke's sermons as among the best of his time.

"The writings of Dyke have a singular savour and vigour in them."—Mather's Student.

Dyke, Jeremiah, d. 1620, brother of the preceding, and also a Puritan divine, was Minister of Epping, Sussex, in 1609. Sermons and theolog. treatises, Lon., 1619–40. Worthy Communicant, 1642, 8vo.

Dyke, T. Webb. Verses, &c., 1811, 8vo.

Dykes. The Royal Marriage; King Lemuel's Lesson, Lon., 1723, 8vo.

Dykes, Oswald. Moral Reflections upon Select English Proverbs, Lon., 1708, 8vo. Discourses, 1723, 8vo.

Dyllingham, Francis. Serms., Camb., 1606, 12mo.

Dymock, John. Editions of Cæsar, Sallust, &c., for schools; Ruddiman's Latin Rudiments, Glasg., 1812, '19, &c.

"Mr. Dymock is, by his publications, proving himself a great friend to the rising generation; and they well deserve the popularity and public favour they have received."—Lon. Lit. Gazette.

Dymond, Jonathan, 1796–1828, a native of Exeter, England, was a member of the Society of Friends, and a linen-draper. In 1823 he publ. an Inquiry into the Accordancy of War with the Principles of Christianity. This work did much to promote that earnest advocacy of Peace between nations which in our day has so startled and amazed the diplomatists of the Old School. Dymond had been deeply persuaded of the great influence for good which could be effected by a comprehensive exhibition of the true principles of morality as based upon the only infallible standard, the Word of God. To a preparation of a work of this character he devoted himself with great assiduity; rising early to his pleasing task, and embracing every interval of leisure from business to forward his philanthropic design.

In May, 1828, whilst preparing his work for publication, he died of a consumption, from which he had been a severe sufferer since the spring of 1826. His Essay on the Principles of Morality, and on the Private and Political Rights and Obligations of Mankind, was pub. in London, in 1829, 2 vols. 8vo. The 5th edit. appeared in 1852, Lon., 8vo. Several edita. have been circulated in America also. A long review of this work by Robert Southey, will be found in the London Quarterly Review, xlv. 83-120. Whilst we do not pretend to endorse all of Mr. Dymond's premises and conclusions, yet we must record our conviction that his essay is one of the most valuable works in the language, and should be carefully studied by all who would desire to maintain "a conscience void of offence towards God and man."

"Whether we regard the soundness of his reasonings, the temper, candour, and wisdom of his conclusions, the elegance of his style, the felicity of his illustrations, or the singularly excellent spirit which pervades the whole, it is entitled to rank high in the highest class of ethical productions."—PROFESSOR GEORGE BUSH: Pref. to Amer. edit.

"He takes the word of God as his infallible standard of rectitude by which to weigh all actions, and with a clear head and an honest conscience he follows his principles wherever they lead, knowing they can never lead wrong. It is amusing as well as instructive to see with what ease he overthrows all the previous standards of rectitude which various men had set up—as utility, expediency, &c.; and establishes the great central truth, that the will of God is the only infallible standard by which to judge concerning the right or wrong of actions."—PROF. C. D. CLEVELAND: English Lit. of the 19th Century.

Dyos, John. A Sermon preached at Pauls Cross, the 19th of Juli, 1679, Lon., 1599, 16mo.

Dysart, Earl of. Rational Catechism, Amst., 1712.
Dyson, Humphrey. A Booke containing all such Proclamations as were published during the Reigne of the late Queene Elizabeth, Lon., 1618, fol.

Dyson, Jeremiah. Election for Middlesex, Lon., 4to. Epistle to Mr. Warburton, occasioned by his treatment of the author of the Pleasures of the Imagination, Lon., 1744, 8vo; anon. Dyson was the generous patron of Aken-side. See AKENSIDE, MARK, M.D.

Dyson, Richard R. The History and Antiquities of the Parish of Tottenham-high-cross, by H. G. Oldfield and Dyson, Lon., 1790, 8vo; 2d ed., 1792, 8vo.

Dyson, Theophilus, Surgeon. Med. con. to Memoirs Med., 1792, 1805.

Dyve, Sir Lewis. A Letter from him, giving an Account of his Escape out of the Court of King's Bench, 1648, 4to. Letter to the Lord Marquis of Newcastle, giving an account of the conduct of the King's Affairs in Ireland from 1648 to 1650, Hague, 1650, 4to.

E.

Eachard, John, D.D. 1636-1697, a native of Suffolk, England, admitted at Catherine Hall, Cambridge, 1653; Fellow, 1658; Master, 1675. The Grounds and Occasions of the Contempt of the Clergy and Religion Inquired into, Lon., 1670, 8vo. Observ. upon the Answer to the Inquiry, 1671, 12mo. Hobbes's State of Nature Considered in a Dialogue between Philautus and Timothy, 1672, 12mo. Some Opinions of Hobbes's Considered in a 2d Dialogue between Philautus and Timothy, 1673, 12mo. Nonconforming Preachers, 1673, 12mo. Works, 1705, 8vo; 1714, 12mo. With a Life by Thos. Davies, with the assistance of Drs. Johnson and Farmer, 1774, 3 vols. 12mo. Eachard's Dialogues exposing the absurdity of Hobbes's so-called philosophy, made even that conceited dogmatist sensitive: "I was in company with Hobbes when he swore and cursed, and raved like a madman at the mention of Dr. Eachard's Timothy and Philautus."—DR. HICKES.

Dr. Warton and Mr. Granger remark that Swift had evidently studied the works of Eachard. The divine was noted for his success in ridicule, but on subjects of a serious character did not appear to much advantage. Baker, of St. John's College, Cambridge, was greatly disappointed when he went to hear him preach, and Swift tells us

"I have known men happy enough at ridicule, who, upon grave subjects, were perfectly stupid; of which Dr. Eachard, of Cambridge, who writ The Contempt of the Clergy, was a great instance."

Eachard, John. Sermons, 1645, '46, 4to.

Eachard. See EACHARD.

Eades, John. Clear and Comprehensive View of the Gospel Ministry, 1787, 8vo. Revised by J. Hutton, 1819, 8vo.

Eadie, John. Scripture Paraphrases in Latin Verse. Reign of Geo. III. and other Poems, Glasg., 1818, 12mo.

Eadie, John, D.D., LL.D., Prof. of Hermeneutics and Evidences to the United Presbyterian Church. Biblical Cyclopædia, 6th ed., Lon. and Glasg., 1857, p. 8vo.

"We give it our most cordial and unhesitating recommendation."—Lon. Evangel. Mag.

Concordance to the Scriptures, 12th ed., 1853. Dictionary of the Bible for the Young, 1849, 18mo; 4th ed., 1855, sm. 8vo. Lectures on the Bible to the Young, 1848, 12mo; 2d ed., 1852. Early Oriental History, 1851, p. 8vo. Comment on the Greek Text of St. Paul to the Ephesians, 1853, 8vo. The Divine Love, a series of Doctrinal, Practical, and Experimental Discourses, 1855, 12mo. Prof. Eadie is one of the authors of Griffin's Cyclopædia of Biography, edited by Elihu Rich, Lon. and Glasg., 1854, p. 8vo.

Eadmer, d. 1124? the friend and biographer of Anselm, was elected Bishop of St. Andrew's in Scotland, 1120, but was never consecrated. His principal work is the Historia Novorum, or History of his Own Times, 1066-1122. It was first printed by Selden, Lon., 1623, fol.

A Life of St. Anselm, 1093-1109. Often printed with Anselm's works, and also by Wharton in the Anglia Sacra. The Lives of St. Wilfrid, St. Oswald, St. Dunstan, and others. Also in the Anglia Sacra.

Eadon, John. Arithmet. works, 1793, &c.

Eagle, F. K., and E. Younge. Cases relating to Tithes from the Reign of K. John to the 6th Geo. IV., Lon., 1826, 4 vols. r. 8vo. An invaluable digest.

Eagle, Fra. New Theory of Pulmonary Consumption, Lon., 1839, 8vo.

Eagle, P. A. Life-Assurance Manual, Lon., 1852, 8vo.

Eagle, Wm. 1. Making of Wills. 2. Case of Evans v. Rowe, 1827. 3. Law of Tithes, 1836, 2 vols. r. 8vo. 4. Acts for Commu. of Tithes; 3d ed., 1843, 12mo. 5. Magistrate's Pocket Companion; 2d ed., 1844, 12mo.

Eagles, Rev. John. 1. The Sketcher, Lon., 1854, 8vo. 2. Essays, 1857, 8vo. 3. Sonnets, 1858. See Lon. Athen., 1858, Pt. 2, 137.

Eagles, Thomas. 1. Mountain Melodies, and other Poems, Lon., 8vo. 2. Relvedder, Baron Kolf, and other Poems, 8vo. 3. Brendallah; a Poem, 1838, 8vo.

Ealred. See AILRED OF RINVAUX.

Eames, Mrs. Elizabeth J., formerly Miss Jessup, a native of New York, has contributed many excellent poetical compositions to the New Yorker, The Tribune, Graham's Magazine, and The Southern Literary Messenger. The Crowning of Petrarch, Cleopatra, and the Sonnets to Milton, Dryden, Addison, and Tasse are deserving of warm commendation.

"She writes with feeling; but she regards poetry as an art, and to the cultivation of it she brings her best powers. While thoughtful and earnest, therefore, her pieces are for the most part distinguished for a tasteful elegance."—Grivewold's French Poets of Amer.

Eames, Jane A., of Massachusetts, is favourably known as the authoress of My Mother's Jewel, Agnes and Eliza, and other religious works for the young, pub. by the Prot. Epis. S. S. Union.

Eames, John, d. 1744, pub. a number of papers on mathematics, natural philos., &c. in the Phil. Trans., 1726-42. In conjunction with J. Martyn he pub. an abridgt. of the Phil. Trans., 1719-1733, in 1734, 2 vols. 4to.

Earbery, Matthias. Deism, 1697, 8vo. Power of the Prince, 1717, 8vo. Hist. of the Clemency of our English Monarchs, 1717, 8vo. Vindication of ditto, 1720, 12mo. The Pretended Reformers, 1720, 8vo. Earl of Notingham's Answer to Whiston, &c., 1721, 8vo. The Occasional Historian, 4 Nos. in 1 vol. 8vo, 1730-32. Earbery underwent much persecution.

Earl, George W. Eastern Seas; or, Voyages and Adventures in the Indian Archipelago, 1832, '33, '34, Lon., 1837, 8vo.

"Mr. Earl's volume contains much that is novel, communicated in an unaffected and agreeable manner."—Lon. Athenæum.

Enterprise in Tropical Australia, 1846, p. 8vo. Native Races of Indian Archipelago—Papuan, (Ethnograph. Lib.) Lon., 1853, 8vo. Trans. of D. H. Kolf, Jr.'s Voyages of the Dutch Brig of War Dourga.

Earle, Augustus. Residence in New Zealand in 1827, with a Journal of a Residence in Tristan d'Acumha, Lon., p. 8vo.

"Mr. Earle's journal gives us much curious information in a very agreeable manner."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

Earl, Jabez, D.D., 1676?-1768, a dissenting minister, pub. a number of sermons, theolog. treatises, &c., 1706-35. Treatise on the Sacrament, 1707, 8vo. Often reprinted. New ed., 1816, 8vo. His style is "Judicious, pathetic, and very laconic."—DR. DOUGLASS.

A small collection of Poems in Latin and English.

Earle, Sir James, Knt., Surgeon. Chirurgical Works of Percival Pott, with a Life, Lon., 1790, 3 vols. 8vo; 1808, 3 vols. 8vo. Hydrocele, 1791, 8vo; 3d ed., 1806. Operation for the Stone, 1793, '96, 8vo. Curved Spine, 1799, 8vo. Cataract, 1801, 8vo. Fractures, 1807, 8vo. Hæmorrhoidal Excrescences, 1807, 8vo. Calculus; see Phil. Trans., 1809.

Earle, or Earles, John, 1601-1665, entered at Merton Coll., Oxford, 1620, became chaplain and tutor to Prince Charles, and accompanied him in his exile. On the Restoration he was made Dean of Westminster, consecrated Bishop of Worcester in 1662, and transferred to Salisbury in 1663. Microcosmographie; or, A Peerce of the World discovered in Essays and Characters, Lon., 1628, 8vo; 6th ed., 1630, 12mo; 10th ed., Salisbury, 1786. New ed. (78 characters) with Notes and Appendix, by Philip Bliss, Lon., 1811, sm. 8vo. This ed. contains a Catalogue of the various Writers of Character to the year 1700.

"Perhaps the most valuable collection of characters, previous to the year 1700, is that published by Bishop Earle, in 1628, under the title of Microcosmographie, and which may be considered as a pretty faithful delineation of many classes of characters as they existed during the close of the sixteenth, and commencement of the seventeenth, century."—Drake's Shakespeare and His Times.

An Elegy upon Francis Beaumont, by Bishop Earle, will be found printed at the end of Beaumont's Poems, 1640. He trans. into Latin the Eikon Basilike, (Hague, 1649,) and Hooker's Ecclesiastical Polity; the last was destroyed by the carelessness of his servants. The character of Bishop Earle was most exemplary. Warton declares that since the death of the celebrated Hooker, none have lived "Whom God hath blest with more innocent wisdom, more sanctified learning, or a more pious, peaceable, primitive temper."

Bishop Burnet tells us that Earle
"Was the man of all the clergy for whom the king had the greatest esteem."

Earle, Rev. John. Remarks on the Prefaces to the first and second vols. of Dr. Geddes's Bible.

Earle, Wm., Jr. The Welshmen; a Romance, 1801, 4 vols. Welsh Legends, 1801, 12mo. Trifles; in Verse, 1803, 12mo. Obi; or, Hist. of Three-fingered Jack, 12mo.

Earle, Wm. Benson, 1740-1796, reprinted from a scarce pamphlet an exact Relation of the famous Earthquake and Eruption of Mount Etna, 1669, to which he added a Letter from himself to Lord Lyttelton, Lon., 1775, 8vo. Earle was a munificent benefactor to various charities in Bristol, Winchester, and Salisbury.

Earlom, Richard, 1742-1822, an eminent engraver of London. Liber Veritatis; or, A collection of Prints after Claude Lorraine, with descriptions, Lon., 1777-1804, 3 vols. fol. Baker's sale, 257, vols. i. and ii., and Nos. 1 and 2 of vol. iii., £55 13s. Fonthill, 2250, 3 vols., £91 7s. Portraits of Characters illustrious in English History, by Rich. Earlom and Turner, 1813, 4to.

Earnest, Robert. Vaccination, Lon., 1807, 8vo.

Earnshaw, C. The Wreath; Poet. Gleanings, 1801, 8vo.

Earnshaw, James. Abstract of Penal and other Statutes rel. to the Customs, Lon., 1793-1807, 3 vols. 8vo.

Earnshaw, Thomas. Time-keepers, &c., Lon., 1806, '09, 8vo.

Earnshaw, Wm., M.D. Profess. Case, Phil. Trans. iii.

Earnshaw, Wm. Laws rel. to Shipping, &c., Lon., 1818, 8vo. Digest of Acts rel. to Shipping, &c., 1820, 8vo.

Earsden, John. Ayres, 1618.

Earnulph. See ERNULF.

Eason, Alex., M.D. Med. Com., 1776.

Eason, Alex., Surgeon. Med. Com., ii., v., viii.

Eason, L. Guide to Salvation, Bruges, 1693, 8vo.

East, D. J. Western Africa; its Condition, and Christianity the Means of its Recovery, Lon., 1844, 12mo.

"The analysis of your book embraces almost all the topics relating to Africa worthy of notice: and if they are well handled, as I have no doubt they will be, will form a very valuable and useful work."—Thomas Clarkson to the Author.

"I have read with great attention the analysis of your forthcoming book, with which I am much pleased."—Sir T. F. Buxton to the Author.

East, Sir Edward Hyde. King's Bench Reports, 1800-12, Lon., 1801-14, 16 vols. 8vo. New ed. by Thos. Day, Phila., 1817, 16 vols. 8vo. With Notes, by George M. Wharton, of the Phila. Bar, 1845, 16 vols. in 8, 8vo. Nothing is omitted in Mr. Wharton's ed., and the reader has the advantage of his notes as well as those of Mr. Day. The price of the last ed. is but $25. Mr. Day's ed. was pub. at $72. The value of East's Reports is too well known to render comment necessary. See DURNFORD, C., and EAST, E. H.

Pleas of the Crown; or a General Treatise on the Principles and Practice of Criminal Law, Lon., 1803, 2 vols.

8vo; Phila., 1806, 2 vols. In the preparation of this work the compiler expended the industry of fifteen years.

"He has presented to the world a production which is entitled to the praise of accuracy, neatness, and conciseness; a classical performance in its kind."—Lon. Monthly Review, i. 420.

See Warren's Law Studies, 2d ed., 1845, 620.

East, John. Serm., 1819, 8vo. Sabbath Meditations in Prose and Verse, 1828, 2 vols. 8vo. The Happy Moment, 1835, 18mo. Other works.

East, Thomas. Death-Bed Scenes, Lon., 1825, 12mo. "A welcome companion on the bed of sickness and death."—Lowndes's Brit. Lib.

Other works.

Eastburn, Rev. James Wallis, d. 1819, aged 22, an American poet, a native of New York, is best known as a colleague of Robert C. Sands in the composition of Yamoyden, a Tale of the Wars of King Philip, pub. at New York in 1820. Some interesting particulars concerning Mr. Eastburn will be found in Griswold's Poets and Poetry of America, 11th ed., 1852, p. 213, article ROBERT C. SANDS.

Eastburn, Manton, D.D., Bishop of the Prot. Epis. Church of Massachusetts, was born in England, Feb. 9, 1801. He was consecrated assistant bishop of Mass., Dec. 29, 1842, and in 1843, by the decease of Rt. Rev. W. Griswold, became bishop of that diocese. Lectures on the Epist. of St. Paul to the Philippians, N. York, 1833, 8vo. Bp. E. has pub. a number of sermons and charges, edited Thornton's Family Prayers, and delivered literary lectures on various occasions.

Eastcott, Rev. Richard. Sketches of the Origin, Progress, and Effects of Music, Bath, 1793, 8vo.

"An entertaining compilation by an enthusiastic admirer of music."—Lowndes's Brit. Lib.

Easterbrook, Jos. Appeal to the Public, Bristol, 8vo.

Eastlake, Sir Charles Lock, an eminent painter, b. at Plymouth, Devonshire, in 1793, was elected President of the Royal Academy in 1850. 1. Trans. of Goethe's Theory of Colours, Lon., 1840, 8vo. 2. F. Kugler's Hand-Book of Painting, trans. by a Lady, edited by Sir Ch. L. E., 2 parts, r. 8vo, 1842, '43; 2d ed., 1851, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

"By far the best manual we are acquainted with."—Lon. Ecclesiastic.

3. Materials for a Hist. of Oil Painting, 1847, 8vo.

"From the invention of oil painting to this day. Mr. Eastlake's volume carefully examines and states every ascertainable particular, and fairly settles questions of priority and merit."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

4. Contributions to the Literature of the Fine Arts, 1848, 8vo.

"There cannot be a doubt that a knowledge of the principles which govern any branch of art must greatly increase the power of the artist, as it certainly contributes materially to the pleasure derived from its contemplation. But neither English painters nor English critics are overstocked in this respect; and both may be glad to receive, in a permanent form, such additions as Mr. Eastlake has here made to the literature of the fine arts."—Lon. Exam.

Eastman, Charles G., an American poet, who has been connected with the press at Burlington, Woodstock, and Montpelier, Vermont, pub. a collection of his poems in 1848, Montpelier, 18mo. He has been highly commended as a successful delineator of the "rural life of New England."

Eastman, G. W., and Levi S. Fulton. Works on Book-keeping and Penmanship; pub. in New York.

Eastman, Mrs. Mary H., is a daughter of Dr. Thomas Henderson, U. S. Army. In 1835 she was married to Capt. S. Eastman, U. S. A.; and as a companion of her husband at Fort Snelling and other frontier stations, has enjoyed excellent opportunities of studying the Indian character, which she has so graphically depicted. Mrs. Eastman has pub. four works relating to the Aborigines of America—viz. 1. Dahcotah, or Life and Legends of the Sioux, N. York, 1849, 12mo. 2. Romance of Indian Life, Phila., 1852, 8vo. Orig. pub. in The Iris of 1852. 3. American Aboriginal Portfolio, illustrated by S. Eastman, U. S. Army, 1853, 4to. 4. Chicora, and other Regions of the Conquerors and Conquered, 1854, sm. 4to.

"Of all the portraits of Indian life and character that have been given to the public, none, probably, have come more nearly to the truth than those by Mrs. Eastman. Her books are among the very best contributions to our native literature that have lately appeared."—PROF. HART: Female Prose Writers of America, q. v.

In 1852 Mrs. Eastman pub. a novel entitled Aunt Phillis's Cabin, intended as a response to Mrs. Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin. The sale of the former work reached 18,000 copies in a few weeks. She has also contributed to Arthur's Home Magazine and to other journals.

Eastman, Philip, b. 1799, at Chatham, New Hampshire, grad. at Bowdoin College, 1820. As commissioner under a resolution of the legislature of Maine, passed Oct. 22, 1840, he edited the revised Statutes of that State. He also prepared and published a Digest of the Maine Reports, 26 vols., 1849.

Eastman, Seth, Capt. in U. S. Army, grad. at West Point, 1829, b. at Brunswick, Maine, illustrator of the work pub. by Congress entitled History, Condition, and Future Prospects of the Indian Tribes of the U. S., &c., author of a work on Topographical Drawing, &c. See EASTMAN, MRS. MARY H.

Eastmead, Wm. Human Life, Lon., 1814, 12mo.

Easton, James. Human Longevity, Salisb., 1800, 8vo.

Easton, M. G. Unitarianism; its History, Doctrines, and Tendencies.

"An admirable outline of the History and Doctrines of Unitarianism, together with a clear and scriptural refutation of the heresies which it involves."—Scottish Guardian.

Easton, Thomas. Funl. Serm., Lon., 1692.

Eaton, A. Grammatica Inglesa, &c., Lon., 1814, 8vo.

Eaton, Miss Charlotte E. Rome in the 19th Century, 5th ed., Lon., 1852, 2 vols. 12mo. This is considered to be one of the best accounts of Rome ever published.

Eaton, Cyrus, b. 1784, at Framingham, Mass., was for 40 years a successful teacher in Maine. In 1845 he became totally blind. In 1848 the degree of A.M. was conferred on him by Bowdoin College. Annals of Warren, Me., with the early history of St. George's Broad Bay and the neighbouring settlements on the Waldo Patent, 1851, 8vo. Woman, a Poem, 1854.

Eaton, Daniel Isaac, d. 1804. Trial for Paine's Rights of Man, Lon., 1793, 8vo; for pub. a supposed Libel, 1794, 8vo. Helvetius's System of Nature, 1811, 8vo. Memorial, 1813, 8vo. Continuation of the Age of Reason, 1813.

Eaton, David. Scripture the only Guide to Religious Truth, York, 1800, 8vo. Baptism, Lon., 1826, 8vo. Other works.

Eaton, John, 1575–1641, minister of Wickham Market, Suffolk, is considered by some the founder of Antinomianism. The Discovery of some dangerous Dead Faith, Lon., 1641, 12mo. The Honeycomb of Free Justification, 1642, 4to. Pub. by Robt. Lancaster, who informs us that "The author's faith, zeal, and diligence in doing his calling, and his faith, patience, and cheerfulness in suffering for the same, were highly exemplary."

Eaton, General John Henry, 1786–1856. Life of General Andrew Jackson, Phila., 1824, 8vo.

Eaton, Joseph. Disp. Med. Inaug. de Vertigine, Lugd. Bat., 1686, 4to.

Eaton, Nathaniel. Inquisitio in variantes Theologorum quorundam sententias de Sabbato et Die Dominico, Fran., 1633, 8vo. Oratio in Acad. Patavina, 1647, 4to. De Festis Anglicis, sive Calendarium Sacrum, Lon., 1661, 12mo.

Eaton, Richard. Funl. Serm., Lon., 1616, 4to.

Eaton, Richard. Rates of Mdse, Dubl., 1767, 8vo.

Eaton, Samuel. Theolog. treatises, Lon., 1645–54.

Easton, Samuel, D.D. Human Life, in 17 Serms., Lon., 1764, 8vo. Christ's as taught by Christ himself, in 18 Serms., 1776, 8vo.

"Plain, easy, and sensible discourses, abounding with good sense, and manifesting the author's learning and application."—Lon. Monthly Review.

Eaton, Samuel, minister of Harpell, Maine, d. 1822, aged 85. Serm. on the death of Jacob Abbot, 1820.

Eaton, W. Political Relations of Russia, 1803.

Eberle, J., M.D. Notes of Lectures on the Theory and Practice of Medicine, Phila., 1844, 12mo. Notes and Additions, by Geo. McClellan, M.D., 1840, 8vo. Treatise on the Diseases and Physical Education of Children; with Notes and Additions, by T. D. Mitchell, M.D., 8vo. Treatise of the Materia Medica and Therapeutics, 1847, 2 vols. in 1, 8vo.

Ebers, John. Seven Years of the King's Theatre, Lon., 1828, 8vo.

Eburne, Richard. Serms., &c., Lon., 1613, '16. A plaine Pathway to Plantations. In three Parts, 1624, 4to. In this vol. will be found "Motives for a present Plantation in Newfoundland."

Eccles, Ambrose, a native of Ireland, d. 1809, pub. in three vols., (in all,) edita. of Cymbeline, 1793, 8vo; King Lear, 1793, 8vo; Merchant of Venice, 1805, 8vo.

"Each volume contains, not only notes and illustrations of various commentators, with remarks by the editor, but the several critical and historical essays that have appeared at different times respecting each piece."—Biog. Dramat.

Eccles, James, M.D. Ed. Med. Ess., 1737.

Eccles, John, d. 1735, a musical composer, set some of Congreve's songs and odes to music. The airs were greatly admired, and considered among the best of the day.

Eccles, Samuel. Serms., 1750, '51, '53, '54, '55.

Eccleston, James. Introduction to English Antiquities, intended as a companion to the Hist. of Eng., Lon., 1847, 8vo.

"It has demonstrated its usefulness by furnishing us at once with what would have required hours of search among dusty tomes to attain."—Church and State Gazette.

"A reasonable and judicious work."—Edin. Review.

Questions on Mosheim and Burnet, 12mo. Treatise concerning the Life of God in the Soul of Man, 18mo.

Eccleston, Theodore. The Quaker's Case of not Swearing, 1694, 4to.

Ecclestone, Edward. Noah's Flood, or the Destruction of the World; an Opera, Lon., 1679, 4to. Repub. as The Cataclysm, in 1685, and as The Deluge, in 1691.

Echard, Laurence, 1671?–1730, a native of Suffolk; educated at Christ's College, Cambridge; presented to the livings of Welton and Elkinton, Lincolnshire; Archdeacon of Stowe, 1712; presented by George II., about 1722, to the livings of Rendlesham, Sudborne, and Alford, Suffolk. Description of Ireland, Lon., 1691, 12mo; of Flanders, 1691. Compend. of Geography, 1691, 1713, 8vo. The Roman History to the settlement by Augustus Cæsar. Of this a 4th ed. was pub. in 1699, 8vo; 1699–1705, 5 vols. 8vo; with a continuation, 1713, 5 vols. 8vo; 1719, '20, 5 vols. 8vo. The Roman Hist. from the settlement by Aug. Cæsar to the removal of the Imperial seat of Constantine the Great. Of this a 2d ed. was pub. in 1699, 8vo. Two continuations, one of which was revised by Echard, were afterwards pub. in 3 vols. 8vo. A General Ecclesiastical History to A.D. 313, 1702, fol.; 1710, 2 vols. 8vo; 1712, 6th ed.; 1722, 2 vols. 8vo.

"The Ecclesiastical History of Mr. Laurence Echard is the best of its kind in the English tongue."—Pridentia's Observer.

"A work valuable in many respects."—Bishop Watson.

The History of England to 1688, 1707–18, 3 vols. fol. The author enumerates many authorities, informing us that "From all these I have compiled a history as full, comprehensive, and complete, as I could bring into the compass of the proposed size and bigness. And that nothing might be wanting, I have all the way enriched it with the best and wisest sayings of great men that I could find in larger volumes, and likewise with such short moral reflections, and such proper characters of men, as might give life as well as add instruction to the history."

Calamy, who thought the historian had misrepresented the Nonconformists, and Oldmixon, who conceived that he discovered many historical blunders, both attacked our author. See Dr. Calamy's Letter to Echard, 1718, and Oldmixon's Critical Hist. of Eng., &c. But nothing did more to injure the work than Echard's recital of Lindsey's story of the conference and contract between Oliver Cromwell and the Devil on the morning of the battle of Worcester. Echard by no means endorses the truth of the narration, but he dismisses the subject with a à l'ennemi—or perhaps intended pleasantry:—

"How far Lindsey is to be believed, and how far the story is to be accounted credible, is left to the reader's faith and judgment, and not to any determination of our own."—Vol. II. p. 713. ed. 1718.

Echard's History lost its popularity after the publication of Tindal's trans. of Rapin's. The large circulation of the former work was owing in part to the convenience of his arrangement:

"This history, being chiefly intended for the useful diversion of the nobility and gentry, is put in such a method as appeared to be the least irksome to the reader; every reign being divided into so many stages or periods, as give frequent opportunities of pause and rest."—Bishop Nicolson: Eng. Hist. Lib. 61.

His opponent, Dr. Calamy, also praises this feature as well as other merits of the History:

"The clearness of your method, and the perspicuity of your language, are two very great excellencies, which I admire. I am singularly pleased with the refreshing divisions of your matter, and the chronological distinction of the several parts of your history."

But the doctor proceeds to enumerate grave objections to the sprightly chronicler:

"I neither admire many of the authors which you cite, nor your way of citing them: and I have some reason to think I am not singular in either. Many of the authors that are cited by you have so little credit in the world as to be far from giving sufficient warrant to justify your inserting things from them into an history that should give an account to posterity of past transactions. And your way of citing them is liable to very great objections."—Letter to Mr. Archdeacon Echard, p. 118, 119. See Biog. Brit.

The Gazetteer; a Geographical Index to Europe, 1703, '04, 2 vols. 18mo; 11th ed., 1716, 12mo. Classical Geographical Dictionary, revised by S. Echard, 1715, 8vo. Trans. of Three Comedies of Plautus, 2d ed., 1716. Maxims from Tillotson, 1719, 8vo. Hist. of the Revolution and Establishment in 1688, 1725, 8vo. Trans. of Terence, by Echard and others, 9th ed., 1741, 12mo. Serm., 1698, 4to. Serm., 1726, 8vo.

In the first volume of Dodsley's Collection of Poems there is an epigram—so named—on the respective histories of Echard and Burnet, which reminds us forcibly of the rapid and graphic pencil of the author of Hudibras:

"Gill's history appears to me
Political anatomy;
A case of skeletons well done,
And malefactors every one.
His sharp and strong incisive pen
Historically cuts up men,
And does with lucid skill impart
Their inward ails of head and heart.
Laurence proceeds another way
And well-dressed figures does display;
His characters are all in flesh,
Their hands are fair, their faces fresh,
And from his sweetening air derive
A better scent than when alive.
He wax-work made to please the sons,
Whose fathers were Gill's skeletons."

Echlin, John. Serm., Dubl., 1712, 8vo.
Ecking, Rev. Samuel. 1757-1785. Three Essays on Grace, Faith, and Experience, 1784, 8vo; 3d ed., 1806, 12mo.

Eckley, Joseph, D.D., 1750-1811, a minister of Boston, Mass., was a native of England. He pub. several sermons, &c., 1782, '92, '97, 1802, '05, '06, '09, '10. See Wise's Hist. of the O. S. Church, 45.

Ecton, John. Liber Valorum et Decimarum, Lon., 1711, 8vo; several eds. Enlarged and repub. by Browne Willis, under the title of Thesaurus Rerum Ecclesiasticarum; last ed., 1763, 4to. A still later edit. of the Liber Valorum was pub. in 1786, 4to, under the title of Liber Regia. Bounty of Queen Anne, &c., 2d ed., 1720, '21, 8vo.

Eddis, Wm., Surveyor of the Customs at Annapolis in Maryland. Letters from America, Historical and Descriptive, Lon., 1792, 8vo. This work, which comprises the period from 1769-77, contains the best account we have of the rise of Revolutionary principles in Maryland. The letters are forty in number.

"These letters include an interesting period, and relate to events which, however painful in their detail, and dishonourable to the British name, have, in their consequences, been not altogether unpropitious to Great Britain; and are deemed, by some prophetic minds, to contain in their womb the germs of universal freedom."
—Lon. Monthly Review.

We need hardly urge the collectors of early American History to secure this valuable work.

Eddy, Rev. Daniel C. 1. Young Man's Friend, Lowell, 12mo. 2. Ministers of the Olden Time, 12mo. 3. Lectures to Young Ladies, 12mo. 4. Heroines of the Missionary Enterprise, Boston, 1850, 16mo.

"The biographies are written in a remarkably graphic style, and they remind us in their spirit and picturesqueness of Headley's stirring pages."

Eddy, J. H., 1784-1817, a native of New York, pub. a map of the State of N. York, and was engaged on a general atlas of America at the time of his death. He was totally deaf.

Eddy, Samuel, of Providence, Rhode Island, d. 1839, aged 68. Antiquities, &c.

Ede, James. Gold and Silversmith's Calculator, 1806, 12mo. New ed., 1847, 12mo. Gold and S. Coins, 1809, 8vo. Annals of Europe, 1809, 2 vols. 8vo.

Edelen, Philip. Serm., Lon., 1653, 8vo.

Edelman, W. Serm., Lon., 1833, 12mo.

Eden, Charles Page. Serm., Isa. xl. 31, On Early Prayer, Oxf., 1840, 8vo. To Mr. Eden we are indebted for a revised ed. of Bp. Heber's ed. of the Works of Jeremy Taylor, Lon., 1847-54, 10 vols. 8vo.

"It is no mean praise to be able to say that Mr. Eden has hitherto escaped from the unmerciful and unscrupulous castigation which has been bestowed upon others. . . . It is utterly impossible to produce a more elaborate or correct exposition of the author, whose enormous labours had rendered the task of properly editing them well nigh Herculean."
—Bell's Lon. Messenger, notice of vol. vii.

Eden, Hon. Frederick. Historical Sketch of the International Policy of Modern Europe, Lon., 1823, 8vo.

Eden, Sir Frederick Morton, Bart., Director of the Globe Insurance Co., London, 1809. 1. The State of the Poor; or, an History of the Labouring Classes in England from the Conquest to the Present Period, Lon., 1797, 3 vols. 4to.

"This is the grand storehouse of information respecting the labouring classes of England, and should have a prominent place in every library."
—McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Economy.

A new ed. of this valuable work, with a continuation to the present time, is much needed.

2. Porto Bello, 1798, 8vo. 3. Inhabitants in G. Britain and Ireland, 1800, 8vo. 4. Friendly Societies, 1801, 8vo. 5. Eight Letters on the Peace, and on the Commerce and Manufactures of Great Britain, 1802, 8vo. 6. Maritime Rights of G. Britain, 2d ed., 1808, 8vo. 7. On the Policy and Expediency of Granting Insurance Charters, 1806, 8vo.

"The arguments to show the expediency of granting charters to insurance companies are quite conclusive, and their validity is now universally admitted."
—McCulloch, ubi supra.

Eden, Richard. A Treatise of the New India; trans.

from the Latin of Sebastian Munster, Lon., 1556, 8vo. The Decades of the New World; trans. from the Latin of R. Martyr, 1555, 4to. Augmented by Richard Willes, 1577, 4to. The same Englished by Eden and Lok, 1612, 4to. The Arte of Navigation; trans. from the Spanyshe of Martin Cortes, 1561, '78, '80, '84, 4to. A very few copies have a folding wood-cut map of America. This is very valuable, especially to the collector of American History. Decade of Voyages; trans. from the Latin of Lewes Vertomanus, 1576, 8vo. The History of Travayle in the West and East Indies, and other Countreys lying eyther way towards the fruitfull and ryche Moluccoes, &c. Gathered in parte, and done into English, by Richard Eden. Newly set in order, augmented and finished, by Richard Willes, 1577, 4to. Willett, 844, £3 18s. Roxburghe, 7179, £6 10s. A long extract from Willes's explanatory preface to this rare work will be found in Rich's Cat. of Books relating principally to America, 1832, p. 14. A very necessarie and profitable Booke concerning Navigation; trans. from the Latin of Joannes Taisnierus. Sold along with the Arte of Navigation, 1579, 4to.

"Eden was the first Englishman who undertook to present in a collective form the astonishing results of that spirit of maritime enterprise which had been everywhere awakened by the discovery of America; nor was he a mere compiler: we are indebted to him for several original voyages of great curiosity and value. He is not exempt from error, but in point of learning, accuracy, and integrity is certainly superior to Hakluyt; yet it is undoubted, that while the name of the latter, like that of Vesputi, has become indelibly associated with the New World, his predecessor is very little known."
—Rich's Bibl. Amer. Nova.

Eden, Robert, Archdeacon of Winton. Jurisprudentia Philologica; sive Elementa Juris Civilis, secundum Methodum et seriem Institutionum Justiniani, notis Classicis et Historicis, nec non Parallelis Juris Anglicani Locis, illustrata, Oxon., 1744, 8vo; Lon., 1763, 4to. Antonii Schultingii Jurisconsulti Oratio de Jurisprudentia Marci Tullii Ciceronis Notis Illustrata, 1761, 4to.

Eden, Robert, D.D., Canon of Windsor. Serm. pub. separately, 1743, '54, '55, '56.

Eden, Rev. Robert. Churchman's Theolog. Dict., 2d ed., Lon., 1846, 12mo.

"The design of this work is to give plain and simple explanations of the Theological and Ecclesiastical terms which are used in describing and discussing religious Ordinances, Doctrines, and Institutions, without entering into the controversies which have arisen respecting their object and import."

Fuller's Moderation of the Church of England. A new ed., thoroughly revised, with an Introductory Preface, &c., 1843, 8vo.

"The reader of it will be surprised and delighted at the discoveries which it makes to him of the wisdom of our Church."
—Editor's Preface.

"A calm and argumentative statement of the views of the Church, as conclusively set forth in her Liturgy, Articles, and Homilies. We earnestly recommend it both to the clergy and laity."
—Ch. of Eng. Quar. Review.

Eden, Hon. Robert Henley, afterwards Lord Henley. 1. Reports of Cases in H. C. of Chancery, 1757-66; from the MSS. of Lord Chancellor Northampton, Lon., 1818, 2 vols. r. 8vo; 2d ed., with addita., 1827, 2 vols. in 1, 8vo; Phila., 1839. Lord Northampton's decisions were first pub. by Ambler, (Cases, 1737-83:) the publication of Mr. Eden, however, a descendant of his lordship, (formerly Lord Keeper Henley,) are much to be preferred. Ambler's errors and imperfections are to some extent rectified and remedied. Cox's Reports (the editor of Peere Williams) contain some decisions of Lord Northampton and also of Lord Hardwicke.

"The authority of Lord Northampton is very great, and it arises from the uncommon vigour and clearness of his understanding."

See 1 Kent's Com.; Wallace's Reports, 82; 21 Amer. Jurist, 241; 12 Leg. Obs., 524; Marvin's Leg. Bibl., 288.

2. A Treatise on the Law of Injunctions, Lon., 1821, 8vo. 1st Amer. ed., with Notes and References to Amer. Decisions, N. York, 1822, 8vo; Albany, 1839. 3d Amer. ed., by Thos. W. Waterman, N. York, 1852, 2 vols. 8vo. A new English edit. is now (1858) in preparation. 3. A Practical Treatise on the Bankrupt Law, as amended by the New Act of the 6th Geo. IV., c. 16; 2d ed., Lon., 1826, 8vo; Phila., 1841, 8vo. 4. A Digest of the Bankrupt Law, with an Appendix of Precedents, &c., 3d ed., Lon., 1832, r. 8vo. A new ed. is now (1858) in preparation.

Eden, Wm. See AUCLAND, Lord.

Edens, J. Account of a Journey from Port Oratavia to the top of the Peak of Teneriffe, Phil. Trans., 1714.

Edes. Serm., 1604, 8vo.

Edgar, John. Decisions of the Lords of Sessions from Jan., 1724, to Aug., 1725, Edin., 1726, fol.

Edgar, Sir John, t. c. Sir Richard Steele.

Edgar, John, D.D. Female Virtue, Lon., 1841, 8vo. 641

Edgar, Samuel. The Variations of Popery, Dublin, 1832, 8vo; 2d ed., Lon., 1838, 8vo.
 "It furnishes many a strange commentary on infidelity, unity, uninterrupted succession, universality, and so forth."—Lon. Pres. Rev., 1837.

The object of this work with respect to Popery is the same as Bossuet's in relation to Protestantism.

Edgar, Wm. Vestigialium Systema; or British Customs, Lon., 1714, 8vo. Statutes, &c. rel. to Revenues of Ireland, 1720, 8vo.

Edgerton, Miss Sarah C. See MAYO.

Edge, Wm. John. Appeal to the readers of "Ancient Christianity," Lon., 1840, 8vo.

Edgecumbe, James, D. D. Human Reason, 1736, 8vo.

Edgecumbe, Lord Mountmorres. See MOUNT-MORRES.

Edgeworth, C. Sneyd. Memoirs of the Abbé Edgeworth, Lon., 1815, 8vo.

Edgeworth, Maria, 1767–1849, was the daughter of Richard Lovell Edgeworth, of Edgeworthstown, in the county of Longford, Ireland; a gentleman distinguished not only for literary taste and mechanical ingenuity, but also as the successful wooer of four ladies, who in turn accepted his hand. Maria, a daughter of the first marriage, was born in Oxfordshire, and resided in England until 1782, when her father succeeded to the family estate, and removed to Ireland. Mr. Edgeworth took a lively interest in the cause of education, and was pleased to find in Maria an able literary coadjutor. In 1798 appeared a Treatise on Practical Education, a joint production. Miss Edgeworth pub. in 1810, Early Lessons, in ten parts, and her father added a continuation in 1815, 2 vols. 12mo. Another joint work, which attained great popularity, An Essay on Irish Bulls, made its appearance in 1802. Mr. Edgeworth is supposed to have had a share in several other compositions pub. by Maria. Castle Rackrent, issued in 1801, was the first of a series of novels which proved the possession of powers of a diversified character—descriptive, philosophical, pathetic, and humorous—seldom combined in one individual. Nor is this the highest praise which is to be accorded to Miss Edgeworth. In Belinda, Leonora, The Modern Griselda, Moral Tales, Popular Tales, the Tales of Fashionable Life, Patronage, Harrington, Ormond, Helen, &c., we are made to feel that our amusement is not the only, nor the principal, object of the writer who so charms us. It will be our own fault if mental and moral improvement—a desire to gain knowledge, to be good, and to do good—are not promoted by the pen of Maria Edgeworth. But in her anxiety to teach profitable lessons to those who had already assumed the responsibilities of life, Miss Edgeworth did not permit herself to forget the objects of her early care, to whose instruction she had devoted the first fruits of her clear and practical intellect. In 1822 she pub. Rosamond, a Sequel to Early Lessons; which was followed by Harry and Lucy, and The Parent's Assistant. She completed in 1820 a Memoir of her father, (commenced by him,) who died in 1817. We give the contents of the collective edition of Miss Edgeworth's Novels and Tales, pub. in 18 vols. 12mo, Lon., 1832:

Vol. I. Castle Rackrent; Essay on Irish Bulls; Essay on Self-Justification. II. Forester; The Prussian Vase; The Good Aunt. III. Angelina; The Good French Governess; Mademoiselle Panache; The Knapsack. IV. Lame Jervas; The Will; The Limerick Gloves; Out of Debt, Out of Danger; The Lottery; Rosanna. V. Murad the Unlucky; The Manufacturers; The Contrast; The Grateful Negro; To-morrow. VI. Ennui; The Dun. VII. Manoeuvring; Almeria. VIII. Vivian. IX. The Absentee. X. The Absentee, (concluded); Madame de Fleury; Emilie de Coulanges; The Modern Griselda. XI., XII. Belinda. XIII. Leonora; Letters. XIV., XV. Patronage. XVI. Comic Dramas. XVII. Harrington; Thoughts on Boredom. XVIII. Ormond.

In 1834 Miss Edgeworth gave to the world Helen, the last, and one of the most popular, of her novels; and—true to her early predilection for the instruction of youth—closed her useful labours by the juvenile story of Orlandino. A new collective edition of her Tales and Miscellaneous Pieces was pub. in 1848, Lon., 9 vols. 12mo. Of several of her works there have been numerous editions. In America, as well as at home, her works have been widely circulated, and are highly valued. We could occupy many pages, if permitted by our limits, with commendations by the highest authorities of Miss Edgeworth's compositions. A few brief extracts must suffice:

Sir Walter Scott was so delighted with "the rich humour, pathetic tenderness, and admirable tact" of her Irish portraits, that he determined to try his own skill in drawing Scotch character, though despairing of equalling his model: "If I could but hit Miss Edgeworth's wonderful power of vivifying all her persons, and making them live as beings in your mind, I should not be afraid." Often has the Author of Waverley used such language to me; and I knew that I gratified him most when I could say—"Positively this is equal to Miss Edgeworth." You will thus judge, madam, how deeply he must feel such praise as you have bestowed upon his efforts."—James Ballantyne to Maria Edgeworth, respecting her commendation of Waverley 11th Nov. 1814. See Lockhart's Life of Scott.

We need hardly remind the reader of the memorable visit paid by Maria and two of her sisters to Abbotsford in 1823:

"Never," says Mr. Lockhart, "did I see a brighter day at Abbotsford than that on which Miss Edgeworth first arrived there; never can I forget her look and aspect when she was received by him at his archway, and exclaimed, 'Every thing about you exactly what one ought to have had wit enough to dream.'"—Ubi supra.

A review by Sir Walter of Miss Edgeworth's Patronage, will be found in the Edinburgh Review, xxii. 416:

"The taste and gallantry of the age," remarks the distinguished critic, "may have at last pretty generally mentioned the ardent admiration with which we greeted the first steps of this distinguished lady in her literary career; but the calmer spirits of the South can hardly yet comprehend the exhilarating effect which her reappearance uniformly produces upon the saturnine complexion of their Northern Reviewers."

"Her extraordinary merit, both as a novelist and a woman of genius, consists in her having selected a class of virtues far more difficult to treat as the subject of fiction than others, and which had therefore been left by former writers to her."—Sir James Macintosh.

"As a writer of tales and novels, she has a very marked peculiarity. It is that of venturing to dispense common sense to her readers, and to bring them within the precincts of real life and natural feeling. She presents them with no incredible adventures or inconceivable sentiments, no hyperbolical representations of uncommon character or monstrous exhibitions of exaggerated passion. Without excluding love from her pages, she knows how to assign to it its just limits. She neither degrades the sentiment from its true dignity, nor lifts it to a burlesque elevation. It takes its proper place among the passions. Her heroes and heroines, if such they may be called, are never miraculously good, nor detestably wicked. They are such men and women as we see and converse with every day of our lives; with the same proportional mixture in them of what is right and what is wrong, of what is great and what is little."—Lord DUBLIN: Lon. Quar. Rev., II. 146, 1810.

"The writings of Miss Edgeworth exhibit so singular an union of sober sense and inexhaustible invention—so minute a knowledge of all that distinguishes manners, or touches on happiness in every condition of human fortune—and so just an estimate both of the real sources of enjoyment, and of the illusions by which they are so often obstructed,—that it cannot be thought wonderful that we should separate her from the ordinary manufacturer of novels, and speak of her Tales as works of more serious importance than much of the true history and solemn philosophy that comes daily under our inspection. . . . It is impossible, we think, to read ten pages in any of her writings, without feeling, not only that the whole, but that every part of them, was intended to do good."—LORD JEFFREY: Edin. Rev., xx. 100, 1812; xxviii. 391, 1817.

"Some one has described the novels of Miss Edgeworth as a sort of essence of common sense; and the definition is not inappropriate."—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

"She is the author of works never to be forgotten; of works which can never lose their standard value as 'English classics,' and deserve that honourable name infinitely more than half the dull and licentious trash bound up in our libraries under that title. . . . Her novels always found an eager reception, at a time when the poetry of Scott, of Campbell, and of Crabbe, was issuing in its freshness from the press, when the Edinburgh and Quarterly Reviews, then splendid novelties, were to be duly read and studied, when Madame de Staël was at her zenith, and, in a word, when the competition of the noblest wits was only less keen than at the present day."—EDWARD EVERETT: N. Amer. Rev., xvii. 398, 1823.

A very interesting account of a visit to Maria Edgeworth is given in Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Hall's work, entitled Ireland; and reviews of her works will be found in the Edin. Rev., vols. viii., xiv., xx., xxii., xxviii., and xxxiv.; Lon. Quar. Rev., vols. ii., vii., xvii., and li.; Lon. Monthly Rev., vols. lxxxviii. and cix.; N. Amer. Rev., vols. vi., xvii., and xxxix.; and other prominent periodicals. See also Allan Cunningham's Biog. and Crit. Hist. of the Lit. of the last Fifty Years.

Edgeworth, Richard Lovell, 1744–1817, a native of Bath, father of Maria Edgeworth, has already come under our notice in the preceding article. The reader will find a particular account of this gentleman in his Memoirs, (completed by his daughter Maria,) pub. in 1820, 2 vols. 8vo. He pub. a number of works in addition to those already noticed as the joint productions of himself and daughter. A Letter on the Telegraph, and on the Defence of Ireland, Lon., 1796, 8vo. Poetry explained for the use of Young People, 1802, 8vo. Essays on Professional Education, 1809, 4to. An Essay on the Construction of Roads and Carriages, 1810, '13, 8vo.

"The directions for making roads are very sensible and enlightened, and put forth the practised modes of the present day."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Continuation of Maria Edgeworth's Early Lessons, 1815, 8vo. Contributions on Natural Philosophy, Natural History, Mechanics, &c., to Phil. Trans., 1783, '84; Archæol., 1785; Trans. Roy. Irish Acad., 1788, '97; Nic. Jour., 1806, '09, '10, '11; Phil. Mag., 1816, '16. Mr. Edgeworth repeatedly obtained prizes from the Society of Arts for his mechanical contrivances. He was the principal literary adviser of his celebrated daughter, and she derived great advantages from his intelligent co-operation. We have noticed his Letter on the Telegraph, pub. in 1796. An Essay of his, on The Art of Conveying Secret and Swift Intelligence, will be found in Trans. Roy. Irish Acad., 1797.

Edgeworth, or Edgeworth, Roger, d. about 1560, a zealous R. Catholic divine, was made Chancellor of Wells in 1554. He held several important ecclesiastical posts. Sermons very fruitfull and Learned preached and sette forth, Lon., 1557, 4to and 8vo. Two of his tracts, on the Sacraments, and Bishops and Priests, will be found in the Appendix to Bishop Burnet's History of the Reformation; and copious extracts from his sermons are inserted by Dr. Dibdin in his Library Companion.

"His Discourses are not only worth possessing, from being very uncommon, but from containing much curious and interesting intelligence; delivered, upon the whole, with considerable caution, but with the decisive tone of Catholic zeal."—Ubi suprà.

Edgeworth, Theodore, supposed to be an assumed name. The Shipwreck; or, Memoirs of an Irish Officer and his Family, 1811, 3 vols. 12mo.

Edgley, Samuel. Sermon, Oxf., 1724, 4to.

Edguardus, Dav. De Indiciis et Præconitionibus. Bivided in Anatomicon Introductio, Lon., 1532, 8vo.

Edgworth, Robert. Case of, &c., fol.

Edie, George. English Shooting, Lon., 1772, 8vo.

Edington, Robert. Penitentiary for the Employment of Convicts, 1803, 4to; 1816. Coal Trade, 1813, 8vo.

Edkins, Joshua. Colloc. of Poems, 1801, 8vo.

Edlin, A. Two Cases of Gout, Uxb., 1804, 12mo.

Bread-Making, Lon., 1805, 12mo. Malignant Sore Throat.

Edlyn, Richard. Astrological Judgment, &c., Lon., 1658, '68, 8vo. Prænunciis Sydereis, 1664, 4to.

Edmead, Wm. Commuting the Tythes, Lon., 1816, 8vo.

Edmer. See EADMER.

Edmeston, James. Sacred Lyrics, Lon., 1821, '22, 3 vols. 12mo.

"We must make room for one more extract, which will amply justify Mr. Edmeston's claim to true poetic feeling."—Æsthetic Review, June, 1821.

Hymns, 1844. Sonnets, 1845. Closet Hymns and Poems, 1846, '53. Sacred Poetry, 1848.

Edmond, Mrs. Amanda M., formerly Miss Corey, is a native of Brookline, Massachusetts. She has pub. The Broken Vow and other Poems, chiefly written between the ages of 14 and 18; and The Forget-Me-Not: a gift for Sabbath-School Children.

Edmondes, Edmunds, or Edmunds, Sir Clement, 1566–1622, Remembrancer of the City of London, a son of Sir Thomas Edmondes, filled several posts at court. Observ. on the 1st 5 Books of Caesar's Commentaries, Lon., 1600, fol.; on the 6th and 7th Books, 1600, fol.; on Caesar's Comment. on the Civil Wars, 1609, fol. All or most of them are reprinted with an 8th Comment. by Hirtius Pansa, 1677, fol. Caesar's Comment. in English, 1655, '95, fol. Observ. on the Landing of Forces, &c., 1758, 8vo. Of Sir Clement Edmondes, we are told that "His dextrous pen made him most worthily esteemed in his own vocation; and in the art military, by Caesar's confession, an understanding soldier. He lived faithfully industrious in his place, and died religiously constant in the belief of the resurrection," &c.—Epitaph on his monument.

Edmondes, Sir Thomas, 1563–1639, a distinguished English statesman. See a number of his Letters and abstracts from others in Dr. Birch's Hist. View of the Negotiations between the Courts of England, France, and Brussels, 1592–1617, in Birch's Memoirs of Queen Elizabeth, and in Lodge's Illustrations of British History.

Edmonds, Charles. See CANNING, GEORGE.

Edmonds, Cyrus R. 1. Life and Times of General George Washington, Lon., 1855, 2 vols. 18mo; 1839, 2 vols. 18mo. 2. Introduc. to Leland's View of Deistical Writers, Lon., 1837, 8vo.

Edmonds, John. Wisdom of Providence, Lon., 1761, 8vo.

Edmonds, Judge John W., and George T. Dexter, M.D. Spiritualism; with an Appendix by Nathaniel P. Tallmadge, New York, 1853–55, 2 vols. 8vo.

Edmonds, T. 4th Commandment, &c., 1801.

Edmondson, Christopher. Sermon, 1664, 12mo.

Edmondson, Henry, 1607–1659, Fellow of Queen's Coll., Oxf. Lingua Linguarum, Lon., 1655, 8vo. Homonyma et Synonyma Lingue Latine conjuncta et distincta, 1661.

Edmondson, J. Prodiges, Lon., 1710, fol.

Edmonson, Jonathan, Wesleyan minister. Christian Ministry, Lon., 1825, 12mo.

"A very valuable and judicious manual, more especially adapted to the use of junior preachers among the Wesleyan Methodists." Revealed Religion, 1839, 12mo. Short Sermons, 6th ed., 1845, 2 vols. 12mo. Heavenly World, 3d ed., 1850, 18mo. Self-Government, 4th ed., 1852, 12mo. J. D. and R. Treffry; Sermons on the Holy Ghost, 12mo.

Edmondson, or Edmonson, Joseph, d. 1786, originally a barber, was in 1764 appointed Mowbray-Herald Extraordinary. 1. Hist. Account of the Greville Family, Lon., 1766, 8vo. 2. Companion to the Peerage of Great Britain and Ireland, 1776, 8vo. 3. A Complete Body of Heraldry, 1780, 2 vols. fol. In the first of these vols. Edmondson had the valuable assistance of Sir Joseph Ayloffe, Bart. The 2d vol. consists of an Alphabet of Arms, which contains upwards of 50,000 coats, crests, &c. 4. Baronagium Genealogicum; or, Pedigree of English Peers, 1764–84, 6 vols. fol. In this work, also, Sir Joseph Ayloffe rendered assistance. Marquis of Townshend, 1064, £18 18s. Large paper, Duke of York, 1988, £26 15s. 6d. There is a copy in the British Museum, with MS. notes and additions by F. Hargrave. When possible, there should stand next to this work on the shelf the Five Reports from the Lords Committee touching the Dignity of a Peer of the Realm, &c., edit. 1829, 5 vols. fol.; containing the copious Indexes and the 5th Appendix, "Patents of Creations, and Instruments affording evidence of Creation." 5. Tables of Precedency, (1764,) 18mo, pp. 14, all engraved. 6. The Present Peerages, 1785, 8vo, pp. 428, with 86 plates.

Edmons, Thomas. To Free-Masons, Lon., 1766, 8vo.

Edmonstone, Sir Arch., Bart. 1. Journey to two of the Oases of Upper Egypt, Lon., 1822, 8vo. A valuable work to the antiquary. The most remote of these oases had never before been visited by a European. 2. Christian Gentleman's Daily Walk, 3d ed., 1850, 12mo. 3. Progress of Religion; a Poem, 1842, 12mo. Meditations in Verse for Sundays and Holidays, 1853, 18mo.

Edmonstone, Arthur, M.D. Ophthalmia, Lon., 1802, 8vo; Treatise on ditto, Edin., 1806, 8vo. View of the Ancient and Present State of the Zetland Islands, 1809, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Dr. E. is a native of these islands, and has long resided there: perhaps, if these favourable circumstances had been aided by a sounder judgment, a better taste, and more knowledge, this work would have been improved. As it is, it may advantageously be consulted for what relates to the civil, political, and natural history, agriculture, fisheries, and commerce, antiquities, manners, &c., of these islands."—Severnon's Voyages and Travels.

"Upon the whole, the book is bad; and though it does state some facts that ought to be generally known, bears evident marks not only of haste and carelessness, but of absolute and utter ignorance of the object it affects to discuss."—Edin. Review.

Edmonstone, Wm. Prevention of an Evil Injurious to Health, Lon., 1782, 8vo. The Reviewers Corrected, 1785, 8vo.

Edmund, St., Archbishop of Canterbury, d. 1242, a native of Abingdon, Berkshire, was educated at the University of Paris and University Coll., Oxf. He is said to have been the first who taught logic at Oxford. He was consecrated Archbishop of Canterbury in 1234; went into voluntary exile, and died at Soisy. He left many writings; see Speculum Ecclesiæ: Bibl. Max. Patr., xxv. 316: Liber Miraculorum B. Eadmundi Orientalium Anglorum regis, auctore anonymo: Martene et Durand Collectio, vi. 821.

Edmund de Hadenham, Monk of Rochester. Annales Ecclesiæ Roffensis, 804 ad 1307. See Wharton's Anglia Sacra, i. 327.

Edmunds, John. Village Sermons, 1st series, Lon., 1851; 2d series, 1853, 12mo.

"They are plain, scriptural, and practical."—Lon. Chris. Times.

Edmunds, Richard. Solicitor's Guide. Pleas in Exchequer, Lon., 1794, 8vo.

Edmondson, Wm. A Journal of his Life, Travels, Sufferings, and Labour of Love in the work of the Ministry, Lon., 1774, 8vo.

Edridge, Mrs. Rebecca. The Lapse of Time; a Poem, 1802, 4to. The Highest Castle and Lowest Cave; a Novel, 3 vols. 12mo. The Scrinium; a Collection of Tales, 2 vols. 12mo.

"We would sum up our whole review of the Scrinium by saying that it is, except the Sketch-Book, [by Washington Irving,] the best miscellaneous prose-work of its kind which has come under our notice."—Lon. Literary Register, July 6, 1822.

Edward VI., King of England, 1538–1553, son of Henry VIII. and Jane Seymour, succeeded to the throne

In 1547, at the age of ten years. Injunctions given by King Edward 6th Sixto, 1574, 4to. Conference with the Lord-Admiral. Proceedings in Council. Arguments against the Pope's Supremacy, 1582. Holland declares that the king composed a "most elegant comedy," entitled The Whore of Babylon. His Diary, a Journal, was pub. by Burnet.

Edward, Bowyer, Lord Bishop of Ely. Sermon, 1670. Ditto, 1810. A Charge, 1812.

Edward, J., LL.D. Report of Decisions H. Ct. of Admiralty rel. to Vessels under Brit. Licenses, 1812.

Edwardes, Herbert Benjamin, Major in the R. I. Co.'s Service, b. 1820, at Fridesley, Shropshire, has distinguished himself in India, and is now commissioner at Peshawar. An account of some of the most important events of his life will be found in his work entitled A Year on the Punjab Frontier in 1848-49, Lon., 1851, 2 vols. 8vo.

Edwardes, Otha and Rada; a Dram. Tale, 1781, 12mo.

Edwardes, Archdeacon, of St. Mary's Church, Devon. Sermon, Lon., 1841, 4to.

Edwardes, Meta B., late Professor at Andover, was well known as the author of a Biography of Self-Taught Men, Elocution Reader, co-editor of Bibliotheca Sacra, contributor to Ancient Literature and Art, &c. A collection of his writings, with a Memoir by his late colleague, Professor Park, was pub. in 1853, Boston, 2 vols. 12mo.

Edwardes, Bryan, M.P., 1743-1800, a native of Westbury, Wiltshire, resided for some years in the West Indies. He pub. several treatises on W. India questions, but his principal work is The History, Civil and Sociological, of the British Colonies in the West Indies, Lon., 1793, 2 vols. 4to; 3d ed., 1794, 2 vols. 4to; vol. III., with plates, 1801, 4to. This last vol., which consists chiefly of Tracts, formerly pub. in a separate form, was edited by Sir William Young. It also includes Edwardes's History of St. Domingo, (first pub. in 1791, 4to.) and a Memoir of his early life, written by himself, 5th ed., 1819, 5 vols. 8vo, and one 4to vol. of plates; vols. IV. and V. now first pub., considered inferior to their predecessors. An abridgment of the first three vols. was pub. in 1794, Lon., 2 vols. 8vo, and in 1798, 8vo.

"The History of the West Indies I surely it has long enjoyed. The style and thorough written is rather an obstacle in favour of the old colonial system than the crucible that were ten of it a most valuable addition to our literature. we are sorry to say, to quit work and of the subject, and we do wish could be done to colonial and as publish an edition of Edwardes's very history and continue it to the present Polit. Economy."

"This work justly bears an excellent character, and is very full and minute on almost every topic connected with these islands."—Shannon's Voyages and Travels.

In 1793, Mr. Wm. Preston, of Dublin, addressed a Letter to Bryan Edwards, Esq., containing observations on some passages of his Hist. of the West Indies. Mr. P. attacks Edwards as an apologist for slavery.

Of the History of St. Domingo, already noticed, a 3d ed. was pub. separately in 1797, 4to. This work is commended "For the highly important facts and observations which it contains, for the ability displayed in their arrangement, and for the strongly expressive, correct, and often beautiful language in which they are conveyed to the reader's understanding."—Lon. Monthly Review.

Mr Edwards pub. in 1798—not intended for sale—Proceedings of the Association for promoting the Discovery of the interior parts of Africa, &c., 4to. A vol. of his Poems also was privately printed.

Edwardes, Caroline. Hanes y Ffydd at Hebrannoedd Cambro-Britannicorum Specimen, Ozm., 1871, 8vo; 1875, 4to.

Edwardes, Charles, b. 1797, in England, counsellor-at-law in the city of New York. The Juryman's Guide for the State of New York, N. York, 1831, 8vo. Parties to Bills and other Pleadings. Chancery, Albany, 1832, 8vo. Feathers from my own Wings; Poems and Tales, N. York, 1833, 12mo. Receivers in Chancery; 1839, 8vo; 1844. Reports of Chancery Cases, 1st Circuit, St. of New York, 1831-45, 4 vols. 8vo. History and Poetry of Finger Rings, 1853, 12mo. A curious and interesting volume.

Edwardes, D. Sermon, &c., Lon., 1770, 7s.

Edwardes, E. Twenty-one Sermons, Lon., 1833, 12mo.

Edwardes, E., of the British Museum. Fine Arts in England, their State and Prospects considered relatively to National Education, Lon., 1848, 8vo.

Edwardes, Edward, M.D. Analysis of Chirurgery, Lon., 1826, 4to. The Cures of all sorts of Fevers, 1828, 4to. The Whole Art of Chirurgery, 1830, 4to.

Edwardes, Edward. Sermon, 1759, 8vo.

221

Edwards, Edward. Konopkouth, &c., Lon., 1793. Sermon, 1794, 4to. Brown Willis's Survey of St. Asaph, enlarged and brought down to the present time; with the Life of the Author, Appendix, &c., 1801, '02, 2 vols. 8vo.

Edwards, Edward, 1738-1806, teacher of perspective in the Royal Academy. Treatise of Perspective, Lon., 1803, 4to; 1804, 4to. Anecdotes of Painters who have resided or been born in England, 1808, 4to. Intended as a continuation of Walpole's Anecdotes of Painting. Some copies are on large paper, r. 4to.

Edwards, Edward. Memoirs of Librarian, together with a Practical Hand-Book of Library Economy, 1 vol. r. 8vo; 60 copies on large paper, imp. 8vo. This valuable work, on which Mr. Edwards has been employed for some years, is now (1850) being prepared for publication. To Mr. Edwards we are also indebted for the Account of American Libraries in N. Trübner's Bibliographical Guide to American Literature, 1848, 8vo, and for the article "Free papers" in Encyc. Brit., vol. xvi, 8th ed., 1848.

Edwards, Frederic. Laws of Goring, Horse Racing and Wages, Lon., 1838, 12mo.

Edwards, G. C. Powers and Duties of Justice of the Peace and Town Officers in the State of New York, 6th ed. by D. McMaster, Ithaca, 1840, 8vo.

Edwards, George, 1664-1773, an eminent naturalist, travelled in Holland, Norway, and France, in pursuit of his favourite study. Natural History of Birds, and of some other rare and undescribed Animals, Quadrupeds, Reptiles, Fishes, Insects, &c., Lon., 1743, '47, '50, '51, 4 vols. 4to. It contains figures and descriptions of 216 birds, and 40 beasts and reptiles. Gleanings of Natural History, 1758, '60, '63, 34 copper-plates, exhibiting 70 birds, &c. Considered as a continuation of the preceding work. The 7 vols. are generally sold together. A new edit. of the 1 vol. was pub. 1802-08, with 242 coloured plates r. 4to, 23s; large paper, folio, 23s. Essays upon Natural History, &c., 1770, 8vo. See Memoirs of Edwards's Life and Works, 1776, 4to. Some papers of Mr. E.'s on natural history will be found in Phil. Trans., 1754, '55, '57, '58, '63, '65, '71. Edwards revised a new edit. of Catchaby's Nat. Hist. of Carolina, &c. See CATSBY, MARR.

"Edwards's works are necessarily the most valuable on general ornithology that have ever appeared in England. No natural library should be without them."—SWANSON.

Edwards, George. Elements of Fossiology, Lon., 1770, 8vo. His Advantages, 1751, 12mo.

Edwards, George, M.D. Perfection of G. British, Lon., 1797, 2 vols. 4to; Regeneration of do., 1798, 2 vols. 4to. Diseases of the Human Body, 1791, 4to. Dr. Edwards wrote other works on politics, political economy, &c.

Edwards, Henry. A Collection of Remarkable Characters and Old English Customs, Lon., 1843, p. 8vo.

Edwards, Henry, D.D., LL.D. Pity and Intuition relatively estimated, Lon., 1848; 4th ed., 1853, 12mo.

Illustrations of the Wisdom and Benevolence of the Deity, 1845, sq.

"A little excursion in the track of Paley and the broad road of the Bridgewater Treatise."—Lon. Ed. Gazette.

Marriage; a Poem in Four Cantos, 8d ed., 1845, p. 8vo.

"This poem will be greatly admired by the ladies."—Scot's Anti-Sl. Mag.

Dr. Edwards has pub. several other theologic. and poetical works.

Edwards, James. Tubulin Distinction, Dorking, 1796, 4to. Companion from London to Brighthelmston, Lon., 1801, 4to.

Edwards, John, D.D., 1687-1716, a Calvinist divine, a native of Hertford, Fellow of St. John's Coll., Camb.; minister of Trinity Church, Camb., 1664; preferred to St. Peter's Church, Colechester, about 1676; removed to Cambridge, 1697. He was a son of Thomas Edwards, author of Gangrene, &c. He pub. many sermons and theologic. works, some of which we notice: An Inquiry into four remarkable Texts of the N. Test., Lon., 1693, 8vo; a Further Inquiry, 1693, 8vo. Authority, Style, and Perfection of the Books of the Old and New Test., 1693-94, 3 vols. 8vo. Exercitationes, Critical, Philosophical, Historical, and Theological, 1703, 8vo.

"Much acuteness, learning, and piety to these writings [the three last-named works]."—Nichols's Christian Student.

The Franchiser; three parts, 1706, '08, '09.

"Some useful remarks, though with severity, on several errors he was answered by Robert Lightfoot, which led to a vindication and a rejoinder."—Nichols's Christian Student.

Veritas Redax; or, Evangelical Truths Restored, 1707, 8vo.

"Takes the opposite view to Whitty."—Nichols's C. S.

Theologic. Reformata, or the Substance and Body of the Christian Religion, 1713, 2 vols. fol. Vol. III. (very rare)

pub. after his death, in 1726, fol. Another ed., 1733-43, 3 vols. fol.

"Edwards's Theologia Reformata will be no contemptible treasure for you on all occasions."—Mather's Student.

He wrote several pieces against Locke's Reasonableness of Christianity. Pathologia (in his Remains, 1713, 8vo.) Edwards here takes the same view as Daillie. See other publications of this excellent author in Watt's Bibl. Brit. He did not hesitate to criticize the opinions of Whiston, Locke, Whitby, and Samuel Clarke.

"It is impossible to peruse any of the writings of Edwards without being pleased with the earnestness with which the writer devoted himself to the interpretation of the Scriptures. He was a man of piety and considerable learning, and by no means destitute of acuteness. A very great number of difficult passages are examined in the above works, [The Inquiry, Style, and Perfection of the O. and N. Test. and Exhortations,] and he must be no ordinary scholar who does not find instruction in them."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"That he was a man of extensive learning cannot be denied; and in the materials from which we have drawn up this article, he is said to have been the Paul, the Augustine, the Brawardine, the Calvin of his age."—Dr. Kippis: Aug. Brit., q. v.

"Edwards was a voluminous writer of a controversial spirit, who pointed out and endeavoured to check the departure from reformation principles in his time, but not in the spirit that would commend his sentiments."—Bickersteth's C. S.

Edwards, John. British Herbal, Lon., 1770, fol.; 1775. With 100 col'd plates of flowers which blow in the open air of G. Britain, with descriptions and manner of cultivation.

Edwards, John. Serms., Lon., 1773, 8vo.

Edwards, John. Goose Grass for Scurvy, Lon., 1784, 8vo.

Edwards, John. The Patriot Soldier; a Poem, 1784, 4to. Kathleen, 1808, 4to. Abradates and Panthea; a Tragedy, 1808, 8vo. Interests of Ireland, 1815.

Edwards, John. Serms., &c., Lon., 1791-1806.

Edwards, Jonathan, D.D. 1629-1712, a native of Wrexham, Denbighshire, entered Christ Church, Oxford, 1655; Fellow of Jesus Coll., 1662; Rector of Kiddington, Oxfordshire, which (in 1681) he exchanged for Hinton, Hampshire; Principal of Jesus Coll., 1686. Remarks upon Dr. Sherlock's Examination of the Oxford Decree, &c., Oxf., 1695, 4to; anon. A Preservative against Socinianism, in 4 parts; with an Index by Mr. T. Hearne, Oxf., 1698-1703, 4to. "Valuable and satisfactory."—Bickersteth's Chris. Student.

On the 2d Article, 1702. A Vindication of the Doctrine of Original Sin, Oxf., 1711, 8vo. This is against Dr. Daniel Whitby.

Edwards, Jonathan, 1703-1758, an eminent metaphysician and divine, was born on the 5th of October, at Windsor, in the province of Connecticut. His ancestors, who were English, emigrated to America in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. His father, Rev. Timothy Edwards, was pastor of a church in Windsor for thirty years. In 1716 Jonathan became a student of Yale College, where he received the degree of B.A. in his seventeenth year. He evinced at an early age that love for metaphysical studies which was the principal characteristic of his very remarkable intellect. When only thirteen, he read Locke on the Human Understanding, with a keener delight than a "miser feels when gathering up handfuls of silver and gold from some newly-discovered treasure." In 1722 he was licensed to preach, and exercised his ministry for eight months in the city of New York; his congregation being composed of English Presbyterians. Returning home in the spring of 1723, he devoted himself to his studies. In the ensuing spring he took his Master's degree, and whilst at New Haven was appointed tutor in Yale College. The duties of this post he performed with great success and reputation. In September, 1726, he accepted an invitation to become the colleague of his mother's father, Mr. Stoddard, in a church at Northampton. He was installed in February, 1727, and continued the discharge of his ministerial duties in this post for twenty-four years. In July of this year he was married to Miss Sarah Pierrepont.

Whilst zealously employed in his efforts for the spiritual improvement of his charge, Mr. Edwards was pained to find that some young men of the congregation had imported a number of improper books, and were engaged in circulating them, to the great injury of good morals. Determined to arrest the evil, he spared not in his reproofs a number of the members of the most influential families, who were known to be offenders. This praiseworthy zeal elicited much dislike, which was increased by his insisting on holiness of life in all who approached the table of our Lord. After several meetings of the members of his congregation, it was finally put to vote whether he should continue to act as their pastor: it is melancholy to be obliged to state that this good man was ejected by a majority of 180.

Mr. Edwards now removed to Stockbridge, Massachusetts, where he preached to the Indians and a few white hearers. During his residence at this station, he devoted his leisure hours to writing his principal works. It was here that he completed his design of preparing a treatise on the subject of Free Will:

"It was not till the month of July, 1752, that he appears to have resumed his studies on the subject of free will; for the 7th of that month he writes Dr. Erskine that he hoped soon to be at leisure to resume his design, and gives him another sketch of the plan of his book, in which, though there be nothing new, there is more than in that which he had formerly sent him. Whatever opinion may be held with regard to Mr. Edwards's argument, it must appear astonishing to those who are capable of appreciating the difficulty of his subject, that, in nine months from the date of this letter, on the 14th of April, 1753, he could write Dr. Erskine that he had almost finished the first draught of what he originally intended, though he was under the necessity of delaying the publication till he knew the result of proposals which he had circulated for printing his book by subscription. This book was published in 1754; and, though he had made some progress in preparing his materials before he left Northampton, was certainly written, and nearly completed, within the time ascertained by the two letters referred to, and must be admitted to convey a very striking idea both of his mental resources and of his literary ardour."—SIR HENRY MONCRIEFF: Wellwood's Life of Dr. Erskine.

In 1757, on the death of his son-in-law, the Rev. Aaron Burr, (father of Aaron Burr, afterwards Vice-President of the United States,) Mr. Edwards was chosen his successor as President of the College of New Jersey, at Princeton. This unexpected call found him deeply engaged in projecting several extensive theological works, among which were, A History of the Work of Redemption, and a Harmony of the Old and New Testaments. Guided by the counsel of several judicious friends, he accepted the proffered office, and removed to Princeton in January, 1758. On the 16th of the next month he assumed the duties of the presidency, from which he was removed by death on the 22d of March ensuing. His death was caused by an attack of the small-pox, then prevailing in the town. Mr. Edwards had been inoculated about a month before his decease.

His Treatise on Original Sin, in answer to Dr. Taylor, of Norwich, was finished in the year before his death. It is said that even Taylor acknowledged that he was defeated. The excellent Treatise on the Religious Affections, pub. 1746, has been highly commended as one of the best ever penned upon this most important theme. In addition to these works, Mr. Edwards published Sermons, 1731, '34, '38, '41, '44, '46, '52. A Narrative of the Work of God in the Conversion of many hundred souls in Northampton, in 1736. Thoughts on the Revival of Religion, 1742. An Attempt to Promote Agreement in Prayer for the Revival of Religion, 1746. Life of D. Brainerd, 1746. An Inquiry into the Qualifications for full Communion in the Church, 1749. A Reply to S. Williams's Answer to the Inquiry, 1752. After his death, there were published from his MSS. 18 Sermons (with his life) by Dr. Hopkins, 1765; The History of Redemption, 1774; On the Nature of True Virtue, 1788; God's Last End in the Creation; 33 Sermons; 20 Sermons, 1789; Miscellaneous Observations, 1793; Miscellaneous Remarks, 1796.

Mr. Edwards's principal work, A Careful and Strict Inquiry into the modern prevailing notion that Freedom of Will is supposed to be essential to Moral Agency, is undoubtedly the great bulwark of Calvinistic theology. As an intellectual production, it proves its author to have been one of the greatest metaphysicians that the world has ever seen. We have many testimonies to support this assertion:

"I consider Jonathan Edwards the greatest of the sons of men. He ranks with the brightest luminaries of the Christian church, not excluding any country, or any age, since the apostolic."—ROBERT HALL.

"That great master-mind, Jonathan Edwards, whose close-sighted observation, clear judgment, and unbending faithfulness, were of the very highest order."—DR. J. P. K. SMITH.

Dr. Erskine very happily groups together the characteristics of our author:

"Jonathan Edwards was remarkable for the penetration and extent of his understanding, for his powers of criticism and accurate distinction, quickness of thought, solidity of judgment, and force of reasoning. . . . He very early discovered a genius above the ordinary size, which gradually ripened and expanded by daily exertion and application. By nature he was formed for a logician and a metaphysician; but, by speculation, observation, and converse, greatly improved. He had a good insight into the whole circle of liberal arts and sciences; possessed a very valuable stock of classical learning, philosophy, mathematics, history, and chronology."

Dr. Erskine, an excellent judge of men and books, introduced several of our author's writings to the British public, "and declared that he did not think our age had produced a divine of equal judgment or genius."

"Jonathan Edwards is a writer of great originality and plety, and with extraordinary mental powers. He in fact commenced a new and higher school in divinity, to which many subsequent writers, Erskine, Fuller, Newton, Scott, Ryland, the Milners, Dwight, and indeed the great body of evangelical authors who have since lived, have been indebted."—REV. E. BICKERSTETH.

Dugald Stewart, after noticing Collins's controversy with Clarke, remarks that "It is remarkable how completely Collins has anticipated Dr. Jonathan Edwards, the most celebrated, and indisputably the ablest, champion of the scheme of Necessity who has since appeared."

The reader will hardly expect us to voluntarily engulf ourselves in this whirlpool of metaphysics, wherein the wits of many great, many wise, many valiant men have been so completely wrecked. Baron de Grimm, indeed, cut the Gordian knot without ceremony, but we doubt if his noble auditor, the Duke of Saxe Gotha, received much either of instruction or edification from the baron's declamation; and certain we are that it would require more than Diderot's letter to reconcile us to Diderot's philosophy.

Sir James Mackintosh, who whilst at college had debated with his friend Robert Hall "almost every important position in Edwards on the Will," thus speaks of him in later years:

"This remarkable man, the metaphysician of America, was formed among the Calvinists of New England, when their stern doctrine retained its vigorous authority. His power of subtle argument, perhaps unmatched, certainly unsurpassed among men, was joined, as in some of the ancient Mystics, with a character which raised his piety to fervour. He embraced their doctrine, probably without knowing it to be theirs. 'True religion,' says he, 'in a great measure, consists in holy affections.' . . . His ethical theory is contained in his Dissertation on the Nature of True Virtue; and in another, On God's chief End in the Creation. . . . As far as Edwards confines himself to created beings, and while his theory is perfectly intelligible, it coincides with that of universal benevolence, hereafter to be considered." See 2d Prelim. Dissert. to Encyc. Brit.

The other young philosopher—the college friend of Sir James, who rose to as great distinction in another sphere—that most eloquent orator, Robert Hall, always retained his reverence for Edwards. His acquaintance with his writings commenced at even an earlier period than those happy days when the two friends debated so keenly, yet amicably, amidst the picturesque scenery of the banks of the Don. Dr. Gregory assures us that when Robert Hall was as yet a mere child, "The works of Jonathan Edwards were among his favourites; and it is an ascertained fact, that before he was nine years of age, he had perused and reperused, with intense interest, the treatises of that profound and extraordinary thinker on the 'Affections' and on the 'Will.' His regard never diminished; he for full sixty years read Jonathan Edwards's writings with undiminished pleasure."

It is hardly necessary perhaps to observe that in quoting these testimonies to the intellectual greatness of Edwards, the theological system of which he was so able an expositor is not at all intended to be brought under consideration.

"The Treatise on the Will is to a true philosophy of human nature as the demonstrations of Leibnitz are to modern mechanical science."—ISAAC TAYLOR.

"To theological students his works are almost indispensable. In all the branches of theology, didactic, polemical, casuistic, experimental, and practical, he had few equals, and perhaps no superior. The number and variety of his works show the intenseness of his industry and the uncommon strength of his intellectual powers. The Inquiry into the Will is a masterly work, which, as a specimen of exact analysis, of profound or perfect abstraction, of conclusive logic, and of calm discussion, will long support its high reputation, and will continue to be used as a classic material in the business of intellectual education."—Lives of the Brit. Lib.

Of this work the London Quarterly Review remarks: "It is commonly referred to by modern Calvinists as containing both their sentiments and the confirmation of them. In it the metaphysical reasonings in favour of the predestination tenets, produced in such abundance during the century succeeding the Reformation, have been digested and brought within reasonable compass."

The Introductory Essay by Isaac Taylor to the edition pub. in London, 1831, has been highly commended: "It established the author's claims to rank among the most accomplished metaphysical writers of the present day. His main object is to analyze and separate, as by a chemical test, the different elements of Edwards's arguments, and to place in its true light, or to refer to its proper department of science, the Inquiry concerning human agency, free will, liberty, and necessity."

"The Inquiry into the Will is a most profound and acute disquisition. The English Calvinists have produced nothing to be put in competition with it. . . . That extraordinary man, who in a metaphysical age or country would certainly have been deemed as much the boast of America as his great countryman, Franklin."—SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH.

The Discourses on Justification Mr. Bickersteth considers among the best on that all-important doctrine.

The History of the Work of Redemption, which is a mere outline of what the author intended, (see ante.) exhibits a "method entirely new. Though a posthumous publication, it discovers the same originality and accuracy of thought with the other works of the author."—DR. WILLIAMS.

"It shows the author's intimate acquaintance with the plan of heaven, and how well he could illustrate its progressive development."—JAMES.

From this last-named writer, a very eminent authority, we quote some further comments on our great author:

"Jonathan Edwards, as a philosopher, as well as a divine, had few equals, and no superior, among his contemporaries. His works will live as long as powerful reasoning, genuine religion, and the science of the human mind, continue to be objects of respect. . . . The Treatise on Religious Affections discovers his profound acquaintance with the nature of genuine religion, and with all the deceitful workings of the human heart. The Inquiry into the Freedom of the Human Will displays the talent of the author as a metaphysician, and his accurate knowledge of the Arminian and Calvinistic controversy. His Defence of the Christian Doctrine of Original Sin, designed partly as an answer to a work on that subject by Dr. John Taylor of Norwich, discovers the same high qualities which belong to his former works, with a greater portion of excellent critical interpretation of the Scripture. His style, it is to be regretted, repels many from the examination of his writings; but a little perseverance and attention will render it familiar to a diligent student, and the effect of his close and convincing reasoning will prove eminently beneficial to the understanding."—Bibliotheca Biblica.

"A profound searcher into the genuine sources of truth, well versed in the Holy Scriptures, a close and minute reasoner, a strenuous defender of holiness and the rights of God; plain and perspicuous in his method, unadorned but prolix in his language. On the whole, a most excellent writer, both practical and controversial."—Dr. Williams's Christian Preacher.

Dr. Jamieson refers to the respect accorded to Edwards's powerful work by both parties of theologians:

"As a theological writer, he occupies the foremost rank amongst metaphysical divines. His work on the Freedom of the Will is universally acknowledged to be one of the greatest efforts of human intellect; and while he is regarded by the Calvinists as the greatest champion of the philosophical necessity on which their system is built, the Arminians also look to him as an authority, whose principles and reasoning they are forced to treat with respect. The other works of Mr. Edwards—On Original Sin, On the Affections, The History of Redemption—bear the same stamp of high intellectual power, and all enjoy an extensive reputation."

For a comparison between Bishop Butler and Jonathan Edwards, see BUTLER, JOSEPH, in this volume. A highly-respected authority thus advises:

"Coming on to modern theological writers, I recommend you to familiarize yourselves with the works of the acute, the philosophical, the profound, the pious Jonathan Edwards, and those of Andrew Fuller. I know nothing like the latter for a beautiful combination of doctrinal, practical, and experimental religion."—Counsels to Students of Theology on leaving College, by John Angell James.

We notice the following editions of Edwards's works:

1. Edit. pub. at Worcester, Mass., 1809, 8 vols. 8vo. (See No. 7.) 2. Edited by Dr. Williams, of Rotherham, Lon., 1817, 8 vols. r. 8vo, and vols. ix. and x., Edin., 1847, r. 8vo, £7 8s. 3. By Edward Hickman, Lon., 1834, 2 vols. imp. 8vo; 1839, 42s. 4. An edit. by Dr. Austin, 1809, 8 vols. 5. An edit. by Dr. Sereno Edward Dwight, 1830, 10 vols. 8vo. 6. An edit. pub. in New York in 4 vols. r. 8vo, 1844. To this edit. Mr. Robert Ogle, of London, added 2 vols. r. 8vo, in 1846. The two supplementary vols. contain The Notes on the Bible, Miscellaneous Observations, Types of the Messiah, and 17 Occasional Sermons. 7. A reprint of the Worcester edit. was pub. in N. York in 1855, 4 vols. 8vo. In 1852 (N. York, 18mo) a series of 16 Lectures on Charity and its Fruits was pub. from President Edwards's MSS., edited by the author's great-grandson, the Rev. Tryon Edwards, D.D., of New London, Connecticut. We are pleased to announce that this gentleman, the trustee of Edwards's MSS., is now (1858) engaged upon a new ed. of the works of his distinguished ancestor, to be issued in Edinburgh and the United States simultaneously. We venture to express the hope that the editor will not hesitate to make this edition as complete as the business prospects of the undertaking will at all justify. Few of the admirers of President Edwards have any conception of the vast store of his writings by which the world has never yet had an opportunity to be profited. Dr. Tryon Edwards tells us,

"These manuscripts are very numerous. The seventeenth century was an age of voluminous authorship. The works of Bishop Hall amount to ten volumes octavo; Lightfoot's, to thirteen; Jeremy Taylor's, to fifteen; Dr. Goodwin's, to twenty; Owen's, to twenty-eight; while Baxter's would extend to some sixty volumes, or from thirty to forty thousand closely-printed octavo pages. The manuscripts of Edwards, if all published, would be more voluminous than the works of any of these writers, if possibly the last be excepted. And these manuscripts have been carefully preserved and kept together; and about three years since were committed to the editor of this work, as sole permanent trustee, by all the then surviving grand-children of the author."—Preface to Charity and its Fruits.

After this statement, we shall hardly excuse Dr. Edwards

if he fail to add considerably to the contents of the previous editions of the works of his great ancestor. In addition to the notices contained in the works already referred to, the reader must peruse the biography of this distinguished divine in Middleton's Evangel. Biog., and the Life, by Samuel Miller, in Spark's Amer. Biog., 1st series, viii. 1.

Edwards, Jonathan, D.D., 1745-1801, son of the preceding, graduated at the College of New Jersey, 1765; licensed to preach, 1766; tutor at Princeton College, 1767-69; pastor of the church of White Haven at New Haven, 1769-95; pastor of the church at Colebrook, in Litchfield county, 1796; President of Union Coll., Schenectady, N. York, 1799-1801. Dr. Edwards pub. a number of sermons and theological treatises, for a list of which see Allen's Amer. Biog. Dict., and a collective edit. of his works edited by his grandson, Dr. Tryon Edwards. He was a contributor (signatures I and O) to the N. York Theolog. Magazine, and edited from his father's MSS. The History of the Work of Redemption, two vols. of Sermons, and two vols. of Observations on important theolog. subjects. Many interesting particulars respecting the second President Edwards—not to be met with elsewhere—will be found in the Memoir pub. by Dr. Tryon Edwards.

"There were several remarkable coincidences in the lives of Dr. Edwards and his father. Both were tutors in the seminaries in which they were educated; were dismissed on account of their religious opinions; were settled again in retired situations; were elected to the presidency of a college; and, in a short time after they were inaugurated, died at nearly the same age. They were also remarkably similar in person and character."

Edwards, Joseph. Serms., 1731, '36, '43, '50.

Edwards, Rev. Joseph, second Master of King's College, London, has pub. a number of useful educational and theolog. works. Some of the former were written in conjunction with W. Cross of Queen's Coll., Cambridge.

Edwards, Mrs. M. C. Grammar, 1796, 8vo.

Edwards, Morgan, 1722-1795, a Baptist minister, a native of Wales, came to America in 1761, and became pastor of a church in Philadelphia. He pub. several sermons and theolog. treatises, and Materials towards a History of Baptists of Penn. and N. Jersey, 1792, 2 vols. 12mo.

Edwards, P. H. The Imperial Conspirator Overthrown; a serio-burlesque performance, 1808, 8vo.

Edwards, Peter. Candid Reasons for renouncing the principles of Antipedobaptism, Lon., 1793, 8vo; 4th ed., Edin., 1841, 12mo; Phila., 1841.

"Confining his attention in this essay to a few principal topics, he has produced an argument of unusual power and conclusiveness. It cannot be overcome, and all attempts hitherto employed to set it aside have been feeble."

Baptism; being an address to Baptists and Pædobaptists, 1805, 12mo.

Edwards, Richard, 1523-1566? an early dramatic writer, educated at Corpus Christi Coll., and Christ Church, Oxf., is best known as the designer and principal contributor to The Paradise of Daynty Devises, and as the author of Damon and Pythias, certainly one of the first English dramas upon a classical subject. This tragedy—pub. Lon., 1570, '71, '82, 4to—was acted before Queen Elizabeth in 1566. Her majesty also witnessed the performance of Edwards's Comedy of Palæmon and Arcyte in Christ Ch. Hall, 1566. Wood gives an amusing account of the performance, and tells us that the cry of the hounds in the hunting of Theseus was so well imitated, that some of the young scholars

"were so much taken and surpris'd (supposing it had been real) that they cried out, There, there—he's caught, he's caught. All which the queen merrily beholding, said, O excellent! those boys have very truth and ready to leap out of the windows to follow the hounds." See Athen. Oxon., Bliss's ed., i. 358.

Besides the edita, we have noticed of The excellent [Tragic] Comedie of two of the most faithfullest Friends Damon and Pythias, there is another, sine anno. The madrigals and other poetical pieces of Edwards were very popular. His "May" and "I may not," the lines on the maxim of Terence, Amantium ira amoris redintegratio est, and the stanzas "In Commendation of Musick," (see the first stanzas in Romeo and Juliet), are compositions of rare excellence. We would fain linger on this theme, but our limits forbid. Respecting this once-popular poet, and the Paradise of Daynty Devises, (first pub. in 1576, and re-pub. in The British Bibliographer), the reader will find copious notices in Puttenham's Arte of Eng. Poet.; Bliss's Wood's Athen. Oxon.; Wood's Annals; Sir R. Brydges's edit. of Phillips's Theatrum Poetarum; Brit. Bibliog., vol. iii.; Hawkins's Hist. of Music; Ellis's Specimens Eng. Poet.; Warton's Hist. of Eng. Poet.; Biog. Dramat.; Collier's Hist. of Dram. Poet.; and Drake's Shakspeare, and his Times.

"If I should be thought to have been disproportionately prolix in speaking of Edwards, I would be understood to have partly intended a tribute of respect to the memory of a poet who is one of the earliest of our dramatic writers after the reformation of the British stage. . . . Edwards, besides that he was a writer of regular dramas, appears to have been a contriver of masques, and a composer of poetry for pageants. In a word, he united all those arts and accomplishments which minister to popular pleasure: he was the first fiddler, the most fashionable sonneteer, the readiest rhymor, and the most facetious mimic of the court."—Warton's Hist. of Eng. Poetry.

Edwards, Richard. River Neen, &c., Lon., 1749, 8vo.

Edwards, Richard. Letter to J. Hanbury, Esq., Lon., 1772, 4to. Letter to Bp. S. Barrington, 1773, 4to.

Edwards, Richard. 3 books on Eng. Prosody, &c., 1813.

Edwards, Roger. Palmer and Prayers, Lon., 1570, 16mo.

Edwards, Sampson. Lett. to Woodward, Lon., 8vo.

Edwards, Sydenham. Cynographia Britannica, Lon., 1800, 4to. 61 Plates, representing about 150 Rare Plants, Lon., 1809, 4to. Botanical Register, 14 vols. r. 8vo, £2 9s. each. New series, edited by Dr. Lindley, with 750 col'd plates, 1838-47, 10 vols. r. 8vo, £22. 1st Series was pub. in 13 vols. r. 8vo; each £2 10s.: 2d Series, 10 vols. r. 8vo; each £2 10s.: 3d Series, 10 vols. r. 8vo; each £2 4s.

Edwards, T. W. C. Educational works, 1818, 8vo.

Edwards, Tenison. Orders H. Ct. of Chancery, 1815-45, Lon., 1845, 12mo; Addenda, 1845-48, 1848, 12mo.

Edwards, Thomas, d. 1647, educated at Trinity Coll., Camb., became a clergyman of the Church of England, which he renounced for Presbyterianism. He was a bitter opponent of the Independents, and pub. against them, in addition to other pieces, Gangrena; or a Discovery of many of the Errors, Heresies, Blasphemies, and pernicious practices of the Sectaries of the time, vented and acted in England in these four last years, 3 parts, Lon., 1646, 4to.

"Edwards's Gangrena gives a horrible picture of the state of the sects in that time. He was a rigid Presbyterian, and very bitter against those who differed from that system. His statements cannot therefore be trusted."—Bickerside's C. S.

This attack was too much for the patience of the Independents. They drove their opponent from England, and he died in Holland. This he could not complain of, as he was himself a violent enemy to toleration, and wrote a work entitled The Casting Down of the last and strongest hold of Satan; or, A Treatise against Toleration, 1647, 4to. See an account of Edwards and his writings in Wood's Fasti.

Edwards, Thomas. Serm., 1660, 8vo.

Edwards, Thomas. Review of Crispinianism Unmasked, Lon., 1693, 4to. Gospel Truth, &c., 1693, 4to. Baxterianism Barefaced, 1699, 4to.

Edwards, Thomas. Praying in the Spirit; against Extemp. Prayer, Lon., 1703, 8vo. Diocesan Episcopacy proved from Holy Scripture, 1705, 8vo.

Edwards, Thomas, 1699?-1757, a critic of considerable ability, was a member of Lincoln's Inn, and called to the bar, but never practised. He was devoted to the study of Shakspeare, and was so indignant at the pompous ignorance and arrogance displayed by Warburton in his edition of the immortal bard, that he indited an epistle to him, entitled A Letter to the author of a late Epistolary Dedication, addressed to Mr. Warburton. This was followed in 1747 by a Supplement to Mr. Warburton's edition of Shakspeare. It pleased the public; and in 1748 a 3d edit. was pub. under the title of The Canons of Criticism, and a Glossary, being a Supplement to Mr. Warburton's edition of Shakspeare; collected from the notes in that celebrated work, and proper to be bound up with it. Again pub., 1750, 8vo. Best (7th) edit., 1765, 8vo, which contains the Trial of the Letter Y alias Y in order to settle the orthography of our Language, and Sonnets. Also, Remarks on Shakspeare by Mr. Roderick.

The Canons of Criticism was a fair hit at Warburton; for he remarked in his preface, that he had once designed giving the reader a body of canons for literary criticism, and a glossary, but that he had not carried out this idea, as these uses might be well supplied by what he had occasionally remarked in his notes on Shakspeare.

Edwards thought this too good a chance to be lost. He therefore drew up a set of the most absurd pretended canons from Warburton's notes, and gave instances in support of them from the same authority. This enraged the amiable prelate not a little, and in his notes to the Dunciad he takes advantage of Pope's two lines—

"Her children first of more distinguished sort, Who study Shakspeare at the Inns of Court!"

to add a comment most abusive of the satirist. But Edwards had altogether the best of the battle. Warton approved of his canons highly, and they were applauded by Dr. Johnson, but the latter, who was a great admirer of Warburton, took care to add—

"Sir, a fly may sting and tease a horse, and yet the horse is the nobler animal."

In 1761 was pub. a tract of our author's, entitled Free and Candid Thoughts on the Doctrine of Predestination. It contains nothing new. See Biog. Brit.; Nichols's Lit. Anecdotes; Richardson's Corresp.

Edwards, Thomas, 1729-1785, entered at, (1747,) and Fellow of, Clare Hall, Camb.; Rector of John the Baptist, Coventry, 1758; Vicar of Nuneaton, Warwickshire, 1770. He was a strenuous Arminian. New English trans. of the Psalms, from the original Hebrew, reduced to metre by the late Bishop Hare, with Notes and Illustrations, Lon., 1755, 8vo. Prolegomena in Libros Veteris Testamenti Poeticos, &c., Cantab., 1762, 8vo.

"These works contain a defence and illustration of Bishop Hare's principles of Hebrew metre, which have had few advocates since the publication of Lowth's Lectures on the Hebrew Poetry, and his Isaiah. The translation of the Psalms affords occasional assistance for understanding them, and contains various emendations of the Hebrew text, suggested by the metre. The Latin Prolegomena, which defend Hare and attack Lowth, are sometimes ingenious, but seldom satisfactory. Dr. Edwards was evidently a man of learning and talents."—Orme's Bib. Bib.

The Doctrine of Irresistible Grace proved to have no foundation in the writings of the New Testament, 1759, 8vo.

"I mention this work, not on account of its theology, which is incorrect, but of its criticism, which is sometimes valuable; as it goes over a great number of passages in the New Testament critically, and places some of them in new and advantageous lights."—Orme, ubi supra.

"A very accurate and learned performance, which does great honour to my ingenious friend, the worthy author."—Dr. Haawoon.

Dr. Edwards pub. several other learned works.

Edwards, Thomas, LL.D. The Jewish and Heathen Rejection of the Christian Miracles, 1790, 4to. Other works.

Edwards, Thomas. Con. to Mem. Med., 1792.

Edwards, Thomas. Reports H. Ct. of Admiralty on Vessels sailing under British Licenses, Lon., 1812, 8vo. Reports H. Ct. of Admiralty, 1808-1812, Lon., 1812, 8vo. N. York, 1813, '51, 8vo.

Edwards, Timothy, d. 1758, aged 38, father of the first President Edwards, was a son of Richard Edwards, a native of Hartford, Connecticut. Timothy graduated at Harvard Coll. in 1691, was ordained in 1694, and was the first minister of East Windsor, Conn. He pub. an Election Sermon in 1732. It appears, from R. Wolcott's dedication of his poems to him in 1723, that Mr. Edwards had some pretensions as a poet.

Edwards, Timothy. A Paraphrase, with Critical Annotations, on the Epistles of St. Paul to the Romans and Galatians, Lon., 1752.

"A judicious compilation from the best previous commentaries on the two epistles."—Lowndes's Brit. Lib.

Edwards, Tryon, D.D., b. in Hartford, Connecticut, 1809, great-grandson of the first and grandson of the second President Edwards, graduated at Yale Coll., and studied theology at Princeton, New Jersey. Author of Child's Commandment and Promise; Self-Cultivation; four tracts pub. by the Amer. Tract Soc.; several sermons in the National Preacher; and a number of occasional sermons or discourses. Memoir of Dr. Bellamy, pub. with his Complete Works. Memoir of President Edwards the Younger, pub. with his Complete Works. Christianity a Philosophy of Principles, &c. Address at Williams College. Editor of Works of the younger President Edwards; Charity and its Fruits, from the MSS. of the elder President Edwards; the Family Christian Almanac, (for several years.)

Dr. Edwards also designed and edited Select Poetry for Children and Youth; Jewels for the Household; Anecdotes for the Family; The Commandment Illustrated; The World's Laconics, (under the assumed name of Everard Berkeley.)

Contributor to The Christian Spectator; New Englander; Biblical Repository; Biblical Repertory; and other periodicals. We have already announced the fact that Mr. Edwards is now (1858) engaged in preparing a new edition of the works of his distinguished ancestor, the elder President Edwards. See EDWARDS, JONATHAN.

Edwards, Capt. Wm. Ordinance of the Lords and Commons, &c., 1644, 4to.

Edwards, Wm. H. A Voyage up the Amazon, Lon., 1848, p. 8vo.

"Valuable for the information it gives on this very little known part of the world."—Lon. Economist.

"This book is full of novelty."—Lon. Athenaeum.

Edwin, Archbishop of York. 22 Serms., Lon., 1585, 4to. Serms., 1616, 4to.

Edwin, John, 1749-1794, a celebrated English comedian. Eccentricities arranged and digested by Anthony Pasquin, Lon., 2 vols. 8vo.

Edu, J., M.D. Ruptures, &c., Lon., 1801, 8vo.

Edu, John Wm. Scenes in Norway, Lon., 1812, fol.

Edye, John. Lett. to Wilberforce on the Importation of Foreign Corn, 1815, 8vo.

Edzard, J. E. Serm., Lon., 1696, 4to.

Eedes, John. Justification by Faith, Lon., 1654, 4to.

Eedes, Richard, D.D. 6 Serms., Lon., 1604, 8vo.

Eedes, Richard. Serm., Lon., 1660, 4to.

Eelbeck, Henry. Epinicion Anglicanum, &c., 8vo.

Eeles, Henry. Philos. Essays, or Thunder, Vapour, &c., Lon., 1772, 8vo. Con. to Phil. Trans., 1751.

El, Wm. Praise of the Gout, 1617, 4to.

Egan, Anthony. Book of Rates now used in the Six Custom-house of the Church and Court of Rome, Lon., 1674, 4to; 1678, 4to. Other publications. See Wood's Fasti for account of this Franciscan.

Egan, Charles. Assessed Taxes, Lon., 1840, 12mo. Law rel. to Building Societies, 1847, 8vo. Observ. on the New French Law of Patents, 4to.

Egan, Robert. Exchanger, Dubl., 1781, 4to.

Egan, Thomas, M.D. Profes. con. to Trans. Roy. Irish Acad., 1806.

Egbert, Egbert, or Egbert, Archbishop of York, b. about 678, d. 766, was the brother of Eadbert, King of Northumberland. In 732 he succeeded the younger Wilfrid in the See of York. 1. Dialogus de Ecclesiastica Institutione, Dubl., 1664, 4to; Paris, 1666, 8vo. By Warton in 1693; et v. Bibl. Parr. Gallandii, xiii. 266. 2. Constitutiones Ecclesiasticas. Egbert composed the Confessionale and Penitential, which were afterwards the standard authorities of the Anglo-Saxon Church; and some other works are ascribed to him. See Wright's Biog. Brit. and the authorities there quoted.

Egelsheim, Welle. Eng. Grammar, Lon., 1781, 12mo.

Egerton, Theatrical Remembrancer, Lon., 1788, 12mo. A continuation, said to be incorrect, was pub. by Barker in 1801.

Egerton, Charles. Hist. of Eng. in Verse, Lon., 1780.

Egerton, D. T. Views in Mexico, 12 pictures, Lon., 1839, '40, atlas fol. A beautiful set of plates.

Egerton, Lady Frances, Countess of Ellesmere, accompanied her husband in the journey which he has so graphically described in his Mediterranean Sketches. Her ladyship also pub. a record of her impressions under the title of Journal of a Tour in the Holy Land, 8vo.

"The genuine pilgrim's heart we find in Lady F. Egerton's unpretending Journal more than in any other modern expedition to the Holy Land we know." See an article entitled Lady Travellers, by Miss Rigby, in the Lon. Quar. Review, lxxvi. 96-137.

Egerton, Francis, Earl of Ellesmere, K.G., 1800-1857, second son of the Duke of Sutherland, added the lustre of letters to the heraldic honours of his house. His trans. of Goethe's Faust, of Schiller's and Körner's Poems, his researches in Northern Archaeology, and Sketches of Eastern Travel, are too well known and appreciated to require an extended notice in this place. 1. Camp of Wallenstein and other Poems, Lon., 12mo. 2. Catherine of Cleves, and Hernani; Tragedies, 8vo. 3. Trans. from the German, 8vo. 4. Boyle Farm, 12mo. 5. Mediterranean Sketches, 1843, p. 8vo. 6. The two Sieges of Vienna by the Turks, 1847, p. 8vo.

"Of the manner in which the Earl of Ellesmere has discharged the various duties of translator, editor, and author, we can speak in terms of high praise. . . . The work is a valuable contribution to the history of an important period."—Lon. Athen.

7. Guide to Northern Archaeology, 1848, 8vo. 8. The Military Events in Italy, 1848, '49; trans. from the German, p. 8vo, 1850. Commended by Lon. M. Chronicle. 9. Life and Character of the Duke of Wellington, 1852, 12mo. 10. Hist. of the Two Tartar Conquerors of China; from the French; with an Introd. by R. H. Major, Hak. Soc., 1854, 8vo. 11. The Pilgrimage, and other Poems, 1856, 4to. See Two Funeral Serms. at the Funeral of the Earl of Ellesmere, by Rev. S. V. Beechey, 1857, 8vo.

Egerton, Francis Henry. See BRIDGESWATER, EARL OF.

Egerton, Henry, a descendant of Lord Chancellor Ellesmere, Bishop of Hereford. Serm., 1727, 4to; 1729, 4to; 1761, 4to; 1763, 4to.

Egerton, John, son of the preceding, educated at Oriel Coll., Oxf., collated to the living of Rosa, Hertfordshire, 1743; Bishop of Bangor, 1756; of Lichfield and Coventry, 1768; of Durham, 1771. Serm., Lon., 1757, 4to; 1761, 4to; 1763, 4to; 1768, 4to.

Egerton, Stephen. Lecture, Lon., 1589, 8vo. Catechizing, 1594, 1630, 8vo. Subjection to God and the King, 1616, 8vo.

Egerton, Stephen. Boring of the Bore, Lon., 1623, 12mo.

Egerton, Thomas, Baron of Ellesmere, Viscount Brackley, b. about 1540, d. 1617, educated at Brasenose Coll., Ox., was constituted Lord High Chancellor by James I. in 1603. Speech in the Exchequer Chamber, Lon., 1609, 4to. Observ. on Lord Coke's Reports, fol. A Treatise on Chancery, (1641, 4to.) and one on The Chancellorship, (1651, 8vo.) are ascribed to him, but it is thought, erroneously. He left many MSS. on legal and political subject. See Park's Walpole's R. and N. Authors. We have already noticed a biography of this eminent statesman, pub. by the Dukes of BRIDGEWATER, q. v.

"But surely all Christendom afforded not a person which carried more gravity in his countenance and behaviour than Sir Thomas Egerton, inasmuch that many have gone to the Chancery on purpose only to see his venerable garb, (happy they who had no other business!) and were highly pleased at so acceptable a spectacle. Yet was his outward case nothing in comparison of his inward abilities, quick wit, solid judgment, ready utterance."—Faller's Worthies of Cheshire.

Egerton, Wm. Life of Mrs. A. Oldfield, Lon., 1731, 8vo.

Eglesfield, Fr. Monarchy revived in the most illustrious Chas. the Second, Lon., 1661, 1822, 8vo, 14 portraits.

Eglesfield, James. Sermon, Lon., 1640.

Egleton, John. H. of Commons, Lon., 1714, 8vo.

Eglisiam, Eglisemius, or, as abbreviated, Eglissem, George, M.D., a Scotchman, "Doctor of Physick, and one of the physicians to King James [II.] of happy memory, for his Majestic's person, above ten years' space," has already claimed our notice in the article on GEORGE BUCHANAN. Hypocritis Apologetica Oratio in Voratians, Delph., 1612, 4to. Duellum Poeticum, &c., Georg. Buchanano, Lon., 1618, '19, 8vo. Prodrum Vindictæ in Duce Buckinghamie, 1626, 4to. The Forerunner of Revenge, 1642, 4to. Declaration concerning poisoning K. James of happy memory, 1648, 4to.

Egmont, Earls of. See PERCEVAL.

Egremont, John. The Mildew, Lon., 1806, 8vo.

Egremont, John. Law of Highways, &c., Lon., 1830, 2 vols. 12mo.

Egwin, a native of the district of the Hwiccas, d. about 718, was made Bishop of Worcester on the death of Offot, about 692. Bale attributes to him three works: a History of the Foundation of Evesham, a Book of Visions, and a Life of Aldhelm.

"The latter, if it ever existed, is now lost. The other two are without doubt the same as those from which his biographer (supposed to be Berchtwald, Archbishop of Canterbury) has given such copious extracts; but it is difficult to say whether they still existed at the time of Bale, and it is equally uncertain whether they were separate books, or only parts of one work. . . . Egwin of Worcester is remarkable as the first Englishman who wrote any thing like an autobiography; but this was only an account of his pretended visions."—Wright's Biog. Brit. Lit. q. v.

Ehret, G. D. Horticult. con. to Phil. Trans., 1768-67. Hist., &c. of R. Warner's Jessamine, fol.

Eichelberger, Rev. S., Lutheran preacher, Winchester, edited 2 vols. Sermons on National Blessings and Obligations, 1830.

Eichorn, Charles. A Practical German Grammar, N. York, 1849, 12mo.

"The arrangement is excellent. The illustrations are sufficiently full and the rules comprehensive. It is the best practical grammar of the German language."

Eisdell, J. S. Industry of Nations. Vol. i., Production. Vol. ii., Distribution, &c., Lon., 1839, 2 vols. 8vo.

"The fruits of great diligence, extensive study, well-digested arguments, and various practical conclusions, not the less valuable in being as free from pedantry as they are from all bitterness, either of spirit or partisanship."—Eclectic Review.

Causes and Remedies of Poverty, 1852, p. 8vo.

Ekins, Charles, Rear-Admiral. Naval Battles, 1744-1814. Reviewed and Illustrated, 1824, 4to.

Ekins, Jeffrey, d. 1791, Dean of Carlisle. The Loves of Medea and Jason, from Apollonius Rhodius, Lon., 1771, 4to.

Eland, Wm. Tutor to Astrology, &c., Lon., 1694, 12mo. Tutor to Astrology, by G. Parker, 1704, 12mo.

Elborough, Robert. Fast Sermon, 1660, 4to.

Elborough, Thomas. Discourses, 1663, 8vo; 1673, 12mo.

Elborow, John. Sermon, Lon., 1637, 4to.

Elbridge, T. R. Dearness of Corn, &c., Lon., 1772, 4to.

Elchies, Lord. Decisions Ct. of Session, 1732-1754; edited from the orig. MSS. by W. M. Morison, Edin., 1813, 2 vols. 4to. Annotations on Lord Stair's Institutions of the Law of Scotland, 1824, 4to.

Elcock, Ephraim. On a Plea for Nonscribers, 1651, 4to.

Elder. Dumourier on Bonaparte, Lon., 1807.

Elder, John. Letter relative to Philip and Mary, (1555.) 16mo.

Elder, William, M.D., b. 1809, at Somerset, Penna., a resident of Philadelphia. 1. Periscopes: a Volume of Miscellanies, N. York, 1854, 12mo; new ed., with Additions, &c., entitled The Enchanted Beauty, N. York, 1855, 12mo. 2. Life of Dr. E. K. Kane, Phila., 1857, 8vo: see KANE, E. K.

Elderfield, Chris., d. 1652, Rector of Burton, Sussex. Civil Right of Tythes, Lon., 1650, 4to; 1654. Regeneration, &c., 1653, 4to.

Elderton, Wm. A new merry newes, Lon., 1606, 8vo. A Ballad against Marriage, sine anno. Respecting Elderton—"a ballad-maker by profession, and drunkard by habit"—see Ritson's Bibl. Poet.; Herbert's Armes; Warton's Eng. Poet.; Evans's Old Ballads; Harleian Misc., vol. x.

Eldon, Dr. Abraham, a nom de plume. The Continental Traveller's Oracle; or, New Maxims for Locomotion, 2 vols.

"He is an acute observer of human nature, and has seen very much of society both at home and abroad."—Lon. Lit. Gaz.

Eldred, Wm. The Gunner's Glasse: set forth by Way of Dialogue, Lon., 1646, 4to.

Eldridge, F. C. N. Hist. of Norwich, Norw., (1738,) 8vo.

Ele, Martin. Making Pitch, Phil. Trans., 1697.

Elemy, Wm. The Sinner's Thundering Warning Piece; an account of a great storm, Lon., 8vo.

Eley, E. S. Visits of Mercy, 1813, 12mo.

Elford, Walter. Complaint agst. Sir S. Crow, 1649, 4to.

Elgan, T. The Fallen Farm-house, 1796.

Elgin, Thomas Bruce, Earl of, 1771-1840. Memoir on the subject of his Pursuits in Greece, Edin., 1810, 4to; Lon., 1811, 8vo. For other publications on this subject, see Lowndes's Bibl. Man. His lordship expended £74,000 in the purchase and removal of his vast collection of Grecian antiquities. They were bought by government for £35,000. So that the charge of "mercantile spirit" lavished upon his lordship seems rather out of place.

Eliazar, Bar Isajah, a converted Jew. A Vindication of the Christian Messiah, Lon., 1653, 4to.

Elibank, Lord. Considerations on the Present State of the Peerage of Scotland, Lon., 1771, 8vo.

Elibank, Patrick, fifth Lord. Essays on the Public Debt, or Paper Money, and on Frugality, Edin., 1753, 8vo. See Dr. Wallace's Characteristics of the Present State of Great Britain, Lon., 1758, 8vo.

Eliot, Andrew, D.D., 1719?-1778, a minister in Boston. Occasional Serms., 1742, '44, '50, '54, '59, '66, '71, '73. Dudleian Lecture, 1771. 20 Serms., 1774, 8vo.

Eliot, Archdeacon Edward. Discourses on Christian Responsibilities, Lon., 12mo. Lectures on Christianity and Slavery, preached at Barbadoes Cathedral, 1833, 12mo.

"Written in Archdeacon Eliot's most impressive style. It may indeed be said to breathe the pure spirit of apostolical Christianity."—Lon. Chris. Rememb.

Eliot, Francis Perceval. Armed Yeomanry, 1794, 8vo. Paper Currency, 1811, 8vo. Financial Remarks, 1809, 8vo.

Eliot, Jared, 1685-1736, a minister at Killingworth, Connecticut, was a grandson of John Eliot, "The Apostle of the N. Amer. Indians." He was skilled in agriculture and physic. Agricult. Essays; several edita. Religion supported by Reason and Revelation, 1735. Election Sermon, 1738. Sermon on the taking of Louisbourg, 1745.

Eliot, John. Ortho-Epia-Gallica: Eliot's Fruits for the French, Lon., 1593, 4to.

Eliot, John. Poems, Lon., 1658, sm. 8vo; anon. The name of John Eliot appears at the end of a poem at p. 34 of the above volume.

"Composed by nobody knows whom, and are to be had everybody knows where, and for somebody knows what."

Eliot, John, 1604-1690, a minister of Roxbury, Mass., usually called "The Apostle of the N. Amer. Indians," was a native of Nasing, Essex, England, and emigrated to Boston, N. England, in 1631. He acquired the language of the Indians, and engaged with great zeal in the work of their conversion to Christianity, in which he was eminently successful. In 1661 he pub. his trans. of the New Testament into the Indian tongue; 2d edit., 1680; and in 1663 appeared the trans. of the whole Bible in 4to, entitled Mamusse Wunneetupamatamwe Up-Biblum God naneesee Nukkone Testament kah wonk Wusku Testament. A 2d edit. was pub. in 1685, 4to, revised by Mr. Cotton; both were printed at Cambridge, N. England.

"This version has now become a literary curiosity, there being scarcely any person living who can read or understand a single verse in it."—Horne's Bib. Bib.

If this declaration offend the philological vanity of any of our readers, we give them an opportunity of testing their skill by asking a translation of the shortest verse before us:

"Nummeetsunongash asekukokiah asmalinean yenyou kaskod."

The longest word used in the Bible is in St. Mark i. 40—

Wutappesittukquassunnookwehtunkquoh—"kneeling down to him." We presume that these specimens will be enough for the general reader: philologists are referred to Eliot's Indian Bible, 1684, 4to. New ed., with Notes, by P. S. Du Ponceau, and Introduction, by J. Pickering, Boston, 1822, 8vo. For the other publications of this excellent and devoted man, and particulars of his life, we must refer the reader to Mather's Magnalia; Eliot's Life and Death; Neal's N. E.; Mass. Hist. Coll.; Douglas; Hutchinson; Holmes; Allen's Amer. Biog. Dict.; Life by Convers Francis, in Sparks's Amer. Biog., 1st ser., v. 1.

The excellent Cotton Mather waxes warm when he takes up his fruitful pen to depict the virtues of John Eliot:

"Having implored the assistance and acceptance of that God whose blessed word has told us, 'The righteous shall be had in everlasting remembrance,' I am attempting to write the life of a righteous person, concerning whom all things but the meanness of the writer invite the reader to expect nothing save what is truly extraordinary. It is the life of one who has better and greater things to be affirmed of him, than could ever be reported concerning any of those famous men which have been celebrated by the pens of a Plutarch, a Pliny, Laertius, an Eusebius, or in any Pagan histories. It is the life of one whose character might very agreeably be looked for among the collections of a Dorotheus, or the orations of a Naxianzen; or is worthy at least of nothing less than the exquisite stile of a Melchior Adam to eternalize it."—Ubi supra.

"The Apostle—and truly I know not who since Peter and Paul better deserves that name."—Oration by Hon. Edward Everett at Dorchester, Mass., July 4, 1855.

Eliot, John, D.D., 1754–1813, a minister of Boston, Mass., son of Andrew Eliot, D.D., was one of the founders and principal contributors to the Mass. Hist. Society. Occasional Sermons., 1782, '83, '94, '97, 1800, '05, &c. Biog. Dict. of eminent characters in N. England, Salem, 1809, 8vo. Papers in Mass. Hist. Coll., iv., vi., viii., ix., x.

Eliot, L. W. Sermon, London, 1820, 8vo.

Eliot, Samuel, b. at Boston, Mass., 1821, educated at Harvard University, and in Europe. 1. The Life and Times of Savonarola. 2. The Liberty of Rome: a History, N. York, 1849, 2 vols. 8vo; London, 1849, 2 vols. 8vo, and a folio vol. of illustrations. 3. The History of Liberty, Boston, 1853, 4 vols. 12mo: Pt. 1. The Ancient Romans; Pt. 2, (repub. London, 1853, 2 vols. 8vo), The Early Christians.

"The character of this remarkable American work may be in part surmised from one of the mottoes on its title-page: 'The History of the World is one of God's own great poems.' Its aim, in tracing accurately and philosophically the struggles of Rome after liberty, is to show that over antiquity, as over our own times, an overruling Providence prevailed, and that none can fathom the truths of history but with the plummet of Revelation. It maintains, and satisfactorily elucidates, the great truth of the universality of the Divine government as the groundwork of every history that deserves the name."—PRESIDENT KING.

4. Manual of United States History, 1492–1850, 1856, 12mo. Articles in periodicals.

Eliot, Samuel A. Sketch of the History of Harvard College, and of its Present State, Boston, 1848, 12mo.

Eliot, Thomas. See ELTOR.

Eliot, W. H., Jr. Genealogy of the Eliot Family; revised and enlarged by W. S. Porter, N. Haven, 1854, 8vo.

Eliot, Wm. Granville. Treatise on the Defence of Portugal, with a Military Map of the Country, London, 1811, 8vo.

Eliot, Rev. Wm. G., D.D., of St. Louis, Mo. 1. Unity of God, Boston, 12mo. 2. Doctrines of Christianity, 1852. 3. Lectures to Young Men, 1853, 16mo. 4. Lectures to Young Women, 1853, 16mo.

"One of those very few books that a father may safely place in the hands of his daughter."—Mother's Assistant.

5. Early Religious Education Considered as the Divinely-Appointed Way to the Regenerate Life, 1855. 6. A Discourse, 1855. 7. Discipline of Sorrow, 1855.

Eliis, John, D.D. Defensio Fidei, London, 1660, 12mo.

Eliis. See ELLIS.

Elitos. See ELTOR, THOMAS.

Elizabeth, Queen of England, daughter of Henry VIII. and Anne Boleyn, 1533–1603, was one of the most learned persons of her time, and author of sundry translations from the Greek, Latin, and French, and some original compositions. 1. The Mirrour, or the Glass of the Sinfull Soul; trans. from the French when she was only eleven years of age. 2. Prayers and Meditations; from the French of Margaret of Navarre, &c., London, 1548, 8vo. 3. A Dialogue from Xenophon, between Hiero and Simonidea. 4. Two Orations from Isocrates, trans. into Latin. 5. Latin Oration at Cambridge. 6. Latin Oration at Oxford. 7. Comment on Plato. 8. Boethius de Consolatione Philosophiæ, trans. into English, 1593. Trans. of Sallust's Jugurthine War of Plutarch de Curiositate, Horace's Art of Poetry, a Play of Euripides, &c. For other compositions of Elizabeth's, see Park's Walpole's R. and N. Authors. For publications connected with her reign and its literature, and accounts of her personal and political character, see the Histories of England by Hume, Rapin, Echard, Keightley, Lingard, and the Pictorial History, Camden's Annals, Strype's Annals and Memorials, Ballard's Memoirs, Wood's Annals, Nichols's Progresses, Andrews's Contin. of Henry's Hist., Miss Strickland's Lives of the Queens of England, Drake's Shakspeare, and his Times, Harrington's Nugæ Antiquæ, Hazlitt's Dramat. Lit. of the Age of Elizabeth, Romantic Biog. of the Age of Elizabeth, and many other works which we have no room to cite. Especially should Anthony Bacon's Memoirs of Elizabeth, 1581–1630, be carefully perused:

"From this excellent collection we are as well acquainted with the Earl of Essex and the Court of Queen Elizabeth, as if we had lived in it."—Hardwicke's State Papers, i. 372.

"I have been informed on the best authority that Queen Elizabeth exercised her poetical pen more voluminously than we have hitherto known, for that there exists a manuscript volume of her majesty's poems in that rich repository of state papers—the Hatfield Collection."—Disraeli's Annals of Literature, vol. II.

Mr. Headly would not have esteemed this volume of her majesty's poetry much of a treasure:

"As dead queens rank but with meaner mortals, we may ascert, without much fear of contradiction, that little else can ever be gratified by the perusal of Elizabeth's poetry than mere curiosity."

The Age of Elizabeth is certainly the most brilliant in the literary annals of England, nor is it likely that its splendour will ever be surpassed. The remarks of Mr. Hazlitt in this connection deserve to be often quoted, and should never be forgotten by the Christian and man of letters. Referring to the intellectual activity of this age, especially the many mighty names which adorn the dramatic literature of the times, he remarks:

"For such an extraordinary combination and development of fancy and genius many causes may be assigned, and we seek for the chief of them in religion, in politics, in the circumstances of the time, the recent diffusion of letters, in local situation, and in the character of the men who adorned that period and availed themselves so nobly of the advantages placed within their reach. . . . The translation of the Bible was the chief engine in the great work. It threw open, by a secret spring, the rich treasures of religion and morality, which had been there locked up as in a shrine. . . . It gave them a common interest in the common cause. Their hearts burnt within them as they read. It gave a mind to the people, by giving them common subjects of thought and feeling. It cemented their union of character and sentiment; it created endless diversity and collision of opinion. They found objects to employ their faculties, and a motive, in the magnitude of the consequences attached to them, to exert the utmost eagerness in the pursuit of truth, and the most daring intrepidity in maintaining it."—Lectures on the Dramatic Lit. of the Age of Elizabeth, Lect. I.

Elizabeth, H.R.H., Princess, 3d daughter of George III. 1. Cupid turned Volunteer, London, 1808, 4to. The poetical illustrations are by Thomas Park. 2. The Power and Progress of Genius, in a series of 21 Etchings, 1806, fol. For private circulation only. 3. Six Poems (by Wm. Coombe) illustrative of as many Engravings from designs by H.R.H., 1813, 4to.

Elizabeth, Charlotte. See TOWNA, MRS.

Elkes, Richard. Medicine for Soldiers, London, 1843.

Elkin, Benj. Lett. to Editor of The Voice of Jacob, rel. to the Mishna, London, 1843.

Elking, Henry. Interest of G. Brit. considered, London, 1723, 8vo. Greenland Trade and Whale-Fishery, 1722, 8vo. "This valuable tract embodies, within a short compass, a great deal of information respecting the early history of the whale-fishery."—McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Econ.

Elkington, Joseph. See JOHNSTON, JOHN.

Ellaby, Francis. Church of the Lord, London, 1838, 12mo.

Ellaby, James, and A. S. Thelwall. Anti-Mammon, or an Exposure of the Unscriptural Statements of Mammon, (by Rev. John Harris,) 3d edit., London, 1837, cr. 8vo. See HARRIS, JOHN.

Ellesby, James. Sermon, 1684, 4to; do., 1694, 4to.

Ellesmere, Countess of. See EGERTON, LADY FRANCES.

Ellesmere, Earl of. See EGERTON, FRANCIS.

Ellesmere, Baron. See EGERTON, THOMAS.

Ellet, Charles, Jr. The Mississippi and Ohio Rivers, Philadelphia, 1853, 8vo.

Ellet, Elizabeth F., a daughter of Wm. A. Lummis, M.D., and wife of Wm. H. Ellet, M.D., late Professor of Chemistry in Columbia College, New York City, and in the College at Columbia, S. Carolina, is a native of Sodus, New York. Her first publication, a poem in the American Ladies' Magazine, Boston, appeared in 1833, and a trans. of Silvio Pellico's Euphemia of Messina, in 1834; since which she has been one of the most voluminous, and certainly one of the most popular, writers of America. We give a list of her works: 1. Poems, Original and Selected, 1835, 12mo. 2. Teresa Contarini; a Tragedy acted in 1835. 3. Scenes in the Life of Joanna of Sicily, 1840, 12mo. 4. The Characters of Schiller, 1841, 12mo. 5. Rambles about the Country, 18mo. 6. Evenings at Woodlawn, 12mo. 7. The Women of the American Revolution, 1848, &c., 3 vols. 12mo. 8. Family Pictures from the Bible, 1849, 12mo. 9. The Domestic History of the American Revolution, 1850, 12mo. 10. Watching Spirits, 1851, 8vo. 11. Scripture Gift Book, 8vo. 12. Pioneer Women of the West, 1852, 12mo. 13. Nouvellettes of the Musicians, 1852, 12mo. 14. Summer Rambles in the West, 1853, 12mo. Mrs. Ellet has contributed many articles to the North American, the American Quarterly, and the Southern Quarterly, Reviews. For critical notices of her writings, we must refer the reader to Griewold's Female Poets of America, Mrs. Hale's Woman's Record, Hart's Female Prose Writers of America, and the Southern Literary Messenger, ii. 116.

An English periodical of high authority and most vigorous tone of criticism acknowledges that "In treating the Women of the Revolution, Mrs. Ellet is fair and honest; . . . and the illustrations which might be drawn from a book like this, contain a lesson neither ephemeral in value nor limited in its application."—Lon. Athenæum.

Ellia, Felix. Norman Banditti, or the Fortress of Constance; a Tale, Lon., 1799, 2 vols. 12mo.

Ellicott, Andrew, 1759–1820, Prof. of Mathemat. at West Point, N. York; Commissioner of the U. States. His Journal: rel. to Boundary between U. States and Spain, Phila., 1803, 4to. Astronom., &c. con. to Trans. Amer. Soc., 1793, '99, 1802.

Ellicott, C. J. Hist. and Obligation of the Sabbath: Hulsean Lecture, Lon., 1844, 8vo.

Ellicott, John. Electricity, Lon., 1748, 4to. Clocks, 1753, &c., 4to. Metals, Diamonds, Electricity, Clocks; see Phil. Trans., 1736, '45, '51.

Ellington, Edward. Serm., Lon., 1771, 8vo.

Elliot, Essays upon the Husbandry of New England, Lon., 1764, 4to.

Elliot and Strobel. A Digest of the Militia Law of South Carolina, Charleston, 1834, 8vo.

Elliot, Miss. Fancy's Wreath; a collec. of Fables and Allegorical Tales in Prose and Verse, 1813, 8vo.

Elliot, Adam. Vindict. of T. Oates, Lon., 1682, fol.

Elliot, Adam. Travels, &c. in Fex.

Elliot, Charles, D.D., b. 1792, in the county of Donegal, Ireland. Indian Missionary Reminiscences, N. York, 18mo. Delineation of Roman Catholicism, N. York, 2 vols. 8vo; 3d ed., Lon., 1851, imp. 8vo. This distinguished Methodist divine has also pub. an Essay on Baptism, (1834,) a life of Rev. Mr. Roberts, and a work on Slavery.

Elliot, Charles H. The Republican, in a Series of Strictures on T. Paine's Rights of Man, Lon., 1791, 8vo.

Elliot, E. Paraphrase of Job, 1792, 12mo.

Elliot, George. Life of the Duke of Wellington, Lon., 1815, 8vo. A Narrative of his Life, 8vo.

Elliot, Sir Gilbert, d. 1777, distinguished as a parliamentary speaker, and father of the first Earl of Minto, wrote "the beautiful pastoral song" (Sir Walter Scott) beginning with the lines—

"My sheep I neglected, I broke my sheep-hook,
And all the gay haunts of my youth I forsook."

Elliot, Gilbert, D.D., Dean of Bristol. Serm., Lon., 1850, 8vo. Speech, Bristol, 1850, 12mo. Letter, 1851, 12mo.

Elliot, James, is well known as the author of several valuable works on Geometry, Mensuration, Trigonometry, Algebra, &c., Lon., 1845–51.

"These books [on Geometry and Mensuration] are the work of a man who is both an able practical Mathematician, and an experienced Teacher."—Lon. Spectator.

Elliot, Miss Jane, sister to Sir Gilbert Elliot, of Minto, gained considerable reputation by her song entitled "Flowers of the Forest"—a dirge for the slain at Flodden Field. It has been placed in competition with Mrs. Catherine Cockburn's song of the same title.

Elliot, Sir John. Speech, Lon., 1641, 4to. Argts. upon the Writ of Habeas Corpus contg. Loans in the K. B.

Elliot, or Elliott, John, M.D., d. 1786. Works on medicine, physiology, and nat. philos., Lon., 1780–87.

Elliot, R., d. 1788, formerly of Bene't Coll., Camb., was a native of Kingsbridge, Devon. Serm. and theolog. treatises, 1788–1813.

Elliot, Robert. Spec. of Burnet's Hist., 1715, 8vo. Elliot, Robert, Capt. R.N. Views in the East; from Sketches by Capt. E., imp. 8vo, r. 4to, and imp. 4to.

Elliot, Samuel H., b. 1809, at Brattleborough, Vermont. 1. Rolling Bridge, Bost., 1838, 16mo. 2. Sequel to No. 1, 1844, 16mo. 3. Emily Maria, N. York, 1844, 16mo. 4. The Parish Side, 1854, 12mo. 5. Dreams and Realities, 1856, 12mo. 6. New England's Chattels, 1858, 12mo. Also papers in periodicals.

Elliot, Thos. Chemistry and Nat. Hist., 1784, 2 vols.

Elliottson, John, M.D., b. London, towards the close of the 18th century; Pres. Roy. Med. and Chir. Soc., Lon.; Prof. Principles and Practice of Medicine, &c. Univ. Coll., Lon.; Lecturer on the Practice of Medicine, St. Thomas's Hospital, Lon. 1. Cases of the Hydrocyanic or Prussic Acid, Lon., 1820, 8vo. 2. Lectures on Diseases of the Heart, 1830, fol. 3. Principles and Practice of Medicine, 1839, 8vo; 2d ed., by Drs. N. Rogers and A. Cooper Lee, 1842, 8vo, pp. 1232. Amer. ed., with Notes and Additions by T. Stewardson, Phila., 1844, 8vo. This valuable work has been trans. into the German and other languages. 4. Human Physiology, 1840, '56, 8vo. 5. Surgical Operations in the Mesmeric State without Pain, 1843, 8vo.

Elliott, C. B. 1. Letters from the North of Europe, Lon., 8vo. Commended by Lon. Lit. Gaz.

2. Travels in Austria, Russia, and Turkey, 1838, 2 vols.

Elliott, Charles B., Rector of Tattingstone. The Vicissitudes of Life; a Serm., Godalming, 1838, 8vo.

Elliott, Ebenezer, 1781–1849, known by the title of "The Corn-Law Rhymers," was a native of Masborough, near Rotherham, Yorkshire. His father was a clerk in the Iron-works, at a salary of £70 per annum, with which a family of eight children were to be supported. Obligated to commence hard labour at an early age in the foundry, there seemed to be little prospect of that literary reputation which the industrious operative was destined to achieve. A taste for reading, however, triumphed over all obstacles, and a warm admiration of poetry, especially the rural pictures of Thomson, soon resulted in an attempt at imitation, which was sufficiently successful to excite the astonishment of several literary gentlemen, who determined that such powers should not be allowed to lie dormant. His first publication was the Vernal Walk, written in his 17th year. He next gave to the world "Night," a portion of which is repub. in his works under the title of the Legend of Wharfedale. This was severely handled by the Monthly Review and the Monthly Magazine; but Elliott was not easily discouraged, and again ventured before the public in a volume of Poems, which was also unsuccessful. But Southey consoled the author:

"There is power in the least of these tales, but the higher you pitch your tone the better you succeed. Thirty years ago they would have made your reputation; thirty years hence the world will wonder that they did not do so."

To this volume succeeded the Poem of Love, prefaced by a savage attack upon Byron's Giaour; to which his lordship deigned no reply.

Deserting the tender themes which had heretofore inspired his muse, Elliott now appeared in the character of the Corn-Law Rhymers. The "Corn-Law Rhymes"—urging the repeal of the duties and free trade in bread-stuffs—were pub. in the same vol. with The Ranter. In 1829 he gave to the world "The Village Patriarch," and in 1831 contributed to the New Monthly Magazine a Spenserian poem entitled "Byron and Napoleon, or they met in Heaven." In the same year appeared the 3d edit. of Love, and the 3d edit. of Corn-Law Rhymes. The "Poet of the People" had now gained sufficient reputation to justify his favouring the public with a collective edit. of his poems. They appeared in three vols., Lon., 12mo, 1833, '34, '35; and in 1840 an edit. was issued in one vol. r. 8vo. For further particulars respecting Elliott, see a sketch of his life (chiefly taken from a memoir in the Sheffield and Rotherham Independent) in the Gent. Mag., Feb., 1850, to which we are indebted for the above facts. See also The Life, Character, and Genius of Ebenezer Elliott, by J. Serle, 1850, 18mo, Poetry and Letters, by J. Watkins, 1850, p. 8vo, and More Verse and Prose, vols. i. and ii., 1850, 12mo. An article on Elliott will be found in Chambers's Papers for the People, and an autobiographical Memoir in the London Athenæum for Jan. 1850. By his attention to the iron business, in which he was engaged, he was enabled to gain a respectable competence. We give extracts from the opinions of several known authorities respecting the merits of Elliott as a poet. The reviewer, after referring to the remarkable dearth of true poetry which distinguished the day, proceeds:

"If the whole welkin hang overcast in drizzly dinginess, the feeblest light-glimp or speck of blue cannot pass unheeded. The Works of this Corn-Law Rhymmer we might liken rather to some little fraction of a rainbow: hues of joy and harmony, painted out of troublous tears. No round full bow, indeed; gloriously spanning the Heavens; shone on by the full sun; and, with seven-striped, golden-crimson border (as is in some sort the office of Poetry) dividing Black from Brilliant: not such; alas, still far from it! Yet, in very truth, a little prismatic bluish, glowing genuine among the wet clouds; which proceeds, if you will, from a sun cloud-hidden, yet indicates that a sun does shine, and above those vapours, a whole azure vault and celestial firmament stretch serene."—THOMAS CARLYLE: Edin. Rev., lv. 338.

"Ebenezer Elliott (of whom more another day) claims with pride to be the Poet of the Poor—and the poor might well be proud, did they know it, that they have such a poet. Not a few of them know it now—and many will know it in future; for a muse of fire like his will yet send its illumination 'into deep, dark holds.' May it consume all the noxious vapours that infect such regions—and purify the atmosphere—till the air breathed there be the breath of life."—PROF. WILSON: Recreations of Christopher North—an Hour's Talk about Poetry.

"His sky never shows the calm, clear, unclouded summer blue; some speck on the horizon, although no bigger than a man's hand, ever predicts storm; and it is impossible to mistake Elliott's moorlands for the Elysian fields. As a depicter of the phases of humanity, his portraits are almost all of one class; and with that class are identified his entire sympathies. Hence it is that he seems deficient in that genial spirit which characterizes more catholic natures; in those expansive feelings which embrace society in all its aspects; in those touches which 'make all flesh kin.'"—Moir's Port. Lit. of the Past Half Century.

"The inspiration of his verse is a fiery hatred of injustice. Without possessing much creative power, he almost places himself beside men of genius by the singular intensity and might of his sensibility. He understands very well the art of condensing passion. 'Spread out the thunder,' says Schiller, 'into its single tones, and it becomes a lullaby for children; pour it forth together, in one quick peal, and the royal sound shall move the heavens.' The great ambition of Elliott is to thunder. He is a brawny man, of nature's own make, with more than the usual portion of the ancient Adam stirring within him; and he says, 'I do well to be angry.' The mere sight of tyranny, bigotry, meanness, prompts his smiting invective. His poetry could hardly have been written by a man who was not physically strong. You can hear the ring of his anvil, and see the sparks fly off from his furnace, as you read his verse."—EDWIN P. WHIFFLE: Essays and Reviews—Eng. Poets of the Nineteenth Century.

"I am quite willing to hazard any critical credit, by avowing my persuasion, that in originality, power, and even beauty, when he chose to be beautiful, he might have measured heads beside Byron in tremendous energy, Crabbe in graphic description, and Coleridge in effusions of domestic tenderness; while in intense sympathy with the poor, in whatever he deemed their wrongs or their sufferings, he excelled them all—and perhaps everybody else among contemporaries, in prose or verse. He was, in a transcendental sense, the poet of the poor, whom, if not always wisely, I at least dare not say, he loved too well. His personal character, his fortunes, and his genius, would require, and they deserve, a full investigation, as furnishing an extraordinary study of human nature."—JAMES MONRODAR: reference to Memoir above. See also Allan Cunningham's Biog. and Crit. Hist. of the Lit. of the last Fifty Years.

Elliott, Edward B., Preb. of Heytesbury. 1. Horne Apocalypticæ, 4th ed., Lon., 1851, 4 vols. 8vo.

"An exceedingly valuable work."—Bickersteth's C. S.

2. Reply to T. K. Arnold, 1845, 8vo. 3. Reply to Dr. Candlish, 1847, 8vo. 4. Vindiciæ Horariæ. Letters to Dr. Keith, 1848, 8vo.

Elliott, Frank R., b. 1817, at Guilford, Connecticut. American Fruit-Grower's Guide, N. York, 1854, 12mo. Contributions to various agricult. and horticult. journals of the U. States.

Elliott, George Percy. Qualifications, &c. of Parliamentary Electors in Eng. and Wales, 2d ed., Lon., 1843, 12mo.

Elliott, H. M. Bibliographical Index to Mohammedan History, vol. 1., Lon., 1849, 8vo.

Elliott, Henry Venn. Sermon on the death of the Rev. Henry Mortlock, with a brief Memoir, Lon., 1837, 12mo.

Elliott, Jonathan. The American Diplomatic Code, with Treaties, &c., 1778–1834, Wash., 1834, 2 vols. 8vo.

"It appears to me to be a very valuable work for all persons who desire to have a knowledge of our Diplomatic History, of our Treaties, and of the general principles of Public Law applicable to our Foreign Relations. It seems to me, also, almost indispensable for the library of a statesman, and the researches of a jurist."—JOSIAH STORR, Washington, Feb. 16, 1834.

Debates in the Several State Conventions on the Adoption of the Federal Constitution; 2d ed., 1836, 4 vols. 8vo. Supplement, (vol. v.) 1843, 8vo; new ed., revised, Phila., 1858, 5 vols. 8vo.

Elliott, Mary. Tales for Boys, 1839, 18mo; for Girls, 1845, 18mo; of Truth, 1840, 12mo; for the Young, 1852, 18mo; for Young People, new edit., 1852, 18mo. Other works for the young.

Elliott, Stephen, LL.D., 1771–1830, Professor of Botany in the Medical College of S.C., was a native of Beaufort, S.C. He was one of the principal conductors of the Southern Review, and an accomplished scholar. Sketch of the Botany of S. Carolina and Georgia, Charleston, S.C., 1821, 2 vols. 8vo.

Elliott, Stephen, Jr., D.D., b. 1806, at Beaufort, S.C., formerly Prof. of Sacred Literature in the S.C. College, was ordained deacon in 1835 and priest in '36; consecrated Bishop of Georgia in 1841. Sermons, &c.

Elliott, William, b. 1788, at Beaufort, S.C., a nephew of Stephen Elliott, LL.D. 1. Address before the St. Paul's Agricultural Society, Charleston, 1850. 2. Fiesco; a Tragedy, printed for the Author, N.Y., 1850, 12mo. 3. Carolina Sports by Land and Water, Charleston, 1856, 12mo. See Duyckinck's Cyc. of Amer. Lit.

Ellis. New Britain; a Narrative of a Journey to a country in the Plain of the Missouri, Lon., 1820, 8vo. "A work of fiction, descriptive of a Utopian state of society." Ellis. The Clergyman's Assistant; new ed., Oxf., 1828, 8vo. A useful work on the legal and ecclesiastical rights, duties, and liabilities of the clergy.

Ellis, Dr. Summary of the Roman Law, taken from Dr. Taylor's Elements of the Civil Law, Lon., 1772, 8vo. Ellis, Benjamin, M.D. The Medical Formulary. Corrected and extended by S. G. Morton, M.D., Phila., 1849, 8vo; 10th ed., revised and enlarged to 1854, by Robert P. Thomas, M.D., Prof. of Materia Medica in the Phil. Coll. of Pharmacy, 1854, 8vo.

"Particularly useful to students and young practitioners."—Charleston Med. Jour. and Rev. Ellis, Rev. Charles. Con. to Phil. Trans., 1703; on Printing; boy with letters in his eye, &c. Ellis, Charles. 1. Pleadings in Suits for Tithes in Equity, &c., Lon., 1821, 8vo. 2. Law of Debtor and Creditor, 1822, r. 8vo. 3. Law of Fire and Life Insurance and Annuities, 1832, 8vo; 2d ed., 1846.

Ellis, Charles Thomas. 1. Solicitor's Instructor in Parliament, Lon., 1799, 8vo. 2. Practical Remarks and Prac. of Proceed. in Parl. on Private Bills, 1810, 8vo; App., 1811. Ellis, Clement, 1630–1700, Preb. of Southwell, 1693. Poem, Oxf., 1658. Poem, Lon., 1660, fol. He pub. a number of sermons and theolog. treatises, 1661–1700, and some were pub. after his death. Discourse on the Parables, with an Account of his Life and Writings, 1704, 8vo. The Scripture Catechist, being a full Expl. of the Ch. Catechism, 1738, 8vo.

"His writings in practical theology are distinguished for eminent and fervent piety, soundness of doctrine, and a vigorous, unaffected, manly style." See Athen. Oxon.; Wordsworth's Eccles. Biog.; Chambers's Biog. Dict.; Bickersteth's C. S. Ellis, Daniel. Inquiry into the Changes induced in Atmospheric Air by the Germination of Seeds, the Vegetation of Plants, and the Respiration of Animals, Edin., 1807, 8vo. Further Inquiries, &c., 1811, 8vo. This is a valuable work upon a very important subject. Ellis, Dom. Sermon, Lon., 1685, '86, 4to.

Ellis, Elis, or Elye, Edmund. Dis Poemata, Lon., 1655, 12mo. Divine Poems, Oxon., 1658, 8vo. Exclamation agat. an Apology for Cowley's verses, Lon., 1670, 4to. Omnis qui audiunt Evangelium, &c., 1677, 8vo. For an account of this divine and his numerous publications, see Wood's Athen. Oxon.

Ellis, Edward. A Sudden and Cloudy Messenger, Lon., 1649, 4to.

Ellis, George, 1745–1815, was a contributor to the Rolliad, and the Probationary Odes, in which Mr. Pitt met with no mercy. 1. Memoir of a Map of the Countries between the Black Sea and the Caspian, &c., Lon., 1788, 4to; anon. 2. Fabliaux trans. from Le Grand by G. L. Way, with Pref. Notes, and App. by G. Ellis, 1796–1800, 2 vols. 8vo. 3. Specimens of the Early English Poets, 1790, 8vo; 1801, '03, 3 vols. 8vo; 4th ed., 1811, 3 vols. 8vo; 5th ed., 1845, 3 vols. fp. 8vo; 1851. This is a work of considerable value, and should be in all good libraries. It elicited Southey's Specimens of the Later English Poets. See Southey's Life and Correspondence. Ellis's Specimens of the Early English Poets is noticed by an eminent critic, as "In some respects a judicious and entertaining miscellany, arranged in chronological order; but the mutilation of several of the poems at the mercy of the editor, with only a general acknowledgment in the preface, seems very reprehensible."—SIR S. K. BARNARD: Pref. to his ed. of Phillips's Theat. Poet. Anglicæ.

4. Specimens of Early English Romances in Metre, 1805, 3 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., 1811, 3 vols. cr. 8vo. New ed., revised by J. O. Halliwell, Esq., F.R.S., 1848, sm. 8vo. An excellent work. Sir Walter Scott addressed to Ellis the 5th canto of Marmion.

"George Ellis was the first converser I ever saw. His patience and good breeding made me often ashamed of myself, going off at score upon some favourite topic."—Sir Walter Scott's Diary.

Ellis, Rev. George E., b. 1815, Boston. To this gentleman we are indebted for three of the Lives in the Second Series of Sparks's American Biography,—viz.: 1. John Mason, iii. 307; 2. Anne Hutchinson, vi. 167; 3. William Penn, xii. 193. Contrib. to the N. Amer. Rev.

Ellis, George James Welbore Agar, Baron Dover, 1797–1833, was in 1832 elected President of the Royal Society of Literature. 1. The True History of the State Prisoner, commonly called "The Iron Mask," extracted from Documents in the French Archives, Lon., 1826, 8vo. 2. Cat. of the Principal Pictures in Flanders and Holland, 1822, '26, 8vo. Privately printed. 3. Historical Inquiries respecting the Character of Edward Hyde, Earl of Clarendon, 1827, or. 8vo. 4. The Ellis Correspondence, illustrative of the Revolution of 1688, 1828, 2 vols. 8vo.

"This collection refers to times in the account of which the very spirit of our history is concentrated. The more we have of such works, the better will history be studied, the more perfectly will it be known."—Lon. Month. Rev.

5. Life of Fred. the Second, K. of Prussia, 1831, 2 vols. 8vo.

"A most delightful and comprehensive work,—judicious in selection, intelligent in arrangement, and graceful in style."—Lon. Lit. Gaz.

Lord Dover also edited the Letters of Horace Walpole to Sir Horace Mann, and left in MSS., written for the instruction of his son, a vol. entitled Lives of the Most Eminent Sovereigns of Modern Europe, the 4th ed. of which was pub. in 1853, 12mo. Lord Dover was a contributor to the Edinburgh and Lon. Quarterly Reviews and other periodicals.

Ellis, George Viner, of University Coll., London. Demonstrations of Anatomy; being a Guide to the Dissection of the Human Body, Lon., 1841, p. 8vo; 2d ed., 1848; 3d ed., 1852; 4th ed., 1856, p. 8vo.

"We are convinced that it will quickly become the general text-book of every working student in anatomy."—Brit. and For. Med. Rev., Jan. 1841.

Ellis, H. The Rhyme-Book, Lon., 1851, r. 8vo. One of the many works elicited by the Great Exhibition in London in 1851.

Ellis, Henry, Governor of Georgia. A Voyage to Hudson's Bay in 1746, '47, for discovering a N. West Passage, Lon., 1848, 8vo.

"Some important facts and remarks relating to Hudson's Bay are given in this Voyage."—Stevenson's Voyages and Travels.

Considerations, &c. rel. to the N. West Passage, 1750, 4to. Dr. Hale's Ventilators, &c.; Phil. Trans., 1751. Heat of the Weather in Georgia; ib., 1758.

Ellis, Sir Henry, K.C.B., d. 1855. Journal of the Proceedings of the Late Embassy [Lord Amherst's] to China, Lon., 1817, 4to; 1818, 2 vols. 8vo. An interesting and valuable work. See ABEL, CLARK, M.D.; Lon. Gent. Mag., Dec. 1855.

Ellis, Sir Henry, K.H., b. 1777, Principal Librarian of the British Museum 1827–56, and Librarian since 1805. 1. Hist. and Antiq. of the Parish of St. Leonard Shoreditch, and Liberty of Norton Folgate, in the Suburbs of London, Lon., 1798, 4to. 2. The New Channel of England and France, by Robert Fabian; from Pynson's ed. of 1516, collated with subsequent eds., &c. and including the Different Continuations; with a Biographical Preface, 1811, r. 4to. 3. The Channels of John Hardyng; with a Continuation by Richard Grafton. To which are added a Preface and Introduction, 1812, 4to. 4. Brand's Popular Antiquities, revised, with various Addits., 1813, 2 vols. 4to; new ed., 1842, 3 vols. 12mo; 1849, 3 vols. 12mo. An interesting and valuable work, the foundation of which was Henry Bourne's Antiquitates Vulgares, first pub. 1725, 8vo. 5. Original Letters illustrative of English History, from Autographs in the British Museum and one or two other collections, with Notes and Illustrations. 1st series, 1824, 3 vols. p. 8vo; 2d series, 1827, 4 vols. p. 8vo; 3d series, 1846, 4 vols. p. 8vo; new ed., 1848.

"We rise from the study of these very interesting volumes with renewed gratitude to the learned editor."—Edin. Review.

"We have now but to say that we are delighted with these volumes, and to recommend them altogether as deserving of the utmost public favour—for an entertaining narrative—for the correctness of long-received historical theories—for the development of famous characters; for the discovery of new and important facts; and, in short, for every thing that renders such a collection interesting in a country that is keenly alive to the value of such researches."—Lon. Lit. Gaz.

To these vols. should be added Letters of the Kings of England, (Rich. I. to the end of Chas. I.), now first pub., with Notes, &c., by J. O. Halliwell, 1846, 2 vols. p. 8vo; and Letters of Royal and Illustrious Ladies of Great Britain, now first pub., with Notes, &c., by Mrs. Wood, 1846, 3 vols. p. 8vo.

6. Elgin and Phigalean Marbles of the Classic Ages, 1847, 2 vols. 12mo. 7. Townley Gallery of Classic Sculpture, 1847, 2 vols. 12mo. To Sir Henry we are likewise indebted for his labours in the preparation of the new edition of Dugdale's Monasticon Anglicanum, and the History of St. Paul's Cathedral, the compilation (in conjunction with Mr. Baber) of the Catalogue of the Printed Books in the British Museum, and contributions to Dibdin's Bibliomania, the Archæologia, and other valuable records of the literature of the past ages. See Nichols's Illust. Lit. Hist., viii., Indexes, 1858; Lon. Gent. Mag., March, 1856, 275.

Ellis, Humphrey. Two Serms., Lon., 1647, 4to. Pseudo-Christus; or the impostures of Fornkelin, &c., 1650, 4to.

Ellis, J. Abridgt. of Murray's Grammar, Lon.

Ellis, James. Law Suits relative to Property devoted to Pious Uses in Rehoboth, Warren, 1795, 12mo.

Ellis, or Ellis, John, Rector of St. Mary's, Dolgelly, Merionethshire, d. 1665. Comment in Obadiam, Lon., 1641, 8vo. Clavis Fidel, Oxon., 1642, '43, 8vo. Articulorum xxxix. Ecclesie Anglicane defensio, Amst., 1696, 12mo.

Ellis, John, Jr. Serm., Lon., 1643, 4to. Vindiciæ Catholicæ, 1647, 4to. Infant Baptism, 1659, 8vo. Retractions and Repentings, 1662.

Ellis, John. Collectors of Excise, 1736, 8vo.

Ellis, John, D.D., Vicar of St. Catherine's, Dublin. The Knowledge of Divine Things from Revelation, not from Reason or Nature, Lon., 1743, 8vo; 1747, '71; new ed., 1811, 8vo.

"A valuable Treatise, with much new and original thinking."—Bickerneth's C. S.

"No divine (Bishop Butler, perhaps, only excepted) appears to have possessed greater maturity of thought, and a richer vein of original conception."—Lowndes's Brit. Lib.

An Inquiry whence cometh Knowledge and Understanding to Man, 1757, 8vo. Appended to last ed. of above work. To the Knowledge of Divine Things was subsequently added Some Considerations upon Mr. Locke's Hypothesis, That the Knowledge of God is attainable by ideas of reflection.

Ellis, John, 1698–1791, a literary money-scrivener, memorable as the subject of great partiality upon the part of Dr. Johnson, Dr. King, and Lord Orrery, was fond of translating Latin into English verses, and perpetrating poetical squibs and epigrams. The South Sea Dream; a Poem in Hudibrastic Verse, 1720. A Trans. from the Latin of The Surprise; or, the Gentleman turned Apothecary, Lon., 1739, 12mo. Written originally in French prose. Marston Moor; sive de obsidione prælioque Eboracensi Carmen, Lib. vi., 1750, 4to. His Travesty of Maphæus appeared under the following title:

"The Canto added by Maphæus
To Virgil's twelve books of Æneas;
From the original bombastic,
Done in English Hudibrastic,
With notes beneath, and Latin text
In every other page annexed."—1758

Ellis always pub. anonymously. He contributed some of the poems in Dodsley's collection.

"It is wonderful, sir, what is to be found in London. The most literary conversation that I ever enjoyed was at the table of Jack Ellis, a money-scrivener, behind the Royal Exchange, with whom at one period I used to dine generally once a week."—Dr. Johnson's remark to Boswell.

"I visited him [Ellis] in his ninety-third year, and found his judgment distinct and clear, and his memory, though faded so as to fail him occasionally, yet, as he assured me, and I indeed perceived, able to serve him very well, after a little recollection."—Boswell.

Ellis, John, b. about 1710, d. 1776, an eminent naturalist. An Essay towards a Natural History of the Coral-Islands, &c., Lon., 1755, 4to. Hist. Account of Coffee, 1774, 4to. Mongostan and Bread Fruit, 1775, 4to. Treatise on Cattle, 1776, 8vo. Nat. Hist. of Zoophytes, 1786, 4to. For other publications of Ellis, and his contributions to Phil. Trans., 1752–76, see Watt's Bibl. Brit.

Ellis, Robert Leslie, in conjunction with James Spedding and Douglas Denon Heath, commenced in 1855 the preparation of a new and complete edition of the Works of Francis Bacon. The First Division—the Philosophical Works—has been pub. in 5 large 8vo vols.: i–iii., 1857; iv., v., 1858, £4 10s. See SPEDDING, JAMES.

Ellis, Philip. Serms. in the "Catholic Sermons," 2 vols. 8vo.

Ellis, Sir Richard. See ELLYS.

Ellis, Robert. Laws of Customs, Lon., 1826, 8vo.

Ellis, Mrs. Sarah Stickney, formerly Miss Stickney, is one of the most voluminous and popular writers of the day. Her Poetry of Life had given her considerable celebrity before her marriage, in 1837, to the Rev. William Ellis, the well-known and highly-respected missionary to the South Sea Islands. The works of Mrs. Ellis are so numerous that we can promise, in the brief limits to which we are confined, to give little more than the titles of her excellent productions. 1. The Poetry of Life, 2 vols. p. 8vo. 2. Conversations on Human Nature, 12mo. 3. Home, or, The Iron Rule, 3 vols. p. 8vo. 4. Women of England, 1838, p. 8vo; 1846. 5. Sons of the Soil; a Poem, 2d ed., 1840, p. 8vo. 6. The Daughters of England, 1842, p. 8vo; 1846. 7. The Wives of England, 1843, p. 8vo; 1846. 8. The Mothers of England, 1843, cr. 8vo; 1848. 9. Family Secrets, 1841-43, 3 vols. 8vo; 1846. 10. Summer and Winter in the Pyrenees, 1841, p. 8vo; 1847. 11. Voice from the Vintage, 1843, fp. 8vo. 12. Pictures of Private Life, 1844, 3 vols. fp. 8vo. 13. Young Ladies' Reader, 1845, fp. 8vo. 14. Look to the End, or the Bennetts Abroad, 1845, 2 vols. p. 8vo. 15. The Island Queen; a Poem, 1846, p. 8vo. 16. Temper and Temperament, 1846, 2 vols. 8vo. 17. Prevention better than Cure, 1847, p. 8vo; 1848. 18. Rawdon House; Hints on Formation of Character, 1848, p. 8vo. 19. Fireside Tales. New ed., 1848, '49, 4 vols. p. 8vo. 20. Social Distinction; or, Hearts and Homes, 1848, '49, 3 vols. 8vo. 21. My Brother; or, The Man of Many Friends. New ed. of Mrs. Ellis's Works, 1853, &c.

With the many well-deserved encomiums before us upon Mrs. Ellis's instructive volumes, we cannot but regret that we can find room for only a few.

Notice of The Wives of England:

"It is a comfort to think that in all things we are not retrograding. The talents which made Hannah More and Madame D'Arbly the idols of the literary world in their generation, would now secure them but a slender share of homage. The cultivation of the female mind has certainly advanced; and we greatly doubt if any woman of the last century could have written The Wives of England."—British Magazine.

Notice of The Daughters of England:

"An admirable work, full of truthful eloquence, that does Mrs. Ellis infinite honour, and will be productive of great eventual good. Education, taste, beauty, fashion, and the affections, form themes on which Mrs. Ellis enlarges with great earnestness."—Court Journal.

Notices of The Women of England:

"We know no volume better calculated to exercise a powerful, lasting, and beneficial influence. If we could have our own way, every family should order a copy of The Women of England. Husbands, especially young husbands, should buy it for their Wives; Fathers, for their Daughters; Brothers, for their Sisters."—Lon. Methodist Mag.

"At a time when women are becoming anxious to shine in other spheres than that humble but holiest of all—home, to inculcate the truth that the paramount and peculiar duties of woman consist in ministering to the wants, comforts, and happiness of her fellow-creatures, especially those of her own family circle. Is a salutary task; this Mrs. Ellis has accomplished in a way to bring conviction to the minds of mothers and daughters—the teachers and the taught."—Lon. Spectator.

Notices of The Mothers of England:

"This is an appropriate and very valuable conclusion to the series of works on the subject of female duties by which Mrs. Ellis has pleased, and we doubt not profited, thousands of readers. Her counsels command attention, not only by their practical sagacious usefulness, but also by the meek and modest spirit in which they are communicated.

Notice of Pretension; series 3d of Pictures of Private Life:

"The aim of the writer is evidently to instruct as well as amuse, by offering these admirable sketches as beacons to warn the young, especially of her own sex, against the errors which have shipwrecked the happiness of so many."—Lon. Gentleman's Magazine.

Notice of Look to the End:

"In the present work her lessons are more descriptive and various, and consequently it possesses more elements for popularity than its predecessors, popular as they have been and are."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

What higher praise could any author covet than the following commendations from eminent authorities?

"We can conscientiously aver, that no works within our knowledge are equally calculated to interest by their cheerful, pleasant composition, and to instruct by their sagacious, honest counsels, those for whom they are designed. To 'write no line which dying one would wish to blot,' when addressing one's self to subjects so full of all that is delicate in human motives and all that is powerful in human influence, is a display of honesty and courage, as well as wisdom and morality, which should be appreciated and honoured: this is what Mrs. Ellis has done."—Lon. Eclectic Review.

"Mrs. Ellis has always one end in view—the moral improvement and edification of her fellow-creatures; more particularly of her own sex."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

Ellis, T. F., and Adolphus, J. S. Reports of Cases in Ct. of King's Bench. See BARNEWALL, R. V.

Ellis, Thomas. A true Report of Mr. Martin Frobisher's 3d and last Voyage; by T. E., a sailor, and one of the company, Lon., 1578, 4to.

Ellis, Thomas. Traytors Unveiled, 1661, 4to.

Ellis, Thomas. Gardener's P. Calendar, Lon., 1776.

Ellis, W. Voyage of Cook and Clarke, 1776-80, with their discoveries, and death of Cook, Lon., 1782, 2 vols. 8vo.

Ellis, Wm. 1. Practical Farmer, Lon., 1732, 8vo. 2. Chiltern and Vale Farming Explained, 1738, 8vo. 3. New Experiments in Husbandry, 1736, 2 vols. 8vo. 4. Timber Tree Improved, 1738, 8vo. 5. Modern Husbandman, 1744, 8vo. 6. Country Housewife's Family Companion, 1750, 8vo. 7. Complete Planter and Cyderist, 1757, 8vo. 8. A Complete System of Experienced Improvements made on sheep, grass lambs, and house lambs, &c. This title we take from Donaldson. He discovered the book in the library of Geo. IV., Brit. Museum. 9. Ellis's Husbandry abridged and methodized, 1772, 2 vols. 8vo: A sort of compound of the whole of Ellis's works on Agriculture. See a critical review of Ellis's works in Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

"Ellis was not the author of any originality on the subject of agriculture, nor did he write any conception that merited that appellation. But he was a large promoter of the art both by precept and example, and consequently occupies a niche of no low standing in the temple of agricultural fame."—Ubi supra.

Ellis, Wm. Every Man his own Farrier, Lon., 1759, 8vo.

Ellis, Wm. Cure of the V. Disease, Lon., 1771, 8vo.

Ellis, Wm. Collec. of English Exercises, Lon., 1782.

Ellis, Wm. A Treatise on Government, trans. from the Greek of Aristotle, Lon., 1779, 4to.

Ellis, Wm. Campaign of London, with Hist. and Topog. of the Parishes, and Biog. anecdotes, Lon., 1791-93, 4to.

Ellis, William, b. 1800, in the vicinity of London, an eminent writer on social science. 1. Outlines of Social Economy. 2. Introduction to the Study of the Social Sciences. 3. Outlines of the History and Formation of the Understanding. 4. Questions and Answers Suggested by a Consideration of Some of the Arrangements of Social Life. 5. Progressive Lessons in Social Science. 6. Phenomena of Industrial Life; edited by the Dean of Hereford. 7. Education as a Means of Preventing Destitution, 1851, p. 8vo. For an interesting sketch of Mr. Ellis's labours in the cause of social science, see Knight's Eng. Cyc.

Ellis, Rev. Wm., an eminent missionary to the South Sea Islands, and the husband of Mrs. SARAH STICKNEY ELLIS, (v. ante.) 1. Missionary Narrative of a Tour through Hawaii or Owhyhee, Lon., 1826, 8vo.; 4th ed. 1827, 8vo.

"Mr. Ellis has given us a plain, intelligent, and uncommonly interesting detail. He describes well, because distinctly and unaffectedly. We cannot recollect that we have been more entirely rivetted by the perusal of a book of Travels since we read Dr. Henderson's Island."—Lon. Eclectic Review.

2. Polynesian Researches, 1829, 2 vols. 8vo.; last ed., 1853, 4 vols. 12mo.

"A more interesting book than this, in all its parts, we have never perused, and seldom so immethetical a one."—ROBERT SOUTHBY, in Lon. Quar. Rev. xliii. 1, 1830. Read this interesting review.

"The simplicity of the narrative,—the graphic beauty of many of the descriptions,—and the moral grandeur of the whole subject of these volumes, are calculated to produce the most powerful and salutary impression on every religious and cultivated mind."—Orme's Discourse on the South Sea Mission.

3. A Vindication of the South Sea Missions from the Misrepresentations of Otto Von Kotzebue, with an Appendix by Wm. Ellis, 1831, 8vo. 4. History of Madagascar, 1838, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Here is a work as copious, as comprehensive, as minute, and, as far as we can judge, as accurate, as it would be possible to produce."—Lon. Eclectic Review.

5. History of the London Missionary Society, vol. i., 1844, 8vo. 6. Village Lectures on Popery, 1851, fp. 8vo.

"Remarkable for their simple and explanatory character. . . We commend them to readers of every grade."—Lon. Eclectic Review.

To Mr. Ellis we are also indebted for an improved ed. of Stewart's Visit to the South Seas, and for an Introductory Essay on the Policy, Religion, &c. of China, prefixed to Gutzlaff's Journal of Three Voyages along the Coast of China, 3d ed., 1839, p. 8vo.

Ellis, Sir Wm. C., M.D., Resident Medical Superintendent, and formerly of the Asylum at Wakefield. Letter to T. Thompson, M.P., on the necessity for Insane Asylums, Lon., 1815, 8vo. A Treatise on the Nature, Symptoms, Causes, and Treatment of Insanity, with Practical Observations on Lunatic Asylums, and a descrip. of the Hanwell Asylum, Lon., 1838, 8vo.

"The present volume, coming from the pen of one whose reputation in this department stands so high, will most probably be sought for with avidity. It abounds in a great variety of valuable information, with many particulars of great importance to the treatment of Insanity, and to the interests of society. We accordingly recommend it to public attention."—Lon. Athenaeum.

"In this unpretending volume will be found a vast deal of highly important and useful practical information."—Lon. Med. Char. Rev., July, 1838.

Ellison, Cuthbert. Sermon, 1748, 8vo.

Ellison, John. Sermon, Newc., 1750, 4to.

Ellison, Nath., D.D., Archdeacon of Stafford. Sermon, 1699, 4to; 1700, 8vo; 1710.

Ellison, Nath., Vicar of Bolam. Sermon, 1792, 4to.

Ellison, R. Sermon, 1811.

Ellison, Seacome. 1. Prison Scenes, Lon., 1838, p. 8vo. 2. Baptism, 1835, 8vo; 2d ed., 1846. 3. The Millennium, 1850, 12mo.

Elliston, Robert Wm., 1774–1831, a celebrated English actor. The Venetian Outlaw, a Drama adapted to the English Stage, 1805, 8vo. See Raymond's Memoirs of R. W. Elliston, by G. Raymond, Lon., 1846, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Magnificent were thy capricious on this globe of earth, Robert William Elliston!"—CHARLES LAMB.

Ellowis, or Elwes, Sir Gervase. His Speech and Repentance at his Execution, Lon., 1615, 4to.

Ellsworth, Erastus W., b. 1823, Conn. Poems, Hartford, 1855.

"We have rarely met so unequal a collection of poems: none, indeed, rising to the highest rank, and many sinking quite below notice."—Putnam's N. York Mag.

Ellsworth, Henry Wm. 1. Report on Agriculture, N. York. 2. Sketches of the Upper Wabash Valley, 1838, 12mo. 3. American Swine Breeder, 1844, 12mo.

Ellsworth, Oliver, LL.D., Chief Justice of the U. States, 1745–1807, was a native of Windsor, Conn. Speech in the Convention of Connecticut in favour of the Constitution, pub. in the American Museum.

Ellwood, Thomas, 1639–1713, the friend of Milton, and a zealous Quaker, was a native of Oxfordshire. 1. Forgery no Christianity, 1674, 12mo. 2. The Foundation of Tithes Shaken, 1682; 1720, 8vo. 3. Wickham, 1690, 4to. 4. Sacred History; historical part of the Old and New Test. digested, &c., 1705–09; 1794, 2 vols. fol. 5. Davideis, a Sacred Poem, 1712, 12mo. 6. His Autobiography, with a Supp. by J. W., 1714, 8vo; 1791, 12mo. As reader to Milton, Ellwood enjoyed rare opportunities of conversing with the great bard. After perusing the MS. of Paradise Lost, he returned it to the author with the remark:

"Thou hast said much here of Paradise Lost, but what hast thou to say to Paradise found?"

To this timely hint the world is indebted for Paradise Regained. An interesting review, with copious extracts, of Ellwood's Autobiography, will be found in the London Retrospec. Rev., xiii. 109. Ellwood was a man of the most exemplary character.

Ellyot, George. A verie true Report of the Apprehension and taking of that Arche Papiate Edmond Campion, Lon., 1581, 8vo.

Ellys, Anthony, 1693–1761, Preb. of Gloucester, 1725; Bishop of St. David's, 1752. Plea for the Sacramental Test, Lon., 1736, 4to; 1790, 8vo. Sermons. pub. separately, 1749, '54, '58, '59, '67. Remarks on David Hume's Essay on Miracles, 1752, 4to. Tracts on the Spiritual and Temporal Liberty of the subjects in England, 1763–65, 4to; new ed., 1767, 4to.

Ellys, or Ellis, Sir Richard, d. 1742, M.P., 1715–34, grandson of Hampden, was eminent for his knowledge of Hebrew, Greek, and Biblical antiquities. Fortuita Sacra, quibus subjicitur commentarius de Cymbalis; Rotterdam, 1727, 8vo, anon.

"It contains illustrations of twenty-four passages of Scripture, which incidentally occurred to the author, and which discover very considerable critical talents and great acquaintance with the languages of the Bible."—Orme's Bib. Bib.

Ellys, Tobias. The Kingdom of God, Lon., 1678, 8vo.

Ellyson, Thomas. The Shepherd's Letters, Lon., 1646, 4to.

Elmer, J. Weights and Measures, Lon., 1759.

Elmer, Joseph. Practice in Lunacy, Lon., 1844, 12mo.

Elmer, L. Q. C. A Digest of the Laws of New Jersey, Bridgeton, 1838, 8vo.

Elmes, James, Architect, b. 1782. 1. New Churches, 1818, 8vo. 2. Memoirs of the Life and Works of Sir Christopher Wren, Lon., 1823, 4to. 3. Improvements of Prisons. 4. Lectures on Architecture, 1823, 8vo. 5. School of the Fine Arts, 1825, 3 vols. 8vo. 6. Genl. and Bibliog. Dict. of the Fine Arts, 1826, 8vo. 8. Ecclesiastical and Civil Dilapidations, &c., 3d ed., 1829, 8vo. 7. Architectural Jurisprudence, 1827, 8vo.

Elmham, Thomas de. Vita et Gesta Henrici Quinti Anglorum Regis; cum Prefatione et Notis Th. Hearne, Oxon., 1727, 8vo.

Elmore, H. M. Brit. Mariner's Directory and Guide to the Indian and China Seas, Lon., 1802, 4to.

Elmsley, Peter, D.D., 1773–1825, educated at Westminster and Merton Coll., Oxf.; Principal of Alban Hall and Camden; Professor of History, 1823. Elmsley was one of the first Greek scholars of his time. 1. Articles in the Edinburgh Review, viz.: No. 4, On Heyne's Homer; No. 5, On Schweighauser's Athenæus; No. 35, On Blomfield's Prometheus; No. 37, On Porson's Hecuba. 2. Article in the 38th No. of the Quarterly Review, on Lord Clarendon's Religion and Policy. 3. The Achæneses, 1809. 4. Œdipus Tyrannus, 1811. 5. Heracidae, 1815. 6. Medea, 1818. 7. Bacchæ, 1821. 8. Œdipus Coloneus, 1823.

"These publications established his fame throughout Europe as a judicious critic and consummate master of the Greek language."—See Obituary Notice in Lon. Gent. Mag., April, 1825.

Robert Southey was warmly attached to Dr. Elmsley, and had a high opinion of his attainments:

"The Edinburgh Reviewers I like well as companions, and think little of as any thing else. Elmsley has more knowledge and a sounder mind than any or all of them. I could learn more from him in a day than they could all teach me in a year. . . . Elmsley, I am sorry to say, is fatter than ever he was: he is one of my most intimate and valuable friends. . . . Do you remember Elmsley at Oxford—the fittest undergraduate in your time and mine? He is at Naples, superintending the unrolling the Herculaneum manuscripts, by Davy's process, at the expense of the Prince Regent—I should say of George IV. The intention is, that Elmsley shall ascertain, as soon as a beginning is made of one of the rolls, whether it shall be proceeded with or laid aside, in hope of finding something better, till the whole have been inspected." See Southey's Life and Correspondence.

Elphinston, Lord Balmerino. His Speech in Ct. of Parl., Scotland, rel. to army ag. Irish Papists, 1641.

Elphinston, James, 1721–1809, a native of Edinburgh, was for many years the head of a celebrated school at Kensington, near London. Dr. Johnson esteemed him highly, and during his residence at Edinburgh he superintended an edit. of The Rambler, pub. in 8 vols. 12mo. 1. A Poet. Version of Racine's Redemption, 1753. 2. Fr. and Eng. Languages, 1756, 2 vols. 12mo. 3. Education; a Poem, 1763, 8vo. 4. Apology for the Monthly Review, 1763, 8vo. 5. Collec. of Poems for Youth, &c., 1764, 8vo. 6. Eng. Language, 1765, 2 vols. 12mo. Abridged, 1765, 8vo. 7. Verses, 1768, fol. 8. Poetæ Sententiosi, Latini, &c., 1794, 12mo. Elphinston was a zealous advocate of a change in orthography, which he contended should be guided by the pronunciation, &c. He had already given some specimens of his "improvements," but in a (9) trans. of Martial, 1782, 4to, he carried the system out to a greater extent: "Elphinston's Martial is just come to hand. It is truly an unique. The specimens formerly published did very well to laugh at; but a whole quarto of nonsense and gibberish is too much. It is strange that a man not wholly illiterate should have lived so long in England, without learning the language."—Dr. Beattie to Sir Wm. Forbes.

Nothing dismayed by public ingratitude, in 1786, 2 vols. 8vo, Elphinston gave to the world an explanation of his system, under the title of (10) Propriety ascertained in her Picture. This he followed by (11) English Orthography Epitomized, (12) Propriety's Pocket Dictionary, and (13) Fifty Years' Correspondence, English, French, and Latin, in Prose and Verse, between Geniuses or both Sexes, and James Elphinston, 1794, 8 vols. 12mo. An interesting memoir of this worthy man will be found in Nichols's Literary Anecdotes, from the pen of one already honourably noticed in these pages. Mr. Nichols tells us—

"My account of this singular but truly worthy man shall be abridged from a memoir of him, which was presented to me in 1809 by R. C. Dallas, Esq., one of his grateful pupils."—Lit. Anec., iii. 30.

"From Mr. Dallas's situation as a pupil of Mr. Elphinston's, he had the honour of being presented to Dr. Jortin, Dr. Franklin, of Philadelphia, and Dr. Johnson; a triumvirate not easily matched."—Ubi supra.

See also Forbes's Life of Beattie, and Boswell's Life of Dr. Johnson.

Elphinston, James. Animadversions upon Elements of Criticism; with an App. on Scotticisms, Lon., 1771, 8vo.

Elphinston, Wm., b. 1431 or 1437, d. 1514, Bishop of Ross, trans. to Aberdeen, 1484, wrote a book of canons, some lives of Scotch saints, and the history of Scotland from the rise of the nation to his own time. The last is now in the Fairfax MSS. in the Bodleian Library.

Elphinstone, Hon. Mountstuart. 1. An Account of the Kingdom of Cabul, and its dependencies in Tartary, Persia, and India, Lon., 1815, 4to; 2d ed., 1839, 2 vols. 8vo; 3d ed., 1842, 2 vols. 8vo.

"The interest and value of this work arises more from the subject of it, than from the manner in which it is executed: respecting such countries, however, as Cabul, and others as little known and remote, we are glad of all accessions of information."—Stevenson's Voyages and Travels.

"There are not many regions of the Globe of which the history and geography are less known than those of the country which is the subject of Mr. Elphinstone's important and distinguished work."—Edin. Review.

"The Hon. Mr. Elphinstone's Cabul is a work which places its author in the first rank of historians and travellers in the East. . . . Most earnestly do I recommend the book of Mr. Elphinstone to every library of any pretension to a Collection of Voyages and Travels."—Dublin's Library Companion.

"This work, of much interest on many accounts, contains the description of a systematised patriarchal system, which, in history at least, is carried out by division and subdivision, from the king, through a variety of larger and lesser divisions, tribes, and clans, to the last head of a single family, such as probably exists nowhere else."—Lieber's Essays on Property and Labour.

2. A History of India: the Hindoo and Mohammedan Periods, 1841, 2 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., 1843; 3d ed., 1848, 8vo.

"Mr. Elphinstone's work will, we trust, be eminently useful, and tend to dispel much of that confusion, prejudice, and apathy, which still linger in the minds even of many highly-educated persons on the subject of Ancient India."—Lon. Quar. Review.

"A work of the greatest authority and learning; one of the latest and most valuable works on the Eastern Empire."—The late Sir Robt. Peel, in the House of Commons.

Elrington, John Battersby. Confessions in Elysium; from the German of Wieland, 1803, 3 vols.

Elrington, Thomas, D.D., d. 1835, a native of Ireland, obtained a scholarship in the University of Dublin, 1778; elected Fellow, 1781; first Donellan Lecturer, 1794; Prof. of Mathemat., 1795; Rector of Ardree, Tyrone, 1806; Provost of Trin. Coll., Dublin, 1811; Bishop of Limerick, 1820; trans. to Leighlin and Ferns, 1822. Serms. at the Donellan Lectures, &c., Dublin, 1796, 8vo. Reflex. rel. to Dr. Milner, 1809, 8vo. The Validity of English Ordination Established, 1809, 8vo. An edit. of Euclid, with Notes, (new ed., 1847, fp. 8vo.) now the textbook in the Dublin University, and an edit. of Juvenal, with Notes, critical and explanatory.

Elsam, Richard. Rural Architecture, 1803, 4to. Designs for Peasant's Cottages, 1816, r. 4to.

Elsdale, Rev. Samuel. Death, Judgment, Heaven, and Hell, a Poem; with Hymns and other Poems, 1812, 8vo; 3d ed., 1813.

Else, Miss Anne. Lays of Caruth and other Poems.

Else, Joseph, Surgeon. Hydrocele, &c., Lon., 1770, 8vo. Con. to Med. Obs. and Inq., 1767. Works, with App. by G. Vaux, 1782, 8vo.

Else, R. Income Act explained, 1804.

Elsley, Rev. J., Vicar of Burenston, near Bedale. Annotations on the Four Gospels, Lon., 1799, 2 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., with Annotations on the Acts, 1812, 3 vols. 8vo; 3d ed., 1821, 3 vols. 8vo; 1824, 3 vols. 8vo; 6th ed., 1827, 3 vols. 8vo; 7th ed., 1838, 2 vols. 8vo; 8th ed., 1841, 2 vols. 8vo; 1844; 9th ed., 1844, 8vo. This excellent work was pub. anonymously. It is commended by Bishops Lloyd, Van Mildert, Sumner, and others.

"As a compilation, it is a very respectable work, and fitted to be useful to the junior students of the New Testament, or those who cannot purchase many critical books."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"Elsley is a convenient compendium for students."—Bickerstaff's C. S.

"Altogether we say without the smallest reserve, we never saw a book more admirably adapted for the use of students, more creditable to an author's capacity, diligence, and erudition, or more likely to make the investigation of the New Testament easy and agreeable."—British Critic.

In 1816, 2 vols. 8vo, the Rev. James Halle pub. Annotations on the Epistles, being a Continuation of Mr. Elsley's Annot. on the Gospel and Acts.

Elsly, Wm., Prob. of York. Serms., 1732.

Elslyot, Thomas. The Lamb taking the Wolf, Lon., 1652, 8vo. The True Mariner and his Pixis Nautica, 1652, 8vo.

Elsmere, Sloane, D.D., Rector of Chelsea. Serms., Lon., 1767, 2 vols. 8vo. Recommended by the Rev. Samuel Clapham.

Elson, Jane. Romance of the Castle, 1799, 2 vols. 12mo. The Village Romance; a Novel, 1802, 2 vols.

Elstob, Trip to Kilkenny, Lon., 1778, 12mo.

Elstob, Elizabeth, sister of Wm. Elstob, 1683–1756, was celebrated for her knowledge of the Saxon tongue. 1. An English Saxon Homily on St. George's Day, with a modern English version and Notes, and an Appendix. The same Homily in Latin by Wm. Elstob, Lon., 1709, 8vo. New ed., (part of the Preface omitted,) 1839, 8vo. 2. Trans. of Madame Scudery's Essay on Glory. 3. The Rudiments of Grammar for the English Saxon Tongue, 1715, 4to. 4. Saxon Homilies, Oxf., fol. These were designed as a specimen of a Saxon Homiliarium, with an English trans., notes, &c. Some testimonies of a number of learned men in favour of this project were pub. by Bowyer in 1713. See Nichols's Lit. Anecdotes; Biog. Brit.; and Harleian MSS. Mrs. Elstob was an excellent linguist.

Elstob, Wm., 1673–1714, a native of Newcastle, educated at Eton, and Catharine Hall, Camb., and subsequently at Queen's Coll., Oxf.; Fellow of University Coll., 1696; Rector of St. Swithin, and St. Mary Bothaw, London, 1702. Mr. Elstob, like his sister Elizabeth, was deeply versed in Saxon learning. 1. A trans. into Latin of the Saxon Homily of Lupus, with Notes by Dr. Hicke, 1701. 2. Trans. into English of Sir John Cheke's Latin version of Plutarch, printed at the end of Strype's Life of Cheke. 3. An edit. of Ascham's Latin Letters, Oxf., 1703. 4. An Essay on the great Affinity and mutual Agreement between the two professions of Law and Divinity, with a Preface by Dr. Hicke, Lon., 8vo. 5. Serms., 1704, 4to. 6. Serms., 1704, 4to. 7. Homily of St. Gregory's Day, 1709, 8vo. Saxon Laws, with great additions, and a new Latin version by Somner, &c., begun by Elstob, and completed by David Wilkins, D.D., 1721, fol. See Nichols's Lit. Anecdotes and Biog. Brit.

Elstob, Wm., Rector of Sheldon. Serms., 1811, 4to.

Elstobb, W. 1. Navigation between Clayhithe and Denver Sluice, Camb., 1779, 4to. 2. Hist. account of Bedford Level, &c., Lynn, 1793, 8vo. 3. On Rivers.

Elston, J. Serms., 1681, 4to.

Elstrack, R. 28 Portraits of the Kings and Queens of England. Reprinted in Martin's Chron., 1631, fol., &c. See Bromley's Engraved British Portraits, 1793, 4to.

Elsum, John. 1. Epigram upon the Paintings of Eminent Masters by J. E., Lon., 1700, 8vo. Erroneously attributed to John Evelyn. 2. Art of Painting after the Italian Manner, 1704, 8vo.

Elsynge, Henry, 1598–1654, Clerk of the House of Commons. 1. State of the Kingdom; probably not his. 2. Passing Bills in Parliament, 1656, 8vo. 3. The ancient Manner and Method of holding Parliaments in England, Lon., 1660, '63, '79, 8vo. Best ed., with addita. from the author's MS., 1767, 12mo. 4. Several Treatises of Parliament, 1703, 12mo.

"Mr. Henry Elsynge, late clerk of the Parliament, was, in my judgment, the best I ever knew to take the sense of the House and put it in apt terms. He was an excellent scholar—had the Italian, French, and Latin languages—a very honest and ingenious man, and fitter for a much better employment than to be clerk of Parliament. . . . He was in great and deserved favour of the House of Commons, and gave over his place because he would not meddle in the trial about the king. He often invited Mr. Selden and me together to his house and to dinner, where we had great cheer and greater learning in excellent discourses, whereof himself bore a chief part. I was the more frequent with him, being god-father to one of his sons, and Mr. Selden the other god-father, which brought us two the oftener together to see our god-son; and even in these I gained very much of knowledge from the most learned and rational discourses of Mr. Selden."—Whitelock's Journal of the Swedish Embassy, 1772, 2 vols. 4to, vol. ii. p. 426.

Elton, Rev. Sir Abraham. Letter to Thomas Bere, occasioned by his attack on Mrs. Hannah More, Lon., 1800, 8vo.

Elton, Charles Abraham. 1. Poems, 1804, 8vo. 2. Trans. into English Verse of the Remains of Hesiod, 1809, 8vo.

"Upon the whole, we are disposed to give Mr. Elton credit for considerable skill in versification. Indeed, though his translation is close, sometimes too close for perpetuity. It seems at least equal to the original. His blank verse, in which he excels more than in the couplet, is of a good structure; bearing a general, but not servile, resemblance to Milton, with a little cast of some of the daring epithets of Cowper."—Edin. Rev., xv. 109–118.

3. Tales of Romance, with other Poems, Lon., 1810, 8vo.

4. Specimens of the Classic Poets in Chronological Series from Homer to Tryphiodorus. Trans. into English verse, and illustrated with Biog. and Crit. Notices, 1814, 3 vols. 8vo. This valuable work contains passages from 33 Greek and 27 Latin poets. A beautiful edit. was pub. in Philadelphia by F. Bell, 1854, 3 vols. 8vo.

"His success is very unequal: many specimens are, in a high degree, brilliant and spirited, while others are cold, stiff, and lagging. In general, we like him better in rhyme than in blank verse, though the arguments in behalf of the latter measure in his Preface may show that he is of a different opinion. . . . Upon the whole, these specimens do considerable credit to Mr. Elton's fluency in speaking the language of poetry."—Lon. Quar. Review, xiii. 161–168.

Elton, Edward, Minister of St. Mary Magdalen's, Bermondsey. 1. Exposition of the Epistle to the Colossians, in sundry Serms., Lon., 1615, 4to; 2d ed., 1620, '37, fol.

"Both these Expositions [Byfield's and Elton's] have much spiritual instruction."—Bickerstaff's C. S.

2. Expos. of the 7th Chap. of the Romans, in divers Serms., 1616, 4to.

"An excellent Puritan Exposition."—Bickerstaff's C. S.

"Elton on Colossians is a work rich in matter, dressed in the plain and somewhat unpopular language of its day. . . . The work on Romans is nearly on the same plan and of similar character."—Wilkins's C. P.

8. Expos. of 6 of the Commandments, 1619, 8vo. 4. Expos. of, or Serms. on, the 8th chap. of Romans, 1623, 4to. Other works.

Elton, Richard, Lt. Col. Complete Body of the Military Art and Gunnery, Lon., 1650, '58, fol.

Elton, Romeo, D.D., a native of Connecticut, grad. at Brown University, 1812; Prof. of Ancient Languages in same Institution from 1825 to '43, and has since resided in England. Besides several published sermons, he edited Callender's Century Sermon, with copious Notes and Biographical Sketches; The Works of President Maxey, with Memoir, N.Y., 1844, 8vo; Biographical Sketch of Roger Williams, pub. in Lon.

Eltringham, Wm. 1. The Baptist against the Baptist, Lon., 1756, 8vo. 2. Remarks on The Baptists' Vindict., 1757, 8vo.

Elven, J. P. Heraldry, Lon., 1815, 12mo.

Elviden, Edmund. The Closet of Counsellors, containing the aduice of dyuers wyse Philosophers, Lon., 1569, 8vo.

Elwell, Wm. Odell. New and Complete American Dictionary of Eng. and German, N. York, 12mo. Highly commended by competent authorities.

Elwes, Robert. A Sketcher's Tour round the World, with 21 Illustrations, Lon., 1854, r. 8vo.

"Pleasant reading, we repeat, need not be offered than our Sketcher brings."—Lon. Athnæum.

Elwin, Fountain, Vicar of Temple, Bristol, and one of the ministers of the Octagon. Serms. preached at the Octagon Chapel, Bath, Lon., 1st series, 1842, 12mo; 2d series, 1849, 12mo. Other theolog. works.

Ellwood, Mrs. (A. K.) Col. 1. Narrative of a Journey Overland from England to India, &c., 1825-28, Lon., 1830, 2 vols. 8vo. 2. Memoirs of the Literary Ladies of England from the Commencement of the Last Century, 1842, 2 vols. p. 8vo; 1848.

"A work of great merit. The first biography is that of Lady Mary Wortley Montagu; the last that of Mrs. Maclean, better known as Miss Landon: it thus comprises our Blue Stockings from the commencement of the last century down to the present. Each biography is marked by good taste and excellent judgment."—John Bull.

Elworthy, John. Sermon, Lon., 1753, 8vo.

Ely, Ezra Styles, D.D., of Philadelphia, assistant editor, in conjunction with Wm. McCorkle and the Rev. Gregory T. Bedell, of a Collateral Bible, or Key to the Holy Scriptures, Phila., 1826-28, 3 vols. 4to.

"These volumes comprise the Old Testament. The corresponding texts are brought together in one view, and arranged in a familiar and easy manner."—Lowndes's Brit. Librarian.

Memoirs of his Father, the Rev. Zebulon Ely. Mental Science. Visits of Mercy. Sermons on Faith.

Ely, Henry, D.D. Fast Sermon, Lon., 1804.

Ely, Humphrey. Certaine briefe Notes upon a briefe Apology set out under the name of the Priests united to the Arch-Priest, 1603, 8vo. Written against Father Parsons, or Persons, and often quoted by Wood.

Ely, John, a Dissenting minister at Rochdale. Winter Lectures; illus. of Divine Dispensation, Lon., 1833, 8vo.

"This volume is distinguished by a character of deep and patient research, and by an extraordinary force, both of sentiment and style."—Lon. Evangel. Mag.

Other works. See his Posthumous Works, with a Memoir, by Hamilton, 1848, 8vo.

Ely, Zebulon, minister of Lebanon, Conn., d. about 1824. Sermon at the Election, 1804; on the death of Gov. Trumbull, 1809; before the County Foreign Mission Society, 1815. His memoirs were pub. by his son, EZRA STYLES ELY, q. v.

Elyot, Sir Thomas, Knt., d. 1546, educated at St. Mary's Hall, Oxford, was employed by Henry VIII. on several embassies. He was noted for extensive and profound learning. The Governor, Lon., 1531, 8vo. Many eds.

"Sir Thomas Elyot's Governor was designed to instruct men, especially great men, in good morals, and to reprove their vices."—Strype.

This book was a great favourite with Henry VIII. The Castell of Health, 1534, 8vo. Many eds. Dictionarium, Latin and English, 1538, fol. A Defence or Apology for Good Women, 1545, 8vo. Bibliotheca Eliote, 1541, fol. We have already spoken of this work, and various editions, in our article COOPER, THOMAS, q. v. Bankette of Sapience, 1542, 8vo. Education of Children. De Rebus Memorabilibus Anglie.

"For the completing of which he had perused many old English monuments."

Other works and trans. from the Latin and Greek. See Biog. Brit.; Strype's Eccles. Memorials; Herbert's Ames; Bayle, in art. Enoclipus; Athen. Oxon.; Brit. Bibl.

Elys, Edmund. See ELLIS.

Embury, Mrs. Emma C., a daughter of James R. Manley, M.D., of New York, was married in 1828 to Mr. Daniel Embury, now of Brooklyn. She has attained considerable distinction both in the walks of poetry and prose. "LANTERN" was a favourite signature with magazine readers long before the real name of the author was made public. Many of these early compositions have since been gathered and given to the world in a collective form. Mrs. Embury's first volume was entitled (1) Guide and other Poems. She has since pub. 2. Constance Latimer, or the Blind Girl, and other Tales. 3. Pictures of Early Life. 4. Glimpses of Home. 5. Nature's Gems, or American Wild Flowers; a collection of Poems, 1846. 6. Love's Token-flowers; a collec. of Poems. 7. The Waldorf Family, or Grandfather's Legends; a fairy tale of Brittany, partly a trans. and partly original.

"Since her marriage she has given to the public more prose than verse, but the former is characterized by the same romantic spirit which is the essential beauty of poetry. Many of her tales are founded upon a just observation of life, although not a few are equally remarkable for attractive invention. In point of style they often possess the merit of graceful and pointed diction, and the lessons they inculcate are invariably of a pure moral tendency."—Griswold's Female Poets of America.

See Hart's Female Prose-Writers of America; Mrs. Hale's Woman's Record.

Emerson, Frederick, 1789-1857, a successful teacher in Boston for many years; author of Emerson's well-known Arithmetic.

Emerson, George Barrett, teacher and naturalist, was born in 1797, at Kennebunk, then Wells, in York co., Maine, graduated at Harvard Coll. in 1817, A.A.S. For several years he was President of the Boston Socy of Nat. History, and Chairman of the Commissioners for the Zoological and Botanical Survey of Massachusetts. Mr. Emerson has been a teacher in colleges, academies, and schools for more than forty years, thirty-four of which were spent in Boston. He wrote the second part of "The School and the Schoolmaster," of which Bp. Potter wrote the first part, 12mo, pp. 552, N. York, 1842. A copy of this work was placed in every school in N. York and Massachusetts. A Report on the Trees and Shrubs growing naturally in the forests of Massachusetts, Boston, 1846, pp. 535, 8vo, 17 plates.

"Every page seems replete with interest, both of things old and new, rare and well-known. We cheerfully recommend such a treatise as this to the friends of Horticulture: feeling that the style and manner in which the subject is treated will be peculiarly interesting."—Hovey's Magazine of Horticulture.

Several of Mr. Emerson's Lectures upon Education have been pub., and he has contributed a number of articles to the North American Review and the Christian Examiner.

Emerson, Gouverneur, M.D., of Philadelphia. The Farmer's and Planter's Encyclopedia of Rural Affairs, by Cuthbert W. Johnson. Adapted to the United States by G. E., Phila., 1853, 8vo. See JOHNSON, CUTHBERT W. Dr. Emerson has contributed very extensively to the agricultural journals of the U.S. His medical writings consist chiefly of extensive contributions upon the subject of vital statistics, including the mortality, births, and changes in the population of Philadelphia from 1808 to '32; showing, among other things, the excessive mortality of males during childhood, and its causes. Effects of Depressing Influences in Changing the Proportions of the Sexes at Birth. See Amer. Jour. of Med. Sciences, 1827, 31, 48.

Emerson, James. See TENNENT, SIR JAMES EMERSON.

Emerson, Joseph, 1700-1767, minister of Malden, Mass. Serms. &c., 1727, '35, '38, '47.

Emerson, Joseph, 1777-1833, of Beverly, Mass. Miscellanies in Education.

Emerson, John Swift. Proceedings Ct. of Exchequer in Ireland, in case of Johnson, 1805, 8vo.

Emerson, Ralph Waldo, the son of a Unitarian minister of Boston, graduated at Harvard College in 1821, being then about 18 years of age. After some attention to theological studies, he was ordained minister of the Second Unitarian Church of Boston; but this connexion was soon sundered, in consequence of some peculiarity in the views of the preacher. He now retired to Concord, and soon became absorbed in those investigations in mental and moral philosophy of which the results have been from time to time communicated to the world.

An oration entitled Man Thinking, delivered before the Phi Beta Kappa in 1837, and an address to the senior class of the Divinity College, Cambridge, in 1838, attracted considerable attention; which no doubt encouraged Mr. Emerson to address the public through the medium of the press. In 1838 he pub. Literary Ethics, an Oration, which was followed in the next year by Nature, an Essay. In 1840 he commenced the publication of The Dial, a magazine devoted to the discussion of mooted points in literature, philosophy, and history. This periodical was continued for four years. In 1841 he pub. The Method of Nature, an Oration; Man the Reformer, an Oration; a lecture upon some peculiarities of the age; three Lectures on the Times, and the first series of his Essays. In 1844 he pub. lectures on N. England Reformers, the Young American, and Negro Emancipation in the West Indies, and the Second Series of his Essays. He subsequently delivered lectures on Swedenborg, Napoleon, New England, and other subjects. In 1846 he pub. a volume of Poems. He visited England for the second time in 1849, (his first visit was paid we believe about 1825,) and delivered a series of lectures, which were subsequently pub. in a volume under the title of Representative Men. In 1852, in conjunction with Mr. W. H. Channing and J. F. Clarke, he pub. The Memoirs of Margaret Fuller, Marchesa d'Ossoli. Mr. Emerson has also contributed several articles to the N. Amer. Rev. and the Chris. Exam. Reviews of Mr. Emerson's writings—which have excited considerable interest on both sides of the Atlantic—will be found in Westm. Rev., xxxiii.; Blackw. Mag., lxii, lxiv.; Eclectic Rev., 4th Ser., xii., xxxi.; Chris. Exam., xxx., (C. C. Felton,) xxxviii., (F. H. Hedge,) xlii., xlviii., (both by C. A. Bartol); Amer. Whig Rev., i., vi.; Brownson's Quarterly Review, 2d Ser., i.; Christian Review, xv.; Princeton Review, xlii.; Democratic Review, i., xvi.; New Englander, viii.; Southern Literary Messenger, xlii.; Eclectic Magazine, xlii., xlvii.; Living Age, iv., xvi., xvii., (G. Gilfillan,) xliii., xlv., xlvii.

"We suspect that Emerson is not known in this country as he deserves to be. With some who have heard his name coupled with that of Carlyle, he passes for a sort of echo or double of the English writer. A more independent and original thinker can nowhere in this age be found. This praise must at all events be awarded him. And even in America—which has not the reputation of generally overlooking or underrating the merits of her own children—we understand that the reputation of Emerson is by no means what it ought to be; and many critics there who are dissatisfied with merely imitative talent, and demand a man of genius of their own, are not aware that he stands there amongst them."—Blackwood's Magazine, lxiv, 643, &c.

"We warn admirers of this writer against a doctrine which tapers with the difference between right and wrong. There must be such a difference: it deeply concerns every man who presumes to teach the public to hold fast by it. . . . Not the doctrine which Mr. Emerson, and many men like-minded, are compassing sea and land to propagate, is not true: the cultivated intellect, the imagination, the conscience, the heart, unite in the disclaimer. There is a deeper philosophy than this, a nobler poetry, a manlier morality, a stronger stimulant, a sweeter solace; and our readers need not now be told where these are to be found. . . . His ethics are as destitute of authority as his poetry is of life and his philosophy of wisdom."—British Quarterly Review.

"It is better, we think, for a man to tell his story as Mr. Irving, Mr. Hawthorne, or Mr. Longfellow does, than to adopt the style Emersonian—in which thoughts may be buried so deep that common seekers shall be unable to find them. 'Geoffrey Crayon's' elegance and polish do not imply want of life or the absence of humour. His fancies are ideal, not typographical. They do not consist of verbs for nouns—or full stops barring the way when the reader desires to go on,—of tumid epithets, which arrest by their strangeness, not their appositeness,—of foreign idioms and forms, introduced (it may not be uncharitable to divine) by way of approximating the public that the writer is versed in Italian, French, or German."—Lon. Athenæum, Feb. 17, 1855, 192.

Emerson, T. Courts of Law of London, Lon., 1794, 8vo.

Emerson, Wm., 1701–1782, an eminent mathematician, was a native of Hurworth, near Darlington, England. He pub. many treatises upon natural philosophy, astronomy, and various branches of mathematics; for a list of which see Biog. Brit.

Emerson, Wm., 1769–1811, a minister of Boston, Mass., pub. several sermons, theolog. treatises, &c., 1794–1808. After his death was pub. his sketch of the history of the first church in Boston, with 2 sermons, 1812, 8vo.

Emersone, John. The World's Prospect; or, a Commentary upon Isa. xxiii. 14, Lon., 1646, 12mo.

Emes, Thomas. Alkali and Acid, Lon., 1609, 8vo. Atheist turned Deist, 1699, 8vo. Predictions, 1707, 4to.

Emlyn, Henry. Propositions for a New Order of Architecture, Lon., 1782, fol.

Emlyn, Thomas, 1663–1743, a learned English divine, a native of Lincolnshire, attracted great attention by his championship of Arrianism. In explanation of his sentiments, he pub. at Dublin, where he had been stationed, an Humble Inquiry into the Scripture Account of Jesus Christ, or a short argument concerning his Deity and Glory, according to the Gospel. This led to his prosecution and imprisonment. He wrote a number of other controversial tracts, a list of which will be found in Biog. Brit. and Watt's Bibl. Brit. A collective ed. of his Works, with a Memoir by his son, was pub. in 1746, 3 vols. 8vo. See a notice of some of his works in Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"Though his writings are, perhaps, not now so much read as they formerly were, they still continue to be held in reputation, and have a number of admirers. Our author was what is called a high Arian; believing our blessed Saviour to be the first of derived Beings, the Creator of the World, and an object of worship."—Dr. Kippis, in Biog. Brit.

Emmerick, A., Lt. Col. 1. Culture of Forests, Lon., 1789, 8vo. 2. Light Troops to an Army, 1789, 12mo.

Emmerton, Isaac. Culture and Management of the Auricula, &c., Lon., 1816.

Emmet, Thomas Addis, 1764–1827, a native of Cork, was admitted to the Dublin Bar in 1791. Becoming a leader among the "United Irishmen," he was obliged to emigrate to the Continent, after suffering imprisonment, and in 1804 arrived in New York. Here he was admitted to the bar, and in 1812 was appointed Attorney General of the State. He died of an attack of apoplexy in 1827. He wrote, whilst in prison in Scotland, a work pub. in New York in 1807, entitled Pieces of Irish History, illustrative of the condition of the Catholics of Ireland. He was a brother of Robert Emmet, executed for treason in 1803, and of Christopher Temple Emmet, a distinguished lawyer of Dublin. See Memoirs of Thomas Addis Emmet, by Charles Glidden Haynes; with a Biog. Notice of Mr. Haynes, Lon., 1829, 12mo; and a Sketch of the character of Emmet by the late Judge Story, in his Miscel. Writings, 804–807.

"That he had great qualities as an orator cannot be doubted by any one who has heard him. His mind possessed a good deal of the fervour which characterizes his countrymen. It was quick, vigorous, searching, and buoyant. He kindled as he spoke. There was a spontaneous combustion as it were, not sparkling, but clear and glowing. His rhetoric was never florid; and his diction, though select and pure, seemed the common dress of his thoughts, as they arose, rather than any studied effort at ornament."—JAMES STORY, ubi supra.

Emmett, J. B. Heat; Annals of Phil., 1817.

Emmons, Nathaniel, D.D., 1745–1840. CCXII. Sermons, with Life by Dr. J. Ide, N. York, 1842, 6 vols. r. 8vo. These vols. contain upwards of 220 sermons.

"One of the most eminent, original, and able preachers of his time." See Chris. Exam., xxliii. 169; Amer. Bibl. Rep., 2d s., viii. 314, x. 352; Princeton Rev., xiv. 520.

Emmot, G., of Durham. A Northern Blast; or, the Spiritual Quaker converted, Lon., 1655, 4to.

Emory, W. H., Major U.S. Army, b. in Queen Anne's co., Md. 1. Notes of a Military Reconnoissance in Missouri and California, N. York, 1848, 8vo. 2. Notes of Travel in California; from the Official Reports of Colonel Fremont and Major Emory, N.Y., 8vo.

"This work contains a map of the United States, Mexico, and California, together with a sectional map, on a large scale, of the Gold-Regions, and is replete with interest."

3. Report of the U.S. and Mexican Boundary-Commission, Washington, 4to. An elaborate work.

Emms, Robert. Gospel Dispensation, Lon., 1732, 4to.

Enderbie, Percy. Cambria Triumphans; or, Britain in its perfect Lustre, from the first of their Princes to Charles I., Lon., 1661, fol. Being a History of Wales. Lord Essex's copy, £30 9s.; Heathcote's, £29 18s. 6d.; Montolieu's, £32 11s. Reprinted, Lon., 1814, fol. See an analysis of this work in Savage's Librarian, ii. 49–74.

"As for Enderbie, who was an author of no considerable note, as having not had that just education which is requisite for a genuine historian, he hath done his work but very meanly, being mostly a scribble from late authors, and gives not that satisfaction which curious men desire to know."—Athen. Oxon., Bliss's ed., iii. 710.

"Its intrinsic worth in respect to its contents is not very great."—Savage's Librarian, ii. 50.

Yet so scarce had the original folio become, that a year before it was reprinted the same authority informs us,

"At present I believe that a good copy, bound in Russia leather, is difficult to be procured for much less than forty guineas."

The same vol. (original) is now (1855) worth perhaps £5 to £5 10s. in good condition and binding.

Endress, Rev. Dr., Lutheran pastor. Christi Regiment mit weltlicher Monarchie und Aristocratie unvereinbar, 1791, 12mo; also posthumous Sermons published in Lutheran Preacher and Pulpit.

Enfield, Wm., LL.D., 1741–1797, a Socinian divine, a native of Sudbury, Suffolk, minister of a congregation at Liverpool, 1763; teacher of the dissenting academy at Warrington, 1770–83, when it was dissolved; minister of a congregation at Norwich, 1783–97. Sermons, Prayers, Selection of Hymns, &c., 1768–95. The Preacher's Directory; an arrangement of topics and texts, 1771, 4to; 1775, 9 vols. 12mo; 1782, 4to.

"An excellent work, formed upon an admirable plan, and executed with great accuracy and judgment. This performance will be particularly useful to those who compose sermons, as it will immediately furnish them with a variety of texts on every subject, many of which are selected and applied with great taste and ingenuity. We will venture to recommend it to every preacher as the best book of its kind that has ever been published."—Lon. Critical Review.

Essay towards a Hist. of Liverpool, from papers of Geo. Perry, and other materials, 1773, fol. Literary Property, 1774, 4to. The Speaker, 1775, 8vo. A very good collection of prose and poetry. New ed., 1850, 12mo. By Rev. J. Pycroft, 1851, 12mo. Elocution, 1780, 12mo. Natural Philosophy, 1783, 4to; 1799, 4to. The History of Philosophy from the earliest periods to the beginning of the present century, drawn up from Brucker's Historia Critica Philosophiæ, 1791, 2 vols. 4to; 1819, 2 vols. 8vo. New ed., 1840, 8vo, pp. 670. Brucker's great work was pub. in 6 large 4to vols., Leipsic, 1742-44. A new ed., with large addits. and improvements, appeared in 6 vols. 4to, Leipsic, 1787. The author had previously pub. an abridgment in 1765, large 8vo. Enfield's work is an abridgment of the best edit., 6 vols. 4to, which comprises about 6000 closely-printed pages. The value of Brucker's work is well known. Whether entitled to Enfield's enthusiastic eulogy, it must be left to learned inquirers in the same field to decide:

"A vast magazine of important facts, collected with indefatigable industry, digested with admirable perspicuity of method, and written with every appearance of candour and impartiality. . . . His work bears throughout such evident marks of diligent attention, cool judgment, and freedom from prejudices, as justly to entitle his opinions to no small degree of respect; but as far as concerns facts, perhaps no historian ever had a better claim to confidence. No candid reader will, without the most careful inquiry, pronounce that statement of facts erroneous which was the result of a course of investigation in which the life of an industrious student was principally occupied for the long term of fifty years."—Enfield's Pref. to his Abridgment, 1791.

"This eminent and valuable work has received the general suffrage of the learned, as being the most comprehensive, methodical, and impartial history of theology hitherto written. It is both a history of doctrines and of men. As a history of doctrines, it lays open the origin of opinions, the changes they have undergone, the distinct characters of different systems, and the leading points in which they differ; as a history of men, it relates the lives of the most eminent philosophers, takes notice of their followers and opponents, and describes the origin, progress, and decline of their respective sects; and throws much light on the ancient religions of India, Persia, and on every other branch of Eastern literature."

"An indispensable work. I can truly say, that the benefit which I have derived from it is much greater than it would be possible to express by any quotation or acknowledgments, however numerous."—Burton's Bampton Lectures.

Enfield performed his task in a most creditable manner: "It may be truly said, that the tenets of philosophy and the lives of its professors were never before displayed in so pleasing a form, and with such clearness and excellence of language."

"It contains a fund of information that is scarcely anywhere else to be met with in the English language. Without it no library can be considered as at all complete."—Dr. E. Williams's C. P.

It is not to be denied, indeed, that doubts have been expressed of the accuracy of some of his paraphrases of ancient philosophic propositions and conclusions. Serms. on Practical Subjects, with Memoirs of the Author, by John Aikin, M.D., 1798, 3 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., 1799, 3 vols. 8vo.

"These Sermons are 60 in number, and are almost entirely written upon moral subjects, to illustrate the Character of our Lord, to explain and comment upon his Parables, or to enforce some of his Precepts. His chief talent consists in expressing common ideas in clear and apposite language; and he so well inculcates the moral precepts of Christianity, that, with reference to them, his Sermons may be read to advantage by every class of believers."—British Critic.

"In Dr. Enfield's compositions we see great correctness of sentiment, and a happy mode of expression. His words stand for ideas; he is clear without needless expansion, and concise without being confused."—Lon. Monthly Review.

The English Preacher; a collec. of short Serms. from various authors, 1773, '74, 9 vols. 12mo.

"Very useful to young preachers, by exhibiting before them at one view a great variety of models for their imitation."—Loewen's Brit. Librarian.

Enfield was a large contributor to the 1st vol. of Dr. Aikin's General Biography, 1799-1815, 10 vols. 4to. See Aikin, John, M.D., in this volume, and a biography of Dr. Enfield in Aikin's General Biography:

"He joined with the writer of this article in laying the plan; and all the lives in the first volume marked with his initials, comprising more than half the whole, are of his composition. . . . His language, chaste, clear, correct, and free from all affectation, is one of the best specimens of that middle style which is fitted for all topics, and he communicates to his reader all that clearness of idea which reigned in his mind."—Dr. Aikin, ubi supra.

Enfield, Wm. 1. New Pronouncing English Dictionary, 1807, 12mo.

"Mr. Enfield has displayed considerable judgment and great industry in the compilation and arrangement of the useful little volume before us."—Anti-Jacobin Review, Aug. 1807.

2. New Encyclopædia, 1809-11, 10 vols. 12mo. 3. Natural Theology, 1809, 12mo. 4. Compend. of the Laws and Constitution of England, 1809, 12mo. 5. Mental and Moral Philosophy and Logic, 1810, 12mo. 6. Natural Philosophy. England, Rev. George. Inquiry into the Morals of the Ancients, 1757, 4to.

England, John. Discourses, 1700, 8vo. Serms., 1710, 8vo. Serms., 1715, 8vo.

England, Rt. Rev. John, D.D., R. Catholic Bishop of N. Carolina, S. Carolina, and Georgia, for twenty-two years, died at Charleston, April 11, 1842, aged 56. Discourse before the Hibernian Society of Savannah, Charleston, 1824, 8vo. See a review in the N. Amer. Rev., xix. 470. Explanation of the Construction, Furniture, and Ornaments of a Church, &c., Balt., 8vo. Letters on Slavery, 8vo. Works edited by Bishop Reynolds, Balt., 1849, 5 vols. r. 8vo.

England, Thomas R. 1. Letters from the Abbé Edgeworth to his Friends, 1777-1807, with Memoirs of his Life, 1810, 8vo. Life of the Rev. Arthur O'Leary, &c., 1822, 8vo. Illustrative of the condition of the Irish R. Catholics in the 18th century.

Englefield, Sir Henry Charles, M.P., 1752-1822, an astronomer and antiquary. 1. Tables of the Apparent Places of the Comet in 1661, Lon., 1788, 4to. 2. Letter rel. to the case of Protestant Dissenters, 1790, 8vo. 3. Orbits of Comets, 1793, 4to. 4. Walk through Southampton; its Antiquities, 1801, 8vo. 5. Beauties, Antiquities, and Geological Phenomena of the Isle of Wight, 1816, fol. This work should be read by all who expect to visit the Isle of Wight.

"Sir Henry Englefield is well known in the literary world as a man of taste, of extensive, various, and accurate information; and the description of the Isle of Wight is a work, in all respects, worthy of a person distinguished by the possession of such accomplishments."—Edin. Rev., xxix. 363-377.

Con. on Astronomy, Geology, and Natural Philosophy, to Phil. Trans., 1781, '84; Trans. Linn. Soc., 1802; Archæol., 1782, '90, '92; Nic. Jour., 1804; Phil. Mag., 1814, '15. In 1819, in 6 Nos., imp. 8vo, appeared the Englefield Vases, and in the same year, in 6 Nos., was pub. The Life of Sir H. C. Englefield, by Sotheby.

Engles, Wm. M., D.D., of Philadelphia. Rills from the Fountain of Wisdom; or the Book of Proverbs arranged and illustrated, Phila., 12mo. The idea is excellent, and its execution has been highly commended. No one should be without this little volume.

English, E. H. Reports of Cases in Sup. Ct. of Law and Eq. in Arkansas, Little Rock, 1846, 8vo.

English, George B., d. 1828, aged 39, was the son of Thomas English, of Boston, Mass., and graduated at Harvard Coll. in 1807. 1. Grounds of Christianity Examined, 1813, 12mo. This was answered by Edward Everett, of Massachusetts, in 1814, and also by Samuel Cary in 1813. Mr. Everett's answer forms a vol. of about 500 pages. He was between 20 and 21 years of age at the time of its publication. 2. Letter to Mr. Cary on his Review of the Grounds of Christianity Examined. 3. Letter to Dr. Channing on his 2 serms. of Infidelity, 1813. 4. Expedition to Dongola and Sennar, 1823, 8vo. 5. Five Smooth Stones out of the Brook. This was intended as an answer to Edward Everett's unanswerable response to English's Grounds of Christianity Examined.

Mr. Everett convicts English of the most flagrant dishonesty in his assertions, and bare-faced plagiarism, to a degree almost unprecedented. This reckless blasphemer of "a doctrine which once he preached," transfers by wholesale to his malignant pages the sophistries and quibbles, the absurdities and the blunders, of Evanson, Collins, Toland, and other such worthies, and appropriates without scruple the reflections of Semler, Priestley, Rabbi Isaac, and Orobio. Mr. Everett shows that thus ninety-four pages are borrowed from other writers, of which number Mr. English gives credit to the owners for twenty-four pages only. The work of Mr. Everett would do honour to any critic, however far advanced in years or experienced in polemics; but as the composition of a mere youth, it is one of the most remarkable productions of the human mind. The following extracts are commended to the class of writers especially concerned:

"Justly, most justly, does Dr. Leland observe, that 'It would be hard to produce any persons whatever, who are chargeable with more unkind and fraudulent management in their quotations, in curtailings, adding to, and altering, the passages they cite, or taking them out of their connexion, and making them speak directly contrary to the sentiments of their authors, than the Deistical Writers.'—Everett's Defence of Christianity, 108.

Again:
"It is a peculiarity of the skeptical writers, that they delight to dwell on indelicate and indecent themes. The reader will see some traces of this in Mr. English's work. . . . Porson, in the preface to his unanswerable letters to Travis, justly censures Gibbon for this vulgar vice, and there needs no confirmation to the remark at the beginning of this note to one who has read the works of Woolston, of Manderville, or Voltaira."—Ibid. 441, note.

English was a roving character, and served under the Pasha of Egypt. He is said to have embraced Islamism, but this story we believe to be untrue. At one time of his life he was a member of the community at New Harmony. Shortly after leaving college he studied theology, and was licensed to preach as a candidate for the ministry, by the "Boston Association of Clergymen."

English, H. S. Laws respecting Pews or Seats in Churches, Lon., 1826, 8vo.

English, J. Obs. on Sheridan's Dissert. on the English Tongue; difficulties in pronunciation, &c., Lon., 1762, 8vo.

English, J. Serm., 1776, 8vo.

English, John. The Grey Spirit of the Friar, and the Black Spirit of the Wye; a Romance, 1810, 2 vols. 12mo.

English, John George. Arithmetic, &c., 1795, 12mo.

English, Michael. Assize on Bread, 1491.

English, Peter. The Survey of Policy; or a Vindict. of the Commonwealth agst. Salmasius and other Royalists, Lon., 1653, 4to.

English, Rev. Robert. The Naval Review; a Poem, Lon., 1773, 4to; 1774, 4to. Elegy, 1777, 4to.

English, Thomas. Serm., 1734, 4to.

English, Thomas Dunn, of Philadelphia, has acquired considerable reputation as a contributor of prose and poetical articles to the periodicals of the day.

"Mr. English is best known as an original, forcible, and sometimes humorous, writer of prose." See Griswold's Poets and Poetry of America.

Enoch, Richard. Serm., 1707, 4to.

Emos, James Lysander, b. 1825, in the State of New York. Intellectual and Practical Arithmetic. Revised ed., N. York, 1854, 18mo.

Ensor, George. 1. Principles of Morality, 1801, 8vo. 2. The Independent Man, 1806, 8vo. 3. National Government, 1810, 2 vols. 8vo. 4. National Education, 1811, 8vo. 5. Defects of the English Laws and Tribunals, 1812, 8vo.

"A rambling, desultory, fault-finding, ill-digested volume, in which the author finds little to praise and much to blame."—Marvin's Leg. Bibl.

6. Present State of Ireland, 1814, 8vo. 7. State of Europe in Jan. 1816, 1816, 8vo.

Ent, Sir George, 1604-1689, an eminent physician, was a native of Sandwich, Kent, and educated at Sidney Sussex Coll., Camb. 1. Amicorum Applausus cum Patavi M.D. creator, Pat., 1636. 2. Apologia pro Circulatione Sanguinis contra Emiliium Parisanum, Lon., 1641, '85, 8vo. In defence of Harvey. 3. Animadversiones in Malachias Thruston M.D., diatribam de respirationis usu primario, 1679, '84, '85, 8vo. Whole Works, Leyden, 1687, 8vo. He is said to have trans. the whole of Harvey's Exercitationes de Generatione Animalium into Latin. Con. to Phil. Trans., 1678, '91.

Entick, or Entinck, John, 1713-1773. Speculum Latinum, Lon., 1728, 8vo. New Naval History, 1758, fol. General History of the Late War, by Entinck and others, 1763, 5 vols. 8vo. Relates principally to the war in America. See Lon. Monthly Review. Survey and History of London, &c., 1766, 4 vols. 8vo. Not much valued. New Latin and English Dictionary, 1771, 12mo. Many eds., 1786, by W. Crackelt. This dictionary has been republished within the last few years. Present State of the British Empire, 1774, 4 vols. 8vo. New Spelling Dictionary, 1764, 12mo. By Crackelt, 1784, 12mo; 1788, 4to; 1795, 12mo. New ed., 1850, sq. Other works. He was engaged in some theolog. and some political publications.

Entwistle, Edmund, D.D. Serm., 1697, 4to.

Enty, John, a dissenting minister of Exeter. Serms., 1707, '16, '20, '25, '37. Other publications.

Equinox, Thomas. More Conversation, or Ecclesiastical Synaptism, Lon., 1807, 8vo.

Erbery, Wm. Pub. many theolog. treatises, 1627-54, which seem to have been forgotten. See a list in Watt's Bibl. Brit.

Erdeswicke, Sampson, d. 1603, was an antiquary of Sandon, in Staffordshire. A Short View of Staffordshire, Lon., 1717, 8vo. Again by Sir Simon Degge in 1723. But Lowndes speaks of both the above as one edition. (?) The View is now incorporated in Shaw's Hist. of Staffordshire. Erdeswicke's View is said to be inaccurate, notwithstanding the commendation of Wood, who tells us that it "Was begun about the year 1693, and continued by him to his death, from ancient evidences and records, with brevity, clearness, and truth."

Erdeswicke is supposed to have written The True State of Armory, pub. under the name of William Wyreley, 1692, 4to, but this is very doubtful.

Erichsen, John, Prof. of Surgery in University Coll., London. The Science and Art of Surgery, Lon., 1853, p. 8vo. Amer. ed., with Notes and Additions, by J. H. Brington, M.D., Phila., 1854, 8vo; nearly 900 pages.

"The volume before us gives a very admirable practical view of the science and art of surgery of the present day."—Edin. Med. and Surg. Jour.

"Decidedly the best treatise on the subject since the days of Benjamin Bell."—Proc. S. D. Assoc. May 17, 1854.

Erigena, Johannes Scotus, a celebrated philosopher, a native of Ireland, long resident at the court of Charles the Bald, King of France, is supposed to have died about 877, but of this date, as of the incidents of his life, there appears to be much doubt. The curious reader can refer to the authorities cited below. Of his writings a catalogue will be found in Cave and others. Bale has added to the number, but it is thought without sufficient evidence. The following have been printed: 1. De Divisione Naturæ, Oxon., by Gale, 1681, fol.

"His book entitled The Division of Nature is of great use in solving many intricate and perplexing questions, if we can forgive him for deviating from the path of the Latin philosophers and divines, and pursuing that of the Greeks. It was this that made him appear a heretic to many; and it must be confessed that there are many things in it which, at first sight at least, seem to be contrary to the Catholic faith."—Hovenden.

2. De Prædestinatione Dei, contra Goteschalcum, edited by Gibb. Maguin in his Vindiciæ Prædestinationis et Gratia, vol. i. p. 103. This work was violently attacked by Prudentius and Florus. 3. Excerpta de Differentiis et Societatibus Græci Latineque Verbi, in Macrobius's works. 4. De Corpore et Sanguine Domini, 1558, '60, 1653; Lon., 1686, 8vo. It is supposed that the treatise really written by Erigena is lost, and that the published one is not the genuine tract. It is certain that Erigena denied the doctrine of transubstantiation. It was intended as an answer to Paschasius Radbertus. Erigena's treatise was condemned to be burned at Rome in 1059. It was on this account that his name was stricken from the roll of saints by Baronius. 5. Ambigua S. Maximi, seu Scholia ejus in difficiles Locoos S. Gregorii Nasianseni, Latine versa, with the Divisio Naturæ, Oxford, 1681, fol. 6. Opera S. Dionysii quatuor in Latinam Linguam conversa, in the edition of Dionysius, Colon., 1536. Many of his MSS. are still in existence. He trans. from the Latin, at the request of King Charles, four works attributed to Dionysius the Areopagite. This trans. (see conclusion of this article) involved Erigena in difficulty, and elicited an indignant letter from Pope Nicholas I. to the King of France. It is supposed that this led to Erigena's withdrawal from France, but this is greatly doubted. See Biog. Brit.; Mackenzie's Scotch Writers; Wood's Annals, and Colleges and Halls; Henry's Hist. of G. Brit.; Cave; Fabric. Bibl. Lat. Med.; Brucker; Saxii Onomast.; Hist. Lit. de Fr., v., pp. 428, 429; Chalmers's Biog. Diet.; Wright's Biog. Brit. Lit.

"He was a skillful logician and controversialist, and had imbibed, by the perusal of some of the Greek Fathers, a considerable taint of the Platonism of the School of Alexandria. He thus became one of the founders of the philosophic school of the Realists, who attracted so much attention in the eleventh and twelfth centuries."—Wright, ubi supra.

"Anastasius had so high an opinion of Erigena, that he ascribed his translation of the works of Dionysius to the especial influence of the spirit of God."—Dr. Kirpis, in Biog. Brit.

But his opponents complained of the trans. as "too literal, and therefore often unintelligible, or liable to be misunderstood; and they represented it as ridiculous that a barbarian from the extreme edge of the world should understand Greek."

The reader will find some specimens of the compositions of Erigena in Usher's Veterum Epistolæ Hibernicarum Sylloge, Dubl., 1632, 4to.

Ernst, Rev. Dr. Lutheran Pastor, Lebanon, Pa. Sermon on the Death of Washington.

Ernulp, or Earnulp, b. about 1040; d. 1124, a native of Beauvais, and pupil of Lanfranc, was made Abbot of Peterborough in 1107, and in 1114 was promoted to the bishopric of Rochester. He collected the early charters, &c. of his see into a volume, which is still extant, and known as the Textus Roffensis. In addition to the charters of the church, it contains many of the Anglo-Saxon and early Anglo-Norman laws, and a number of other documents. It has been largely drawn from by the compilers of early British laws. A portion of its contents will be found in Wharton's Anglia Sacra, 1691, fol., pp. 329-34; and the whole was printed by Hearne, Oxon., 1720, 8vo. Two Epistles of Ernulp's will be found in D'Achery's Spicilegium, tomus iii., Parisiis, 1723, fol., pp. 464-71.

Erratt, Thomas. Con. to Mem. Med., 1799.

Erskine, Hon. Andrew, 1739-1793, third son of the 5th Earl of Kellie. Letters between him and James Boswell, Esq., Lon., 1763, 8vo. Town Elogues, Lon., 1773, 4to.

"A good poet and a good critic."—Boswell, in Life of Johnson.

Erskine, Charles. The Institutes of Medicinal Pathology, from the Latin of H. D. Gaubius, Edin., 1775, 8vo. The Syphilitic Physician, 1808, 12mo.

Erskine, David, Lord Dun, 1670–1755, an eminent Scottish lawyer, became lord of session in 1711, a commissioner in the court of justiciary, 1713–50. Lord Dun's Advices, 1752, 12mo, several eds. A work of great merit.

Erskine, David Stewart. See BUCHAN, EARL OF.

Erskine, Ebenezer, 1680–1754, a grandson of Ralph Erskine, noted for having thirty-three children, was born in the Prison of the Bass, where his father and mother were confined during a season of religious persecution in Scotland against the Presbyterians. Ebenezer was educated at the Univ. of Edinburgh; minister of Portmah, Kinross, 1703; of Stirling, 1731. In April, 1732, he was chosen moderator of the synod of Perth and Stirling, and in his opening sermon he censured some late proceedings of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland respecting patronage. These strictures occasioned a controversy which resulted in a schism, and Mr. Erskine's party became known as the Seceders. For an account of this body we must refer the reader to Brown's Account of the Secession, 8th ed., 1802, 12mo; to Mackenzie's History of the Secession Church, new ed., Edin., 1841, 8vo; and see article SECEDERS in Encyc. Brit., 7th ed. The character of Ebenezer Erskine was most exemplary, and his sermons greatly admired. Discourses on Ps. ii. 6, Edin., 1739, 12mo. Serms., 1755, 8vo. Discourses, 1757, 3 vols. 12mo. Serms., Glasg., 1762, 4 vols. 8vo; vol. 5th, Edin., 1765. Whole Works, 1798, 3 vols. 8vo; Lon., 1799, 3 vols. 8vo; Edin., 1810, 3 vols. 8vo. By the Rev. D. Fraser, with a Memoir, Lon., 1826, 2 vols. 8vo. The Life and Diary were pub. separately in 1831, 12mo. Serms., abridged by Fenton, 1826, 2 vols. in 1, 12mo. 31 Serms., abridged by Fisher, 1827, 2 vols. in 1, 12mo. 18 Serms., abridged, 1829, 12mo. Beauties of E. Erskine, &c., by the Rev. S. McMillan, 8vo. Serms. of Ralph and Ebenezer Erskine, selected, with a Preface, by the Rev. Thomas Bradbury, 1738, 3 vols.; 1757, 3 vols. 8vo. Select Writings of Ebenezer Erskine, edited by the Rev. D. Smith, Edin., 1848, 8vo.

"Were I to read in order to refine my taste or improve my style, I would prefer Bp. Atterbury's Sermons, Dr. Bate's Works, or Mr. Seed's Discourses: but were I to read with a single view to the edification of my heart in true faith, solid comfort, and evangelical holiness, I would have recourse to Mr. Erskine, and take his volumes for my guide, my companion, and my own familiar friend."—Hervey's Theron and Asopia.

"The works of Ralph and Ebenezer Erskine are highly evangelical; the productions of minds very strongly attached to truth, devotional and zealous."—Williams's C. P.

"The two Erskines Cecil calls the best Scotch divines, but speaks of them as dry and laboured. He did not at the moment recollect Leighton, Rutherford, MacLaurin, &c."—Bickersteth's C. S.

Erskine, Hon. Mrs. Esme Stewart. Isabel: a Tale, in two Cantos; and other Poems, Lon., 1814, cr. 8vo.

Erskine, George. Serm., 1710, 4to; do., 1710, 4to.

Erskine, H. T. The New Statute for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors, 5 & 6 Vict., c. 116, &c., Lon., 1842, 12mo.

Erskine, Henry, 1624–1696, a Scotch divine, father of Ebenezer Erskine, left some Latin MSS. elucidating difficult passages of the Holy Scriptures. They have never been pub.

Erskine, Hon. Henry, 1746–1817, Lord Advocate of Scotland, brother of Lord High Chancellor Erskine, was the son of Henry David, 10th Earl of Buchan. Expediency of Reform in the Court of Session in Scotland, Lon., 1807, 8vo. See Lon. Monthly Review, liii. 442. See a biography of Mr. Erskine in Chambers's Lives of Illus. and Dist. Scotsmen, ii. 237.

Erskine, John, Baron of Dun, 1508?–1591, an eminent Scotch Reformer, assisted in 1577 in the compilation of the Second Book of Discipline, or model for the government of a Presbyterian Church. See Scot's Lives of the Reformers; McCrie's Life of Knox; Cook's Hist. of the Reformation in Scotland.

Erskine, John, 1695–1768, Prof. of Scottish Law in the Univ. of Edinburgh. The Principles of the Law of Scotland, Edin., 1754, '57, '64, 8vo. With Notes and Correc. by Gillon, 1809, 8vo. New ed. by J. S. Moore, Edin., 1827, 8vo. Institutes of the Laws of Scotland, 1773, fol.; 2d ed., enlarged, 1773, fol.; 3d ed., 1785, fol.; 4th ed., 1804, fol. With Notes by Gillon, 1805, fol. With Notes by James Ivory, 1824–28, 2 vols. fol. New ed. by A. MacAllan, 1838, 2 vols. r. 8vo. and r. 4to.

"A standard work, characterized by conciseness and perspicuity."—Warren's Law Studies, 388.

Both of the above works are on the plan of Sir George Mackenzie's Institutions of the Law of Scotland.

Erskine, John, D.D., 1721–1803, educated at the Univ. of Edinburgh; minister of Kirkintilloch, 1744; of Culross, 1754; of New Grey-Friars' Church, Edinburgh, 1758; colleague with Dr. Robertson in the Old Grey-Friars' Church, 1759. Dr. Erskine pub. a number of serms. and theolog. dissertations, 1750–1802. A collection of his Discourses was pub. at Edin., 1818, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Very scriptural, and full of excellent matter."—Williams's C. P. Theological Dissertations, 1765, 12mo. Sketches and Hints of Church History and Theolog. Controversy, 1790–97, 2 vols. 12mo; 2d ed., 1818, 2 vols. 12mo.

"Whether the reader shall agree or disagree with Dr. Erskine in all the views of Scripture truth which the Theological Dissertations contain, it is impossible but he must admire the shrewd sense which they display, and their familiar and extensive acquaintance with the Bible. . . . The Sketches of Church History discover the author's extensive acquaintance with the modern Dutch and German writers, and furnish many curious extracts from books that are little known in this country."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"Much scarce information. . . . An account of Foreign Works, and translations of extracts from them, on the plan of Erskine's Sketches of Church History, would be interesting and useful."—Bickersteth's C. S.

See An Account of the Life and Writings of John Erskine, D.D., by Sir Henry Moncreiff Wellwood, Bart., M.D., Edin., 1818, 8vo. A list of his works and publications, edited by him, will be found in Chambers's Lives of Illus. and Dist. Scotsmen, ii. 262–4.

Erskine, John Francis. General View of the Agriculture of the County of Clackmannan, &c., Edin., 1794, 4to.

"This work had much reputation, being the offspring of an educated mind, and very large information and experience."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Erskine, Ralph, 1685–1752, brother of Ebenezer Erskine, was a native of Monikwa, Northumberland; educated at the Univ. of Edinburgh; minister at Dunfermline, 1711; joined the Seceders, 1734. He pub. a number of Serms., Theolog. Treatises, Scripture Songs, Gospel Songs, &c., 1738–52, and several of his works were pub. after his death. We have already referred to Bradbury's ed. of the Serms. of Ralph and Ebenezer Erskine. Works, Glasg., 1764–66, 2 vols. fol.; 1777, 10 vols. 8vo; Lon., 1821, 10 vols. 8vo. Gospel Sonnets, new ed., 1844, 24mo. For opinions upon his Works see ERSKINE, EBENEZER.

An enthusiastic admirer thus celebrates the merits of our excellent author:

"Erskine! whose pen spread far abroad
Redeeming love, the sole device of God.
Substantial themes his thoughts did much pursue;
Kept pure the truth, espoused but by a few.
Integrity of heart, of soul serene;
No flound to vice, no cloak to the profane;
Employ'd his talents to reclaim the vain."

See Life prefixed to his Works.

Erskine, Robert. Tractrel. to J. Crookshanks, Lon., 1759, 8vo. Rivers and Tides, 1770, '81, 8vo.

Erskine, Thomas, Lord Baron Erskine, of Restormel Castle, co. Cornwall, 1750–1823, was the third son of Henry, David Erskine, 10th Earl of Buchan in Scotland. He was educated at the High School of Edinburgh, and the University of St. Andrew's, and subsequently, in 1777, entered as a Fellow of Trin. Coll., Camb. At the age of 14 he entered the Royal Navy, where he served for four years; and in 1768 became attached to the army, as an ensign in the Royals, or First Regiment of Foot. He remained in the army for eight years. Determined to adopt the profession of the law, in 1777 he inserted his name as a student in the book of Lincoln's Inn, and in 1778—saving two years of probation in consequence of his academical degree, to which he was entitled from his University as the son of a nobleman—he was called to the bar. His defence of Captain Baillie at once established his fame, and henceforth he reaped laurels in profusion. In 1806 he was made Lord High Chancellor, and in 1815 received the Order of the Thistle. His professional life does not properly come under our consideration in this volume. The reader is referred to Boswell's Johnson; Chambers's Lives of Illus. and Dist. Scotsmen; Stanton's Reforms and Reformers of Great Britain; The Georgian Era; Encyc. Brit.; Edin. Rev., vols. xvi. and xix.; Gent. Mag., xciii. 553; Goodrich's Select Brit. Eloquence. His lordship amused his intervals of leisure by the composition of Armata, a Fragment; a political romance, Lon., 1817, 2 vols. 8vo; pub. anon.; and wrote some pamphlets in favour of the Greeks. His burlesque parody of Gray's Bard is well known. His View of the Causes and Consequences of the Present War with France, pub. in 1797, was so popular that 48 editions were called for in a few months. A letter in answer to it, by John Gifford, also had a very large sale, and was frequently republished.

"Seeing also, as every reader must here see, facts opposed to declamation, and proofs to bare assertion, we cannot conceive ourselves biased by any kind of prejudice, when we pronounce that this publication contains a complete and solid answer to Mr. Erskine."—British Critic, April, 1797.

A list of his separate publications—speeches, &c.—will be found in Watt's Bibl. Brit. There have been several collective edita. of his speeches. Speeches, 1846, r. 8vo. Speeches, with Memoir by Lord Brougham. 1845, '47, 4 vols. 8vo.

"We take the opinion of the country and of every part of the world where the language is understood, to be that of the most unbounded admiration of these exquisite specimens of Judicial Oratory, and of a great obligation to the Editor of the collection."—Edin. Review, vol. xix.

"At the bar Erskine shone with peculiar lustre. There the resources of his mind were made apparent by instantaneous bursts of eloquence, combining logic, rhetorical skill, and legal precision, while he triumphed over the passions and prejudices of his hearers and moulded them to his will."

"As an advocate in the forum I hold him to be without an equal in ancient or modern times."—LORD CAMPBELL.

Erskine, Thomas, of Linlithgow, a member of the Scottish Bar. 1. Remarks on the Internal Evidence for the Truth of Revealed Religion, 3d ed., Edin., 1821, 12mo.

"The argument from the internal evidence of religion, in support of its truth and suitableness, is very powerfully supported, though the author uses the phrase natural religion rather ambiguously."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

2. An Essay on Faith, 3d ed., 1823, 12mo. An ed., 1829, 2 vols. 12mo.

"Written in an easier style of argument, and contains more of scriptural statement and explanation. Both works are much fitted to be useful."—Ubi supra.

The British Critic highly praises both of these productions. 3. The Unconditional Freeness of the Gospel; in three Essays, 2d ed., 1823, 12mo. This work excited an animated controversy. See an account of "The Gairloch or Row Heresy" in the Eclectic Review for July, 1830. 4. The Brazen Serpent; or Life coming through Death, 2d ed., 1831, 12mo. 5. The Doctrine of Election illustrated, Lon., 1837, 12mo. This useful layman was profoundly versed in Greek and Biblical literature. See Orme's Bibl. Bib., 174-75.

Erwicke, John. Benefits of the observation of Fish Days, Lon., 1642, 4to.

Escherny, D. D. The Distemper, Lon., 1756, 8vo. Probably the same as DAVID DESCHERNY, M.D., q. v.

Esdaille, James, M.D. 1. Christian Theology, Lon., 8vo. 2. Mesmerism in India; and its Practical Application in Surgery and Medicine, sp. 8vo.

"From eight months' mesmeric treatment in a country charity-hospital in Bengal, Dr. Esdaille attests its efficacy in rendering surgical operations painless, and aiding medical applications in every form."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

3. Letters from the Red Sea, Egypt, and the Continent, Calcutta, 1839, 8vo. 4. Natural and Mesmeric Clairvoyance, 1852, 12mo.

Esling, Catherine H. W., formerly Miss Waterman, was born in Philadelphia in 1812. In 1840 she was married to Mr. Esling of Philadelphia. As a contributor to the periodicals of the day Miss Waterman obtained great and deserved celebrity. In 1850 Mrs. Esling pub. The Broken Bracelet and other Poems, Phila., 12mo.

"Her poems are the expressions of a true woman's soul: she excels in portraying feeling, and in expressing the warm and tender emotions of one to whom home has ever been the lodestar of the soul. In pathos and delicacy she has few equals."—Mrs. Hale's Woman's Record.

Espagne, John d', a French Protestant divine, minister of the French Church in London temp. James I. and Charles I., pub. several theolog. treatises, 1640-57, the best known of which is Popular Errors in the knowledge of Religion, Lon., 1648, 8vo.

Espinasse, Isaac, of Gray's Inn. 1. Law of Actions and Trials at Nisi Prius, Lon., 1789, 2 vols. 8vo; 4th ed., 1812, 2 vols. 8vo; Phila., 1791; N. York, 1811, 2 vols. 8vo; 1822, 2 vols. 8vo. 2. Reports of Cases at Nisi Prius, Lon., 1793-1811, 6 vols. r. 8vo; Hartford, with Notes by Thomas Day, 1808, 6 vols. 8vo; 1825. 3. Law of Actions on Penal Statutes, Lon., 1813, r. 8vo; 1818, '24; N. York, 1822, 8vo. 4. Laws of Actions on Statutes, remedial, penal, &c., Lon., 1824, r. 8vo. 5. Evidence for Trials at Nisi Prius, 2d ed., 1825, 8vo; Phila., 1822, 8vo. 6. Peel's Acts, &c., Lon., 1827, 8vo. 7. Cases of the County of Dublin, 1827, 8vo.

Espinasse, James. Law of Bankrupts as altered by 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, Lon., 1825, r. 8vo.

Espy, James P., b. 1785, in Washington co., Penna. The Philosophy of Storms, Boston, 1841, 8vo. Mr. Espy investigates the theories of Col. Reid, Dr. Piddington, &c.

"As a connected chain of cause and effect in the production of storms and other similar meteors, Mr. Espy's theory is the most complete that has hitherto been brought forward, and it may become the one adopted to explain a vast mass of meteorological phenomena."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

"Mr. Espy's communication contains a great number of well-observed and well-described facts. His theory, in the present state of science, alone accounts for the phenomena; and, when completed, as Mr. Espy intends, by the study of the action of electricity when it intervenes, will have nothing to be desired. In a word, for physical geography, agriculture, navigation, and meteorology, it gives us new explanations, indications useful for ulterior researches, and redresses many accredited errors."—Conclusion of the Report of the Academy of Sciences (Paris) on the labours of J. P. Espy, concerning Tornados, &c. Committee, Messieurs Arago, Pouillet, Babinet Reporter.

Essex, Arthur Capel, Earl of. See CAPEL.

Essex, James, 1723-1784, an eminent English architect, a native of Cambridge, pub. some papers in the Archæol. and Bibl. Top. Brit., and two Letters, Camb., 1749, 8vo; Lon., 1787, 4to. See Nichols's Literary Anecdotes.

Essex, John. 1. Country Dances, Lon., 1710, 8vo. 2. The Young Ladies' Conduct, 1722, 8vo.

Essex, Robert Devereux, Earl of. See DEVEREUX.

Essex, Walter Devereux, Earl of. See DEVEREUX.

Est, Wm. Serms., Lon., 1611, '14, 8vo. Lect. on St. James, 1616, 8vo. Pirckheimer's Laus Podagrie trans. into English, 1617, 4to.

Estcourt, Richard, 1668-1713, a native of Tewkesbury, acquired considerable reputation as a comic actor, and is frequently mentioned in the Tadler and Spectator.

1. Fair Example; a Comedy, 1706, 4to. 2. Fruella; an Interlude, 4to.

Este, Rev. Charles, 1753-1829, abandoned the stage for the study of medicine, and the latter for divinity.

1. Tracts on Medical Subjects, Lon., 1776, 8vo. 2. My own Life, 1787, 8vo. 3. A Journey in 1793 through Flanders, Brabant, and Germany, to Switzerland, 1795, 8vo. He was joint editor and proprietor of the periodical called The World.

Este, John. Bookes of Madrigals, Anthems, &c., 1604, '10, '18, '24, '38.

Este, M. L. 1. Royal Institution, &c., Lon., 1810, 8vo. 2. Contagious Diseases, Baths, Swimming, &c., 1812, 8vo.

Este, Michael. Madrigals, Lon., 1604, &c.

Estatey, George. Certaine godly and learned Expositions upon divers parts of Scripture, Lon., 1603, 4to.

Estlin, John Prior, LL.D., a Unitarian preacher. Evidences of Revealed Religion. Serms., Discourses, &c., 1791-1815.

"His sermons were much and justly admired for the classical purity and elegance of their style; he treated his subjects with perspicuity, and adorned argument with all the attractions of genuine pathos."—Vide Lib.

Eston, John. The Falling Stars; or the Dragon's bringing down and trampling upon Heavenly Glory, Lon., 1653.

Estrange, L'. See L'ESTRANGE.

Estwick, Nicholas. Serms., &c., Lon., 1633-56.

Estwick, Samuel, LL.D. 1. Sermon, Lon., 1696, 4to. 2. Negro Cause, 1772, 8vo. 3. Letter to Dean Tucker rel. to the war with America, 1776, 8vo.

"Mr. Estwick is an acute reasoner and an entertaining writer; and a warm and zealous advocate for the Americans."—Rich's Bibl. Amer. Novæ.

Ethelred. See AILRED OF RIEVAUX.

Ethelston, Rev. Charles W. Ode, 1803, 4to. The Suicide; with other Poems, 1804, 8vo. Address on Schools, 1812, 4to.

Ethelward, who was alive in 1090, is known by a history of the Anglo-Saxons, in four books, ending with the reign of King Edgar. (See Rerum Anglicanum Scriptores post Bedam præcipui, (edited by Savile), fol., Francf., 1601, pp. 831-850. Chronicon Ethelwerdi Libri Quatuor. Ethelward's work is of little value:

"The whole is a translation of a very false and imperfect copy of the Saxon Chronicle; and therefore William of Malmesbury has modestly, out of defence to his family, (the author tells us that he was descended from Ethelred, the brother of King Alfred,) declined the giving a character of this writer's performance. If he had done it truly, he ought to have told us that his style is tolerable, and that several parts of his history are not so much as hardly sense."—Ep. Nicolson's Eng. Hist. Lib., xl.

Ethelwold, supposed to have been born about 925, d. 984, a native of Winchester, was called by his contemporaries the Father of Monks. In 963 he was consecrated Bishop of Winchester. He is best known as a writer by his trans. into Anglo-Saxon of the Rule of Monastic Life, drawn up in Latin by St. Benedict. See Wright's Biog. Brit. Lit., and authorities there cited.

Ethelwolf, b. before 770, was an inmate of a small monastery dependent on the larger one of Lindisfarne.

He wrote a metrical history of the abbots and other eminent persons of his monastery to the time of Egbert, Bishop of Lindisfarne, 802-819.

"The only English writer of the beginning of the ninth century whom we can trace with any degree of certainty, is an Anglo-Latin poet named Ethelwulf, of whom we have no further information than that which is contained in the only one of his poems now extant. . . . This poem is valuable chiefly as a document of history; but, though it has little merit, it is interesting as the only specimen we have of the Anglo-Latin poetry of that period."—Wright's Bing. Brit. Lit., q. v.

Etherege, Sir George, born about 1636, supposed to have died about 1690, is said to have studied for some time at the University of Cambridge. Whilst yet young he travelled on the continent, and on his return devoted some time to legal pursuits. But, like Tom D'Urfey, whom in many points he greatly resembled, he soon forsook the Law for the Drama. In 1664 he produced his comedy of The Comical Revenge; or, Love in a Tub, 1664, '68, '69, '71, '89, '90, '93, 4to. This piece was successful, and introduced him into the society of a set of dissolute idlers who then disgraced English society—the Earl of Dorset, the Duke of Buckingham, Lord Rochester, Sir Charles Sedley, &c. He next brought out the comedy of She Would if She Could, 1668, '71, '89, '90, '93, 4to. This was succeeded by his best-known piece, the comedy of The Man of Mode; or, Sir Fopling Flutter, 1676, 4to; 1715, 8vo.

"It is perhaps the most elegant comedy, and contains more of the real manners of high life than any one the English stage was ever adorned with."—Biog. Dramat.

"Sir George Etherege was as thorough a fop as ever I saw; he was exactly his own Sir Fopling Flutter. And yet he designed Dorimant, the gentle rake of wit, for his own picture."—L. See Spence's Anecdotes.

In 1722, 8vo, appeared a Defence of the Comedy of Sir Fopling Flutter. He pub. a short prose piece entitled An Account of the Rejoicing at the Diet of Ratisbonne, performed by Sir George Etherege, Knight, &c., Savoy, 1688. Works, containing his Plays and Poems, Lon., 1704, 8vo. Sir George was resident minister at Ratisbonne, and it is said that after a gay evening party given by him in that city, he fell down stairs and broke his neck while taking leave of his guests. Gibbon, indeed, asserts that he returned to England after the Revolution, and died there. The accounts also differ as regards the manner in which he came to be knighted; but these are matters of small moment. He seems to have been equally devoid of principle and careless of propriety, without any just sense of religion or morality, and one of those abandoned writers who, by public proclamation of their licentiousness and indecency, may be truly said to "glory in their shame."

Even the Biog. Dramat.—by no means a rigid critic—acknowledges that "His works have not escaped censure, on account of their licentiousness which in the general runs through them, which renders them dangerous to young, unguarded minds; and the more so for the lively and genuine wit with which it is glided over, and which has therefore justly banished them from the purity of the present stage."—Vol. I., Part 1, 223.

Would that of such troubles to society we had seen the last!

Etherington, Rev. George. General Cautions in the Cure of Fevers, Lon., 1760, 8vo. This is a compilation from the writings of Dr. Huxham and other eminent physicians.

"Such a compilation, however judicious, can avail but little in supplying the want of a regular medical education."—Lon. Monthly Rev., xxiii. 281, 1760.

Etherington, George F., M.D. 1. Essays, Medical and Scientific, Lon., 1841, 12mo. 2. Vivisection Vindicated, 1842, 8vo.

"Dr. Etherington, by the labour he has bestowed, the keen observation, and calm, critical judgment, has evidently proved himself a man of talent." &c.—Nottingham Review.

Etherington, Thomas. Fast Sermon, 1808, 8vo.

Ethryg, or Etheridge, or, in Latin, Edrycus, admitted of Corpus Christi Coll., Oxf., 1534, was made Probationer Fellow in 1539, and Regius Prof. of Greek in 1553. Acta Henrici Octavius Carmine Græco. Eneidis, &c., 1553, 8vo. He trans. the Psalms into Hebrew verse, trans. the works of Justin Martyr into Latin, and pub. a vol. of Commentaries on Paulus Æginete, 1588, 8vo. He was a zealous Roman Catholic, and had under his charge a number of youth of his own persuasion.

"Esteemed a noted mathematician, well skilled in vocal and instrumental music, an eminent Hebrist, Grecian, and poet, and, above all, an excellent physician. . . . John Leland, who was his familiar friend, did celebrate his memory by verse while he lived, and told him thus:

'Scripisti, juvenis, multa cum laude libellos,
Qui regi extimè perplacuerunt meo.'—Athen. Osm.

Eton, Wm., long a resident in Turkey and Russia.

1. A Survey of the Turkish Empire, Lon., 1798, '99, 1801, '09, 8vo.

"A work remarkable for nothing but the enthusiasm with which the author maintains the necessity of bringing about the restoration of the Greeks."—Loveland's Bibl. Man.

2. Materials for Hist. of People of Malta, pub. in Noa., 1802-07, 8vo. 3. Commerce and Navigation of the Black Sea, 1806, 8vo; anon. 4. Letter on the Political Relations of Russia, 1807, 8vo.

Etough, Henry, Rector of Therfield, Hertfordshire. Letter to the Author of Christianity not founded on Argument, Lon., 1742, 8vo., pp. 43.

Ettrick, Henry. Surg. con. to Phil. Trans., 1740.

Ettrick, Rev. W. 1. The Second Exodus, Lon., 1810, 2 vols. 8vo; 1811-12, 3 vols. 8vo; 1815, 3 vols. 8vo. 2. The Season and Time, 1816, 8vo. These works relate to Scriptural prophecy.

Euderbic. See ENDERBIE, PERCY.

Euer, or Ever, Sampson, King's Attorney in the Marches of Wales, and King's Serjeant. Doctrina Placitandi, ou l'art et science de Bon Pleading, Lon., 1677, 4to; Dubl., 1791, 8vo.

"The good sense and sound logic of modern times has substituted for the artificial pedantry and narrow maxims of the dark ages of the law, rules which commend themselves to all men by their intrinsic propriety and excellence for deciding contested rights. The best ancient treatise on the subject is Mr. Euer's Doctrina Placitandi, a book which Lord Chief Justice Willes pronounced in his time to contain more law and learning than any other book he knew, (2 Wils. R. 88); yet what is this, when compared with the finished elementary and practical treatises of Mr. Lawes or Mr. Chitty? It were indeed desirable that modern pleaders should endeavour to imitate more generally the pointed brevity and precision of Rastall's Entries, and waste fewer words in their drafts of declarations, which

'Like a wounded snake drag their slow length along.'

"It might not be useless for them to consider, that the great aim ought to be, not how much, but how little, may be inserted with professional safety."—JUROR SROAR, in a review of Hoffman's Legal Study, N. Amer. Rev., 645-78, Nov. 1817.

Let every member of the legal profession carefully peruse this valuable paper.

A system of Pleading, including a Trans. of the Doctrina Placitandi, By a Gentleman of the Middle Temple, 1771, 4to.

Eunson, G. The Ancient and Present State of Orkney, and Poems, Newc. upon Tyne, 1788, 12mo.

Eusden, Lawrence, d. 1730, a son of the Rev. Dr. Eusden, Rector of Spotsworth, Yorkshire, after receiving his education at Trin. Coll., Camb., went into orders, and was for some time chaplain to Richard, Lord Willoughby de Broke. He found warm friends in Lord Halifax, whose poem On the Battle of the Boyne he trans. into Latin, and in the Duke of Newcastle, whose marriage to Lady Godolphin he celebrated in an Epithalamium, which raised the author to the laureateship in 1718. He pub. a number of occasional poems, contributed a few pieces to the Spectator and Guardian, and left in MS. a trans. of the works of Tasso, with a life of the poet. Some specimens of his poetical abilities will be found in Nichols's Poems. Of course he did not wear the honours of the laurel without eliciting the enmity of his brother poets. Pope put him in the Dunciad, Oldmixon attacked him in his Art of Logic and Rhetoric, and Cooke thus refers to him in The Battle of the Poets:

"Eusden, a laurel'd bard, by fortune rais'd,
By few been read, by fewer still been prais'd."

We are sorry to learn, from a letter of Gray's to Mason, that Eusden injured his mind by the great enemy of poets—the "generous bottle." The Duke of Buckingham, in his Session of the Poets, implies that the fame of the poet-laureate was rather circumscribed:

"In rushed Eusden, and cried, 'Who shall have it
But I, the true laurest, to whom the king gave it'
Apollo begg'd pardon, and granted his claim.
But wou'd that till then he ne'er had heard his name."

Eustace, Evans. Serms., 1747, 4to.

Eustace, John Chetwode, a R. Catholic divine, travelled in Italy in the capacity of a tutor. He died of a fever at Naples, 1815, whilst making a second tour through Italy. 1. Elegy to Burke, 1797, 4to. 2. Answer to the Charge of the Bp. of Lincoln, 1813, 4to. 3. Classical Tour through Italy, Lon., 1813, 2 vols. 4to; 4th ed., 1815, 4 vols. 8vo; 6th ed., with adds., 1821, 4 vols. 8vo.

"Mr. Eustace's work is very full and minute in the subject which the title indicates. It is written in good taste, but in rather a prolix style; his statements, however, are not always to be depended upon, especially where his political or religious opinions interfere."—Scribner's Voyages and Travels.

"One of the most inaccurate and unsatisfactory writers that have in our times attained a temporary reputation."—SIR JOHN CAM HOBHOUSE.

Yet the tour of Mr. Eustace is well worth perusal, and the reader should then take up A Classical Tour through Italy and Sicily—tending to illustrate some Districts which have not been described by Mr. Eustace in his Classical Tour—by Sir Richard Colt Hoare, Bart., 1819, 2 vols. 4to. An ed. in 3 vols. 8vo.

"It has been a topic of general regret in the literary world, that Mr. Eustace did not live to furnish the Supplementary Volume to his Classical Tour, so as to form a complete work on the present and past state of Italy, for which he was engaged in collecting materials at the period of his premature decease. But what Mr. Eustace did not live to accomplish, Sir Richard Colt Hoare has executed, and in such a manner as, it is hoped, will be at once acceptable to the public, and gratifying to the numerous friends of Mr. Eustace, as a tribute of respect to his genius and of affection to his memory."

4. Letters from Paris to George Petre, Esq.

Eustace, John Skey, d. 1805, aged 45, a military officer during the American Revolution, after the war resided for some time in Georgia, where he received the appointment of Adjutant-General. In 1794 he visited France, and, entering the army, became Major-General. In 1797 he commanded a division of the French Army in Flanders. He returned to America in 1800, and, settling in Orange county, N. York, devoted his attention to literary pursuits until his death in 1805, at Newburgh. Account of his Exile from the Kingdom of Great Britain by order of the Duke of Portland, Lon., 1797, 8vo.

Eustace, Sir Maurice. 1. Letter from rel. to Irish Parliament, Lon., 1642, 4to. 2. Letter from rel. to Ireland, 1642, 4to.

Evance, Daniel. Serms., Lon., 1646; do., 1695, 4to. Ivata Honoraria; or, Funeral Rites in honour of Robert, Earl of Essex, 1646, 4to, in verse.

Evance, Miss S. Poems, 1808, 8vo.

Evander, John. A Voyage round the World; or, A Pocket Library, Lon., 8vo.

Evank, George, incumbent of Ayton Magna, Yorkshire, ejected for Nonconformity, 1662. Serms., 1663, 4to.

Evans, Abel, of St. John's Coll., Oxf., enjoyed great reputation as an epigrammatist. Some of his poems will be found in Nichols's Select Collection. See especially the satire on Tindal, entitled The Apparition, and Vertumnus, an Epistle to Mr. Jacob Bobart, 1713. Evans is mentioned in the Dunciad, and he is classed among the Oxford wits in the following couplet:

"Alma novem genuit celebres Rhedycina poetas;
But Stubb, Cobb, Crabb, Trapp, Young, Carey, Tickell, Evans."

Evans, Rev. Alfred Bowen. Christianity in its Homely Aspects, 1852, 12mo.

Evans, Arise, or Rice, or, according to Wood, John, was a Welsh conjurer and astrologer, of whom many wonderful stories have been related. Watt enumerates nine pieces of his, and Wood refers to some almanacs, &c. See Bibl. Brit., Athen. Oxon., and Nichols's Literary Anecdotes. Bishop Warburton treats Evans as a prophet, and in 1751 (12mo) pub. An Account of the Prophecies of Arise Evans, the Welsh Prophet, in the last century. This publication injured the bishop's literary reputation considerably.

Evans, Arthur B. Serms. on the Christian Life and Character, Lon., 1832, 8vo.

"There is a strength and vigour in his delineations, and an efficaciousness in his arguments, which will bear comparison with the most splendid specimens of our old, sterling, matter-of-fact theologians."—Lon. Chris. Rememb.

Other works.

Evans, C. See EVANS, OLIVER.

Evans, Caleb, D.D., 1737–1791, a Baptist minister, a native of Bristol, England, pub. several serms., &c., and some pieces on the war between Great Britain and the American Colonies. See Watt's Bibl. Brit., and Rich's Bibl. Amer. Nova.

A Letter to the Rev. John Wesley, occasioned by his Calm Address to the American Colonies; new ed., Lon., 1775, 12mo; 1st ed. pub. under the signature of Americanus. A sup. to 1st ed., by another party, was pub. in 1775. A Reply to the Rev. Mr. Fletcher's Vindication of Rev. Mr. Wesley's Calm Address, Bristol, 1776, 12mo.

"Mr. Evans is a lively and sensible advocate for the freedom of the colonies, a spirited controvertist, and a zealous assertor of those liberal and noble principles to which we were indebted for the glorious revolution," &c. See Rich's Bibl. Amer. Nova, 1776, No. 79.

Evans, Charles. Trial of Judge Chase, Balt., 1805, 8vo.

Evans, Christmas. Serms.; a new trans. from the Welsh; and Memoir of, by Rev. Joseph Cross, Phila., 1854, 8vo. Memoirs of, by D. Phillips, N. York. Memoirs of, by D. R. Stephen, Lon., 12mo.

Evans, D. L., Lt.-Col., is the signature appended to Facts relating to the Capture of Washington, &c., Lon., 1829, 8vo.

664

Evans, David. Serms., 1808, 8vo.

Evans, Mrs. E. H. Poems, with a Preface by her brother, the Rev. Thomas H. Stockton, Phila., 1851, 12mo.

Evans, Edmund C., M.D. Trans. from the French, General Notions of Chemistry, by J. Pelouze and E. Fremy, Phila., 1854, 12mo.

Evans, Edward. Sub. of 4 Serms., Oxon., 1615, 4to.

Evans, Evan, 1730–1790, a Welsh divine and poet, was educated at Jesus Coll., Oxf. Dissertatio de Bardis; or, Some Specimens of the Poetry of the Ancient Welsh Bards, trans. into English, with Notes, &c. The Love of Our Country; a Poem, with Hist. Notes, 1772, 4to. Some of his pieces are in the Diddanock Tenluaid. He trans. two vols. of Serms., by Tilloston and others, into Welsh.

Evans, Rev. G. W. D. 1. Classic and Connoisseur in Italy and Sicily, with an abridged trans. of Lanzi's Storia Pittorica, Lon., 1835, 3 vols. 8vo. This work should be added to the classical tours of Eustace and Hoare, (vide ante). 2. Lanzi's Luminaries of Painting, trans. and abridg. from the Italian, 1848, p. 8vo.

Evans, Hugh. Serms., 1773, '81.

Evans, Hugh Davy, LL.D., b. 1792, in Baltimore. 1. Essay on Pleading, Balt., 1827, 8vo. 2. Maryland Common-Law Practice, 1839, 8vo. 3. Essays to Prove the Validity of Anglican Ordinations, 1844, 12mo. 4. Second Series, 1851, 2 vols. 5. Essay on the Episcopate of the Prot. Epis. Church of the U.S. of America, Phila., 1855, 12mo. Ed. of and contrib. to several Epis. journals.

Evans, Israel, d. 1817, aged 59, minister of Concord, N. Hampshire, was a native of Pennsylvania, where his father and grandfather were divines. He graduated at Princeton College, 1772, was ordained, 1776, and served in the Revolutionary War as chaplain; minister at Concord, 1789–97. He pub. three sermons and an oration, 1780, '83, '91, &c.

Evans, J. Conjugation of French Verbs, Lon., 1795, 8vo.

Evans, James Harrington, 1785–1849, Baptist minister of John Street Chapel, London. 1. Dialogues on the Trinity, Lon., 1819, 8vo. Subsequently disapproved of and suppressed by the author. 2. Letters to a Friend, 12mo. 3. Serms. on the Spirit of Holiness, 4th ed., 1839, 12mo.

"Every page is calculated to awaken prayer and holy meditation. We cordially recommend it."—Lon. Christian Lady's Mag.

4. Letters, 32mo. 5. Serm., 1837. 6. Psalms and Hymns, 18mo. 7. Checks to Infidelity, 1840, 18mo. See notices in Lon. New Method. Mag. and the Evangel. Mag. 8. Vintage Gleanings, 1849, r. 32mo; 2d ed., 1850. Memoirs and Remains of, by his son, the Rev. J. J. Evans, 1852, 8vo.

Evans, John. Almanack for 1631, Lon., 12mo.

Evans, John. The Universall Medicine; or, Vertues of the Antimoniall Cup, Lon., 1634, 12mo.

Evans, John, Rector of St. Ethelborough, London. Serm. on Phil. iv. b. 1682, 4to.

Evans, John, D.D., 1680–1730, a dissenting divine, a native of Wrexham, Denbighshire, became assistant, and subsequently successor, to Daniel Williams, in London. He pub. occasional serms., letters, &c., 1704–27, but is best known by Discourses concerning the Christian Temper: 38 Serms., 4th ed., 1729, 2 vols. 8vo; 1738, '52, '55, '70, 1802, '12, with Life, by Dr. John Erskine, 1825, 8vo. Few works have been so highly commended.

"That most excellent Treatise called Christian Temper, which my worthy friend Dr. Evans hath sent abroad, and which is, perhaps, the most complete summary of those duties which make up the Christian Life, that hath been published in our age."—Dr. Watts's Sermons.

"Evans's style is grave, plain, manly, and nervous. His Christian Temper is one of the best practical pieces in our language."—Dr. Doddridge.

"A course of excellent sermons on that subject."—Dr. E. Williams's C. P.

"His sermons fully discuss various points of Christian temper; not enough of the Saviour in them."—Bickersleth's C. S.

Evans, John. The Case of Kneeling at the Holy Sacrament stated and resolved, Pt. 1, Lon., 1683, 4to; Pts. 1 and 2, 1684, '85, 4to. Serms., 1695, 8vo, on the Death of Queen Mary.

Evans, John, of Elwell. Serms., 1718, 8vo.

Evans, John. Serms., Lon., 1751.

Evans, John. Cyssondel y Pedair Effengyl; gyd ag agoriad hyrria Nodau Athrawas; or, A Harmony of the Four Gospels; in Welsh. With an Expos., Annot., and Introduc., Lon., 1764, 8vo.

Evans, John, M.D. The Bees, a Poem, Lon., 1806–18, 4to. Con. to Med. Com., 1778–85.

Evans, John. 1. Tour through part of North Wales in 1798 and at other Times, Lon., 1800, 8vo. 2. Letters written during a Tour through South Wales in 1803 and at other Times, 1804, 8vo.

"These works are valuable for botanical information as well as for descriptions of scenery, manners, agriculture, manufactures, antiquities, &c., and for mineralogy."—Stevenson's Voyages and Travels.

3. A Discourse, 1804, 8vo. 4. The Ponderer; a series of Essays, 1812, 12mo. 5. Remains of Mr. Reed, with Life, &c., 1816, 8vo.

Evans, John, LL.D., 1767–1827, a Baptist minister, a native of Usk, Monmouthshire, was from 1792 to 1827 pastor of a congregation of General Baptists, Worship St., London. He pub. many serms., theolog. and other works, for a list of which, see Watt's Bibl. Brit. and Gent. Mag., xcvii, Pt. 1, 369. In 1797 he pub. An Attempt to account for the Infidelity of the late Mr. Gibbon; founded on his own Memoirs, 8vo. His best-known work is A Brief Sketch of the different Denominations into which the Christian World is divided, 1794, 12mo. From this date to the death of the author fourteen eds., comprising 100,000 copies, were sold. The 15th ed. was revised by the author immediately before his death, and pub. in the same year, 18mo. The 18th ed. was pub. in 1841, fp. 8vo. It has been trans. into Welsh, and various continental languages, and several eds. have been pub. in the United States of America. Unfortunately the author sold the copyright for only ten pounds!

"But his friends have administered to him a negative consolation, by reminding him that a similar sum was paid for the copyright of Watt's Hymns, as well as of that gigantic product of human genius, Paradise Lost."—Author's dedication of the 14th ed. to Lord Erskine.

A correction is required here, which we leave to the reader to supply.

In 1825, 8vo, was pub. a collection of Dr. Evans's Sermons, Funeral Orations, and Tracts.

"We rejoice to see the diffusion of works breathing such a catholic spirit towards the several denominations of Christians, and such a benevolent temper towards all the human race."—Lon. Mon. Rep.

Evans, Katherine. Sufferings of K. E. and Sarah Chevers in the Inquisition at Malta, 1662, 4to. History of the Voyage of K. E. and S. C. to Malta, with their Sufferings in the Inquisition there for near four Years, 1715.

Evans, Lewis. Theolog. treatises, 1565–1621.

Evans, Lewis, d. 1756, a surveyor in Pennsylvania. Map of the Middle Colonies, &c., 1749; 2d ed., 1755. Geograph., Hist., Polit., Philos., and Mechanical Essays, 2d ed., Phila., 1755, 4to; do., No. II., Lon., 1756, 4to. A new ed. of Evans's Map was pub. in 1776 by Mr. Pownall.

Evans, Nathaniel, 1742–1767, a minister in New Jersey, was a native of Philadelphia. Poems on several occasions, a serm., &c., 1772. Account of T. Godfrey; prefixed to Godfrey's Poems.

Evans, Oliver, 1755–1819, a native of Pennsylvania, was a descendant of Evan Evans, D.D., the first Episcopal minister of Philadelphia, who died in 1728. Mr. Evans had an iron foundry, steam mill, &c., and made several improvements in mechanics. The Young Engineer's Guide, 1805. Miller and Millwright's Guide, 1797, 1807, 25 plates; 14th ed., with addits. and corrections by Thomas P. Jones; with a description of an improved Merchant Flour Mill, by C. and O. Evans, Phila., 1853, 8vo.

Evans, R. H. Old Ballads, Historical and Narrative, &c., with Notes. Collected by Thomas Evans, Lon., 1777, 2 vols. 8vo; 1784, 12mo. Revised by his son, R. H. Evans, 1810, 4 vols. 8vo.

Evans, Robert. Serms., 1771, 4to.

Evans, Robert. The Dream; or Noble Cambrians, 1801, 2 vols. 12mo.

Evans, Robert H. A Letter on the Expediency of a Reform in Parliament, Lon., 1817, 8vo.

Evans, Robert Wilson, Rural Dean, Vicar of Heversham, and late Fellow of Trin. Coll., Camb. Biography of the Early Church, 1st and 2d series, Lon., 1839, 12mo. Serms., 1830, 8vo. Serms., 1832, 8vo. Tales of the Ancient British Church, 2d ed., 1841, 12mo. Parochial Serms., 1844, 2 vols. 12mo; 2d ed., 1845, '46, 2 vols. 12mo. Bishopric of Souls, 3d ed., 1844, 12mo.

"Earnest and awakening, but with partial views."—Bickersteth's C. & S.

Ministry of the Body, 1847, 12mo; 2d ed., 1851, fp. 8vo. Parochial Sketches in Verse, 1850, 12mo. Rectory of Valehead, 15th ed., 1852, 12mo.

"Universally and cordially do we recommend this delightful volume. We believe no person could read this work and not be the better for its pious and touching lessons."—Lon. Literary Gaz.

Mr. Evans has written a number of other useful works. Evans, Smith. Geology Made Easy; a Coloured Chart of the Strata pierced by the Artesian Well at Pentonville, shewing the various Strata upon which London is built, commonly known as the London Basin, Lon., 1851.

"This Chart, which is 15 by 22 inches in size, shows the order in which the different strata of the earth lie upon each other, with their character, localities, and organic remains; a section of the Artesian Well, and of the London Basin, and representations of the fossils found in the deposits. It may be considered a good compendium of the geological information of the present day."

Evans, Theophilus. Drych y Prif Gŵedod, (Mirror of the Days of Yore,) 1716, 12mo. Highly commended. Now a rare volume.

Evans, Theophilus. The History of Modern Enthusiasm, from the Reformation to the present time, Lon., 1752, 8vo.

Evans, Thomas. Œdipus, in three Cantos, 16–5.

Evans, Thomas. Refutation of Linguet's Memoirs of the Bastille, 1783, 8vo. Letter to Earl of Sandwich, 1791.

Evans, Thomas, 1742–1784, an intelligent bookseller of London, pub. a collection of Ballads, (see EVANS, R. H.) and issued new eds., with dedications, of a number of valuable works. See Nichols's Literary Anecdotes; Gent. Mag., 1784.

Evans, Thomas. Cambrian Itinerary, Lon., 1801, 8vo. Hist. of the Ancient Britons. In Welsh, 1804, '10, 12mo. Eng. and Welsh Vocabulary; with a Welsh Grammar by Thomas Richards, 1804, '10, 12mo. An ed. by Wm. Evans, Carmarthen, 1771, 8vo.

Evans, Thomas, of Philadelphia. Exposition of the Faith of the Society of Friends. Selected from their early writings, Phila., 1828, 8vo; Lon., 1829, 8vo.

Evans, W. J., M.D. The Sugar Planter's Manual, Lon., 1847, 8vo.

"Dr. Evans's masterly work is full of the most valuable information for the planter, and will certainly become immediately the text-book and standard work of reference on sugar-manufacture. It should be in the hands of every overseer, book-keeper, and attorney, who cannot fail to profit by a careful and frequent study of its contents."—Colonial Mag.

2. Treatise on Endemic Fevers of the West Indies, 8vo.

Evans, Wm. Thamesiades, or Chastities Triumph, 1602, 8vo.

Evans, Wm. Serms., Oxon., 1633, 4to.

Evans, Wm. Trans. of Grotius's Treatise concerning the Law of War and Peace, Lon., 1715, 3 vols. 8vo.

"The stores of erudition recommend it to the classical scholar, while his happy application to human life draws to it the attention of common readers."—CHARLES BUTLER.

"Such richness and splendour of literature have a powerful charm."—MACKINTOSH.

Evans, Wm. David. 1. Salkeld's Reports K. B., 6th ed., 1793, 3 vols. r. 8vo. 2. Money on Law of Insurances, &c., 1802, 8vo. Edited by F. X. Martin, Newbern, 1802, 8vo. 3. Decisions of Lord Mansfield in Civil Causes, 1802, 2 vols. 4to. Arranged upon the plan of Blackstone. 4. Pothier on Law of Obligations, 1806, 2 vols. 5. Letter to Sir S. Romilly on the Revision of the Bankrupt Laws, 1810, 8vo. 6. Letters on the Disabilities of R. Catholics and the Dissenters, 1813, 8vo. 7. Practice of the C. Pleas, Lancaster, Lon., 1814, 8vo. 8. Acts rel. to the Clergy, with Notes, 1817, 8vo. 9. Collection of Statutes, 1818, 8 vols. 8vo; 3d ed., continued to 1835, by A. Hammond and T. C. Granger, 1829–36, 10 vols. 8vo.

Evanson, Edward, 1731–1805, educated at Emanuel Coll., Camb., became Vicar of South Mimms in 1768, and two years later Rector of Tewkesbury. In 1771 he was prosecuted for some sentiments expressed by him in a sermon on the Resurrection, and in 1778 he resigned his livings and became head of a school. Relieved from all restraint, he soon evinced the most determined opposition to several prominent doctrines of Christianity, and is generally styled an infidel.

1. The Doctrines of a Trinity and Incarnation examined, 1772; anon. 2. Three Discourses, 1773, 8vo. 3. Letter to Dr. Hurd on the Prophecies, 1777, '92, 8vo. 4. The Sabbath, 1792, 8vo. 5. Dissonance of the four generally received Evangelists, and the Evidence of their authenticity examined, 1792, 8vo. Completely refuted by Thomas Falconer in his Certain Principles, &c., 1811, 8vo. 6. Letters to Dr. Priestley's Young Man, 1794, 8vo. 7. State of Religion in Christendom, 1804, 8vo. 8. Second Thoughts on the Trinity, 1805, 8vo. See Lon. Monthly Mag., 1805; Gent. Mag., 1805; Nichols's Lit. Anecdotes.

Evanson, Rev. R. M. Evelyn's Rational Account of the True Religion, now first pub. from the original MS. in the library at Wotton, edited with Notes by R. M. E., 1850, 2 vols. p. 8vo. See EVELYN, JOHN.

Evanson, Wm. Alley, Lecturer of St. Luke's, Old Street, London. Infidel Credulity, Lon., 1826, 8vo. Apology for the Modern Theology of Protestant Germany; a trans. of a Review of Mr. Rose's Discourses by Dr. Bretschneider, 1827, 8vo. See Dr. Pusey's work on the same subject, and Mr. Rose's comments thereon. Trans. of Knittel's

New Criticisms on 1 John v. 7, 1829, 8vo. See Michaelis's Introduc. to the N. Test.; Lon. Eclectic Rev., 3d Series, iii. 81; Horne's Bibl. Bib.; Orme on the Heavenly Witnesses.

Evarts, Jeremiah, 1781-1831, secretary of the Amer. Bd. of Com. for Foreign Missions, a native of Vermont, was from 1810-20 editor of The Panoplist, a religious and literary monthly publication. He wrote 24 essays under the signature of Williams, on the rights and claims of the Indians, pub. in 1829. He edited the volume of Speeches on the Indian Bill, and wrote the Introduction. See Discourses on Evarts, by Drs. Wood and Spring; Miss. Herald, Oct. and Nov., 1831; Memoirs of Jeremiah Evarts, Boston, 1845, 8vo.

Evarts, Rev. W. W. 1. Bible Manual. 2. Pastor's Hand-Book. 3. The Bible Prayer Book. 4. Scripture School Reader; in conjunction with W. H. Wykoff.

Eveleigh, John, D.D. 1747-1814, Provost of Oriel Coll., Oxf., and Preb. of Rochester. The Trinity, 1791, 8vo. Serms. preached before the Univ. of Oxford. 1792, 8vo; do., 1810, 8vo. Eight Sermons, preached at the Bampton Lecture, 1792, 8vo. Plurality of Persons in the Godhead proved, 1797, 8vo. Sermon on 27th Ps., 1806, 8vo. Serms. before the Univ. of Oxford, with those at Bampton Lecture.

"He treats them [the topics] with a degree of weight and solidity which shows that what he writes is the fruit of deep reflection, and which arrests the attention of the considering reader. There is a character of sound reasoning, a manner of sober discussion, which never quits the author. One of his recommendations is the total absence of all ostentatious display of erudition."—Lon. Quarterly Review.

Eveleigh, Josiah. Reply to Pierce, Lon., 1719, 8vo.

Eveline, Robert. Direction for Adventurers, and true description of the healthiest, pleasantest, and richest Plantation of New Albion, in North Virginia, in a letter from Mayster Robert Eveline, that lived there many years, 1641, sm. 4to. Liber rarissimus.

Evelyn, Charles. Ladies' Recreation; or, The Pleasure and Profit of Gardening improved, Lon., 1707, '11, '19, 8vo. In German, Leipsic, 1756, 8vo.

Evelyn, Sir John. Report from the Committee rel. to Lord Digby's Speech on the attainder of Strafford, 1641, 4to.

Evelyn, John, 1620-1705-6, was a son of Richard Evelyn, of Wotton, in the county of Surrey, where John was born on the 31st of October. After preparatory studies at Lewes and Southover, he was placed in 1637 as a fellow commoner at Balliol Coll., Oxf. He entered college, as he tells us with much modesty,

"Rather out of shame of abiding longer at school than any fitness, as by sad experience I found, which put me to learn all that I had neglected, or but perfunctorily gained."

On leaving college he removed to the Middle Temple, and had been there but a short time when he lost his father. Anxious to see something of foreign countries, he determined to visit the continent, whence he returned after an absence of three months. In 1643 he again left home, and for a number of years resided in France, and other parts of Europe, occasionally making a short visit to England. In January, 1651, '52 he settled permanently in the latter country, residing at Say's Court, near Deptford, formerly the seat of his father-in-law, Sir Richard Browne, British resident at the court of France.

At the time of his marriage to Miss Browne, in 1647, at Paris, she had not attained her 14th year, and seems to have been a grateful and docile pupil in the course of education prescribed by the groom, now in his 27th year, and one of the most accomplished men of his day. She survived him about three years, and thus commemorates his devotion:

"His care of my education was such as might become a father, a lover, a friend, and husband, for instruction, tenderness, affection, and fidelity, to the last moment of his life, which obligation I mention with a gratitude to his memory ever dear to me; and I must not omit to own the sense I have of my parents' care and goodness in placing me in such worthy hands."

Indeed, the character of this excellent man, placed as he was amidst the corrupting influence of a most unprincipled court, affords a delightful subject of contemplation for all who venerate moral worth, in this case rendered more conspicuous by intellectual eminence. Even with the dissolute Charles and the contemptible crowd of courtiers who ministered to his vices, the learned, religious, and accomplished Evelyn was an object of affection as well as respect. They could not but admire and love an example which they were content not to imitate. In the Biog. Brit., and especially in his Diary and Correspondence, the reader will find ample details respecting the useful life of one of the most estimable characters of literary history.

A list of many of the numerous works and translations of Evelyn will be found in the Biog. Brit. We notice some of the principal. 1. A character of England, purporting to have been written by a French Nobleman, 1651, 16mo. See Hallam's Introduc. to Lit. Hist. 2. Fumifugium; or, The Inconvenience of the Air and Smoke of London dissipated; together with some remedies humbly proposed. This was addressed to Charles II., and pub. by his command. 3. Tyrannus; or, The Mode, in a Discourse of Sumptuary Laws, 1661, 8vo. 4. Sculptura; or, The History and Art of Chalcography and Engraving on Copper; with an ample enumeration of the most renowned Masters and their Works, &c., 1662, 8vo; 2d ed., with Life of the Author, 1755, 12mo. This work was written at the repeated request of Robert Boyle. 5. Sylva; or, A Discourse of Forest Trees, and the Propagation of Timber in his Majesty's Dominions: to which is annexed Pomona; rel. to Fruit Trees, 1664, fol.; 2d ed., 1669; 3d ed., with additions and improvements, 1679, fol.; 4th ed., 1706, fol.; 5th ed., 1729; new ed., by Dr. Hunter, of York, with Notes and Engravings, 1776, 2 vols. 4to; 2d ed., to which Terra, a Philosophical Discourse on Earth, is added, 1786, 2 vols. 4to; 4th improved ed., 1812, 2 vols. 4to; 5th improved ed., 1825, 2 vols. 4to. This work was written by the command of, and was the first book pub. by, the Royal Society. It was elicited by certain "Queries propounded to that illustrious assembly, the honourable the principal Officers and Commissioners of the Navy."

Apprehensions were entertained that the cultivation of large trees was so much neglected, that in a short time it would be difficult or impossible to procure sufficient timber for the purposes of the Navy. Evelyn made an earnest appeal to the nation to treat this important subject with due regard. His work was eminently successful. In the new dedication to Charles II., 2d ed., 1669—5 years after the publication of the 1st ed.—Evelyn tells the king

"It has been the sole occasion for furnishing your almost exhausted dominions with more, I dare say, than two millions of timber-trees, besides infinite others, which have been propagated within the three nations, at the instigation and by the direction of this work," &c.

The famous Dr. Wotton declares

"It may therefore, perhaps, be esteemed a small character of Mr. Evelyn's discourse of forest-trees to say, that it out-does all that Theophrastus and Pliny have left us on that subject; for it not only does that and a great deal more, but contains more useful precepts, hints, and discoveries, upon that now so necessary a part of our Res Rustica, than the world had till then known, for all the observations of former ages. To name others after him would be a derogation to his performance."—Reflections on Ancient and Modern Learning.

"The 'Sylva' has no beauties of style to recommend it, and none of those felicities of expression by which the writer stamps upon your memory his meaning in all its force. Without such charms, 'Discourse of Forest Trees, and the Propagation of Timber in his Majesty's Dominions' might appear to promise dry entertainment; but he who opens the volume is led on insensibly from page to page, and catches something of the delight which made the author enter with his whole heart and all his faculties into the subject. . . . It is a great repository of all that was then known concerning the forest trees of Great Britain, their growth and culture, and their uses and qualities, real or imaginary; and he has enlivened it with all the pertinent facts and anecdotes which occurred to him in his reading."—ROBERT SOUTHBY: Lon. Quart. Review, xix. 47.

"While Britain retains her awful situation among the nations of Europe, the Sylva of Evelyn will endure with her triumphant oak. It was an author in his studious retreat, who, casting a prophetic eye on the age we live in, secured the late victories of our national sovereignty. Inquire at the Admiralty how the fleets of Nelson have been constructed, and they can tell you that it was with the oak which the genius of Evelyn planted."—Darwin's Curiosities of Literature.

"John Evelyn did perhaps more than any of our early writers to promote and strengthen that taste for rural occupations, among the enlightened classes, which has now happily become a national characteristic."

"Say's Court was afterwards the residence of the celebrated Evelyn, whose 'Sylva' is still the manual of British planters, and whose life, manners, and principles, as illustrated in his Memoirs, ought equally to be the manual of English gentlemen."—SIR WALTON SCOTT: Kenilworth.

"A diligent perusal of this noble work may animate our nobility and gentry to improve their estates by the never-failing methods therein recommended. All persons, indeed, who are owners of land, may find infinite delight, as well as profit, in this book."—British Critic.

"Among the advantages of the present splendid edition [5th improved ed., 1825, 2 vols. 4to] are the copious and valuable notes of the learned editor, which, alone, would constitute a very considerable volume of miscellaneous extracts, observations, and anecdotes, on the nature, properties, culture, and uses of the great variety of the trees here treated of: comprehending all the discoveries and improvements which have been made since Mr. Evelyn's time."—Lon. Monthly Review.

See Lon. Quar. Review, ix. 45.

6. A Parallel of the Ancient Architecture with the Modern, 1664, fol.; 1669, 8vo; 3d ed., enlarged and corrected, 1697, 1733, fol.; with the addition of Sir Henry Wotton's

Elements of Architecture. 7. Public Employment and an Active Life preferred to Solitude, 1667, 8vo. This is an answer to Sir George MacKenzie on the other side of the question. 8. History of Three late Famous Impostures, 1668, '69, 8vo. 9. A Short and Plain Discourse, the chief heads of the History of Trade and Navigation, their origin and progress, 1674, 8vo. Dedicated to the King.

"A brief and necessarily very imperfect sketch. It is introduced by some observations on the advantages of commerce and navigation, as exemplified in the instances of Holland, Venice, &c."—McCulloch's Lib. of Polit. Econ.

10. Terra; a Philosophical Discourse of the Earth, relating to the culture and improvement of it, for Vegetation, and the Propagation of Plants, 1675, fol. See notice of SYLVA, ante. 11. Mundus Muliebris; or the Ladies' Dressing Room unlocked, and her Toilette spread. In Burlesque. Together with the Pop's Dictionary, 1690, 4to. 12. Numismata; a Discourse of Medals, ancient and modern, 1697, fol.

"We might justly have expected whatever could have been desired on this subject, from the excellently-learned pen of Mr. Evelyn, had he bent his thoughts, as was believed, towards the consideration of our British coins as well as medals. It now appears that his Numismata carried him no farther than those larger and more choice pieces that are usually called by this latter name; wherein he has, indeed, treated with that accuracy and fluency which become a gentleman and a scholar."—Bishop Nicholson's Eng. Hist. Lib., 248.

13. Acetaria; or a Discourse of Sallets, 1699, 8vo. This was his last work. He contemplated several extensive works—A General History of all Trades, The Plan of a Royal Garden, &c.—which were never compiled; see Biog. Brit. A review of his agricultural works will be found in Donaldson's Agricolt. Biog.

Industrious to the last, he was but a short time before his death busily employed in preparing the 4th ed. of Sylva for the press. But the time had now arrived when he was permitted to enter into that rest to which his heart had ever fondly turned during the course of his long pilgrimage on earth. He died Feb. 27, 1705-06, in the 86th year of his age. All that was mortal of the aged Christian was interred at Wotton, where his tombstone, by his direction—eager to continue his usefulness even when no longer able to bear a living testimony to the truth—bears this inscription:

"That, living in an age of extraordinary events and revolutions, he had learned from thence this truth, which he desired might be thus communicated to posterity: THAT ALL IS VANITY WHICH IS NOT HONEST, AND THAT THERE IS NO SOLID WISDOM BUT REAL PIETY."

This is "the conclusion of the whole matter," and we shall be wise, indeed, thoughtful reader, if we profit by the lesson.

In 1825 Mr. Wm. Upcott, the well-known bibliographer, pub. in a 4to vol. a collection of Evelyn's Miscellaneous Writings—on Morals, Horticulture, Art, Science, Commerce, &c.—many of which had become very rare.

"All these tempting topics we are compelled to fly from, with many a lingering look, conscious that we have occupied a large, though by no means an undue space, in affording our readers some gusto of a volume upon which they may venture to make many a hearty meal."—British Critic.

In 1818, 2 vols. 4to, appeared Memoirs illustrative of the Life and Writings of John Evelyn, Esq., comprising his Diary from 1641 to 1705-06, and a Selection from his Familiar Letters, 2d ed., 1819, 2 vols. 4to; 3d ed., 1827, 5 vols. 8vo. New ed., 1850, 4 vols. 8vo; again, 1854, 4 vols. 8vo. To Mr. Bray, the intelligent editor of this work, and to Mr. Upcott, his assistant, the public are largely indebted. It has been truly remarked that "It is impossible to overrate the interest and value of a diary and correspondence written by such a man as Evelyn, and in such times as those of Charles I., Oliver Cromwell, Charles II., James II., and William III."

"This work is a necessary companion to the popular histories of our country—to Hume, Hallam, Macaulay, and Lingard."

"Few, if any, similar publications of our own days more strongly attracted public attention on their first appearance, or are likely to retain a more permanent station in our national literature, than the Diary of Evelyn, a man the more highly honoured and valued as our acquaintance is permitted to become closer."—British Critic.

To this work the reader must add The Diary and Correspondence of Samuel Pepys, and he may congratulate himself upon the possession of treasures of no ordinary character.

"We have never seen a mine so rich as the volumes before us."—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

In 1848, sm. 8vo, was pub. by Bishop Wilberforce of Oxford, from the MS. of Evelyn, his Life of Mrs. Godolphin. Now first pub.

"An exquisite book is this for the refined and educated reader. How could it be otherwise, since the admirable Evelyn has seen fit to present it to the world? This little book cannot but be attended with many blessings on account of the purity of its tone and purpose."—Protestant Churchman.

In 1850, 2 vols. p. 8vo, Rev. R. M. Evanson pub. from the MS. of Evelyn his Rational Account of the True Religion. Now first pub.

"As an epitome of all the later arguments against the infidelity of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, the History of Religion is indeed invaluable."

Of this truly excellent man we may say, with a distinguished critic:

"No change of fashion, no alteration of taste, no revolutions of science, have impaired or can impair his celebrity. Satire, from whom nothing is sacred, scarcely attempted to touch him while living; and the acrimony of political and religious hatred, though it spared not even the dead, has never assailed his memory."—ROBERT SOUTHBY: Lon. Quar. Review, xix. 53.

During the evil days when unhallowed violence overthrew the throne and the altar, Evelyn was a sincere mourner, and ministered to the necessities of those who from a state of comparative opulence suddenly found themselves reduced to straitness of bread and the melancholy prospect of continued destitution. When that intrepid champion of the truth, "of whom the world was not worthy"—Jeremy Taylor—was consigned to the cheerless walls of a prison, it was John Evelyn who not only extended present relief, but settled upon him an annual allowance, that he might not be careful for the morrow. From a letter of Evelyn's to this attached friend, written in these troublous times, we give an extract which reflects honour both upon the writer and the one addressed:

"For my part, I have learned from your excellent assistance to humble myself, and to adore the inscrutable pathos of the most high: God and his Truth are still the same, though the foundations of the world be shaken. Redivivus can shut the Schools, indeed, and the Temples; but he cannot hinder our private intercourse and devotions, where the Breast is the Chappell and our Heart is the Altar. Obedience founded in the understanding will be the only cure and retriite. God will accept what remains and supply what is necessary."

Even the gossiping, worldly-minded, curiosity-hunting Horace Walpole is betrayed with a generous, but very unfashionable, enthusiasm, when expatiating upon the character of Evelyn:

"His life, which was extended to eighty-six years, was a course of enquiry, study, curiosity, instruction, and benevolence. The works of the Creator, and the mimic labours of the creature, were all objects of his pursuit. He unfolded the perfection of the one, and assisted the imperfection of the other. He adored from examination; was a courtier that flattered only by informing his prince, and by pointing out what was worthy for him to countenance; and was really the neighbour of the gospel, for there was no man that might not have been the better for him."—Catalogue of Engravers.

A celebrated author, of a very different stamp, bears the same testimony, when acknowledging some communication designed to aid an important literary undertaking:

"That most ingenious and virtuous gentleman, Mr. Evelyn, who is not satisfied to have advanced the knowledge of this age by his own useful and successful labours about planting and divers other ways, but is ready to contribute every thing in his power to perfect other men's endeavours."—BISHOP BURNET: Hist. of the Reformation.

We shall conclude our article with the tribute of one of the most distinguished poets of his age:

"Happy art thou whom God does bless

With the full choice of thine own happiness;

And happier yet, because thou'rt blest

With prudence how to choose the best.

In books and gardens thou hast plac'd aright,

(Things which thou wilt doest understand,

And both dost make with thy laborious hand.)

Thy noble, innocent delight.

And in thy virtuous wife, where thou again dost meet

Both pleasures more refin'd and sweet,

The fairest garden in her looks,

And in her mind the wisest joys.

Oh, who would change these soft yet solid joys

For empty shows and senseless noise

And all which rank ambition breeds,

Which seem such beautiful flowers, and are such pois'nous weeds," &c. Cowley's Garden.

Evelyn, John, 1654-55-1698, 3d son of the preceding, educated at Trin. Coll., Camb., was in 1690 made one of the chief clerks of the Treasury, and in 1691 was elected a commissioner of the revenue in Ireland. 1. Trans. of Renatus Rapinus's Latin verses, Of Gardens, 1673, 8vo. 2. Trans. of Plutarch's Life of Alexander the Great; in vol. iv. of Plutarch's Lives, by several hands. 3. Hist. of two Grand Visiers, &c., 1677, 8vo. A trans. from the French. See Dryden's Miscellanies, and Nichols's Collection, for some of his poems.

Ever, Sampson. See EVER.

Everard of Winchester, temp. Stephen, wrote a metrical trans. in Anglo-Norman of the Disticha of Dionysius Cato. Helys of Winchester appears to have borrowed largely from this trans. in his own version of the Disticha, now in MS. in the British Museum. See Le Livre des Proverbes Français, par Le Roux de Lincy, Paris, 1842, 567.

22mo. Tome Second, pp. 266-278. Everard's Trans. of the Districts of Cato. Several other productions are ascribed to Everard. See Wright's Biog. Brit. Lit.

Everard, Lovell of England, Lon., 1649, 4to.

Everard, Dr. Herman Mercatoris Triumviri his Divine Fomander, trans. out of the original into English, Lon., 1637, 7mo.

Everard, Edmund, sometime under-secretary to the French King. 1. Discourses on the Present State of the Protestant Princes of Europe, Lon., 1679, fol. 2. The great pressures and grievances of the Protestants in France, 1681, fol.

Everard, Edward, D.D. Proprietary Latin Grammar, Lon., 1643; new ed., 1649, 12mo.

"It is admirably adapted for the purpose, and has our warmest recommendations."—Plymouth (Eng.) Herald.

Baron., 1644, 8vo.

Everard, Giles. Passages, Lon., 1660, 8vo.

Everard, John. Britanno-Romana, sive Angliglorum in Collegio Romano Vita Ratio, Lon., 1611, 8vo.

Everard, John, D.D., a Calvinist divine, temp. Charles I. Some Gospel Treasures, Lon., 1633, 8vo.

Everard, Thomas. Stereometry, Lon., 1664, 12mo.

Everard, W. Mercantile Book Keeping, Lon., 1676.

Everard, Job. Sienographia, Lon., 1638, 8vo.

Everest, Rev. Charles W., formerly of Meriden, Connecticut, has pub. a number of poetical and other works. 1. Babylon, a Poem. 2. Hare Bell. 3. Moss Room. 4. The Moments. 5. The Snow Drop. 6. The Poets of Connecticut. 7. Vision of Death, and other Poems. We may cite his poem entitled Agriculture, as a beautiful picture of the pleasures of a country life. Since 1842, Mr. Everest has given nothing to the press. He now has charge of the Rectory School at Hamden, Connecticut.

Everett, Alexander Hill, 1790-1847, a native of Boston, Massachusetts, was a son of the Rev. Oliver Everett, and a descendant of Richard Everett, whose name appears in the public records of Dedham, Massachusetts, for the year 1630. Alexander was born in Boston on the 10th of March, 1790, and entered Harvard College in the 13th year of his age. In 1808 he graduated with the highest honours; and, after a year's experience as a teacher in the Phillips Exeter Academy, commenced the study of law in the office of John Quincy Adams, in Boston. In 1809 he accompanied Mr. Adams on his mission to Russia, and resided at St. Petersburg and London until 1812. Returning to the United States on the declaration of war against Great Britain, he commenced the profession of the law at Boston, but was soon induced to accept the office of secretary of legation to the Netherlands. On the retirement of Mr. Austin from that mission, in 1818, Mr. Everett succeeded him as chargé d'affaires, and retained this post until 1824. In this year he returned to the United States on leave of absence, and in the spring of 1825 was appointed by President Adams minister to Spain. In 1829 he returned to the United States, and became proprietor and editor of the North American Review, (1830-35,) to which he had, during the editorship of his brother Edward, been one of the most valuable contributors. From 1830 to 1833, Mr. Everett occupied a seat in the legislature of Massachusetts, and during those years and a few following, gave much of his time and thoughts to state and national politics. In the winter of 1840 he resided as a confidential agent of the U. S. Government in the Island of Cuba, and whilst there was appointed President of Jefferson College, Louisiana. He entered upon the responsible duties of this post in June, 1841, but was soon obliged, by failing health, to return to New England.

Upon the return of Mr. Caleb Cushing from his mission to China, Mr. Everett was appointed minister plenipotentiary to that empire, and sailed for Canton July 4th, 1843. A severe attack of illness detained him for some time at Rio Janeiro; and, hopeless of amendment, he returned home; but in the summer of 1846 he was sufficiently recovered to allow of a second attempt to reach his destination. Arrived at Canton, it soon became evident that his physical powers were too much prostrated to allow of any reasonable hope of restoration, and he closed his eyes in a strange land, June 26th, 1847. For the above facts, and for the annexed lists of Mr. Everett's contributions to various periodicals, &c., we are indebted to Griswold's Prose Writers of America.

Mr. Everett's first published compositions appeared in The Monthly Anthology, the vehicle of communication with the public of the Anthology Club of Boston, consisting of George Ticknor, William Tudor, Drs. Bigelow and Gardner, Alexander H. Everett, and Rev. Messrs. Bush-minster, Thacher, and Emerson. The Monthly Anthology, established by Phillips Adams, was pub. from 1800 to 1811.

The following list of Mr. Everett's publications presents a very remarkable instance of versatility of talent and enlarged range of erudition. Politics and belles-lettres, political economy and poetry, statistics and aesthetics—subjects the least allied in character or criteria—alternately passed under the review of the "pen of the ready writer."

1. Europe; or, A General Survey of the Political Situation of the Principal Powers, with Conjectures on their Future Prospects, London and Boston, 1822, 8vo. Translated into German, French, and Spanish. The German version was edited by Professor Jacob, of the University of Halle.

Mr. Everett devotes the first chapter of his work to an explanation of the origin of the controversy between Godwin and Malthus. In the following lines he lays down a position which opens at once a wide field of debate.

"It is, in fact, somewhat singular, that while the immediate object of Godwin was to demonstrate the expediency of practical reform, and that of Mr. Malthus to prove its futility, the theories of both these writers admit, on general grounds, of precisely the same answer. While Godwin considers political institutions as absolutely mischievous, Malthus affirms that they are completely indifferent. The true answer to both is, that they are neither mischievous nor indifferent, but extremely valuable, that the origin of evil is not to be found in the existence of society—but in any supposed law of nature, which evinces a want of sympathy between the individual and the primary constitution of the universe."

In the eleventh chapter the political economist will find the author's explanation of the manner in which the state of civilization affects the rate of wages, and of the fact that the individual producer is not always remunerated in proportion to the increased wealth of the community.

He attacks the theory of Malthus as totally untenable, and labours to prove that the increase of population is in truth a principle not of scarcity, but of abundance. A review of this work by an eminent critic—Jared Sparks, LL.D.—will be found in the N. American Review, xiii. 286-310.

2. New Ideas on Population, with Remarks on the Theories of Godwin and Malthus, London and Boston, 1822. See Mr. E.'s correspondence upon the subject of political economy with Professor George Tucker, of the University of Virginia, pub. in 1845. 3. America; or, A General Survey of the Political Situation of the several Powers of the Western Continent, with Conjectures on their future Prospects, by a citizen of the United States, Phila., 1827, 8vo; Lon., 1828, 8vo.

"The appreciable debt volume from qualitative and and elegant, verified in the be generally e rature and it merits in this which it must would alone e the highest rank in our country, and from the eloquent roughness which distinguishes many of the ablest British authors of the present time. To our author and to Washington Irving we are indebted for two of the most successful efforts which have been made in the present century to revive the little elegance which distinguished the best writers of the days of Addison."—North American Review.

"This essay, however objectionable it may be to an Englishman in several respects, is marked by ability of the very first order. Hence the publication of these admirable dissertations which were collected in the Pedagogus, we have not seen any political composition from the pen of an American that can at all be compared with this. The style is limpid and thoroughly English, second to our best school. We are often compelled to admire the beauty of the periods when we are most disposed to differ from the conclusions which they convey."—Am. Monthly Review.

4. Critical and Miscellaneous Essays, Series First, Boston, 1845, 12mo. 5. Series Second, 1847, 12mo. 6. Poems, 1843, 8vo. To Sparks's American Biography, Mr. Everett contributed the Life of Joseph Warren, in 1st Series, a. 91, and the Life of Patrick Henry, in 2d Series, l. 207.

Mr. Everett's principal contributions to the North American Review are on the following subjects: 1. French Dramatic Literature. 2. Louis Bonaparte. 3. Private Life of Voltaire. 4. Literature of the 18th Century. 5. Dialogues on Representative Government, between Dr. Franklin and President Montaigne. 6. Bernardine de St. Pierre. 7. Madame de Staël. 8. J. J. Rousseau. 9. Mirabeau. 10. Schiller. 11. Chinese Grammar. 12. Cicero on Government. 13. Memoirs of Madame Campan. 14. Dugard's History of Philosophy. 15. Lord Byron.

The following were written whilst in Spain :

16. McCulloch's Political Economy. 17. Authorship of Gil Blas. 18. Baron de Staël's Letters on England. 19. Paraguay. 20. The Art of Being Happy. 21. Politics of Europe. 22. Chinese Manners. 23. Irving's Columbus. 24. Definitions in Political Economy, by Malthus. 25. Cousin's Intellectual Philosophy. 26. Canova.

The following were written whilst editor and proprietor of the Review :

27. British Opinions on the Protecting System. 28. Politics of Europe. 29. Tone of British Criticism. 30. Stewart's Moral Philosophy. 31. The American System. 32. Life of Henry Clay. 33. Life and Writings of Sir James Mackintosh. 34. Irving's Alhambra. 35. Nullification. 36. The Union and the States. 37. Hamilton's Men and Manners in America. 38. Early Literature of Modern Europe. 39. Early Literature of France. 40. Progress and Limits of Social Improvement. 41. Origin and Character of the Old Parties. 42. Character of Jefferson. 43. Dr. Channing. 44. Thomas Carlyle.

His principal contributions to the Democratic Review are the following :

1. The Spectre Bridegroom, from Burger. 2. The Water King; a Legend of the Norse. 3. The Grecian Gossips, imitated from Theocritus. 4. The Worth of Woman, from Schiller. 5. Enigma. 6 and 7. The Framers of the Constitution. 8. Mrs. Sigourney. 9. Sketch of Harro Harrington. 10. The Texas Question. 11. The Re-annexation of Texas. 12. Contemporary Spanish Poetry. 13. Greenough's Statue of Washington. 14. The Young American. 15. The Malthusian Theory discussed in Letters to Professor George Tucker, of the University of Virginia. 16. The Portress; a Ballad. 17. The Funeral of Goethe, from Harro Harrington.

The contributions to the Boston Quarterly Review were chiefly, if not altogether, devoted to an exposition of the questions connected with currency. Among Mr. Everett's published orations are the following : 1. On the Progress and Limits of the Improvement of Society. 2. The French Revolution. 3. The Constitution of the United States. 4. State of Polite Literature in England and the United States. 5. Moral Character of the Literature of the last and present century. 6. Literary Character of the Scriptures. 7. Progress of Moral Science. 8. Discovery of America by the Northmen. 9. German Literature. 10. Battle of New Orleans. 11. Battle of Bunker Hill.

Everett, David, d. 1813, aged 44, editor of Boston Patriot, and subsequently of The Pilot, was a native of Princeton, Massachusetts, and graduated at Dartmouth College in 1795. 1. Common Sense in Dishabille, or The Farmer's Monitor, 1799. 2. Daranuel; a Tragedy, 1800. 3. Political Essays in the Boston Gazette, over the signature of Junius Americanus.

Everett, Edward, one of the most distinguished orators and scholars of modern times, born 1794, in Dorchester, near Boston, Massachusetts, is a younger brother of ALEXANDER H. EVERETT: see ante. He entered Harvard College at the age of 13, and graduated with distinguished credit in 1811. After two years of preparatory study in the divinity school in Cambridge, he was at the early age of 19 chosen to succeed the eloquent Buckminster, by whose death the pulpit of the Brattle Street Church had been left vacant. As a pulpit orator Mr. Everett soon attained that distinction which he has invariably acquired in every department of life which he has successively occupied. An extract from a letter of the late Judge Story will prove interesting in this connexion. The writer refers to a celebrated sermon of Mr. Everett, entitled "Brethren, the time is short," delivered in the capitol at Washington, in February, 1820:

"The sermon was truly splendid, and was heard with a breathless silence. The audience was very large; and, being in that magnificent apartment of the House of Representatives, it had vast effect. I saw Mr. King, of New York, and Mr. Otis, of Massachusetts, there. They were both very much affected with Mr. Everett's sermon; and Mr. Otis, in particular, wept bitterly. There were some very touching appeals to our most delicate feelings, on the loss of our friends. Indeed, Mr. Everett was almost universally admired, as the most eloquent of preachers. Mr. King told me he never heard a discourse so full of unction, eloquence, and good taste."

The following tributes from the same distinguished authority may perhaps be properly quoted in this place:

"I thank you most sincerely for the high pleasure and instruction you have given me in this number of the [N. American] Review. I agree with you as to Mr. Tudor's book, and you have almost persuaded me you are right as to the Indians. If you continue to write thus powerfully, in such a strain of manly, vigorous sense, with such glowing eloquence, you will humble all of us, but nobly exalt the pride and character of our country."—Letter to Edward Everett, Salem, January 15, 1820.

"Mr. Everett, whom you may remember at Boston, made his maiden speech on this occasion, [Proposition to amend the Constitution; debate in House of Representatives, Washington, session of 1825-26.] It received very great applause from its manner as well as matter. He bids fair to be an eminent statesman, after having figured a considerable time as an eminent clergyman."—Letter to J. Evelyn Denison, Esq., M.P., Washington, March 18, 1826.

The reader will thank us for thus recording the testimony of Judge Story to Mr. Everett's eminence as a preacher, an essayist, and a political orator. We shall have occasion, before closing this article, to quote still further from the same distinguished authority. No man more highly valued Mr. Everett's natural talents and ripe scholarship, and no man would have more heartily welcomed the great intellectual monument which he so well knew these talents and scholarship were capable of erecting. But we anticipate. In 1812, at the early age of 18, he was appointed Latin tutor in Harvard College.

In 1814 he pub. a volume of about 500 pages, entitled A Defence of Christianity, in answer to The Grounds of Christianity Examined, by George B. English. These works we have already noticed at length. See ENGLISH, GEORGE B.

In 1815 he was elected professor of the Greek Language and Literature in Harvard College, with the understanding that he should spend some time in Europe before engaging in the arduous duties of this post. Whilst abroad he made the acquaintance of Scott, Byron, Jeffrey, Campbell, Mackintosh, Romilly, Davy, and other distinguished literary and political characters.

In 1819 he returned home and entered upon the duties of the Greek Professorship. In addition to his regular lectures, he found time to publish a Greek Grammar, trans. by him from the German of Buttmann, and a Greek Reader, based upon that of Mr. Jacobs. We extract a notice of this portion of Mr. Everett's life, from Mr. Hayward's article on American Orators and Statesmen, in the London Quarterly Review for December, 1840:

"Edward Everett is one of the most remarkable men living. He is a native of Massachusetts, and was born about 1796. At nineteen he had already acquired the reputation of an accomplished scholar, and was drawing large audiences as a Unitarian preacher. At twenty-one (the age at which Roger Ascham achieved a similar distinction) he was appointed Professor of Greek in Harvard University, and soon afterwards he made a tour of Europe, including Greece. Mr. Cousin, who was with him in Germany, informed a friend of ours that he was one of the best Greeks he ever knew, and the translator of Plato must have known a good many of the best. On his return from his travels he lectured on Greek literature with the enthusiasm and success of another Abelard—we hope, without the Heloise."

He became editor of the North American Review in January, 1820, and in the next four years contributed to its pages about fifty papers, to which are to be added sixty more, written whilst the Review was under the management of his brother Alexander, and of those who succeeded him. Mr. Everett has given us reason to hope for the publication of a selection from these excellent papers, and from the speeches, reports, and correspondence, prepared from time to time in the discharge of his official duties. We trust, however, that the contributions to the Review will be given without the least curtailment; and the rather from the fact that the earlier numbers of this periodical are not only now scarce, but not to be had—save on rare occasions—at any price whatever. On the 8th of May, 1822, Mr. Everett was married by his old classmate, the Rev. N. L. Frothingham, D.D., to Charlotte Gray, a daughter of Peter Chardon Brooks, one of the leading men of Boston. Mr. Brooks died January 1, 1849, and his biography has been written by Mr. Everett.

In 1824 Mr. Everett was elected to the United States Congress by the voters of Middlesex, Massachusetts, and sat in the House of Representatives for ten years. Upon his return from Congress in 1835, he was for four successive years elected Governor of Massachusetts, and at the next election defeated by only one out of more than 100,000 votes. In 1841 he was appointed Minister Plenipotentiary to the Court of St. James, and resided in London for about five years. Not the least gratifying testimonial of respect accorded to Mr. Everett in England, was the degree of D.C.L., by the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, and from Dublin. On his return home, in 1846, he was elected to the Presidency of Harvard College, and retained this honourable post until 1849, when he tendered his resignation, and was succeeded by Jared Sparks. On the decease of Daniel Webster, Mr. Everett was appointed Secretary of State of the United States, and in 1853 he succeeded John Davis as a national Senator. In consequence of the failure of his health, he soon resigned his seat, and is now (1858) living in retirement at Boston, occupied, it is believed, in the preparation of a systematic treatise on the modern Law of Nations. See Griswold's Prose Writers of America; Men of the Time, N. York, 1852; The Hundred Boston Orators, by James S. Loring, Boston, 1854, 8vo.

In addition to the Defence of Christianity, already mentioned, and a number of occasional addresses, official letters, reports, &c., Mr. Everett has published, 1. Orations and Speeches on Various Occasions, 1836, 8vo. This vol. contains 27 speeches, &c. delivered from 1825-36. 2. Importance of Practical Education and Useful Knowledge; a selection from his Orations and other Discourses, (pub. in 1836,) N. York, 1847, 12mo. This work was originally prepared for the Massachusetts District School Library, at the request of the Board of Education. 3. Orations and Speeches on Various Occasions from 1826 to 1850, 2d ed., Boston, 1850, 2 vols. 8vo. This ed. includes all that were in the ed. of 1836. 3d ed., 1853, 2 vols. 8vo. These volumes contain eighty-one articles; certainly among the most valuable ever issued from the American or British press. The titles and dates are as follows:

I. The Circumstances Favourable to the Progress of Literature in America, 1824. II. The First Settlement of New England, 1824. III. The First Battles of the Revolutionary War, 1825. IV. The Principle of the American Constitutions, 1826. V. Adams and Jefferson, 1826. VI. The History of Liberty, 1828. VII. Monument to John Harvard, 1828. VIII. Speech at Nashville, Tennessee, 1829. IX. Speech at Lexington, Kentucky, 1829. X. Speech at the Yellow Springs, in Ohio, 1829. XI. The Settlement of Massachusetts, 1830. XII. Importance of Scientific Knowledge to Practical Men, and the Encouragements to its Pursuit: the substance of several addresses. XIII. The Working Men's Party, 1830. XIV. Advantage of Scientific Knowledge to Working Men, 1831. XV. Colonization and Civilization of Africa, 1832. XVI. Education in the Western States, 1833. XVII. The Bunker Hill Monument, 1833. XVIII. Temperance, 1833. XIX. The Seven Years' War the School of the Revolution, 1833. XX. The Education of Mankind, 1833. XXI. Agriculture, 1833. XXII. Eulogy on Lafayette, 1834. XXIII. The Battle of Lexington, 1835. XXIV. The Youth of Washington, 1835. XXV. Education Favourable to Liberty, Morals, and Knowledge, 1835. XXVI. The Battle of Bloody Brook, 1835. XXVII. The Boyhood and Youth of Franklin, 1829. XXVIII. Fourth of July at Lowell, 1830. XXIX. American Manufactories, 1831. XXX. Anecdotes of Early Local History, 1833. XXXI. The Western Railroad, 1835. XXXII. Anniversary of the Settlement of Springfield, 1836. XXXIII. The Importance of the Militia, 1836. XXXIV. The Seventeenth of June at Charlestown, 1836. XXXV. Harvard Centennial Anniversary, 1836. XXXVI. The Settlement of Dedham, 1836. XXXVII. The Cattle Show at Danvers, 1836. XXXVIII. The Irish Charitable Society, 1837. XXXIX. Improvements in Prison Discipline, 1837. XL. Superior and Popular Education, 1837. XLI. The Boston Schools, 1837. XLII. The Importance of the Mechanic Arts, 1837. XLIII. Reception of the Sauks and Foxes, 1837. XLIV. Dr. Bowditch, 1838. XLV. Fourth of July, 1838. XLVI. Education the Nurture of the Mind, 1838. XLVII. Festival at Exeter, 1838. XLVIII. Accumulation, Property, Capital, Credit, 1838. XLIX. Importance of Education in a Republic, 1838. L. The Settlement at Barnstable, 1839. LI. Normal Schools, 1839. LII. Opening of the Railroad to Springfield, 1839. LIII. The Scots' Charitable Society, 1839. LIV. John Lowell, Jr., Founder of the Lowell Institute; a Memoir, 1839. LV. Dr. Robinson's Medal, 1842. LVI. British Association at Manchester, 1842. LVII. University of Cambridge, 1842. LVIII. The Royal Agricultural Society at Bristol, 1842. LIX. Agricultural Society at Waltham, 1842. LX. York Minister, 1842. LXI. Lord Mayor's Day, 1842. LXII. The Geological Society at London. LXIII. The Royal Academy of Art, 1843. LXIV. Royal Literary Fund, 1843. LXV. The Agricultural Society at Derby, 1843. LXVI. Reception at Hereford, 1843. LXVII. Saffron Walden, 1843. LXVIII. Scientific Association at Cambridge, England, 1845. LXIX. The Pilgrim Fathers, 1845. LXX. University Education, 1846. LXXI. The New Medical College at Boston, 1846. LXXII. The Famine in Ireland, 1847. LXXIII. Aid to the Colleges of Massachusetts, 1848. LXXIV. Eulogy on John Quincy Adams, 1848. LXXV. The Cambridge High School, 1848. LXXVI. Second Speech in Aid of the Colleges of Massachusetts, 1849. LXXVII. American Scientific Association, 1849. LXXVIII. The Departure of the Pilgrims, 1849. LXXIX. Cattle Show at Dedham, 1849. LXXX. The Nineteenth of April at Concord, 1850. LXXXI. The Bible: Annual Meeting of the Massachusetts Bible Society, May 27, 1850.

Since the above was written, a third volume of Mr. Everett's Orations, Discourses, &c., has been placed in the hands of the printer, and is to be pub. in Boston in 1858. It will contain—Lectures on the Civilization of the Peruvians and Aztecs, and on the Discovery of America by the Northmen; Orations and Speeches on the following occasions and subjects: The Anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill, 17th June, 1850; The Annual Examination of the Cambridge High School; Dinner to Amin Bey; Union Dinner at New York, 22d Feb., 1851; Cattle Show at Lowell; The Railroad Festival in Boston, on opening the road to Canada; Massachusetts State Agricultural Society; The Warren Street Chapel; Dinner of the Alumni of Harvard College; Another Cambridge High School Examination; Dinner to Mr. Thomas Baring; Hampshire Agricultural Society; In Faneuil Hall, on the Death of Daniel Webster; Colonization Society at Washington; Discovery and Colonization of America, before the New York Historical Society; Fourth of July, in Faneuil Hall, on Stability and Progress; The Sailing of the Pilgrims, at Plymouth, in August, 1853; New Hampshire Agricultural Society; Death of Vice President King; Fourth of July, 1855, at Dorchester; School Festival in Faneuil Hall; Death of Mr. Lawrence, in Faneuil Hall; United States Agricultural Festival in Boston; Presentation of the Cane of Washington, Feb. 23, 1858; also a Memoir of Peter C. Brooks, and some other articles. This volume will contain a copious index to the three volumes, making it a necessary companion to vols. i. and ii. Those who would witness a remarkable illustration of the power of eloquence to transmute life and beauty into the teachings of science, the lessons of history, the ethics of politics, and vicissitudes of letters, will not neglect to devote "their days and nights" to the Orations of Edward Everett.

We need hardly remind our readers that Mr. Everett has substantial claims to the character of a poet. The Dirge of Alaric the Visigoth, and the beautiful poem of Santa Croce, are among the few compositions which the remembrance of school-boy declamation can present, without fear of rebuke, to the maturer judgment of riper years. Several other poetical productions are among the evidences of their author's remarkable versatility of talent. A Notice of the Life and Works of the late Daniel Webster, by Mr. Everett, will be found in the collective edition of the works of the former, Boston, 1852, 6 vols. 8vo. To the same distinguished pen belong the Life of General Stark, in Sparks's Library of American Biography, (1st series, i. 1.), and several of the Annual Reports of the Massachusetts Board of Education. The merits of Mr. Everett's productions are duly estimated, both at home and abroad, and we regret that our limited space renders brevity of quotation from commendatory notices a matter of necessity.

The first oration which drew upon Mr. Everett the eyes of his countrymen at large was delivered at Cambridge before the Phi Beta Kappa Society, August 27, 1824. The occasion was one well calculated to call forth the eloquence of the young orator. He stood in the presence of much of the genius and learning of the land: of those who had written their names in their country's history, and whose fame was not confined to the vast republic which claimed them as her sons.

But the remembrance of the mighty dead would have proved a stronger spell than the presence of the living, had it not been that the companion of the departed, the brother-in-arms of the Father of his country, sat that day an honoured guest of the chief estates of the land which he had aided to redeem. When the youthful orator had excited to an almost painful pitch the feelings of the vast assemblage who hung upon his lips,—when they smiled or wept, sorrowed over the past or exulted in the present, at the will of the master who carried them as he listed,—he suddenly turned to the illustrious guest who had seen so much of the rise and fall of human greatness—who had witnessed alike the destruction of a throne and the birth of a nation—and addressed him in an apostrophe never to be forgotten by auditor or reader:

"Welcome, friend of our fathers, to our shores! Happy are our eyes that behold those venerable features! Enjoy a triumph such as never conqueror nor monarch enjoyed—the assurance that throughout America there is not a bosom which does not beat with joy and gratitude at the sound of your name! You have already met and saluted, or will soon meet, the few that remain of the ardent patriots, prudent counsellors, and brave warriors, with whom you were associated in achieving our liberty. But you have looked round in vain for the moest of many, who would have lived years of pleasure on a day like this, with their old companion-in-arms and brother in peril. Lincoln, and Greene, and Knox, and Hamilton, are gone; the heroes of Saratoga and Yorktown have fallen before the enemy that conquers all. Above all, the first of heroes and of men, the friend of your youth, the more than friend of his country, rests in the bosom of the soil he redeemed. On the banks of the Potomac he lies in glory and peace. You will revisit the hospitable shades of Mount Vernon, but him whom you venerated as we did, you will meet not at its door. His voice of consolation, which reached you in the dungeons of Olmütz, cannot now break its silence to bid you welcome to his own roof. But the grateful children of America will bid you welcome to our shores! and whithersoever your course shall take you, throughout the limits of the continent, the ear that hears you shall bless you, the eye that sees you shall give witness to you, and every tongue exclaim, with heartfelt joy, 'Welcome! welcome. La Fayette!'

A review of this oration, and of one delivered at Plymouth in December of the same year, will be found in the North American Review for April, 1825. To recommend its perusal to the reader, nothing more need be said than to give the name of its author—Jared Sparks, Mr. Everett's successor in the presidency of Harvard College. We quote a few lines from the conclusion:

"Professor Everett's recapitulatory remarks and closing reflections are uttered in a style of uncommon brilliancy and richness; they inculcate lofty and animating sentiments, and constitute altogether a rare specimen of eloquence and fine writing."

Perhaps one of the best reviews of Mr. Everett's Orations is that by Prof. E. Laboulaye, of the College of France, in the Journal des Débats, Oct. 6, 1853. We regret that we can find room for a brief extract only:

"Il est curieux de suivre la vie publique d'un tel homme, et c'est ce qu'il est aisé de faire dans les deux volumes que nous avons sous les yeux. Il n'y a là ni ses œuvres littéraires ni ses harangues politiques, mais seulement les discours que depuis trente ans a prononcés M. Everett chaque fois qu'il s'est trouvé en rapport avec ses concitoyens. Les sujets sont naturellement très variés, la pensée y est toujours la même; tout s'y réduit à un seul point, l'éducation intellectuelle, morale, patriotique, du peuple. L'unité est dans la parole comme elle est dans la vie de l'auteur."

An eloquent review of Mr. Everett's orations, by Professor Felton, will be found in the N. American Review for October, 1850, and an admirable analysis of his mental characteristics and oratorical style, by a distinguished critic, himself an orator of renown, occurs in the same periodical for January, 1837. We give a brief extract from the latter:

"The great charm of Mr. Everett's orations consists not so much in any single and strongly-developed intellectual trait as in that symmetry and finish which, on every page, give token of the richly-endowed and thorough scholar. The natural movements of his mind are full of grace; and the most indifferent sentence which falls from his pen has that simple elegance which it is as difficult to define as it is easy to perceive. His level passages are never tame, and his fine ones are never superfluous. His style, with matchless flexibility, rises and falls with his subject, and is alternately easy, vivid, elevated, ornamented, or picturesque; adapting itself to the dominant mood of the mind, as an instrument responds to the touch of a master's hand. His knowledge is so extensive, and the field of his allusions so wide, that the most familiar views, in passing through his hands, gather such a halo of luminous illustrations, that their likeness seems transformed, and we entertain doubts of their identity."—GEORGE STILLMAN HILLMAN.

Mr. Tuckerman also notices this remarkable power of adaptation to subjects the most incongruous, which Mr. Everett's mind exhibits in so eminent a degree:

"If Webster is the Michael Angelo of American oratory, Everett is the Raphael. In the former's definition of eloquence, he recognises its latent existence in the occasion as well as in the man and in the subject. His own oratory is remarkable for grasping the bold and essential; for developing, as it were, the anatomical basis—the very sinews and nerves of his subject—while Everett instinctively catches and unfolds the grace of occasion, whatever it be; in his mind the sense of beauty is vivid, and nothing is more surprising in his oratory than the ease and facility with which he seizes upon the redeeming associations of every topic, however far removed it may be from the legitimate domain of taste or scholarship."—Characteristics of Literature; second series; The Orator: Everett.

The introduction of the name of Daniel Webster gives us an opportunity of presenting a sketch, drawn by this eminent statesman, of the services and character of the subject of our notice:

"We all remember him,—some of us personally,—myself, certainly, with great interest, in his deliberations in the Congress of the United States, to which he brought such a degree of learning, and ability, and eloquence, as few equalled, and none surpassed. He administered, afterwards, satisfactorily to his fellow-citizens, the duties of the chair of the commonwealth. He then, to the great advantage of his country, went abroad. He was deputed to represent his government at the most important court of Europe; and he carried thither many qualities, most of them essential, and all of them ornamental and useful, to fill that high station. He had education and scholarship. He had a reputation at home and abroad. More than all, he had an acquaintance with the politics of the world, with the law of this country and of nations, with the history and policy of the countries of Europe. And how well these qualities enabled him to reflect honour upon the literature and character of his native land, not we only, but all the country and all the world, know. He has performed this career, and is yet at such a period of life, that I may venture something upon the character and privilege of my countrymen, when I predict that those who have known him long and know him now, those who have seen him and see him now, those who have heard him and hear him now, are very likely to think that his country has demands upon him for future efforts in its service."—Speech of Daniel Webster at the first Anniversary Meeting of the Norfolk Agricultural Society.

It is pleasing to know that the friendly, almost fraternal, relations which united the hearts of these two distinguished patriots were never disturbed by misunderstandings, nor chilled by estrangements. To this gratifying truth we have the annexed touching testimony. It occurs in a letter from Mr. Webster to Mr. Everett, written but about three months before the decease of the former:

"We now and then see stretching across the heavens a clear, blue, cerulean sky, without cloud, or mist, or haze. And such appears to me our acquaintance, from the time when I heard you for a week recite your lessons in the little schoolhouse in Short Street to the date hereof. [21st July, 1852.]"

Referring to Mr. Webster's hopes of future patriotic efforts upon the part of the subject of this eulogium, we may be permitted to say that undoubtedly the best service that Mr. Everett can confer upon his country is the production of a great work upon some broad question, with which the interests of humanity are sufficiently connected to insure the preservation of the fame and usefulness of the author, with the vitality of the subject. We are pleased, therefore, that Mr. Everett has selected the Law of Nations as the topic of the treatise which he is now believed to have in course of preparation. But we cannot withhold the expression of our hope that the work will be less restricted in its field than the author leads us to infer, when he informs us that it will have especial reference "To those questions which have been discussed between the governments of the United States and Europe since the peace of 1793."

The commentaries of so able and luminous an expositor upon the text, original and collected, of Grotius, Puffendorf, Burlamaqui, Klüber, Heineccius, Fulbeck, Selden, Lucchesi-Palli, and Massé, would make even the layman in love with learning which, to his great loss, he often regrets as "beyond his line and measure." We must confess that we are altogether unwilling to resign to the erudite gentlemen of the long robe all the intellectual pleasure and improvement arising from the investigation of the principles of "the perfection of reasoning," as the law has—rather ambitiously, perhaps—been styled. Although a laic, we have found the philosophy of Jurisprudence well worthy of the "Second Brother's" commendation of philosophy in general, in that "Perpetual feast of nectar'd sweets,"—

the Masque of Comus.

But to return to Mr. Everett's projected work: we confess that we hope with trembling, when we remember the many instances in which the great intellectual architects of our race have razed the half-built edifice to the ground, or refused to finish its proportions, from a despair of equaling an ideal model, from which the severity of an exquisitely-refined judgment would tolerate no defalcation. Much is thus forever lost to the world, which would have gladly profited by that which has been mistakenly withheld. Such severe judges of their own labours must consider not only what their works lack of perfection, but to how great an extent the minds of many of their prospective readers are deficient of even rudimentary knowledge, and the perception of first principles.

To provide for such, whilst not forgetful of the more advanced,—to call in the poor and the destitute, who can make no recompense, as well as to bid those who can summon in return to the intellectual feast,—may not be so gratifying to ambition, but it fulfils charity, and is recommended by the highest sanction.

On imposing convocations, indeed, Jupiter entertained the gods with ambrosia; but the Diovis Pater knew also how to prepare a feast suited to the humbler appetites of mortals. But if there be, indeed—though we are persuaded better things—any well-grounded apprehension that the world is never to behold the noble superstructure which Mr. Everett has long been erecting upon the sure foundation of his deep and solid erudition, then we shall feel justified in invoking the aid of a potent champion on behalf of a cause in which the interests of society, the science of legislation, and the moral and intellectual improvement of millions, are so deeply concerned. Surely such an appeal as the following—an appeal so eloquent, and from an authority always so venerable, and now sanctified by the seal of the tomb—shall not prove in vain:

"You have, I trust, many years before you of health and labour. What I desire is, that, in addition to the many beautiful—ay, exquisitely beautiful—specimens of your genius which we have had upon occasional topics, you would now meditate some great work for posterity, which shall make you known and felt through all time as we, your contemporaries, now know and esteem you."

This should be the crowning future purpose of your life. Sit venibum sapienti. If I should live to see it, I should hail it with the highest pleasure. If I am dead, pray remember that it was one of the thoughts which clung most closely to me to the very last."
—Judge Story to Hon. Edward Everett, Cambridge, May 30, 1840.
See Life and Letters of Judge Story, II. 333.

Everett, Erastus. A System of English Versification,
N. York, 1848, 12mo.

"This treatise, which we have examined with some care and pains, will be found highly useful to those who desire to become acquainted with the laws of English versification."

Everett, George. The Pathway to Peace and Profit, or, Truth in its Plain Dress, Lon., 1694, 4to. Encouragement for Seamen and Mariners, 1695, 4to.

Everett, James. See HOLLAND, JOHN.

Everett, John, a famous highwayman, the terror of benighted travellers on Hounslow Heath, was executed at Tyburn, February 20, 1729-30. Whilst awaiting death, he wrote an autobiography entitled A genuine Narrative of the memorable Life and Actions of John Everett, &c., Lon., 1730. A notice of this curious work, accompanied with extracts, will be found in the London Retrospective Review, vi. 237, 1822.

"Perhaps future ages may render classical the deeds of those younger sons of good families who, induced by necessity rather than choice, 'took to the road' in search of money and adventure."
—Ubi supra.

Evershed, Wm. Sub. of 2 Discourses, 1780, 8vo.

Eves, Mrs. 1. The Grammatical Plaything, 1800, 8vo.
2. Scripture made Easy, 1809, 8vo.

Eves, George. Funl. Sermon, Lon., 1661, 4to.

Ewart, John, M.D. Cancer, Bath, 1794, 8vo.

Ewart, Rev. John. Lectures on Psalms, Lon., 1822-26, 3 vols. 8vo.

"Pleasing, moral, and pious."—Lowndes's Brit. Lib.

Ewbank, George. Sermon, 1661, 4to.

Ewbank, Thomas, United States Commissioner on Patents, was born in the tower of Barnard Castle, in the north of England, in 1792. Descriptive and Historical Account of Hydraulic and other machines for raising Water, Ancient and Modern; including the progressive development of the Steam Engine, New York, 1842, 8vo; 2d ed., 1849, 8vo.

"It is full of the gospel of the art: it is just such a book as any amateur of mechanics would allow to be open on his table for the purpose of passing the little fragments of his time in occupation of a light and useful description."—Lon. Athen.

The World a Workshop, N.Y., 1835, 12mo. Life in Brazil, illustrated, N.Y., 1856, 8vo. Thoughts on Matter and Force, N. York, 1858. See Lon. Athen., 1858, Pt. 2, 199. Reminiscences in the Patent-Office and of Scenes and Things in Washington, 1858. In preparation.

Ewen, James. Ovid's Heroids, Lon., 1787, 8vo.

Ewen, W. M. 1. Grace and Truth, Edin., 1763, 12mo.
2. Essays, Doctrinal and Practical, 1767, 2 vols. 12mo.

Ewer, John, Bishop of Llandaff, consecrated, 1761.
Sermon on Prov. xxi. 31, 1762, 4to; on Heb. xiii. 16, 1766, 4to; on Rom. x. 14, 1767, 4to.

Ewes, Sir Symonds D^r. See D'EWEES.

Ewing, A. Sermon on the Church, Forbes, 12mo.

Ewing, Alexander, or Archibald, teacher of Mathematics, d. 1804, at Edinburgh. 1. Mathematics, Lon., 1772, '99, 8vo. 2. Arithmetic, 1773, 12mo. 3. Astronomy,
Edin., 1797, 8vo.

Ewing, Alexander, M.D. Observ. on the Harverian
Doctrine, in Reply to George Kerr, Lon., 1817, 12mo.

Ewing, Greville, 1767-1841, a native of Edinburgh, and a minister of the Kirk of Scotland. 1. Sermon, Lon., 1797, 8vo. 2. Remarks on Dick's Sermon, 1801. 3. Greek
Grammar, and Greek and Eng. Lexicon, Edin., 1802, 8vo; Glasg., 1812, 8vo; Glasg. and Lon., 1827, 8vo. See notices in Orme's Bibl. Bib., Horne's Bibl. Bib., and Brit. Critic.
4. Gov't, &c. of the Church of Christ, Glasg., 1807, 12mo.
5. Essays addressed to Jews, Lon., 1809, '10, 2 vols. 12mo.
"They display particularly a very accurate acquaintance with the Old Testament Scriptures, and place many passages in a new and often interesting light."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

6. An Essay on Baptism, Glasg., 1823, '24, 12mo.

See Mem. of Greville Ewing, by his daughter, 1843, 8vo.

Ewing, James. Report to the Directors of the Glasg.
Hosp. rel. to the City Poor, Glasg., 1818.

"An able, well-written, and interesting report."—McCulloch's Lit. of Scot. Econ.

Report of a Com. on the Burgess Oath, 1819, 8vo.

Ewing, James. Justice of the Peace, &c. in N. Jersey. New ed., by a member of the Bar, N. Y., 1848, 8vo.

Ewing, John, D.D., 1732-1802, a native of East Nottingham, Maryland, graduated at Princeton College, 1752;
Minister of the First Presbyterian Church, Phila., 1758-
1802; Provost of the University of Pennsylvania, 1779-
1802. Account of the Transit of Venus over the Sun;

Trans. Amer. Soc. I. 39. Godfrey's Quadrant, ib. iv. 126.
Sermon on the death of George Bryan, 1791. Sermon in Amer. Preacher, II. Lectures on Nat. Philosophy, 1809.

"His qualifications as a minister of the Gospel were many and eminent. Science was with him a handmaid to religion. He was mighty in the Scriptures." See Linn's Funl. Sermon; Assembly's Miss. Mag.; Miller, II. 372; Holmes, II. 424; Allen's Amer. Elog.
Dict.

Ewing, Capt. Peter. The Soldier's Opera, 1792, 8vo.

Ewing, Thomas, teacher in Edinburgh. 1. The English Learner, Lon., 1815; 14th ed., 1849, 12mo. 2. Principles of Elocution, revised by T. B. Calvert, 30th ed., Lon., 1852, 12mo.

"Its materials are gathered with a tasteful hand from every period of our literature."—Lon. Quar. Jour. of Education.

3. Rhetorical Exercises, 12mo. The three preceding works form a consecutive series. 4. A New System of Geography, 1816; with a new General Atlas, 17th ed., 1849, 12mo.

"We can recommend Mr. Ewing's book to the Geographical student."—Lon. Critical Review.

"By far the most elegant and accurate Atlas which we have seen on a similar scale."—Blackwood's Mag.

Ewington, H. The Arcana of Short-Hand, 1805, 12mo. New ed., 18mo.

"This little work is the most perspicuous, concise, and expeditious method that has been hitherto proposed, and we are persuaded that we do students of Short-hand a service, in recommending it to their attention."—Anti-Jacobin Review, Feb. 1808.

Exall, J., a Baptist minister of Tenterden, 12mo. 1. The Spirit of Inquiry assisted, Tenterden, 12mo. 2. Brief Calvinistic conclusions on the attributes of God, &c., 1824, 8vo.

Exall, Joseph. Sermon, Prov. xiii. 15, Tenterden, 8vo.

Exall, Joshua. Infant Baptism, Lon., 1693, 4to.

Exton, Bradenot, M.D. Midwifery, Lon., 1751, 8vo.

Exton, John, LL.D., Judge of the Admiralty. Maritime Disceologie; or Sea Jurisdiction in England, in three books, Lon., 1664, fol.; 2d ed., 1746; 3d ed., 1755, 8vo.

Exton, Richard Bradenot, Rector of Athelington.

1. Bishop Hall's Sacred Aphorisms, Lon., 1823, 12mo.

2. Sixty Lectures on the Psalms of the M. and E. Service, 1847, 12mo.

"The Lectures are eloquently and piously written; and they constitute an admirable source of family edification for the evenings of the Lord's Day."—Ch. of Eng. Jour.

Eyre, Edmund John, a comedian, wrote The Dreamer
Awake; a Farce, 1791, 8vo, a number of other plays, and some poems. See Biog. Dramat., and Watt's Bibl. Brit.

Eyre, Edward. Secret Instructions of Frederick II.
From the French of the Prince de Ligne, 1798, 12mo.

Eyre, Francis, d. 1804, a R. Catholic layman, of Warkworth Castle. 1. Remarks on Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the R. Empire, Lon., 1778, 8vo; 2. Appeal relative to ditto, 1799, 8vo. 3. Christian Religion, 1795, 8vo.
4. Letter to Rev. R. Churton, 1795. 5. Reply to the same,
1798, 8vo. The controversy was upon the respective merits of the Church of England and that of Rome.

Eyre, Sir James, 1734-1799, Lord Chief Justice of the Ct. of C. Pleas, was a native of Wiltshire. Charge to the Grand Jury, Lon., 1792, 4to.

Eyre, John, D.D. Curate of Wylie, Wilts. Serms., 1756, '58, '61, '77. Composition of a Sermon, 1797, 8vo.

Eyre, John. Remedies proposed for the Relief of our Embarrassments, Lon., 1813, 8vo.

Eyre, Joseph. Observ. on the Prophecies relating to the Restoration of the Jews, Lon., 1771, 8vo. Extracts from this work were printed in 1823 by the London Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews.

Eyre, Richard, a Canon of Sarum, and Rector of Burghclere, Hants. Serms., 1713, '15, '16, '17, '26.

Eyre, Richard, D.D., Rector of Bright-Walton, Berks.
Sermon, Lon., 1767, 4to.

Eyre, Robert, D.D. Serms., 1693, 1700, 8vo.

Eyre, Robert, D.D., Rector of Buckland, Surrey.
Sermon, 1735, 8vo; 4 do., 1738, 8vo.

Eyre, Lt. Vincent, R. N. 1. Military Operations at Cabul, 4th ed., Lon., 1843, cr. 8vo. 2. Journal of Imprisonments continued and concluded, 1843, cr. 8vo. 3. Portraits of the Cabul Prisoners, 1843, 8vo. 4. Prison Sketches, 1843, cr. 8vo.

"Lieutenant Eyre, whose name is prominently mentioned in the celebrated letter of Lady Sale, was a foremost actor in the scenes of this dreadful time, and has described them with the knowledge and precision of an accomplished soldier, and in the manner and temper eminently suited to such a narrative—straightforward, manly, unaffected."—Lon. Examiner.

"I will ask you to read the Narrative of Lieutenant Eyre, and remind you of the description there given of the greatest disaster that ever befall a British Army."—SIR ROBERT PEEL, in the House of Commons.

Eyre, Wm., d. 1670, a Calvinistic divine, a native of Wiltshire, entered the Univ. of Oxf., 1629, aged 16; minister of St. Edmund's Church, Salisbury, 1654; ejected for nonconformity, 1662. Epistola ad Vaserium de textus Hebraei variantibus Lectionibus, Lon., 1652, 4to. The true Justification of a Sinner explained, &c., 1654; in Latin, under the title of Vindiciæ Justificationis Gratiæ, 1654, 4to.

Eyre, Wm., of Buckingham. Serms., 1785, 4to.

Eyres, Joseph. The Church Sleeper awakened; or, a Sermon from Acts xx. 9, Lon., 1659, 12mo.

Eyton, John, Vicar of Wellington, and Rector of Eyton, Salop. Serms., 1805, '07, '10. Serms. on various Subjects, Wellington, 1815, 2 vols. 8vo.

Eyton, R. W., Rector of Ryton. Antiquities of Shropshire, Pts. 1 to 4, comprising vol. i., 1854, r. 8vo; ii., 1855; iii., and Pts. 1 and 2 of vol. iv., 1856.

"When completed it will be a book which may find a place in every gentleman's library in the country to which it belongs, without the objection of enormous bulk or excessive price."—Lon. Athenæum.

"It is written in that unaffected and simple, yet lucid and forcible, style, which must recommend it to the general historical reader."—Shrewsbury Chronicle.

Eyton, T. C. 1. Hist. of the Rarer British Birds, Lon., 1838, 8vo. This forms a Supplement to Bewick's British Birds. 2. Monograph of the Anatidæ, or Duck Tribe, Lon., 1838, 4to. 3. Lecture on Artificial Manures, 1844, 8vo. 4. Herd-Book of Hereford Cattle, p. 8vo. Vol. i., 1846; vol. ii., Pt. 1, 1848; vol. ii., Pt. 2, 1853.

"The work contains the lists, pedigrees, and portraits of the most celebrated bulls of that breed, and the prices at which many of them were sold. It is a very entertaining book to those connected with Hereford cattle."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

F.

Faber, Frederick Wm., formerly a clergyman of the Church of England, and now a Priest of the Oratory, in the Church of Rome. 1. Tracts on the Church and the P. Book, Lon., 1839, 12mo. 2. Sermon on Education, 1840, 8vo. 3. Cherwell Water-Lily, and other Poems, Lon., 1840, fp. 8vo. 4. Styrian Lake, and other Poems, 1842, fp. 8vo. 5. Sights and Thoughts in Foreign Churches, and Foreign People, 1842, 8vo. 6. Sir Lancelot, a Poem, 1844, fp. 8vo. 7. Rosary, and other Poems, 1845, fp. 8vo. 8. Jesus and Mary; or, Catholic Hymns, 18mo. 9. Essay on Beatification and Canonization, 1848, p. 8vo. 10. Oratory of St. Philip Neri, 1850, 12mo. 11. Catholic Home Missions, 1851, 12mo. 12. All for Jesus; 3d ed., 1855, 12mo. Other works.

Faber, George Stanley, 1773–1854, Master of Sherburn Hospital, and Prebendary of Salisbury, educated at University Coll., Oxf., was elected Fellow and Tutor of Lincoln Coll. before he had reached his 21st year. In 1803 he relinquished his fellowship by marriage; after which he acted for two years in the capacity of curate to his father, the Rev. Thomas Faber, of Calverley, near Bradford, Yorkshire. In 1805 he became vicar of Stockton-upon-Tees, three years later vicar of Redmarshall, and in 1811 vicar of Longnewton, where he remained for 21 years. For these preferments he was indebted to the friendship of Bishop Barrington. In 1831 Bishop Burgess collated Mr. Faber to a prebend in Salisbury Cathedral; and in 1832 Bishop Van Mildert gave him the mastership of Sherburn Hospital, which he retained for the long term of 22 years—being called to his rest January 27, 1854, in the 81st year of his age. Mr. Faber's profound erudition, ardent piety, and uncompromising advocacy of what he esteemed the truth, rendered him an object of respect and veneration with all classes of his fellow-men. The following list of his writings exhibits in a striking light the comprehensive character of his studies. We extract the titles from the London Gentlemen's Magazine for May, 1854, where the reader will find an interesting biographical notice of this excellent man and useful writer:

1. Two Sermons, Feb. 10, 1799. 2. An attempt to explain, by recent events, Five of the Seven Vials, Rev. xvii. 1, 1799, 8vo. 3. Howe Mosaisms; or, A View of the Mosaisc Records: 8 Lectures at the Bampton Lecture, 1801, 2 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., 1818, 2 vols. 8vo.

"The leading object of it is to establish the authenticity of the Pentateuch, by pointing out the coincidence of its facts and statements with the remains of profane antiquity, and their connection with Christianity. . . . Whether the Howe Mosaisms be considered as a work on the evidences of Christianity, or as furnishing illustrations of various parts of the word of God, its claims are equally deserving of regard from the Christian student."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"Those who have not the means or leisure to consult the very valuable works of Mr. Bryant, Mr. Maurice, and Sir W. Jones, in this line, will find in these volumes many of the most striking facts brought together, and so arranged as justly to corroborate and confirm the events recorded in the Pentateuch. The references to other authors are numerous; nor are these confined solely to the ancients. Additional notes and illustrations are to be found at the end of each volume."—British Critic, xix., O. S., pp. 352, 353.

"Erudite and evangelical."—Bickersteth's C. S.

4. Divine Authority conferred by Episcopal Ordination necessary to a legitimate discharge of the Christian ministry, a Sermon, 1802.

5. A Dissert. on the Mysteries of the Cabyri; or, The great Gods of Phœnicia, &c., 1803, 2 vols. 8vo.

"This work establishes the justice of the remark made on the author's profound acquaintance with antiquity. In this respect it is second only to the Ancient Mythology of Bryant, from which it differs on several important points, on which, however, Mr. Bryant himself changed his mind after the publication of his great work. There are many things, learned and curious, and many things also fanciful, in the 'Mysteries of the Cabyri.'"—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

6. Thoughts on the Arminian and Calvinistic Controversy, 1803, 8vo. 7. Dissertation on the Prophecies that have been fulfilled, are now fulfilling, or will hereafter be fulfilled, relative to the great period of 1200 years, the Papal and Mahomedan Apostacies, the tyrannical reign of Antichrist, or the Infidel Power, and the Restoration of the Jews, 1806, 2 vols. 8vo; 4th ed., 1810; 5th ed., 1814; vol. iii., 1818. Supplement to the above, 1806, 8vo. This work, the author remarks, is superseded by his Sacred Calendar of Prophecy, 1828, 3 vols. 8vo. See No. 18. 8. Answer to Bioheno, 1807, 8vo. 9. View of the Prophecies relating to Judah and Israel, 1808, 2 vols. 8vo. Again, 1809, 2 vols. 8vo.

"A very valuable work."—Bickersteth.

10. Dissert. on the LXX. weeks of Daniel, 1811, 8vo. 11. On the Ordinary Operations of the Holy Spirit, 1813, 8vo; 6th ed., 1846, fp. 8vo.

"A valuable experimental work."—Bickersteth.

12. The Origin of Pagan Idolatry, 1816, 3 vols. 4to.

"An elaborate performance."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

13. Serms. on Various Subjects and Occasions, 1816–20, 2 vols. 8vo.

"These sermons are evidently the production of no common mind. They comprise many subjects of high importance, and are handled with rare force of argument, and such correctness of language and taste, that few persons will take up the work without giving it an entire perusal."—Lon. Christian Observer.

Also highly commended in the British Critic.

14. Sermon, Isa. lx. 1–5; the Conversion of the Jews, &c., 1822, 8vo. 15. The Genius and Object of the Patriarchal, the Levitical, and the Christian Dispensations, 1823, 2 vols. 8vo.

"This partakes strongly of all the characteristics of Mr. Faber's writings—strong, masculine sense, extensive classical erudition, and a hearty love of hypothesis. There is a great deal said in these volumes that must be true, much that may be true, though not proved to be so, and many things that we believe not to be true. He combats Bishop Warburton very successfully."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

16. The Difficulties of Infidelity, 1824, 8vo.

"A masterly and powerfully-written treatise, the purpose of which is to show, not only that Infidelity has its own proper difficulties as well as Christianity, but that those difficulties are incomparably greater and more formidable."

"Faber's works are full of research and valuable matter: he is an original and pious writer."—Bickersteth.

17. The Difficulties of Romanism, 1826, 8vo. 18. Supplement to ditto, 1828, 8vo; 2d ed., 1830, 8vo; 3d ed., 1853, 8vo. Trans. into French and Italian. An Answer to this was written by J. F. M. Trevern, Bishop of Strasbourg, trans. by the Rev. F. C. Husenbeth, and pub. in Lon., 1828, 8vo. Faber replied in his Supplement, and Mr. Husenbeth pub. several treatises upon the subject. See Lowndes's Brit. Lib.

19. Original Expiatory Sacrifice, 1827, 8vo. 20. The Sacred Calendar of Prophecy, 1828, 3 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., 1844, 3 vols. 12mo.

"Worthy of careful study. It throws much light on the predictions of the Book of Daniel."—Bickersteth.

"Mr. Faber has endeavoured to combine together the various prophecies both of the Old and New Testament, which treat of the grand double period of seven times; a period coinciding with those times of the Gentiles, which are styled, by Mr. Mede, 'The Sacred Calendar of Prophecy.' In the present more extensive work, the author has rectified various errors in his preceding publications on prophecy."—Horne's Bibl. Bib.

See an analysis of this work in British Critic, April, 1873

1633. 21. Letters on the Catholic Question, 1829, 8vo. 22. Answer to Mr. Husenbeth, 1829, 8vo. See Nos. 17 and 18. 23. Four Letters on Catholic Emancipation, (1829), 8vo. 24. The Fruits of Infidelity contrasted with the Fruits of Christianity, 1831, 12mo. 25. Assize Sermon, 1832, 8vo. 26. The Apostolicity of Trinitarianism, 1832, 2 vols. 8vo. 27. Recapitulated Apostasy the only Rationale of the concealed Apocalyptic name of the Roman Empire, 1833, 12mo.

"Faber brings arguments to show that averevay is the name intended by St. John, and its number 666."—Lowndes's Bibl. Lib. 28. The Primitive Doctrine of Election, 1836, 8vo; 2d ed., 1842, 8vo.

"We do not hesitate to express our opinion that this will be found the most useful of all Mr. Faber's writings."—Lon. Christian Remembrancer.

"A laborious and learned work."—British Critic.

"Mr. Faber verifies his opinions by demonstration. We cannot pay it higher respect than by recommending it to all."—Church of Eng. Quar. Review.

29. Mr. Husenbeth's professed Refutation of the Argument of the Difficulties of Romanism, 1836, 8vo. See Nos. 17, 18, and 22.

30. The Primitive Doctrine of Justification, 1837, 8vo; 2d ed., 1839. 31. Vallenses and Albigenses, 1838, 8vo. 32. The Primitive Doctrine of Regeneration, 1840, 8vo. 33. The Doctrine of Transubstantiation, associated with (34.) Remarks on Dr. Wiseman's Lectures on the Doctrines of the R. C. Church, 1840, 8vo.

"This work will be found full of sound information and learning, well disposed, and brought with good effect on the argument. The whole book is written with logical force and precision, and the sophistries of his antagonist clearly detected."—Lon. Gentleman's Magazine.

35. Provincial Letters, on the "Tracts for the Times," 1842, 2 vols. 12mo; 2d ed., 1844, 2 vols. 12mo.

"But this much we will say, that no one desirous of fully understanding the whole of the controversy relative to the Tractarian School should omit to procure these volumes. Mr. Painter has done well, both for the Churchman and the Church. In drawing forth from Mr. Faber these Provincial Letters; and Mr. Faber has proved more than ever his love of that Church of which he is a sincere and enlightened and high-principled supporter."—Church and State Gazette.

36. Eight Dissert. upon the promise of a Mighty Deliverer, 1845, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Mr. Faber has not confined his attention to one branch of study—he has taken the whole range of prophecy; and wherever profane learning or Gentile traditions could throw any light on the subject, he has not omitted fully and judiciously to avail himself of the collateral helps for better understanding what may be called the machinery of sacred visions and prophecies; and so more correctly applying the highly wrought predictions to the truly corresponding historical events."—Ch. of Eng. Quar. Review.

37. Letters on Tractarian Secession to Popery, 1846, 12mo. 38. A Reply to a Letter to G. S. Faber, by Christopher, Lord Bishop of Bangor, 1847, 8vo. 39. The Three Unproved Assertions, &c., 1850, 12mo. Refers to Baptismal Regeneration. 40. Many Mansions in the Home of the Father, 1851, 8vo. 41. Papal Infallibility, 1851, 8vo. 42. The Revival of the French Emperors anticipated from the necessity of Prophecy, 1853, 12mo; 4 eds. in the same year.

It will be observed that Mr. Faber's forty-two publications extend over a period of fifty-five years, i. e., 1799–1853. Few who have written so much and so long have so well maintained their reputation. In this connexion we may justly quote the remarks of the author of The Christian Preacher:

"Mr. Faber is the most voluminous writer of the age. For several years his publications have appeared with surprising rapidity, considering their nature; and yet not one of them bears any mark of undue haste. His Horæ Mosæicæ. Origin of Idolatry, Difficulties of Romanism, Difficulties of Infidelity, and treatises on Election, Justification, Regeneration, Apostolicity of Trinitarianism, &c., are among the most valuable publications of modern times."—Dr. R. Williams's C. P.

Faber, John, Sr. Portraits of the Founders of Colleges in Oxford and Cambridge, in mezzotinto, Lon., 1712, large 4to, or small fol. They have been printed with the addition of borders, and some of them have been retouched, and published by Parker. See Lowndes's Bibl. Man.

Faber, Nicholas. A Woman's Prophecy, 4to.

Fabian, or Fabyan, Robert, d., according to Stowe, 1511, according to Bale, 1512, an alderman of London, is celebrated as the author of Fabyan's Chronicle, which he himself nameth the Concordance of Histories. This history is divided into seven portions: 1st to 6th inclusive, from the landing of Brute to the Norman Conquest; 7th, from the Conquest to the year 1485. In this last we have the results of his personal observations. He gives a copy of verses as an epilogue to each portion, under the title of the Seven Joys of the Blessed Virgin. Of the Chronicle there have been five edits.—viz., 1st, printed by Pynson, 1516, fol.; 2d, printed by W. Rastall, 1553, 2 vols. fol.; 3d, printed by Wm. Bonham, 1542, 2 vols. fol.; 4th, printed by John Kyngton, 1559, 2 vols. fol.; 5th, with a biographical and literary Preface, and an Index by Henry Ellis, 1811, r. 4to. This is from Pynson's ed., collated with the other eds., and a MS. of the author's own time, including the different continuations.

"The first poet in the sixteenth century is due to Robert Fabian, an eminent merchant, and sometime Sheriff of London. Both Bale and Pitts subdivide his historical writings into a great many several treatises; but, I presume, what they call his Historiarum Concordantie is the sum of all. . . . He is very particular in the affairs of London, many good things being noted by him, which concern the government of that great city, hardly to be had elsewhere."—Bishop Nicolson's Eng. Hist. Lib.

"Our author's transitions from verse to prose, in the course of a prolix narrative, seem to be made with much ease, and when he begins to verify, the historian disappears only by the addition of rhyme and stanza. . . . As an historian, our author is the duldest of compilers. He is equally attentive to the succession of the mayors of London and of the monarchs of England; and seems to have thought the dinners at Guildhall, and the pageantries of the city companies, more interesting transactions than our victories in France, and our struggles for public liberty at home."—Warton's Hist. of Eng. Poetry; and see Dibdin's Typ. Antiq. of G. Brit., and Sir Henry Ellis's Pref. to Fabyan's Chronicle, edit. 1811.

Fackler, David Morris. Letter to Rt. Rev. G. W. Doane, Bp. of N. Jersey; vindicating his (F.'s) priesthood, N. York, 1851, 8vo.

Facy, Wm. Stenography, 1672.

"This system exhibits no real improvement upon those of its predecessors."—Lowndes's Bibl. Man.

Faden, Wm. The Royal Table, Lon., 1718, 12mo.

Faden, Wm. G. 1. The Brit. Colonies in N. America, 1777, fol. 2. Geographical Exercises, 1778, fol. 3. Atlas Minimus Universalis, 1798, 12mo.

Page, John. Speculum Egrotorum: The Sick Man's Glass, Lon., 1606, 8vo; 1638, 4to.

Page, Mary. Fame's Revue, Lon., 1637, 8vo. This contains a roll of 420 persons of distinction. Bibl. Anglo-Poet., £30, q. v. Sir M. M. Sykes, Pt. 1, 1162, £20 5s.

Page, Robert. Infant Baptism, Lon., 1645, 12mo.

Page, Robert. Descrip. of the World, Lon., 1658, 8vo.

Fair, F. M. Abridg. of 1st Rep. of the Commis. of Cts. Com. Law, Lon., 1829, 8vo.

Fair, George. Weights and Measures.

Fairbairn. Act for Arming the Nation, 1803.

Fairbairn, John. Treatise on Breeding, Rearing, and Feeding Cheviot and Blackfaced Sheep, 1823, 8vo.

Fairbairn, Rev. Patrick, of Salton. 1. Exposition of the 1st Epist. of St. Peter, 1836, 2 vols. 12mo.

"Worthy of standing on the same shelf with Ernesti, Tholuck, and others."—Method. Mag.

2. The Typology of Scripture, Edin., 1845, '47, 2 vols. 12mo; 3d ed., 1857, 2 vols. 8vo; Phila., 1853, 8vo.

"By far the soberest, most systematic, and most satisfactory work of the kind which we have yet seen."—Ch. of Eng. Quar. Rev. "A learned, judicious, and truly evangelical volume."—J. P. S. Smith, D.D.

3. Comment on the Psalms. Trans. from E. M. Hengstenberg, D.D., by Rev. P. Fairbairn and Rev. J. Thomson, 1845–48, 3 vols. 8vo.

"We have met with no commentator who displays higher powers or sounder qualifications than Prof. Hengstenberg."—Churchman's Monthly Review.

4. Jonah, his Life, Character, and Mission, 1849, 12mo.

5. Ezekiel, and the Book of his Prophecy, 1851, 8vo.

"A work which casts considerable light on one of the obscure portions of God's word."—Killo's Journal.

6. The Revelation of St. John; trans. from E. W. Hengstenberg, D.D., Edin., 1851, 2 vols. 8vo. 7. Prophecy, &c., 1856, 8vo. 8. Hermeneutical Manual, 1858, 8vo.

Fairbanks, George R. Hist. and Antiq. of the City of St. Augustine, Florida, N. York, 1858,

Fairchild, Ashbel G., D.D. The Great Supper: three discourses on Luke xiv. 16–24, Phila., 18mo. This defence of the Calvinistic system has been widely circulated.

Fairchild, Thomas. On the different and sometimes contrary motion in Plants, Phil. Trans., 1724.

Fairchild, Thomas. Sermon, 1757.

Fairclough, Daniel and John. See FRATLEY.

Fairclough, Samuel. The Troublers Troubled, Lon., 1641, 4to. Sermons, 1650, '75.

Fairfax, B. Treatise of the Just Interest of the Kings of England, &c., 1703, 12mo. In Laudem Botanices Oratio, 1717, 4to. Oratio Apologetica, &c., 1718, 4to.

Fairfax, Brian, of Alexandria, Virginia, d. 1802, aged 75. Sermon in Amer. Preacher, vol. i.

Fairfax, Bryan. 1. Cat. of the Pictures of the Duke of Buckingham, Lon., 1751, 4to. 2. Cat. of his Library, 1756, 8vo. This library was purchased by Mr. F. Child, and all the catalogues except twenty destroyed. It came into the possession of the Countess of Jersey, Osterley Park, Middlesex.

Fairfax, Edward, d. 1632, the second son of Sir Thomas Fairfax, of Denton, Yorkshire, passed his days in lettered ease at his seat at Fuyistone. He wrote a poetical history of Edward, the Black Prince, twelve eclogues, a Discourse of Witchcraft, some letters against the Church of Rome, and a trans. of Tasso's Recovery of Jerusalem. The letters seem to have been the only one of his compositions which was printed, with the exception of the fourth of his eclogues, which will be found in Cooper's Muses' Library, 1737. The trans. of the Recovery of Jerusalem was first pub. in 1600, fol.; 2d ed., 1624, fol.; 3d ed., 1637, 8vo. The 1st ed. is the most correct; the 2d and 3d are corrupted by interpolations. 4th ed., 1749; more accurate than the 2d and 3d, but occasionally modernized by the editor without much taste or judgment. 5th ed., by Charles Knight, from the old folio of 1600, 1817, 2 vols. 6th ed., retaining the old orthography, by Mr. Singer, 1818, 2 vols. 7th ed., by Charles Knight, 1844, 2 vols. 8th ed., 1853, 2 vols. Amer. ed., last impression, 1855, 12mo. The Amer. ed. gives the text of Charles Knight's ed. from the old folio ed. of 1600. Prefixed will be found a Critique on Fairfax's Tasso, by Leigh Hunt, Charles Knight's Lives of Tasso and Fairfax, and (taken from Singer's ed.) the Commemorative Poem by Robert Gould to the 3d ed., and a Poem entitled The Genius of Godfrey to Prince Charles. To this excellent ed. we must refer the reader for much valuable information respecting Tasso and his translator. See also Biog. Brit. for an interesting account of Fairfax, by Dr. Kippis. Few translations have been honoured with commendations from so many distinguished authorities. The names of King James, King Charles, Dryden, Waller, and Collins, by no means exhaust the list.

"Milton has acknowledged to me that Spenser was his original; and many besides myself have heard our famous Waller own that he derived the harmony of his numbers from 'Godfrey of Bulloigne,' which was turned into English by Mr. Fairfax."—Dryden's Preface to his Fables.

"Fairfax has translated Tasso with an elegance and ease, and at the same time with an exactness, which, for that age, are surprising."—Hume's History of England.

"We do not know a translation in any language that is to be preferred to this in all the essentials of poetry."—Lon. Quarterly Review.

"Fairfax I have been a long time in quest of. Johnson, in his Life of Waller, gives a most delicious specimen of him."—CHARLES LAMB.

Dr. Johnson introduces the quotation to which Lamb refers, with the remark that Fairfax's version, "after Mr. Hoole's translation, will perhaps not be soon reprinted." For comparisons of the two translations see authorities cited above.

"Edmund [Edward] Fairfax, one of the most judicious, elegant, and happy in his time most approved, of English Translators, both for his choice of so worthily extol'd a heroic poet as Torquato Tasso, as for the exactness of his version, in which he is judged by some to have approved himself no less a poet than in what he hath written of his own genius."—Philips's Theat. Poet.

Fairfax, Ferdinando, Lord, d. 1648. 1. Letter to the Earl of Essex, London, 1643, 4to. 2. Letter rel. to the Victory at Selby, 1644, 4to.

Fairfax, John. Life of O. Stockton, 1681, 4to.

Fairfax, Nathaniel, M.D. Bulk and Selvedge of the World, London, 1674, 12mo. Med. &c. con. to Phil. Trans., 1667, '68.

Fairfax, Thomas, Lord, 1611–1671, the celebrated Parliamentary general, was a warm friend to learning, and gave to the Bodleian Library 29 ancient MSS. and 49 modern ones. He was the author of Short Memorials of Thomas, Lord Fairfax, London, 1699, 8vo, and left many theological, poetical, and other MS. compositions. See Biog. Brit.; Park's Walpole's R. & N. Authors; Bibl. Brit.

"One can easily believe his having been the tool of Cromwell, when one sees, by his own memoirs, how little idea he had of what he had been about."—HORACE WALPOLE: R. & N. Authors.

See also the Fairfax Correspondence, being Memorials of the Civil War, from the Correspondence of the Fairfax Family with the most Distinguished Personages engaged in the contest; edited by Robert Bell; fine portraits and facsimiles, 1849, 4 vols. 8vo. (pub. £3.)

"The discovery of the Fairfax MSS. is an era in modern literary history. Crowded with minute details and individual experiences, they bring us closer to the actual vicissitudes of those stirring times than any previous publication; and written, for the most part, at the instant, on the field of battle or in the midst of councils of war, they preserve a vigour and freshness which contrasts most agreeably with the formal histories of the period."

Fairfax, Thomas. The Complete Sportsman; or, Country Gentleman's Recreation, London, 8vo.

Fairfax, Wm., eldest son of Edward Fairfax, the translator of Tasso, trans. Diogenes Laertius out of Greek into English. He was grammatical tutor to Thomas Stanley, the author of The Hist. of Philosophy.

Fairfield, Miss Genevieve Geneva, b. 1832, in N. York, is the eldest daughter of Sumner Lincoln Fairfield. 1. Genevra; or, The History of a Portrait. 2. The Vice President's Daughter. 3. The Wife of Two Husbands. 4. The Innkeeper's Daughter, Irene, &c. Miss Fairfield is a resident of the city of New York.

Fairfield, Mrs. Jane, widow of Sumner Lincoln Fairfield, is a native of Rahway, N. Jersey. Life of Sumner Lincoln Fairfield, New York, 1846, 12mo. This is an interesting volume, and does great credit to Mrs. Fairfield's sensibility and conjugal affection. She is a resident of the city of New York.

Fairfield, John. Reports of Cases in Sup. Ct. of Maine, Hallowell, 1835–37, 3 vols. 8vo.

Fairfield, Sumner Lincoln, 1803–1844, a native of Warwick, Massachusetts, acquired considerable reputation as a poet. His principal works are the following: 1. The Cities of the Plain. 2. The Heir of the World, 1828. 3. The Spirit of Destruction, 1830. 4. The Last Night of Pompeii, 1832. 5. The Sisters of Saint Clara. A collection of his writings was pub. in Phila. in 1841. Many of his poetical and prose writings were originally pub. in the North American Magazine, a monthly periodical conducted by him for some years in the city of Philadelphia. For further particulars respecting Fairfield—certainly a poet of no ordinary rank—we must refer to the biography by his widow, Mrs. Jane Fairfield, noticed above.

"He wrote much, and generally with commendable aims. His knowledge of books was extensive and accurate. He had considerable fancy, which at one period was under the dominion of cultivated taste and chastened feeling."—Griswold's Poets and Poetry of America, q. v.

Fairholme, George. 1. A Genl. View of the Geology of Scripture, in which the unerring truth of the inspired narrative of the early events of the world is exhibited, and distinctly proved by the corroborative testimony of physical facts on every part of the earth's surface, London, 1838, 8vo. A French trans., entitled Positions Géologiques et Vérification directe de la Bible, was pub. at Munich in 1834, 8vo.

"We strongly recommend this work to the religious reader as an armoury of facts, where he may choose defensive weapons against the attacks of the infidel."—Lon. Evang. Register.

2. New and Conclusive Physical Demonstrations, both of the Fact and Period of the Mosaic Deluge, and of its having been the only event of the kind that has ever occurred upon the earth, 1838, 8vo; 2d ed., 1840, 8vo.

"Mr. Fairholme's two treatises (especially the last) are the most scientific of all the publications which have hitherto been published on the subject of the geological and other physical proofs of the universal deluge recorded by Moses."—Horne's Bibl. Bib.

See LORD, DAVID N.

Fairholt, F. W. 1. Costume in England; A History of Dress to the close of the 18th century, London, 1846, 8vo.

"One of the most useful and interesting books we have seen for a long time."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

2. The Home of Shakspeare Illustrated and Described, 1847, 12mo. An interesting little volume. 3. Remarkable and Scientific Characters, 1849, sq.

Fairlie, Mrs. Portraits of the Children of the Nobility; from drawings by Alfred E. Chalon and other eminent artists. Edited by Mrs. Fairlie, r. 4to.

"The conception of this publication was a brilliant idea."—Lon. Literary Gazette.

"A splendid volume. It is appropriately dedicated to the Queen, and will, no doubt, speedily find its way into almost every aristocratic mansion in the kingdom."—Edinb. Review.

Fairman, Capt. 1. Drawback on Wine, 1804, 8vo. 2. Letters on the existing Differences between G. Brit. and Amer., 1813, 8vo. 3. Reduc. of the Forces, 1814, 8vo.

Fairman, Wm. 1. Longitude at Sea, London, 1783, 4to. 2. Treatise on Geography, use of the Globes, and Astronomy, 1788, 8vo.

Fairman, Wm. 1. The Public Stocks examined, London, 1795, 8vo; Appendix, 1796, 8vo. 2. Life Assurance, 1811, 8vo.

Fairweather, Thomas. Serms., 1697, 4to.

Faithorn, John. Liver Complaint, 3d ed., 1818.

Faithorne, Wm., 1616–1691, a celebrated engraver, a native of London. The Art of Engraving and Etching, London, 1662. See Walpole's Anecdotes; Strutt's Dict.; Bryan's Dict.; Spooner's Dict.

Falch, N., M.D. Latitude at Sea, London, 1771, 4to. Seamen's Medical Instructor, 1774, 8vo. Other works on medicine, mechanics, &c., 1772–79.

Falcon, Thomas. Serm., 1760, 8vo.

Falcon, Wm. Astrologum Ludus, London, 1571, 4to.

Falconar, Harriet and Maria. 1. Poems, London, 1788, 12mo. 2. Poems on Slavery, 1788, 8vo. 3. Poetic Laurels, 1791, 4to.

Falconbridge, Alex. Slave Trade, Lon., 1788, 8vo.
Falconbridge, Anna Maria. Two Voyages to Sierra Leone, 1791, '92, Lon., 1794, 12mo; 1795.

Falconer, Sir David, of Newton. Decisions of the Lords of Council and Session, Nov. 1681-Jan. 1686, Edin., 1701, 4to.

Falconer, David. Decisions of the Ct. of Sessions, Nov. 1744-Dec. 1751, Edin., 1746-53, 2 vols. fol.

Falconer, David. A Journey from Joppa to Jerusalem, in May, 1761, with occasional Notes, Lon., 1753, 4to. Contains many amusing passages.

Falconer, Hugh. Selections from the Boston of Sadi, Lon., 1838, 16mo. These selections comprise about a third part of the Moral Poems or chain of Apologues, the Boston of Sadi.

"Sadii opus perfectissimum Buxtan."—Gul. Jones.

In conjunction with Proby T. Cantley: Fauna Antiqua Sivalonis; in Pla., fol., 1846, &c.

"A work of immense labour and research."—Address of the President of the Geological Society of London, 20th Feb., 1846.

Falconer, John. Cryptomenysis Patefacta; or, The Art of Decyphering Secret Writing, Lon., 1685, 8vo; 1692.

Falconer, Magnus. 1. Experimental Inquiries on Blood, &c., Lon., 1776, 8vo. 2. Synop. of Lect. on Anat. and Surgery, 1779, 8vo.

Falconer, Capt. Richard. His Voyages, Dangerous Adventures, and Imminent Escapes, Lon., 1724, 8vo; new ed., 1837, 18mo. This is said to be fictitious. It was a great favourite of Sir Walter Scott:

"I have no hobby-horsical commissions at present, unless if you meet the Voyages of Captain Richard or Robert Falconer, in one volume—'cow-hell, quoth Sancho'—I mark them for my own."—Scott to Daniel Terry, 20th Oct., 1813.

Scott had long vainly sought for this coveted volume:

"It is very scarce; for, endeavouring to add it to the other favourites of my infancy, I think I looked for it ten years to no purpose, and at last owed it to the active kindness of Mr. Terry."—Scott's note on the fly-leaf of his copy.

"Many thanks for Captain Richard Falconer. . . . Nothing ever disturbed my feelings more than when, sitting by the old oak table, my aunt, Lady Raeburn, used to read the lamentable catastrophe of the ship's departing without Captain Falconer, in consequence of the whole party making free with lime-punch on the eve of its being launched."—Scott to David Terry, Nov. 10, 1814. See Lockhart's Life of Scott.

Falconer, Thomas, 1736-1792, a learned layman, a native and resident of Chester, England. 1. Devotions for the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, 1786, anon. Many eds. 2. Chronological Tables from Solomon to the death of Alexander the Great, Oxf., 1796, 4to. See strictures on this work in Rev. Robert Walker's Historical Time, Lon., 1798, 8vo. 3. Strabonis Geographia. Gr. et Lat. This was left unfinished, but was completed and pub. by Mr. F.'s nephew, Rev. Thomas Falconer.

"It has been said that this edition, so long in preparation, disappointed the expectations of the learned. Whatever be the fact, it is yet considered as the most valuable and ample edition of Strabo, and copies are not to be procured under the sum of five or six guineas."—Didwin's Introduct. to Gr. and Lat. Classics.

4. Observ. on Pliny's Account of the Temple of Diana at Ephesus; in Archeol., vol. xi.

Falconer, Rev. Thomas, d. 1839, nephew of the preceding. 1. The Voyage of Hanno, trans., &c., Oxf., 1797, 8vo. 2. Remarks on Bryant on the War of Troy, Lon., 1799, 8vo. 3. Strabonis, see ante. 4. Certain Principles in Evanston's Dissonance of the Evangelists, examined in 8 discourses, preached 1810, at the Bampton Lecture, Oxf., 1811, 8vo; Appendix, 1822, 8vo. Other works. "To say that he has vanquished Evanston is to give but too little praise. We set forth the volume as a magazine from which the warrior in the cause of truth may fill his quiver."—Edin. Christian Instructor.

Falconer, Thomas. On the Discovery of the Mississippi, Lon., 1844, 12mo. See Rich's Bibl. Amer. Nova, anno 1844.

Falconer, Thomas, and E. H. Fitzherbert. Reports of controverted Elections determined in H. C., Lon., 1839, 8vo.

Falconer, William, 1730-1769, the son of an Edinburgh barber, at a very early age became a sailor boy on board a Leith merchantman. When in his 18th year, he was wrecked in the Britannia off Cape Colonna, only three of the crew being saved; and in 1760 suffered a second shipwreck in the Ramilies, when of 734 souls only 26 escaped. In 1751 he pub. a Poem on the death of Frederick, Prince of Wales. This seems to have excited but little attention. But eleven years later he gave evidence of the possession of remarkable poetical powers by the publication of The Shipwreck, (subsequently enlarged and improved,) dedicated to the Duke of York. His royal highness acknowledged the compliment of the dedication by having the poet appointed a midshipman. After acting in this capacity, and that of purser, for some time, he retired to the enjoyment of domestic life, having married a Miss Hicks, daughter of the surgeon of Sheerness Yard. He now pub. an Ode on the Duke of York's second departure from England, as Rear-Admiral, and The Demagogue, a satire on Lord Chatham, Wilkes, and Churchill. In 1769 he gave to the world A Universal Dictionary of the Marine, 4to, 1771, '80, '84, '89. New and enlarged ed. by Dr. Wm. Burney, 1815, r. 4to.

"A grand National work, comprehending every thing relating to the Marine of this country: a performance which displays great industry, sagacity, and precision, and is indispensable to every one concerned in maritime affairs. It is well worthy a place in every English library."—Lon. Gent. Mag.

About this time he is said to have received proposals from John Murray, afterwards the eminent publisher, to enter into the book business. But the offer of the purser-ship to the Aurora, about to sail to India, no doubt revived all the sailor's love of the sea, and Falconer sailed in this vessel from England, Sept. 30, 1769. She is known to have touched at the Cape, but was never heard of afterwards. She is supposed to have foundered in the Mozambique Channel. It adds a melancholy interest to the thrilling scenes depicted in The Shipwreck, to remember that the author experienced all, not excepting the last and most fearful, of the horrors which he so graphically described. A second ed. of The Shipwreck was pub. in 1764, 8vo; 3d ed., 1785, 8vo; New ed., with critical Remarks, additional Notes, and the Life of the Author, by the Rev. James Stanier Clarke, 1804, 8vo. Other eds. of The Shipwreck, 1808, r. 4to., 1818, 12mo. This last edition contains an engraving of a ship, with references to an explanatory table. The value of this auxiliary to a non-nautical reader need not be enlarged on. The other productions of Falconer have never been highly estimated. An ed. of his Poems, with a Memoir by the Rev. J. Mitford, (Pickering's Aldine Poets, vol. xxxvii.) appeared in 1836, 12mo. In The Shipwreck, Falconer describes an actual occurrence in which he was a participator—the wreck of the Britannia off Cape Colonna:

"In all Attica, if we except Athens itself and Marathon, there is no scene more interesting than Cape Colonna. To the antiquary and artist, sixteen columns are an inexhaustible source of observation and design; to the philosopher, the supposed scene of some of Plato's conversations will not be unwelcome; and the traveller will be struck with the beauty of the prospect over 'Isles that crown the Ægean deep'; but for an Englishman Colonna has yet an additional interest, as the actual spot of Falconer's Shipwreck. Pallas and Plato are forgotten in the recollection of Falconer and Campbell:

"Here in the dead of night, by Lonna's steep,
 The seaman's cry was heard along the deep.
(Pleasures of Memory.)"—LORD BYRON.

"The Shipwreck has been always popular, and will remain so, while British sympathies are excited by the hazards of those who "Sweep through the deep,

 While the stormy tempests blow."

It contains several fine descriptions of scenery. The characters of the officers are drawn by a masterly pencil. The episode of Palemon and Anna is exquisitely wrought."—S. C. HALL.

The merits of this celebrated composition are indeed undeniable. None but a great poet could have written The Shipwreck, and that great poet must of necessity have been a thorough sailor. What home and its placid attractions are to the landsman, the sea and the storm were to Falconer. He delights in decking the ocean with all the terrific sublimity and wild beauty of which it is capable, and then calling upon us to admire the picture: our admiration may be enforced, but whilst we tremble, we cannot but applaud.

But a higher value is claimed for this poem than it possesses as the means of mere intellectual gratification:

"It is of inestimable value to this country, since it contains within itself the rudiments of navigation; if not sufficient to form a complete seaman, it may certainly be considered as the grammar of his professional science. I have heard many experienced officers declare, that the rules and maxims delivered in this poem, for the conduct of a ship in the most perilous emergency, form the best, indeed the only, opinions which a skilful mariner should adopt."—See Clarke's ed. of The Shipwreck.

Falconer, Wm., M.D., 1743-1824, a native of Chester, and a brother of the Rev. Thomas Falconer, the reviewer of Evanston's Dissonance of the Gospels, pub. many medical treatises and other works, on natural history, theology, &c., a list of which will be found in the Bibl. Brit., and in Gent. Mag. for Oct. 1824. 1. Remarks on the Influence of Climate, &c. on Mankind, Lon., 1781, 4to. 2. An Essay on the preservation of the Health of persons engaged in Agriculture, &c., 1789, 8vo.

"The author discusses the employment of rural labourers, their diet, accommodation, and medical treatment."—Donaldson's Agr. cult. Dig.

3. Miscellaneous Tracts and Collections on Nat. History from the principal writers of Antiquity, 1793, 4to.

He was noted for his large stock of general information, and an eminent friend, at whose table he often dined, declared that "He never saw such a man; that he knew every thing, and knew it better than any one else."—Lord Thurlow.

Faldo, John. 1. Quakerism no Christianity, Lon., 1875, 8vo. 2. 21 Divines cleared from the Crimination of W. Penn, 1875, 8vo.

Faldo, Thomas. Reformation of Courts of Justice and Proceedings at Law, 1649, 4to.

Fale, Robert. Report rel. to Brit. Fishery, Lon., 1786, 8vo.

Fale, Thomas. Art of Dialectic, Lon., 1593, 4to, 1626.

Fales, Fanny. See SWIFT, MRS. FRANCES ELIZABETH.

Falgate, Isaac. Interest, 1699, 8vo. Tables of do., 12mo.

Falkener, a surgeon. Case of Hydrophobia successfully treated; Med. Trans., 1772.

Falkener, Edward. 1. Museum of Classical Antiquities: a series of Papers on Ancient Art, edited by E. F., Lon., 1855, r. 8vo.

2. Descrip. of some important Theatres and other Remains in Crete; being a supp. to No. 1, 1855, r. 8vo.

3. Inscriptiones Græcæ in itinere Asiatico collectas ab Edoardo Falkenero edidit Gu. Henssenius. Romæ: ex annalibus Archæologici, Ann. 1852.

Falkener, or Falkner, Wm., D.D. 1. Libertas Ecclesiastica, Lon., 1674, 4to. 2. Christian Loyalty, 1679, 8vo. 3. A Vindication of Liturgies, 1680, 8vo. 4. Two Treatises, 1684, 4to. 5. Sermons on the Visitation and Burial Services: tracts of Angl. Fathers, iii. 311.

Falkirke, John de. Annals of Irish History, 1535-1641, Lon., 1814, vol. i., 8vo.

Falkland, first Viscount. See CARY, HENRY.

Falkland, third Viscount. See CARY, HENRY LUCIUS.

Falkland, second Viscount. See CARY, LUCIUS.

Falkland. Essay on Bigotry, Lon., 1791, 8vo.

Falkland. Review of the Irish H. of Com. and the Parl. Representation, Dubl., 1789-90, 2 vols. 8vo.

"A curious and interesting work."—Lowndes's Bibl. Man.

Falkland, Charles, Viscount. Consid. on the competency of the Parl. of Ireland to Union, Lon., 1797, 8vo.

Falkland, W. 1. Iberia; a Poem, 1812. 2. Variety; a Collection of Poems, 1812, 8vo.

Falkner, Frederic. In conjunction with the Author of British Husbandry: The Muck Manual for Farmers, Lon., 1843, 12mo. New ed., 1846, fp. 8vo.

"A very useful book."—LORD PALMERSTON.

"Much reliable fact, and we cannot get up from the reading of the work without being benefited by the task."—Lon. Gardener's Guide.

"A very neat and comprehensive work, and a very creditable performance."—Donaldson's Agricult. Bing.

Falkner, Thomas, d. 1780. a Jesuit missionary of Manchester, resided for nearly forty years in South America. A Description of Patagonia and the adjoining parts of South America, Lon., 1774, 4to.

"We have only to regret that the information we here receive is not more accurate, and the author's authority, in many cases, less exceptionable."—Lon. Monthly Review, II. 1774.

Falkner, Wm., D.D. See FALKENER.

Fall, James. Serm., 1754, 8vo.

Fall, Thomas. The Surveyor's Guide, or, every man his own Road-maker, Retford, 1829, 12mo.

"A most valuable treatise. . . Surveyors and farmers will be much informed, and repaid by the labour of perusing this little volume."—Donaldson's Agricult. Bing.

Fallal, Ferdinando. Carmina Colloquia, or a dialogue bet. the Devil and an Independent, Edin., 1649, 4to.

Falle, Philip, 1655-1742, a native of Jersey, became Rector of St. Saviour's in Jersey, of Shenley in Herts, and Preb. of Durham. Serms., 1687-1715. Cesarea; or, an Account of the Island of Jersey, the greatest of those islands that are now the only remainder of the English Dominions in France, Lon., 1694, 8vo; with addits. and corrections, 1734, 8vo. This work is highly esteemed.

Fallow, T. M., Curate of All-Souls, St. Marylebone. The Order of Baptism, both Public and Private, according to the use of the United Ch. of Eng. and Ireland, Lon., 1838, 12mo. It includes Synoptical Tables, showing the alterations in the offices at the revisions, 1552, 1604, '61; history of the conferences, reasons of the changes made, &c.

"If any man, who shall desire a more particular account of the several alterations in any part of the Liturgy, shall take the pains to compare the present book with the former, we doubt not but the reason of the change may easily appear."—Preface to the Book of Common Prayer, A.D. 1661.

Fallowes, Thomas. Method of Curing Lunatics, Lon., 1705, 8vo.

Fallowfield, J. Christian Conductor, 1795, 8vo.

Fallowfield, John. Examination of Wm. Taswell's Antichrist revealed among the Quakers, Lon., 1723, 8vo.

Fallstaff, Sir John. Original Letters of Sir John Fallstaff. By the Rev. Henry Bate Dudley.

Fanch, James, a Baptist minister at Romsey. 10 Serms. on Practical Subjects, Keith, 1768, 12mo.

"A man of considerable learning and excellent judgment. His sermons are fine specimens of sound divinity."—Hist. of the English Baptists.

Fancourt, Samuel, 1678-1768, a dissenting minister, the inventor of circulating libraries in London, pub. several serms. and theolog. treatises, 1720-46, &c. See Lon. Gent. Mag., vol. liv.

Fane, Lady Elizabeth, wrote a number of psalms, and pious meditations, and proverbs, printed by Robert Crowland, Lon., 1550, 8vo, under the title of The Lady Elizabeth Fane's 21 Psalms and 102 Proverbs. Ballard is at a loss to know whether this lady was the wife of Richard Fane or of Sir Thomas Fane. See Memoirs of British Ladies.

Fane, Henry Edward, late Aide-de-Camp to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India. Five Years in India, Lon., 1841, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

"This is, undoubtedly, the most entertaining work illustrative of India we have read of late years, and exactly the sort of work the general reader will be sure to appreciate."—Lon. New Monthly Mag.

Fane, Sir Francis, Governor of Doncaster, subsequently Governor of Lincoln, temp. Charles II. 1. Love in the Dark; a Com., Lon., 1675, 4to. 2. Masque for Lord Rochester's Valentinian, 1685, 8vo. 3. Sacrifice; a Trag., 1686, 4to. Sir Francis wrote a number of poems also. Three will be found in Tate's Collection.

"Tis not in Dramatick Poetry alone that our Author is a Master, but his Talent is equal also in Lyrics."—Langbaine's Eng. Dram. Poets, q. v.

Fane, Hon. Julian. Poems, Lon., 1852, fp. 8vo; 2d ed., with additional Notes, 1853, 12mo.

Fannant, Edward. The Hist. of the Life, Reign, and Death of Edward II., King of England, Lon., 1680, fol.

Fannant, Thomas. An Hist. Relation of the manner and form of that memorable Parliament which wrought wonders, begun at Westminster, 1386, 1641, 4to. Another ed. same year, with an addit. to the title. See Harleian Miscellany.

Fannin, John. A Harmony and Exposition of our blessed Lord's last Prophecy, Dubl., 1832, 8vo. See this noticed in Orme's Bibl. Bib.

Fanning, Gilbert, d. 1810, in Tennessee. Correct method of searching the Scriptures. Editor of the Agriculturist, 5 vols. 8vo, and editor of and contributor to various agricultural journals.

Fanshaw, Sir Thomas. Practice of the Exchequer Ct. of the offices, officers, &c., Lon., 1658, 12mo.

Fanshawe, Ann Harrison, Lady, 1625-1680, the eldest daughter of Sir John Harrison, and wife of Sir Richard Fanshawe. Memoirs, of, written by herself, now first pub. from the original MS. To which are added Extracts from the Corresp. of Sir Richard Fanshawe, Lon., 1829, 8vo. Edited by Sir N. Harris Nicolas.

"A charming piece of autobiography."—Lon. New Monthly Mag.

"These Memoirs will probably take their place by the side of Mrs. Hutchinson's Memoirs, a praise which the admirers of the latter will know how to estimate."—Lon. Spectator.

"There is not much in this book, either of individual character or public story. It is, indeed, but a small affair—any way; but yet pleasing, and not altogether without interest or instruction."—LORD JEFFREY: Edin. Review.

When the vessel that carried Lady Fanshawe from Ireland to Spain was attacked, she put on men's clothes and fought with the sailors.

Fanshawe, Catherine, a literary lady of the last generation, was a great favourite with the brilliant circle of which Scott, Southey, Mackintosh, and Joanna Baillie, were such distinguished ornaments. She wrote a number of poetical pieces, of which the Enigma on the letter H—often ascribed to Lord Byron—is the best known.

"Among the society at once so dazzling and so charming, there was no name more distinguished for brilliant and various talent, or for every attractive quality, than that of Catherine Fanshawe."—Miss Milford's Recollections of a Literary Life.

Fanshawe, Sir Richard, 1608-1666, husband of Lady F., see ante, was the youngest and tenth child of Sir Henry Fanshawe, Remembrancer of the Exchequer, and brother of Thomas, Lord Fanshawe. He was educated at Jesus Coll., Camb., travelled on the Continent, and became famous for scholarship and knowledge of modern tongues. During the Rebellion he fought in the royal army, and was in 1651 taken prisoner at the battle of Worcester. At the Restoration he was employed in several diplomatic negotiations, and died at Madrid in 1666, whilst ambassador to the court of Spain. 1. Trans. in rhyme of Guarino's II Pastor Fido; or the Faithful Shepherd. With other Poems, Lon., 1646, '64, '76, 8vo.

"Sir John Denham, in his Verses on this Translation, infinitely commends it: and tho' he seems to assent to our Author's Notions touching Translations in general, yet he shews that Sir Richard has admirably succeeded in this particular Attempt, as the reader may see by the following Lines; where after having blam'd servile Translators, he goes on thus:

"A new and nobler Way thou dost pursue
To make Translations, and Translators too,
They but preserve the Ashes, thou the Flame,
True to his Sense, but truer to his Fame," &c.

Langbaine's Eng. Dram. Poets, q. v.

2. The Lusiad; or Portugal's Historically Poem, trans. from Luis de Camoens, 1655, fol. See comments on this trans. in Mickle's Lusiad. 3. Querer por solo querer; or to Love only for Love's sake; a Dramatick Romance. 4. Triestas de Aranjuez; these were trans. by Sir Richard in 1654 from the Spanish of Antonio de Mendoza, 1671, 4to. 5. Original Letters and Negotiations of Sir Richard Fanshawe, &c., 1671, 4to; 1701, 8vo; 1724, 2 vols. 8vo. In this collection will be found many particulars connected with the secret history of the period. See Life of Sir Richard Fanshawe, by Edmund Turner, in Biog. Brit., a new article, vol. v., 1793. In some copies of the account of Sir Richard's Embassies in Spain and Portugal, there occur after the Preface two leaves entitled A Short Account of his Excellency Sir Richard Fanshawe, and his Writings. A contemporary MS. note (printed in J. H. Burns's Catalogue for 1827) thus reads:

"These two leaves were torn out by Mrs. Fanshawe, who is mightily incensed at the Bookseller [Abel Roper] for printing them without her knowledge. She thinks her father is injured by this Account of him, and intends to publish an advertisement of it, for which Roper threatens to sue her, alledging 'twill spoil the sale of his books."

Faraday, Michael, the most eminent English chemist now living, born in 1794, was the son of a poor blacksmith. Whilst an apprentice to a bookseller in London, he attended the four last lectures given by Sir Humphry Davy as Professor to the Royal Institution. He took notes of these lectures and sent them to Sir Humphry, who was so much pleased with his remarkable talents that in 1813 he appointed him assistant in the laboratory. Mr. Faraday has made many important discoveries in heat, light, magnetism, electricity, &c. In 1832 he was made Doctor of Laws by the University of Oxford.

1. Chemical Manipulation, 3d ed. revised, Lon., 1842, 8vo. "No student should think of commencing the study of practical chemistry without having previously perused this indispensable guide."—Provincial Medical Journal.

2. Experimental Researches in Electricity. Reported from the Phil. Trans. of 1831-38; 2d ed., vol. i., 1849; vol. II., 1844. 3. Six Lectures on the Non-Metallic Elements, by Dr. Scofield, 1853, 12mo.

Farbrother, Roger. Serms., 1697, 4to.

Fardley, Wm. Francis and Josepha; a Tale. From the German of Huber, 1808, 8vo.

Farewell. An East India Colation, 1633. With a serm. by Farewell on the Indians, Jadis, £4 19s.

Farewell, James. The Irish Hudibras, or Fingalion Prince, &c., Lon., 1689, 8vo.

Farey, John, 1766-1826, an eminent surveyor and geologist, a native of Woburn, Bedfordshire. General View of the Agricult. and Minerals of Derbyshire, Lon., 1811, '13, '17, 3 vols. 8vo. Pub. by order of the Bd. of Agricult.

"It contains a very valuable mass of information on the geology of Derbyshire, which is one of the most interesting counties in Britain to the geognost."—Donaldson's Agricult. Bing.

Con. to Phil. Trans., 1811; Nic. Jour., 1813; Phil. Mag., 1815, '17.

Faria, Fenasco. His Narrative about the Popish Plot, Lon., 1680, fol.

Farindon, or Farington, Anthony, 1596-1658, a native of Sunning, Berkshire, was admitted scholar of Trin. Coll., Oxf., 1612; elected Fellow, 1617; Vicar of Bray, Berks, 1634; ejected during the Rebellion; subsequently pastor of St. Mary Magdalen, Milk Street, London. He was a most eloquent preacher. Serms., vol. I., 1647, fol.; vol. II., 1663, fol.; vol. III., 1673, fol.; 2d ed. of vols. I. and II., with addits., 1673, fol.; new ed., 1849, 4 vols. 8vo.

"A noted preacher, an eminent tutor, and a worthy example to be imitated of all."—Athen. Ozon.

"Without exception, the best preacher among the Episcopal ministers of that age. The Clergy, in their visits to London, used, as a matter of course, to attend his ministry; for his pulpit was called 'a divinity professor's chair.' His sermons are a treasure of sacred erudition and theology."—Dr. Williams's C. P.

"Sanderson and Farindon, to an extensive and accurate knowledge of divinity, united an admirable judgment, great clearness of conception, and, above all, a fervent and unaffected spirit of devotion."—British Critic.

Farindon left some MS. memorials of the life of his friend, the famous John Hales of Eton.

Farington. Religion of many of the Clergy of the Ch. of England, Lon., 1707, 8vo.

Farington, Joseph, d. 1818. 1. Views of [20] the Lakes, &c. in Cumberland and Westmoreland, Lon., 1789, oblong fol. 2. The Lakes of Lancashire, Westmoreland, and Cumberland, 1816, imp. 4to.

Farington, Wm. Serms., Warring., 1769, 8vo.

Farish, Charles. Toleration of Marriage in the Universities recommended, 1807, 8vo. 2. Minstrels of Windermere, 1811, 8vo.

Farish, John, of Dumfries. A Treatise on Florin Grass, 1810, 8vo.

"His ideas of practice on the subject of florin grass might we probably have been worth being examined and recorded. They had not upheld the use of the plant."—Donaldson's Agricult. Bing.

Farish, Wm. Report of Camb. Bible Soc., 1811, 8vo.

Farley, Edward. Imprist for Debt Unconstitutional and Oppressive, Lon., 1788, 8vo.

Farley, Harriet, a native of Claremont, New Hampshire, has been for a number of years a contributor to and editor of The Lowell Offering, a monthly periodical, (commenced January, 1841,) sustained by the literary labours of the factory girls employed in the mills at Lowell, Massachusetts. An interesting autobiographic letter from Miss Farley (not intended for publication) will be found in Mrs. Hale's Woman's Record. In 1847 she pub. a volume in Boston, containing extracts from the periodical under her charge, including some of her own contributions, entitled Shells from the Strand of the Sea of Genius. A selection from the Lowell Offering, entitled Mind among the Spindles, with an Introduction by Mr. Charles Knight, was pub. in London in 1849. It has been highly commended by English, French, and German critics.

Farley, Henry. 1. Complaint of Paulus, 1616, 4to., Reed, 6749, £2 4s. 2. St. Paul's Chvrch, her Bill for the Parliament, 1621, 4to. A curious collection in prose and poetry. Bibl. Anglo-Poet., 262, £5 5s.

Farley, J. The Duty and Office of Church-warden in Ireland, Dublin, 1823, 8vo.

Farley, or Farlie, Robert, a native of Scotland. 1. Kalendarium Humane Vitae, The Kalendar of Man's Life, Lon., 1638, sm. 8vo. This contains poems on the four seasons, in Latin and English. 2. Lychnocausia, sive Moralia Facium Emblemata: Lights, Morall Emblems, 1638, 12mo. 3. Naulogia, sive Inventa Navis, 4to. This is a Latin Poem, inscribed in Prose and Verse to Sir Robert Aytoun.

Farmer, A. W. Facts on the American Congress, and the controversy with G. Brit. See Rich's Bibl. Amer. Nova.

Farmer, Henry T., a native of England, was for some time engaged in commercial pursuits in Charleston, S. C., and subsequently removed to New York, where he became a medical student, and was licensed as a physician in 1821. He practised medicine in Charleston, S. C., until his death at the age of 46. Whilst a student, he pub. a vol. entitled Imagination: The Maniac's Dream, and other Poems. A specimen of his composition will be found in E. A. and G. L. Duyckinck's Cyc. of Amer. Lit.

Farmer, Hugh, 1714-1787, a dissenting divine of great learning, a native of a village near Shrewsbury, was for some time a pupil of Dr. Doddridge. He officiated as chaplain in the family of Wm. Coward of Walthamstow, and was minister to a congregation in that village. Mr. Coward always closed his house at six in the winter and seven in the summer, and permitted no one, visitor or resident, to enter his doors after the stated hour. On one occasion Mr. Farmer was shut out, and sought refuge in the house of Mr. Wm. Snell. They liked their visitor, invited him to stay where he was, and the accidental visit of a night extended to thirty years. This reminds us of Dr. Isaac Watts's thirty-six years' visit to Sir Thomas Abney's family, and Dr. Johnson's long residence with the Thrales. 1. Serm. on the Suppression of the Rebellion of 1745, '46. 2. Christ's Temptation in the Wilderness, 1761, 8vo; 3d ed., 1776. 3. A Dissertation on Miracles, 1771, 8vo. 4. Exam. of Le Moine's Treatise on Miracles, 1772, 8vo. 5. Essay on the Demoniacs of the N. Test., 1775, 8vo. 6. Letters to Rev. Dr. Worthington in answer to his late Treatise entitled An Impartial Inquiry into the Case of the Gospel Demoniacs, 1778, 8vo. 7. Worship of Human Spirits in the Ancient Heathen Nations, 1783, 8vo. See FELL, JOHN. Life by Michael Dodson, 1804, 5 vols. 8vo. See this Memoir, and article in Biog. Brit. He left many valuable MSS., which were destroyed.

"The works of Farmer are among the most ingenious and learned theological productions of the last century. They contain many things worthy of consideration; but at the same time they require to be read with caution. . . . Our Lord's temptation, according to Farmer, was a divine vision; the demoniacs of the gospel were merely persons strongly affected by certain diseases. . . . The chief opponents of Farmer were Worthington and Fell, who were both men of learning, but not equal to Farmer in acuteness and command of temper."—Orme's Bibl. Bib., q. v. See also the remarks of Bp. Watson.

Farmer, Jacob. Letter rel. to Irish Papists, 1642.

Farmer, John. 1. Divers and Sundry Wares, &c. upon one playn Song, Lon., 1591, 8vo. 2. English Madrigals, 1599.

Farmer, John. Hist. of the Town and Abbey of Waltham, and the Hist. of Abbies, 977–1558, Lon., 1755, 8vo.

Farmer, John, a dissenting minister, brother of Hugh Farmer, was assistant minister at Fetter Lane, London, 1730, and at Coggeshall, Essex, 1739. 20 Sermons on various subjects, Lon., 1744, 8vo.

Farmer, John. Select Cases in Surgery, collected in St. Bartholomew's Hospital, 1757, 4to.

Farmer, John, 1789–1838, of Concord, New Hampshire. 1. Genealogical Register of the First Settlers of N. England, Lancaster, Mass., 1829, 8vo. 2. In conjunction with J. B. Moore, Gazetteer of New Hampshire, Concord, N. Hamp., 1823, 12mo. Mr. F. pub. several tracts on subjects of local history, and was a contributor to the Collections of the Mass. and N. Hamp. Hist. Societies.

Farmer, R. 1. The Great Mysteries of Godliness and Ungodliness discovered from the writings of the Quakers, Lon., 1655, 4to. 2. A Plain Dealing and Plain Meaning Sermon, 1660, 4to.

Farmer, Richard. Sermon, Lon., 1629, 4to.

Farmer, Richard, a linen draper at Stow-on-the-Wold, d. 1814, aged 49. The Soldiers; an Hist. Poem, 1802, 8vo. Analysis of the Carbonated Chalybeate near Stow, 1809, 8vo.

Farmer, Richard, D.D., 1735–1797, a divine of extensive learning, a native of Leicester, was educated at Emanuel Coll., Camb., of which he became Master in 1775. He subsequently became Vice-Chancellor and principal Librarian of the University, and obtained prebends at Lichfield and Canterbury. He exchanged the latter for a canonry at St. Paul's. Both an English and an Irish bishopric were offered to him and declined. In 1766 he issued proposals for pub. a History of the Town of Leicester, from the MSS. of William [should be Thomas] Staveley. He found the work too laborious, and gave his materials to John Nichols, whose History and Antiquities of Leicester, 4 vols. fol., 1795–1811, is deservedly valued. In 1766, 8vo, Dr. Farmer gave to the world his celebrated Essay on the Learning of Shakespeare, 2d ed., with large addita, 1767, 8vo.; 12 copies on thick paper. Reprinted in 1789 and in 1821. Also printed with Stevens's ed. of Shakespeare, 1793, and the eds. by Read in 1803 and Harris in 1812.

The extent of Shakespeare's knowledge of the classics which he so freely uses had long been a mooted point. Farmer hit upon the only plan by which the question could be settled. He proves that Shakespeare derived his knowledge through translations, and not from the originals, by showing that he has cited the phraseology, and even the errors, of the translators. We must then agree with an eminent critic who styles Farmer's Essay

"A work by which an end is put forever to the dispute concerning the learning of Shakespeare."—Dr. Warton.

Dr. Johnson and Farmer were well acquainted with each other; and several letters from the lexicographer to the Master of Emanuel College will be found in Boswell's Life of the former. In one dated March 21, 1770, we find the following reference to Farmer's Essay:

"In support of an opinion which you have already placed above the need of any more support, Mr. Steevens, a very ingenious gentleman, lately of King's College, has collected an account of all the translations which Shakespeare might have seen and used. He wishes his catalogue to be perfect, and therefore entreats that you will favour him by the insertion of such additions as the accuracy of your inquiries have enabled you to make."

We also find the following note in Langton's papers:

"Colman, in a note on his translation of Terence, talking of Shakespeare's learning, asks, 'What says Farmer to this? What says Johnson?' Upon this he observed, 'Sir, let Farmer answer for himself: I never engaged in this controversy. I always said Shakespeare had Latin enough to grammaticise his English.'"—See Boswell's Life of Johnson.

Dr. Parr excelled in epitaphs and other eulogistic flourishes. He complimented Farmer, both living and dead.

We regret that we lack space to enable us to give both or either to the reader. And, alas! what space have we wherein to depict the wonders of Farmer's library? It was sold by Mr. King, in 1798, and produced £2210, which was about £1700 more than it was supposed to have cost him. But for a continuation of this ravishing theme—ravishing, if our reader be a true Bibliomaniac—we must refer to Dibdin's Bibliomania. Those who are so unhappy as to be without this volume deserve pity, and—room or no room—they shall have a few lines about RARE RICHARD FARMER:

"How shall I talk of thee, and of thy wonderful collection, O RARE RICHARD FARMER!—and of thy scholarship, acuteness, pleasantness, singularities, varied learning, and colloquial powers! Thy name will live long among scholars in general; and in the bosoms of virtuous and learned bibliomaniacs thy memory shall be ever shrouded! The walls of Emanuel College now cease to convey the sounds of thy festive wit; thy volumes are no longer seen, like Richard Smith's 'bundles of stilt books,' strewn upon the floor; and thou hast ceased, in the cause of thy beloved Shakespeare, to delve into the fruitful ore of black-letter literature. Peace to thy honest spirit; for thou wert wise without vanity, learned without pedantry, and joyous without vulgarity. . . . Farmer had his foragers, his jackals, and his avant-couriers, for it was well known how dearly he loved every thing that was interesting and rare in the literature of former ages. As he walked the streets of London—careless of his dress, and whether his wig was full-bottomed or narrow-bottomed—he would talk and 'mutter strange speeches' to himself, thinking all the time, I ween, of some curious discovery he had recently made in the aforesaid precious black-letter tomes. But the reader is impatient for the BIBLIOTHECA FARMERIANA."

Our readers also must be impatient for the Bibliotheca Farmeriana, and procure it whenever the opportunity may occur, which, we can assure them, will be very seldom. It bears date May, 1798, and contains 6199 articles—and such articles! But we forbear.

Farmer, Thomas. The Plain Truth, Lon., 1763, 4to. This refers to the Essay on Women.

Farmer, Wm. Almanack for Ireland, Dublin, 1587, 4to. "Perhaps the earliest Almanack printed in or for that country."

—Wall's Bibl. Brit.

Farmerie, Wm. Serms., 1710, '16.

Farnabie, or Farnaby, Thomas, 1575–1647, an eminent grammarian, a native of London, studied for some time at Merton Coll., Ox., which he left for a college of the Jesuits in Spain. Returning to England, he taught school alternately at Martock in Somersetshire, in London, and at Sevenoaks, in Kent. He had charge of the sons of many of the noblemen, and acquired a large property. During the Rebellion he suffered imprisonment as a friend to the monarchy. He pub. several learned works—commentaries on Juvenal, Persius, Seneca, Martial, Ovid, Terence, and Lucian, Index Rhetoricus, 1625, 8vo, Systema Grammaticum, 1641, 8vo, &c.—for particulars of which see Athen. Oxon., Biog. Brit., and Genl. Dict.

The remark of his which offended the Parliamentarians was, that it was "better to have one king than five hundred;" which shrewd reflection is of itself enough to prove him a man of excellent sense. The nation soon came round to his way of thinking. But good laws are the best kings.

"He was the chief grammarian, rhetorician, poet, latinist, and Grecian, of his time; and his school was so much frequented, that more churchmen and statesmen issued thence than from any school taught by one man in England."—Athen. Oxon.

Farnaby, Giles. Canonets to Fovre Voyces, 1598, 4to. "Farnaby assisted Ravenscroft in putting parts to some of the Psalm-tunes published at the beginning of the next century."—Lowndes's Bibl. Man.

Farnworth, Ellis, d. 1762, Rector of Carsington, Derbyshire. 1. Life of Pope Sextus V., trans. from the Italian of Gregorio Leti, Lon., 1754, fol.; Dublin, 1778, 8vo. 2. A short Hist. of the Israelites, trans. from the French of Abbé Fleury, Lon., 1756, 8vo.

"This little book contains a concise, pleasing, and just account of the manners, customs, laws, polity, and religion, of the Israelites. It is an excellent introduction to the reading of the Old Testament, and should be put into the hands of every young person. An elegant English version of it, by Mr. Farnworth, was first printed in 1766."—Vide Bishop Horne's Discourses, vol. I.

New ed., by Adam Clarke, q. v., 1805, 12mo. 3. The Hist. of the Civil Wars of France, trans. from the Italian of Davila, 1757, 2 vols. 4to.

"The great historian of this time is Davila. His work may be referred to in all the more important particulars, especially with respect to the views, interests, and intrigues of the different leaders and factions."—Prof. Smyth's Lect. on Mod. Hist.

And see AYLESBURY, WM.; COTTERELL, SIR CHARLES.

4. The Works of Machiavel, trans. and illustrated with Notes, Anecdotes, and Life, 1761, 2 vols. 4to; 1775, 4 vols. 8vo. See BEDINGFIELD, THOMAS.

"We are told in the House of Commons by Mr. Fox, that the authority of Machiavel is great. The founders of the French Republic, and refounders of it, seem always to have had Machiavel's Discourses or Liwy in their view."—Pursuits of Literature.

"Machiavelli, in his history of Florence, instructed the Italians in the art of uniting the elegance of history with the depth of reflection. He has attracted himself more than his productions in the same line, to the narrative of military events. But his work, as a history of popular passions and passions in a masterly place, and Machiavelli has been surpassed by this noble example of his theories, his analysis of the human heart. He has left three examples, which, by the novelty of the plots, by the strength and vivacity of the dialogue, and by their admirable delineation of character, are far superior to all that Italy had then, or has perhaps since produced."—Macaulay.

We lack space, and it does not enter into our plan, to discuss the vexed question of the morals of Machiavelli's remarkable productions. An excellent paper on the subject will be found among Mr. T. B. Macaulay's Miscellaneous.

Farnham, Mrs. E. W. Life in Prairie Land, N. York, 1844, 12mo. A work of great originality, which should be read by all who think of "emigrating to the Western Country."

"This is a delightful book, and will afford most agreeable reading. The author has a quick eye and graphic pen, and describes the statistics of a large city or the peculiar mode of a sun-burnt with the same facility and pleasantness."

"It is made up of a series of charming and lifelike pictures of a personal witness in the Far West—perfect daguerotypes of a settler's daily habits, &c. together with graphic sketches of travel in various portions of that far-spreading and fertile country. The work is collected by a rich vein of broadest humour, interspersed with passages of great power and eloquent beauty, constantly improving and suggestive."—Democratic Review.

Farnham, Rt. Hon. Harry Maxwell, Earl of Examination into the Principles of the Speech of Lord Minto, &c., Dublin, 1806, 8vo. See Park's Walpole's R. & W. Authors.

Farnworth, Richard, pub. a number of theological treatises, 1635-66.

Farquhar, David. The Torch of Time, London, 1846, 12mo. This is one of three excellent Prize Essays, originally pub. in one volume, intended to exhibit the Temporal Advantages of the Sabbath considered in relation to the Working Classes. The subject is one of great importance to the best interests of Society.

Farquhar, Ferdinand. The Relics of a Saint: a right merry Tale, London, 1818, 12mo.

Farquhar, George, 1676-1707, a comic dramatist, the son of a clergyman, was a native of Londonderry. In 1694 he was sent to Trinity Coll., Dublin, which he deserted for the boards of the Dublin theatre. He left the stage in consequence of having accidentally stabbed a brother actor—not fatally, however—while playing Guyomar in the Indian Emperor of Dryden. His friend Wilks, the famous actor, persuaded him to turn author; and, unfortunately for the world, a lieutenant's commission, conferred upon him by Lord Orrery, enabled him to corrupt the age by his licentious plays, instead of being obliged to get his living by some honest employment. 1. Love and a Bottle, a Comedy, 1698. 2. Constant Couple; or, Trip to the Jubilee, a Comedy, 1700, '10, 8vo. 3. Sir Harry Wildair, or, The Sequel of the Trip to the Jubilee, a Comedy, 1701. 4. Miscellaneous; or, Collection of Poems, Letters, and Essays, 1702. 5. The Inconstant, or, The Way to Win Him, a Comedy, 1703. 6. The Stage Coach; a Farce, 1704. 7. The Twin Rivals; a Comedy. 8. The Recruiting Officer; a Comedy, 1706. 9. The Beggars' Stratagem, a Comedy. Works, containing all his Poems, Letters, Essays, and Comedies, 10th ed., corrected, 1772, 2 vols. 12mo. Farquhar's Dramatic Works have been recently republished in the same volume with those of Wycherley, Congreve, and Vanbrugh, London, 1849, r. 8vo, by Moore. Prefixed will be found a critical notice of his Life and Writings, by Leigh Hunt, (see also his paper in the London Athenaeum, January 2, 1841,) who has incorporated into his article Charles Lamb's sophistical and mischievous essay, entitled On the Artistic Comedy of the last Century. The curious reader can also consult the Biog. Brit., Biog. Dramat., Cibber's Lives, and Spenser's Anecdotes.

In each play; his last was my have made a very good anecdote.

how in fashion, the pretty surprising.—L. (He speaks so just, and so placed by d. Mr Pope always said have been various. The of his comedies, in that the he author's expectations, also of his subjects, which variety of characters and methoded, his wit natural all contrived. But then, it he was too hasty in his productions; that his works are loose, though not indeed as grossly licentious as those of some other wits of his time, that his imagination, though lively, was capable of no great compass, and his wit, though plausible, not such as would gain ground on consideration."—Baym.

"He seems to have been a man of a genius rather sprightly than great, rather buoyant than mild. His comedies are diverting, because his characters are natural, and such as we frequently meet with; but he has not so art in drawing them, nor does there appear any force of thinking in his performances, or any deep penetration into nature, but rather a superficial view, pleasant enough to the eye, though capable of having no great impression on the mind."—Older's Lives.

"Farquhar is a light and gay writer, less correct and less sparkling than Congreve, but he has more ease, and, perhaps, fully as great a share of the vivacity. The two best and least susceptible of his plays are the 'Recruiting Officer' and 'Beggars' Stratagem.' I say the least exceptionable, for, in general, the tendency of both Congreve and Farquhar's plays is immoral."—Dr. Ham. Let. on Rhod. and Bellerophon.

We have already given our opinion at length upon authors of this class in the articles on BEAUFORT and PLAYFAIR, and JAMES COLLIER.

Farquhar, John, minister at Nigg, Sermon, 4th ed., edited by Drs. Geo. Campbell and Alex. Oswald, London, 1792, 8vo.

"A good judge will not be at a loss to discern in this preacher an eminent element of apprehension, correctness of taste, a lively imagination, and delicate sensibility to all the finest feelings of which human nature is susceptible."—Shelley's Preface.

"We recollect of reading his sermon the first time with a delight bordering on enthusiasm. They discover a cultivated mind and a feeling heart, with rational piety, and becoming zeal for the eternal interests of man."—Dr. B. Ser.

Farquhar, Robert Townsend. Suggestions rel. to Pop. of Brit. W. India, and abolition of Slave Trade, 1807.

Farquharson, George. Reports of Trials, &c., 1806, '09, '11, Ct. of Chancery. Lett. rel. to Lord Eldon, 1823.

Farquharson, Wm., M.D. Con. to Med. Com., 1789; to Mem. Med., 1799, '02.

Farquharson, Wm. Truth in pursuit of Colquhoun Wardle, 1810. Was he caught?

Farr, Edward. 1. Version of the Psalms of David. 2. The People of China. 3. Bible Biography, 8v. 8vo; 2d ed., 1847. 4. Select Poetry, 1845, 2 vols. 12mo; 1847, r. 16mo. 5. Jephthah's, or Jephthah's Daughter, and other Poems, 1848, 32mo. 6. Collegiate, School, and Family Hist. of Eng., 1848, 12mo.

"Certainly the best school and Family History of England we have seen."—London Review.

7. The Hist. of France. 8. Manual of Geography for Schools, 1848, 12mo.

Farr, Samuel, M.D. 1741-1793, a native of Taunton, Somerset. 1. Acids, London, 1790, 12mo. 2. Animal Motion, 1771, 8vo. 3. Aphorismi de Marcano et Sonnois Medicis Collectis, 1772, 12mo. 4. Blood letting in Consumption, 1775, 8vo. Dr. Farr was opposed to the practice. 5. Hist. of Epidemics, from Hippocrates, 1781, 4to. 6. Elements of Medical Jurisprudence, 1788, 8vo.; 1811, 1813, 12mo. A treatise from the work of Facciolus, with additions, by Farr. 7. On the Use of Cantharides in Dropsical Complaints, Mem. Med., 1789.

Farr, Wm., M.D. Locked Jaw and Opisthotonos; Med. Obs. and Inq., 1770. Meteorolog. Observ. at Plymouth and Bristol, 1768, '69.

Farr, Wm. 1. Essay on Cancer, London, 8vo. 2. Treatise on Scrophula, 8vo. 3. Medical Guide to Wines, 1841, 12mo. Mr. Farr is editor of the London Medical Annual.

"Some of the most elaborate and important papers in the Annual Reports of the Registrar-General [London] have been written by Mr. W. Farr and reflect the highest credit on his ability, extensive mathematical and medical learning, and industry."—Mr. Colclough's Ed. of Pitt's Essay.

Farrant, Henry. Letters rel. to the See of Canterbury, London, 1710, 4to.

Farrant, Richard, d. about 1645, an eminent composer of music, was a gentleman of the Chapel Royal in 1644. Some of his music will be found in the collections of Boyce and Howard.

Farrar, Eliza, the wife of Professor John Farrar, of Harvard, is well known as the author of The Children's Robinson Crusoe, the Life of Lafayette, the Life of Howard, Youth's Letter Writer, &c. The most popular of her volumes is The Young Lady's Friend, first pub. in 1837, and frequently reprinted in England and America.

"It contains no flights of fancy, or attempts at fine writing, but the sound practical sense, expressed in good English, and in a style perfectly adapted to the subject. It is a work worthy of Hannah More or Maria Edgeworth."—Harvard's Annual from Writers of America.

Farrar, John, has pub. many valuable works (issued in Boston, Mass.) on Nat. Philos., Topography, and various branches of the mathematics.

Farrar, Rev. John. 1. Proper Names of the Bible,

2d ed., 1844, 8vo. 2. Biblical and Theolog. Dict., 1852, 12mo. 3. Ecclesiastical Dict., 1853, 12mo.

Farrar, Richard. Political tracts, 1648, '60.

Farrar, T. Report of the Dartmouth College Case, Portsmouth, 1819, 8vo.

Farre, John R., M.D. Hydrocele, 1798, 8vo. The Liver, 1812-15, 4to. Saunders on the Eye, 1812, 8vo. The Heart, 1814, 8vo. Cynanche, in Med. Chir. Trans., 1812.

Farre, Samuel. See FARR.

Farrel, Mrs. Charlotte; or, the sequel to the Sorrows of Werter; and other Poems, 1792, 4to.

Farrel, Charles, M.D. Ophthalmia, 1810, '11.

Farrel, George. Sermon, 1716, 8vo.

Farrel, James A. State of the Nation, 1816, 8vo.

Farrel, John. Hist. and Polit. View of Geneva in the 18th Cent., from the French of F.D'Ivernois, Lon., 1784, 8vo.

Farrel, R. Union or Separation, 1798, 8vo.

Farrel, R., M.D. Lect. of Boyer on Diseases of the Bones, by A. Richmond, trans. from the French, Lon., 1801, 2 vols. 8vo. Researches into the laws of Chemical Affinity, from the French of C. L. Berthollet, 1804, 8vo.

Farren, Edwin James. 1. Hist. Essay on the Early Progress of Life Contingencies, Lon., 1844, 8vo.

"This, and Mr. Milne's historical account in the Encyclopedia Britannica, are the only ones which we know, that treat the subject at any length."—Lon. Athenaeum.

2. Life Contingency Tables, Part 1. Chances of Premature Death, 1850, 4to.

Farren, George. 1. Life Assurance, Lon., 1822, 8vo.

2. Statute made Easy, 1837, 18mo. 3. Key to Statutes, &c., 1837, 18mo. 4. Handbook for Judges, Barristers, &c., 1839, 8vo. 5. Bill of Costs in Chancery, 1840, 12mo.

6. Rules for Reading Acts of Parliament, 1840, 18mo.

7. Digest of Equity and Common Law Reports, 1841, 8vo.

8. Chart of Chancery Practice, 1841, sheet. 9. Common Rules and Forms for drawing Bills in Chancery, 1842, 18mo. Amer. ed. with additions, adapted to U. States Cts. of Equity, &c., Boston, 1845, 12mo. This is a reprint of Nos. 9 and 10. See BARBOUR, OLIVER LORENZO; Chancery Practice. 10. Common Forms, &c., answering a Bill in Chancery, Lon., 1844, 18mo. 11. Liabilities of Members of Public Companies and Partnerships, 1844, 12mo.

Farrer, E. The Trial of Abraham; a Dramatic Poem, 1790, 8vo.

Farrer, Isaac. Sermon, 1768, 8vo.

Farrer, John. 1. Hebrew Poems, Lon., 1780, 4to.

2. America; a Poem, 1780, 4to. 3. Sermon, 1801, 4to.

4. Sermons on the Mission and character of Christ, with those preached at the Bampton Lecture, Oxf., 1804, 8vo.

5. Sermons on the Parables. New ed., 1809, 8vo.

Farrer, John. 1. The Hist. of Limerick, 1792, 8vo.

2. A View of Ancient and Modern Dublin, 1796, 8vo.

Farrer, Mary. The Appeal of an Injured Wife against a Cruel Husband, Lon., 1788, 8vo.

Farrer, Wm., M.D. 1. Med. treatise from Tissot, Lon., 1767, 8vo. 2. Rickets in Children, 1773, 12mo.

Farrer, Wm., LL.D. 1. Brief Outline of the Study of Theology, trans. from the late Dr. Frederick Schleiermacher, with Reminiscences of Schleiermacher, by Dr. Frederick Lücke, Lon., 1850, 8vo.

"The work of a gigantic mind. It is incomparably the most suggestive work we ever read; every sentence is a mine of thought."—Kitt's Journal.

2. First Lines of Christian Theology, by John Pye Smith, D.D., LL.D., &c., edited from the author's MSS., with addit. Notes and References, 1854, 8vo. See SMITH, JOHN PYE, D.D., LL.D.

Farres, Capt. Speech to Earl of Warwick, on behalf of the County of Essex, Lon., 1642, 4to.

Farresley, Thomas. Modern Cases in Ct. of K. B. at Westminster, reign of Q. Anne, Lon., 1716, fol. See Modern Reports, vol. viii., in Marvin's Leg. Bibl. 520, and Wallace's Reports, 47.

Farrington, Rev., of Dinas. Of the Char-Fish in North Wales; Phil. Trans., 1755.

Farrington, J. Britannia Depicta.

Farrington, John. Origin of the Grandeur of the Court of Rome. From the French of Abbé Vertot, Lon., 1754, 8vo.

Of this celebrated writer we find the following biographical sketch in Biographie Universelle, nouvelle édition, Bruxelles, 1843-47, 21 vols. imp. 8vo:

"René Aubert, Abbé de Vertot, célèbre historien, né le 25 Novembre, 1656, au château de Benetot, dans le pays de Caux, embrassa l'état ecclésiastique, et ne tarda pas à donner des preuves d'une dévotion exaltée, qui le conduisit à l'insu de sa famille, dans un couvent de capucins. Mais bientôt sa vie fut en péril, et on le décida, non sans peine, à entrer dans l'ordre moins austère des Prémontrés. Le prieur de Joyenval lui fut conféré par un bref du pape et des lettres du roi; mais les murmures de ses confrères le décidèrent à s'en démettre, et il obtint la cure de Croissy-la-Garenne, près de Marly. Il se livra alors à l'étude, mais négligea ses devoirs de pasteur, et fit imprimer en 1689 son premier ouvrage, L'Histoire de la Conjuration du Portugal. Bientôt après il obtint une cure d'un assez gros revenu, aux portes de Rouen, et n'en travailla qu'avec plus d'ardeur. Sept ans après son premier ouvrage, il publia L'Histoire des Révolutions de Suède, dont cinq éditions parurent coup sur coup, avec la même date, et qui fut traduite en plusieurs langues. En 1701, lorsque le roi donna une forme nouvelle à l'Académie des Inscriptions, Vertot reçut le titre d'associé. On se relâcha pour lui de la rigueur du règlement qui exigeait résidence, et il lui fut permis de ne venir siéger qu'en 1703. Il fut nommé pensionnaire en 1703; et dès lors nul ne se montra plus assidu ni plus zélé. En 1710 il fit paraître un Traité de la Mouance de Bretagne, où il combattait les prétentions des Bretons à se dire indépendants de la monarchie française, avec laquelle ils étaient liés plutôt que confondus. Mais son œuvre favorite était L'Histoire des Révolutions de la République Romaine, qui parut en 1717 et obtint des applaudissements universels. Ce fut alors que l'ordre de Malte le pria de rédiger ses annales en un corps complet d'histoire, qu'il publia en 1726. Pendant qu'il travaillait à ce long ouvrage, il fut nommé secrétaire interprète, puis secrétaire des commandements de la princesse de Bade, femme du duc d'Orléans, fils du régent, et se trouva ainsi en possession d'un revenu considérable et d'un logement au Palais Royal. Il passa la dernière partie de sa vie dans l'aisance et le repos, mais aussi dans un état d'infirmité continue, qui l'empêcha d'exécuter les divers projets qu'il avait en tête. Vertot mourut le 15 Juin, 1755. On dut regretter de son temps plus qu'on ne le ferait aujourd'hui, qu'il eût cessé d'écrire. L'histoire était pour lui, avant tout, une œuvre littéraire: il n'aspirait point à saisir la vérité de couleur et négligeait le scrupuleux détail des faits pour viser presque uniquement l'effet dramatique. On entend de nos jours autrement le devoir de l'historien. L'édition la plus complète de ses Œuvres choisies est celle de Paris, 1819 à 1821, 12 vols. in 8vo."

The historical reader must not fail to peruse the criticism of Gibbon on Vertot's account of the Social War, (Vertot, Révolut. Rom., tom. iii. 26-30.) We quote a few lines from the introduction and a few from the conclusion:

"I shall venture to make some reflections on this extraordinary war, the principal circumstances of which have been somewhat misrepresented by the Abbé Vertot,—an author whose works are read with the same pleasure as romances, to which in other respects they bear too much resemblance. . . . The Abbé Vertot, when he explained the difficulties with which the Romans had to contend, should also have mentioned the resources by which they were enabled to surmount them."—Gibbon's Miscell. Works, ed. 1837, 8vo, 510, 512.

Whilst the reader has this fascinating volume in his hands, let him turn back to page 385, and mourn with us that the learned historian never carried out his admirable project of "a seventh or supplemental volume" to his great work.

Farrington, Richard. 20 Sermons, Lon., 1741, 8vo.

Farro, Daniel. Royal Universal Brit. Grammar and Vocabulary, Lon., 1754, 8vo; 1776. R. G. Instructor for Youth, 1776, 12mo.

Farthing, John. Short Writing Shortened, 1654. See Lowndes's Bibl. Man.

Farthing, Ralph. Sermon, 1722, 8vo.

Fary, John. Sermon, Lon., 1645, 4to.

Fasquelle, Jean Louis, F.B., LL.D., b. 1808, in France, settled in the U. S. in 1834. Appointed Prof. of Languages, &c. in the University of Michigan in 1846. 1. A new method of learning the French language, 20th ed., N. Y., 1854. 30,000 copies of this work have also been published in England. 2. Télémaque, with notes and grammatical references. 3. The Colloquial French Reader, 4th ed., 1854. 4. Napoleon, (Dumas,) with notes, &c. 5. A general and Idiomatical Dictionary of the French and English Languages.

The merits of Fasquelle's New French Course are well known. We have room for only one recommendation from the thirty or forty before us.

"I have taught many classes in the French Language, . . . and I do not hesitate to say that Fasquelle's French Course, on the plan of Woodbury's Method with the German, is superior to any other French Grammar I have met with, for teaching French to those whose mother-tongue is English. It combines, in an admirable manner, the excellencies of the old or classic, and the new or Ollendorffian, methods, avoiding the faults of both."—JOSEPH WILLIAM JENKS, Prof. of Languages in the New Ch. Univ. at Urbana, Ohio.

Faugeres, Margaretta V., 1771-1801, a daughter of Mrs. Anne Eliza Bleeker, was a native of Tonhannick, near Albany, New York. She was unhappily married to an infidel physician—Dr. Peter Faugeres of New York—who abused his wife, and squandered her fortune. She subsequently taught school at New Brunswick and at Brooklyn. In 1793 Mrs. Faugeres edited the posthumous works of her mother, (see BLEEKER, ANNE ELIZA,) adding some of her own compositions in verse and prose. In 1795 she pub. Belisarius, a Tragedy in five acts, extracts from which, and a notice of the author, will be found in Griswold's Female Poets of America.

"Though unsuited to the stage, this tragedy has considerable merit, and is much superior to the earlier compositions of the author The style is generally dignified and correct, and free from the extravagant declamation into which the subject would have seduced a writer of less taste and judgment."—Ubi supra.

Faulkner, Charles. Hints to Electors, 1796, 8vo.

Faulkland. See FALKLAND.

Faulkner, A. B., M.D. A Hospital, &c., 1810, 8vo.

Faulkner, B. Insanity, Lon., 1790, 8vo.

Faulkner, George, d. 1775, a Dublin printer and bookseller, afterwards resident in London, edited a journal, and enjoyed the patronage of Lord Chesterfield and Swift. The former addressed to him, under the name of Atticus, those ironical letters which attained such great celebrity. Faulkner's style and manner were ridiculed in An Epistle to George Edmund Howard, Esq., with notes by George Faulkner, Esq., an alderman, reprinted in Dilly's Repository, vol. iv. p. 175. But some authentic letters of Faulkner's will be found in Nichols's Literary Anecdotes, and in the 2d vol. of the Supplement to Swift, whose confidential printer he was. Faulkner died an alderman of Dublin in 1775. A caricature of this literary printer, by Richard Cumberland, will be found in the Memoirs of the Life of the latter, p. 173, 4to ed.

Faulkner, Thomas. 1. Hist. Descrip. Acct. of the Roy. Hosp. and Roy. Milit. Asylum at Chelsea, Lon., 1805, 12mo. 2. Hist., Topog., and Statist. Descrip. of Chelsea and its Environs, 1810, 8vo. 3. Hist. and Topog. Descrip. of Fulham, 1813, 8vo. 4. Hist. and Antiq. of Kensington, 1820, 8vo.

Faulkner, W. 1. Serms. 2. Ch. Service, 1802, '13.

Faulkner, Wm. H. Rights of Man Invaded; being an Exposition of the Tyranny of our Gov. in India, 1792, 8vo. A fruitful theme, truly.

Faunt, Arthur, or Laurence, Arthur, an English Jesuit, born in Leicestershire, pub. several theolog. treatises. See Watt's Bibl. Brit.

Fauquier, Francis. Raising Money for support of the War, &c., 3d ed., Lon., 1757, 8vo. Joseph Massie pub. Observations on this Essay, 1756, 8vo. See McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Econ.

Fausset, Godfrey, D.D., Canon of Christ Church, Margaret Prof. of Divinity, Oxford, and Vicar of Cropthorn, Worcestershire. 1. Sermon on the Necessity of Educating the Poor in the principles of the Established Church, Oxf., 1811, 8vo. 2. Claims of the Established Church; 8 serms. at the Bampton Lecture, 1820, 8vo.

"We will only premise, therefore, that all enemies of the Church who do not regard her doctrines as unscriptural, will, if we mistake not, find in this volume of Bampton Lectures the reasons of its discipline so justly explained, and the importance of preserving that discipline so ably asserted, that if they be but men of tolerable firmness, they will hardly be able to avoid a feeling of regret that they are at enmity with a Church which can sustain its cause by a line of argument so powerful and so direct."—Lon. Christ. Remembrancer.

Also highly commended in the British Critic. 3. Sermon: Revival of Popery, 1838, 8vo.

Faustus, a monk, b. about 390, supposed to have been a native of Britain, Bishop of Ries, in Province, 466, wrote against predestination and reprobation. These writings will be found in Bibl. Max. Patr., viii. See Cave, vol. I.; Milner's Ch. Hist.; Saxii Onomast.

Faux, W., an English Farmer. Memorable Days in America; being a Journal of a Tour in the United States, Lon., 1823, 8vo, pp. 448. This is a "Memorable" work, as being the occasion of two spicy reviews: the first in the Lon. Quarterly, vol. xix. 338, said to be by Gifford; the other, in which the critic of the Quarterly is roughly handled, in the N. Amer. Rev., vol. xix. 92, by Edward Everett.

Favell. Votes of Thanks by Southwark to Mr. Wardle, 1809, 8vo.

Favell, Charles. Sermon, Lon., 1793, 4to.

Favell, James. Abraham's Case in offering up Isaac, Camb., 1769, 4to.

Favour, John, d. 1623, Vicar of Halifax, Yorkshire. Antiquities triumphing over Novelty; or Antiquities a certain Note of the Christian Catholic Church, Lon., 1619, 4to.

"He was esteemed a person of great piety and charity, and one well read in substantial and profound authors."—Athen. Oxon.

Fawcett, Benjamin, 1715–1780, a dissenting minister at Kidderminster for 35 years. Serms., 1756–80. Abridgt. of Baxter's Saint's Rest. Religious Melancholy, 1780, 8vo.

Fawcett, J., a dissenting minister. Serms., 1749, 8vo. Crit. Expos. of the 9th Chap. of Romans, 1752, 8vo.

Fawcett, James, Lady Margaret Preacher in the Univ. of Cambridge. Serms. preached before the Univ. of Cambridge, Camb., 1794, 8vo.

"These sermons are truly academic. They afford young preachers a happy example of the manner in which ingenious speculation may be united with practical utility."—Lon. Monthly Review.

Fawcett, John, D.D., 1739–1817, a Baptist minister. Serms., Hymns, Poems, &c., 1775–81.

Fawcett, John, D.D. Serms., theolog. treatises, biograph. sketches, &c., 1797–1807. Devotional Family Bible; with Notes and Illustrations, Lon., 1811, 2 vols. r. 4to.

"This work is evangelical, judicious, and well written."—Lowndes's Bibl. Lib.

"This work is wholly designed for family use; but the marginal renderings and parallel texts have been entirely omitted. The absence of these is inexcusable in any edition of the Bible above the size of a duodecimo volume."—Horne's Bibl. Bib.

Fawcett, John, Rector of Scaleby. Serms. for Families, 3d ed., Lon., 1823, 2 vols. 12mo. Familiar Discourses, 1828, 8vo. Other works.

Fawcett, John, of Covent-Garden Theatre. 1. Obit; a Pant. Drama, 1800, 8vo. 2. La Perouse; a Pant. Drama, 1801, 8vo. 3. The Enchanted Island; a Dram. Ballad, 1804, 8vo.

"Successful pieces."—Biog. Dramat.

Fawcett, Joseph, d. 1804, a dissenting minister at Walthamstow, afterwards a farmer. He pub. several serms., poems, &c. Serms. at the Old Jewry, Lon., 1795, 2 vols. 8vo.

"It may not be easy to find many volumes that can boast so happy an union of sound sense and useful instruction with all the graces and energies of oratory."—Lon. Monthly Review.

"His figures of speech, his metaphors and allusions, are beautiful, numerous, and striking."—Lon. Critical Review.

Fawcett, Richard, D.D., Vicar of Newcastle, and Preb. of Durham. Sermon, 1768, 4to.

Fawcett, Samuel. Serms., 1641, '68.

Fawcett, Thomas. Serms., Lon., 1784, 8vo.

Fawcett, General Sir Wm., 1728–1804, Gov. of Chelsea Hospital, an English officer, served on the Continent during "the seven years' war." 1. The Reveries, or Memoirs upon the Art of War; from the French of Saxe, 1757, 4to. 2. Reg. for the Prussian Cavalry; from the German, 1757. 3. Reg. for the Prussian Infantry, 1759. 4. Rules, &c. rel. to his Majesty's Forces, 1786, 8vo; 1792. Fawcener, Samuel. Sermon, Lon., 1763, 8vo. Essay on Modern Luxury, 1765, 8vo.

Fawkes, Francis, 1721–1777, educated at Jesus Coll., Camb., Vicar of Orpington, 1755; Rector of Hayes, 1774. 1. Bramham Park; a Poem, 1745. 2. Descrip. of May, 1752. 3. Of Winter. 4. Trans. of Anacreon, Sappho, Bion, Moschus, and Musæus, 1760, 12mo; 1754; both from Gawen Douglas. 5. Original Poems and Translations, 1761. 6. Partridge Shooting; a Poem, 1767, 4to. 7. Trans. of the Idylliums of Theocritus, 1767, 8vo. 8. The Argonautics of Apollonius Rhodius; poet. ; completed by Rev. Henry Meen of Emanuel Coll., Camb., 1780, 8vo. 9. Family Bible, with Notes, 4to. 10. In conjunction with Mr. Wooty, The Poetical Calendar, vol. i., 1763, 12mo; intended as a supplement to Dodsley's Collection. The Poetical Calendar and Nichols's Collection contain some of Fawkes's poems. His song of The Brown Jug is still a great favourite. Fawkes's merits were considerable.

"His great strength lay in translation, in which, since Pope, few have equalled him."—Nichols's Literary Anecdotes, q. v.

Dr. Johnson, not, indeed, a first-rate critic in Greek literature, remarked that

"Frank Fawkes had done the odes of Anacreon very finely."

Fawkes, James. Life of Dr. Seignior, 1681, 8vo.

Fawkes, Walter. 1. Chronol. of the Hist. of Mod. Europe, 475–1793, York, 1810, 4to. 2. Speech on Pari. Reform, 1812. 3. The Englishman's Manual; or, A Dialogue between a Tory and a Reformer, 1817, 8vo.

Fawkner, Anthony. Serms., 1630, '35.

Fawler, John. Surg. Con. to Phil. Trans., 1707.

Fay, Theodore S., a native of New York, Secretary of Legation for the United States at the Court of Berlin from 1837 to 1853, and since 1853 Minister to Switzerland, enjoys extensive reputation as a graceful and graphic writer. In 1832 he pub. Dreams and Reveries of a Quiet Man, containing The Little Genius, and other essays contributed to that excellent periodical, The New York Mirror, of which Mr. Fay was for some time one of the editors. He has since pub. The Minute Book, a journal of travels; Norman Leslie, a Tale of the Present Times, 1835; 2d ed. in same year; Sydney Clifton, 1839; The Countess Ida, 1840; Hoboken, a Romance of New York, 1843; Robert Rueful, 1844; Ulrie; or, The Voices: a Tale, 1851. Of his fugitive contributions to periodicals, perhaps the best known are the papers on Shakspeare. Mr. Fay has also some pretensions to the character of a poet. A review of the Countess Ida, by an eminent critic, will be found in The North American Review, li. 434–457. We quote a few lines from the conclusion:

"The work shows a deep sympathy with human nature, as well as a familiar acquaintance with the higher forms of European social life. The author has not been dazzled by the trappings of royalty and aristocracy, though he can describe them so well. The virtues and the vices of high society are set forth by him with impartiality and force; and we rise from his pages with a cordial respect for his abilities, a sympathy with his views of life, and an admiration of the moral purity which is shed over the scenes he has so vividly placed before us."—PROF. C. C. FULTON.

"Mr. Theodore S. Fay, our Minister to Switzerland, is at present engaged in writing the history of that country. Several years, it is stated, must elapse ere the completion of the work, which will doubtless be a highly creditable contribution to that historical literature for which America is already so justly distinguished."—1855.

Fayerman, Francis. Zarah; that is, Christianity before Judaism, Lon., 1757, 8vo.

Fayerman, Richard. Contemplation; a Poetical Essay on the Works of Creation, 1776, 4to.

Fazakerly. Poemata varia, Lon., 1781, 8vo. These poems were suppressed.

Fea, James. 1. Grievances of Orkney and Shetland, Edin., 1750, 8vo. 2. Present State of the Orkney Islands, 1755, 8vo. 3. Fishing on the Coasts of Shetland, 1775, 8vo.

Fea, John W. Eldomiana, Lon., 1826, 8vo.

Feake, Christopher. Theolog. treatises, Lon., 1651-57, 4to.

Feake, John. Serma., Lon., 1660, 4to.

Fearn, John. 1. Human Conscience, 1811, 4to.

2. Review of Berkeley, Reid, and Stewart, 1813, 4to.

3. Primary Vision, 1815, 4to. 4. The Human Mind, 8vo.

Fearne, Charles, Judge-Advocate of the Admiralty, temp. Geo. II. 1. Minutes of the Proceedings of the Trial of Rear-Admiral Knowles, Lon., 1750, 8vo. Report of the Trial of Admiral Byng, 1756, fol. See BYNG, HONOURABLE JOHN.

Fearne, Charles, 1749-1794, son of the preceding, was educated at Westminster school, from whence he was removed to the Inner Temple. He soon became distinguished for his legal erudition, and could have secured a large professional business, had not a fondness for chemical and philosophical experiments engrossed a great portion of his time and thoughts. From this cause his life was embarrassed with difficulties, and his last hours clouded with anxiety for those whom he left behind. 1. Legigraphical Chart of Landed Property in England, 1769, '94. 2. An Impartial Answer to the Doctrine delivered in a Letter which appeared in the Public Advertiser, under the signature of Junius, 1769, 8vo. 3. An Essay on the Learning of Contingent Remainders and Executory Devices, 1772, 8vo, anon.; 1773, '75; 4th ed., enlarged, 1791, 2 vols. 8vo. This ed. contains the copies of Opinions on the Will in case Perrin v. Blake, pub. 1780, 8vo; with Notes by Powell, vol. i., 1801; vol. ii., 1795, 8vo; 6th ed., with Notes by Charles Butler, 1809, 8vo; 7th, 8th, and 9th edis. vary but little from the 6th ed.; 10th ed., enlarged by Josiah W. Smith, 1844, 2 vols.; Phil., 1845, 2 vols. 8vo. This contains Butler's Notes and addis. The value of Fearne's great work is well known to the profession. We quote from some eminent authorities:

"This work is so very instructive on the dry and obscure subject of remainders and executory devices, that it cannot be too much recommended to the attention of the diligent student."—ALANVALE: Ob. Ed., 20.

"Where, for instance, shall we look for a work like Mr. Fearne's Essay on Contingent Remainders and Executory Devices? This subject, which constituted one of the most obscure, and must forever remain one of the most intricate, titles of the common law, had been already sketched out by the masterly hand of Lord Chief Baron Gilbert, [see Bacon's Abridgment, Gullim's Edition, title, Remainder and Reversion, Note;] but, like all his other writings, it was left in a detached and imperfect shape. It was reserved for Mr. Fearne to honour the profession by a treatise so profound and accurate that it became the guide of the ablest lawyers, yet so luminous in method and explanations that it is level to the capacity of every attentive student. He has, in fact, exhausted the subject; and this chef-d'œuvre will forever remain a monument of his skill, acuteness, and research. All that the most accomplished lawyer can reasonably hope, is to add a commentary of new cases and principles, as they arise, without venturing to touch the sacred fabric of his master."—JUDAS STONY: North Amer. Review, vi. 54; Nov., 1817.

"A masterly production on a doctrine generally admitted as one of the most abstruse in the whole system of English law. The enlightened and scientific manner in which this difficult topic has been treated by Mr. Fearne has imparted to it an interest before unmet, and strongly illustrates the infinite importance of a progressive and strictly analytical method of the discussion of dry and abstruse doctrines."—Hoffman's Legal Study.

But Mr. Hoffman does not think Fearne entirely correct in classification and definitions; and, referring to the opinion we shall next quote, considers that the "entire doctrine of these subjects is capable of great modification."

"If it were desired to form a code of the law of contingent remainders and executory devices, it could not, perhaps, be better done than by a statute which should propound, in the form of a code, all the principles and rules of law laid down in Mr. Fearne's Essay, and declare them to be law."—CHARLES BUTLER: Life of Chancellor D'Aguessau, p. 66.

"Charles Fearne was a man of a very strong and subtle intellect, and delighted in metaphysical and philosophical speculations. The work mentioned in the text [Contingent Remainders] has long been a first-rate legal text-book, characterised by accurate and profound learning."—Warren's Law Studies, 2d ed., xiv. 1845.

4. Posthumous Works, by T. M. Shadwell, 1795, '99, 8vo.

Fearon, Henry Bradshaw, a London surgeon. 1. Cancers, Lon., 1784, 8vo; new ed., 1795, 8vo. 2. Observations on Cancers, Memoirs Med., 1789. 3. A Narrative of a Journey of 5000 miles through the Eastern and Western States of America.

"The tone of ill-temper which this author usually manifests in speaking of the American character, has gained for his work the approbation of persons who regard that country with peculiar jealousy."—Lon. Monthly Review.

But, if Mr. Fearon be a truthful witness, there seems to be but little occasion for "jealousy." See Lon. Quart. Review, xxi. 124.

"Mr. Fearon is a much abler writer than either of the two last, [Palmer and Bradbury,] but no lover of America, and a little given to exaggerate in his views of vices and prejudices."—REV. SYDNEY SMITH: Edin. Review.

Fearon, James Peter. Theatrical Criticism; a Critique on the School of Reform, 1805, 8vo.

Fearon, Joseph. Serma., Lon., 1756, 4to.

Fearon, Joseph F. Serma., Lewes, 1797, 4to.

Featherstonehaugh, George William. 1. Geological Report, made in 1834, of the elevated country between the Missouri and Red Rivers, Washington, 1835, 8vo, pp. 97. 2. Observ. upon the Treaty of Washington, signed 9th August, 1842, Lon., 1842, 8vo, pp. 560. See a review of this, and other publications connected with this treaty, in the Lon. Quar. Review, lxxi. 560. 3. Excursion through the Slave States, 1844, 2 vols. 8vo, pp. 792.

"The notices of the natural history and the mines are novel and interesting, and his pictures of the heroes of the bowie-knife remarkably characteristic and entertaining."—Lon. New Monthly Mag.

4. Canoe Voyage to the Minnay Soter, 1847, 2 vols. 8vo.

Featherstonehaugh, H. Serma., 1724, 8vo.

Featley, Featly, or Fairclough, Daniel, 1682-1644, a native of Charlton, near Oxford, was educated at Corpus Christi Coll., Ox.; Rector of Lambeth, 1618; of Allhallows, 1627; and subsequently of Acton. A biography of this learned divine will be found in Chalmers's Biog. Dict. It was intended for the commencement of the 6th vol. of the new ed. of the Biog. Brit., never completed. See Dibdin's Library Companion. For a list of Feastley's works, of which we notice a few, see Athen. Oxon. Anticilla Pietatis, Lon., 1626, 4to; a work of great popularity; 8th ed., 1676. Hexateium, 1637, fol. Clavis Mystica, 70 Serma., 1638, fol.

"A singular exhibition of the kind of eloquence and instruction which was in vogue during the period in which the author lived. Feastley was by no means destitute of learning and imagination; but his powers, quaint conceits, numerous distinctions and divisions, display the lamentable want of taste and good sense which prevailed."—Orme's Bibl. Bibl.

The Dippers Dript; or the Anabaptists dycked and plvng'd over Head and Ears, at a Disputation in Southwark, 1647, '51, 4to. Noticed by Milton: see Lowndes's Bibl. Man.; Orme's Bibl. Man. The League Illegal, 1660, 4to. His nephew, Dr. John Feastley, pub. a work entitled Doctor Daniel Feastly Revived, with his Life and Death, 1660, 12mo.

Featley, John, d. 1666, a nephew of the preceding, visited, in 1643, St. Christopher's, in the West Indies, and was the first preacher of the Gospel there. 1. A Divine Antidote against the Plague. 2. A Fountaine of Teares, Amst., 1646, 24mo; Lon., 1683, 12mo. 3. Divine Antidote against the Plague, 1660. 4. Serma.

Featley, Richard, d. 1681, aged 61, "a nonconforming minister, and a frequent preacher in conventicles."—Athen. Oxon. One or more of his serms. will be found in The Morning Exercise against Popery, &c., Lon., 1675, 4to.

Febure, Mrs. A medical treatise, Lon., 1777, 8vo.

"Nothing more nor less than a quick advertisement."—Lon. Monthly Review.

Feckenham, John de, D.D., d. 1585, so called because born near the forest of Feckenham, (his right name was Howman), was the last mitred abbot who sat in the house of peers. This excellent Roman Catholic divine pub. a few controversial pieces. See Biog. Brit.; Dodd's Ch. Hist.; Strype's Cranmer; Athen. Oxon. He was continually employed in doing good to the persecuted Protestants of his day, and incurred Queen Mary's displeasure by the pertinacity with which he urged the enlargement of the Princess Elizabeth. Upon the accession of the latter, she offered him the Archbishopric of Canterbury upon condition that he would conform, but he rejected the proposal. He was subsequently—to the disgrace of the crown—imprisoned with other Roman Catholics, and died a captive in Wisbeach castle, in the Isle of Ely. No man of the age has been more commended for piety and benevolence:

"A learned and good man, that lived long, did a great deal of good to the poor, and always solicited the minds of his adversaries to benevolence."—CAMDEN: Annals Reg. Eliz., ad ann. 1559.

"In wonderful esteem for his learning, piety, charity, humility, and other virtues. All the time of Queen Mary's reign he employed himself in doing good offices for the afflicted Protestants, from the highest to the lowest, and did-intercede with the queen for the lady Elizabeth, for which he gained her displeasure for a time."—WOOD: Athen. Oxon.

"A man cruel to none, courteous and charitable to all who needed his help or his liberality."—FULLER: Worthies of Westminster.

"A charitable and generous man, that lived in great esteem in England."—BISHOP BURNET: Hist. of the Reformation.

"Though I cannot go so far as Reyner, [vide Apost. Benedictin. in Anglia.] to call him a martyr, yet I can't gather but that he was a good, mild, modest, charitable man, and a devout Christian."—DART: Westminsterium, vol. II., in the Lives of the Abbots. Vide Biog. Brit.

Feild, John. Ephemeris, Lon., 1556, '58, 4to.

Feilde, Rev. Matthew. d. 1796, Preb. of St. Paul's. Vertumnus and Pomona; a Pastoral, 1782. The songs only were printed.

"An unsuccessful piece."—Biog. Dram.

Feilding, Viscount, and Capt. Kennedy. Travels in Algeria in 1845, Lon., 2 vols.

"A graphic and picturesque account of their adventures, including those among the wild Arabs and Bedouins of the desert."—Hood's Magazine.

Feist, C. Symbole of the Apostles, Lon., 1581, 8vo.

Feist, Charles. Poetical Effusions, and other works, Lon., 1813, &c.

Feigate, Samuel. The Novelty of the Modern Romanish Religion, Lon., 1682, 8vo.

Felix of Croyland, flourished about 730, compiled a Life of St. Guthlac. See Wright's Biog. Brit. Lit., and authorities there cited.

Felix, N. On the Bat; a Scientific Inquiry into the Use of Cricket. New ed., Lon., 1850, 4to. The reader must also procure—The Cricket Field; The Cricketer's Companion; The Cricketer's Guide; Hints on Cricket; and The Principles of Scientific Battling.

Fell, Elizabeth. Fables, Odes, and Miscel. Poems, Lon., 1771, 8vo. Poem on the Times, 1774, 4to. Poems, 1777, 4to.

Fell, John, D.D., 1625–1686, a son of Samuel Fell, D.D., was a native of Longworth, Berkshire, entered of Christ Church, Oxford, 1636; at the Restoration made Prebendary of Chichester, and Dean of Christ Church; Vice-Chancellor of the University, 1666–1669; Bishop of Oxford, 1676.

"He was the most zealous man of his time for the Church of England, and none, that I yet know of, did go beyond him in the performance of the rules belonging thereunto. . . . His charity was so great that he was a husband to the afflicted widow, a father to the orphan, and a tender parent to poor children."—Athen. Oxon., where, and in Biog. Brit., see an account of his life and works.

Among his works are, 1. The Life of Dr. Henry Hammond, Lon., 1660, '61, '62. Reprinted afterwards at the head of Hammond's Works; also in Wordsworth's Eccles. Biog. This excellent biography deserves attentive perusal. 2. Nemesii, Philos. et Episc. Emisseni, de Natura Hominis Liber, Gr. et Lat. Notis illustratus, [Jo. Fell, Episc. Oxon.,] Oxon., 1671, 8vo.

An eminent authority thus speaks of this treatise of Nemesius:

"Far from being either elegant or forcible, there is no new information given, nor is the old placed in a new light; the opinions of the ancient philosophers are opposed, and little that is better given in their place: in physics, Nemesius appears not to have known much, and in Metaphysics, to have been confused in what he did know."—CLARE.

3. Grammatica Rationis, sive Institutionis Logicæ, 1673, 8vo. 4. The Vanity of Scoffing, 1674, 8vo. 5. Novi Testamenti Libri Omnes Græcæ, 1675, 8vo; Leipsic, 1697; 1702, fol. By Dr. John Gregory, Oxf., 1703, fol.

"The text is formed according to that of Robert Stephens and the Elsevirs; though Wetstein has accused it of reclaiming errors of the former, as well as of some of Walton's Polyglott."—Horne's Bibl. Bib., q. v.

"An excellent edition, and an indispensable work to every man engaged in sacred criticism."—BISHOP NOAT.

6. A Paraphrase and Annotations upon all St. Paul's Epistles, done by several eminent men at Oxford, corrected and improved by Bishop Fell, Lon., 1702, 8vo. New ed., Oxf., 1852, 8vo.

"Fell on the Epistles is very short; but most of his notes are worthy of remark. The collection of parallel scriptures is judicious, and the translation in some places altered for the better."—DR. DODDRIGE.

"This work does not appear to me to be of much value."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

The bishop edited the works of St. Cyprian, 1682, pub. several works said to be by the author of The Whole Duty of Man, and had Anthony Wood's History and Antiquities of the University of Oxford trans. into Latin, Oxf., 1674, 2 vols. fol. Wood complains of this trans. See Athen. Oxon.

Fell, John, 1735–1797, a dissenting minister, classical tutor at the academy at Homerton, pub. several theolog. and other works, the principal of which are, 1. Genuine Protestantism, 1773, 8vo. 2. Demoniacs, 1779, 8vo.

"In which the hypothesis of the Rev. Mr. Farmer and others on the subject are considered."

See FARMER, HUGH.

8. English Grammar, 1784, 12mo. 4. Idolatry of Greece and Rome, in a Letter to the Rev. Hugh Farmer, 1785, 8vo.

"In these works, Mr. Fell defends the opposite system to that of Farmer, which is generally received. Farmer's views of demonology had been previously brought forward by Joseph Mede, Lardner, Dr. Mead, and Sykes. Fell's reply, both on this subject and on that of the ancient idolatry, is able, and acknowledged by Dr. Kippis, who was friendly to the sentiments of Farmer, to contain many things which would have been deserving of consideration and reply; but the temper in which he has written has been justly censured."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

5. Lectures on the Evidences of Chris'y, 4 by J. F., and 8 by Henry Hunter, 1798, 8vo.

See PROT. DISSENTER'S MAG., vols. iv., v., and vi.

Fell, J. Weldon, M.D., a native of the U.S., removed to London, where he was allowed to treat the patients of Middlesex Hospital for cancerous diseases upon a new plan. In 1857 he pub. A Treatise on Cancer and its Treatment, Lon., 8vo. See Report of the Surgical Staff of the Middlesex Hospital, 1857, 8vo.

Fell, Hunter Francis, Rector of Oulton, Suffolk. Serms., Lon., 1834, 12mo.

Fell, Margaret. For Manasseh Ben-Israel. The Call of the Jews out of Babylon, Lon., 1656, 4to.

Fell, Rev. R. C. Passages from the Private and Official Life of the late Alderman Kelly, Lon., 1856, '57, 8vo.

Fell, Ralph, a native of Yorkshire, d. 1814. A Tour through the Batavian Republic in 1800, Lon., 1801, '05, 8vo.

"This work gives an interesting picture of Holland and the Dutch at this period, besides historical and political details and observations on its connexion with France."—Stevenson's Voyages and Travels.

Memoirs of Charles James Fox, 1808, 4to. He edited an ed. of Hudibras, with Notes from Gray, &c., 2 vols. 18mo.

Fell, Samuel, D.D., 1594–1649, a native of London, educated at Christ Church, Oxf., Canon of Christ Church, 1619; Margaret Prof. of Divinity, 1626; Dean of Lichfield, 1637; Dean of Christ Church, 1638; Vice-Chancellor, 1645 and 1647. 1. Primitivæ; sive Oratio habita Oxoniæ in Scholia Theologicæ, 9th Nov., 1626. 2. Concio Latina ad Baccalaureos die cinerum in Colos. ii. 8, Oxf., 1627. He was the father of Dr. JOHN FELL, Bishop of Oxford, v. ante. See Athen. Oxon.; Lloyd's Memoirs.

Fell, Stephen, Surgeon, Ulverston. Profess. Con. to Ess. Phys. and Lit., 1766.

Fell, Walter William. 1. Principal Events in Eng. Hist., 1811, 12mo. 2. Lancaster's System of Education, 1812. Law of Mercantile Guarantees, 1812, 8vo., 2d ed., 1820; 1st Amer. ed., by Charles Walker, N. York, 1825, 8vo.

Fellowes, Henry. Laws of Copyholds, Lon., 1799, 8vo.

Fellowes, Sir James. Reports of the Pestilential Disorder of Andalusia at Cadix, 1800, '04, '10, '13, Lon., 1815, 8vo.

"A work of great interest and importance, as it respects the discussion of a curious question of medical theory that has been the subject of very warm controversy."—Lon. Monthly Review, 1816, q. v.

Fellowes, Rev. Robert, of St. Mary's Hall, Oxf., Editor of the London Critical Review. 1. Christian Philosophy, 1798, 2d ed., 1799, 8vo. 2. Supplement to do. 3. Religion without Cant, 1801, 8vo. 4. Guide to Immortality, 1804, 3 vols. 8vo. 5. Poems, 1806, 12mo. 6. Manual of Piety, 1807, 8vo. Other publications; the principal of which is, 7. A Body of Theology, 1807, 2 vols. 8vo.

"From the commencement to the conclusion, a current of the purest ethics flows with such beauty and spirit, that he who surveys it can possess neither taste nor virtue if he does not resolve on taking a copious draught of its waters."—Lon. Monthly Review.

See BRIT. CRITIC. Dr. Parr (see Spiritual Sermon) speaks in high terms of the merits of Fellowes's works.

Fellowes, Wm. D. 1. Loss of the Lady Hobart, Lon., 1803, 8vo. 2. Paris in July, 1815; in a Series of Letters, 1815, 8vo. 3. Hist. Sketches of Charles I., Cromwell, Charles II., and the Principal Personages of that Period, Paris, 1828, 4to; now very scarce. A few copies only were struck off for the author at Paris. An historical account will be found in this work of the sums exacted by the Commonwealth from the Royalists, the names of those who compounded their estates, &c. 4. Visit to the Monastery of La Trappe, r. 8vo.

Fellows, Sir Charles, an enterprising traveller, b. 1799, at Nottingham, England, knighted 1845. 1. A Journal written during an Excursion in Asia Minor in 1838, Lon., 1839, imp. 8vo; new ed., including No. 2, under the title of Travels and Researches in Asia Minor, particularly in the Province of Lycia, 1852, p. 8vo.

"Since my return to England I have learned at the Geographical Society that 'part of my route, which lay through the southern part of Asia Minor and led me to the remains of several important ancient cities, had not before been traversed by any European.' It is on this account alone that I am induced to lay my Journal before the public."—Preface.

2. More Recent Discoveries in Ancient Lycia; being a Journal kept during a Second Excursion in Asia Minor, 1841, imp. 8vo. See No. 1.

"You cannot imagine the pleasurable excitement of discovering in these cities the works of art and objects of the highest interest to the archaeologist. The age is probably earlier than the fourth century before the Christian era, and the works are illustrations of Homer and Herodotus."—Letter from the Author to the Lon. Athen.

"Our author has discovered eleven ancient Lycian cities, and has allowed the learned world to perceive that Lycia has a mine of antiquarian treasures of which he has only scraped the surface."—Lon. Athen.

3. Account of the Xanthian Marbles in the Brit. Museum, their Acquisition and Transmission to England, 1843, r. 8vo. 4. Account of the Trophy Monument at Xanthus, 1848, r. 8vo. 5. Coins of Ancient Lycia, 1855, 8vo. See Eng. Cyc., Biog., vol. ii., 1856, 885.

Fellows, John, a Methodist, pub. several poems, hymns, &c. The Holy Bible in Verse, 1778, 4 vols. 12mo.

Fellows, Robert. The Rights of Property vindicated against Universal Suffrage, Lon., 1818, 12mo.

Feltham, or Feltham, Owen, d. about 1678? a native of Suffolk, author of a work of great ability, lived for some years in the family of the Earl of Thomond. With the exception of this fact, but little is known of him. Resolves, divine, moral, and political, in two centuries, 1st ed., 12mo, date uncertain. 2d and 3d, 1628, 4to; 4th, 1631, 4to; 5th, 1634, 4to; 6th, 1636, 4to; 7th, 1647, 4to; 8th, 1661, fol.; 9th, 1670, fol.; 10th, 1677, fol.; 11th, 1696, fol.; 12th, 1709, 8vo; 13th, by Mr. Cumming, 1806, 8vo; 14th, also by Mr. C., 1820, 8vo. New ed., 1830, fp. 8vo. Century I., 1840, cr. 4to. The Beauties of Owen Feltham, selected from his Resolves, by J. A., was pub. in 1818, 12mo. For an account of this excellent work, and some other compositions of Feltham, included in some of the edits. of the Resolves, we must refer the reader to Mr. Cumming's edit., and to the Lon. Retrospect. Review, x. 343-365, 1824.

"We lay aside the Resolves, as we part from our dearest friends, in the hope of frequently returning to them. We recommend the whole of them to our readers' perusal. They will find therein more solid maxims, as much plety, and far better writing, than in most of the pulpit lectures now current among us."—Ubi supra.

"When FELTHAM lived, casuistry was a favourite study. This volume is a cabinet of the fashion of the day; full of gorgeous ornaments of mother-of-pearl and shells, and curiously carved, traced, and blinged."—Archdeacon Wrangham.

"Of this book, the first part of which was published in 1627, the second not until after the middle of the century, it is not uncommon to meet with high praises in those modern writers, who profess a faithful allegiance to our older literature. For myself, I can only say that Feltham appears not only a laboured and artificial, but a shallow, writer. Among his many faults, none strike me more than a want of depth, which his pointed and sententious manner renders more ridiculous. . . . He is one of our worst writers in point of style; with little vigour, he has less elegance."—Hallam's Introduc. to Lit. Hist. q. v.

We quote one observation of Feltham's, pertinent to the object of this Dictionary.

"It was an observation of the excellent Plutarch, that we ought to regard books as we do sweetmeats: not chiefly to aim at the pleasantest, but chiefly to respect the wholesomest; not forbidding either, but approving the latter most.

Feltham says truly enough, in another place, "Learning falls far short of wisdom, nay, so far, that you can scarcely find a greater fool than is sometimes a mere scholar."

Felt, Rev. Joseph B., b. 1789, at Salem, Massachusetts, grad. Dartmouth Coll., 1813. 1. Annals of Salem, Salem, 1827, 8vo; 1845, 2 vols. 12mo.

"An accurate and useful work, the fruit of much original research."—BANCROFT.

2. Historical Account of Massachusetts Currency, 1839, 8vo. "Full of instruction from beginning to end, not only as throwing great light upon the history of the country, and the working of its institutions, but also giving practical lessons, applicable to the present state of things."—North Amer. Review, l. 266.

3. History of Ipswich, Essex, and Hamilton, 1833.

4. Collections for the American Statistical Association on Towns, Population, and Taxation, 1847, pp. 596. 5. Memoir of Roger Conant, 1848. Mr. Felt has favoured us with some other statistical and topographical labours. See Rich's Bibl. Amer. Nova; Ludewig's Lit. of Amer. Local Hist.

The erudition of Mr. Felt, as an antiquary, has been acknowledged by one of our highest authorities:

"Rev. Joseph B. Felt, whose profound acquaintance with the antiquities of Massachusetts is known to the public."—HON. EDWARD EVERETT: Note to his Address on the Battle of Bloody Brook, delivered Sept. 30, 1836: Orations and Speeches, vol. i., 3d ed., 1863.

Feltham, John. 1. Tour through the Isle of Man in 1797-98, Lon., 1798, 8vo. 2. The English Enchiridion: Apothegms, Moral Maxims, &c., Bath, 1799, cr. 8vo. 3. Structure and Economy of the Human Body, 1803, 8vo.

Felton, Cornelius Conway, since 1834 Eliot Prof. of Greek Literature in Harvard University, b. 1807, at West Newbury, Mass., has edited several of the classics, pub. a number of valuable works, and contributed many papers to the North American Review and other periodicals.

1. Iliad of Homer, with Flaxman's Illust. and Eng. Notes, 1833, 8vo; many eds. 2. Menschel's Hist. of German Literature, trans. 1840, 3 vols. 12mo. 3. Greek Reader, 1840, 12mo; many eds. 4. The Clouds of Aristophanes, 1841; repub. in England; 3d ed. 5. The Panegyricus of Isocrates, 1847; 2d ed., 1854. 6. The Agamemnon of Æschylus, 1847, 12mo. This was reviewed by C. A. Bristed in the Knickerbocker, xxx. 246, by Taylor Lewis, xxix. 543. Mr. Francis Bowen answered this article in N. Amer. Rev., lxx. 239. Other papers upon the same subject will be found in the Knickerbocker, xxx. 246; Knickerbocker, xxx. 260, 325, 374, by C. A. Bristed; Amer. Lit. Mag., i. 37, 124; Chris. Exam., xliii. 140. 7. Metres of the Greeks and Romans, 12mo. 8. The Birds of Aristophanes, with Eng. Intro. and Notes; repub. in England. 9. The Earth and Man: Lectures on Comparative Physical Geography, in relation to the History of Mankind, by Prof. Arnold Guyot; trans. by C. C. Felton, Boston, 1849, 12mo. Several eds. of it have been pub. in England; it has been trans. into German and circulated on the Continent. Several discourses on education and kindred subjects.

"It will not only render the study of Geography more attractive, but actually show it in its true light: namely, as the science of the relations which exist between nature and man throughout history; of the contrasts observed between the different parts of the globe; of the laws of horizontal and vertical forms of the dry land, in its contact with the sea; of climate, &c."—Prof. LOUIS AGASSIZ.

"The work is one of high merit, exhibiting a wide range of knowledge, great research, and a philosophical spirit of investigation. Its perusal will well repay the most learned in such subjects, and give new views to all of man's relation to the globe he inhabits."—Silliman's Journal.

Also highly commended by Mr. George S. Hillard, and in the N. Amer. Review, and in the Christian Examiner. The value of Prof. Guyot's Mural Map is well known to teachers and pupils. 10. Memorial of Prof. Popkin, 1852. 11. Selections from the Greek Historians. 12. Smith's Hist. of Greece, with a continuation, 1855. 13. Lord Carlisle's Diary in Turkish and Greek Waters, with Notes and Illustrations, 1855, 8vo. Articles on Agassiz, Athens, and Attica, in New Amer. Cyc. Professor Felton is also one of the authors (in conjunction with Profs. Sears and Edwards) of Miscellaneous Essays on subjects connected with Classical Literature, pub. by Gould & Lincoln of Boston, under the title of Ancient Literature and Art. Such contributions to the intellectual wealth of the country are indeed invaluable. To Prof. F. we are also indebted for the Life of Wm. Eaton in Sparks's Amer. Biog., 1st Series, ix. 163, and several other literary labours.

Felton, Daniel. The Examination and Confession of Capt. Lilburne and Capt. Viviers, Lon., 1642.

Felton, Edmond. Engines invented to save much Blood and Moneys, (in these Times of Warre,) and to do good Service, Lon., 1644, 4to.

Felton, George. Serm., 1715, 8vo.

Felton, Henry, Rector of Malford. Serm., 1689.

Felton, Henry, D.D., 1679-1740, a native of London, educated at Westminster School, the Charter House, and Edmund Hall, Ox.; Rector of Whitewell, Derbyshire, 1711; Principal of Edmund Hall, 1722. 1. Colebrook Letter, 1706. 2. Serm., 1711, 8vo. 3. Dissert. on reading the Classics, and forming a just style, 1711; 4th and best ed., 1757. A highly-esteemed work. 4. Serms. and theolog. treatises, 1725-48. 5. Serms., pub. by his son, Rev. Wm. Felton, with Life, 1748.

Felton, John H. The Decimal System, Bost., 1859.

Felton, Nicholas, d. 1626, Master of Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, 1616; Bishop of Bristol, 1617; of Coventry and Lichfield, 1618; of Ely, 1619. He was one of the translators of the Bible temp. James I.

Felton, S. 1. Gleanings on Gardens, Lon. 2. On the Portraits of English Authors on Gardening, with Biog. Notices; 2d ed., with addita., 1830, 8vo.

Felton, Wm. Letter to Rev. Mr. Romaine on his Discourse on the Law and the Gospel, 1761, 8vo. Serms., 1773.

Felton, Wm., a London coach-maker. Carriages and Harness, 1794, '95; Supp., 1796, 3 vols. 8vo.

Feltwell, R. Serms., Lon., 1660, 4to.

Fen, James. Serms., 1686, 4to.

Fen. See FENN.

Fenby, Thomas. English Synonymes; a Copious Dictionary of Synonymes, Classified and Explained; with an Outline of English Grammar, a Selection of Latin and French Quotations, with corresponding English Translations, &c., Liverp., 1853, 12mo.

Fencer, James. The Cow Ragious Castle-Combat, Lon., 1635, '45, 4to. A poetical tract.

Fenn, Lady, pub., under the assumed name of Mrs. Lovechild, a number of useful educational works, of which the sale has been very large. 1. The Child's Grammar; 44th ed., Lon., 1851, 18mo. 2. The Mother's Grammar; 22d ed., 1849, 18mo. 3. Parsing Lessons for Elder Pupils. 4. For Children; new ed., 1849, 18mo. 5. Grammatical Amusements; in a box. 6. Sunday Miscellany. 7. Short Sermons for Young Persons. Under the name of S. Lovechild, was pub. in 1852, Lon., 12mo, Sketches of Little Boys and Girls.

Fenn, Fen, or Fenne, John, d. 1615, a R. Catholic divine, a native of Montacute, Somersetshire, Fellow of New Coll., Oxf., 1552, became confessor to the English nuns at Louvain. Life of St. Catherine of Sienna, from the Italian, 1609, 8vo. He also wrote Vitæ quorundam Martyrum in Anglia, and other pieces, and made trans. of Bishop Fisher's and other works. See Athen. Oxon.; Wood's Annals; Dodd's Ch. Hist.; Fuller's Worthies.

Fenn, Sir John, 1739-1794, an antiquary, a native of Norwich, made a large collection of original letters, written during the reigns of Henry VI., Edward IV., Richard III., and Henry VII., by members of the Paston Family, and others, who were personally conversant with the events of their times. Two vols. were pub. in 1787, 4to, and 2 more in 1789, 4to; vol. v., 1823, 4to. There are a few copies of the first four vols. on large paper, which bring a high price. Indeed, a set of the ordinary size, first edit., was formerly worth about ten guineas. Of the first two vols. there were two edit., of which the second is to be preferred, having addits. and corrections by the editor and George Stevens. New ed., 2 vols. in 1, sq. 12mo, 1840. Also in Knight's Miscellanies, 1840, '41, 2 vols. sq., and in Bohn's Antiquarian Library, 1849, 2 vols. in 1, 12mo. In the new edit., the duplicate version of the letters, in old English, is omitted.

"The Paston Letters are an important testimony to the progressive condition of society, and come in as a precious link in the chain of the moral history of England, which they alone in this period supply. . . . Pictures of the life of the English gentry in that age."—Hallam's Introduct. to Lit. of Europe.

"The letters of Henry the Sixth's reign are come out, and to me make all other letters not worth reading. I've gone through above one volume, and cannot bear to be writing when I am so eager to be reading."—HORACE WALPOLE: Letters to Lady Ossory.

"Friday, Feb. 9, 1787."

"I am now reading the Paston Family Original Letters, written in the wars of York and Lancaster, and am greatly entertained with them. Their antique air, their unstudied communication of the modes of those old times, with their undoubted authenticity, render them highly interesting, curious, and informing. The Queen told me she had been much struck with the Duke of Suffolk's letter to his son. It is indeed both interesting and instructive."—Madame D'Arbly's Diary.

Sir John also pub. Three Chronological Tables of the members of the Society of Antiquaries, 1784, 4to.

Fenn, Joseph. Serms., Lon., 1830, 8vo.

Fenn, Richard. Panegyric on Inaugural Prætoris Regii, &c., 1637, 4to.

Fenn, Warwell. Serms., Colch., 1830, '36, 2 vols. 8vo.

Fenne, Thomas. Fenne's Fruits, Lon., 1590, 4to. This work treats of Fame, War, the Trojans, &c.

Fennel, James, 1766-1816, a native of London, an actor, emigrated to Philadelphia, where he died. 1. Statement of Facts rel. to a disturb. at the Edin. Theatre, 1788, 8vo. 2. Lindor and Clara; a Comedy, 1791, 8vo. 3. Proceedings at Paris, 1792, 8vo. 4. Apology for his Life, 1814, 2 vols. See Biog. Dramat.

Fenner, Dudley, d. 1587, aged about 30, a Puritan divine, pub. several theological treatises, 1583-94, and the Artes of Logike and Rhetorike, 1584, 4to. See Bibl. Brit.

Fenner, Lud. John. Serms., 1777, 8vo.

Fenner, Wm., b. 1600, d. about 1640, a Puritan divine, educated at Pembroke Hall, Camb., became a preacher at Sedgely, Staffordshire; Rector of Rochford, Essex, 1629. Works, consisting of Serms. and Discourses, Lon., 1657, fol.

"His works discover much acquaintance with religion in all its parts; his manner plain, zealous, and alarming."—Williams's C. P.

Fenning, Daniel. Works on mathematics, geography, philology, and commerce, Lon., 1750-72. See Bibl. Brit.

Fennor, Wm. 1. Fennor's Defence, Lon., 1615, 8vo. 2. Speeches before the King and Queen, &c., 1616, 4to. Bibl. Anglo-Poet., 916, £5 5s. Reprinted in Nichols's Progresses of K. James I. 3. The Compter's Commonwealth, 1617, 4to. This describes the troubles of an unfortunate debtor in the hands of sergeants and jailers. 4. Lawes, Justice, and Equity of a Compter, 1629, 4to.

Fenton, Edward, d. 1603, a navigator, a native of Nottinghamshire, and a brother of Sir Geoffrey Fenton. Certaine Secretes and Wonders of Nature, Lon., 1569, 4to. Voyage to Magellan in 1582, written by his Vice-Admiral, Luke Ward. See Callander's Voyages, i., p. 373, 1764.

Fenton, Elijah, 1683-1730, a native of Shelton, Staffordshire, educated at Jesus Coll., Camb., is best known as the assistant of Pope in the trans. of the Odyssey. In this capacity he has already come under our notice. See BROOME, WILLIAM. Although, according to Johnson and Warton, Fenton trans. only the 1st, 4th, 19th, and 20th books, yet the Earl of Orrery asserts that he really trans. double the number of books that Pope has owned:—

"His reward was a trifle—an arrant trifle. He has even told me that he thought Pope feared him more than he loved him. He had no opinion of Pope's heart, and declared him, in the words of Bishop Atterbury, Mens curas in corpore curas."—Earl of Orrery's Letter to Mr. Dencombe.

He was for some time master of the Free Grammar School at Sevenoaks, Kent, and subsequently tutor to Lord Broghill, son of his friend, the Earl of Orrery. 1. Poems on several occasions, Lon., 1717, 8vo. 2. Marianne; a Tragedy, 8vo.

"The tenor of his verse is so uniform that it cannot be thought casual; and yet, upon what principle he so constructed it as it is, is difficult to discover."—Dr. Johnson's Life of Fenton.

3. Waller's Poems, with Notes, 1729.

"Notes often useful, often entertaining, but too much extended by long quotations from Clarendon. Illustrations drawn from a book so easily consulted should be made by references rather than transcription."—Dr. Johnson: ubi supra. Life of Milton prefixed to the Poems of the latter, 1723.

"He undertook to revise the punctuation of Milton's poems, which, as the author neither wrote the original copy nor corrected the press, was supposed to be capable of amendment. To this edition he prefixed a short and elegant account of Milton's life, written at once with tenderness and integrity."—Dr. Johnson: ubi supra.

See Johnson's Lives of the English Poets; Nichols's Poems; Bowles's ed. of Pope; Rufhead's Pope; Spence's Anecdotes.

Fenton, Sir Geoffrey, Geoffrey, or Jeffrey, d. 1608, a brother of Edward Fenton, q. v., was a sagacious statesman, for twenty-seven years "privy-councillor in Ireland," and a great favourite with Queen Elizabeth. 1. Certain Tragical Discourses, Written out of French and Latine, Lon., 1567, '79, 4to.

"In point of selection of size, perhaps the most capital collection of this kind is Fenton's book of tragical novels."—Warton's Hist. of Eng. Poetry.

"The learned stories erse, and sugred tayles that laye Remoude from simple common sence, this writer doth displaye."—OSBORNE TURNER: Reccomendatory Poems, prefixed to Certain Tragical Discourses.

Golden Epistles, from Guevara and other Authours, Latin, French, and Italian, 1575, '77, '82, 4to. The Epistles of Guevara, in this vol., are not contained in the collection of his Epistles pub. by Edward Hellowes in 1574. Fenton pub. several other translations into English, the best known of which is The History of Guicciardin, 1579, fol.; 2d ed., 1599, fol.; 3d ed., 1618, fol.

"Fenton is a good old translator."—Lon. Quar. Rev.

"Even Guicciardin's silver Historie, and Ariosto's golden Cantos, growe out of request, and the Countess of Pembroke's Aradia is not greene enough for queasie stomaches, but they must have Greene's Aradia."—Gabriel Harvey's Four Letters, &c., Lon., 1602, 4to, lett. III., p. 29.

"It is probably to this book that Gabriel Harvey, Spenser's Hobbinal, alludes."—Warton's Hist. of Eng. Poetry.

Of Guicciardin's celebrated history we shall have somewhat to say when we come to notice Goddard's translation. See GODDARD, AUSTIN PARKE.

Fenton, J. King James: his Welcome to London, Lon., 1603, 4to. Bibl. Anglo-Poet., 931, £3 3s. North, Pt. 3, 792, £2 9s.

Fenton, Richard, a Welsh barrister, d. 1821. An Historical Tour through Pembrokehire, a map, and 30 engravings by Storer and Greig, Lon., 1811, 4to, and imp. 4to. In this valuable work, which is rich in the history and antiquities of Wales, the author had the assistance of Sir Richard Colt Hoare. Mr. Fenton also wrote A Tour in Search of a Genealogy, Memoirs of an Old Wig, and left a MS. trans. of Athenæus.

Fenton, Roger, D.D. 1. Answer to W. Alabaster—his Motives, Lon., 1599, 4to. 2. Treatise of Usury, 1612, 4to. See an examination of this in Sir Robert Filmer's Questio Quodlibetica, 1653, '58, 8vo. 3. 5 Sermons., 1616. 4. Ch. of Rome, 1617, 4to.

Fenton, Thomas, Rector of Nately-scures, Hampshire. Annotations on the Book of Job, and the Psalms, collected from several commentators, and methodised and improved, Lon., 1732, 8vo.

Fenwick, Lt. Col. Address to Infantry, 1803, 4to. Fenwick, Mrs. E. Secrecy; a Novel, 1799, 3 vols. 12mo. 2. Infantine Stories, 1815, 12mo.

"One of the most interesting books that can possibly be put into the hands of a child."

Fenwick, George, a Hutchinsonian divine, Rector of Hallaton, Leicestershire. 1. Serms., &c., 1737-58. 2. Thoughts on the Hebrew Titles of the Psalms, &c., Lon., 1749, 8vo.

"A curious and rather interesting production, and the only treatise on the subject, in our language. . . . The object is to show that Christ or his church is the burden of all the Psalms; and that this is indicated by the titles of many of them. It is often, no doubt, both fanciful and hypothetical, and largely imbued with the theology of his master; but the book contains both learning and piety, and will reward a perusal."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

3. The Psalter in its Original Form, 1759, 8vo. The design here is the same as in the former work.

"Written on this hypothesis. Mr. Fenwick is often fanciful in his interpretations. He has, however, many happy renderings."—Horne's Bibl. Bib.

Fenwick, John. Mem. of Dumourier, 1794, 2 vols. 8vo. 1. The Trial of J. Coigley, 1798, 8vo. 2. The Indian; a Farce, 1800, 8vo. 3. Grammars, &c., 1811.

Fenwick, John Ralph, M.D., of Durham. 1. Calcareous Manures; Electric Fluids in Vegetation, 1798, 8vo. "The author trod the old path, and did not find a new road to any point."—Donaldson's Agricult. Bing.

2. Life of John Clerk, M.D., 1806, 8vo. 3. Oil of Turpentine in Tania, in Med. Chir. Trans., 1811.

Fenwick, R. O. The Goblin Groom, Edin., 1807, 4to.

Fenwick, Thomas. 1. Practical Mechanics, Newc., 1801, 8vo. 2. Subterraneous Surveying, &c., 1804, 8vo.

Fenwick, Wm. Theolog. treatises, Lon., 1642, '43, 4to.

Fenwick, Wm. Sermon., 1701, 8vo.

Fenwicke, Lt. Col. John. Christ ruling in the midst of his Enemies, Lon., 1643, 4to.

Ferebe, George. R. Abrahami Fil. Rattani, Præcepta Judaica affirmativa ac negativa; Lat.; Camb., 1597, 8vo.

Fergus, Henry. Laws and Institutions of Moses, Dumf. and Lon., (1811,) 8vo. This is detached from the author's unpublished Hist. of the Hebrews.

"His pamphlet displays in a concise yet luminous manner the general topics which the ecclesiastical government of the Hebrews includes."—Lon. Month. Rev.

2. Hist. of the U. States of America, 1492-1829, Lon., 1830-32, 2 vols. 12mo. 3. The Testimony of Nature and Revelation to the Being, Perfection, and Govt. of God, Edin., 1833, p. 8vo.

"It displays infinitely more of original thought and patient research than the volumes published by the Managers of his Lordship's (the Bridgewater) Legacy."—Lon. Athenæum

"He has avowedly availed himself at times of Ray, Derham, and Paley; but his volume has many sources of illustration not known to those writers."—Lon. Month. Rev.

Also commended in the Cong. Mag., Evang. Mag., Dubl. Univ. Mag., &c.

4. Readings in Natural Theology, Oxf., 1838, fp. 8vo.

Ferguson. Sermon., Lon., 1615, 4to.

Ferguson. Encroachments of Chas. II., 1689.

Ferguson. View of an Ecclesiastick, 1698, 4to.

Ferguson and Vance. Tenure of Land in Ireland, 1854, 8vo.

"A very full and detailed statement of the various modes of holding land in Ireland, the cultivation of the soil, its products, and value."—Donaldson's Agricult. Bing.

Ferguson, Adam. Sermon., 1745.

Ferguson, Adam, LL.D., 1724-1816, a son of the Rev. Adam Ferguson, minister of Logie Rait, Perthshire, was educated at the University of St. Andrew's, where he was distinguished for his acquirements. In 1744 he entered the 42d regiment as chaplain, and occupied this post until 1757, when he accepted the situation of tutor in the family of Lord Bute. In 1759 he was chosen Professor of Natural Philosophy in the University of Edinburgh, and five years later, in 1764, obtained the professorship of Moral Philosophy. From 1773 to 1775 he travelled on the Continent with the Earl of Chesterfield. In 1778 he was appointed secretary to the commissioners sent to America to endeavour to effect an amicable compromise with the Congress representing the different States. In 1785 he resigned the professorship of Moral Philosophy in favour of Dugald Stewart. Late in life he paid another visit to the Continent, and on his return retired to St. Andrew's, where he lived in the enjoyment of literary society until 1816, when he died, in the 93d year of his age. 1. An Essay on the Hist. of Civil Society, Edin., 1767, 4to; 7th ed., Lon., 1814, 8vo.

"There are uncommon strains of eloquence in it; and I was surprised to find not one single idiom of his country (I think) in the whole work. His application to the heart is frequent, and often successful. His love of Montesquieu and Tacitus has led him into a manner of writing too short-winded and sententious, which those great men, had they lived in better times, and under a better government, would have avoided."—GRAY, the poet.

2. Institutes of Moral Philosophy, for the use of Students, Edin., 1769, '70, 12mo. 3. A Reply to Dr. Price on Civil and Religious Liberty, 1776. 4. The Hist. of the Progress and Termination of the Roman Republic, Lon., 1783, 3 vols. 4to; 1805, 5 vols. 8vo. The value of this work is well known.

"Authentic and dignified; and the latter volumes, on the struggles and termination of the Republic, are full of interesting reflections."—CHANCELLOR KENT.

"I comfort myself, that as my trade is the study of human nature, I could not fix on a more interesting corner of it than the end of the Roman republic. Whether my compilations should ever deserve the attention of any one besides myself, must remain to be determined after they are further advanced."—Letter to Edward Gibbon, 18th April, 1776, before the completion of the work as published.

Ferguson's History is carried down to the end of the reign of Tiberius, and should be read as an introduction to Gibbon's Decline and Fall. Ferguson was also the author of several minor publications. See Chambers's Lives of Illust. and Dist. Scotsmen; Scots Mag.; Public Characters, 1799, 1800; Lockhart's Life of Scott; Encyc. Brit. Ferguson, Andrew. The Gardener's Universal Guide, Lon., 1788, 8vo.

Ferguson, Andrew, M.D. Med. Researches, 1801. Ferguson, or Ferguson, David. Collection of Scottish Proverbs. Printed about 1598. Reprinted, Edin., 1785.

Ferguson, Elizabeth Græme, 1739-1801, a native of Philadelphia, was a daughter of Dr. Thomas Græme, an eminent Scotch physician, settled in Philadelphia, son-in-law to Sir William Keith, Governor of Pennsylvania, 1717-1726. She married Hugh Henry Ferguson, a Scotchman, from whom she was separated in 1775, in consequence of Mr. Ferguson's adherence to the British Government on the occurrence of the American Revolution. She trans. Fénelon's Telemachus into English heroic verse; this has not been printed; (the MS. is in the Franklin Library, Phila.) but some of her minor poems, letters, &c. have been given to the world. For an interesting account of this lady, and an estimate of her merits as an author, and some specimens of her composition, see Griswold's Female Poets of America. See also E. A. and G. L. Duyckinck's Cyc. of Amer. Lit., for her poetical correspondence with Rev. Nathaniel Evans, which is not without merit.

Ferguson, H. Sermon., 1743, 8vo.

Ferguson, or Ferguson, James, Minister at Kilwinning, Scotland. 1. Expos. of the 1st and 2d Epist. to the Philippians and Colossians, Lon., 1656, 8vo. 2. Expos. of the 1st and 2d Epist. to the Galatians and Ephesians, 1659, 12mo.

"They abound with pertinent observations deduced from the text considered in its proper connexion, and in a method almost peculiar to the Scottish divines of the last century."—Dr. Williams's C. P.

3. Expos. of the 1st and 2d Epist. to the Thessalonians, 1675, 12mo.

"These short expositions [all of the above] are uncommonly sensible, and display very considerable capacity for explaining the Bible."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

New ed. of the above, in 1 vol. large 8vo, Lon., 1841.

4. Sermons on the Errors of Toleration, Erastianism, Independency, and Separation, with four occasional Sermons, Edin., 1698, 8vo.

"A good old Scotch writer."—Bickersteth's C. S.

Ferguson, James, 1710-1776, a native of Keith, Banffshire, whilst yet very young, without the advantages of education, exhibited a remarkable genius for mechanical and astronomical investigations. Whilst employed in the humble capacity of a shepherd, he continued his studies with untiring zeal. In 1743 he came to London, where he attracted great attention by the publication of astronomical tables, and the delivery of lectures, repeated in many towns in England, on experimental philosophy. A list of his publications and contributions to Phil. Trans. will be found in Bibl. Brit. Works, edited by Sir David Brewster, Edin., 5 vols. 8vo. Lectures on select Subjects in Mechanics, Hydrostatics, &c., edited by Sir D. B., 2 vols. 8vo. Astronomy explained upon Sir Isaac Newton's principles, 1821, 2 vols. 8vo. New ed., 1841, 2 vols. 8vo.

"He was universally considered as at the head of astronomy and mechanics in this nation of philosophers; and he might justly be styled self-taught, or rather heaven-taught, for in his whole life he had not received above half a year's instruction at school."—Encyc. Brit. See Chambers's Lives of Illust. and Dist. Scotamen.

Ferguson, Sir James, of Kilbenam, one of the senators of the College of Justice. Decisions of the Ct. of Sessions, 1738–52, in the form of a Dictionary. Pub. by his son, Edin., 1755, fol.

Ferguson, James. 1. Volunteer Corps, Edin., 1806, 8vo. 2. Reform in Civil Justice, 1807, 8vo. 3. New Biog. Dict., 1810, 18mo. 4. Bill rel. to separate Tribunal, 1824, 8vo. 5. Entails, 1830, 8vo.

"A well-timed and admirable treatise."—Ayr Advertiser.

6. Addit. Obs. on Entails, 8vo. 7. Actions of Divorce, 1823, 8vo.

"The discussions embrace some of the most important, and, perhaps, some of the most difficult, questions which can be agitated in a court of law."—Lon. Quart. Rev.

8. Consistorial Law in Scotland, 1829, 8vo.

Ferguson, John. Surg. con. to Phil. Trans., 1738.

Ferguson, or Fergusson, John. A Dict. of the Hindostan Language, Lon., 1773, 4to. The principal part of the impression was lost at sea.

Ferguson, Robert, d. 1714, was ejected in 1662 from his living of Godmarsham, Kent. 1. Justification, Lon., 1668, 12mo. 2. Moral Virtue, 1673, 8vo. 3. The Interest of Reason in Religion, of the Use of Scripture Metaphors, &c., 1675, 8vo.

"Part of a controversy in which the author and some others were engaged with Dr. Sherlock. . . . Ferguson's work contains some judicious remarks on the use of reason in religion, and also on the metaphysical language of Scripture."—Orme's Bibl. Brit.

Other works. For a notice of works pub. against Ferguson's views, see Lowndes's Brit. Librarian, 758.

Ferguson, Robert. 1. The Shadow of the Pyramid; a series of Sonnets, Lon., 1847, fp. 8vo. 2. The Pipe of Repose; or, Recollections of Eastern Travel, 1848, 12mo; 3d ed., 1852, sq.

"We do not disparage 'Eothen,' when we offer an opinion that it is Eothen in miniature, Eothen in spirit, Eothen in popular attraction, and quite Eothen in talent."—Lon. Literary Gaz.

3. Swiss Men and Swiss Mountains, 1853, 16mo.

Ferguson, Robert. A Catalogue of Books in his Library, Edin., 1817, 4to. Privately printed.

Ferguson, Robert. See FERGUSON.

Ferguson, Wm. Interest Tables, Edin., 1839, 12mo. New ed., 1853, 12mo.

"For completeness, simple arrangement, and consequent ease of reference, these Tables excel every work on Interest which we have yet seen."—Scotsman.

Ferguson, Wm. 1. Spiritual Ruin, &c. in the diocese of Oxford, Lon. 2. The Impending Danger of our Country, 1848, fp. 8vo.

"The facts of this volume are heart-rending and appalling, and the nature of the remedy is a problem which ought earnestly to occupy every politician and every enlarged Christian."—Nonconformist.

Ferguson, Wm. D. 1. Practice of Cts. in Ireland, Dublin, 1841, '42, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Of the treatises which have appeared on the practice of the Courts, I may especially allude to that of Mr. Ferguson, a work of very great merit and very considerable accuracy."—PROFESSOR NAPIER.

2. Practical Proceed. and Pleadings of Cts. in Ireland, 1845, 8vo. 3. Irish Cts. Registrations, 1846, 12mo. 4. Law of Railway Companies in Ireland, 1848, 12mo. 5. Code rel. to Churches, Lon., 1851, 8vo. 6. Tenure and improv. of Land in Ireland, 1851, 8vo.

Ferguson, or Fergusson, David. Sermon preached before the Regent and Nobility, Sanctandros, 1572, 8vo.

Fergusson, David. Epithalamium mysticum Salomonis Regis, &c., Edin., 1677, 12mo.

Fergusson, James. 1. Ancient Topog. of Jerusalem, 1847, imp. 8vo. 2. Ancient Architecture in Hindostan, Lon., 1847, fol.

"Exquisite specimens of artistic skill, enhanced in value by the fullness with which every scene and place is recorded."—Lon. Art Union.

3. Hist. Inquiry into the true Principles of Beauty in Art, more especially with reference to Architecture, 1848, imp. 8vo. See commendation in Lon. Eclectic Review. 4. The Palaces of Nineveh and Persepolis Restored, 1851, 8vo.

"This book contains many things of general interest relating to one of the most wonderful discoveries that have occurred in the history of the world."—Lon. Genl. Mag.

Other works.

Ferguson, Robert, 1750–1774, a Scotch poet of considerable merit, was a native of Edinburgh, and educated at the University of St. Andrew's. He contributed many pieces to Ruddiman's Weekly Magazine, (commenced in 1768,) which he pub. in a volume in 1773, Edin., 12mo; Perth, 1789, 2 vols. 12mo; Glasg., 1800, 12mo. With Life, by Alex. Peterkin, Edin., 1807, Greenock, 1810, 8vo. With Life, by David Irving; numerous edits. A new ed. has recently been pub. by A. Fullarton, Edinburgh.

"The most correct and authentic collection of the works of Ferguson extant."—North British Mail.

"An edition of Ferguson, such as this is—complete, careful, and handsome—was wanted, and is welcome."—Scotsman.

Habits of dissipation resulted in poverty and derpondency, and the poet ended his life in the Insane Asylum at Edinburgh. An interesting memoir of Ferguson will be found in Chambers's Lives of Illust. and Dist. Scotamen. Burns greatly admired Ferguson, and was stimulated to poetical composition by reading his effusions. He erected a monument to his memory in the Canongate churchyard, and often bewails his unhappy end, both in his prose and poetical pieces. We quote the following elegy, written by Burns in a copy of Ferguson's works:

"Curse on ungrateful man that can be pleased,
And yet can starve the author of his pleasure!
Oh, thou, my elder brother in misfortune,
By far my elder brother in the muse,
With tears I pity thy unhappy fate!
Why is the bard unfitted for the world,
Yet has so keen a relish of its pleasures?"

This is all very absurd. If "the bard" would cultivate industry and virtue, instead of addicting himself to the "good sherris sack," he would do well enough in "the world."

Fergusson, Robert. 1. Representation in Scotland, &c., 1792, 8vo. 2. Proceed. rel. to Earl of Thanet, &c., 1799, &c.

Fergusson, Wm., M.D. 1. Con. to Med. Chirurg. Trans., 1811, '13. 2. Notes and Recollec. of a Profess. Life, edited by his son, James Fergusson, Lon., 1846, 8vo.

"To the medical officer, and, we may add, in many instances, to the civil practitioner also. It cannot fail to prove both interesting and useful."—United Service Gaz.

3. A System of Practical Surgery, 1842, fp. 8vo; 3d ed., 1852; 4th Amer. from the 3d Lon. ed., Phila., 1854, 8vo.

"We feel persuaded it will prove as great a favourite as it deserves."—Edin. Jour. of Med. Science.

"No work was ever written which more nearly comprehended the necessities of the student and practitioner, and was more carefully arranged to that single purpose than this."—N. Y. Med. and Surg. Jour.

Fermar, Henrietta Louisa, Countess of Pomfret. Corresp. between her and the Countess of Hartford, (afterwards Duchess of Somerset,) Lon., 1803, 3 vols. 12mo.

Ferne, Charles, d. about 1620, a native of Edinburgh, regent 1589, afterwards minister of Fraserburgh. Analysis Logics in Epistolam Apostoli Pauli ad Romanos, Edin., 1651, 12mo.

"A small but very excellent work, in which the argument and meaning of the apostle are very accurately unfolded."—Orme's Bibl. Bibl.

Fermor, Wm. Cow-pox and small-pox, Lon., 1800, 8vo.

Fern, Dr. Med. con. to Phil. Trans., 1698.

Fern, Fanny. See PAXTON, MRS. SARAH P.

Fern, Robert. Funl. serm., Lon., 1710, 8vo.

Fern, Thomas. Cure for the King's Evil, Lon., 4to.

Fernandez, Eleonora. The Economy of the Human Mind, Lon., 8vo.

Ferne, Henry, D.D., 1602–1661, a native of York, educated at St. Mary Hall, Oxf., and Trin. Coll., Camb. He became Archdeacon of Leicester, Dean of Ely, Master of Trin. Coll., Camb., and Vice-Chancellor, and in 1661 Bishop of Chester. He pub. four tracts against the Rebellion, 1642, '43, two serms., 1644–49, and five treatises in defence of the Ch. of Eng. against Romanism and Presbyterianism, 1647–60. His tract, On Submission to the Church, will be found in Tracts Angl. Fathers, iii. 11.

Ferne, Sir John, d. about 1610, an eminent antiquary, father of the preceding, was educated at Oxford, whence he went to the Middle Temple. The Blazon of Gentrie: devided into two Parts. The first named The Glorie of Generositie; the second, Lucy's Nobilitie, Lon., 1586, 4to. According to Dallaway, this was the most complete epitome then extant.

Ferne, or Fern, Robert. Serms., Lon., 1721, 8vo.

Ferne, Wm. Tract on Adam's sin, rel. to a Letter to C. Beatty, and Remarks by Wm. Ferguson, Lon., 12mo.

Fernehough, Wm., Vicar of Aspatria. 1. Trent-ham Park; a Poem, Lon., 1789, 4to. 2. Poems, 1814, 8vo.

Fernel, John. Christian Reconciler, 1801, 12mo.

Fernie, John. 1. Hist. of the Town and Parish of Dunfermline, Dunferm., 1815, 8vo. 2. Serms., 1818, 8vo.

Feron, John. Farriery, Lon., 1803, 4to; 1809, 8vo.

Ferrall, Denis. Book-Keeping, Dubl., 8vo.

Ferrall, S. A. Under this name appeared Nos. 1 and 8 of the works of O'FERRALL, SIMON A., q.v.

Ferrar, John. 1. Hist. of Limerick, Lim., 1787, 8vo.

2. Tour from Dublin to London in 1795, Dubl. 1796, 8vo.

3. View of Anc. and Mod. Dublin, 1796, 8vo.

Ferrar, Nicholas, 1592-1637, one of the most excellent of men, in great reputation for learning and piety, a native of London, was educated at Clare Hall, Cambridge. He acted for some time as secretary to the Virginia Company, and in 1624 was chosen member of Parliament. In the last-mentioned year he purchased the lordship of Little Gidding, in the county of Huntingdon, where, with his mother, sister, and other relations—he never married—to the number of forty persons, he established what has often been called The English Nunnery. More properly speaking, the community of Little Gidding worshipped God after the strict model of ancient devotion. In the words of Bishop Horne,

"The pious Mr. Nicholas Ferrar exhibited in the last century an instance of a Protestant family in which a constant course of Psalmody was appointed, and so strictly kept up, that, through the whole four and twenty hours of day and night, there was no portion of time when some of the members were not employed in the performing that most pleasant part of duty and devotion."—Comment on CANTAB. Psalm.

This excellent family did not only "show piety at home," but were the nurses, the counsellors, the bodily and spiritual physicians, of the whole neighbourhood. Whether the community of Little Gidding had too much piety or not, it less becomes the reader to inquire, than whether he himself have enough! If the banqueting hall of Lucullus were more frequently converted into the oratory of Little Gidding, it would be difficult to show that society or the world would be the loser.

We would fain linger on this pleasing theme, but must refer the reader to Memoirs of the Life of Mr. Nicholas Ferrar, by the Rev. P. Peckard, D.D., Camb., 1790, 8vo.; abridged, Lon., 1852, 1p. 8vo; to Chalmers's Biog. Dict., and to Dibdin's Bibliomania. Nicholas Ferrar pub., without his name, a trans. of the 110 Considerations brought out of Italy by Vergerius, &c., Oxf., 1638.

Ferrar, Robert, Bishop of St. David's, 1548, burned, 1555, was an ancestor of the preceding. Bishop Burnet says he was one of the committee nominated to compile the English liturgy, but his name does not appear among those who prepared the new liturgy in 1547. Probably Burnet refers to the correction of the liturgy in 1540. Ferrar's name appears as one of the signers to the confession of faith, May 8, 1554. See Foxe's Acts and Monuments, Athen. Oxon.

Ferrarius, James Alex. Euclides Catholicus, Lon., 1673, 4to; Oxon., 1680, 8vo. In English, by J. D., Lon., 1673, 8vo. See Athen. Oxon.

Ferrebee, Michael. Serm., Lon., 1732, 4to.

Ferrerus, Johannes. See FERRER, JOHN.

Ferrers, Edward, is mentioned by Wood as the author (died 1564) of several Tragedies, Comedies, and Interludes, but Wood quotes from Puttenham, who calls George Ferrers, Edward Ferrers. It is therefore very doubtful whether Edward Ferrers, who was of a Warwickshire family, is entitled to be ranked among authors. See Bliss's notes in his ed. of Athen. Oxon., i. 340, 445.

Ferrers, George, 1512?-1579, a lawyer, historian, and poet, a native of a village near St. Alban's, Hertfordshire, after receiving his education at Oxford, removed to Lincoln's Inn, where he rose to great distinction. He trans. Magna Charta into Latin and English, and the Laws enacted temp. Henry III. and Edw. I. into English, and wrote six of the poetical chronicles in the Mirror for Magistrates:—1. The Fall of Robert Tresilian. 2. The Tragedy of Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester. 3. The Tragedy of Richard II. 4. The Story of Dame Eleanor Cobham. 5. The Story of Humphrey Plantagenet, Duke of Gloucester. 6. The Tragedy of Edward, Duke of Somerset. We have already had occasion to notice this grand old work, The Mirror for Magistrates. See BALDWIN, WILLIAM; DORSET, THOMAS SACKVILLE, EARL OF; and authorities cited under former name. Ferrers seems to have been accomplished in the manners of the day, and sustained the office of LORD OF MISRULE with great credit.

"George Ferrers, gentleman of Lincoln's-Inn, being lord of all the disputes all the 13 days of Christmas, anno MDLIII., at Greenwich: also so pleasantly and wisely behaved himself that the king had great delight in his pastimes."—Stowe's Chron., p. 682.

"Being of better credit and estimation than commonlie his predecessors had bene before, he received all his commissions and warrants by the name of the MAISTER of THE KINGS PASTIMES."— Holinshed's Chron., iii., p. 1067; col. ii. 10. See Warton's Hist. of Eng. Poetry; Biog. Brit.; Athen. Oxon.; Brydges's Phillips's Theatrum Poetarum.

Ferrers, Henry, 1579-1663, of the same family as the preceding, educated at Oxford, made collections used by Dugdale in his Antiquities of Northwicksire. Some of his poetical pieces were pub., and he left some MS. compositions. See Bliss's Wood's Athen. Oxon. He left behind him the character of "A well-bred gent., a good neighbour, and an honest man."—Athen. Oxon.

Ferrers, Richard. The Worth of Woman; a Poem, Lon., 1622, 8vo.

Ferretz, George. See FERRERS.

Ferrey, Benjamin. Hist. of the Priory of Christ Church, Hampshire, Lon., 1834, 4to, and imp. 4to. This magnificent edifice is supposed to be coeval with Rufus.

Ferriar, John, M.D., 1764-1815, a native of Chester, physician to the Manchester Infirmary, possessed great literary taste, and was an excellent critic. 1. The Prince of Angola; a Trag., altered from the Play of Oronooko, Lon., 1788, 8vo. 2. Medical Histories and Reflections, 1792-8, 3 vols. 8vo. New ed., 1810, 3 vols. 8vo. 3. Illustrations of Sterne, with other Essays, Manches., 1798, 8vo; Lon., 1812, 2 vols. 8vo. Sterne is proved to have pillaged largely from Burton, Hall, and the old French novelists. Ferriar gives a Biographical and Critical account of the "Shandy Library."

"If we propose to look closely into the style of composition which Sterne thought proper to adopt, we find a sure guide in the ingenious Dr. Ferriar, who, with the most singular patience, has traced our author through the hidden sources whence he borrowed most of his striking and peculiar expressions."—SIR W. SCOTT.

4. Foxglove, Manches., 1799, 12mo. 5. Bibliomania; an Epistle to Richard Heber, Esq., Lon., 1809, 8vo; and in the 2d ed. of the Illustrations of Sterne, &c.

"I will not, however, disguise to you that I read it with uniform delight, and that I rose from the perusal with a keen appetite for 'The small, rare volume, black with tarnished gold.'"—Dibdin's Bibliomania, ed. 1811, p. 8.

Of Dr. Ferriar's bibliomania, and of the disease itself, we have had something to say in our article, DIBDIN, THOMAS FROGNALL, q.v.

6. An Essay towards a Theory of Apparitions, 1813, 8vo. Highly commended. 7. Case of Hydrophobia; in Med. Facts, 1791.

Ferriby, John. Short Discourse rel. to Preachers, Lon., 1653.

Ferrier, James, Prof. of Moral Philosophy and Political Economy, St. Andrew's, son-in-law of the late Professor John Wilson. 1. Institutes of Metaphysics, the Theory of knowing and being, Edin. and Lon., 1854, p. 8vo.

"This is no ordinary book. If we mistake not, its publication will mark an epoch in the history of speculation in this country. The author is familiar with what has been done in this field by ancients and moderns; and his acuteness and independence of thinking are as conspicuous as his learning. The author himself knows that his case so stands, and he does not affect to conceal from you the fact of his knowing it. . . . We have said enough, we hope, concerning Mr. Ferrier's book, to commend it effectually to such of our readers as are wont to be interested in publications of this nature."—British Quar. Rev.

"Both among the details which command our assent, and in examining the leading principle from which we have so widely differed, we meet an independent devotion to speculations that we love, as rare as it is refreshing in these degenerate days. When we turn from these pages to the dull wilderness of commonplace which spreads over most of the literature that now calls itself philosophical, we remember the inclination of the philosophic Roman:—ERRARE malo cum Platone, quam cum istis VERA sentire."—North Brit. Rev.

2. The Works of Prof. John Wilson, edited by Prof. Ferrier, 12 vols. 12mo: i., ii., 1855; iii.-vi., 1856; vii.-x., 1857; xi., xii., 1858.

Ferrier, John. Historia Monasterii, a Kenlos Ordinis Cisterciensis in Scotia, &c., scripta anno 1537, Mart. et Dur. Coll., vi. 319.

Ferrier, Miss Mary, d. 1856, was the daughter of James Ferrier, of Edinburgh, one of Walter Scott's "brethren of the clerk's table." She was the authoress of three excellent novels, in three vols. each, viz.: 1. The Marriage, 1818. 2. The Inheritance, 1824. 3. Destiny; or, The Chief's Daughter, 1831. All repub. in Bentley's Standard Novels, vols. lxxxiii., lxxxiv., lxxxv. In the conclusion to The Legend of Montrose, Scott pays the following high compliment to Miss Ferrier:

"I retire from the field, conscious there remains behind not only a large harvest, but labourers capable of gathering it in. More than one writer has already displayed talents of this description; and if the present author, himself a phantom, may be permitted to distinguish a brother, or perhaps a sister, shadow, he would mention in particular the author of the very lively work entitled 'Marriage.'"—

The reader will find several notices of Miss Ferrier in Lockhart's Life of Scott. She was a favourite guest at Abbotsford, and her society tended to cheer the melancholy hours which clouded the last months of the life of the great novelist. Sir Walter describes Miss Ferrier as "A gifted personage, having, besides her great talents, conversation the least exigent of any author, female at least, whom he had ever seen among the long list he had encountered: simple, full of humour, and exceedingly ready at repartee; and all this without the least affectation of the blue-stocking."

"Edgeworth, Ferrier, Austen, have all given portraits of real society far superior to any thing man—vain man—has produced of the like nature."

"To a warm heart, a lively fancy, and great powers of discrimination, Miss Ferrier has added variety of knowledge, and a graphic art of describing all she sees and all she feels, which give her a distinguished place among the novelists of the day."—Allan Cunningham's Biog. and Crit. Hist. of the Lit. of the Last Fifty Years.

Ferrier, Robert. Testimony of the King of Martyrs, Job xvii. 36, 37, by J. Glass, with Pref. by R. F. Edin., 1747, 8vo.

Ferrier, W. Two Discourses, Paisley, 1798, 1801.

Ferrie, Benjamin. A History of the Original Settlements on the Delaware from its Discovery by Hudson to the Colonisation under William Penn, Wilmington, Del., 1846, 8vo.

Ferris, Benj. G., late Secretary of Utah Territory. Utah and the Mormons, N. York, 1854, 12mo.

Ferris, James. 1. Strictures on the Eng. Constitution, Lon., 1806, 8vo. 2. Union with Ireland.

Ferris, Richard. Adventures of himself and others in a row in a wherry-boat, &c., Lon., 1590, 4to.

Ferris, Samuel, M.D. 1. Disputatio de Sanguinis, &c., Edin., 1784, 8vo. 2. Coll. of Physic, Lon., 1795, 8vo. 3. Con. to Med. Facts, 1791.

Ferris, Sarah. Mental Perceptions, 1807, 12mo.

Ferry. Relation of Sir Thos. Roe's Voy. to E. India. See Valli's Travels, p. 325, 1665.

Ferryman, R. 1. Brit. Quadrupeds and Birds in his Museum, Brist., 1789, 8vo. 2. Brit. Quadrupeds and Birds in the Brit. Zool. Mus., Lon., 1795, 8vo.

Fessenden, Thomas, d. 1813, aged 74, minister of Walpole, New Hampshire. 1. Science of Sanctity, 1804, 8vo. 2. The Boston self-styled Gentleman Reviewers Reviewed, 1806.

Fessenden, Thomas Green, 1771–1837, a native of Walpole, New Hampshire, and a son of the above. 1. Terrible Tractoration; a Poem, by Christopher Caustic, 1803, 8vo. Anon. This is a defence of the Metallic Tractors of Perkins. 2. Orig. Poems, 1804, 12mo. 3. The Minute Philosopher, 1806. This is an enlargement of No. 1. A third ed. was pub. towards the close of his life. 4. Democracy Unveiled, 1806, 12mo. 5. American Clerk's Companion, 1815. 6. Law of Patents for New Inventions, 2d ed., 1822, 8vo. Severely criticized and condemned in N. Amer. Rev., xvi. 199. Mr. F. wrote many Essays on Agriculture, and was editor of the N. England Farmer, The Horticultural Register, The Silk Manual, The Reporter, The Intelligencer, and The Monitor. An interesting account of him will be found in E. A. and G. L. Duyokinck's Cyc. of Amer. Lit.

Festeau, Paul. Fr. and Eng. Grammar, Lon., 1675, 8vo.

Festing, Michael. Serms., Lon., 1757, '59.

Fetherstone, Rev. Christopher. Dialogue against Darning, Lon., 1582, 8vo; trans., and other works, 1584–87.

Fettplace, Thomas. 1. The Celestial Lampe, Lon., 1637, 24mo. 2. The Sinner's Tears, 1688, 12mo.

Feuillerade, Peter, Rector of Bygrave. Serm., 1777, 4to.

Fewterer, John. The Myrrour, or Glasse of Christe's Passion, 1634, fol. Trans. into English at the desire of Lord Hussey.

Feylde, Thomas. A lytel Treatysse called the Cōtrauerse bytwene a Louer and a Jaye, Lon., by W. de Worde, 4to. This rare poem, in six lines stanzas, was sold for £39 in the Roxburghe sale, 3274. 2. The Cōplaynte of a Louer's Lyfe, Lon., by Wynkyn de Worde, 4to; Roxburghe, 3283, 58s. New ed., Lon., 1818, 4to. Presented to the members of the Roxburghe Club by the Rev. T. F. Dibdin, D.D. 30 copies, and one upon vellum. Sykes, £7. Dent, £3 1s.

Fidalgo, S. A Lecture of Moving Figures, Lon., 1768, 8vo. A political pamphlet.

Fiddes, Richard, D.D., 1671–1725, a native of Hummanby, near Scarborough, was educated at Oxford, and became Rector of Halesham about 1694. Having lost the power of free utterance, he devoted himself to authorship. 1. A Body of Divinity, Lon., 1718–20, 2 vols. fol. This was well received, but now seems neglected. 2. 46 Practical discourses, 1713–15, 3 vols. 8vo. Dr. Waterland commends them in his Advice to a Student. 3. 52 Practical Discourses, 1720, '28, fol. 4. Life of Cardinal Wolsey, 1724, '26, fol.; 1742, 4 vols. 8vo.

"Dr. Fiddes vilifies the Reformation, deprecates the instruments of it, and palliates the absurdities of the Romish Church."—Dr. Knorr: Life of Erasmus.

There is but little vivacity in Fiddes's biography. Respecting the Life of Wolsey, see CAVENDISH, GEORGE. 5. Treatise of Morality, 1726, 8vo. Fiddes also pub. an answer to an attack upon his Life of Wolsey, and some minor pieces.

Fiddler, Rev. Isaac. Observations on Professions, Literature, Manners, and Emigration, in the United States and Canada, made during a residence there in 1832, Lon., 1833, 12mo, pp. 434.

"This is another precious specimen of the class of books with which John Bull is now regularly humbugged three or four times a year, under the name of observations on the state of society, manners, and literature in the United States."—ALEXANDER H. EVERETT: N. Amer. Rev., xxxvii. 273. Read this witty article, by an "eminent hand."

Fidel, Theop. Interesting Dialogue between the Parson and the Farmer, Lon., 1806, 8vo.

Fidell, Thomas. A Perfect Guide for a studious Young Lawyer; being Prec. for Conveyancing, 1654, 4to; 1658, 8vo.

Fidge, Wm. Med. Con. to Phil. Trans., 1764.

Field, Baron. 1. Analysis of Blackstone's Comment, Lon., 1811, 8vo; 3d ed., 1821, 8vo; N. York, 1822, 8vo. 2. Hints to Witnesses, Lon., 1815, 8vo. 3. Geographical Memoirs of N. South Wales, by various Hands, 1825, 8vo. See an article on the Australian Colonies, with notices of Wentworth's, Carr's, and Field's works, in the London Quarterly Review, xxxii. 311.

Field, Chester. Scripture Illustrated by interesting Facts, edited by Rev. John Todd, D.D., Lon., 1850, 18mo.

Field, Edwin W. Observ. of a Solicitor on the Equity Courts, Lon., 1840, 8vo.

"A very able and well-written pamphlet."—4 Jurist, 113.

Field, Frederick. Serm., Camb., 1834, 8vo.

Field, George, 1777–1854. 1. Brit. School of Modern Artists, Lon., 1802, 8vo. 2. Chromatics, or Harmony of Colours; new ed., 1845, 8vo. 3. Outlines of Analytical Philosophy, 1839, 2 vols. 8vo. 4. Tritogenia: a Synopsis of Universal History; 3d ed., 1846, 8vo. Other works.

Field, Henry. Con. to Mem. Med., 1799, 1805.

Field, Rev. Henry M. The Irish Confederates, and the Rebellion of 1798, N. York, 1851, 12mo.

"A personal and political history, which has about it all the charm of romance."—The Irish American.

Field, Rev. James, of Antigua. Account of two cases of Wounds in the Stomach, Phil. Trans., 1752. Cured.

Field, John. Theolog. trans. and treatises, 1578–88.

Field, John. 1. Treatise on Prison Discipline, Lon., 1846, 8vo. New ed., 1848, 2 vols. 8vo. 2. Life of John Howard, Lon., 1850, 8vo. 3. Corresp. of John Howard, 1855, 8vo.

Field, John. Posthumous Extracts from the Veterinary Records of the late John Field, edited by his brother, Wm. Field, Veterinary Surgeon, Lon., 1843, 8vo.

Field, Martin, d. 1833, aged 60, of Fayetteville, Vermont, pub. treatises on mineralogy and natural history.

Field, Matthew. See FEILDE.

Field, Matthew C., d. 1844, aged 32, whilst on a voyage from New Orleans to Boston, for the benefit of his health. He contributed many poetical and other articles to the Southern journals, under the signature of Phasmas.

Field, Nathaniel, a dramatic author, temp. James I. and Charles I., is supposed to be the same Field who acted upon the stage. 1. A Woman's a Weathercock; a Com., Lon., 1612, 4to. 2. Amends for Ladies; a Com., 1639, 4to. 3. In conjunction with Massinger, The Fatal Dowry; a Trag., 1632, 4to.

"A very good play."—Biog. Dramat.

Field, Nathaniel, Rector of Stourton, Wilts., a son of Richard Field, D.D., author of the work entitled, Of the Church, pub. Memorials concerning the Life of Dr. Richard Field, with a Pref. by John Le Neve, Lon., 1716.

Field, Richard, D.D., 1561–1616, a native of Hampsted, Hertfordshire, educated at Magdalen Hall, Oxf.; Divinity Reader to Lincoln's Inn, 1594; Rector of Burghclere, Hampshire, and Preb. of Windsor; Dean of Gloucester, 1610. He was in great reputation for learning, piety, and public usefulness. His great work, entitled, Of the Church, was first pub. in 1606, four books, 1 vol. fol.; 5th book, with an Appendix, 1610, fol.; new ed. of the whole, Oxf., 1628, 1 vol. fol.; again, with an Appendix and Defence, 1635, fol. New ed., Camb., 1847–52, 4 vols. 8vo, 42s.; again, 1853, 4 vols. 8vo. See Tracts of the Angl. Fathers, lii. 73.

When Dr. Kettle endeavoured to persuade Dr. Field not to write this work, telling him that it would embroil him in controversy, he answered:

"I will so write that they shall have no great mind to answer me."

King James I. delighted to converse with Field on matters of divinity; and when he first preached before him, he said:

"Is his name Field? This is the Field for God to dwell in!"

When he heard of his death, he exclaimed:

"I should have done more for that man."

"He was in his time esteemed a principal maintainer of Protestantism, a powerful preacher, a profound schoolman, exact disputant, and so admirable well knowing in the controversies between the Protestants and Papists, that few or none went beyond him in his time. He had a great memory, and any book which he read he was able to carry away the substance of it in his memory, and to give an account of all the material passages therein."—Athen. Oxon.

"That learned divine, whose memory smelleth like a FIELD which the Lord hath blessed."—FULLER.

"This one volume, thoroughly understood and appropriated, will place you in the highest rank of doctrinal Church-of-England divines, and in no mean rank as a true doctrinal Church historian."—SAMUEL TAYLOR COLERIDGE: Letter to his son, the Rev. Dervent Coleridge.

"Field on the Church has been much praised by Coleridge. It is, as it seemed to me, a more temperate work in ecclesiastical theory than some have represented it to be, and written almost wholly against Rome."—Hallam's Introd. to Lit. Hist.

Dr. Field pub. a serm., 1604, 4to, and had in course of preparation a work entitled, A View of the Controversies in Religion, &c. The Pref. to this unfinished work will be found in his son's Life of him. See FIELD, NATHANIEL, and see Athen. Oxon., Bliss's ed., li. 81.

Field, Richard Stockton, b. 1803, at Whitehill, N. Jersey. 1. The Provincial Courts of New Jersey, &c., N.Y., 1849, 8vo. 2. Address before the Surviving Members of the Convention to form a Constitution for N. Jersey in 1844, 8vo, 1853. 3. Address on the Power of Habit, 1855. 4. Contributions to Collections N. Jersey Hist. Soc., &c.

Field, Theop., Bishop of St. David's. Serm., Lon., 1624, 8vo.

Field, Rev. W. Use of the Globes, 1811, 12mo.

Field, Rev. W. Memoirs of the Life, Writings, and Opinions, of the Rev. Samuel Parr, LL.D., Lon., 1828, 2 vols. 8vo. This interesting work contains anecdotes of many of the literary characters of the early part of the 19th century.

Field, Wm. 1. Letter rel. to Dissenters, 1791, 8vo. 2. Second do., 1791, 8vo. 3. Pract. Ct. K. Bench in Personal Actions, 3 pts., 1798.

Field, Wm. See FIELD, JOHN.

Fielder, John. Petition to Parl., 1651, 4to.

Fielder, Richard. Petition of the Waggoners, fol.

Fielding, Charles George, son of the Earl of Derby. The Brothers; an Eclogue, Lon., 1781, 8vo.

Fielding, George. Surgical Cases, Lon., 1813, 8vo.

Fielding, Henry, 1707-1754, a son of Lieutenant-General Fielding, and great-grandson of William, third Earl of Denbigh, was born at Sharpham Park, Somersetshire, on the 22d of April. After prosecuting his classical studies at Eton, he went to the University of Leyden, where, for two years, he devoted himself to the investigation of civil law. The straitened circumstances of General Fielding placed Henry in a mortifying position among his fellow-students, and before the termination of his 21st year he returned to London, and became a writer for the stage. His Comedy of Love in several Masques appeared in the same year—1727—in which he returned to England, and notwithstanding the little encouragement which the author received, he produced a long list of plays, of which even the names are now unknown to the majority of readers. In 1734 Fielding fell deeply in love with a celebrated beauty, Miss Charlotte Cradock, possessed of many accomplishments, and £1500. An immediate union was the result of this acquaintance, and the groom at this time coming into possession of about £200 per annum by the death of his mother, the young couple retired to their estate in the country.

Here they might have lived in comfort and respectability; but these substantial blessings by no means satisfied the ambition of a gay cavalier, who aspired to a splendid establishment and a crowd of boon companions. A host of servants, horses, hounds, and an open table to all the rakes who chose to live upon his bounty, reduced Fielding to poverty; in three years his coffers were exhausted, his constitution shattered, and his summer friends on the wing to more promising pastures.

He returned to London, determined to put into profitable exercise that knowledge of the law which he had acquired in happier days. There is every reason—excepting an apprehension of the return of convivial habits—to suppose that he would have succeeded in the arduous vocation which he had embraced with great zeal, had it not been for violent and repeated attacks of the gout, which forbade his attendance on the circuits. He therefore again sought and obtained literary employment, and we soon find him assistant editor of The Champion, a periodical paper, and author of the essays On Conversation, On the Knowledge of the Characters of Men, and The Journey from this World to the Next. At this time also he produced some poetical compositions, which do not seem to have possessed any uncommon merit. We should not omit to mention, as a proof of his diligence whilst yet engaged in legal pursuits, that he prepared a voluminous Digest of the Statutes at Large, in two folio volumes, which remained unpublished in the hands of his brother, Sir John Fielding, his successor in the post of Middlesex magistrate. He now gave to the world a curious satire, entitled The History of Jonathan Wild the Great, which has received the rather dubious compliment of being

"Perhaps the most ingeniously-arranged description of a tissue of blackguardisms which has ever been given to the world."

In 1742 appeared the novel of Joseph Andrews; in 1749 he pub. Tom Jones; and two years later gratified his large circle of admirers by the novel of Amelia, which he sold for £1000.

In Amelia, the author drew a picture of his wife, to whom he was sincerely attached, and whose death he was called upon to mourn whilst struggling amidst pecuniary embarrassments. The mourner, however, did not absolutely refuse consolation.

"His biographers seem to have been shy of disclosing that, after the death of this charming woman, he married her maid. And yet the act was not so discreditable to his character as it may sound. The maid had few personal charms, but was an excellent creature, devotedly attached to her mistress, and almost broken-hearted for her loss. In the first agonies of his own grief, which approached to frenzy, he found no relief but from weeping along with her; nor solace, when a degree calmer, but in talking of the angel they mutually regretted. This made her his habitual confidential associate, and in process of time he began to think he could not give his children a tenderer mother, or secure for himself a more faithful housekeeper and nurse. At least this was what he told his friends; and it is certain that her conduct as his wife confirmed it, and fully justified his good opinion."—Letters and Works of Lady Mary Wortley Montagu. Edited by Lord Warburton. Introd. Anecdotes.

In 1745 Fielding supported the government in The True Patriot, and in 1748 conducted a periodical of the same character, entitled The Jacobite's Journal. When 43 years of age, he received the appointment of a Justice of the Peace for the county of Middlesex, and retained this post until within a short time of his death. He seems, from his knowledge both of law and criminal character, to have been admirably adapted to this troublesome office, and evinced a laudable zeal for the public interest by publishing An Inquiry into the causes of the late increase of Robbers, 1751, and a Proposal for making an Effectual Provision for the Poor, for amending their Morals, and for rendering them useful Members of Society, 1753.

"These tracts, having been written by the most eminent of English novelists, have attracted fully as much attention as they were entitled to on account of their intrinsic merits. The first, however, is written with great force, and contains various statements and reasonings that throw a great deal of light on the causes of crime and pauperism, and on the state of the London poor at the time. But, like most other writers on the same subject, Fielding has ascribed far too much to legislative and police arrangements, and too little to the care and discretion of individuals."—McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Econ.

The last service he rendered to the public in his official capacity was the extirpation—by the approbation of government, who placed a fund of £600 at his disposal for the purpose—of several gangs of thieves and highwaymen who grievously afflicted the good citizens of London. Although now in a wretched state of health, he contrived for a twelvemonth to edit with great ability a new semi-weekly periodical, entitled The Covent-Garden Journal, which became a great favourite with the public. In 1754 he sailed for Lisbon for the benefit of his health, and died October 8, two months after his arrival, in the 48th year of his age. His Journal of his Voyage was pub. in 1755, 12mo. We have already stated that Fielding never enjoyed much popularity as a writer for the stage.

"While it must be acknowledged that Fielding's genius was not decidedly dramatic, it was something that he escaped disapprobation, though he was at times received with indifference."—Roscoe's Life of Fielding.

The dates of his dramatic works we take from the Biog. Dramat.: 1. Love in several Masks; a Com., 1728. 2. The Temple Beau; a Com., 1730. 3. The Author's Farce, 1730. 4. The Coffee-House Politician; a Com., 1730. 5. The Tragedy of Tragedies, 1731. 6. The Letter Writers; a Farce, 1731. 7. The Grub Street Opera, 1731. 8. The Lottery, a Farce, 1731. 9. The Modern Husband; a Com., 1732. 10. The Mock Doctor; a Com. from Molière, 1732. 11. The Covent-Garden Tragedy; a Farce, 1732. 12. The Debauchees; a Com., 1733. 13. The Miser; a Com. from Plautus and Molière, 1733. 14. The Intriguing Chambermaid; a Com., 1734. 15. Don Quixote in England; a Com., 1733. 16. An Old Man taught Wisdom; a Farce, 1734. 17. The Universal Gallant; a Com., 1735. 18. Pasquin; Dram. Satire, 1736. 19. The Historical Register for the Year 1736; a Com., [1737]. 20. Eurydice; a Farce, 1735. 21. Eurydice Hissed; a Farce, 1737. 22. Tumble-Down Dick; Dram. Entert., 1737. 23. Miss Lucy in Town; a Farce, 1742. 24. The Wedding Day; a Com., 1743. 25. The Fathers; or the Good-Natured Man; a Com., 1778, 8vo.

"His dramatic pieces, every one of which is comic, are far from being contemptible. His farces and ballad pieces, more especially, have a sprightliness of manner, and a forcibleness of character, by which it is impossible to avoid being agreeably entertained; and in those among others which he has in any degree borrowed from Molière, or any other writer, he has done his original great honour and justice, by the manner in which he has handled the subject."—Biog. Dramat.

In addition to the works already noticed, Fielding published several minor pieces upon topics of a temporary character. Of his works there have been many editions. 1. Works, with the Life of the Author, 1762, 4 vols. 4to. 2. 1762, 8 vols. 8vo. 3. 1766, 12 vols. 4. 1767, 4 vols. 4to. 5. 1771, 8 vols. 8vo. 6. 1775, 12 vols. 12mo. 7. 1783, 12 vols. 12mo. 8. With an Essay on his Life and Genius, by Arthur Murphy, 1784, 10 vols. 8vo. 9. 1806, 10 vols. 8vo. 10. 1808, 14 vols. 12mo. 11. Select Works, 1818, 5 vols. 8vo. 12. Works, edited by Alex. Chalmers, Lon., 1821, 10 vols. 8vo. 13. With Life and Notice of his Works, by Thomas Roscoe, 1840, imp. 8vo. 14. 1843, med. 8vo. 15. 1848, med. 8vo. 16. 1851, imp. 8vo, and in 2 vols. 8vo.

We now proceed to adduce the opinions of a host of eminent authorities respecting those works—his three novels—by which Fielding achieved so general and so durable a reputation. As a great artist, indeed, exquisitely happy in catching and transferring to his canvas those features of human nature which must always interest, because immediately recognised as genuine by men of all ages and minds of all grades, Fielding has never been surpassed. How deeply then is it to be lamented, that, lacking a high sense of moral responsibility, he delighted chiefly in painting the least refined, least elevated characteristics of his species, and permitted himself to stimulate the passions to the excesses of vice, instead of causing those "passions to move at the command of virtue"! There are never wanting apologists, indeed, for greater transgressors than Henry Fielding; and Coleridge, whose language we shall presently quote, would have considered the above an uncharitable verdict. But it is not to be questioned that there are many passages in Joseph Andrews, Amelia, and Tom Jones, which a licentious taste would gladly extend for the same reasons that would induce a moral censorship to have them totally expunged. But we must not delay our promised citation of opinions.

Those who are inclined to think us too rigid in this judgment, should remember Fielding's own self-condemnatory verdict upon his early dramatic writings:

"At length, repenting frolic flights of youth,
Once more he flies to Nature and to Truth:
In virtue's just defence aspires to fame,
Nor courts applause with the applauder's shame."

Prologue to The Modern Husband.

Alas, that his repentance should have been as "the morning cloud and the early dew"!—

—1. The Adventures of Joseph Andrews, published in 1742. This work, Dr. Warton informs us, was "valued by Fielding above all his writings." The Doctor adds, "as he justly may."—Woolf's Life of Warton. But we imagine that few will coincide with this judgment. Fielding himself tells us that it was intended for an imitation of the style and manner of Cervantes.

"How delightfully he has copied the humour, the gravity, and the fine ridicule of his master, they can witness who are acquainted with both writers."—ARTHUR MURPHY.

Both Chalmers and Warton dissent from this opinion, and consider "Fielding's ridicule of a very different species from that of the Spanish novelist." But Dr. Aikin also refers to "the grave Cervantic style, adopted in the novel of Joseph Andrews." However this may be, there is no doubt at all that Fielding intended to ridicule the "sentimentalism," as it is generally denominated, of the great novelist of the day—Samuel Richardson.

"While, however, it is highly probable that he had Cervantes in his eye, it is certain that the satiric and burlesque portion of Joseph Andrews was suggested to him by the perusal of Richardson's Pamela, on the overwrought refinement and strained sentiment of which it affords a humorous commentary in the adventures of her professed brother, the hero. Besides its intrinsic wit and excellence, it has thus a twofold attraction in the comic and burlesque spirit it maintains throughout, in the same way as the adventures of the Spanish knight and his squire, however ludicrous in themselves, are relished with a double zest from the contrast they offer to the dignified bearing and marvellous deeds of the old Paladins. How exquisitely Fielding has caught the humour, assumed gravity, and delicate satire of his prototype, they who have compared the two master-pieces will readily admit: and that he loses nothing in point of originality."—THOMAS ROSCOE: Life and Works of Henry Fielding.

The elder novelist was greatly offended at what he very naturally considered an unwarrantable liberty.

"Richardson was exceedingly hurt at this: the more so as they had been on good terms, and he was very intimate with Fielding's two sisters. He never appears cordially to have forgiven it, (perhaps it was not in human nature he should), and he always speaks in his letters with a great deal of asperity of 'Tom Jones,' more indeed than was quite graceful in a rival author. No doubt he himself thought his indignation was sorely excited by the loose morality of the work and of its author, but he could tolerate Cibber."—MRS. BARBAULD: Memoir of Fielding, prefixed to his Correspondence.

Mr. Thackeray appends the above to an apology for what we must consider indefensible.

"Fielding, no doubt, began to write this novel in ridicule of Pamela, for which work one can understand the hearty contempt and antipathy which such an athletic and bolsterous genius as Fielding's must have entertained. He could not do otherwise than laugh at the puny cockney bookseller, pouring out endless volumes of sentimental twaddle, and hold him up to scorn as a moll-coddle and a milksop. His genius had been nursed on sack-poet, and not on dishes of tea. His muse had sung the loudest in tavern choruses; had seen the daylight streaming in over thousands of emptied bowls, and reeled home to chambers on the shoulders of the watchmen. Richardson's goddess was attended by old maids and dowagers, and fed on muffins and bobas. 'Milksop!' roars Harry Fielding, clattering at the timid shop-shutters. 'Wretch! Monster! Mohock!' shrieks the sentimental author of Pamela, and all the ladies of his court cackle out an affrighted chorus."—English Humourists of the 18th Century.

Neither the wit nor the morality of these lines are very discernible to us. They exhibit two of the prominent faults of an otherwise good writer: a constant disposition to caricature, and an ever-present willingness to apologise for men of loose manners and dissipated habits. We have often listened with pleasure—indeed, with edification—to Mr. Thackeray's moral reflections upon the Lives and Works of the departed great, but we soon found that the summing up of the learned judge leaned not always "to virtue's side," and if the literary offender happened to be a three-bottle man, we entertained no apprehensions for his safety, and felt quite confident that a gentle rebuke, hardly calculated to depopulate the tables of Lucullus, would be the extent of his punishment.

Even the displeasure of Richardson did not prevent Joseph Andrews from immediately finding a host of readers. The faithful subjects of the great master were not proof against the fascinations of good Parson Adams and the unfortunate Leonora; and those who had been charmed with the character of Pamela, were equally delighted with the unsophisticated virtue of her worthy brother, the excellent Joseph Andrews. We may be allowed to surmise that many of Richardson's adherents, whilst indignant at the ridicule cast upon their leader, yet could not but secretly propound to themselves the question which Sir Walter Scott openly proposes:

"How can we wish that undone without which Parson Adams would not have existed?"

The book became a general favourite with all classes of readers, and equally engrossed the literary half-hour of the studious mechanic and the interval between the Latin and Greek of the erudite gownsmen. The tea-party of the tradesman sympathized with the perils of the lovely Fanny, and West writes to the classic Gray:

"I rejoice you found amusement in Joseph Andrews."

—2. History of Tom Jones, a Foundling; published 1749. The foundation of this work was laid by Fielding while in the midst of the excitement of political partnership, and it was concluded in such intervals as he could snatch from the annoyances inseparable from the commencement of a career of magisterial duty. Yet under such heavy discouragements did Fielding construct one of the most elaborate of plots, developed by an astonishing variety of characters:

"No author has introduced a greater diversity of character, or displayed them more fully, or in more various attitudes. All-worthy is the most amiable picture in the world of a man who does honour to his species. In his own heart he finds constant propensities to the most generous and benevolent of actions, and his understanding confests him with themselves in the performance of whatever his position suggests to him. And though it is apparent that the author laboured at this point on an error, and meant to offer it to mankind as a just object of imitation, he has wisely restrained himself within the bounds of probability, nay, it may be said of strict truth, as, in the general opinion, he is supposed to have copied here the features of a worthy character still in being."—ARCTIC HISTORY

The "worthy character" here alluded to was Ralph Allen, of Prior Park, the "Man of Bath," the friend of Pope and Warburton, celebrated in the well-known lines of the Sermon:

"Let humble Allen, with an outward shame,
Do good by stealth, and blush to find it fame."

"Although in this, as well as in other writings of the author, the scenes are chiefly drawn from low life, and display too much of the vice and crimes of mankind, yet they are relieved by considerable admixture of nobler matter, and contain many affecting pictures of moral exaltation. Indeed, it cannot be doubted that the writer's intentions were to throw the scene of virtue, and probably the majority of readers, judging from their feelings in the present, will pronounce that he has effected his purpose. A rigid moralist will object to him the common fault of many writers of fiction, that of sheltering gross deviations from rectitude of conduct under that vague goodness of heart which is so little to be relied on as the guide of life: yet he has not been inattentive to partial justice in making subordinate the constant concomitant of vice, though perhaps he has not nicely adjusted the degree of punishment to the crime."—DR. ALLEN

Dr. Beattie can hardly find terms sufficiently expressive to convey to the world his admiration of the management of the plot of Tom Jones:

"Since the days of Homer the world has not seen a more artful epic tale. The structure and adventures are wonderfully diversified, yet the circumstances are all so natural, and rise so easily from one another, and co-operate with so much regularity in bringing us, even while they seem to relax the attention, that the curiosity of the reader is always kept awake, and instead of flagging, grows more and more impatient to the story, advancing till at last it becomes downright anxiety. And when we get to the end, and look back on the whole contrivance, we are amazed to find that of so many incidents there should be no superfluities, that in such a variety of fiction there should be so great a probability, and that so complex a tale should be so perspicuously conducted, and with perfect unity of design."

With reference to Dr. Beattie's introduction of the name of Homer, we may remark that Lord Byron styles Fielding the "Pagan Homer of human nature."

"In Tom Jones, his greatest work, the artful conduct of the tale, and the sublimity of all the incidents in the winding up of the whole, deserve much praise."—DR. HALL'S LECTURES ON LITERATURE AND BELLES-LETTRES

"His scenes change from generation to generation, and with man-made morals appear to change—actually change with time—but appear to change with all but the abandoned. A young man of the present day who should act as Tom Jones is supposed to act at Upton with Lady Blount, he would not be a Tom Jones, and a Tom Jones of the present day, without, perhaps, being in the ground a better man, would have perished rather than submit to be kept by a heroine of fortune. Therefore this novel is, and indeed proceeds to be, an example of conduct. But, notwithstanding all this, I do believe the sentiment which can commend 'Fanny and Captain Harcourt' as strictly moral, although they put on the imagination of the young with youthful dress of dress, and while Tom Jones is prohibited to have, I do not speak of young women, but a young man whom honest or virtuous can be injured, or even his position called, by this novel is already thoroughly corrupt. There is a cheerful, healthy, buoyant spirit that pervades everywhere, strongly contrasted with the gloomy, day-dreamy sentimentality of Richardson."—A. T. COLLIER: Literary America

"Our popular novels are even translated into Spanish. 'Tom Jones,' indeed, has long been a favourite to Spain. It may be remarked, that the most intensely natural works acquire the highest reputation."—HARVEY CHAMBERLAIN

"As a picture of manners, the novel of 'Tom Jones' is indeed exquisite, as a work of construction, quite a wonder, the by-play of wisdom, the power of observation, the multifarious delicious turns and thoughts, the varied character of the great Comic Epic, keep the reader in a perpetual admiration and curiosity. But against Mr. Thomas Jones himself we have a right to put in a protest, and quarrel with the extent the author evidently has for that character. Charles Lamb says truly of Jones, that a single hearty laugh from him 'cleans the air'—but that it is in a certain state of the atmosphere."—THEATRICAL HUMANITIES OF THE 18TH CENTURY

"His Tom Jones is quite unrivalled in plot, and is to be rivalled only in his own works by his delicious delineation of character."—SUMNER'S MOD. WRITINGS

"In Tom Jones, Fielding has comprehended a larger variety of incidents and characters under a stricter unity of story than in Joseph Andrews, but he has given to the whole a tone of verisimilitude which does not mar the delightful simplicity of the latter. As an expression of the power and breadth of his mind, however, it is altogether his greatest work, and, to the union of distinct general representations with profound knowledge of practical life, is unequalled by any novel in the language."—*MRS. P. WHEAT: *Scenes and Studies

Dr. Johnson, in a conversation to be quoted hereafter, declared:

"Oh, there is more knowledge of the heart in one letter of Richardson's than in all Tom Jones."

But Fielding's admirers do not conceive this to have been an impartial judgment. We may properly conclude our citation of opinions of this remarkable work by the eloquent tribute of a writer as highly distinguished in the field of historic investigation as the author of Tom Jones was in the walks of fiction:

"The nobility of the Spaniards has been illustrated and enriched by the trophies of Marlborough, but I cannot then to consider the Fanny Queen as the most precious jewel of their crown. Our immortal Fielding was of the younger branch of the House of Dunbligh, who drew their origin from the Counts of Hapsburg, the Imperial descendants of Maria, in the seventh century Dukes of Almona. For different have been the fortunes of the English and German divisions of the family of Hapsburg. The former, the knights and sheriffs of Languedoc, have slowly risen to the dignity of a peerage, the latter, the Emperors of Germany and Kings of Spain, have thronged the history of the Old and invaded the treasure of the New World. The conquests of Charles V may divide their brethren of England, but the remembrance of 'Tom Jones,' that exquisite picture of human nature, will subvert the palace of the Bourbons and the Imperial eagle of Austria."—CHAMBERLAIN

3. Amelia; published in 1751.

"In point of general excellence 'Amelia' has commonly been considered, as less by critics, perhaps, than by the public, as hardly inferior to 'Tom Jones.' In variety and invention it excels it is in. Its chief merit depends less on its artful and elaborate construction than on the interesting series it presents of domestic paintings, drawn, as we have remarked, from his own family history. It has more pathos, more moral lessons, with less vigor and buoyancy, than either of its predecessors. But we agree with Chamberlain, that those who have seen much of the errors and distortions of domestic life will probably feel that the author's endeavour in this work is more just, as well as more shrewd, than in any of his other novels. The appeals to the heart are the more forcible."—*THOMAS HENSON: *Lives and Works of Henry Fielding

With reference to Fielding's having drawn from his domestic history, in the pages of Amelia, his celebrated king-woman, Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, thus discourses in a letter written shortly before the death of the novelist:

"If Fielding has given a true picture of himself and his first wife in the character of Mr and Mrs. Smith, some compliments to his own figure excepted, and I am persuaded several of the incidents he mentions are real matters of fact. I wonder he does not perceive that Tom Jones and Mr. Smith are very soundly."—LETTERS AND WORKS, edited by Lord Wharfedale

Lady Mary's remark relative to his figure may appropriately introduce a brief description of his outward man:

"With regard to his personal appearance, Fielding was strongly built, robust, and in height rather exceeding six feet. He was also remarkably active, his repeated attacks of the gout had broken down the vigour of a fine constitution. Naturally of a dignified presence, he was equally impressive in his tone and manner, which, added to his purely marked features, his unconventional posture, and rare wit, must have given him a decided prominence in general society, and not a little ascendancy over the minds of common men."—*THOMAS HENSON: *Lives and Works of Henry Fielding

To return to 'Amelia.' Richardson flattered himself that this last publication would prove the death-knell of his rival's fame, and he remarks, in a letter to his own enthusiastic admirer, Mrs. Donellan:

"Captain Smith, madam, has done his business. Mr. Fielding has over-written himself, or rather under-written, and in his own journal, once exhausted of his last piece, and has promised that the same man shall write no more for him. His plan, in short, is as dead as if it had been published thirty years ago, or to him. You guess I have not read 'Amelia.' Indeed I have and but the first volume."

Yet Amelia met with immediate and great success:

"Fielding's Amelia was perhaps the only book of which, being printed off between one morning, a new edition was called for before night."—DR. JOHNSON

We know that the stern moralist himself read the book

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

th

to shorten, by quoting the opinions of a number of distinguished writers upon the literary characteristics of the great English novelist:

"We have another writer of those imaginary histories, one who has not long since descended to these regions. His name is Fielding, and his works, as I have heard the best judges say, have a true spirit of comedy, and an exact representation of nature, with fine moral touches. He has not, indeed, given lessons of pure and consummate virtue, but has exposed vice and meanness with all the powers of ridicule."—Lord LYTTELTON: Dialogues of the Dead.

Lord Lyttelton, after mentioning some particulars of Pope, Swift, and other literary characters of that day, when Fielding's name was pronounced, remarked:

"Henry Fielding had more wit and humour than all the persons we have been speaking of put together."

Fielding's early attempts at dramatic authorship were greatly ridiculed by the wits then in the ascendant; and Swift compares the young author, not in the most complimentary manner in the world, with Wellsted—no "bright particular star":

"For instance, when you rashly think
No rhymers can with Wellsted sink,
His merits balance'd, you shall find
That Fielding leaves him far behind."

Upon which Dr. Warton remarks:

"Little did Swift imagine that this very Fielding would hereafter equal him in works of humour, and excel him in drawing and supporting characters, and in the artful conduct and plan of a comic epopee."

Few critics have been so sparing of their compliments to contemporary writers as the great authority to be next quoted:

"Monsieur de Marivaux, in France, and Henry Fielding, in England, stand the foremost among those who have given a faithful and chaste copy of life and manners, and, by enriching their romance with the best part of the comic art, may be said to have brought it to perfection."—BISHOP WARRENTON.

"The genius of Cervantes was transfused into the novels of Fielding, who painted the characters and ridiculed the follies of life with equal strength, humour, and propriety."—SMOLLETT.

Sir Walter Scott, whom we shall again have occasion to quote, thus combines the names of Fielding and Smollett: "Smollett and Fielding were so eminently successful as novelists, that no other English author of that class has a right to be mentioned in the same breath. We readily grant to Smollett an equal rank with his great rival, Fielding—while we place both far above any of their successors in the same line of fictitious composition. Perhaps no books ever written excited such peals of inextinguishable laughter as those of Smollett."

"I go to Sterne for the feelings of nature; Fielding for its vices; Johnson for a knowledge of the workings of its powers; and Shakespeare for every thing."—ASKEWORTH.

"The cultivated genius of Fielding entitles him to a high rank among the classics. His works exhibit a series of pictures drawn with all the descriptive fidelity of a Hogarth. They are highly entertaining, and will always be read with pleasure."—Dr. VICARS: Knock's Essays.

"Mr. Fielding's Novels are highly distinguished for their humour; a humour which, if not of the most refined and delicate kind, is original, and peculiar to himself. The characters which he draws are lively and natural, and marked with the strokes of a bold pencil. The general scope of his stories is favourable to humanity and goodness of heart."—DR. BLAIR: Lectures on Rhetoric and Belles-Lettres.

"They are splendid emanations of art, and artificial, as the critic Goethe correctly expresses it, in the true sense of the word."

"Fielding will forever remain the delight of his country, and will always retain his place in the libraries of Europe, notwithstanding the unfortunate grossness,—the mark of an uncultivated taste,—which if not yet entirely excluded from conversation, has been for some time banished from our writings, where, during the best age of our national genius, it prevailed more than in those of any other polished nation."—SIR JAMES MACINTOSH: Edin. Rev. xxv. 486.

The opinion of Fielding's celebrated kinswoman will interest many readers:

"Fielding has really a fund of true humour, and was to be pitted at his first entrance into the world, having no choice, as he said himself, but to be a hackney-writer, or a hackney-coachman. His genius deserved a better fate; but I cannot help blaming that continued indiscretion, to give it the softest name, that has run through his life, and I am afraid still remains. . . . Since I was born, no original has appeared excepting Congreve and Fielding, who would, I believe, have approached nearer to his excellencies, if not forced by his necessities to publish without correction, and throw many productions into the world he would have thrown to the fire, if meat could have been got without money, or money without scribbling. . . . There was a great similitude between his [Fielding's] character and that of Sir Richard Steele. He had the advantage both in learning and, in my opinion, in genius; they both agreed in wanting money, in spite of all their friends, and would have wanted it if their hereditary lands had been as extensive as their imagination; yet each of them was so formed for happiness, it is pity he was not immortal. . . . His [Fielding's] happy constitution (even when he had with great pains half demolished it) made him forget every evil when he was before a venison pasty or over a flask of champagne; and I am persuaded he knew more happy moments than any prince upon earth. His natural spirits gave him rapture with a cocktail, and cheerfulness when he was starving in a garret."—LADY MARY WOOTLEY MONTAGU.

"What a master of composition Fielding was! upon my word I think the Œdipus Tyrannus, the Alchemist, and Tom Jones, the three most perfect plots ever planned; and how charming, how wholesome Fielding always is! to take him up after Richardson is like emerging from a sick-room, heated by stoves, into an open lawn on a breezy day in May."—S. T. COLERIDGE.

Hartley Coleridge, when speaking of Massinger's habit of "getting into a passion with his bad characters," remarks: "It is a fault which nowhere occurs in Homer, Cervantes, Shakespeare, the great and true dramatists, and very seldom in Fielding and Sir Walter Scott."

But it is time that we had quoted the tribute of Sir Walter to the illustrious predecessor with whom he has just been named:

"Fielding is the first of the British Novelists. His name is immortal as a painter of natural manners. Of all the works of imagination to which English genius has given origin, his writings are most decidedly her own; all the actors in his narrative live in England, travel in England, quarrel and fight in England; and scarce an incident occurs, without its being marked by something which could not well have happened in any other country. In his powers of strong and natural humour, and forcible yet natural exhibition of character, the Father of the English Novel has not yet been approached even by his most successful followers. He is, indeed, as Byron terms him—

"The prose Homer of human nature."

It is no slight evidence of the great popularity of Fielding, that in so many cases the incidental introduction of an author's name gives us occasion to quote the opinion of such author upon the merits of the subject of our pen. We find Smollett and Fielding compared, and we are reminded that Smollett left us his estimate of the genius of Fielding. Again we find that Swift has made Fielding the "butt of his clumsy ridicule," and we must repeat what Dr. Warton says of both. The names of Scott and Fielding are combined, and we recollect Sir Walter's eloquent tribute to his great predecessor. Scott quotes Byron, and we feel that our duty will not be discharged without quoting Byron further on the same suggestive theme:

"There now are no Squire Westerns as of old,
And our Sophias are not so emphatic,
But fair as them or fairer to behold."

Don Juan, c. xiii. s. 110.

A critic of our own day, of great eminence, seems to have shared in Byron's feeling of familiar acquaintance with the dramatic persons of these memorable novels:

"What a wonderful art, what an admirable gift of nature, was it by which the author of these tales was endowed, and which enabled him to fix our interest, to awaken our sympathy, to seize upon our credulity, so that we believe in his people—speculate gravely upon their faults or their excellencies, prefer this one or that, deplore Jones's fondness for drink and play, Booth's fondness for play and drink, and the unfortunate position of the wives of both gentlemen; we all admire those ladies with all our hearts, and talk about them as faithfully as if we had breakfasted with them this morning in their actual drawing-room, or should meet them this afternoon in the Park!"—Thackeray's Eng. Rom. of the 18th Century.

The reader must peruse for himself the Essay on the Life and Works of Fielding, prefixed to the Works of the latter, by THOMAS ROSCOE: see ante, notice of editions. We can make room for a short extract only from this well-written composition:

"How far Richardson was inferior to his great rival in the leading characteristics of novel-writing, and in none more than in natural and true portraiture of character and manners, the different popular light in which they are regarded affords, perhaps, the surest criterion. While Fielding continues to rank with the 'foremost men of all the world,' with Homer, Cervantes, Shakespeare, in the highest rank of genius, the long, wearisome, thrice-elaborated productions of Richardson are a dead weight, and sleep undisturbed upon their shelves. Only for a moment contrast the characters they have drawn; the truth-telling, manly minds of Fielding, of which the calm beauty, 'the sunshine and the storm,' are all faithful transcripts of nature, with the feeble, unvarying portraiture of his contemporary."

We find a similar judgment expressed by a late eminent writer:

"When we read Fielding's novels after those of Richardson, we feel as if a stupendous pressure were removed from our souls. We seem suddenly to have left a palace of enchantment, where we have passed through long galleries filled with the most gorgeous images, and illumined by a light not quite human nor yet quite divine, into the fresh air, and the common ways of this 'bright and breathing world.' We travel on the high-road of humanity, yet meet in it pleasant companions, and catch more delicious smatches of refreshment, than ever we can hope elsewhere to enjoy."—TALFOURD: New Month Mag.

We can form some faint idea of the growl of indignation, and the torrent of invective, with which gruff old Johnson would have chastised the utterers of such comparisons as we have just quoted. And, indeed, as Fielding has had it all his own way for some time, it is only fair, and will be perhaps agreeable relief to the reader, to show "the other picture."

"It always appeared to me that he estimated the compositions of Richardson too highly, and that he had an unreasonable prejudice against Fielding. In comparing those two writers, he used this expression: 'that there was as great a difference between them, as between a man who knew how a watch was made, and a man who could tell the hour by looking on the dial-plate." This was a short and figurative statement of his distinction between drawing characters of nature and characters only of manners. . . . Fielding being mentioned, Johnson exclaimed, "He was a blockhead;" and upon my expressing my astonishment at so strange an assertion, he said, "What I mean by his being a blockhead is, that he was a barren rascal." BOSWELL: "Will you not allow, sir, that he draws very natural pictures of human life?" JOHNSON: "Why, sir, it is of very low life. Richardson used to say that, had he not known who Fielding was, he should have believed he was an oyster. Sir, there is more knowledge of the heart in one letter of Richardson's, than in all Tom Jones. I, indeed, never read Joseph Andrews." EMMINGS: "Surely, sir, Richardson is very tedious." JOHNSON: "Why, sir, if you were to read Richardson for the story, your impatience would be so much fretted that you would hang yourself. But you must read him for the sentiment, and consider the story as only giving occasion to the sentiment!"—Boswell's Life of Johnson.

An eminent authority of modern times thus satisfactorily accounts for the early popularity of Richardson in Germany:

"Fielding conceived life as it was, with great strength and distinctness, and brought out into clear light those contrasts which are indeed now well enough known, but which were then remarked by none, because England was regarded as a paradise—a Utopia. He showed with such power the difference between appearance and truth—between a flattering clergy and true religion, that the lovers of sentimentality and the multitude, who are always willing to have their eyes bound so that they may dream pleasantly, were in some measure driven from himself to his countryman Richardson, the discoverer of a conventional morality. We cannot therefore wonder that Fielding, who died in 1754, found a public in Germany much later than Richardson, whose moralising and sentimental heroes and heroines had already become the fashion by means of Rousseau, at the same time with the idyllic dreams of Goethe. We must possess good practical sense and a knowledge of pure old English life, and of the abuses of its hierarchy and clergy, to understand Fielding, to estimate a Joseph Andrews and a Tom Jones, and to find pleasure in them; whereas we have only need of indefinite general notions and sensibility, to admire Richardson's Pamela, and his Sir Charles Grandison."—Schlosser's Hist. of the 18th Cent., &c.; Davidson's Trans., li. 60, 60.

Fielding, James Holyrod. Beauchamp; or the Wheel of Fortune, 1818, 4 vols.

Fielding, Sir John, d. 1780, half-brother to Henry Fielding, the great novelist, and his successor in his magisterial duties, was distinguished for his public spirit and efforts for the reformation of the vicious. In consideration of his valuable services to the community, he was knighted in 1761. 1. Police Act, with a plan rel. to Girls of the Town, Lon., 1767, '68, 8vo. 2. Plan of an Asylum, or Home of Refuge for Orphans and other deserted Girls, 1758, 8vo. 3. Extracts from Penal Laws, &c., 1761, '69, 8vo. 4. Universal Mentor, a collec. of Moral and Misc. Essays, 1762, 12mo. 5. Charge to the Grand Jury, 1763, 4to. 6. Do., 1766, 4to. 7. Descrip. of London and Westminster, 1777, 12mo.

Fielding, John. 1. Peerage of Eng., Lon., 1781, 12mo. 2. New Peerage of do., 1784, 12mo. 3. H. Coach Rates, 1786, 12mo. 4. Regal Tables, 12mo.

Fielding, Robert. Surg. Con. to Phil. Trans., 1709.

Fielding, Sarah, 1714-1768, third sister of the great novelist, lived and died unmarried, at Bath. She was a woman of great learning. 1. The Adventures of David Simple in search of a Faithful Friend, 2 vols. 12mo. Pub. shortly after the appearance of her brother Henry's Joseph Andrews. A third vol. was added in 1752. New ed., 1756, 2 vols. 8vo. This novel was well received. 2. The Cry; a Dramatic Fable, 1754, 3 vols. 12mo. This has also been claimed as the production of Patty Fielding and Miss Jane Collier. See Mrs. Barbauld's Life of Richardson; Biog. Dramat., vols. i. and ii. 3. Xenophon's Memoirs of Socrates; Defence of Socrates before his Judges, 1762, 8vo. Mr. Harris of Salisbury furnished some valuable notes to this excellent translation.

"Done with equal judgment and accuracy."—CLARKE.

4. Familiar Letters between the characters in David Simple, 2 vols. 5. The Governess, or Little Female Academy. 6. The Lives of Cleopatra and Octavia. 7. The Hist. of the Countess of Delwin, 2 vols. 8. The Hist. of Ophelia, 2 vols.

"Her unaffected manners, candid mind, Her heart benevolent, and soul resign'd; Were more her praise than all she knew or thought, Though Athens' wisdom to her sex she taught."

Inscription by Dr. John Hoadly on the Monument erected by him to her memory.

Fielding, T. Select Proverbs of all Nations. New ed., Lon., 1847, 18mo. See RAY, JOHN.

Fielding, T. H., of the E. I. Comp. Milt. Coll., Ad-discombe. 1. Painting in Oil and Water Colours, Lon., 1839, imp. 8vo; 4th ed., 1846.

"Mr. Fielding's work may be honoured in France as M. Mérimée's has been in England by a translation: we think it a better one, and therefore more deserving of it."—Lon. Puritanism.

2. Hist. of the Art of Engraving, Lon., 1846, r. 8vo. New ed., 1848. 3. Picturesque Descrip. of the River Wye, 1841, 4to. 4. Synopsis of Practical Perspective, 3d ed., 1843, 8vo. 5. Manual of Colours, 1844, fp. 8vo. 6. On the Knowledge and Restoration of Oil Paintings, 1847, 12mo.

Fields, James T., b. 1820, at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, a partner of the well-known Boston publishing house of Ticknor and Fields, has won considerable reputation as a poet. A volume of his poetical compositions was pub. in Boston in 1849, and one for private distribution was printed at Cambridge in 1854. In 1858 he also privately printed a beautiful volume entitled A Few Verses for a Few Friends.

"This book itself, apart from its contents, is a poem. In paper, type, edging, and ornament—in all the variable details of mechanical execution—it vindicates its title to be termed a work of high art. The poems it contains are gems well worthy the setting,—pure thought, genial feeling, tender remembrance, and lambent fancy, in natural measures and easy rhythm,—such poems as always win a higher fame than they seek and are best appreciated by those whose verdict is of the most significant import."—N. Amer. Rev., clxxx, July, 1868.

Among his principal pieces are Commerce, read before the Boston Mercantile Association on its anniversary in 1838, and The Post of Honour, read before the same society in 1848. The reading-world is indebted to Mr. Fields for a complete edition of De Quincey's writings, which he collected, edited, and published in 20 vols. 16mo, Boston, 1858. See DE QUINCEY, THOMAS. Specimens of Mr. Fields's style will be found in Griswold's Poets and Poetry of America, and Duyckinck's Cyc. Amer. Lit.

"Besides his serious poems, he has produced some very original lyrical pieces, in which are adroit touches of wit, felicitous hits at current follies, and instances of quaint humour, laughing through grim and decorous lines, which evince a genius for vers de société. The poems Mr. Fields has given us are evidently the careless products of a singularly sensitive and fertile mind—indications rather than exponents of its powers—furnishing evidence of a capacity which it is to be hoped the engagements of business will not wholly absorb."—Griswold's Poets and Poetry of America.

"Mr. Fields's visit was necessarily brief; but that short interview has laid the foundation of a friendship which will, I think, last as long as my frail life, and of which the benefit is all on my side. He sends me charming letters, verses which are fast ripening into true poetry, excellent books; and this autumn he brought back himself, and came to pay me a visit; and he must come again, for, of all the kindnesses with which he loads me, I like his company the best."—Miss MITCHELL, in her Literary Recollections.

Fiennes, Nathaniel, 1608-1669, second son of Lord Say and Sele, educated at Oxford, and Lord Privy Seal under Oliver Cromwell, pub. several speeches and political pamphlets, 1640-64. Monarchy the best Gov't, 1660.

"Tho' before he had shew'd himself an antimonarchist, yet then, when he saw what Oliver aimed at [he] became a lover of kingship and monarchy, purposely to gain honour and riches for the establishing a family which he and the rest of the godly party aimed at."—Athen. Oxon.

Not all, Anthony; be a little more charitable. Fiennes was for some time colonel of horses under the Earl of Essex.

"If he had not incumbered himself with command in the army, to which men thought his nature not so well disposed, he had been second to none in those councils after Mr. Hampden's death."—LORD CLARENDON.

Walker ascribes to Fiennes a historical tract called Anglia Rediviva, pub. under the name of Sprigge.

Fiennes, William, Lord Say and Sele, 1582-1662, father of the preceding, educated at Oxford, was "very active" with Hampden and Pym, yet was made Lord Privy Seal and Lord Chamberlain at the Restoration. He wrote some political tracts, and some treatises against the Quakers. The Scots Design Discovered, 1653, 4to, has been ascribed both to him and his son Nathaniel. Wood speaks of the honours bestowed upon him by Charles II. with great indignation:

"While others that suffered in estate and body, and had been reduced to a bit of bread for his maj. cause, had then little or nothing given to relieve them; for which they were to thank a hungry and great officer, [Lord Clarendon, COLA.] who, to fill his own coffers, was the occasion of the ruin of many."—Athen. Oxon.

"He was a person of great parts, wisdom, and integrity."—WHITELOCKE.

"A man of a close and reserved nature, of great parts, and of the highest ambition."—LORD CLARENDON. See Athen. Oxon.; Park's R. and N. Authors.

Fierburtus, Nic. See FITZHERBERT.

Fife, Lord. A Catalogue of Lord Fife's Coins and Medals, 1796, 4to.

Figges, James. The Excise Officer's Vade Mecum, Lon., 1781, 12mo.

Filding, Ford. Trans. of Dan Tonnassius's Exercise of the Faithful Soule, &c., Lon., 1683, 8vo.

Filewood, F. R. Argts. and Proofs of the Excellency of the Liturgy of the Ch. of Eng., Lon., 1792, 12mo.

Filgate, Fitzherbert. Thorough Draining, 1848, 18mo.

"The author writes very soundly and practically."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Filipowski, H. E. A Table of Anti-Logarithms, 2d ed., Lon., 1861, 8vo.

"All that could be wished in extent, in structure, and in typography. For its extent it is unique among modern tables."—PROF. AUG. DE MOIRAS.

Filkes, John. Sermon, Lon., 1713, 8vo; do., 1714, 8vo.

Filkes, John. Sermon, &c., 1802, '04, 8vo.

Fills, Robert. Theolog. treatises and devotional works, trans. from the French, Lon., 1562-90, &c.

Filmer, Edward. French Court Ayres, 1629.

Filmer, Edward, D.C.L., educated at All-Souls' College, Oxf., disgraced himself by defending the English stage against Jeremy Collier, in A Defence of Plays, Lon., 1707, 8vo. He also pub. The Unnatural Brother, a Trag., Lon., 1697, 4to.

"It bears strong testimony to the understanding and abilities of the author."—BIOG. DRAMAT.

Filmer, Sir Robert, d. 1647, a native of Kent, father of the preceding, educated at Trin. Coll., Camb., wrote a number of political treatises in favour of arbitrary power in the monarch, among which are, 1. The Anarchy of a Mixed and Limited Monarchy, 1646, '48, '79. 2. Necessity of the absolute Power of all Kings, and in particular of the King of England, 1648, '80. 3. Original of Gov't; against Milton, Hobbes, Grotius, Hutton, &c., 1652, 4to. 4. Quæstio Quodlibetica; or, a Discourse whether it may be lawful to take use for Money, 1653, '78, 8vo. 5. Freeholder's Grand Inquest, touching the King and his Parl.; written by Sir Richard Hobhouse, 1679, 8vo. 6. Patriarchia; or, The Natural Power of the Kings of England asserted.

"In which he endeavours to prove, that all government was monarchical at first, and that all legal titles to govern are originally derived from the hands of families, or from such upon whom their right was transferred, either by concession or failure of the line."

"His arguments are singularly insufficient; he quotes nothing but a few irrelevant texts from Genesis; he seems not to have known at all the strength, whatever it may be, of his own case, and it is hardly possible to find a more trifling and feeble work. It had however the advantage of opportunity to be received by a party with approbation."—HALLAM'S INTRO. TO LIT. OF EUROPE.

This work has elicited able confutations, the best known of which will be found in Locke's Treatises on Civil Government. 7. Political Discourses, 1680, 8vo. 8. Defence against Algernon Sidney's Paper.

"Sir Robert Filmer of Kent was intimately acquainted with Camden, who told him he was not suffered to print many things in his Elizabeth, which he sent over to his Correspondent Thuanus, who printed it all faithfully in his annals without altering a word."

Fillmore, Augustus D., b. 1823, in Ohio. 1. Universal Musician. 2. Christian Psalmist. 3. Tree of Temperance and its Fruits, &c.

Filson, John. Topog. Description of the West Territory of N. America, 1793, 8vo. In association with George Inlay. 2. The Discovery, Settlement, and present State of Kentucky, Wilmington, 1784, 8vo; Lon., 1793, 8vo. In French, Paris, 1785.

"This account bears every mark of authenticity. It was drawn up from personal notice or immediate information, and is attested by the signatures of three respectable inhabitants of the country. The author is a believer in the settlement of a Welsh colony in this country by Madoc, in 1170."—RICH'S BIBL. AMER. NOVA.

Finch, Anne, d. 1720, Countess of Winchelsea, was the daughter of Sir William Kingsmill, of Sidmonton, Southampton, and wife of Henage, Earl of Winchelsea.

Miscellaneous Poems, on several occasions, Lon., 1731, 8vo. Among the pieces is a tragedy called Aristomines. Her best-known poem is The Atheist and the Acorn. Pope addressed some verses to her, which elicited an "elegant replication," printed in Cibber's Lives, and prefixed to an old edit. of his works. Her poem upon the Spleen, pub. in Gildon's Miscellany, 1701, 8vo, was, with several other of her pieces, inserted by Dr. Birch in the General Biographical Dictionary, by permission of the Countess of Hertford, who owned the originals.

"It is remarkable that, excepting a passage or two in the Windsor Forest of Pope, and some delightful pictures in the poems of Lady Winchelsea, the poetry of the period intervening between the publication of the Paradise Lost and the Seasons does not contain a single new image of external nature."—WORDSWORTH.

The extravagance of this assertion appears to us to be manifest. Had Mr. Wordsworth perused and remembered all the poetry between Paradise Lost and The Seasons?

Finch, B. Sonnets and other Poems, 1805, 8vo.

Finch, Charles, Earl of Nottingham. His Royal Entertainment when Ambassador to the King of Spain, 1605, 4to.

Finch, Daniel, second Earl of Nottingham, 1647-1729-30, was educated at Christ Church, Oxf., filled several important political posts. 1. Answer to Whiston's Letter to him concerning the Eternity of the Son of God and of the Holy Ghost, Lon., 1721, 8vo; 3 edits. in the same year.

For this work he was thanked by the University of Oxford. 2. Letter to Dr. Waterland, printed at the end of Dr. Newton's Treatise on Pluralities. Observations upon the State of the Nation in January, 1712-13, has been ascribed to him. Horace Walpole states that he was assured it was not his composition.

Finch, Edward, Vicar of Christ's Church, London, brother of Sir Henage Finch, first Earl of Nottingham, was ejected from his parish by the parliamentary inquirers. Answer to the Articles preferred against him, 1641, 4to. The charges exhibited against him were pub. in the same year, 4to.

Finch, George. Sketch of the Romish Controversy, Lon., 1831-36, 2 vols. 8vo. Reprinted, 1850, 2 vols. 8vo.

"A valuable collection of documents extracted from various sources."—BICKERSTEDT'S C. S.

Finch, Henage, first Earl of Nottingham, 1631-1682, was a native of Kent, and educated at Oxford; Attorney-General, 1670; Lord Keeper about 1673; Lord High-Chancellor, 1675. A number of his parliamentary and judicial speeches were pub., 1660-1791. He left Chancery Reports, MS. in folio, and notes on Coke's Institutes. He is highly commended by Bishop Burnet.

"He was a person of the greatest abilities and most uncorrupted integrity; a thorough master and zealous defender of the laws and constitution of his country."—SIR WM. BLACKSTONE.

See Athen. Oxon.; Collins's Peerage; Park's Walpole's R. and N. Authors.

Finch, Henage, second Earl of Winchelsea, d. 1689, was English ambassador to Turkey. 1. Narrative of the success of his Embassy to Turkey, Lon., 1661. 2. A Relation of the late prodigious Earthquake and Eruption of Mount Etna, 1669, fol. This eruption was witnessed by his lordship on his return from Constantinople.

Finch, Sir Henry, d. 1625, of the same family as the Lord Chancellor, was educated at Oxford, and became an eminent lawyer. 1. Nomotechnia; cest a Scavoit, un Description del Commun Lays d'Angleterre, &c., Lon., 1613, fol. Trans. by the author into English under the title Of Law, or a Discourse thereof, 1627, '36, '61, '78, 8vo. New ed., with Notes and References by Dunby Pickering, 1759, 8vo. Another trans., anon., 1759, 8vo. Finch's Law was the principal guide of law students until the publication of Blackstone's Commentaries. The best portions of Finch are incorporated into the latter work.

"Before we attempt the perusal of our ancient law writers, it will be highly convenient to have a general idea of the common law itself, the chief subject of all their tracts, and this perhaps cannot be had more readily than from that methodical system which is well known by the name of Finch's Law. . . . It is still in good credit and repute. Out of it is extracted, or stolen, as other small treatises, which is called Summary of the Common Law of England."—BISHOP NICOLSON'S Eng. Hist. Lib., 179.

The Summary noticed by the bishop was pub. in 1654, 12mo. 2. On the Calling of the Jews.

Finch, Hon. Henry, Dean of York. Sermon, 1712, 4to.

Finch, John. 1. Travels in the U. States and Canada, Lon., 8vo.

"Mr. F.'s observations are marked by good sense, impartiality, and good feeling."—Lon. Monthly Rev.

2. The Natural Boundaries of Empire, 1844, sp. 8vo.

"We can strongly recommend the work, both for its usefulness, and the exact and deep research of its most intelligent author."—Bell's Messenger.

Finch, John Lord. Letters, &c., 1640-41.

Finch, Martin. 1. Animad. upon Sir Henry Vane's Retired Man's Meditations, Lon., 1656, 12mo. 2. Answer to Mr. Thomas Grantham's Dialogue between the Baptist and the Presbyt., 1691, 8vo.

Finch, R. Tracts containing a Defence of the Doctrines of Regeneration. Advice to Y. Clergymen. Thoughts on the Sovereignty of God, &c., 1793, 8vo.

"They are really valuable tracts, though some of them are expressed occasionally in too much severity of language. In this their collected form, with real name of the author prefixed, I never saw another copy."—MS. Note by Rev. P. Hall.

We presume this R. Finch to be Robert Poole Finch, D.D., but may be mistaken.

Finch, Richard. 1. War, Nothing, 1747. 2. Exam. of Cudworth's Thoughts on Election, &c., Lon., 1755.

Finch, Robert, 1783-1830, an antiquary, collected a valuable library and collection of antiquities, pictures, &c., which he bequeathed to the Ashmolean Museum at Oxford. The Crown of Pure Gold, and Protestantism our surest Bulwark; 2o Serms., 1809.

Finch, Robert Poole, D.D. Occasional Serms., 1746-1798. Consid. upon Judicial Oaths, 1788, 8vo. See FINCH, R.

Finch, Rev. Thomas. 1. Early Wisdom, Lon., 1794, 2 vols. 12mo. 2. To Sailors, 1797, 8vo. 3. To the Poor, Norw., 8vo.

Finch, Thomas. Precedents in Chancery, 1689-1722, Lon., 1747, fol.; 2d ed., by Thomas Finch, Lon., 1786, 8vo. Lord Hardwicke states that the notes to cases to 1708 were taken by Mr. Pooley, the remainder by Mr. Robins.

"The cases are briefly reported, but are of respectable authority." See Prof. 18 Viner's Abridg.; 1 Kent's Com., 492; Martin's Leg. Bibl., 586.

Finch, Thomas. 1. Essays on Man, Lon., 1811, 12mo. 2. On Political Philos., 1812, 8vo. 3. Social Virtues; a Sermon, 1812, 8vo. 4. Scriptural Christianity, 1812, 8vo. 5. Christian Principles; a Sermon, Lynn, 1815, 8vo.

Finch, Wm. 1. Masonic Treatise. 2. Masonic Plates. Finch, Wm., D.D., Prob. of Cant. Serms., 1704, 4to.

Finch, Wm., D.D. 1. The Objec. of Infidel Historians, &c. agst. Christianity; in 8 serms. at the Bampton Lecture, 1797, and another sermon, 1797, 8vo. 2. Sermon, 1798, 8vo.

Fincher, Joseph. 1. Interpositions of Divine Providence, Lon., 12mo. 2. Achievements of Prayer, 2d ed., 1828, 12mo.

Finden, W. and E. The splendid publications of these gentlemen—The Royal Gallery of British Art, Portraits of Female Aristocracy, Tableaux, Ports and Harbours of Great Britain, Landscape Illustrations of the Bible, &c.—are well known and justly valued by the public in and out of England.

Findlater, Rev. Charles, minister of Newlands, Peebles. Genl. Survey of the Agricult. of the County of Peebles, Edin., 1802, 8vo.

"The subject matter is well arranged and very judiciously related. The notes and appendix are very valuable on the social policy of the district and its regulations; the report has always been esteemed."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Findlay, A. G. 1. Modern Atlas, Lon., 1843, r. 8vo. 2. Outline Maps, 1843, r. 4to. 3. Classical Atlas of Ancient Geography, 1847, r. 8vo, and r. 4to, N. York, 1849, 8vo.

"This atlas will be found to answer all the purposes of the student. It is undoubtedly the best collection of maps for its size that has hitherto appeared, and the interesting information contained in the introduction renders the work doubly valuable."—CHARLES ANTHON, LL.D., Columbia College.

4. School Classical Atlas, imp. 8vo. 5. School Atlas of Modern Geography, 1848, 4to.

The value of these atlases is well known, and they are beautifully gotten up.

"The artistic portion of these Atlases cannot be surpassed."—Church and State Gazette.

6. Directory for the Navigation of the Pacific Ocean, 1851, 2 vols. r. 8vo. 7. Sailing Directory for the East Coast of England and Scotland, 1852, 8vo. 8. Comparative Atlas of Ancient and Modern Geography, 1853, imp. 4to.

Findlay, J. Four serms., by J. F., J. Tozer, J. Moody, and G. C. Broadbelt, Lon., 1799, 8vo.

Findlay, John K., son of Gov. Findlay of Pennsylvania. Archbold's (J. F.) Law of Nisi Prius; 3d Amer. ed., enlarged and improved, by J. K. F., Phila., 1852, 2 vols. 8vo. The editor's Introduction and additions to the body of the work greatly increase the value of the original, which is perhaps the best treatise upon the subject. See ARCHBOLD, J. F.; STEPHENS, ARCHIBALD JOHN.

Findlay, Robert, 1721-1814, a Scotch divine, was educated at the University of Glasgow and at Leyden; one of the ministers of Glasgow, 1756; Prof. of Divinity in that University, 1782. 1. Two Letters to Dr. Kennicott, Lon., 1762, 8vo. Anon. 2. Psalmody, Glasg., 1763, 8vo. Anon. 3. Vindication of the sacred Books and of Josephus from Voltaire, 1770, 8vo.

"This is a serious and solid refutation of many of M. de Voltaire's most formidable objections to the sacred writings."—REUBEN WATSON.

4. Letter to Dr. Jebb, 1778, 8vo. Anon. 5. Remarks on Lindsey's Dissert. on Praying to Christ, 1781, 8vo.

"These tracts contain important observations on some passages of Scripture in that department of the Socinian controversy."—ORME'S BIBL. BIB.

6. The Divine Inspiration of the Scriptures of the Old Test. asserted by St. Paul, 2 Tim. iii. 16; and Dr. Geddes's Reasons against the Tenor of his Words examined, 1804, 8vo.

"The reply to Dr. Geddes is a most satisfactory one, and both vindicates the common reading of 2 Tim. iii. 16, and supports the generally received views of inspiration."—ORME'S BIBL. BIB.

Findley, Wm., d. 1821, a member of the U. States Congress, 1812, a native of Ireland, was a zealous supporter of the American Revolution. 1. Review of the Funding System, 1794. 2. Hist. of the Insurrection of the 4 western counties of Penn., &c., Phila., 1796. 3. Observ. on the two Sons of Oil, vindic. religious liberty agst. Rev. Samuel B. Wylie.

Finegan, J. T. An Attempt to illustrate a few Passages in Shakespeare's Works, Bath, 1802, 8vo, with quotations from "Pierce Plowman's Vision," respecting the antiquity of which the author dissents from Warton's opinion.

Finetti, Sir John, Knt., 1671-1646, a native of Souton, Kent. 1. Finetti Philoxemis, rel. to Forren Ambassadors in Eng., Lon., 1656, 8vo; 1756, 12mo. Poeth.; pub. by James Howell. A curious work. See an analysis in Oldys's Brit. Lib., 163-8. 2. On Estates; from the French of R. de Lusing, 1606.

"He was bred up in the court, where, by his wit, mirth, and uncommon skill in composing songs, he very much pleased James I."

Finglass, Esther. The Recluse; or, History of Lady Gertrude Lesly, Lon., 1790, 2 vols. 12mo.

Finglass, John, D.D., Prob. of St. Andrew's, Dublin. Serms., 1695, 4to.

Finlason, W. 1. Leading Cases in Pleading and Parties to Action, with Notes, Lon., 1847, r. 8vo; Harrisburg, 1847, 8vo.

"The Notes themselves are learned, and, we may add, elaborate Treatises upon the matters to which they relate."—London Law Mag.

"A valuable addition to the library of the professional man."—Penn. Law Jour.

2. Finlason, W., and Morris R., Common Law Procedure Act, 1852; with Notes, Lon., 1852, 12mo.

Finlay, George. 1. Greece under the Romans, A.C. 146-A.D. 717, Lon., 1843, 8vo; 2d ed., 1857, 8vo.

"His work is therefore learned and profound. It throws a flood of light upon an important though obscure portion of Grecian history. . . . In the essential requisites of fidelity, accuracy, and learning, Mr. Finlay bears a favourable comparison with any historical writer of our day."—North Amer. Rev.

"The History of Greece under the Romans has been ably written by Mr. Finlay."—Lon. Quar. Rev.

2. The Hist. of Greece from its Conquest by the Crusaders to its Conquest by the Turks, and of the Empire of Trebizond, 1204-1461, 1851, 8vo.

3. Hist. of the Byzantine Empire, 716-1057, 1853, 8vo.

4. Hist. of the Byzantine and Greek Empires, 1057-1453, 1854, 8vo.

"At a time when so much attention is being devoted to the modern history of the Greek race, and to the constitution and history of the Greek Church, and when even our scholars are catching the enthusiasm, and insisting on the necessity of studying the modern Greek language and literature, Mr. Finlay's solid and careful works will be welcomed by all who read to be informed."—Lon. Athenaeum.

Finlay, John, 1782-1810, a native of Glasgow, and educated at the University of that city, was a poet of some repute. 1. Wallace; or, The Vale of Ellerslie; with other Poems, Glasg., 1802, 12mo; 1840, 8vo. 2. Scottish Hist. and Romantic Ballads; chiefly ancient, Edin., 1808, 2 vols. 8vo. 3. Life of Cervantes.

"His chief poem, 'Wallace; or, The Vale of Ellerslie,' which was written at the age of nineteen, is doubtless an imperfect composition; but it displays a wonderful power of verification, and contains many splendid descriptions of external nature. It possesses both the merits and defects which we look for in the early compositions of true genius. . . . The collection of 'Historical and Romantic Ballads' entitles the name of Finlay to a place among Scottish antiquaries, and to follow those of Walter Scott and Robert Jamieson."—Blackwood's Mag., ii. 186, q. v. for a biographical sketch and specimen of Finlay's poetry.

Finlay, John. 1. Churchwardens, &c. in Ireland, Dubl., 8vo. 2. Landlord and Tenant in do., 8vo. 3. Law of Tithe in do., 8vo. 4. Laws of Game, &c., 8vo. 5. Law of Renewals, 1823, 8vo. 6. Digested Index to all the Irish Rep. Cases in Law and Equity, 1830, 8vo.

Finlayson, George, surgeon and naturalist to Mr. Crawford's Mission to Siam and Hué, 1821, '22. An Account of the Mission from the Journal of the late G. F., with a Memoir of the Author, by Sir Thomas Stamford Raffles, Bart.

"We are satisfied of the accuracy with which he has recorded the transactions of this abortive mission."—Lon. Quar. Rev., xxxiii. 104-133, q. v. for an interesting account of this unsuccessful expedition.

Finlayson, James, D.D., the colleague of Dr. Blair. 1. Serms., by Dr. Blair, with his Life. 2. Serms., with Life and Character of the Author, Lon., 1809, 8vo.

"In originality of thought and cogency of reasoning, we think they will be found even superior to those of Blair."—British Critic.

Finlayson, John. Admonition to all people, 1797, 8vo.

Finlayson, John, 1780-1826, a native of the county of Ayr, an eminent agriculturist. British Farmer and Ploughman's Guide, Glasg., 1822, 8vo; 2d ed., 1829.

"A very useful and interesting work."—Brit. Farmer's Chron., Feb. 25, 1825.

"With him every thing is done on principle."—Brit. Farmer's Mag., May, 1827.

Mr. F. made many improvements in agricultural implements, &c. See an interesting notice of him in Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Finlayson, Joseph Andrews. Sermon

Finley, Robert, D.D., 1772-1817, a native of Princeton, N. Jersey, elected President of the University of Georgia, 1817, may be considered as the father of the American Colonization Society. He pub. several serms. and some papers on Colonisation to Africa.

Finley, Samuel, D.D., 1715-1766, a native of Armagh, Ireland, emigrated to Philadelphia in 1734, elected President of the College of N. Jersey in 1761. He pub. several serms. and theolog. treatises, 1741-57, and edited the serms. of his predecessor, President Davies.

Finn, Henry J., 1782-1840, a native of the city of New York, after devoting two years to the study of the law, abandoned Coke and Blackstone for the stage, and made his first appearance at the Haymarket Theatre, London. In 1811 he returned to America, and obtained great reputation as a comic actor. He perished in the conflagration of the steamboat Lexington, January 13, 1840. He pub. a Comic Annual, contributed to several periodicals, wrote a drama entitled Montgomery, or the Falls of Montmorenci, which was acted and pub., and left a MS. tragedy, specimens of which appeared in the New York Mirror. The bills of his benefit nights were "Usually made up of the most extraordinary and inconceivable puns, for which his own name furnished prolific materials."—Life of Finn by Apes Sargent, in Griswold's Biographical Annual, New York, 1841, 12mo.

Finn, James. 1. Sephardim; or, The Hist. of the Jews in Spain and Portugal, 1841, p. 8vo.

"Of all the books about the Jews (and truly their name is legion) which the modern press pours out on the world, Sephardim is the most learned, the most accurate, the most romantic, and the most instructive."—Ch. of Eng. Quar. Rev.

2. Hist. of the Jews in China, Lon., 1843, 12mo.

Finnelly, W. 1. Elections in Eng., Scot., and Ire., Lon., 1830, 12mo. 2. Reform Act, Dublin, 1832, 8vo. 3. Reports: see CLARK, CHARLES.

Finnerty, Peter. Burdett's Speeches, 1804. His Case, 1811.

Finney, Charles G., Pres. of Oberlin Coll., Ohio, was born in Litchfield co., Conn., in 1792. 1. Guide to the Saviour, Oberlin, 18mo. 2. Lectures to Professing Christians, 3d ed., Lon., 1839, 12mo. 3. Lectures on Revivals of Religion, 13th ed., with Notes and Memoir, 1840, 8vo. In America, six editions of 2000 copies each were sold, and the sale still continues.

"Some useful thoughts."—BICKERSTETH.

4. Serms. on Important Subjects, 1839, 12mo. 5. Skeletons of a Course of Theolog. Lectures, 1841, 8vo. 6. Lectures on Systematic Theology. New ed., with an Introduction by the Rev. George Redford, D.D. New ed., 1851, 8vo.

"Eminently deserving the attention and examination of British Theologians, and a valuable and seasonable contribution to Theological Science."—REV. GEO. REDFORD, D.D.

The Lectures to Professing Christians on Revivals of Religion, and Serms. on Important Subjects, have been pub. together in London, in 10 parts, 8vo.

"I have no hesitation in ranking the Lectures on Revivals, and the work now before me, entitled Lectures to Professing Christians, among the best works that of late years have been presented to the world. They are both of them the productions of a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, whose whole soul appears to be taken up with zeal for the cause of religion and the salvation of souls."—REV. J. BARRETT.

A review by Prof. Hodge of Mr. F.'s theological views, will be found in the Princeton Biblical Repository for June, 1847, and a biographical sketch of the author (Mr. F.) in Bartlett's Modern Agitators, N. York, 1855, 12mo.

Finney, John, D.D. Serms., 1746, 4to.

Fiott, John. East India Stock, 1791, '92, '93.

Firebrace, John. Serms., 1767, 8vo.

Firmin, Giles, 1617-1697, a Nonconformist divine, a native of Suffolk, emigrated to New England and practised physic; returned and became minister of Stratford, Essex; ejected, 1662. He pub. several serms. and theolog. treatises, 1652-93, the best-known of which is The Real Christian, 1670, 4to.

Firmin, Thomas, 1632-1697, a native of Ipswich, eminent for his deeds of charity, was a Socinian. He was an intimate friend of Archbishop Tillotson, and generally esteemed. Some Proposals for the Employing the Poor, especially in and about the City of London; and for the Prevention of Begging, Lon., 1678, 4to.

"The author's views were sufficiently benevolent, but not very enlarged."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Firth, Wm. A Saint's Monument; a Serms., 1662, 12mo.

Firth, Wm. 1. Case of Lord Thanet, Lon., 1799, 8vo. 2. Letter to Bp. Bathurst, 1813, 8vo. 3. Recent State Trials, 1818, 8vo.

Fisgrave, Anthony, LL.D. Midas; or a Serious Inquiry into Taste and Genius, Lon., 1806, 8vo.

Fish, Henry, of Middleton. Serms., 1737, 8vo.

Fish, Henry Clay, b. 1820, in Halifax, Vermont, Pastor of the First Baptist Church, Newark, N.J. 1. Primitive Piety Revived: a Prize Essay, Boston, 1855, 12mo. 20,000 sold in two years. 2. History and Repository of Pulpit-Eloquence, N.Y., 1856, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Every minister needs these volumes as illustrating the rules of sacred rhetoric and furnishing rich nutriment to his mind and heart."—Bibliotheca Sacra.

3. Pulpit-Eloquence of the XIX. Century, 1857, 8vo.

4. Select Disc. from the German and French, 1858, 12mo.

Fish, Simon, d. about 1531, a native of Kent, educated at Oxford, was a zealous promoter of the English Reformation. 1. The Supplication for the Beggars, 1526, 8vo. This satire upon the Popish clergy was answered by Sir Thomas More in his Supplication of Souls in Purgatory. 2. The Sum of the Scriptures; trans. from the Dutch, 1530. 3. The Boke of Merchants. 4. The Spiritual Nocegray.

"And thus good sele had ye wote well Symon Fische had when he made the Supplicacyon of beggers. But God gave him suche grace afterwards yt he was sory for that good sele and repented hymself, and came into the church agayne, and forsook and forswore all the whole hill of these heresies, out of which the mountain of that same good sele sprang."—Sir Thomas More's Works, ed. fol., Lon., 1567, p. 681, col. 1. See Athen. Oxon., ed. Bliss. t. 6.

Fishacre, or Fiszacre, Richard, d. 1248, a Dominican, studied at Oxford, and Leland thinks, also at Paris, with Robert Bacon. Leland gives a list of theolog. treatises by Fishacre.

Fisher. School for Ingratitude; a Com., 1748, 8vo.

Fisher's Admirable Hist. Illustrations of the Bible, the Waverley Novels, the Drawing Room, and Juvenile Scrap Books, &c., are deservedly admired by all who can appreciate artistic excellence.

Fisher, Admiral, R.N. 1. The Petrel; a Tale of the Sea, Lon., 1850, 3 vols. p. 8vo.

2. Ralph Rutherford; a Nautical Romance, 1851, 3 vols. p. 8vo.

"Admiral Fisher's interesting nautical tale of Ralph Rutherford is a worthy member of the Marryat class, full of animated scenes, serious and droll, with the halo of a love-story thrown around it."—United Service Gazette.

Fisher, A. New Grammar, 1753, 8vo. Improved by J. Wilson, 1792, 8vo. Enlarged by a relative, 1801, 8vo.

Fisher, Alexander. Journal of a Voyage of Discovery to the Arctic Regions, Lon., 1821, 8vo.

Fisher, Alexander M., 1794-1822, Prof. of Mathematics in Yale College, a native of Franklin, Mass., was wrecked on the coast of Ireland, 1822, and lost. Papers on Mathematics and Natural Philos. in Silliman's Journal.

Fisher, Ambrose. Defence of the Liturgy of the Ch. of England, Lon., 1630, 4to.

Fisher, Caroline M. See SAWYER.

Fisher, Daniel, D.D. Serms., Lon., 1784, 8vo.

Fisher, Edward, a Calvinistic divine, educated at Oxford. 1. Appeal to thy Conscience, Oxf., 1644, 4to.

2. Feast of Feasts, 1644, 4to. Anon. 3. The Marrow of Modern Divinity, 1644, 8vo. By Rev. J. Hogg, Edin., 1720, 8vo. With Notes by Thos. Boston, 1722-26, 2 vols. 8vo.

The republication of this work excited a warm controversy in the Church of Scotland. 4. A Christian Caveat to the Old and New Sabbatarians, 1650, '53, 4to. Answered by Dr. Collings and Giles Collier. 5. Answer to 16 Queries. Printed with the Christian Caveat, 1655.

"He became a noted person among the learned for his great reading in ecclesiastical history, and in the fathers, and for his admirable skill in the Greek and Hebrew Languages."—Athen. Oxon.

Fisher, George. Educational poems, Lon., 1845, &c.

Fisher, Henry. Discord; an Epic Poem, 1794, 4to.

Fisher, J. B. 1. Pathetic Tales, Poems, &c., 1808, 12mo. 2. Poetical Rhapsodies, 1818, 8vo. 3. The Hermitage, a Poem, 12mo.

Fisher, J. F. Early Poets of Pennsylvania.

Fisher, J. T., Surgeon. Asthma, 6th ed., 1810.

Fisher, James. The Wise Virgin; or a Wonderful Narrative concerning Sarah Hatfield, Lon., 1653, 12mo; 1654, '64.

Fisher, James. Poems, Essays, &c., 1790-1810.

Fisher, James. The Assembly's Shorter Catechism Explained, by J. F., Eb. Brakine, &c., 17th ed., 1813, 12mo.

Fisher, Jasper, D.D. Fulvius Tross, Æneid. 2. The True Trojans, Lon., 1633, 4to. This play is in Dodsley's Coll.

Fisher, John, 1459-1535, a native of Beverley, Yorkshire, was educated at Michael House, now Trinity Coll., Camb., of which he became Fellow, Proctor, and Master. He was chaplain and confessor to Margaret, Countess of Richmond, and was the Margaret Prof. of Divinity, 1502; Bishop of Rochester, 1504. He was a zealous opponent of the Reformation, and could not be persuaded by Henry VIII. to approve of that monarch's divorce from Catherine and marriage to Anne Boleyn. The king had a sharp argument always ready for the obstinate, and this learned and excellent man was murdered—i. e. beheaded—by kingly command, June 22, 1535, which sad act, rightly says Bishop Burnet, "left one of the greatest blots upon this kingdom's proceedings." He pub. some serms. and theolog. treatises, a list of which will be found in the Bibl. Brit., and see Lowndes's Bibl. Man. A collective edit. of his works was pub. at Wurtzburg in 1595, fol. The early edits. of his Treatise conc. the Fruitful Sayings of David, 1508, '09, '25, '29, 4to, are of considerable pecuniary value, and his serms. on the Countess of Richmond and on Henry VII. were sold some years since at an auction in London for £9 9s. each. The Life of Bishop Fisher was pub. by Dr. Bailey in 1655. A new Life, by the Rev. John Lewis, author of the Life of Wickliffe, &c., prepared from the original MS. and prefaced by an Introduction, by T. Hudson Turner, may be shortly expected. Since writing the above this work has been pub., Lon., 1855, 2 vols. 8vo, uniformly printed with the Clarendon Press eds. of the author's other biographical works, Styrye's Lives, &c. Erasmus gives a noble character of this ornament of England:

"Reverendus Episcopus Roffensis, vir non solum mirabili integritate vite, verum etiam alta et recondita doctrina, tum morum quoque incredibili comitate commendatus maxime pariter ac minimis. Aut egregie fallor, aut is vir est unus, cum quo nemo sit hac tempestate conferendus, vel integritate vite, vel eruditione, vel animi magnitudine."

Fisher, John, an English Jesuit, whose true name was Peirroy, was a native of Yorkshire. He became a Jesuit in 1594, and was living in 1641. 1. Treatise of Faith, Lon., 1600. 2. Defence of do., 1612. 3. Challenge to Protestants, 1612. 4. Answer to some points of Controversy. His Conference with Laud was first pub. in 1624, with White's answer to Fisher's reply to K. James I. Laud's Conference with Fisher, 6th ed., will be found in the new ed. of Laud's works, vol. ii., Oxf., 1849. For other controversial tracts in answer to Fisher, see Chalmers's Biog. Dict., and see Dodd's Ch. Hist.

Fisher, John. Serms., 1723, 8vo.

Fisher, John, Vicar of St. Laurence. 15 Serms. on several Subjects, 1741, 8vo.

Fisher, John, Vicar of St. John's in Peterborough. On Perjury; a Sermon, Lon., 1753, 4to.

Fisher, John. The Valley of Llanherne (Cornwall) and other Pieces of Verse, 1801, 12mo.

Fisher, John, 1748-1825, a native of Hampton, educated at Peterhouse, Camb., Bishop of Salisbury, 1807. A Charge, 1805, 4to. Sermon, 1806, 4to. Sermon, 1807, 4to.

Fisher, Jonathan. A Picturesque Tour of Killarney. With 20 Views, Map, &c., Lon., 1791, fol.

Fisher, Joseph. Marriage; a Sermon, 1695, 4to.

Fisher, Rev. Joseph. 1. Remarks rel. to Lindsey's Scrip. Confutation, 1775, 8vo. Priestley's Philos. Necess., 1779, 12mo.

Fisher, Joseph, M.D. Practice of Medicine made Easy, Lon., 1785, 8vo. Coal Works; Trans. R. Irish Acad., v. 266.

Fisher, Miss Kitty. 1. The Juvenile Adventures of, Lon., 1759, 2 vols. 12mo. 2. Her Miscellany, with a Dramatic Sermon by two Methodist Preachers, 1760, 8vo.

Fisher, Myles, d. 1819, aged 71, a lawyer of Philadelphia, a member of the Society of Friends, pub. an answer to Paine's Age of Reason.

"He was a man of science, and an eloquent orator."—Allen's Amer. Biog. Dict.

Fisher, Nathaniel, 1742-1812, Episcopal minister at Salem, Mass., 1781-1812, was a native of Dedham, Mass. Serms., 1818, 8vo.

Fisher, Payne, or, as he styled himself in his Latin pieces, Paganus Piscator, 1616-93, a native of Dorsetshire, was educated at Hart Hall, Oxf., and Magdalen Coll., Camb. He served in the army in the Netherlands, and subsequently in Ireland and England, where he was advanced to the rank of Major. In 1644 he served at the siege of York, and was present at the battle of Marston Moor, which he "celebrated in his first published poem," 1650, 4to. He subsequently joined the Parliamentarians, and became poet-laureate to Cromwell. Wood gives a long list of his pieces, and, of course, speaks of him with undisguised contempt:

"Being destitute of means and money, he retired in private to London, lived there by his wife, favoured by his pen the successful rebellion, and as a true time-server, (incident to most poets,) ingratiated himself so much with the great men then in power, that he did homage to, and became at length poet-laureat (or, as he himself used to say, scribbler) to Oliver, the protector of England, a pretended lover of musicians and poets; but the nigardliness and incompetency of his reward showed that he was a personated act of greatness, and that private Cromwell did govern prince Oliver. After his majesty's restoration he turned about, endeavoured to express the great sufferings that he had endured for his loyalty; but his palpable flatteries of the great men in the interval being notoriously known, he could obtain nothing but what his wits procured, lived always poor, as not knowing the true value of money, and void of a prudential foresight, and running himself much in debt, endured several years imprisonment in the Fleet, and became the object of charity. He had a very good command of the Latin pen; it being, as 'twere, natural to him, and was esteemed by many judicious persons an excellent Latin poet, as many things of that faculty, which he wrote purposely to flatter great persons to obtain rewards, shew."—Athen. Ozon.

A collection of his poems was pub. in 1663, 8vo. His Book of Heraldry was pub. in 1682, and an account of The Tombs, Monuments, &c. in St. Paul's and St. Faith's, in 1684, 4to.

Fisher, Peter. Monies raised in Suffolk, 1648.

Fisher, Philip, D.D., Master of Charterhouse. Sermon on Eccles. ii. 1, Lon., 1811, 4to.

Fisher, R. T. Act rel. to Wills, Lon., 1837, 12mo.

Fisher, Richard Barnard. 1. Copyhold Tenure, Lon., 1794, 8vo; 2d ed., 1803. 2. Sketch of Lisbon, 1811, 12mo. 3. Importance of the Cape of Good Hope, 1814.

Fisher, Robert. Sermon, Prov. xxiii. 23. Tractarianism opposed to Truth, the Safety of the Ch., &c., Lon., 1843, 8vo.

Fisher, Roger. Heart of Oak the British Bulwark, Lon., 1763, 4to. Advocates the propagation of Oak Timber, &c. See EVELYN, JOHN; title Sylva.

Fisher, Samuel, a Quaker. The Testimony of Truth Exalted; consisting of several Treatises, Lon., 1679, fol.

Fisher, Thomas. Warlike Directions; or, the Soldier's Practice, Lon., 1643, 4to.

Fisher, Thomas. 1. Bedfordshire Antiquities, 1836, sm. fol. £8 8s., and r. fol. £10 10s. Nos. 1, 2, 3, had been pub. in 1812, '13, r. 4to. The subjects are for the most part inedited, and consist of Churches, Priors, Castles, Old Houses, Door Ways, Monuments, Brasses, Tombs, Fonts, Crosses, Ancient Sculpture, and Miscellaneous Antiquities. An Index is prefixed, with paginal references to Lyson's History of the County.

2. Warwickshire Antiquities. (First part, 1807-09, fol., 3 pts. not completed; 33 plates.) Edited by John Gough Nichols, 1836, r. fol. £10 10s.

"The ancient fresco paintings are especially curious, as having been executed in England in an age of which, according to the opinion of Walpole in his History of Painting, no specimens of the Art existed. Only 120 copies were printed, and that number cannot now be increased without an enormous expense, as many of the plates have been destroyed."—Lon. Gent. Mag.

Fisher, Thomas. Dial of the Seasons, Phila., 8vo.

Fisher, Wm. Sermon, Lon., 1580, 4to; do. 1592, 8vo.

Fisher, Wm. Sermon, 1716, 8vo.

Fishlake, J. R. 1. Greek Grammar, Lon., 8vo. 2. Cat. of Irreg. Greek Verbs, 2d ed., 1844, 8vo.

"Buttman's Catalogue contains all those prominent irregularities so fully and fundamentally investigated, that I was convinced a translation of them would prove a valuable assistant to every lover and student of Greek literature."—Preface.

3. Lexilogus: Greek Words and Passages in Homer, Hesiod, &c., 3d ed., 1846, 8vo.

"A most able disquisition. It contains a deeper and more critical knowledge of Greek, more extensive research, and more sound judgment, than we ever remember to have seen in any one work before."—Lon. Quarterly Review.

4. Larger Greek Grammar, 3d ed., by Suppl., 1848, 8vo.

Fisk, Prof. Educational works, pub. in Boston, Mass.

Fisk, George. An Analysis of Coke upon Littleton, in a Series of Questions to be ansd. by the Student, Lon., 1824, 8vo.

"This work cannot fail to be inestimable to the student desirous of a thorough knowledge of the first Institute."—Hoffman's Leg. Stu., 230.

Fisk, Pliny, 1792-1825, a native of Massachusetts, a distinguished missionary in the East, who died of a fever at Beyroot, prepared an English and Arabic Dictionary, and pub. several papers in the Missionary Herald. See Alvin Bond's Life of Pliny Fisk, 1828, 12mo.

Fisk, Wilbur, D.D., d. 1839, aged 46, first President of the Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., an eminent Methodist divine, pub. several theolog. and educational works, and a vol. of Travels in Europe, which has had a wide circulation, and been greatly admired. See Life of Dr. Fisk by Prof. Holdich, N. York, 1842, 8vo.

Fiske, Mrs. Records of Fashion, 4to, in Nos.

Fiske, John, 1601-1677, first minister of Wenham and Chelmsford, Mass. The Olive Branch Watered; a Catechism.

Fiske, Jonathan. 1. His Case, Lon., 1781, 8vo.

2. Life and Transactions of Marq. Nicolson, 1786, 8vo.

Fiske, Nathan W., Prof. of Amherst Coll., d. 1847, in Palestine. 1. Manual of Classical Literature, based upon the German work of J. J. Eschenburg, with large addita. and a sup. vol. of plates, Phila., 1836; 4th edit., 1843. The first three parts were pub. separately, under the title of Classical Antiquities, 8vo. 2. Young Peter's Tour around the World, N. York, 18mo. 3. Story of Aleck; or, The Hist. of Pitcairn's Island, Boston, 18mo.

"His talents were, undoubtedly, of a highly respectable order, his modesty remarkable, while the high-toned principles of honour which governed his actions, and the meekness, humility, and other Christian virtues which adorned his character, were such as to endear him to those who were acquainted with him."—EDWARD C. BIDDLE, of Phila.

Fiske, Nathan, D.D., 1733-1799, minister of Brookfield, Mass. Serms., &c., 1775-1801.

Fiske, Oliver, d. 1837, aged 74. Medical Essays; Miscellaneous papers.

Fissen, Major J. P. The Warning: on War, 1806.

Fiston, Wm. Germaine Empire, 1595, 4to.

Fitch, Rev. Elijah, 1745-1788, educated at Yale Coll., was settled at Hopkinton, Mass., where he died in the 17th year of his ministry. Poems: The Beauties of Religion; The Choice; Providence, 1789.

Fitch, J. Receipts for making Wines, Lon., 1815.

Fitch, Jabez, 1672-1746, minister of Portsmouth, N. Hampshire. Serms., 1727-36. He made Collections rel. to N. H., to which Dr. Belknap had access.

Fitch, John, 1743-1798, a native of Windsor, Connecticut, gained more celebrity than profit by his application of "steam power to water craft." His first experiment with a steamboat (the Perseverance) on the Delaware River was made May 1, 1787. See a description of it by Dr. Thornton, (Eminent Mechanics, p. 32,) and a Life of Fitch by Charles Whittlesey, in Sparks's Amer. Biog., Second Series, vi. 81. 1. The Original Steamboat supported, &c., Phila., 1788, 8vo. This is against Rumsey's claim to priority, as asserted in his pamphlet. Joshua Barnes pub. an answer to Fitch, espousing Rumsey's claim, in the same year, 8vo. 2. An Explan. for keeping a Ship's Traverse at Sea by the Columbian Ready Reckoner, Lon., 1798.

"The diagrams and explanations contained in this book of twenty pages show a high mathematical talent, and a gift of simplification and order truly remarkable in a self-taught mind."—Whittlesey's Biog., ubi supra.

In 1858 was pub. Life of John Fitch, the Inventor of the Steamboat, by Thompson Westcott, Phila., 12mo, pp. 415.

"The book will well reward perusal; for many of his personal adventures are stranger than most fiction, while the details with reference to the early history of steam-navigation are copious and bear all the marks of diligent and thorough research."—N. Amer. Rev., July, 1858, 283.

Fittler, James. Scotia Depicta, Lon., 1804, 4to.

Fittou, Wm., M.D. Con. to Trans. Geol. Soc., 1811.

Fitz, Asa. School-Books, pub. in Boston.

Fitz-Albion. His Letters to the Rt. Hon. Wm. Pitt and the Rt. Hon. H. Addington, Lon., 1804, 8vo.

Fitz-Brian, B. The Good Old Cause, 1657, 4to.

Fitzclarence, Lt.-Col., Earl of Munster. Journal of a Route across India, through Egypt, to England, in 1817, '18, 4to; 1819, 4to. Bought up by the noble author. "A lively and interesting narrative."—Lon. Quar. Rev. "Full of various intelligence."—Lon. Lit. Gaz.

Fitzcotton, Henry. New and accurate trans. of the First Book of Homer's Iliad, Dublin, 1749, 8vo.

Fitz-Geoffry, or Fitz-Geoffrey, Charles, 1575-1636, a native of Cornwall, educated at Broadgates Hall, Oxf., became Rector of St. Dominick, in his own county. 1. The Life and Death of Sir Francis Drake; a Poem, Oxf., 1596, 12mo. 2. Affanise sive Epigrammata, Lib. III., and Cenotaphia, Lib. I., 1601, 8vo. He appears, also, to have been the author of a prose tract, entitled, A Curse for Corne-borders, 1631, 4to, and a religious poem called The Blessed Birth-day, 1634, '36, 4to; 1654, am. 8vo. He also pub. some serms., and wrote commendatory lines to several publications. Wood erroneously ascribes to him the collection of poetry entitled, Choycest Flowers, &c., known as England's Parnassus, which belongs to Allot; but, as Dr. Bliss suggests, Fitz-Geoffry may have assisted the former. Fitz-Geoffry was highly esteemed by his contemporaries. In the following lines we have both his mental and physical portrait:

"Blind Poet Homer you doe equalise,
Though he saw more with none, then with most eyes.
Our Geoffrey Chaucer, who wrote quaintly neat,
In verse you match, equal him in conceit:
Featur'd you are like Homer in one eye,
Rightly surnam'd the sonne of Geoffrey."

Hayman's Quodlibets. See Bliss's Wood's Athen. Oxon. "Fitzgeffrey obtained the applauses of many contemporaries for his religious strains, and not without deserving them, since he seems to have performed better than most others what human intellect can never adequately accomplish."—See Athen. Oxon.; Brydges's Phillips's Theatrum Poetarum; Censura Literaria; Brit. Bibliographer.

Fitz-Geoffrey, Henry. Satyres and Epigrams, 1617, '20.

Fitzgerald, Lord. His Letter discovering a Plot to Kill Protestants in Ireland, Lon., 1647, 4to.

Fitzgerald, Edward. The Regent's Feet; a Poem, 1811, 4to.

Fitzgerald, George Robert. 1. Appeal to The Jockey Club, Lon., 1775, 8vo. 2. Reply to T. Walker, 1775, 8vo. 3. Appeals, &c. 4. Doctrine of Indict at Common Law, &c., Dublin, 1782, 8vo. 5. The Riddle, Lon., 1787, 4to.

Fitzgerald, Gerald, D.D., Hebrew Prof. in Dublin University. 1. The Academic Sportsman; a Poem, Dublin, 4to; Lon., 1773. 2. Originality and Permanence of the Biblical Hebrew, Dublin, 1796, 8vo.

"The object of Dr. Fitzgerald, in this volume, is to prove the divine origin of the Hebrew language, and that its letters have undergone no change. . . . There are considerable learning and acuteness discovered in this tract; but several of its positions will not be assented to by scholars."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

3. Poems, 8vo. 4. A Hebrew Grammar for the use of the Students of the Univ. of Dublin, 1799, 8vo.

"A plain, easy, and useful introduction to the Hebrew tongue, in English, for the use of students in our Universities, and particularly in the University of Dublin."—Lon. Monthly Rev.

"The author has pursued an intermediate method between adopting all the Masoretic rites and rejecting them all together, viz., by retaining the vowel points, and such of the accents as are most distinguishable and useful, and omitting all the other accents, (the number of which is considerable,) which he deems wholly unnecessary in the present state of the Hebrew tongue."—Horne's Bibl. Bib.

Fitzgerald, James. Poetical Pastimes, 1811, 8vo.

Fitzgerald, John. Tracts on the Popish Plot, 1681, fol.

Fitzgerald, Keane. Letter to the Directors E. I. Company, Lon., 1777, 8vo. Steam Engine, &c., Phil Trans., 1787-82.

Fitzgerald, Rev. P. The Hist., Topog., and Antiq. of Limerick, &c., by the Rev. P. F. and I. L. McGregg, Dublin, 1826, '27, 2 vols. 8vo.

Fitzgerald, Preston. The Spaniard and Sierrah, and other Poems, 1810, 8vo. Spain Delivered, and other Poems, 1813, 8vo.

Fitzgerald, Samuel, M.D. Con. to Med. Com., 1702.

Fitzgerald, Rev. Wm. Theolog. and other works, 1839-51.

Fitzgerald, Wm. Thomas. Prologues and Epilogues, 1793. Other poetical pieces, 1793-1814.

Fitz-Gibbon, John, Earl of Clare. See CLARE.

Fitzgibbons, John. Cases in K. B., O. P., E. and Ch., 1728-33, Lon., 1732, fol.

"It is of no authority."—Lord HARDWICK. "The cases in this book are very incorrectly reported."—CHAS. BARON PARKER.

The learned Judge excepted certain cases from these censures: see Wallace's Reporters; Marvin's Leg. Bibl.

Fitzhenry, James. Observ. on passages from M. Baretti's Jour. from London to Genoa, Lon., 1770, 8vo.

Fitzherbert, Sir Anthony, d. 1538, an eminent lawyer, a native of Norbury, Devonshire, was educated at Oxford; Justice of the Court of C. Pleas, 1523. 1. Le Grande Abridgement, Lon., 1514, '16, '65, '77, fol. This valuable work contains a digest of all the cases in the Year Books down to the 21 Hen. VII., "painfully and elaborately collected," and Cases from the reigns of Rich. II., Edw. I. and II., Hen. III., and many readings and original authorities. It is most probable that Statham's Abridgement was pub. before Fitzherbert's.

"The character of the Abridgements of Fitzherbert and Brooke [see BROOKE, Sir ROBERT, in this Dictionary] may be summed up in a few words. They are mere indexes, under general heads, of the principal adjudged cases up to their own times, in which the points are accurately stated, but without any attention to order, or any attempt at classification. As repositories of the old law, they now maintain a very considerable value, and may be consulted with advantage. Whoever examines them (for a thorough perusal of them will be a mere waste of time) will probably feel inclined, when he can, to ascend to the original sources; but if these should not be within his reach, he may rely with confidence that these learned judges have not indulged themselves in a useless transcription or a loose statement of the law. In our own practice we have frequently found them the safest guides to the old law, and particularly to the contents of the Year Books."—JURIST STORY: N. Amer. Rev., art. Dane's Abridg. of Amer. Law.

See also Marvin's Leg. Bibl. and authorities there referred to. In Fulbeck's Preparative will be found a comparison drawn between the Abridgements of Brooke and Fitzherbert. 2. L'Office et Auctorité de Justices de Peace. Written in French in 1514, trans. into English in 1538; enlarged by Richard Crompton, 1587, 4to. See CROMPTON, RICHARD. Many eda. before and since this date.

New ed., 1794, 2 vols. r. 8vo. The eds. between 1652 and 1718 vary but little. 3. The Boke of Husbandrie, 1533, 4to. Many eds. This is the first work in the English language entirely devoted to agriculture. 4. The Boke of Surveying and Improvements, 1533, 4to; several eds. Respecting these works, see Donaldson's Agricult. Biog. 5. La Nova Natura Brevium, 1534, 8vo. Between this and the New Natura Brevium, 9th ed., so called, with a Comment ascribed to Sir Matthew Hale, twenty imprints appeared. For particulars of eds., &c. of this and Sir Anthony's other works, see Marvin's Leg. Bibl.; Bibl. Brit.; Lowndes's Bibl. Man.

"The Natura Brevium is esteemed an exact work, excellently well penn'd, and hath been much admired by the noted men in the common law."—Athen. Oxon.

"An exact work, exquisitely penned."—LORD COKE.

"He is observed in this book never to cite any authority but where the case is rare and doubtful; following herein the great example of Sir Tho. Littleton in his famous Treatise on Tenures. It was carefully reviewed and corrected by W. Rastal, who added a table and some proper ornaments to what its excellent author seems to have left unfinished."—Bishop Nicolson's Eng. Hist. Lib., 190.

The Boke of Husbandrie has been ascribed to another Anthony Fitzherbert, and also to John Fitzherbert, Sir Anthony's brother, but we think in both cases without sufficient reason. See Biog. Brit.; Athen. Oxon.; Shaw's Staffordshire; Bridgman's Leg. Bibl.

Fitzherbert, E. H. See FALCONER, THOMAS.

Fitzherbert, Nicholas, 1550?–1612, grandson of the preceding, educated at Exeter Coll., Oxf., was a zealous Roman Catholic, and became secretary to Cardinal Alan. 1. Casse Galatese de Bonis Moribus, Rome, 1595. A trans. from the Italian. 2. Oxonienis in Anglia Academicæ Descriptio, 1602, 8vo. 3. De Antiquitate et Continuatione Catholicæ Religionis in Anglia, 1608, '38, 8vo. 4. Vitis Cardinalis Alani Epitome, 1608.

"Accounted eminent for his knowledge in both the laws and in human literature."—Athen. Oxon.

Fitzherbert, Thomas, 1552–1640, cousin of the preceding, and also a zealous Roman Catholic, was educated at Oxford. In 1614 he became a Jesuit at Rome, and was Rector of the English College in that city for 23 years. He pub. a Treatise concerning Policy and Religion, Doway, 1606–10, 4to, and several tracts in defence of his Church, for a list of which see Athen. Oxon.

Fitzherbert, Sir Wm., 1748–1791, of the same family as the preceding, was educated at St. John's Coll., Camb. 1. On the Knights Made in 1778. Ascribed to him. 2. Revenue-Laws. 3. Maxims.

Fitzhugh, George. Sociology for the South; or, The Failure of Free Society, Richmond, 1855, 12mo.

Fitzhugh, Wm. Henry, 1792–1830, V. Pres. of Amer. Colonization Society. 1. Essays: Opinions in favour of the Amer. Col. Soc., pub. in Richmond Inquirer, 1826. 2. Speech at 9th Anniversary Amer. Col. Soc. 3. Review of Taswell's Report in Afric. Repos., 1828.

Fitz-James, James, Duke of Berwick. See BURWICK.

Fitz-James, Oswald. The Wandsworth Epistle. In Metre, Lon., 1762, 4to.

Fitz-John, Matilda. Joan!!! a Nov., 1796, 4 vols. Fitzosborne, Sir Thomas, &c. Melmoth, Wm., 9. 2.

Fitzpatrick, H. Penal Laws affecting R. Catholics; pub. by order of the Catholic Committee, Dubl., 1812, 8vo.

Fitzpatrick, Sir Jeremiah. Slave Trade, 1797.

Fitzpatrick, John, M.D. Con. to Med. Com., 1784.

Fitzpatrick, R. W. Railway Rights, Lon., 1846, 8vo.

Fitzsimon, Henry, 1609–1644, a native of Dublin, educated at Oxford, was a zealous Jesuit. He wrote a Justification of the Mass, 1611, 4to, a Cat. of the Irish Saints, 1621, 8vo, and some other theolog. treatises, in defence of his faith. See Athen. Oxon.

"The most noted Jesuit of his time."—Ubi supra.

Fitzsmith, Richard. Ephemeris for 1654, 12mo.

Fitzroy, Capt. Robert. See DARWIN, CHARLES.

Fitzstephen, Wm., d. about 1191, an English historian, was a monk of Canterbury, and a devoted adherent of Archbishop Becket, whose Life he compiled in Latin under the title of The Life and Passion of Archbishop Becket, written, according to Dr. Pegge, between 1170 and 1182. To this work is prefixed a description of the city of London, the earliest we have after Domesday Book, a trans. of which was pub. by Stowe in his Survey of London. This edition being obsolete, and, indeed, incorrect, Dr. Pegge pub. in 1772, 4to, an edit. with the Latin and English, a Commentary, a Dissert. on the Author, and various Readings and Annotations.

"We may challenge any nation in Europe to produce an account of its capital, or any account of its great cities, at so remote a period as the twelfth century."—Dr. PEGGE.

Fitzwaters, Col. Petition to H. Com., 1642, 4to.

Fitzwilliam, Charles William, Earl, in conjunction with Sir Richard Bourke, edited the Correspondence of Edmund Burke, 1774–97, Lon., 1844, 4 vols. 8vo. Reprinted in the new ed. of Burke's Works and Corresp., 1852, 8 vols. 8vo.

Fitzwilliam, G. W. The Pleasures of Love, from the Asiatic and European Languages, 1806; 2d ed., improved.

"His original poems are few in number, but they display both taste and genius."—Anti-Jacobin Rev., 1806.

Fitzwilliam, John, D.D., Canon of Windsor. Serm., Lon., 1683, 4to. Do., 1686, 12mo.

Fitzwilliam, William Wentworth, Earl, 1748–1833, Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, 1794–95. Two Letters to the Earl of Carlisle, explaining the Causes of his Recall from Ireland, 1795, 8vo.

Fizerburtus, Nic. See FITZHERBERT.

Fizes, M. Suppuration, Lon., 1759, 8vo.

Flagg, Edmund, born in Wicasset, Maine, in 1815; graduated at Bowdoin Coll., 1835; admitted to the bar, 1837; edited the St. Louis Daily Commercial Bulletin, 1838; associate editor with George D. Prentice of the Louisville Literary News-Letter, 1838–39; practised law in Vicksburg, Miss., with the Hon. Sargent S. Prentiss, 1840, &c.; conductor of the Gazette, pub. at Marietta, Ohio, 1842; conducted the St. Louis Evening Gazette, 1844–45; subsequently Reporter of the Courts of St. Louis county; secretary to the Hon. Edward A. Hannegan, American Minister to Berlin, 1848; subsequently practised law at St. Louis; U. States Consul for the Port of Venice, 1850; subsequently conductor of a democratic newspaper at St. Louis.

In 1836 Mr. Flagg wrote Sketches of a Traveller, for the Louisville Journal; these papers were afterwards pub. in a work entitled The Far West, N. York, 1838, 2 vols. His other works are—Carrero, or the Prime Minister: a Novel; François de Valois: a Novel; The Howard Queen: a Novel; Blanche of Artois: a Novel; several other novels, and some dramas; Venice, The City of the Sea, 1797–1849, N. York, 1853, 2 vols. 12mo. A third vol., to be entitled North Italy since 1849, will shortly be given to the world. See Duyckinck's Cyc. of Amer. Lit. Those who would have a vivid conception of Venice in her latter days must not fail to read Mr. Flagg's City of the Sea.

"A carefully-compiled, poetically-written digest of the history of glorious old Venice."—N.Y. Knickerbocker.

Flagg, J. F. B., M.D., a resident of Philadelphia, was b. in Boston, Mass., 1804. Either or Chloroform: their Employment in Surgery, Dentistry, Midwifery, Therapeutics, &c., Phila., 1851, 12mo. This work has been highly commended.

Flagg, Wilson. Studies in Field and Forest, Bost., 1856, 12mo. Highly commended by Lon. Critic, &c.

Flaherty, or O'Flaherty, Roderic, an Irish historian, a native of Moycullin, county of Galway. Ogygia, seu Rerum Hibernicarum Chronologia, Lon., 1685, 4to. Trans. into Eng. by Rev. James Hely, Dubl., 1793, 2 vols. 8vo. See an account of this work in Ware's Ireland, by Harris, and in Bishop Nicolson's Irish Hist. Lib. Flaherty was something like an antiquarian: the Christian era was with him quite a modern date. Let us see what he promised the Duke of York: the italics are our own:

"His patron, the then Duke of York, afterwards King James the Second, is encouraged to expect a complete chain of his royal ancestors in a right line of an hundred and twenty-four generations from Adam; whereof eleven were before the flood, twenty-six between that epocha and their settlement here, fifty-one in Ireland, and thirty-six in Scotland; but afterwards he seems not to be sure of making out the regal stem, without interruption, for above 2700 years."—Bishop Nicolson's Irish Hist. Lib.

What a sad falling off! Quite a modern affair, after all.

"Dr. Loftus said that among all the chronological treatises of Ireland which he had perused, he found none written with that exactness, diligence, and judgment, as this."—Ware's Ireland.

Flamsteed, John, 1646–1719, the first royal astronomer, a native of Denby, Derbyshire, was ordained by Bishop Gunning in 1675, and received the living of Burston, Surrey, about 1684. He was devoted to astronomical investigations, and pub. some treatises and a number of papers in Phil. Trans., 1672–1713, upon his favourite pursuit. His principal work, Historia Cœlestis Britannicæ, libri duo, was not pub. in a complete shape until after his death, when the necessary additions were made, and it was given to the world in 1725, 3 vols. fol. This contains the places of 2934 stars. An imperfect edit. was pub. in 1712, fol., without Flamsteed's consent. In some respects it is said to be more accurate than the authorized edit. It contains only 2680 stars. To the preceding work is often joined the Atlas Cœlestis, 1729, '53, fol. Some of Flamsteed's MSS., discovered by Mr. Francis Baily in the Observatory at Greenwich, together with some of his letters and autobiographical memoranda, were pub. in 1835 by order of the Lords of the Admiralty. To these we must refer the reader, and also to the Biog. Brit.; Whiston's Life; Lysons's Environ.; Ward's Gresham Professors; Martin's Biog. Philosophica; Hutton's Diet.; Chalmers's Biog. Diet.

"The Historia Cœlestis Britannica contains our first trustworthy catalogue of the fixed stars—the first at least which is available for modern objects; and the mass of lunar observations made by Flamsteed furnished Newton the means of carrying out and verifying his immortal discovery of Gravitation."—JOHN P. NICHOL, LL.D., Profes. of Astronomy in the Univ. of Glasgow.

The following remarks of M. Sigorgne, (1719–1809), Member of the Sorbonne, and Professor of Philosophy in the Univ. of Paris, are interesting in this connection:

"With respect to the primary planets, the attraction of the sun only is sufficient to oblige them to describe ellipses, but as they ought also to attract each other, there was some room to apprehend that the regularity of their motion might be thereby somewhat disturbed. We ought, however, to take Sir Isaac Newton's word upon this head, since we shall presently see from what he has done, that there is no reason to be in pain upon this account. According to his observation, bodies attract each other in a direct proportion of the quantities of matter they contain, and the converse proportion of the squares of their distances, and in this proportion it is that the planets affect each other. Now if the Newtonian Philosophy be true, there is a certain method of knowing the quantity of matter in the planets, and consequently of calculating the force of their impressions; such a calculation being made, it appears that Mars, our Earth, Venus, and Mercury, attract each other so little in proportion to the force with which they are attracted by the sun, that the disorder arising from thence must be altogether imperceptible in many revolutions; and hence there appears a wonderful agreement between the principles of this philosophy and the phenomena. But this agreement appears still more clearly in what happens with respect to Jupiter and Saturn: the quantity of matter in Jupiter is so great, that the calculation demonstrates the effects of its attraction upon Saturn ought to be very sensible in the time of their conjunction. Sir Isaac Newton predicted this to the Astronomers Flamsteed and Halley, but the former of these great men gave no credit at all to that prediction. However, the conjunction of those two planets approaching, this singular observation was made for the first time, and the consequence was, that the calculation was exactly verified. This procured the Newtonian Philosophy the approbation of so great an Astronomer as Flamsteed; indeed it would have been very difficult for him to have denied it."—Preface aux Institutions Newtoniennes, p. xvii, xviii.

"Galileo Galilei was the first who discovered four planets moving constantly round Jupiter, from thence usually called his satellites, which afterwards were observed to have a constant, regular, and periodical motion. This motion is now so exactly known, that Mr. Flamsteed, who is one of the most accurate observers that ever was, has been able to calculate tables of the eclipses of the several satellites, according to which, Astronomers in different quarters of the world, having notion of the precise time when to look for them, have found them to answer to his predictions, and published their observations accordingly."—DR. WM. WOTTON: Reflections upon Ancient and Modern Learning.

"Mr. Flamsteed, with indefatigable pains, for more than forty years, watched the motions of the stars, and has given us innumerable observations of the sun, moon, and planets, which he made with very large instruments exactly divided by most exquisite art, and fitted with telescopic sights."—DR. JOSEPH KIRK: Prof. to his Introduct. to the true Philos. See Biog. Brit.

Flanagan, S. W. and C. Kelly. Reports in Chan. Rolls Ct. temp. Sir M. O'Loughlin, Dublin, 1843, 8vo.

Flanders, Henry, b. at Plainfield, New Hampshire. 1. A Treatise on Maritime Law, Bost., 1853, 8vo.

"It has been carefully and elegantly written, the authorities are numerous, and appear to be cited with exactness, and within its scope, it forms a complete treatise on the subject which it embraces."—Phila. Leg. Intell.

2. A Treatise of the Law of Shipping, Phila., 1853, 8vo. "I think it is a valuable addition to our stock of Maritime Laws, and that the author is well grounded in his trust that he had done the profession some service. I have only been able to bring it to their further notice, by citing it in the second edition of my third volume of the Law of Evidence, now in press."—S. GREENLEAF: Cambridge, Sept. 5, 1853.

3. Lives and Times of the Chief Justices of the United States: First Series. 1. John Jay. 2. John Rutledge, Phila., 1855, 8vo.

"Mr. Flanders has written his work in a clear and concise style, and has mingled with the biographical notices enough of the incidents and stirring moments of those times, to make the work exceedingly interesting."—Norton's (N. York) Lit. Gaz.

"Mr. Flanders has fully comprehended the difficulties and duties of his task, and has accomplished it with great skill and completeness. . . . The author has access to original sources of information, and considerable matter hitherto unpublished, abedding new light on our earlier history, will be found in its pages."—American Law Register.

Second Series.—Wm. Cushing, Oliver Ellsworth, and John Marshall—was pub. in 1858, 8vo: see VAN SANTVOORD, GEORGE. 4. Memoirs of Richard Cumberland, with Notes, 1856, 8vo: see CUMBERLAND, RICHARD.

Flather, John. 1. Index to Equity Reports, 1648–22, Lon., r. 8vo, 1823–25. This forms a sup't. to Brilman's Equity Digest. 2. Ct. of Bankrupt Act, 1822, 12mo. 3. New Bankrupt Act, 2d ed., 1842, 12mo. 4. New Stat. rel. to Insolv. & B., 1845, 12mo. 5. Bankrupt Law Consol. Act, 1849, 12mo.

Flatman, Thomas, 1633–1672, a native of London, educated at Oxford, was skilled in law, painting, and poetry. A collection of poems, entitled Virtus Rediviva, &c., by T. F., pub. in 1660, may be his, but Wood will not affirm it. In addition to minor pieces of his in verse and prose, pub. separately, there appeared in 1674, '86, 8vo, a collection of his poems and songs; also pub. 1676, '86. He composed Pindaric Odes on the death of the Duke of Albemarle, the Earl of Ossory, Prince Rupert, and Charles II. For that on the Earl of Ossory, the Duke of Ormond, his father, presented the author with a diamond ring worth £100. Granger does not value his Pindarics very highly:

"Flatman really excelled as an artist: a man must want ear for harmony that can admire his poetry, and even want eyes that can cease to admire his painting. It does our author some honour that Mr. Pope has very closely copied several of his verses, in his ode of 'The Dying Christian to his Soul.' . . . Some of his tasteless contemporaries thought him equally excellent in both: but one of his heads is worth a room of his Pindarics; I had almost said all the Pindarics written in this reign. His works are extremely scarce."—Biog. Hist. of Eng.

Oldys, in the following epigram, refers to the three faculties in which he was skilled, viz.: Law, Painting, and Poetry:

"Should Flatman for his client strain the Laws,
The painter gives some colour to the cause;
Should critics censure what the Poet writ,
The pleader quits him at the bar of wit."

Charles Cotton highly commends Flatman's poems and songs.

—"these with force are writ,
As full of sinewy strength as well as wit."

It appears from the following bit of gossip of old Anthony Wood—who dearly loves a sly joke—that Master Flatman, like many bachelors of modern times, sometimes amused himself with ridiculing the connubial happiness which he afterwards gladly embraced:

"This person was in his younger days much against marriage, to the dislike of his father, and made a song describing the embraces with it, beginning thus:

'Like a dog with a bottle ty'd close to his tail,

'Like a tory in a bog, or a thief in a jayle,' &c. But being afterwards smitten with a fair virgin, and more with her fortune, (unkind Anthony!) did espouse her, 26th Nov., 1672, whereupon his ingenious comrades did serenade him that night with the said song."—Athen. Ocean.

This is just such a story as we might expect from such a crusty old bachelor as Anthony & Wood.

Flatters, J. J. The Paradise Lost of Milton illustrated: 54 Plates for Sculptors, Artists, &c., Lon., 1851, fol.

Flavel, John. Tractatus de Demonstratione, Oxon., 1619, 8vo.

Flavel, John, 1627?–1691, an eminent Nonconformist Calvinistic divine, a native of Worcestershire, was educated at University Coll., Oxf.; Rector of Diftord, Devonshire, about 1650; removed to Dartmouth, 1656; ejected for nonconformity, 1662. He was an excellent man, and full of zeal in the cause of religion. 1. Husbandry Spiritualized, Lon., 1669, 4to. 2. A Saint Induced, 1673, 1803, 8vo. 3. Divine Conduct, 1678, 1814, 8vo; 1691, 12mo. 4. The Touchstone of Sincerity, 1679, 8vo. 5. Personal Reformation, 1691, 12mo. 6. Remains, 1691, 8vo. 7. Expos. of the Assemblies Catechism, 1692, 8vo. 8. The Soul of Man, 1698, 4to. 9. Method of Grace, 1698, 4to. Works, 1673, 2 vols. fol.; 1701, 2 vols. fol.; 1740, 2 vols. fol.; Paisley, 1770, 6 vols. 8vo; Newcastle, 1797, 6 vols. 8vo. Other eds. Many of his separate pieces have been frequently pub.

New ed. of works, 1820, 6 vols. 8vo. Select Works, by C. Bradley, 1823, 2 vols. 12mo. Select Works, with Life, 1833, 8vo. Among the most esteemed of his works are Husbandry Spiritualized, Navigation Spiritualized, The Fountain of Life, Method of Grace, Divine Conduct. The writings of but few authors have been so highly commended as those of John Flavel.

"Plain, popular, and tender; proper to address afflicted cases, and to melt the soul in love. His Token for Mourners is inimitable. Allusions to Pagan stories both in Bates and him are entertaining and useful."—DR. DOUGLASS.

"In Flavel you will find the true savour of plain, lively, useful preaching."—COTTON MATHER.

"Fervent and affectionate, with a mastery hand at probing the conscience and striking the passions."—HAYES.

"Of Mr. Flavel's learning, his works contain sufficient evidence, and his printed Sermons, which are a model for preachers, prove him to have been a master of that species of eloquence which regales over the heart."—BOGUS and BENNETT.

"There are few writers of a more unexceptionable, experimental, affectionate, practical, popular, and edifying character than Flaxman."—Bibliothèque de C. B.

The Token for Mourners is included in the vol. entitled The Mourner's Companion, 1825, 12mo. See GORDON, ROBERT.

Flaxell, Phineas. The Grand Evil of the Disciple's Heart Discovered, Lon., 1676, 8vo.

Flaxman, John, 1755–1826, an eminent English sculptor, was a native of York, but at an early age removed to London with his father, a manufacturer of plaster casts. As a boy, much of his time was occupied in making models in clay, which evinced a remarkable genius for the art in which he afterwards became so eminent. In 1787 he visited Rome, where, during a residence of seven years, he executed his celebrated designs in outline from Homer, Æschylus, and Dante. The three series were engraved for him by Piroll. The designs from the Iliad and Odyssey were made for Mr. Hare Naylor; those from Dante for Mrs. Thomas Hope; and those from Æschylus for the late Countess Spencer. The Homer was pub. in 1793, 4to; again, with addit. plates, 1805, 2 vols. fol.; the Æschylus in 1795; again, 1831, fol.; Dante in 1807, ob. fol.; Hesiod—made after his return to England, 1817, ob. fol. There have been Italian, French, and German eds., of which we notice especially the Œuvres de Flaxman, par M. Nitot, Dufresne, Paris, 1823, which contains the Homer, Æschylus, and Hesiod, with text. Whilst at Rome, he also executed for the late Earl of Bristol his magnificent group, representing the Fury of Athamas, from Ovid's Metamorphoses, consisting of four figures larger than life. For this he received a sum insufficient to defray the cost—£600. This group is preserved at Ickworth, the seat of the Earl of Bristol, in Suffolk. At this period also he produced his "Cephalus and Aurora," for Mr. Hope. In 1794 he returned to England, and commenced the monument to Lord Mansfield, now in Westminster Abbey, for which he had received an order before he left Rome. For this he was paid £2500. Among his other works may be mentioned the monument to Lord Nelson, the figure of Sir Joshua Reynolds, the monument to the family of Sir Francis Baring, in Micheldean Church, Satan and Michael, for Lord Egremont, the monument to Collins, the poet, in Chichester Cathedral, the monument to Miss Cromwell, to Earl Howe, to Warren Hastings, to Lord and Lady Palmerston, and the beautiful design of The Shield of Achilles, (See Homer's Iliad, Book xviii.) for Messrs. Rundell and Bridge. For this last he received £620, and four casts of it were taken in silver gilt, each estimated at £2000. This is one of his greatest productions.

"A divine work, unequalled in the combination of beauty, vanity, and grandeur, which the genius of Michael Angelo could not have surpassed."—Sir THOMAS LAWRENCE.

In 1831 (ob. fol.) were pub. his eight beautiful compositions of The Acts of Mercy, in the manner of ancient sculpture, engraved, in imitation of the original drawings, by F. C. Lewis. His Lectures on Sculpture, as delivered by him at the Royal Academy, illustrated by 52 plates, appeared in 1829. New ed., with addit., and an Address on the Death of Flaxman, 1838, 8vo. We have already lingered over the memory of this eminent sculptor for a greater length of time than can well be justified in a Dictionary of Literature, but cannot conclude without recording some tributes from eminent authorities to the merits of one who has been denominated by judges of no contemptible authority—including even Canova himself—the greatest sculptor of modern times.

"The greatest of modern sculptors was our illustrious countryman, John Flaxman. He not only had all the fine feeling of the ancient Greeks, (which Canova, in a degree possessed,) but united to it a readiness of invention and a simplicity of design truly astonishing. Though Canova was his superior in the manual part, high finishing, yet in the higher qualities, poetical feeling, and invention, Flaxman was as superior to Canova as Shakespeare to the dramatists of his day."—Sir RICHARD WESTMACOTT.

"Flax and per gaudes v. of ordines and luy composi the adu in quite even i nature i design." "Flax De vult "The mak: 6 sketches As M

Arts and in letters, we quote his opinion of Flaxman's Lectures:

"These Lectures, as literary compositions, containing a clear and commanding view of sculpture, ancient and modern—abundant in just sentiments and wise remarks, and such professional precepts as only experience can supply—merit more regard than they have as yet received. The account of the Gothic sculpture in England is as rich as a chapter of old romance, and infinitely more interesting. The whole of the Lectures on Beauty and Composition ought to be familiar to the mind of every student. The order of their arrangement is natural, and there is good sense and a feeling for all that is noble and heroic scattered over every page."

But we have seen that the only one who could complain of Flaxman having the first post assigned to him among modern sculptors had consented to the verdict that places him in this proud position. We give his own words:

"You come to Rome, and admire my works, while you possess, in your own country, in Flaxman, an artist whose designs are of classical grace all that I am acquainted with in modern art."—CANOVA.

Flaxmer, Sarah. Satan Revealed, &c., with a Testimony that R. Brothers is a Prophet from the Lord, 4to.

Fleckie, Andrew. Answer to Sir F. Burdett's arg. rel. to the power of the H. of Com. to imprison persons not Members, Lon., 1810, 8vo.

Flecknoe, Richard, an English poet and dramatist, temp. Charles II., is better known from Dryden's having borrowed his name as a scourge for the punishment of Shadwell, than for his own productions. Dryden held Flecknoe in great contempt, which was naturally augmented when the latter was named post-laureate in his stead. Shadwell subsequently held the same office, and hence Dryden ridicules him as the poetical son of Flecknoe.

1. The Affections of a Pious Soul unto Christ, Lon., 1649, 8vo. 2. Miscellaneous, or Poems of all Sorts; with divers other pieces, 1653, 12mo. 3. Diary, &c., 1656, 12mo. 4. Love's Dominion; a Dramatic Piece, 1654. Reprinted as Love's Kingdom; a Pastoral Tragi-Com., 1664, 12mo. At the end of Love's Dominion is a Short Treatise on the English Stage.

"Which I take to be the best thing he has extant."—Longbaine's Dramat. Poets.

5. Heroic Portraits, &c., 1650, 8vo. 6. Ermina, or The Chaunt Lady; a Tragi-Com., 1661, 4to. 7. Demoiselles à la Mode, 1667, 4to. 8. Sir Wm. D'Avenant's Voy. to the other World, 1668, 8vo. 9. Epigrams and Enigmatical Characters, 1669, 78, 73, 75, 8vo. 10. Marriage of Oceanus and Britannia. 11. A Relation of Ten Years Travel in Europe, Asia, Africa, and America, by way of Letters; with other Historical, Moral, and Political Pieces; since anno, sed circa 1654, 8vo.

Malone unites in Dryden's ridicule of Flecknoe—see his Life of Dryden; but Southey thinks more favourably of him—see Southey's Omnia.

"His acquaintance with the Nobility was more than with the to "has a Genius to "stry, to put in "a moderate to "into several st "Market;

th "and w "savour to get Imagination vulgar Poets.
bi "the cause of bi "It is probable in "He seems r "right it gaudes te "in negligence or "sple to write al "sally, ingulbi "has not the q "cannot & my d "had these two em. Retrospec.

ber's Lives;

Fleet, Charles. Four Serms, Ballib., 1796, 8vo.

Fleet, Edward. Address & Reply, Lon., 1777, 8vo.

Fleetwood, Mrs. Let to Mr. Madan rel. to the rectory of Aldwinkle, Lon., 1767, 8vo.

Fleetwood, Charles, Lord-Deputy of Ireland during the Usurpation. His Petition to the Parliament of Eng., 1650, fol. His Answer, &c., 4to.

Fleetwood, Everard. Inquiry into the Customary Estates, &c. of those who hold lands of Church and other foundations, &c., 1731, 8vo; Dubl., 1746, 8vo. Answered by Henry Gally, D.D., in the same year.

Fleetwood, John, D.D. 1. The Christian Prayer Book, Lon., 1772, 12mo. 2. Christian Dictionary, 1773, 4to. 3. Life of Christ, and the Lives of the Apostles, John the Baptist, and the Virgin Mary, Glasg., 1813, 8vo. Frequently printed.

Fleetwood, Col. William. An Unhappy View of the Behaviour of my Lord Duke of Buckingham at the Isle of Rhé, Lon., 1648.

Fleetwood, William, d. 1663, Recorder of London temp. Elizabeth. 1. Oration, Lon., 1571, 12mo. 2. Annalium tam Regum Edwardii V., &c., 1579, '97.

"Rather looked on as a table or index to the year-book than any historical treatise."—Bishop Nicolson's Eng. Hist. Lib.

3. Office of a Justice of the Peace, 1667, 8vo, Posth. 4. Table on the Reports of Edmund Plowden, in French. 5. Latin Verses prefixed to Sir Thos. Chaloner's Repub. Anglorum instauranda. 6. Notes upon Lambard's Archaion. He is said to have contributed to the last of the old edits. of Holinshed.

Fleetwood, William, D.D., 1656–1723, of the same family with Lord-Deputy Charles Fleetwood, was born in the Tower of London. He was educated at Eton and King's Coll., Camb., and became Rector of St. Austin's, London, and Lecturer of St. Dunstan's in the West; Canon of Windsor, 1702; Bishop of St. Asaph, 1706; trans. to Ely, 1714. He pub. a number of sermons, theolog. treatises, &c.; see Bibl. Brit. Weston ascribes to him a work not mentioned by Watt, viz., Curiosities of Nature and Art in Husbandry and Gardening, 1707, 8vo. His Essay on Miracles, 1701, 8vo, excited some controversy, and elicited treatises by Bishop Hoadly and Gilbert.

"The two main Principles of this Book—that none but God can work a true Miracle, and that it cannot be supposed that a true Miracle was ever wrought in opposition to a doctrine established on true principles—were opposed by Bp. Hoadly in a letter to Bp. Fleetwood, 8vo, 1702; and the reading of the two tracts occasioned Mr. Locke writing his Discourse on Miracles."

Among the best known of Fleetwood's works is Chronicon Preciosum: an Account of Money, Price of Corn, Wages, &c., in England, for 600 Years last past, 1707, 8vo; 2d ed., 1746, 8vo.

"This work contains the best account of prices published in England previously to that given by Sir F. M. Eden."—McCall's Lib. of Polit. Econ.

A collective edit. of his works was pub. in 1737, fol., under the title of A Complete Collection of the Sermons, Tracts, and Pieces of all kinds, that were written by Bishop Fleetwood. He was considered the best preacher of his day. When one of the ladies of the bed-chamber asked the Queen whom she intended to make Bishop of St. Asaph, her Majesty replied:

"One whom you will be pleased with; whom you have lately heard preach [he had just officiated as chaplain]: I intend it for Dr. Fleetwood."

His sermons are recommended by Bishop Cleaver.

"Surnamed silver-tongued;—remarkable for easy and proper expressions. He considers several cases, which, though often occurring in human life, are seldom taken notice of in sermons. On this account he may be consulted with advantage. In respect of true politeness he has been equalled by few. His sermons on Relative Duties are good;—but his Four Funeral Sermons show the orator much more."—Dr. Doddridge.

Dr. Doddridge refers to the serm. on 1. The death of Q. Mary; 2. The Duke of Gloucester; 3. K. William; 4. Mr. Noble.

Fleming and Tibbins. Royal Dictionary of the French and Eng. Languages, Lon., 1849, 2 vols. 4to, £3 3s. Amer. ed. by J. Dobson, Phila., 8vo; another ed., sq. 12mo. "Incomparably the best dictionary of the two languages extant."—Lon. Athenaeum.

Fleming, Abraham, Rector of St. Pancras, London, was known in his day as an industrious translator from the Latin and Greek, and as the author of some minor devotional and other pieces, which are now known only to the literary antiquary. His publications range from 1675 to 1686. He trans. from Virgil, Elian, Cicero, Tully, Isocrates, Pliny, Synesius, &c. His Manual of Prayers was pub. in 1686, 16mo, and his Verborum Latinorum, &c., in 1683, fol. Notices of his pieces will be found in Herbert, Peck, Ritson, Tanner, Warton's Hist. of Eng. Poetry, Censura Lit., and the Brit. Bibliog.

"I must not forget that the same Webb [Wm.] ranks Abraham Fleming, as a translator, after Barnabe Gorge, the translator of Palladius's Zoiliack, not without a compliment to the poetry and learning of his brother Samuel, whose excellent inventions, he adds, had not yet been made public."—Warton's Hist. Eng. Poet.

Fleming, Alexander, minister of Neilston, Renfrewshire, pub. Letters and Answers in 1808 rel. to the introduction of an organ—the first attempt since the Reformation—into the Church of Scotland. He also pub. Letters to a Young Friend, 1810. Examination of Resolutions, &c., 1814, 8vo.

Fleming, Caleb, 1698–1779, a Socinian, in 1752 succeeded Dr. James Foster, at Pinner's Hall. He pub. many theolog. treatises, principally controversial, 1735–78, which are now forgotten. His Survey of the Search after Souls, by Coward, Clarke, Baxter, Law, &c., was pub. in 1758, 8vo.

"His writings might have been more generally acceptable and useful, if they had been free from a certain quaintness and obscurity of style. Aiming at originality and strength of expression, he often lost perspicuity, and never attained to elegance."—Dr. Keble's Life of Lardner.

Fleming, Curtis. Sermon, &c., 1795, 8vo.

Fleming, Giles. 1. Sermon, Lon., 1634. 2. Stemma Sacrum: the Royal Progeny delineated, 1660, 8vo.

Fleming, James. Irish and Eng. Statutes rel. to his Majesty's Revenues in Ireland, Dubl., 1741, 4to.

Fleming, James, Surgeon and Man-midwife. Treatise on the Formation of the Human Species, &c., Lon., 1768, 12mo.

Fleming, John, D.D., Prof. of Nat. Philos. in the Univ. and King's Coll., Aberdeen. 1. On a Bed of Fossil Shells. Annals of Phil., 1814. 2. Junction of the Rivers and the Sea. Trans. Roy. Soc., Edin., 1817. 3. Molluscos Animals, including Shell Fish, Lon., 1837, p. 8vo.

"Distinguished by a perfect knowledge of the very curious and interesting subject of which it treats, by a severe and searching analysis of the evidence, and a clear and masterly arrangement of the multifarious details connected with it."—Glasg. Constitution.

4. Hist. of British Animals, 1842, 8vo. A work of high authority.

Fleming, Malcolm. See FLEMING.

Fleming, Patrick, baptised Christopher, 1594–1631, an Irish Catholic Franciscan, Lecturer on Divinity at Prague, was murdered by some peasants, when that city was besieged by the Elector of Saxony in 1631. 1. Collectanea Sacra, or Lives of Irish and Scotch Saints, with edits. by Thos. Sirini, Louvain, 1667, fol. 2. Abridg. of Chronicon consecrati Petri Ratisbonae. He supplied Ward with materials for his Lives of the Irish Saints. The works of the three abbots, Columban, Aileran, and Cuman, in the Bibl. Patrum, are avowedly taken from Fleming.

Fleming, Peter. Land Surveying, Pt. 1, Glasg., 1815, 4to.

Fleming, Robert, 1630–1694, a native of Bathen, Scotland, was educated at the Univ. of Edin., and at that of St. Andrew's, where he studied divinity under Samuel Rutherford. He became minister at Cambuslang, Clydesdale; ejected, 1662; took charge of a Scotch congregation at Rotterdam, where he died in 1694. 1. The Fulfilling of the Scripture, in three Parts, Lon., 1681, 2 vols. 12mo; many eds.; 5th and best ed., with Author's Life and a Funeral Sermon, by Daniel Burgess, 1726, fol.

"An elaborate view of the operations of Providence in preserving the Church through all the vicissitudes of ecclesiastical history."

2. Sermon and Discourse, 1692–1704. 3. The Confirming Work of Religion, 1693, sm. 8vo.

Fleming, Robert, Jr., d. 1716, son of the preceding, and a native of Scotland, was educated at home, at Leyden, and at Utrecht. He became minister of the English church at Leyden, subsequently of the Scotch church at Amsterdam, and afterwards of a Scotch church at Lotherbury, London. 1. Poet. Paraphrase on the Song of Solomon, with other Poems, Lon., 1691, 8vo. 2. Funl. Sermon, 1692, 8vo. 3. Discourses on several subjects, viz.—The Rise and Fall of Papacy, &c., 1701, 8vo; 1st ed. of great rarity. The first Discourse was repub. in 1793, 8vo, under the title of Apocryphical Key. Late eds., entitled The Rise and Fall of Papacy, 1848, '49, '50. In this celebrated discourse are many predictions which coincide most remarkably with events in the early history of the French Revolution, at the close of the last century. Fleming in 1701 expressed his belief that the Fifth Vial would be poured out on the Sign of the Beast, beginning in 1794, and more especially in 1848, in which he expected that those events would commence which would undermine Papal authority, and lead to its complete destruction.

"The remarkable conjectures of Fleming rest on sound principles of interpretation."—Ch. of Eng. Quar. Rev.

"Perhaps the most remarkable work on Prophecy that has ever appeared."—Lon. Watchman.

4. Discourse on the Death of King William, 1702, 8vo. 5. Christology, 1705–08, 3 vols. 8vo. Abridged, Edin., 1795, 8vo.

"The author did not complete his plan, which is much to be regretted; as he possessed a powerful and very original mind. Many ingenious thoughts occur in the Christology, and many passages of Scripture are placed in a new light."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"Many original remarks and valuable thoughts."—Bibliotheca C. S.

6. The First Resurrection, 1708. 7. Discourses, Edin., 1790, 12mo. 8. Discourse and Sermon, 1793, 8vo. 9. Speculum Davidicum Redivivum. 10. Theocracy; or the Divine Right of Nations. 11. The Mirror of Divine Love; with a Dramatic Poem called the Monarchical Image, or Nebuchadnezzar's Dream. 12. The Hist. of Hereditary Right. Fleming was eminent for piety and learning.

2. The Autobiography of a Missionary, 1853, 2 vols. p.8vo. "We conscientiously recommend this book, as well for its amusing character as for the spirit it displays of earnest piety."—Lon. Standard.

Fletcher, James, 1811–1832, of London, for some time assistant in a school, committed suicide in a fit of temporary insanity. Chozar and Sela. The Siege of Damascus. The Gem, and other Poems. Hist. of Poland, Lon., 1831, 8vo.

"The writer of this History has brought to his undertaking much learning, great industry and patience in research, and the most unbiassed candour."

"The literary matter is well enough put together for a temporary purpose, being intelligible without pretension to elegance."—Lon. Lit. Gaz., June 18, 1831.

Fletcher, James C., b. 1823, at Indianapolis; grad. at Brown Univ., 1846; studied theology at Princeton, and Geneva, Switzerland. Brazil and the Brazilians. Portrayed in Historical and Descriptive Sketches, by J. C. F. and D. P. Kidder, D.D., Phila., 1857, 8vo, illustrated.

"I cannot but think that a work embracing so complete a view of a country so little understood must find favour with the public: at least, I think too well of my countrymen not to believe it."—Wm. H. Passcott.

Fletcher, John. See BAUMONT, FRANCIS.

Fletcher, John, R. Catholic pastor at Underwood. 1. Select Remains of E. White, with Memoir, 1812, 8vo. 2. Serms. on Various Religious and Moral Subjects, for all the Sundays after Pentecost, 1812, 2 vols. 8vo.

"These sermons deserve the perusal of every Protestant and every Catholic who thinks seriously on the subject of religion. Whoever peruses them will be equally charmed with their mild, unambitious eloquence, their pure morality, and their persuasive reasoning."—CHARLES BUTLER.

3. The Catholic Manual, with Observs. and Notes, 1818.

Fletcher, John, M.D. 1. Rudiments of Physiology, in 3 Pts.; edited by R. Lewins, M.D., with a Memoir of the Author, Lon., 1837, 8vo. 2. Elements of General Pathology; edited by Drs. Drysdale and Russell, 1842, p. 8vo.

Fletcher, or Flechiere, John William, 1729–1785, a native of Nyon, Switzerland, received orders in the Church of England in 1757, and three years later was presented to the living of Madely Salop. He was closely associated with John Wesley in his labours, and was a man of most exemplary character. His writings were principally directed against Antinomianism and Calvinism. His Portrait of St. Paul has been greatly admired. Works, 1803, 8 vols. 12mo; 1806, 10 vols. 8vo. Other eds., 7 vols. 21mo; 2 vols. 8vo; 7 vols. 12mo, 1825. Selections from his Works, with his Life, by S. Dunn, London, 12mo. This often accompanies the collective eds. of his Works. See his Life, compiled from Wesley, Gilpin, his own Letters, &c., by the Rev. J. Benson, 11th ed., 1839, 24mo.

"Fletcher was a man of heavenly temper; a saint in the ancient and high sense of the term, whose enthusiasm was entirely inlaid with bitterness, and whose life and death are alike edifying."—Lon. Quar. Rev.

"One of the holiest men that the Christian Church has seen in modern times. His works contain an unanswerable defence of the doctrine of original sin, and of the Godhead of Christ; several places in vindication of general redemption, and other points with which it is connected, with a 'Portrait of St. Paul,' which every minister should carefully study. His writings are distinguished by uncommon clearness and strength of argument, an uninterrupted flow of sacred eloquence, and a benevolence of temper which has seldom been equalled."—Dr. Williams's C. P.

"No age or country has ever produced a man of more fervent piety, or more perfect charity; no church has ever possessed a more apostolic minister."—ROBERT SOUTHBY.

Fletcher, Joseph. The Historie of the perfect-cursed-blessed Man. By I. F. Lon., 1629, 4to. Very rare. Nassau, Pt. 1, 1513, £3 19s. Bindley, Pt. 2, £23 2s.

Fletcher, Joseph, D.D., 1784–1843, a native of Chester, Minister of the Independent Church at Blackburn, 1807; at Stepney, 1822. His Lectures on the R. Catholic Religion, pub. separately, and in the collective ed. of his works, have attained great celebrity. Select Works and Memoirs. Edited by the Rev. Joseph Fletcher, Jr., of Lon., 1846, 3 vols. 8vo. 5th ed. of the Lectures on R. C. Religion, &c., 1850, 12mo.

"The late Dr. Fletcher's Lectures are an inestimable work, of which I congratulate the Christian public that a fifth and cheap edition is now announced."—Dr. J. P. Smith's Reasons of the Protestant Religion.

"It is the best work on the subject that has lately appeared. It is exceedingly well written, and condenses into a narrow compass a large portion of valuable information; and while it instructs by its scriptural reasonings, it edifies by its warm and enlightened piety. It is firm, moderate, and candid."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"From a settled persuasion that Popery is a system of impiety and imposture, we feel thankful at witnessing any judicious attempt to expose its enormities and retard its progress. The Lectures published by Mr. Fletcher are well adapted to this purpose, and entitle their author to the esteem and gratitude of the public."—REV. ROBERT HALL.

695

"A man of masculine mind, distinguished for his powers of ratiocination. His Sermons are most carefully prepared—lucid in arrangement and correct in style. Dr. Fletcher is one of those in whose discourses you see a happy union of superior intellect with the most accurate views of evangelical truth."—Metropolitan Pulpit.

Fletcher, Philip, Dean of Kildare. Serms. 1759, 91. Fletcher, Phineas, 1584?–1650? a brother of Giles Fletcher the younger, and cousin of Beaumont's dramatic colleague, was educated at Eton, and King's Coll., Camb. Like his brother Giles, he was a divine and a poet. In 1621 he was presented to the living of Hilgay, Norfolk, and here remained until his death. 1. The Locusts, or Apollyonists, Camb., 1627, 4to. Very rare. Bibl. Anglo-Poet., 272, £9 9s. This is a caustic satire against the Jesuits.

"The great Milton is said to have ingeniously confessed that he owed his immortal work of Paradise Lost to Mr. Fletcher's Locusts."—Pref. to Rev. J. Sterling's Poems.

2. Sicelides; a Dramatic Piece, 1631. 3. Comment on the First Psalm, 1632, 4to. 3. Joy in Tribulation, 1632, sm. 8vo. 4. The Purple Island, or the Isle of Man: together with piscatorie Ecloges, and other poetical Miscellanies, 1633, 4to. Bibl. Anglo-Poet., large paper, £10 14s. Small-paper copies have sold at from £1 to £2 12s. It was also printed with Giles Fletcher's Christ's Victory, in 1733, 8vo. New ed., by Wm. Jacques, 1816, 8vo. This is one of the most remarkable poems in the language.

"The title of The Purple Island is most attractive and most fallacious. If a reader should take it up, (as would probably be the case with those ignorant of its nature,) with the expectation of finding some delightful story of romantic fiction, what must be his disappointment to plunge at once into an anatomical lecture in verse on the human frame—to find that the poet had turned topographer of an island founded upon human bones, with veins for its thousand small brooks, and arteries for its larger streams; and that the mountains and valleys with which it is diversified are neither more nor less than the inequalities and undulations of this microcosm! He might perhaps persevere through the whole of the second canto, in the continued hope that it would soon be over; but when he had achieved this task, and found that he had only made one quarter of the survey, he must of necessity be constrained to lay it down in despair."—Retrospect. Rev., II. 342, 1829.

But if he should thus "lay it down in despair," he would be greatly the loser: for—to quote one of the most eminent of English critics—

"After describing the body, he proceeds to personify the passions and intellectual faculties. The fatigued attention is not merely relieved, but fascinated and enraptured; and, notwithstanding his figures, in many instances, are too arbitrary and fantastic in their habitations, often disproportioned and overdone, sometimes lost in a superfluity of glaring colours, and the several characters, in general, by no means sufficiently kept apart; yet, amid such a profusion of images, many are distinguished by a boldness of outline, a majesty of manner, a brilliancy of colouring, a distinctness and propriety of attribute, and an air of life, that we look for in vain in modern productions, and that rival, if not surpass, what we meet with of the kind even in Spenser, from whom our author caught his inspiration. After exerting his creative powers on the department of the subject, the virtues and better qualities of the heart, under their leader Eclecta, or Intellect, are attacked by the vices: a battle ensues, and the latter are vanquished, after a vigorous opposition, through the interference of an angel, who appears at the prayer of Eclecta. The poet here abruptly takes an opportunity of paying a fulsome and unpardonable compliment to James the First, (canto xii, stanza 56;) on that account, perhaps, the most unpalatable passage in the book. From Fletcher's dedication of this his poem, with his Piscatory Eclogues and Miscellanies, to his friend Edmund Benlowes, it seems that they were written very early, as he calls them 'raw essays of my very unripe years, and almost childhood.'

"It is to his honour that Milton read and imitated him, as every attentive reader of both poets must soon discover. He is eminently entitled to a very high rank among our old English classics."—Headley's Select Beauties of Ancient Eng. Prose.

In the Supplement to his second volume, Headley devotes a chapter to show how much Fletcher was indebted to Spenser, and Milton to Fletcher. In the next chapter he proves Milton's obligations to Giles Fletcher's Christ's Victory. This fact we have already referred to. See FLETCHER, GILES. It deserves to be noticed that Francis Quarles inscribes his stanzas of three lines each, prefixed to Phineas Fletcher's Piscatorie Eclogues, &c., "To my dear Friend, the Spencer of this age." The leaf of verses is frequently wanting; collectors, therefore, should carefully examine copies offered for their inspection.

Warton refers to The Purple Island in but faint terms of commendation, and the further that criticism has been removed from the conceits which distinguish the age of the poem, the less indulgence has been displayed to the peculiarities of the author.

"Through five cantos the reader is regaled with nothing but allegorical anatomy, in the details of which Phineas seems tolerably skilled, evincing a great deal of ingenuity in diversifying his metaphors, and in preventing the delineation of his imaginary island with as much justice as possible to the allegory without obtruding it on the reader's view. In the sixth canto he rises to the intellectual and moral faculties of the soul, which occupy the rest of the poem. From its nature it is insupportably wearisome; yet his language is often very poetical, his versification harmonious, his invention fertile. But the perpetual monotony of allegorical persons which sometimes displeases us even in Spenser, is seldom relieved in Fletcher; the understanding revolts at the confused crowd of inconceivable beings, in a philosophical poem; and the justness of analogy, which had given us some pleasure in the anatomical cantos, is lost in tedious descriptions of all possible moral qualities, each of them personified, which can never co-exist in the Purple Island of one individual."—Hallam's Introduction to Lit. of Europe.

5. Piscatory Elogues, with other Poetical Miscellanies, with Notes by W. Tytler, Lord Woodhouselee, Edin., 1771, 8vo. A correct ed. 6. Sylva Poetica, Autore P. F., Cantab., 1833, 8vo. 7. De Literis antiquæ Britanniciæ, Regibus præsertim qui Doctrinâ claruerunt, quique Collegia Cantabrigiæ fundarunt, 1653, 12mo. 8. A Father's Testament, 1670, 8vo.

Wood tells us that at King's College Phineas Fletcher was "accounted an excellent poet;" and good old Isaac Walton paid him a twofold compliment, than which he knew no higher, when he declared him to be "An excellent divine and an excellent angler."

The brothers refer to each other's works, and their merits have often been compared. See FLETCHER, GILES. It would not be difficult to continue these comparisons, but a few lines must conclude an article already sufficiently extended:

"They were both the disciples of Spenser, and, with his diction gently modernised, retained much of his melody and luxuriant expression. Giles's 'Christ's Victory and Triumph' has a tone of enthusiasm peculiarly solemn. Phineas, with a livelier fancy, had a worse taste. He lavished on a bad subject the graces and ingenuity that would have made a fine poem on a good design. . . . These incongruous conceptions are clothed in harmony, and interspersed with beautiful thoughts; but natural sentiments and agreeable imagery will not incorporate with the shapeless features of such a design. They stand apart from it like things of a different element, and, when they occur, only expose its deformity. On the contrary, in the brother's poem of 'Christ's Triumph,' its main effect, though somewhat sombrous, is not marred by such repulsive contrasts. Its beauties, therefore, will tell in relieving tedium, and reconciling us to defects."—Campbell's English Poetry.

"Both of these brothers are deserving of much praise. They were endowed with minds eminently poetical, and not inferior in imagination to any of their contemporaries; but an injudicious taste, and an excessive fondness for a style which the public was rapidly abandoning—that of allegorical personification—prevented their powers from being effectually displayed."—Hallam's Lit. Hist. of Europe.

"It grieves me to think," says Hervey, "that these pieces [Christ's Victory and the Purple Island] should be lost to the world, and be forever buried in obscurity. 'The Purple Island' abounds with picturesque, useful, and striking sentiments."

Fletcher, R. 1. Radius Heliconicus; or, The Resolution of a free State, 1650, fol. 2. Trans. of Martial's Epigrams, 1656, 8vo.

Fletcher, Ral. A Few Notes on Cruelty to Animals; or, The Inadequacy of Penal Law; on General Hospitals for Animals, &c., Lon., 1846, 8vo.

Fletcher, Richard. 1. First Steps to Medical Subjects, in Latin, Lon., 12mo. 2. Influence of a Troubled Mind on Health, 8vo. 3. Medico-Chirurgical Notes and Illustrations, 4to.

Fletcher, Robert. 1. Introduction to the Love of God, &c., Lon., 1581, 8vo. 2. Solomon's Song trans. into English verse, 1586. 3. Epitaph, 1603, 4to. 4. The Nine English Worthies, Lon., 1606, 4to, pp. 72. This is an historical register of the English royal Henrys, kings and princes, in prose and verse. Very rare. Bibl. Anglo-Poet., 276, £35. Bindley, Pt. 2, 1100, £37 16s. Hibbert, 3095, £7 10s.

Fletcher, Robert. Works on medicine and chemistry, Lon., 1674, '76, '79, all 8vo.

Fletcher, Miss S. Gabrielle et Augustina, 1811.

Fletcher, Samuel. Enamel Painting, 1803, 8vo.

Fletcher, Thomas. Poems and Trans., 1692, 8vo.

Fletcher, Thomas. Serm., Dubl., 1745, '46, 4to.

Fletcher, Wm., LL.D., Dean of Kildare. 20 Serm., 1772.

Fleury, Maria de. 1. Henry; a Poem, Lon., 1789, 8vo. 2. Antinomianism Unmasked and Refuted, 1791, 8vo. 3. Divine Poems and Essays on Several Subjects, 1791, 8vo.

Flexman, Roger, D.D., 1708-1795, a Dissenting minister, a native of Devonshire, pub. Miscellanies, 1752; Serm., 1752-74; edited Burnet's Own Times, 1753, 4 vols. 8vo; wrote several biographies, and aided in the preparation of the General Index to the Journals of the House of Commons. He also made an index to The Rambler, and to some other works. The maker of a good index is no ignoble philanthropist. See AYSCOUGH, SAMUEL. Dr. Johnson did not entirely approve of Flexman's Index to The Rambler. When his name was once mentioned before the lexicographer, he thus vented his indignation:

"Let me hear no more of him, Sir! That is the fellow who made the Index to my Rambler, and set down the name of Milton thus:—MILTON, Mr. JOHN."

Flindall, John Morris. Amateur's Pocket Companion; describing rare portraits and works, Lon., 1813, 12mo. 2. Family Assistant.

Flinders, Captain Matthew, d. 1814, an English Navigator. Voyage to Terra Australis in 1801-03, Lon., 1814, 2 vols. 4to, and Atlas; some on large paper.

"The intrinsic worth of these truly scientific volumes must not be measured by their pecuniary value, for I have known a well-bound copy, in calf, sell for only £5 15s. 6d."—Dibdin's Lib. Comp. See a review in Lon. Quar. Rev., xli. 1, by Sir Jno. Barrow.

Con. to Phil. Trans., 1805, '06.

Flinders, Matthew. Con. to Mem. Med., 1799. Flinn, Andrew, D.D., d. 1820, minister of Charleston, S. C. Serm., 1810, Do., 1811.

Flint, Austin, M.D. 1. Clinical Reports on Continued Fever, Buffalo, 1853, 8vo. 2. Physical Exploration and Diagnosis of Diseases Affecting the Respiratory Organs, Phila., 1856, 8vo.

Flint, Charles L. The Agriculture of Massachusetts, as shown in the Returns of the Agricultural Societies, Bost., 1853-54, 2 vols. 8vo. Treatise on Grasses and Forage Plants, N. York, 1857, 12mo. Dairy Farming, Bost., 1859.

Flint, George. Robin's last shift, Part 1, 1717, 8vo.

Flint, Henry, d. 1760, aged 84, tutor in Harvard Coll., 1705-54, educated many pupils who subsequently attained eminence. He pub. occasional sermons, 1729, '36, and a vol. containing 20 Serm., 1739, 8vo.

Flint, Rev. James. Serm., Boston, 1852, 12mo.

Flint, James. Letters from America, Edin., 1822, 8vo.

Flint, Micah P., a son of the Rev. Timothy Flint, was the author of a vol. entitled The Hunter, and other Poems; and pub. a number of pieces in periodicals.

Flint, Rev. Timothy, 1780-1840, father of the preceding, a native of Reading, Massachusetts, after graduating at Harvard College, became minister of the Congregational Church in Lunenburg, in the county of Worcester, where he remained until 1814. In 1815 he became a missionary for the Valley of the Mississippi, and in the discharge of his itinerant duties acquired that extensive knowledge of the country and of the people which we find displayed to such advantage in his Recollections and Geography and History of the Mississippi Valley. After ten years, spent in preaching and teaching school, he returned to the Northern States. In 1833 he edited several numbers of the Knickerbocker Mag., and was subsequently editor for three years of The Western Monthly Mag.

1. Recollections of Ten Years passed in the Valley of the Mississippi, Boston, 1826, 8vo; 2d ed., 1831, 8vo.

"With obvious faults, Mr. Flint's style is marked by counterbalancing excellences, being lively, flowing, often vigorous, and, in general, quite unaffected; but this is a secondary merit. These pages reflect a sincere, humane, and liberal character, a warm and gentle heart, and hardly even a prejudice that is not amiable."—Lon. Quar. Rev., xlviii. 201.

"One valuable effect of the work among us will be to allay local jealousies, often prejudiced, correct misapprehensions, and divert the Western character of many unfavourable associations with which it has been too long connected in this quarter, and to strengthen sentiments of mutual esteem between the people of the East and West."—N. Amer. Rev., xxiii. 369. See also Amer. Month. Rev., iv. 460.

2. Francis Berrian; or, The Mexican Patriot, 1826. This "purports to be the autobiography of a New England adventurer, who acted a conspicuous part in the first Mexican revolution, and in the overthrow of Iturbide." See Griswold's Prose Writers of America.

3. A Condensed Geography and History of the Western States in the Mississippi Valley, Cin., 1828, 2 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., 1832, 2 vols. 8vo.

Mr. Ward remarks that this work is interesting and instructive, though written in "a most uncouth style." See Ward's Mexico in 1827.

4. Arthur Clenning; a Novel, Phila., 1828, 2 vols. 12mo.

5. George Mason, the Young Backwoodsman; a Novel.

6. The Shoshonee Valley; a Romance, Cin., 1830, 3 vols. 12mo.

7. Indian Wars in the West, 1833, 12mo.

8. Lectures on Nat. Hist., Geology, Chemistry, and the Arts, Bost., 1833, 12mo. See a Review in Amer. Month. Rev., iii. 261.

9. Trans. of Dros's L'art d'être heureuse, with addits. by the translator. 10. Trans. of Celibacy Vanquished; or, The Old Bachelor Reclaimed, Phila., 1834, 12mo. 11. Biograph. Mem. of Daniel Boone, the first settler of Kentucky, Cin., 1834, 18mo. In 1835 Mr. Flint contributed to the London Athenæum a series of sketches of the Literature of the United States.

Flint, Wm. A Treatise on the Breeding, Training, and Managing of Horses, Hull, 1816, 8vo.

Flintoff, Owen. 1. Rise and Progress of the Laws of England and Wales, Lon., 1839, 8vo. This work should accompany John Reeve's Hist. of the Eng. Law. 2. Introduct. to Conveyancing, 1840, 8vo. This is a new ed. of the 2d vol. of Blackstone's Comment., adapted to the present state of the English Law. 3. Law of Real Property, 1839, '40, 2 vols. 8vo. An excellent work. The 2d vol. is an enlarged edit. of his Conveyancing. The works of Mr. Flintoff occupy the first place among legal treatises.

Floyd, or Floyd, Thomas. 1. Bibliotheca Biographica: A Synopsis of Universal Biography, ancient and modern, Lon., 1760, 3 vols. 8vo. 2. Chronol. Tables of Univ. Hist., 1762, 2 vols. 8vo.

Flood, Rt. Hon. Henry, d. 1791, a distinguished orator of the Irish House of Commons, wrote some poetical pieces, pub. in the Oxford Collection, and pub. some Speeches, 1787, &c. His Life and Corresp., by W. Flood, appeared in 1838, Lon., 8vo.

Flood, Robert. See FLUDD.

Florence of Worcester, d. 1118, a monk of great erudition, was the first chronicler who wrote in England after the Norman Conquest. Chronicon ex Chronicis ab Initio Mundi usque ad annum Domini 1118 deductum. Accessit etiam Continuatio usque ad Annum Christi 1141, Lon., 1592, 4to. The continuation is anonymous. Reprinted, etc., Franck, 1601, fol.; and see Collection of Historians edited by order of the Record Commission, vol. I, pp. 522-615; 615-644.

"Leland gives an exaggerated estimate of his character. His chronicle is little better than a compilation from the Chronicle of Marianus Scotus, and from the Baxon Chronicle. The part which relates to our own island is almost a literal translation from the latter work. An anonymous continuation of the chronicle of Florence from 1118 to 1141 is of much greater value than the chronicle itself."—Wright's Biog. Brit. Lit.

Florian, John. 1. Human Knowledge, Lon., 1796, 8vo. 2. Guide to the Hist. of Eng., 1801, '04, 8vo. 3. Lect. on the Sciences and Philos., 1806, 2 vols. 8vo.

Florilegus. See MATTHEW OF WESTMINSTER.

Florio, John, the Resolute—for so he styled himself—d. 1625, was a native of London, but a descendant of the Florii of Sienna. He took great delight in philology, and offended the less scrupulous dramatists of the day by declaring that "The plays that they do plaie in England, are neither right comedies, nor right tragedies; but representations of histories without any decorum."

Shakspeare retaliated this assault by ridiculing Florio in his character of Holofernes, the Schoolmaster in Love's Labour Lost.

"The character of Holofernes, however, while it caricatures the peculiar folly and ostentation of Florio, holds up to ridicule, at the same time, the general pedantry and literary affectations of the age; and amongst these, very particularly the absurd innovations which Lilly had introduced."—Drake's Shakspeare and his Times.

1. Florio his first Fruites: which yeelde familiar Speech, merie Prouerbes, wittie Sentences, and golden sayings. Also a perfect Introduction to the Italian and English Tongues, Lon., 1578, '91, 4to. 2. Dialogues of Grammar, Italian and English, 1578. 3. Florios Second Fruites to be gathered of twelve trees, and his Garden of Recreation yielding six thousand Italian Prouerbes, 1591, 8vo. 4. A Worlde of Wordes; or most copious and exact Dictionarie, in Italian and English, 1597, '98, fol. Warton (Hist. of Eng. Poet.) says that the first ed. was in 1595, but we prefer the authority of Wood. Augmented, and pub. under the title of Queen Anne's New World of Words, 1611, fol. New ed., enlarged by Gio. Torriano, 1659, fol. Even the ed. of 1611

"For the variety of words was far more copious than any extant in the world at that time."—Athen. Oxon.

5. Trans. into Eng. of the Essays of Michael, Lord of Montaigne, 1603, '13, '32, fol.

"The independence of his [Montaigne's] mind produces great part of the charm of his writings; it redeems his vanity, without which it could not have been so fully displayed, or, perhaps, so powerfully felt. In an age of literary servitude, when every province into which reflection could wander was occupied by some despot; when, to any nothing of the theology, men found Aristotle, Ulpian, or Hippocrates, at every turning to dictate their road, it was gratifying to fall in company with a simple gentleman who, with much more reading than generally belonged to his class, had the spirit to ask a reason for every rule."—Hollam's Lit. Hist. of Europe.

6. Trans. of A Narration rel. to Navigation, &c. to Newe Fraunce; from Ramutius, 1580, 4to. See Bliss's Wood's Athen. Oxon.

Ramusio was the editor of the excellent collection of Navigation e Viaggi, maps and plates, 3 vols. fol., Venetia, Giunta, 1589-93-94.

"Ramusio's collection of Voyages and Travels, the most perfect work of that nature in any language whatsoever; containing all the Discoveries to the East, West, North, and South; with full descriptions of all the countries discovered; judiciously compiled, and free from that great mass of needless matter which clogs our English Hackliert and Purchas; much more complete and full than the Latin De Bry, and, in fine, the noblest work of this nature."—Locke.

Floris, Pet. Williamson. Journal of his voyage to the East Indies. See Purchas's Pilgrimes, p. 319; 1613.

Flower. Heraldic Visitation of the County Palatine of Durham in 1575, edited by Philipson, Newc., 1826, fol. 100 copies on small and 20 copies on large paper.

"This is the first instance of a heraldic visitation being made public by means of the press."

A few copies only were printed, at the expense of N.J. Philipson.

Flower, Benj. French Constitution, &c., 1792, 4to.

Flower, Christopher. Serms., 1660, '66, '69.

Flower, Henry. Gout and Rheumatism, Lon., 1764, 8vo.

"A more quack advertisement."—Bibl. Brit.

Flower, John. Serm., 1669, 4to.

Flower, Richard. Beer and Brewers, 1662, 8vo. Alleges the malt tax to be impolitic and unjust. If England would abolish her "beer and brewers altogether," she would be greatly benefited. Intemperance is the greatest foe which a country can cherish in her bosom.

Flower, Richard. 1. Letters from Lexington and the Illinois, Lon., 1819, 8vo. Written in June and August, 1810.

"The writer appears to have been free from the usual English prejudices, and speaks well of the country and its inhabitants."—Rich's Bibl. Amer. Novæ.

2. Letters from the Illinois, [1820, '21.] 1822. With a Letter from Mr. Birkbeck, and a pref. and notes by Benj. Flower. See a review in Lon. Quar. Rev., xxvii. 71.

Flower, Robert T. The Radix; Logarithms, 1771.

Flower, Thomas. Serm., 1754, 4to.

Flower, Rev. W. B. 1. Sunday Eve Musings and other Poems, Lon., 1843, cr. 8vo. 2. Classical Tales and Legends, 1847, 18mo. 3. Reading Lessons for the Higher Classes in Grammar and other schools, 1848, 12mo. Commended by the Archbp. of Canterbury, the Bps. of London, Exeter, Lichfield, &c. 4. Tales of Faith and Providence, 1849, 18mo. Theolog. Treatises, 1847-52.

Flower, Wm. Sliding Rule, Lon., 1768, 8vo.

Flowerdew, A. Poems, 1803, 8vo; 3d ed., 1811.

Flowerdew, D. C. Orders in Court, 1807.

Flower, John. Church of Christ, 1658, 12mo.

Floyd, Edward. Locusts in Wales; Spontaneous Combustion of Hay Stacks, &c., Phil. Trans., 1694.

Floyd, John, an Englishman, visited the Continent, became a Jesuit in 1593, and returned to England as a missionary. He pub. several controversial tracts against Chillingworth, Crashaw, Hobb, and other Protestants, 1612-37. See Dodd's Ch. Hist.; Bibl. Brit.

Floyd, Thomas. Perfit Commonwealth, 1600.

Floyd, Thomas. See FLORIO.

Floyer, Sir John, Knt, M.D., 1649-1734, a native of Hinters, Staffordshire, educated at Oxford, was noted for his zeal (a most laudable one) in promoting the general use of the cold bath. He pub. several professional works—Touchstone of Medicine, Lon., 1687, 2 vols. 8vo; works on Baths, on Asthma; a Comment on 42 Histories described by Hippocrates, 1726, 8vo, &c.; Two Essays, 1717, 8vo, and the following curious vol.:

The Sibylline Oracles—trans. from the best Greek Copies and compared with the Sacred Prophecies, especially with David and the Revelations, and with as much history as plainly shows that many of the Sibyl's predictions are exactly fulfilled. With Answers to the Objections made against them, 1713, sm. 8vo.

"This is the best English translation of the Sibylline Oracles, and is curious not only as a version of these singular productions, but as it furnishes a tolerably accurate account of the controversy respecting their truth and authenticity, of which Sir John appears to have been a firm believer."—Orme's Bibl. Eccl.

The name of Floyer will strike many of our readers pleasantly, for it will remind them of our gruff friend Dr. Johnson. It was by Floyer's advice that the "Infant Hercules" was sent to London to be touched by Queen Anne for the King's Evil, and Johnson

"A very short time before his death strongly pressed the Editor of these Anecdotes to give to the publick some account of the life and works of Sir John Floyer, whose learning and piety, the Doctor said, 'deserve recording.'"—Nichols's Lit. Anec., v. 12.

Sir John suffered greatly from the asthma, and when Johnson was labouring under the same ailment, he refers to the experience of the physician:

"Nor does it lay close siege to my life; for Sir John Floyer, whom the physical race consider as author of one of the best books upon it, panted on to ninety, as was supposed. [Sir John is supposed to have been older than he claimed to be."—Letter to Langton, March 27, 1784.

"I am now looking into Floyer, who lived with his asthma to about his ninetieth year."—Letter to Dr. Brocklesby, July 20, 1784.

But in less than five months the "mourners went about the streets" for one who was so short a time before clinging with such tenacity to the remains of life!

Floyer, Phil. The Proctor's Practice in the Eccles. Courts, 2d ed., enlarged by Thos. Wright, Lon., 1746, 8vo. Fludd, Robert, M.D., or de Fluctibus, surnamed "The Searcher," from his investigations in philosophy, medicine, mathematics, &c., 1574-1637, was devoted to occult sciences, and "compounded into a new mass of absurdity all the mysterious and incomprehensible dreams of the Cabalists and Paracelsians." He was a native of Bearstead, Kent, was educated at St. John's Coll., Oxf., and afterwards spent six years in travelling in Europe. As a physician he attained great eminence. He wrote treatises on alchemy, philosophy, medicine, theology, &c., "mostly written in Latin, and as dark and mysterious in their language as in their matter." See a list in Athen. Oxon. A collective edit. of his works was pub. in 6 vols. fol., Oppenh. et Goud. To be complete, there should be 17 parts. See Cat. de la Vallière, No. 1784; Lowndes's Bibl. Man., ii. 729.

"He was esteemed by many scholars a most noted philosopher, an eminent physician, and one strangely profound in obscure matters. He was a zealous brother of the order of Rosicrucians, and did so much doat upon the wonders of chymistry, that he would refer all mysteries and miracles, even of religion, unto it."—Athen. Oxon.

"His books written in Latin are many, great, and mystical. The last some impute to his charity, clouding his matter with dark language, lest otherwise the lustre thereof should dazzle the understanding of the reader. The same phrases he used to his patients; and seeing conceit is very contributive to the well-working of physis, their fancy, or faith natural, was much advanced by his elevated expressions."—Fuller's Worthies of Kent.

This habit of "mystifying" patients, by using "elevated expressions," was not confined to the physicians of Fludd's day. Fuller proceeds to remark:

"His works are for the English to slight or admire, for French and foreigners to understand and use: not that I account them more judicious than our countrymen; but more inquiring into such difficulties. The truth is, here at home his books are not beheld so good as crystal, which (some say) are prized as precious pearls beyond the sea."—Ubi supra.

Fludyer, John. Expos. of the C. Prayer Book of the Ch. of Eng., Lon., 1739, fol. Serms., 1756, 8vo.

Flutter, J. Notes of a Bookworm, consisting chiefly of Extracts from old and scarce works, 1827, 12mo.

Fly, Alamanack for 1662, 8vo.

Fly, Henry, D.D. Serms., 1794, '98, 1804.

Flynt, Henry, d. 1760, aged 84, of Cambridge, Mass. Serms., 1729, &c.

Fobes, Perez, LL.D., d. 1812, aged 70, minister of Raynham, graduated at Harvard Coll., 1762; Prof. in the Coll. in R. Island, 1786. 1. Hist. of Raynham. 2. Funl. Sermon on Prest. Manning, 1791. 3. Election Sermon, 1795.

Foe, De. See De Foe.

Fogg, A. Medical Observations, Newc., 1803, 8vo.

Fogg, Ezekias. Comfort for the Sicken, 1574.

Fogg, Laurence. 1. Two theolog. treatises, Chester, 1712, 8vo. 2. Theologicæ Speculative Schema, 1712, 8vo. 3. Election, 1713, 8vo.

Fogg, Peter Walker. Dissert., Grammat. and Philol., Stockp., 1796, 8vo. 2. Elementa Anglicana, 1797, 2 vols. 8vo.

Folchard, or Folcard, flour. 1066, a French monk who settled in England, wrote the Life and Miracles of John of Beverley, and is said to have composed biographies of St. Bertin, Bishop Oswald, St. Adulf, and St. Botulf. Vide Acta Sanctorum Mensis Maii, tomus ii. fol. Antv., 1680, pp. 168-173. The Life and Miracles of John of Beverley. Mabillon Acta Sanctorum Ordinis S. Benedicti, Seculum iii., pars 1, fol. Paris, 1672, pp. 108-112. The Life and Miracles of St. Bertin, pp. 434, 435. An abridged copy of the life of John of Beverley.

"As a writer there is little in Folchard's style to distinguish him from the common writers of his age."—Wright's Biog. Brit. Lit., q. v.

Foley, James. French Delectus, Lon., 1815, 12mo.

Foley, Richard. Pract. Ct. G. Session, Lon., 1792, 8vo.

Foley, Rev. Robert. 1. Lett. to Dr. Priestley, Stourb., 1793, 8vo. 2. Defence of the Ch. of Eng., Lon., 1795, 8vo.

Foley, Robert. Laws rel. to the Poor, from the 43d Eliz. to the 3d Geo. II., with Cases, &c., Lon., 1739, '43, '51, '58, 8vo.

Foley, Samuel, Bishop of Down and Connor. Serms., 1693, 4to. Giant's Causeway. Phil. Trans., 1694.

Folger, Peleg, 1734-1789, a native of Nantucket, Mass., was employed for a number of years in the fisheries which have made his native town so deservedly famous. He occasionally beguiled the tedium of his voyages by writing very creditable poetry, a specimen of which, extracted from his Journal, will be found in Macy's History of Nantucket.

Folger, Peter, 1618-1690, a native of England, settled at Martha's Vineyard in 1635, and removed to Nantucket in 1662. He married Mary Morrill; his daughter Abiah was the mother of the celebrated Benjamin Franklin. He wrote a poem, finished April 23, 1676, entitled A Looking Glass for the Times.

"The author addresses himself to the governors for the time being; speaks for liberty of conscience, and in favour of the Anabaptists, Quakers, and other Sectaries, who had suffered persecution. . . . The poem appeared to be written with a manly freedom and a pleasing simplicity."—Dr. Franklin.

The following is a specimen of this splendid effort of genius:

"I am for peace and not for war,
And that's the reason why
I write more plain than some men do,
That use to daub and lie.
But I shall cease, and set my name
To what I here insert;
Because to be a libeller,
I hate it with my heart.
From Sherborn town where now I dwell,
My name do I put here
Without offence, your real friend,
It is Peter Folger."

This was pub. in 1675, and reprinted in 1763. It is now very rare, but the reader will find it in that valuable work, which none of our readers should be without, E. A. and G. L. Duyckinck's Cyc. of Amer. Lit.

Folger is described as an "Able, godly Englishman, who was employed in teaching the youth in reading, writing, and the principles of religion by catechising."—Prince's New England. See Allen's Amer. Biog. Dict.; B. Franklin's Works.

Foliot, Gilbert, d. 1188, a monk of Cluny, Abbot of Gloucester, 1139; Bishop of Hereford, 1148; of London, 1163. He wrote Expositio in Cant. Cantuarum, editio Patr. Junius, Lon., 1638, 4to, a number of Letters, &c. Some have been printed in the Epistolæ S. Thomæ, and many are in MS. in the Bodleian Library, &c. See Wright's Biog. Brit. Lit.

Foliot, Robert, d. 1186, Bishop of Hereford, 1174, wrote a treatise De Sacramentis Veteris Testamenti.—Ubi supra.

Folkes, Martin, 1690-1754, an eminent English antiquary, was educated at Saumur, and at Clare Hall, Camb. In 1741 he succeeded Sir Hans Sloane as Pres. of the Royal Society. Tables of English Gold and Silver Coins, with their Weights, Intrinsic Values, &c., 1736, '45, 4to. New ed., much improved, pub. by the Society of Antiquaries, edit. by Dr. Andrew Gifford, 1763, 2 vols. 4to; 1772, 4to. Con. on astronomy, antiquities, and nat. hist., to Phil. Trans., 1717, '37, '45, '70. An interesting account of this learned antiquary will be found in Nichols's Lit. Anecdotes from materials originally drawn up by Dr. Birch. See a Catalogue of the entire and valuable library of M. Folkes, sold by auction, 1756, Lon., 1756, 8vo.

"Mr. Martin Folkes may justly be ranked among the most useful as well as splendid literary characters of which this country can boast. The collection was an exceedingly fine one; enriched with many books of choicest description."—Dibdin's Bibliomania.

Folkingham, or Follingham, W. 1. Epitome of Surveying Methodised, Lon., 1610, 4to. 2. Compound Ale, 1623, 12mo. 3. Brachigraphy, or Short Writing, 8vo. See Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Follen, Charles Theodore Christian, J.U.D., b. Sep. 4, 1796, at Romrød, in the Grand Duchy of Hesse-Darmstadt, perished in the conflagration of the steamboat Lexington, Jan. 13, 1840. He held several responsible positions in Europe and the United States, and from 1831 to 1834 was Prof. of the German Language and Literature in Harvard Coll. For some years before his death he officiated as a Unitarian minister, and in May, 1839, received a call to a congregation at East Lexington, Mass. 1. German Grammar, Bost., 12mo. 2. German Reader. 3. German Verification of the Gospel of St. John, 12mo. A collective edit. of his Works, edited by his widow, Eliza Lee Follen, was pub., in 5 vols. sm. 8vo, in 1841, and in the same year Mrs. Follen pub. a Memoir of his Life, 12mo. Reviews of the Life and Writings of Prof. Follen will be found in the Democratic Rev., vii. 466; Chris. Examiner, xxviii. 87; xxxiii. 33; and Life by H. J. Raymond, in Biog. Ann., 1841, 8vo.

Follen, Eliza Lee, formerly Miss Cabot, a native of Boston, was married in 1828 to Prof. Charles Follen, (see above.) She has pub. several works, the principal of which are Sketches of Married Life, The Skeptic, and a Life of Charles Follen, just noticed. She has also given to the world The Well-Spent Hour, Words of Truth, German Fairy Tales, Hymns, Songs and Fables, Selections from Fénelon, Birthday Poems, and Nursery Songs. The larger part of her poetry will be found in a vol. pub. in Boston in 1839, entitled, Poems on Occasional Topics.

Folliot, Fast Sermon, Lon., 1798, 4to.

Follisius, Jacob. Jacobi Follisii Edinburgensis calamitosae Pestis elegiaca Deploratio, 4to.

Folsom, Charles. 1. Cicero's Orations; English Notes, Bost. 2. Livy; English Notes.

Folsom, George, grad. at Cambridge Univ., 1822; in 1844 was elected to the Senate of the State of N.Y. 1. Hist. Sketches of Saco and Biddeford, Saco, 1830, 12mo. 2. Mexico in 1842, N. York, 1842, 18mo. 3. Letters and Despatches of Cortez; trans. from the Spanish, 1843, 8vo and 12mo.

"This stirring narrative of toll and adventure, addressed by the celebrated conqueror of Mexico to his Sovereign, although replete with the most romantic interest, has hitherto escaped an English translator. Written amidst the very scenes described, in a tone of honest sincerity, and with a scrupulous attention to truth, these Letters, or Dispatches, after being published separately as they were received in Spain, seem to have been overlooked and forgotten when in the lapse of time the original editions had disappeared from the public eye."—Extract from the Preface.

This is a trans. of the second, third, and fourth letters of Cortez, from the ed. pub. in Mexico in 1770 by Lorenzana. Mr. Folsom must not forget the request of Mr. Rich that he would favour us with trans. of other letters of Cortez. 4. Address before the Maine Hist. Soc., Sept. 6, 1846, 8vo.

Folsom, N. S. Crit. and Hist. Interp. of the Prophecies of Daniel, Bost., 1842, 12mo.

Fonblanque, Albany, b. 1800, a son of John de Grenier Fonblanque, the eminent lawyer, was for many years proprietor and editor of the London Examiner, which obtained great reputation through his literary abilities. Much of the matter in his work entitled England under Seven Administrations, pub. in 1837, 3 vols. p. 8vo, originally appeared in his editorial columns. Upon Mr. F.'s acceptance of a post in the Board of Trade, the Examiner passed into the charge of Mr. John Forster.

Fonblanque, John de Grenier, 1758-1837, an eminent English lawyer, Senior King's Counsel, and Senior Bench of the Hon. Society of the Middle Temple. 1. A Treatise of Equity, 1792, '93, 2 vols. 8vo; 4th ed., with Francis's Maxims of Equity, 1812, 7 vols. 8vo; 5th ed., 1820, 2 vols. 8vo; 4th Amer. ed., by Anthony Laussat, Brookfield, 1835, 2 vols. in 1, 8vo. The original of this work was an anonymous treatise, pub. Lon., 1737, fol., ascribed to Henry Ballou. Mr. F. added as much as he found, both in quantity and value, and gained great reputation by his labours.

"Few works have attained such universal approbation, or been more generally read. The notes are copious, perspicuous, and learned, and the authorities are full and pertinent."—Hoffman's Leg. Sta., 400.

It has been pretty much superseded, both in England and America, by Maddock's Chancery and Chief-Justice Story's Commentaries on Equity Jurisprudence.

2. Doubts, &c. rel. to Bullion Committee's Recommendation, 1810, 8vo. 3. To Electors, 8vo.

Fonblanque, J. S. M., Com. of Bkrupts., son of the preceding Fonblanque. 1. Bkrupt. Statutes, 1825, 8vo. 2. Medical Jurisprudence, 1823, 3 vols. 8vo, in conjunction with J. A. Paris, M.D.

Fonblanque, J. W. M. Cases in the several Cts. of the Com. of Bkruptcy. Act 1849, Lon., 1849-51, Pts. 1 and 2.

Fond, John. System of Music, Lon., 1725, 8vo.

Foord, or Ford, Anthony. Summary of the Sacraments, Lon., 16mo. Sine anno.

Foord, Edward. See Ford.

Foord, John. Expos. lib. Psalmorum, 1646, 4to.

Foord, Joseph, a minister of the Ch. of Scotland. 19 Serms., Edin., 1719, 8vo; 3d ed., 1759, 12mo.

Foot, James. Penseroso; or, The Pensive Man in his Solitudes; a Poem, in six Books, Lon., 1771, 8vo.

Foot, Jesse, 1744-1827, an English surgeon, pub. several professional treatises, The Life of John Hunter, 1794, 8vo; The Life of A. R. Bowes and the Countess of Strathmore, 1810, 8vo; The Life of Arthur Murphy, 1811, 4to; and some other works.

Foot, John, surgeon. Appeal, 1769, 8vo.

Foot, Peter. Agricult. of Middlesex, 1794, 4to

"Always reckoned a superior work."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Foot, Rev. Wm. A Charge, Lon., 1753, 8vo.

Foot, Lt. Andrew H., Commander U. States Navy. Africa and the American Flag, N. York, 1854, 12mo. An interesting work.

Foot, Capt. E. J., Rear-Admiral of the Blue, R.

Navy. Vindication of his Conduct against the Misrep. of McArthur and Clarke in the Life of Nelson, 1807.

Foot, H. S. Texas and the Texans, Phila., 1841, 2 vols. 12mo. See Lieber's Essays on Property, &c., 148.

Foot, James, minister of the Free East Church, Aberdeen. 1. Lectures on the Gospel according to Luke, Edin., 6 vols. sm. 8vo; 2d ed., 1849, 3 vols. fp. 8vo; 3d ed., 1857, 2 vols. 8vo.

"These Lectures are characterised by the valuable qualities of good sense, scriptural sentiment, and perspicuous style."—Edin. Chris. Instruc.

"Very practical and useful."—Bickersteth's C. S.

2. Treatise on Effectual Calling, 1846, fp. 8vo.

"We cordially recommend this little volume as well adapted to awaken the careless, and to instruct and encourage the thoughtful."—Baptist Mag.

Foot, Samuel, 1722-1777, "The English Aristophanes," a native of Truro, Cornwall, was of a highly respectable family. After pursuing his studies at Worcester Coll., Ox., and at the Middle Temple, he went upon the stage, where, not meeting with the success he desired, he determined to turn dramatic author, and write pieces suited to his capacities as an actor. In 1747 he opened the Little Theatre in the Haymarket, with a piece of his own, called The Diversions of the Morning, which was very successful. We need not marvel at this when we consider that he represented real characters, and imitated their voice, gait, and gestures, in the most striking manner. Thenceforth the Little Theatre, Haymarket, was understood to be the regular summer resort when the other two theatres were closed.

Of the following comic dramatic pieces of his composition—taken from Biog. Dramat.—twenty were pub. 1. An Auction of Pictures, 1748. 2. Taste, 1752. 3. The Englishman in Paris, 1753. 4. The Knights, 1754. 5. The Englishman returned from Paris, 1756. 6. The Author, 1757. 7. The Minor, 1760. 8. The Orators, 1762. 9. The Lyar, 1762. 10. The Mayor of Garrat, 1764. 11. The Patron, 1764. 12. The Commissary, 1765. 13. Prelude on opening the Theatre, 1767. 14. The Lame Lover, 1778. 15. Piety in Pattens, 1773. 16. The Bankrupt, 1776. 17. The Devil upon Two Sticks, 1768. 18. The Maid of Bath, 1771. 19. The Nabob, 1772. 20. The Coseners, 1774. 21. The Capuchin, 1776. 22. A Trip to Calais, 1778. 23. The Trial of Samuel Foot, 1763. 24. Diversions of the Morning, 1747, '58. 25. Lindamira, 1805. 26. The Slanderer. Left in MS. 27. The Young Hypocrite. For particulars respecting dates see Biog. Dramat.; and see a notice of some other works, ascribed to him, in Bibl. Brit. Dramatic Works, 1778, 4 vols. 8vo. Frequently reprinted in 2 vols. 8vo. Life, 1788, 8vo. Memoirs of his Life, and some of his Writings, see COOKE, WILLIAM.

Foot was as much famed for his numerous powers in social life as he was on the stage. Of this we have an amusing evidence in the following story, related by Dr. Johnson:

"The first time I was in company with Foot was at Fitcher's. Having no good opinion of the fellow, I was resolved not to be pleased; and it is very difficult to please a man against his will. I went on eating my dinner pretty sullenly, affecting not to mind him; but the dog was so very comical, that I was obliged to lay down my knife and fork, throw myself back in my chair, and fairly laugh it out. Sir, he was irresistible."

Boswell remarks:

"Foot told me that Johnson said of him, 'For loud, obtrusive, broad-faced mirth, I know not his equal.'"

It is not difficult to guess at the secret of Foot's success with Johnson:

"He [Foot] was, perhaps, the only man among the set, totally independent of Johnson's monarchy; he had an intrepid wit and pleasantry of his own, and was fearless of any colloquial antagonist."—Oldman's Random Records.

See Boswell's Life of Johnson; Cooke's Life of Foot; Davies's Life of Garrick.

Foot, Samuel, Jr. Reform; a Farce, modernised from Aristophanes, Lon., 1792, 8vo.

Foot, Wm. Henry, D.D. 1. Sketches of North Carolina, Hist. and Biog., N. York, 1846, 8vo. 2. Sketches of Virginia, Hist. and Biog., N. York, Phila., 1849, 8vo; 2d Series, 1855, 8vo.

"And now, kind reader, you shall be introduced to some of those early settlements made by men of strong minds, ready hands, and brave hearts, the elements of whose character, like the country they chose, have been developed in the prosperity of Virginia."—Introduction.

Forbes. Eloge de la Ville Edinbourg, divisé en quatre Chants, par le Sieur de Forbes, Edin., 1753, 12mo.

Forbes, Alexander. An Anatomy of Independency, Lon., 1644, 4to.

Forbes, Alexander, Lord Forbes of Pitligo, d. 1749, an adherent of the exiled Royal family, commanded a troop of horse in the Rebellion of 1745. After the battle of Culloden he fled to France, but returned to Scotland in 1749. He is supposed to be the prototype of the Baron of Bravardine in Sir Walter Scott's Waverley. He wrote Moral and Philosophical Essays, 1763.

"His lordship is said to have been a man of good parts, great honour and spirit, and universally beloved and esteemed." See Park's Walpole's R. & N. Authors.

Forbes, Alexander. Hist. of Upper and Lower California, Lon., 1839, 8vo.

"This work furnishes us with a striking illustration of the wretchedness of man, if he lives without exchange and well-developed property, even though surrounded by a bountiful nature."—Lieber's Essays on Property and Labour, p. 140; and see pp. 148, 149.

"A valuable work. The author was one of the first of the Anglo-Saxon race to explore this, till lately, unknown country: he reaped the reward of his enterprise by securing the possession of the great quicksilver mines, now worked by the firm of which he is the head."

"A work of superior excellence and most useful instruction."—CHANCELLOR KENT.

Forbes, Alexander P., D.C.L., Bishop of Brechin. 1. Comment on the Te Deum, 1850, 32mo. 2. Short Explanation of the Nicene Creed, Oxf., 1850, 32, 8vo.

Forbes, Arthur, Earl of Granard. A True Copie of Two Letters brought by Mr. Peters, &c., Lon., 1642, 4to.

Forbes, Daniel. Case of Iteus; Med. Com., 1785.

Forbes, David. A Prophecie of Doomsday, 2d ed., Edin., 1831, 18mo.

Forbes, Rt. Hon. Duncan, 1685–1747, a native of Culloden, studied at Edinburgh, Utrecht, Leyden, and Paris, and, after his return from the continent in 1707, practised as an advocate: Solicitor-General from Scotland, 1717; Lord Advocate, 1725; Lord President of the Ct. of Sessions, 1737. In the Rebellion of 1745 he zealously opposed the Pretender, and was so much chagrined at the ungrateful refusal of government to reimburse his expenses thereby incurred, that he fell a victim to a fever produced by excitement of mind. 1. Thoughts on Religion, Natural and Revealed, Edin., 1735, 43, 8vo. Trans. into French by Father Houbigant.

"President Forbes was a considerable Hebrew scholar, of the school of Hutchinson. The system of that singular writer appears to greater advantage in this small volume than in any of his own works, or those of his other followers."—Orme's Bib. Bib.

2. Letter to a Bishop resp. some imp. Discov. in Philos. and Theol., Lon., 1735, 4to. Also trans. into French by Father Houbigant. 3. Reflections on the Sources of Incredulity with regard to Religion, Edin., 1750, 2 vols. 12mo, or 1 vol. 12mo. Posth.

"A little jewel. I knew and venerated the man; one of the greatest that ever Scotland bred, both as a judge, a patriot, and a Christian."—BENNET WARBURTON.

4. Works, with a biog. Sketch of the Author by J. Bannatyne, Esq., Edin., 1816, 8vo. Works, 2 vols. 12mo. See Memoirs of the Life and Writings of Duncan Forbes, Lon., 1748, 8vo; the Culloden Papers, 1815, 4to; Lord Woodhouselee's Life of Kames; Chambers's Lives of Illust. and Dist. Scotsmen; J. H. Burton's Lives of Duncan Forbes and Lord Lovat, Lon., 1847, p. 8vo; Edin., Lon. Quart., and N. Brit. Reviews.

"His natural talents were of the very first order, enlarged by an excellent education, completely disciplined and fully matured by habits of intense study, and of minute, and at the same time, extensive observation; and they were all employed most honourably and conscientiously in the real business of life."—Lord Woodhouselee.

Forbes, Duncan. 1. E. India and Col. Guide, Lon., 1841, 12mo. 2. Hindustani Manual, 1845, 2d ed., 1848, 18mo. 3. Hindustani Gram., 1846, 8vo. 4. Hindu Reader, r. 8vo. 5. Persian Gram., r. 8vo. 6. Bagh-O-Bahar: Tales in Hindustani, 1846, r. 8vo. 7. Diet. Hind.-Eng., Eng.-Hind., 1846, 8vo. The most copious dict. of the kind in a portable form. 8. Oriental Penmanship, 1849, 4to.

Forbes, Prof. Edward, 1815–1854. 1. Hist. of Brit. Star Fishes, Lon., 1841, demy 8vo and r. 8vo. This vol. is uniform with the Brit. Quadrupeds and Brit. Reptiles, by Prof. Bell, and the Brit. Birds and Brit. Fishes, by Mr. Yarrell.

"Discloses a world of wonders round our shores. The illustrations, in which fancy is made to enlighten science, are very beautiful."—British Critic.

2. Inaugural Lect. on Botany, 1843, 8vo. 3. Synopsis of the Brit. Naked-eyed Pulmograde Medusae. Ray Society, 3d issue, 4th year, 1847. 4. In conjunction with S. Hanley; Hist. of Brit. Mollusca, 1853, 4 vols. 8vo, £6 10s. r. 8vo; plates col'd, £13. 5. Zoology of the Voyage of H. M. Ship Herald, 3 vols. r. 4to. 6. In conjunction with Prof. Huxley; Mollusca and Radiata of the Voyage of H. M. Ship Herald. Preparing for publication, (1855.)

Forbes, Eli, D.D., 1726–1804, minister of Brookfield and of Gloucester, Mass. He pub. A Family Book, Serms., &c., 1761–92, &c.

Forbes, F. E. 1. Six Months' Service in the African Blockade, Lon., p. 8vo. Five Years in China, 1842–47, 1848, 8vo. 3. Dahomey and the Dahomans, 1849–50, 2 vols. p. 8vo, 1851.

Forbes, Francis. 1. New Husbandry, Lon., 1778, 8vo. 2. Improvement of Waste Lands, 1778, 8vo.

"The practical part is nothing."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Forbes, G. H. Prize Essay on the Goodness of God, Edin., 1849, 8vo.

Forbes, J. G., of the city of New York. Sketches of Florida, 1821.

Forbes, James, 1749–1819, a native of London, connected with the civil service of the East India Company.

1. Letters from France in 1803–04, Lon., 1806, 2 vols. 8vo. 2. Reflections on the Character of the Hindoos, and the importance of converting them to Christianity, 1810, 8vo.

3. Oriental Memoirs: a Narrative of Seventeen Years' Residence in India, including Observ. on parts of Africa and S. America, and Journals of Four Indian Voyages. Embellished with 95 fine engravings, by Charles Heath, Storer, Greig, Angus, and Wageman, Lon., 1813–15, 4 vols. 4to. Pub. at £16 16s. Some copies have 27 addit. Plates, by Thomas and Wm. Daniell, also sold separately [at about £2 2s.] to complete former copies. The Plates of Nat. Hist. are beautifully col'd. See a list of the 122 engravings in H. G. Bohn's Guinea Cat., 1841.

This splendid work, with the addit. 27 plates, can now be procured for about eight guineas. For an extended description of it we must refer the reader to the London Quart. Rev., xii. 180–227. Mr. Forbes compiled this work from his original materials of 150 folio vols., containing 52,000 pages of MS. letters and drawings.

"The volumes were published at his own cost, and a work more splendid or more complete in its decorations we have seldom seen."—Lon. Quar. Rev.

"The drawings and collections of Mr. Forbes seem almost to exceed the powers of human industry and perseverance, and this literary monument to his name may fairly be considered the essence of his extraordinary researches. The whole work is very entertaining as well as instructive."—Lon. Lit. Gaz.

"Of all the works which have been published on India, this, perhaps, is the most sterlingly valuable."—Lon. Atlas.

"It is to be regretted that this very splendid and expensive work was not published in a cheaper form, as it abounds in most striking pictures of the manners, customs, &c. of India."—Seven-son's Voyages and Travels.

Since the above was written, Mr. Forbes's daughter, the Countess de Montalembert, has pub. (in 1834) an abridgt. of the Oriental Memoirs, in 2 vols. 8vo, with a 4to Atlas of 85 Plates, of which 24—those of Nat. Hist.—are beautifully col'd. Such copies were pub. at £5 15s. 6d., and can now be had for about £2 15s.; or the Atlas alone for £1 15s.

Forbes, James D., Prof. of Nat. Philos. in the Univ. of Edin. 1. Travels through the Alps of Savoy, Lon., 1843, imp. 8vo; 2d ed., 1845.

"This work contains ample and exact details in topography. . . . It abounds with daring and hazardous adventures, contains notices of occasional catastrophes that have befallen less fortunate explorers, presents interesting discoveries with new deductions, and is clothed in a style and diction entirely in keeping with the beauty and grandeur of the subject. . . . We have perused the work with intense pleasure and large instruction."—Silliman's American Journal of Science and Arts.

"Es ist unstreitig eines der gediegensten Werke die seit längerer Zeit über die Alpen erschienen sind. . . . Zugleich ist die Darstellung so geschmackvoll, und die theoretischen und abstrakten Untersuchungen sind so geschickt verflochten mit historischen und beschreibenden Stücken, dass man das Buch mit immer steigendem Interesse zu Ende liest."—Leonhard's Jahrbuch.

"This elaborate and beautifully-illustrated work."—Quarterly Review.

. . . "Pregnant with interest."—Edinburgh Review.

2. Norway and its Glaciers visited in 1851, Edin., 1853, r. 8vo.

Forbes, James Grant. Sketches, Hist. and Topog., of the Floridas, N. York, 1821, 8vo.

"A wretched compilation from old works."—N. Amer. Rev., xvi. 482.

"Contains much valuable information."—ib., xiii. 98.

Forbes, John, 1570?–1634, originally a minister of the Ch. of Scotland, became minister at Middleburg, in Holland, about 1611. 1. A Treatise tending to clear the Doctrine of Justification, Middle., 1616, 4to; 1636. 2. Certain Records touching the Estate of the Kirk in the Years 1605 and 1606, pub. with Wm. Scot's Apologetical Narration rel. to Kirk of Scotland, Edin., 1846, 8vo.

Forbes, John, of Corse, 1593–1648, second son of Bishop Patrick Forbes, was educated at King's Coll., Aberdeen, and in Germany; Prof. of Divinity and Eccles. Hist., King's Coll., Aberdeen, 1619; ejected for refusing to sign the Covenant, 1640. He resided for two years in Holland, and is sometimes confounded with John Forbes, ante. His Ironium pro Ecclesia Scotiana, Aberd., 1629, 4to, written to compose the religious dissensions of Scotland, and the Institutiones Historico-Theologice, Amst., 1645, fol., have been greatly admired. A collective edit. of his works was pub. by Prof. Gurtler, of Deventer, and George Garden, of Aberdeen, in 1703, 2 vols. fol. Opera Omnia, inter quæ plurima Posthuma cum Vita Auctoris, Amst.

"The most valuable book of the kind that any student can possibly make use of. He will there see a complete history of all the controversies that have distracted the Church of Christ, deduced through every age, with their minutest branches and subdivisions. The proper authorities are always set down, so that nothing needs to be taken on trust."—Worron.

"Forbes was an excellent man, a profound scholar, and masterly writer."—Dr. Williams's C. P.

"Much learning and piety in his works."—Bickersteth's C. S.

Forbes, John, of Delft. Serm., Delft, 1642, 12mo.

Forbes, John. Cure of the Afflicted, Lon., 1643, 12mo.

Forbes, John. Songs and Fancies to several Musical Parts, with a brief Introduc. to Musick, Aberd., 1682, 4to. 2. Mariner's Everlasting Almanack, 1685.

Forbes, John. Epigrammata, Lon., 1739, 4to.

Forbes, John, D.D., minister of St. Paul's Church, Glasgow. Theory of the Differential and Integral Calculus, Lon., 1838, 8vo.

"One of those brilliant beacons which will long illuminate the path of science."—Scottish Guardian.

Forbes, John, LL.D., of Donaldson's Hospital, Edinburgh. Symmetrical Structure of Scripture, Edin., 8vo.

"Dr. Forbes is a profound and accurate scholar; he has brought much learning, both oriental and occidental, to bear on this volume."—Biblioth. Sacra.

"A most valuable commentary on the passages adduced, as well as the key to the further comprehension of the sacred writings in general."—Ch. of Eng. Quar. Rev.

Forbes, Sir John, M.D., D.C.L., Physician to her Majesty's Household, editor of the Brit. and For. Med. Rev., one of the editors of the Cyc. of Practical Medicine, (see DUNGLISON, ROBERT, M.D., No. 8), &c. 1. Observa. on the Climate of Pensance, &c., Lon., 1828. 2. A Manual of Select Medical Bibliography, Lon., 1835, r. 8vo. This otherwise excellent work has one capital defect,—the want of an Index Nominum. We marvel at so great an oversight. 3. Illust. of Modern Mesmerism, Lon., 1846, 8vo. 4. Treatise on Diseases of the Chest, 8vo. 5. Genl. Index to the Brit. and For. Med. Rev., 1849, 8vo. 6. A Physician's Holiday; or, A Month in Switzerland during the Year 1848; 1849, p. 8vo; 3d ed., 1852.

"Those who contemplate a thorough or a partial tour through Switzerland will find A Physician's Holiday very useful."—Lon. Spectator.

7. Memoranda made in Ireland, 1852; 1852. 8. Sight-Seeing in Germany, &c., 1855, p. 8vo; 1856. 9. Nature and Art in the Cure of Disease, 1857, cr. 8vo; 2d ed., 1858.

Forbes, John, M.D. Physiological Effects of Alcoholic Drinks, Bost. 2. Water-Cure; or, Hydropathy, Phila. 3. Homoeopathy, Allopathy, and Physic, 1846, 12mo.

Forbes, John H., and John Jardine. Decisions in Ct. of Sess., Nov., 1801–July, 1807, Edin., fol.

Forbes, Major John. Eleven Years in Ceylon; Field Sports; Nat. Hist.; Antiq., Lon., 1840, 2 vols. 8vo.

Forbes, Leslie. Speech in H. of Com., 1817.

Forbes, Murray. Gravel and Gout, Lon., 1793, 8vo.

Forbes, Patrick, 1564–1635, Lord of Corse and Baron of O'Neil, a native of Aberdeenshire, educated at Aberdeen and St. Andrews, Chancellor of the Univ. of Aberdeen, was made Bishop of Aberdeen in 1618. His Lordship pub. some serms., 1635, 4to, and two theolog. treatises, 1614, '27, but is best known by his Commentarie upon the Revelation of St. John, Middleb., 1614, 4to. A trans., by his son, John Forbes, (see ante), was pub. at Amst. in 1646, 4to. This includes his two theolog. treatises noticed above.

"The Commentary is brief, but discovers some learning and attention to the meaning of the Apocalypse. The author was one of the most respectable of the Scottish divines who embraced Episcopacy."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

In 1635, 4to, was pub. Funerals of Patrick Forbes, of Corse, Bishop of Aberdene, consisting of serms., orations, epitaphs, and other pieces on the death of the good Bishop. This was reprinted by Charles Farquhar Shand, Esq., Advocate, Edin., 1845, 8vo, for the Spottiswoode Society.

"Few such literary monuments have been raised to the memory of distinguished individuals as the Funerals of Bp. Patrick Forbes."—Vide Preface.

Forbes, Patrick, M.D. Full View of the Pub. Transac. in the Reign of Q. Elizabeth, Lon., 1740, '41, 2 vols. fol.

Forbes, Patrick, D.D. Principles of Interpretation of the O. Test., trans. from the Institutio Interpretis Veteris Testamenti of J. H. Pareau, Edin., 1835–38, 2 vols. 12mo. This work also forms vols. xxi., xxiv., of the Edin. Cabinet Library.

"It is a very useful compendium of the principles of sacred hermeneutics applied to the Old Testament. The translation is faithful and accurate."—Horne's Bibl. Bib.

Forbes, Robert. Collec. of Scot. Poems, with a Collec. of Scot. Proverbs, by Rev. David Ferguson, 1777, 12mo.

Forbes, William, 1585–1634, a native of Aberdeen, and educated in that city and abroad, became Principal of Marischal Coll., Aberdeen, and Rector of the Univ. He was the first Bishop of Edinburgh, but died in three months after his consecration. After his death was pub. his Considerationes modestæ et pacificæ Controversiarum, de Justificatione, Purgatorio, Invocatione Sanctorum et Christo Meditatore, Eucharistia, Lon., 1658, 8vo. This was edited by Dr. Thomas Gale. It is in course of republication, 4th ed., in the Lib. Anglo-Cath. Theol., vol. i., 1850, 8vo; vol. ii., we presume, may be expected shortly.

Forbes, William, Prof. of Law, Glasgow. 1. Bills of Exchange, Edin., 1703, '18, 12mo. 2. Church Lands and Tithes, 1705, 12mo. 3. Remarks on James Gordon's Observ. on No. 2, 1706, 12mo. 4. Justices of Peace in Scot., 1707, 12mo. 5. Law of Election, M. P., for Scot., 1740, 8vo. 6. Jour. of the Session, 1714, 12mo. 7. Institutes of the Law of Scot., 1722–30, 2 vols. 8vo.

Forbes, Sir William, 1739–1806, a native of Pitligo, in conjunction with Sir James Hunter Blair, founded the first banking establishment in Edinburgh. Account of the Life and Writings of James Beattie, LL.D., including many of his original Letters, Edin., 1806, 2 vols. 4to; 1807, 3 vols. 8vo; 1824, 2 vols. 8vo. See BEATTIE, JAMES, LL.D.

"For what Sir William Forbes has written in these volumes, we can easily forgive him; but he cannot escape censure for much of what he has published. . . . Protesting, as we have always done, against the multiplication of needless quartos and the publication of ordinary epistles, we cannot avoid saying that his book is a great deal longer, and a great deal duller, than we are bound to tolerate."—Lord Jervis: Edin. Rev., x. 172.

Forby, Rev. Robert, Rector of Fincham, Norfolk. 1. Lett. to Bp. of Norwich rel. to Bible Society and Missy Society, 1815, 8vo. 2. Vocabulary of Norfolk and Suffolk, by Turner, Lon., 2 vols. 8vo. New ed., 1840, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

Force, Peter, President of the National Institute at Washington, D.C. His library of works relating to America is perhaps the largest ever collected in the U.S. 1. The National Calendar, and Annals of the U. States for 1833, Washington, 1833, 12mo, pp. 336: continued for a few years. 2. Tracts and other Papers relating principally to the Origin, Settlement, and Progress of the Colonies in N. America from the Discovery of the Country to 1776, 1836–47, 4 vols. r. 8vo.

"With these slight abridgements, [see article,] we regard the volume before us as a very valuable contribution to the materials of our early history, and as highly creditable to the capacity and diligence of the editor. . . . We intended, had the limits of this article permitted, to give some account of another work projected by Mr. Force. In connection with Matthew St. Clair Clarke, under a contract with the Government of the United States, to be entitled 'The Documentary History of the Revolution': a work, the plan of which is gigantic, and the execution of which would be a task truly Herculean. The plan contemplates the publishing of every document relating to the history of the United States, whether printed or manuscript, from the origin of the colonies down to the adoption of the Federal Constitution. The work will occupy at least twenty-five volumes, and the cost of fifteen hundred copies is estimated at four hundred and eight thousand dollars. We hope that the work, in some modified form, will go on; although we very much fear that this large historical drag-net will sweep up some rubbish, as well as much valuable material. Should the first volume ever appear, we shall take an opportunity to go more at large into the subject."—J. G. PALFREY: N. Amer. Rev., xliii. 274–278.

3. American Archives: Documentary History of the American Revolution; 4th Series, 6 vols., Washington, 1837–46; 5th Series, 3 vols., 1848–53,—in all, 9 vols. fol. Owing to a misunderstanding in regard to the law authorizing the publication of this most valuable work, it was discontinued while Mr. Marcy was Sec. of State of the U.S. See CLARKE, MATTHEW ST. CLAIR, and N. Amer. Rev., xli. 475. 4. Record of Auroral Phenomena Observed in the Higher Northern Latitudes; Smithsonian Contrib., Washington, 1856, 4to. His contributions on the subject of Arctic Discovery were considered as authority by Dr. Kane.

Ford, Miss. 1. Lett.. 2. Musie Glasses, 1761, '62. Ford, Anthony. See FOORD.

Ford, David. Funl. Serm., Lon., 1794, 8vo.

Ford, David Everard. 1. Rud. of Music, Lon. 2. Orig. Psalm and Hymn Tunes, 1833. 3. Chorazin, 1841, 18mo. 4. Damascus, 1843, 18mo. 5. Dampville; new ed., 1843, 18mo.

"A work which has been read by all classes of the community, and has been uniformly blessed by God to the revival of pure and undistorted religion in various parts of the country."—Lon. Congreg. Assn., Aug. 1841.

6. Pastoral Addresses, 1843, 32mo. 7. Leadless, 1844, 18mo. 8. Alarm in Eden, 1845, 18mo. 9. Congreg. Psalmody, 1849, ob.

"We congratulate the author on the growing acceptance of his works, thousands following thousands in rapid conversion. This God we regard as a token for good. They are blessed by the blessing of God, to many lasting benefits on the church and the world."—Lon. Association, Oct. 1845.

Ford, Sir Edward, a son of Sir John Ford, Sussex, was educated at Trin. Coll., Ox. 1. A Design for bringing a River to St. Giles, Lon., 1841, 1720, 4to. 2. Expost. Proposals how the King may have money, &c., 1846, 4to. 3. Defence of Bill Credit. Printed at end of No. 3. In Chalmers's Diet., and also in Ross's Diet., we find this author called Sir John Ford.

"He was a great virtuous of his time, yet none of the Royal society, and might have done greater matters, if that he had not been discouraged for these things he had done before."—Athen. Goss., p. 5.

Ford, or Feord, Edward. 1. Wine and Women, Lon., 1647, 12mo. 2. An Alarm of Trumpets, 1651, 12mo. 3. Fair Play in the Lottery; or Mirth for Money, 1660, 12mo.

Ford, Edward, surgeon. Dissection of the Hip Joint, &c., Lon., 1794, 8vo; 3d ed., by T. Copeland, 1810, 8vo. Com. to Med. Obs. and Inq., 1778; to Med. Trans., 1791, '96.

Ford, George. Sermon, 1794, 1803.

Ford, J. Orig. Righteousness, &c., 1875, 8vo.

Ford, James, late of Oriskany Coll., Prof. of Exeter. The Gospel of St. Matthew illustrated from ancient and modern authors, Lon., 1844, 8vo; of St. Mark, &c., 1849; of St. Luke, &c., 1851; of St. John, &c., 1852.

Notes of the work on St. Matthew:

"In examining this work we have been struck with its adaptation to the wants of preachers. The tone of the French is excellent, and inspires confidence in the principles of the writer; his selections are very good."—English Rev., Sept. 1846.

Notes of the work on St. Mark:

"The true value of this work is in suggesting, in brief, inspiring, sermon thoughts."—Lon. Christian Association, April, 1849.

Notes of the work on St. Luke:

"The brevity, depth, and variety of the extracts from the most popular and valuable features of the work, and give it a great practical superiority over most other commentaries, both for the clergy and laity."—English Churchman, May 22, 1861.

Ford, John, an eminent dramatic poet, was born at Iffington, Devonshire, in 1688. Of the time of his death much has been conjectured, but nothing is known. Where he was educated does not appear, but we know that in 1692 he became a member of the Middle Temple, and, unlike most authors, and especially dramatic authors, persevered in his arduous profession. What particular branch of the law he pursued we are unable at this late day to determine. As early as his 18th year he pub. a poem entitled Fane's Memorial, a tribute to the memory of Charles Blount, Lord Mountjoy and Earl of Devonshire. There was little in this effusion to indicate future eminence in the walks of poetry; but the publication of his verses was sufficient to give him that note for authorship which almost infallibly follows upon seeing "one's name in print."

"Fane's Memorial is worth reading as a warning to all those sycophantic writers who prostrate the names or figures of authors from their juvenilia. Had any new prodigy that the maker of all that stuff was to deserve a lofty name among England's dramatists, he would have been as heartily laughed at as he who should have dreamed to Twicken that a Christian priest would one day fold his arms from the Seven Hills more devoted critics than his own."—HARLEY COLUMBIA.

Some time after this he had the honour of assisting Webster in A Late Murderer of the Sonne upon the Mother, a play which appears to be lost. He also joined with Decker in the Fairy Knight and The Bristowe Merchant, neither of which are extant. We also lack three of Ford's plays, entered on the Stationers' Books in 1660, (see Nos. 12, 13, 14,) of which An Ill Beginning has a Good End, a Comedy, was played at the Cockpit in 1613. The following is a list of his own plays, and those in the composition of which he had a share:

1. The Lover's Melancholy. T. C. Acted at the Blackfriars and the Globe, Nov. 24, 1628. Printed, 1629. 2. The Pity She's a Whore. T. Acted at the Phoenix. Printed, 1633. 3. The Witch of Edmonton. T. By Rowley, Decker, Ford, &c. Acted at the Cockpit and at Court; probably soon after 1632. Printed, 1638. 4. The Sun's Darling. M. Dy Ford and Decker. Acted, March, 1633-34, at the Cockpit. Printed, 1667. 5. The Broken Heart. T. Acted at the Blackfriars. Printed, 1633. 6. Love's Sacrifice. T. Acted at the Phoenix. Printed, 1633. 7. Perkin Warbeck. H. T. Acted at the Phoenix. Printed, 1634. 8. The Fancie, Chaste and Noble. C. Acted at the Phoenix. Printed, 1638. 9. The Lady's Trial. T. C. Acted at the Cockpit, May, 1638. Printed, 1639. 10. Beauty in a Trance. T. Entered on the Stationers' Books, Sept. 9, 1635, but not printed. Destroyed by Mr. Warburton's servant. 11. The London Merchant. C. 12. The Royal Combat. C. 13. An Ill Beginning has a Good End. C. Played at the Cockpit, 1612. Nos. 11, 12, and 13 were entered on the Stationers' Books, June 28, 1640, but were never printed. Destroyed by Mr. Warburton's servant. 14. The Fairy Knight. Ford and Decker. Lost. 15. A Late Murderer of the Sonne upon the Mother. Ford and Webster. Lost. 16. The Bristowe Merchant. Ford and Decker. Lost.

A little manual, entitled A Line of Life, pointing at the immortality of a virtuous name, 1620, 12mo, written by a John Ford, has been attributed to our author. A collective edit. of Ford's Dramatic Works, with an Introduction and explanatory Notes by H. Weber, Esq., was pub., Lon., 1811, 2 vols. 8vo. A notice of this edit., and of the characters of Ford, by Lord Jeffrey, will be found in the Edin. Rev., x. 275, 304, and another by William Gifford in the Quart. Rev., vi. 442-457. Also see A Letter to William Gifford, Esq., on a late Edition of Ford's Plays, chiefly as relating to Ben Jonson, (in which it is proved that Jonson and Ford were not hostile,) by Octavius Gilbert, 1811, 8vo. A Letter to J. P. Kemble, Esq., involving strictures on a recent Edition of Ford's Dramatic Works, 1811, 8vo, and a letter on the same subject addressed to Richard Heber, Esq., 1812, 8vo. Mr. Gifford, in the critique referred to above, complains of the meagreness of Weber's biographical account of his author, remarking that "It would surely be unjust to appear dissatisfied at the fragment account of an ancient author when all the sources of information have been industriously explored. But in the present case we doubt whether Mr. Weber can fairly lay this faulting justice to his rival; and we shall therefore give such a sketch of the poet's life, as an attentive examination of his writings has enabled us to compile."

Mr. Gifford proceeds to show that Weber was as faulty an editor as he was a biographer. We need not, therefore, be surprised that he determined himself to assume those duties which had been so inadequately performed by another. His edition of Ford's Works appeared in 1827, 3 vols. 8vo. It is acknowledged to be far superior to the preceding edition. In 1847 Mr. Tegg pub. Ford's Works in the Dramatic Series of the Family Library, being Nos. 4 and 5, 18mo, of that series. Now heartily we approve of Mr. Tegg's expurgated editions of the dramatic poets may be gathered from our remarks in the article on Beaumont and Fletcher, where we refer to Mr. Mozan's editions of the same authors. In this latter series, The Works of Massinger and Ford were pub. in one volume in 1848. In the power of graphic representations of the tragic, the terrible, and equally in the melting and the pathetic, Ford has few equals. It is greatly to be deplored that his taste was as bad as his genius was splendid, and that his Beaumontism disgusts even whilst his imagination charms. The revolting subjects selected for his best dramas—The Broken Heart, Love's Sacrifice, and The Pity She's a Whore—show a determination to excite attention even if he failed to command respect, and to surprise the mind rather than improve the heart. For this great error of choice and treatment of subjects, he had not even the invalid excuse—pleaded for some in his day—of importunate creditors and straitness of bread:

He constantly he displayed great power in those horrors, which one all he desired, but had he been 'of the first order' of poets, he would have turned and displayed superior power in the other manner of to-day, in fables to which all are liable, virtues which all may practise, and errors for which all may be better."—Marshall's Catalogue: Introduction to Moore's Edition of Ford, 1866, p. 5.

This verdict is sufficiently charitable, certainly. In the quotation "first order of poets," Coleridge doubtless refers to Charles Lamb's summing up of Ford's merits:

"Ford was of the first order of Poets. He sought for sublimity not by parcels in metaphors or visible images, but directly where she has her full residence—in the heart of man; in the actions and sufferings of the greatest minds. There is a grandeur of the soul above mountains, seas, and the elements. Even in the poor perverted reason of Giovanni and Annabella we discern traces of that fiery particle, which in the irregular starting from out of the road of beaten action, discovers something of a right line even in obliquity, and shews hints of an improvable greatness in the lowest descents and degradations of our nature."—Lamb's Specimens of Eng. Dram. Poets.

Mr. Haslitt, a critic of higher authority than Lamb, places Ford in a much lower rank than the "first order of poets." He remarks:

"Ford is not so great a favourite with me as with some others, from whose judgment I dissent with diffidence. . . . The affected brevity and division of some of the lines into hemistichs, &c.—so as to make in one case a mathematical staircase of the words and answers given to different speakers, is an instance of frigid and ridiculous pedantry. An artificial elaborateness is the general characteristic of Ford's style. In this respect his plays resemble Miss Baillie's more than any others I am acquainted with, and are quite distinct from the exuberance and unstudied force which characterized his immediate predecessors. There is too much of scholastic subtlety, an innate perversity of understanding or predominance of will, which either seeks the irritation of inadmissible subjects, or to stimulate its own faculties by taking the most barren, and making something out of nothing, in a spirit of contradiction. He does not draw along with the reader: he does not work upon our sympathy, but on our antipathy or our indifference; and there is as little of the social or gregarious principle in his productions as there appears to have been in his personal habits, if we are to believe Sir John Suckling, who says of him, in the Sessions of the Poets—

"In the dumps John Ford alone by himself sat
With folded arms and melancholy hat."

"Reversing the observation of Dryden on Shakespeare, it may be said of Ford, that he 'wrote laboriously, not luckily'—always elegant, often elevated, never sublime, he accomplished by patient and careful industry what Shakespeare and Fletcher produced by the spontaneous exuberance of native genius. He seems to have acquired early in life, and to have retained to the last, a softness of versification peculiar to himself. Without the majestic march of verse which distinguishes the poetry of Massinger, and with none of that playful gaiety which characterizes the dialogue of Fletcher, he is still easy and harmonious. There is, however, a monotony in his poetry, which those who have perused his scenes long together must have inevitably perceived. His dialogue is declamatory and formal, and wants that quick chace of replication and rejoinder so necessary to effect in representation."—WILLIAM GIFFORD: Quar. Rev., vi. 475.

In Lord Jeffrey's review, before referred to, on the merits and demerits of Ford, he quotes abundantly in illustration of his criticisms:

"We cannot afford any more space for Mr. Ford; and what we have said, and what we have shown of him, will probably be thought enough, both by those who are disposed to scold, and those who are inclined to admire. It is but fair, however, to intimate, that a thorough perusal of his works will afford more exercise to the former disposition than the latter. His faults are glaring and abundant; but we have not thought it necessary to produce any specimens of them, because they are exactly the sort of faults which every one acquainted with the drama of that age reckons upon finding. Nobody doubts of the existence of such faults: but there are many who doubt of the existence of any counterbalancing beauties: and therefore it seemed worth while to say a word or two in their explanation."—Edin. Rev., xviii. 304.

We cannot persuade ourselves to conclude—for we have already lingered long enough on this theme—without quoting the judicious criticism of one of the first of modern authors:

"At a considerable distance below Massinger we may place his contemporary, John Ford. In the choice of tragic subjects from obscure fictions which have to us the charm of entire novelty, they resemble each other; but in the conduct of their fable, in the delineation of their characters, each of these poets has his distinguishing excellences. 'I know,' says Gifford, 'few things more difficult to account for, than the deep and lasting impression made by the more tragic portions of Ford's poetry.' He succeeds however pretty well in accounting for it: the situations are awfully interesting, the distress intense, the thoughts and language becoming the expression of deep sorrow. Ford, with none of the moral beauty and elevation of Massinger, has, in a much higher degree, the power over tears; we sympathize even with his vicious characters, with Giovanni and Annabella, and Bianca. Love, and love in guilt or sorrow, is almost exclusively the emotion he portrays; no heroic passion, no sober dignity, will be found in his tragedies. But he conducts his story well and without confusion; his scenes are often highly wrought and effective; his characters, with no striking novelty, are well supported; he is seldom extravagant or regardless of probability. . . . Of comic ability this writer does not display one particle. Nothing can be meaner than those portions of his dramas which, in compliance with the prescribed rules of that age, he devotes to the dialogues of servants and buffoons."—HALLAM: Introduct. to the Lit. of Europe.

The critics of a former age thought they discovered much of the manner of the greatest of English poets in the lines of the author of Love's Sacrifice, and The Broken Heart, and the latter, as we have already seen, has often been named in rivalry with Rare Ben. We subjoin a verse in which the two are introduced with no contemptible skill:

"Tis said, from Shakespeare's mine you play you drew,
What need—when Shakespeare still survives in you?
But grant it were from his vast treasure reft,
That plunder Ben ne'er made so rich a theft."

THOMAS MAY.

Ford, Sir John. See FORD, SIR EDWARD.

Ford, John, Mayor of Bath. Manner of celebrating his Majesty's Coronation at Bath, April 25, 1661, Lon., 1661, fol. Reprinted in vol. vii. of the Somers Collection.

Ford, John. Serms., 1735, 8vo.

Ford, John, M.D. 3 Letters on Med. Subjects, 1863.

Ford, Ranulph. Serms., &c., 1711-20.

Ford, Richard, and others. Pet. to Parl., 1654, fol.

Ford, Richard. Works on Inoculation, 1791.

Ford, Richard, 1796-1858, a native of Lon. Handbook for Spain, Lon., 1845, 2 vols. p. 8vo; 2d ed., 1847, 1 vol.; new ed., partially rewritten, 1855.

"Lockhart nodded approbation: George Borrow praised it in his fine emphatic language; Lord Stanhope confirmed the decisions of Lockhart and Borrow; while across the Atlantic, men to be listened to—Washington Irving, Prescott, and Ticknor—extended its praises to the farthest civilized confines of the New World."—Lon. Illustr. News.

Commended by Lon. Quar. Rev., &c.

2. Gatherings from Spain; being extracts from No. 1, with addits., 1846, 2 Pts., 12mo, or 1 vol. p. 8vo.

"Although the original design of this work was merely to present in a more readable type, and in a form suited to the library, a series of entertaining extracts from the Hand-Book of Spain, the author has nearly rewritten the whole in a more popular style, and has introduced a vast quantity of new matter."—Profr.

"Mr. Ford has shown himself an adept in the art of literary reborescence. His mastery and learned Hand-Book of Spain having been found, by some who love to run and read, too small in type, too grave in substance, he has skimmed its cream, thrown in many well-flavoured and agreeable condiments, and presented the result in one compact and delightful volume, equally adapted to amuse by an English freddie or to be useful on the Spanish highway."—Blackwood's Mag.

"The best English book, beyond comparison, that has ever appeared for the illustration, not merely of the general topography and local curiosities, but of the national character and manners of Spain."—Lon. Quar. Rev.

Washington Irving also commends it as the best modern popular account of Spain.

3. Tauromachia: the Bull Fights of Spain; 26 superb drawings by Lake Price, with descriptions by R. Ford, 1852, imp. fol. Pub. at £4 4s. A splendid work.

Ford, Simon, 1619-1699, a divine and Latin poet of great reputation, a native of East Ogwell, Devonshire, was educated at Magdalen Hall, Oxf.; Vicar of St. Laurence, Reading, 1651; of All-Saints, Northampton, 1659; and of Old Swinford, Worcestershire, 1685. He was one of the translators of Plutarch's Morals, pub. 1684, and pub. a number of serms., Latin poems, &c., 1646-96, a list of which will be found in Athen. Oxon.

Ford, Stephen. Evil Tongue, 1672, 8vo. Discourse, 1675, 8vo.

Ford, T. Acct. rel. to Lord Kilmarnock, &c., 1746.

Ford, Thomas. Musick of Sundrie Kindes, Lon., 1607, fol.

Ford, Thomas. 1. The Times Anatomized in several characters, Lon., 1647, 12mo. Sometimes erroneously attributed to Thomas Fuller, the historian. 2. Ludus Fortunæ, 1649, 12mo. 3. Panegyric on Chas. I., &c., 1660, '61, 8vo. 4. Foenestra in Pectore, 1660, 8vo. 5. Love's Labyrinth, &c.; a Tragi-Comedy, 1660, 8vo. 6. A Theatre of Wits, 1660, 8vo.

Ford, Thomas, LL.D. Serms., 1775, '83.

Ford, Thomas, LL.D. Serms., 1811, 8vo.

Ford, Thomas, late Gov. of Illinois. A Hist. of Illinois from its commencement as a State in 1818 to 1847, Chicago, 1854, 12mo.

"This is an excellent, common-sense, honest history of one of our most flourishing States, by one who took an active part in its political struggles from its first organization."—Amer. Index, Aug. 1855.

Ford, W. A Catalogue comprising the Historical and Poetical Classics, &c., Part 1.

Ford, Wm., or Forde. Funl. Serms., Lon., 1616, 4to.

Ford, Wm. Serms., 1733, '35, '57, '68.

Ford, Wm. Serms., &c., 1762, '69, '76, '81.

Fordun, John De, an ancient Scottish historian, a priest in the Church of Fordun, 1377. Of the particulars of his life but little is certainly known. From his work much of the early history of Scotland is derived.

Scotichronicon genuinum, una cum ejusdem Supplemento ac Continuatione, Oxonii, 1722, 5 vols. 8vo. This is Hearn's edit. Another edit. was pub. at Edin., 1759, 2 vols. fol., and 1775, 2 vols. fol., viz.: Scotichronicon, cum Sup. et Continuazione Walteri Boweri. Curâ Walteri Goodall. (See GOODALL, WALTER.) MS. copies of Fordun's history are in many public libraries.

"He begins the third [book] with the reign of Fergus the second, and thence continues the succession with better confidence than he has done in the foregoing reigns, wherein he is vastly outdone by Boethius and late historians."—Bishop Nicolson's Scot. Hist. Lib., q. v.

"The learned and judicious Mr. Cambden has observed, That all the Scots Historians who have wrote since Fordoun's time, have been very much beholding to his Diligence; and yet there are very Material Differences betwixt his Account of several things and theirs; of which I shall give the reader a few Instances."—MacKenzie's Writers of the Scots Nation, q. v.

Fordyce, David, 1711-1751, a native of Aberdeen, brother of James and Sir William, afterwards noticed, entered Marischal College, 1724, and was appointed Prof. of Moral Philos. in that institution in 1742. Returning from an extensive continental tour, he was drowned on the coast of Holland in 1751. 1. Dialogues con. Education, Edin., 1745-48, 2 vols. 8vo.

"A work of very considerable merit, but somewhat tinged with the suppositions of the school of Shaftesbury, although entirely free from its more injurious notions."

2. Theodorus; a Dialogue concerning the art of Preaching, 1752, 12mo; 3d ed., 1755, 12mo.

"Some useful hints."—Bickersteth's C.S.

This should be carefully studied by all young divines.

3. Elements of Moral Philosophy, 1754, 12mo; 4th ed., 1769, 12mo. Originally pub. as ninth division of Doddsley's Preceptor. 4. The Temple of Virtue; a Dream, 1757, 12mo. Pub. from the author's MSS., with some addits. by James Fordyce, D.D., 1775, 12mo.

Fordyce, David. Letter Writer, Lon., 1790, 12mo.

Fordyce, George, M.D., 1736-1802, nephew of David, James, and Sir William, took his doctor's degree at Leyden in 1758, settled in 1759 in London, and became a distinguished lecturer and practitioner. 1. Elements of Agricult. and Vegetation, Edin., 1765, '69, '71, 8vo; Lon., 1796, 8vo.

"This little work has always been esteemed as a very scientific treatise."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

2. Elements of the Practice of Physic, Pts. 1 and 2, 1767-70, 8vo. 3. Dissertation on Simple Fever, 1794, 8vo. 4, 5, 6, 7. Dissertation on Fever, 4 Pts., viz.: 1795, '98, '99, 1802, 8vo. 8. Dissertation 5th, with conclusions to the four preceding and present Dissertations, 1803, 8vo. Posth. Edited by W. C. Wells, M.D. Fordyce on Fevers, 2d Amer. ed., Phila., 1846, 8vo.

"The dissertations which compose the work of Dr. Fordyce on Fevers are, of all his writings, those which in an especial manner have established his reputation for sound medical views."—Southern Jour. of Med. and Pharm.

9. Con. to Phil. Trans., 1776, '79, '80, '85, '87, '92, '94.

10. Con. to Trans. Med. and Chir., 1792, 1800.

"It must be confessed that, notwithstanding his great learning, which embraced many subjects noway allied to medicine, he seldom wrote elegantly, often obscurely and inaccurately."—Lon. Gent. Mag., 1802; Obit. Notice, q. v.

Fordyce, Henrietta, "relict of James Fordyce, D.D."

Memoir of, with orig. Letters, Anecdotes, and Pieces of Poetry, with a Sketch of the Life of James Fordyce, D.D., Lon., 12mo.

"The book is a pleasant book, and could not be more interesting than it is, if there was not one word of truth in it from beginning to end. But it is a very entertaining and easily-written biography, in which none of the sternness of fact has been made to give way to the lighter graces of fiction."—Lon. Literary Museum.

Fordyce, James, D.D., 1720-1796, a native of Aberdeen, brother of David, James, and Sir William, also noticed in this Dictionary, was educated at Marischal Coll., and became minister successively at Brechin, Alloa, and of a dissenting congregation of Monkwell Street, London. He pub. several sermons, poems, &c., 1752-91. 1. Character and Conduct of the Female Sex, 1776, 8vo. 2. Addresses to Young Men, Lon., 1777, 2 vols. 8vo. His best-known work is the collection entitled Serms. to Young Women, 1765, 2 vols. 12mo; 9th ed., 1778, 2 vols. sm. 8vo.

"They discover much genius and imagination, a correct taste, no little knowledge of the world, and a happy method of engaging the attention and interesting the feelings."—Wilson's Disserters.

Fordyce, John, M.D. 1. Historia Febris Miliaris, Lon., 1768, 8vo. 2. Usefulness of Bark in Scrofula; Med. Obs. and Inq., 1755.

Fordyce, William. Mem. con. Herculeum. Trans. from the Italian, Lon., 1750, 8vo; 1770, 4to.

Fordyce, William. History and Antiquities of the County of Durham, 1857, 2 vols. demy 4to.

Fordyce, Sir William, 1724-1792, a brother of David and James, (see ante), surgeon R. A., and subsequently Lord Rector of Marischal Coll., Aberdeen, enjoyed an extensive professional practice in London, where he died in 1792. 1. Review of the V. Disease and its Remedies, Lon.,

1767, '72, 8vo. 2. Putrid and Inflamm. Fevers, 1773, '77, 8vo. 3. Fragmenta Chirurgica et Medica, 1784, 8vo. 4. Muriatic Acid in Putrid Fevers; a Letter to Sir J. S., 1790, 8vo. 5. The importance of cultivating and curing Rhubarb in Britain, 1792, 8vo. At this time imported rhubarb cost the nation £200,000 per annum. 6. Sarsaparilla Root in the V. Disease; Med. Obs. and Inq., 1755.

Foreness, E. Serms., 1683, '84, 4to.

Forester, Fanny. See JUDSON, MRS. EMILY C.

Forester, Thomas. Serm., 1741, 4to.

Forester, Thomas. 1. Norway in 1848, '49, with Extracts from the Journals of Lt. M. S. Biddulph, Lon., 1850, 8vo. New ed., 1855, 16mo.

"Thanks for this very pleasant and instructive book, say we."—Lon. Church and State Gaz.

2. Everard Tunstal; a Tale, 1851, 3 vols. p. 8vo. 3. Norway and its Scenery, 1853, p. 8vo. 4. Rambles in Sardinia, &c., 1858, imp. 8vo.

Foresti, E. Felix, LL.D., Prof. of the Italian language and literature in Columbia Coll., and in the Univ. of the City of New York. Italian Reader, N. York, 12mo.

Forges. A Catalogue of part of the Rarities collected by R. H., Lon., 8vo.

Forman, Charles. Letter, &c. rel. to Ostend Company, Lon., 1725, '26. Ancient Parliaments of France, 1730, 2 vols. 8vo.

Forman, Charles. Queries and Observ. upon the Revol. in 1688, and its Consequences, Lon., 1741, 8vo.

Forman, Simon, M.D., 1552-1611, a noted astrologer, physician, and fortune-teller, whose name excites sensations of horror to all who are familiar with the histories of the infamous Countess of Essex and the unfortunate Sir Thomas Overbury, studied for two years at Magdalen Coll., Oxf., and subsequently devoted his attention to physic and the stars. He wrote some treatises on Astrology, &c., of which a list will be found in Athen. Oxon. See Bliss's ed., ii. 98, 373. Many of his MSS. are deposited in the Ashmolean Museum and in the British Museum. The following extract will recall forcibly Mr. James's graphic portraits in Arabella Stuart of Dr. Forman and Mrs. Anne Turner:

"He professed to his wife that there would be much trouble about Sir Rob. Carr, earl of Somerset, and the Lady Frances, his wife, who frequently resorted to him, and from whose company he would sometimes lock himself in his study one whole day. He had compounded things upon the desire of Mrs. Anne Turner, to make the said Sir Rob. Carr, callid quo ad Anac, and Robert, earl of Essex, frigid quo ad hanc; that is, to his wife, the Lady Frances, who had a mind to be rid of him, and be wedded to the said Sir Robert. He had made also certain pictures in wax, representing Sir Robert and the said lady, to cause a love between each other, with other such like things; but Forman dying (he died suddenly in a boat in the Thames) before he could effect the matter, Mrs. Turner found out one Edward Gresham, an astrologer, to conclude the matter; but he also, if I mistake not, drop away before the marriage of Sir Robert and the said lady was concluded."—Ubi supra.

Forman, Sloper. Trans. from the French of M. Forney's Elementary Principles of the Belles-Lettres, Lon., 1766, 12mo.

Formby, Henry. 1. A Visit to the East, Lon., 1843, fp. 8vo. 2. C. C. Guide to Psalmody, 1847, fp. 8vo. 3. The Roman Ritual, 1849, 12mo. 4. The Young Singer's Book of Songs, 1851, 4to.

Forrest. A brief Defence of Curing continued Fevers.

Forrest, Alex. Baptismal Psalmody, Lon., 1751, 12mo.

Forrest, Lt.-Col. C. R. Pictorial Account of the Rivers Ganges and Jumna, Lon., imp. 4to, with 24 col'd views. Maps, &c., £4 4s.; large paper, £6 6s. This beautiful work presents the most picturesque scenes of the valleys of these celebrated rivers. With the descriptions much history is interspersed.

Forrest, Frederick. 1. Ways to Kill Care, by Young D'Urfe, Lon., 1761, 8vo. 2. A Rattle for Grown Children; by Young D'Urfe, sm. 8vo, with portrait, by W. Elliot.

Forrest, John, M.D. Inoculation; Ann. of Med., 1311.

Forrest, Robert. Reports Cases in Ct. Exchequer, M. T. to T. T. 41 Geo. III., Lon., Pt. 1, 1802, 8vo. Never completed.

Forrest, Thomas. A Perfite Looking-Glasse for all Estates; from Isocrates, &c., Lon., 1580, 4to.

Forrest, Captain Thomas. 1. A Voyage (1774-76) to New Guinea and the Moluccas, &c., Lon., 1779, '99, 4to.

"This work supplies what is wanting in Sonnerat's, as it is full on the physical and moral character of the inhabitants, and on their language, mode of life, and trade."—Seymour's Cat. of Voyages and Travels.

Sonnerat treats of natural history, especially of zoology and ornithology.

2. A Voyage from Calcutta to the Mergui Archipelago, &c., 1792, 4to.

"This work is justly of great authority for its details in maritime geography."—Ubi supra.

Forrest, Wm. 1. A New Ballade of the Marigolds. Reprinted in vol. x. Harleian Miscellany. 2. Metrical Account rel. to divorce of Q. Catharine. Reprinted in vol. iv. Brit. Bibliographer. See an account of Forrest and his works, printed and MS., in Athen. Oxon., Bliss's edit.

Forrest, Wm. S. Hist. and Descrip. Sketches of Norfolk, Va., Portsmouth, &c., for 200 Years, Phila., 1853, 8vo. Forrester, Alexander, of the Middle Temple, was a reporter of learning and skill, but would not permit his name to be attached to the Chancery Cases temp. Talbot, taken from his notes. This collection was first pub. in 1741; again in 1753, fol.; and in 1792, 8vo, by J. G. Williams. They are sometimes cited as Forrester's Reports. A number of cases in Hovenden's Supp. to Vesey, Jr.'s Chancery Cases were also taken from Forrester's MSS.

Forrester, Alfred Henry. See CROWQUILL, ALFRED.

Forrester, J. R. Chemical Observ. and Exper. on Air and Fire, from the German of Chas. Wm. Scheele; with Notes by R. Kirwan, and a Letter from Dr. Priestley, Lon., 1780, 8vo.

Forrester, James. The Marrow and Juice of 200 Scriptures, Lon., 1611, 4to.

Forrester, Thomas. The Hierarchical Bishops, &c.; in answer to Dr. Scott, Dr. Monro, and Mr. Honeyman, 1699.

Forrester, Wm. Gent. Farrier, 1788, 8vo.

Forry, S. 1. The Climate of the United States and its Endemic Influences, N. York, 1842, 8vo.

"A volume of highly interesting facts condensed into the smallest compass."—Lon. Athenaeum.

2. Meteorology, 1843, fol.

Forset, Edward. Bodies Natural and Politique, 1606.

Forss, Charles. Practical Remarks upon the Education of the Working Classes.

Forster, A. V. Fatal Ambition; a Rom., 1811.

Forster, Charles, Rector of Stifsted. 1. Discourses on Scrip. Hist. &c., Lon., 1823, 8vo. 2. Critical Essays on Genesis, Chap. xx., and on Saint Matthew, Chap. ii. 17, 18; with Notes, 1827, 8vo.

"The professed aim of Mr. Forster in the publication of these essays, is to lower the modern continental system of biblical interpretation."—Ubi supra, q. v.

3. Mahometanism Unveiled, 1829, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Objectionable statements in this work. See Christian Observer and Burder's Rise and Progress and Termination of Mahomedanism, 1830, 8vo."—Bickerstaff's C. S.

Also see a review in Brit. Critic, vii. 1. 4. Life of Bishop Jebb; new ed., 1837, 8vo.

"The whole of the biography is written in a spirit of good feeling and good taste, which do the highest honour to Mr. Forster."—Brit. Mag.

5. The Apostolical Authority of the Epistle to the Hebrews, 1838, 8vo.

"The irresistible conclusion from the whole of the author's elaborate researches is, that that Epistle is the genuine production of the great apostle of the Hebrews."—Horne's Bibl. Diss., q. v., et Brit. Crit., xxvi. 167.

6. The Hist. Geography of Arabia; or, the Patriarchal Evidences of Revealed Religion, 1844, 2 vols. 8vo. The Appendix contains translations of the celebrated Hamyaritic Inscriptions, recently discovered in Hadramaut.

7. The One Primeval Language, Pts. 1, 2, and 3, 1851–52–54, 8vo. 8. Six Preacher Sermons, 1853, 8vo.

Forster, Rev. Edward. 1. The Arabian Nights' Entertainment, trans. with engravings from pictures by Smirke, Lon., 1802, 5 vols. 8vo. Some copies on large paper, 4to. Late eds., 1839, r. 8vo; 1847, r. 8vo; 1853, demy 8vo. This has been commended as a very elegant translation. There are also versions by Beaumont, Lane, Macnaghten, Scott, and Torrens. Respecting new translations, see Westminster Rev., xxxi. 265, xxxiii. 201, and Lon. Monthly Rev., cix. 362. Also see notices of the Arabian Nights in Lon. For. Quar. Rev., xiv. 350, xxiv. 139; Lon. Eccl. Rev., 4th s., viii. 641; Amer. Whig Rev., vi. 601; and especially the introduction to Forster's trans., ed. 1839, by G. Molr Bussey. The Rev. Richard Hole's Remarks on the Arabian Nights' Entertainments, Lon., 1797, 8vo, throw much light on the subject. This work was first introduced to European readers in 1704, through the French trans. of M. Antony Galland, Prof. of Arabic in the Roy. Coll., Paris. Mr. Forster trans. this into English, correcting M. Galland's inaccuracies. Mr. Lane's trans. is immediately from the Arabic. This is a pleasant theme, and we leave it with regret. We should be glad to quote the testimonies of Lady Montague, Colonel Capper, Dallaway, Lane, and others, to the value of this work, as a faithful portraiture of the land where they "talk in flowers."

"The Arabian Nights have lost none of their charms for me. All the learned and wiseacres of England cried out against this wonderful work, upon its first appearance; Gray among the rest. Yet I doubt whether any man, except Shakspeare, has afforded so much delight, if we open our hearts to receive it. The author of the Arabian Nights was the greatest benefactor the East ever had, not excepting Mahomet. How many hours of pure happiness has he bestowed on six-and-twenty millions of hearers! All the springs of the Desert have less refreshed the Arabs than those delightful tales, and they cast their gems and gauds over our benighted and foggy regions."—LIESEN HUNT.

2. Anacreontis Ode, &c., 1802, 8vo. 3. The Brit. Gallery of Engravings, with descriptions. 12 Nos. complete; 52 Plates, £2 2s. each; large paper, £3 13s. 6d. each. North sale, with proofs and etchings on India Paper, £40 10s.

Forster, Edward. See FORSTER.

Forster, Edward, Jr. Catalogus Avium in Insulis Britannicis habitantium, Lon., 1817, 8vo.

Forster, George, d. 1792, an employee in the Civil Service of the E. India Company. 1. Sketches of the Mythology and Customs of the Hindoos, Lon., 1785, 8vo. 2. A Journey from Bengal to England, 1798, 2 vols. 4to; 1808, 2 vols. 8vo. This traveller is not to be confounded with George Forster, the companion of Captain Cook, who, being a foreigner, (George was a native of Danzig, and his father, J. R. Forster, a native of Dirschau,) can claim no place in our Dictionary.

Forster, H. P. 1. A Bengalee and English Vocabulary, in two Pts., Calcutta, 1799–1802, 2 vols. 4to. 2. Essay on the Principles of Sanskrit Grammar, Pt. 1, 1801, r. 4to.

Forster, John. England's happiness increased by a Plantation of Potatoes, Lon., 1644, 4to.

Forster, John, of Beercrocombe. Serm., 1748, 4to.

Forster, John, of Elton. Serm., 1755, '57, '64.

Forster, John. Observ. on our Saviour's Discourse with the Pharisee Lawyer; anon., Lon., a. c., 12mo.

Forster, John, Her Majesty's Chaplain of the Savoy. 1. The Churchman's Guide; a Copious Index of Sermons and other Works, by eminent Church of Eng. Divines, digested and arranged, according to their subjects, and brought down to the present day, Lon., 1840, 8vo.

"I would have young clergymen make very great use of the works of able Divines; not inconsiderately and servilely transcribe them,—but modify, digest, contract, amplify, vary, adapt them to the purpose,—improve, if possible, what they may find in them: for then it will fairly become their own, and mix naturally with what proceeds altogether from themselves."—Sacrae.

2. The Gospel Narrative, 3d ed., 1847, r. 8vo.

"I think the work will be very acceptable to serious readers, by pointing out the solution of doubts and objections, and setting the language and actions of our blessed Lord in their true light."—The Late Archbishop of Canterbury.

"I think it likely to be extensively and profitably used."—Archbishop of York.

"I know no Harmony which may be consulted with so much advantage."—Bishop of Winchester.

Also commended by the present Archbp. of Canterbury, the Archbp. of Armagh, and the Bps. of Exeter, Lichfield, Lincoln, Winton, Llandaff, and Worcester.

Forster, John, of the Inner Temple, b. 1812, at Newcastle, England, occupies an eminent position as a journalist and author. He has for twenty-four years written for the London Examiner, for the last twelve of which he has had the sole charge of the editorial department. (See FONBLANQUE, ALBANY.) He has contributed to the Edinburgh Review, the Foreign Quarterly Review, (of which he was for four years the editor,) and other publications. After Charles Dickens left the Daily News, Mr. Forster acted as editor for a short season. Mr. F. is best known to the public by his two popular works entitled, 1. The Statesmen of the Commonwealth of England, Lon., 1840, 7 vols. fp. 8vo. New ed., 1854, 2 vols. demy 8vo. Also pub. in Dr. Lardner's Cabinet Cyclopædia, vols. ii., iii., iv., v., and vi. Amer. ed., N. York, 1847, 8vo, edited by Rev. J. O. Choules.

"This chain of biographies may be considered as constituting a complete narrative of the most extraordinary and eventful period in the history of England. We regard them as additions of the very highest value to what we may term our political literature."—Lon. Morn. Chron.

2. The Life and Adventures of Oliver Goldsmith, 1848, 8vo. New ed.—The Life and Times of Oliver Goldsmith,—1854, 2 vols. 8vo. Abridged ed., 1855, cr. 8vo. It is well known that the publication of this work was the occasion of a controversy with Mr. Prior relative to the use made by Mr. Forster of his materials. See Lon. Athenaeum, June 16 and 17, 1848. Without entering into any detailed discussion of the matter, for which we have neither space nor inclination, we may be excused for the expression of the opinion that Mr. Prior greatly magnified his grievances, if indeed any existed, of which we are by no means persuaded. Perhaps Mr. Forster should have been rather more liberal in acknowledgments; but Mr. Prior's claim to a permanent monopoly of facts, by whomsoever discovered, which have become items of current knowledge, is surely untenable. Mr. Forster's biography has been greatly and deservedly admired: we have space for a few lines only of quotations, and must refer the inquisitive reader to the Dublin Univ. Mag., Sharpe's Mag., and the N. Amer. Rev. Our quotations shall be of passages in which the three prominent biographers of Goldsmith—Prior, Forster, and Irving—are all introduced.

"Mr. Forster's spirited and eloquent sketch, though deformed by certain mannerisms, or rather Orientalisms, which we would rather have seen avoided, is, unquestionably, a valuable addition to our standard literary biography; whilst to the 'voluminous and indefatigable' Mr. Prior belongs the undisputed honour of having collected and preserved, from tradition and other sources, nearly all the particulars of Goldsmith's life, which could by possibility be discovered. We do not wish to disparage the patient research and enthusiastic labours of Mr. Prior, when we speak of Mr. Forster's work as readable, valuable, and entertaining; for the diligent compiler and the skilful adapter are in our opinion equally entitled to their meed of approbation. Nor will we quarrel with the work of Washington Irving, because it contains no startling fact that is not to be found in the two preceding biographies."—F. LAWRENCE: Sharpe's Lon. Mag.

"Mr. Prior was a laborious collector of facts, who, by dint of patient research, and nothing else, made a book as little attractive as a Life of Goldsmith could be. Mr. Forster drew from the distaff thus carefully stored with raw material a smooth thread, around which he allowed all the characteristic circumstances and associations of the time to crystallize, forming a mass at once solid and transparent, but not without, now and then, a little superfluous glitter. Mr. Irving, selecting at will from the whole, has, with his usual taste, presented us with 'gems in order, fifty set,' from whose shifting and delicate hues flashes forth a portrait, possessing the accuracy without the hardness of the daguerreotype, though not, like that, made of sunshine."—N. Amer. Rev., lxx. 268.

Any writer might well feel proud of the commendation of Washington Irving, and we therefore, in justice to Mr. Forster, quote a graceful compliment paid to the latter in the Preface to Irving's Life of Goldsmith. Mr. Irving's original biographical sketch was published some years before the appearance of Forster's biography. This sketch the author was induced to enlarge that it might take its proper place in the revised series of his works, issued by Messrs. George P. Putnam & Co. of New York. The reference to Mr. Forster's biography alluded to is as follows:

"When I was about of late to revise my biographical sketch, preparatory to publication, a volume was put into my hands, recently given to the public by Mr. John Forster, of the Inner Temple, who, likewise availing himself of the labours of the indefatigable Prior, and of a few new lights since evolved, has produced a biography of the poet, executed with a spirit, a feeling, a grace, and an elegance, that leave nothing to be desired. Indeed it would have been presumption in me to undertake the subject after it had been thus felicitously treated, did I not stand committed by my previous sketch."

Mr. Forster has increased the obligations of the public by the publication of his Lives of Daniel De Foe and Charles Churchill. Reprinted, with Additions, from the Edin. Rev., and forming Pts. 76 and 77, or vol. xxxviii., of Longman & Co.'s Travellers' Library. In these biographies Mr. Forster has pursued the same plan which renders his Life of Goldsmith so valuable a picture of the men and manners of the day: he surrounds us with the shades of the departed great, the contemporaries of De Foe and Churchill, whose influence pervaded all the ramifications of political and social life. Mr. Forster pub. in 1858 Historical and Biographical Essays, 2 vols.; composed of articles originally contributed to quarterly reviews, and of new matter. Commended in Lon. Athen., 1858, 620.

Forster, Joseph. The Origin of Evil, the Foundation of Morality, and the Immateriality of the Soul, 1734, 8vo.

Forster, Nathaniel, 1717–1757, a divine of great learning, was a native of Stadelcombe, Devonshire, and educated at Eton, and Corpus Christi Coll., Oxf., of which he became Fellow, 1729; Rector of Hathe, Oxfordshire, 1749; Preb. of Bristol and Vicar of Rochdale, 1754; Preacher at the Rolls, 1757. 1. Antiq. of Govt., Arts, and Sciences, in Egypt, Oxf., 1743, 8vo. 2. Platonis Dialogi quinque, 1745, '52, '65. First ed. the best. 3. Account supposed to have been given of Jesus Christ by Josephus, Oxf., 1749, 8vo. Highly commended by Warburton and Bryant. 4. Biblia Hebraica, sine punctis, Oxon., 1750, 2 vols. 4to. 5. Remarks on Sbibbing's Dias. on Marriage of Minors, 1755. 6. Sermons, 1746–67.

"I have often wished for a hand capable of collecting all the fragments remaining of Porphyry, Celsus, Hierocles, and Julian, and giving them to us with a just, critical, and theological comment, as a Demy to Infidelity. . . . This would be a very noble work. I know of none that has all the talents fit for it but yourself. . . . Think of it: you cannot do a more useful thing to religion or your own character."—Bishop Warburton's Letter to Dr. Forster.

Would that the hint had been carried out! The work would have been curious and interesting; though, as regards Evidences of Christianity, he who can withstand the evidences within, around, and before him, written and unwritten, is surely beyond all human suasion.

Forster, Nathaniel, Rector of All-Saints, Colchester. 1. Serms., 1767, '70. 2. An Inquiry into the Causes of the Present High Price of Provisions, in two Parts, Lon., 1767, 8vo.

"This is perhaps the ablest of the many treatises published about this period, on the rise of prices. It contains, indeed, not a few principles and conclusions that are quite untenable. But the comprehensiveness of the author's views, and the liberal and philosophical spirit by which the work is pervaded, make it both valuable and interesting. . . . It affords ample evidence of the author's talent and zeal for the public good."—McCulloch's Let. of Polit. Econ.

3. An Answer to Sir John Dalrymple's Pamphlet on the Exportation of Wool, Colches., 1782, 8vo.

Forster, Nicholas, Bishop of Killaloe. 1. Sermon on 1. Cor. i. 10, Dublin, 1716, 4to. 2. On Tim. ii. 1, 2, 1716, 8vo.

Forster, R. B. Travels through Louisiana, trans. from M. Bossu, 1771–72, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Chiefly interesting from the minute details into which it enters respecting the Illinois territory. Mr. Forster's translation contains a catalogue of American plants."—Stevenson's Voyages and Travels.

M. Bossu pub. a few years afterwards Nouveaux Voyages dans l'Amérique Septentrionale.

Forster, R. W. E. The Copyhold and Customary Tenure, &c. Acts, 4 and 5 Vict., and 6 and 7 Vict., Lon., 1843, 12mo.

Forster, Richard, M.D. Ephemerides Meteorologice ad ann. 1575, &c., Lon., 1575, 8vo.

Forster, Richard. Serms., 1684, 4to.

Forster, Rev. Richard. Bills of Mortality of Great Shefford, and other con. to Phil. Trans., 1757, '59, '62.

Forster, Samuel. See Forster.

Forster, Samuel. Digest of Laws rel. to Customs and Navigation, &c., Savoy, Lon., 1727, 8vo. The introduction contains a valuable Dissertation on the Nature, Extent, and Method of Collection of the Ancient Revenue of the Crown.

Forster, Thomas. The Layman's Lawyer, 1656, '58.

Forster, Thomas. Serms., 1672, 1715, '18.

Forster, Thomas. A New Island, lately raised out of the sea near Terceira; Phil. Trans., 1722.

Forster, Thomas. Serms. and Letters, 1759, '64.

Forster, Thomas. Tracts ag. Quakers, &c., 1810, '13.

Forster, Thomas. 1. Nat. Hist. of the Swallow, 6th ed., Lon., 1817, 8vo. 2. Atmospheric Phenomena, 1813, '15, '23, 8vo. 3. Poems of Catullus, 12mo. 4. Perpetual Calendar Illustrating the events of every Day in the Year, as connected with Hist., Chronol., Botany, Nat. Hist., Astron., Customs, Antiq., &c., 8vo.

"Much credit is due to the author for the mass of useful information he has compiled, and for the judicious manner in which he has contrived to relieve the dryness of scientific detail by the introduction of amusing anecdotes and occasional remarks."—Lon. Eclectic Review.

Other works.

Forster, Thomas Furley. 1. Flora Tonbridgensis, 1801, 12mo; 1816, cr. 8vo. 2. Viola. 3. Caltha; in Trans. Linn. Soc., 1802, '07.

Forster, Thompson. 1. Con. Med. Facts, 1794, '95. 2. Con. to Med. Chir. Trans., 1814.

Forster, Westgarth. Treat. on a Sec. of the Strata from Newcastle-upon-Tyne to Cross Fells, 2d ed., 1821, 8vo.

Forster, Wm. Oughtred's Circles, 1632, '60.

Forster, Wm. Causes and Cures of Diseases, 1745, 8vo.

Forster, Wm. Serms., Lon., 1755, 4to.

Forster, Wm., Minister of the Congreg. Ch., Kentish Town. Discourses, &c., Lon., 1850–52.

Forsyth, Alex. Culture of the Potato, Lon., 1848, 8vo. "The subjects are most judiciously handled."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Forsyth, C. Laws of Trusts in Scot., Edin., 1844, 8vo.

Forsyth, J. S. The Antiquary's Portfolio, Lon., 1825, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

Forsyth, J. S. A Synopsis of Medical Jurisprudence, Anatomically, Physiologically, and Forensically illustrated for the Faculty of Medicine, Coroners, Magistrates, Lawyers, and Jurymen, Lon., 1829, 12mo. This is indeed a subject of great importance. See BECK, J. R. and JOHN B.; DEAN, AMOS; DUNGLISON, ROSELEY; FARR, SAMUEL; PONBLANQUE, JOHN S. M.; RAY, ISAAC; TRAILL, THOMAS STEWART; STILLÉ, MORETON; WHARTON, FRANCIS, &c.

Forsyth, James. Sermon, Lon., 1615, 4to.

Forsyth, John Hamilton. Mem. of, with a Selection of his Sermons, by the Rev. Edward Wilson, Lon., 1849, 8vo; 2d ed., 1850, 8vo; 3d ed., 1851, 8vo.

Forsyth, Joseph. 1763-1815, a native of Elgin, in the county of Moray, conductor of a classical school at Newington-Butte, near London, travelled upon the Continent, and was imprisoned for several years whilst Great Britain was at war with France. Remarks on Antiquities, Arts, and Letters, during an Excursion in Italy, 1802-03, Lon., 1813, 8vo; 4th ed., corrected and completed to 1835, 8vo.

"The best book that has yet appeared on Italy, whether we consider the depth and originality of the remarks, or the terseness and nervousness of the language. Matthews justly describes it as 'a mine of original remarks, expressed in the most forcible language.'"

"An admirable work, giving, in a short compass, much information, and indicating strong powers of mind and a correct taste."—Stevenson's Voyages and Travels.

"There are countries of the globe which possess a permanent and peculiar interest in human estimation. They are those where the most momentous historical events occurred and civilisation first dawned. Foremost among them stands Italy. Thus, so accurate a work as the one mentioned will be perused with great interest and pleasure."—N. Amer. Rev.

"An accomplished traveller, of extraordinary capacity, extensive erudition, and refined taste."—Lord Byron.

Forsyth, Robert. 1. Principles and Prac. of Agriculture. Explained, Edin., 1804, 2 vols. 8vo. Originally pub. in Encyc. Brit., 4th ed.

"The writer displays, throughout, much sound sense, and a sober discretion, as in every work that was done by the author."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

2. Beauties of Scotland, 1805, 5 vols. 8vo. 3. The Principles of Moral Science, 1805, vol. 1., 8vo.

"It cannot be denied, we think, that it indicates very considerable talents, and treats of a most important subject with some spirit and ingenuity."—Lord Jeffrey: Edin. Rev., vii. 413, q. v.

Forsyth, Wm., 1737-1804, a native of Old Meldrum, county of Aberdeen, Sup't of the Chelsea Gardens until 1784, when he became Sup't of the Royal Gardens at Kensington and St. James. 1. Diseases, &c. of Fruit and Forest Trees, Lon., 1791, 8vo. 2. Culture and Management of Fruit Trees, 1802, 4to; 1824, 8vo. Trans. into French by Pictet-Mallet.

Forsyth, Wm., Jr., son of the preceding, and his successor at Chelsea Gardens. A Botanical Nomenclator, Lon., 1794, 8vo. Highly esteemed in its day.

Forsyth, Wm., Barrister-at-Law, late Fellow of Trin. Coll., Camb. 1. Abridgt. of the Stat. rel. to Scot., 1789-1827, Edin., 1827, 3 vols. 8vo. 2. Dict. of the Stat. Laws of Scot., 1842, 2 vols. 8vo. 3. Compos. with Creditors, Lon., 1841, 8vo; 2d ed., 1844, 8vo. Amer. ed., Harrisburg, 1845, 8vo. 4. Law rel. to Simony, 1844, 8vo. 5. Hortensius: an Hist. Essay on the Duties of an Advocate, 1849, p. 8vo.

"Hortensius is an attempt to represent, in an historical fashion, the progress of the writer's craft, from the rude forms of the ancient codes to the complicated machinery of modern statutes at large; and we must admit that the author has written a very pleasant and useful book."—Lon. Athenæum.

6. Laws rel. to the Custody of Infants, 1850, 8vo. 7. Hist. of Trial by Jury, 1852, 8vo. Quoted in Lieber's Work on Civil Liberty.

Fort, Francis. Gamaliel; a Sermon, Lon., 1753, 8vo.

Fortescue, Earl. Selec. from the Speeches and Writings of Lord King, with a Short Introductory Memoir by Earl Fortescue, Lon., 1844, demy 8vo.

"He possessed those great requisites of happiness—equanimity, cheerfulness of temper, and the habit of continually employing his mind in the pursuit of noble or useful objects."—Lord King's Life of Locke.

"Earl Fortescue has rendered good service to both economic and moral science by this reasonable publication. His selections are most judiciously made, and will raise his relative's character as an able and upright politician, whose views were singularly in advance of his age, while every parliamentary session adds proof of their soundness."—Lon. Athenæum.

Fortescue, Lady E. Hymns, mostly from the German, Lon., 1847, 18mo.

Fortescue, J., D.D. Essays, Moral and Miscellaneous, Lon., 1752, '59.

Fortescue, Sir John, supposed to have died about 1485, aged 90, was the third son of Sir Henry Fortescue, Lord Chief Justice of Ireland. Prince, in his Worthies of Devonshire, presumed him to have been educated at Oxford, and Bishop Tanner locates him at Exeter Coll. At Lincoln's Inn he soon became famous for his knowledge of civil and common law, and in 1430 was made a Serjeant-at-Law; in 1441, King's Serjeant-at-Law; and in 1442 Chief Justice of the King's Bench. He stood high in favour with Henry VI., and when that monarch was obliged to take refuge in Scotland, Fortescue clung to his fallen fortunes. It was probably at this time Henry created him Chancellor of England. In 1463 he accompanied Queen Margaret, Prince Edward, and a number of the adherents of the House of Lancaster, to Flanders, where he remained many years. Whilst thus in exile, he composed his celebrated work entitled De Laudibus Legum Angliæ, with a view to the future guidance of Prince Henry, if he should ever reach the throne. The young prince was cut off by the hand of the murderer in the flower of his days, but the De Laudibus Legum Angliæ has survived many thrones, and is still resorted to as a fountain of inestimable wisdom. Fortescue returned to England with Queen Margaret and Prince Edward, and was taken prisoner after the battle of Shrewsbury, in 1471. He was pardoned by King Edward, retracted a paper he had written against the claims of the House of York, and lived the rest of his days in learned retirement at Ebburton, in Gloucestershire. In addition to the work noticed above, he left many Latin tracts, (MSS.), and an English treatise, entitled The Difference between an Absolute and Limited Monarchy, as it more particularly regards the English Constitution. This was pub. in 1714, 8vo, with Remarks by the author's descendant, John Fortescue Aland. It proves and enlarges upon the superior degree of liberty possessed by the English over the French. It was probably written after De Laudibus, &c., as the author does not quote it in the latter work. See Oldys's Brit. Lib., 250-254. The De Laudibus Legum Angliæ was first printed by Whitechurch, since also, but in the early part of the reign of Henry VIII. In 1516, 12mo, a trans. into English, made by Robert Mulcaster, was given to the world. Reprinted 1567, '73, '75, '78, '79, 1609, with Hengham's Summe Magna et Parva, and Notes by Selden on De Laudibus, &c., 1616, '60, '72. Mulcaster, the translator, says, in his dedication to John Walshe:

"It hapned me of late to light upon this little Treatise, which I incontinent desired to runne over, because it seemed to discusse upon some points of the law of our countrie whereof I myself then was and am now a student. When I had overrunne it, and because I wished all men to have part of my delight, methought it good to translate it into English forth of Latine."

Trans. into English, illustrated with the Notes of Mr. Selden, and a great variety of Remarks with respect to the Antiq., Hist., and Laws of Eng.; to which are added the Summe of Hengham, by J. Glanvill, 1737, fol.; 2d ed., 1741. New ed., including Selden's Notes and Hengham's Summe, with a large Hist. Pref. by Francis Gregor, 1775, 8vo. The notes and references in this ed. are more ample than in any of the preceding eds., and the trans. is more accurate. The last ed. of Fortescue is by A. Amos, Camb., 1825, 8vo. The trans. is the same as Gregor's:

"Professor Amos judiciously retained some of the notes of former editions, but for the most part added new ones, which are less copious than Gregor's. Professor Amos discharged the office of Annotator with ability and moderation."—Murray's Leg. Bibl., q. v. for a reference to authorities subjoined.

In 1663, fol., Mr. E. Waterhouse pub. Fortescutus Illustratus; or, A Comment on that Nervous Treatise, De Laudibus Legum Angliæ. For Hargrave's opinion of this work see WATERHOUSE, E. The merits of De Laudibus Legum Angliæ are unquestionable; and, as we have already stated, its authority has lost nothing by the lapse of time:

"All good men and lovers of the English constitution speak of him with honour; and he still lives, in the opinion of all true Englishmen, in as high esteem and reputation as any judge that ever sat in Westminster Hall."—JOHN FORTESCUE ALAND.

We quote some other commendations of this learned Treatise:

"Aureolum hunc dialogum-libellum, de quo dicit potest id quod de fluvio Telesbo scripsit Xenophon, Mayas per, et xales de . . . Certe leges nostras: ut in illo libro videbis perspicenter compositas."—SIR WILLIAM JONES, in a letter to a learned foreigner.

"His writing sheweth a sharp judgment, and in this is exquisite and artificial, that when he endeavourth to be plain, he speaketh not to be profound, for he writ to a king, who deserved things plainly opened."

"Sir John Fortescue, whose learned 'Commentaries on the Law' make him famous to all posterity."—Fulder's Worthies of Devonshire.

"An admirable treatise, which, for the excellence of its method, solidity of matter, and justness of its views, excels every work on that subject."—HEMART.

"An ingenious defence of the Common Law of England against the attacks of civil lawyers. Bracton and Fortescue are the two most learned and almost the only learned of the Ancient Lawyers."—BISHOP WARBURTON.

"It displays sentiments upon liberty and limited government which one could not expect to find in a writer of this period; and there runs through the whole an air of probity that conciliates the attention of the reader."

See 10 Rep., Pref. 28; 3 Pref. 21; Willes, 543; 1 West's Ca., temp. Hard., 27; 10 West. Rev., 97; North's Dia., 85; No. 54, L. M., 283; 1 Kent, 501; Pref. Gregor's Fortescue; Fulbeck's Preparative, 70; 4 Reeves's Hist., 112; Nicolson's Eng. Hist. Lib., 163; Marvin's Leg. Bib., 319.

Fortescue, Sir John. See ALAND, JOHN FORTESCUE.

Fortescue, John. Sermon, 1760, 8vo.

Fortescue, Thomas. The Foreste or Collection of Histories—no less profitable than pleasant and necessary, done out of French into English, London, 1571, 4to.

"The genius of these tales may be discerned from their history. The book is said to have been written in Spanish by Pedro de Messia, then translated into Italian, thence into French by Claude Orugot, a citizen of Paris, and lastly from French into English by Fortescue. But many of the stories seem to have originally migrated from Italy to Spain."—Warton's Hist. of Eng. Poet.

Forth, Earl of. Letter to Earl of Essex, 1643, 4to.

Forth, Henry. Supper of our Lord, 1548, 16mo.

Forth, Wm. Letter to Bp. of Norwich, 1813.

Fortnum, Mrs. 1. The Adventures of Victor Allen; a Nov., 1805, 2 vols. 2. Cordelia, 8vo.

Fortrey, Samuel, a Gentleman of the King's Bed-Chamber. England's Interest and Improvement, consisting in the Increase of the State and Trade of this Kingdom, Camb., 1663, '73, 1744, 8vo.

"Chiefly remarkable for having powerfully assisted in raising and perpetuating that prejudice against the trade with France which resulted not long after in its almost total prohibition."—McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Econ.

Fortune, E. F. T. 1. Epitome of the Stocks and Funds, London, 1796, 12mo; 16th ed., by D. M. Evans, 1851, 12mo. 2. Hist. of the Bk. of England, 1796, 8vo. 3. Nat. Life Annuities, 1809.

Fortune, Robert, b. 1813, at Berwick, Scotland. Three Years' Wanderings in the Northern Provinces of China; 3d ed., London, 1853, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

"Mr. Fortune was sent to China for the purpose of obtaining new plants, and his instructions directed him to pay all possible attention to the horticulture and agriculture of the people; and on these points his work will be most welcome."—Lon. Gardener's Chron.

"This is a genuine book,—as full of interest and amusement as it is empty of pretences at fine writing."—Lon. Athen.

Two Visits to the Tea-Countries of China, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

A Residence among the Chinese; being the Third Visit from 1853 to 1856, 8vo, 1857.

Fosbrooke, John. Six Sermons, Camb., 1633, 4to.

Fosbrooke, Thomas Dudley, 1770–1842, educated at St. Paul's School, and Pembroke Coll., Ox.; M.A., 1792; Curate of Horsley, 1794; Curate of Walford, 1810, and Vicar, 1830. 1. The Economy of Monastic Life, as it existed in England; a Poem, with Philos. and Archæol. Illust., London, 1795, 4to. 2. British Monachism; or, Manners and Customs of the Monks and Nuns of England. To which are added, I. Peregrinatorium Religiosum, or Manners and Customs of ancient Pilgrims; II. Consuetudinal of Anchorets and Hermits; III. Account of the Continentes, or Women who had made Vows of Chastity; IV. Four Select Poems, in various Styles, 2d ed., 1817, 4to.

"A considerable portion of this work having been re-written, with the view of introducing large and important accessions from the ancient Chroniclers, and especially from DE CANGE, (a work as recorded as MS. to all but our first antiquaries,) the present edition, enlivened by reflections suited to history, is adapted, not to the antiquary only, but to the general reader, as interest, curiosity, and entertainment, have been studiously consulted."

New ed., with addits., 1843, 2 vols. r. 8vo.

The first edition of this work was most favourably noticed by all the Reviews.

"Mr. Fosbrooke has given to the publick, chiefly from MS. authorities, a comprehensive view of the character and manners of monastic life; and has brought together many facts, which serve to cast a light on the history of human nature. The manners of the period which furnished his materials were so entirely different from those of the present times, that the relation of them is highly gratifying and instructive. This work contains much curious and original information."—British Critic, 1802.

See this work reviewed in the Gentleman's Magazine for January, February, and March; and also in the British Critic for February, 1818.

See a review of this work, and an elaborate paper on British Monachism, by Robert Southey, in the London Quart. Rev., xxi. 59–102.

"Having thus noticed some errors in Mr. Fosbrooke's work, it would be highly unjust were we not at the same time to state that it contains a great deal of curious and recondite information, and that, wherever the subject permits, the author gives proof in the liveliness of his expressions of a vigorous and original mind."—Ubi supra.

"Fosbrooke's learned work on British Monachism."—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

3. Hist. of the County of Gloucester, from the Papers of Ralph Bigland, &c., 1807, 2 vols. 4to. 4. Letter to Canning, 1809, 8vo. 5. Key to the N. Test., 1815, 12mo. Compiled from Whithy, Hammond, and Bishop Mann. 6. Berkeley MSS., 1821, 4to. 7. Companion to the Wye Tour, Ross, 1821, 8vo. 8. Account of Cheltenham, London, 12mo. 9. Account of Ragland Castle, 12mo. 10. Encyclopædia of Antiquities and Elements of Archæology, 1823–25, 2 vols. 4to; pub. in numbers, 1841, r. 8vo. New ed., with improvements, 1843, 2 vols. r. 8vo; 107 Plates.

"A work as original as it is important—elegantly written, and full of interesting information, with which every person of liberal education ought to be acquainted. No good library should be without it."—Lon. Literary Chronicle.

11. Archæol. Sketches of Ross and Archenfield, 1821, 12mo. 12. The Tourist's Grammar, 1826, 12mo. 13. A Treatise on the Arts, Manners, Manufactures, and Institutions of the Romans, 1833–35, 2 vols. fp. 8vo; Lardner's Cyclopædia. Every antiquarian collection should contain Mr. Fosbrooke's works.

Fosket, Henry. 1. Facts Explained of his Conduct, 1810, 8vo. 2. Rights of the Army Vindicated, 1810, 8vo. 3. Supp., 1812, 8vo.

Foss, Edward. 1. The Grandeur of the Law; or, the Legal Peers of England: with Sketches of their Professions. Career, London, 1843, 12mo. 2. The Judges of England, vol. i., 1066–1199; vol. ii., 1199–1272, pub. London, 1848, 8vo. Vols. iii. and iv., 1272–1483, 1851, 8vo. Vol. v., The Tudors, and vol. vi., The Stuarts, 1857, (an interesting portion of constitutional history.)

Notices of vols. iii. and iv.:

"This work will supply an important deficiency in English literature,—a deficiency long felt and acknowledged by more than those engaged in the study and practice of the law. . . . The Judges of England is an excellent book, and will, without doubt, be appreciated as well by the public at large as by the members of the legal profession."—Tait's Edin. Mag.

"A correction of many errors, an addition of much new information, and a better general view of a strictly legal history than any other jurist, historian, or biographer, had heretofore attempted to give."—Lon. Examiner.

"A work which cannot be too highly estimated, whether for the importance of its object, or the great learning, extraordinary research, judgment, and impartiality, which are bestowed on all parts of its composition."—Lon. Legal Observer.

"He has written a book which has added more to our knowledge of legal history than any single book published since Madox's History of the Exchequer."—Lon. Gent. Mag.

Foss, John. Sermon, 1735, 8vo.

Fossat, George. On the Trinity, London, 1796, '97, 8vo.

Fossat, Thomas. Sermon, 1613, 8vo.

Foster. 1. First Principles of Chemistry, N. York, 12mo. 2. Chart of the Organic Elements.

Foster, Mrs. 1. Handbook of Modern European Literature, London, 1849, 12mo. The object of this book is not so much to give elaborate criticisms on the various writers in the languages to whose literature it is intended as a guide, as to direct the student to the best writers in each, and to inform him on what subjects they have written.

"The attempt of the authoress is educational; but the qualities of her researches are so laboured, and the information she has gathered is so comprehensive, that the book will be an acquisition to every well-selected library as a means of reference in all cases where memory fails, or where much time without it would be lost in making researches."—Bell's Lon. Messenger.

2. Vasari's Lives of the Painters, Sculptors, and Architects; trans. by Mrs. F., and pub. in Bohn's Standard Library, 5 vols. p. 8vo.

"The enthralling Biographies of Vasari,—biographies which, from their peculiar diversity and fascination, have caused the late unfortunate Haydon to exclaim with enthusiasm, 'If I were confined to three books in a desert island, I would certainly choose the Bible, Shakespeare, and Vasari.'"—Westminster and Prov. Quar. Rev.

Foster, Lt., of the First Dragoons. Military Instructions from the late King of Prussia to his Generals, 1797.

Foster, A. F. 1. Spanish Literature, London, 1851, 12mo. 2. General Treatise on Geography, 1852, 12mo. 3. Italian Literature, 1853, 12mo.

Foster, Anthony, 1785–1820, of Charleston, S. C. Sermons.

Foster, Arthur. Digest of the Laws of Georgia, 1820–29, inclusive, Phila., 1831, 8vo.

"This is an unauthorised Digest, embracing the same period as Dawson's, and contains an Appendix of Forms used in carrying the Laws into effect."

Foster, Sir Augustus J., Brit. Sec. of Legation at Washington, 1804–06; Envoy to America, 1811–12. Notes on the United States, London, 1841, 8vo. Unpublished. See an interesting review of this work, with many extracts, in the Lon. Quar. Rev., lxviii. 20–57.

"We cannot conclude without once more hinting our hope that Sir Augustus Foster may give these Notes to the public at large. The specimens now quoted will, we are persuaded, induce both friends and strangers in England and in America to unite in our wishes."—Ubi supra.

Foster, Benjamin, 1750–1798, minister in New York, was a native of Danvers, Mass. Theolog. treatises.

Foster, Birket. 1. Christmas with the Poets; a collec. of Songs, Carols, &c., with 50 Illus. by B. F., London, 1850, r. 8vo; 2d ed., 1851, r. 8vo.

"We unhesitatingly place this most perfect specimen of bibliographic art at the head of its class. It is a work of enduring value, as well in its literary as in its elegant embellishments."—N. York Literary World.

2. Cowper's Task, with Illustrations, Edin., 1855. The London Art Journal says of it:

"We wonder what the bard of Oss would say to this exquisite edition of his favourite poem, could he see it. Such a lover of nature as he was, how his eye would have lighted up at Mr. Foster's delicious bits of landscape—simple, truthful, and poetical as the lines they illustrate. We have often had occasion to commend Mr. Foster's landscape compositions, but we have never seen his pencil more charmingly evinced than on this volume."

"One of the most beautiful gift-books which has appeared this season—one of the most beautiful, indeed, which has ever appeared in any season—is a new edition of 'The Task,' of Cowper, richly illustrated by Birket Foster."—Lon. Quar. Rev.

"Among the pictorial gift-books of the season, the chief place belongs to the 'Illustrated edition of Cowper's Task.' It is altogether a beautiful work, and one of perennial value."—Lon. Lit. Gazette.

To Mr. Foster we are indebted for a number of other beautiful Illustrations.

Foster, C. J. 1. On the London University. 2. Elements of Jurisprudence, 1854, p. 8vo.

Foster, or Forster, Edward. Prin. and Prac. of Midwifery. Completed and corrected by J. Sims, M.D., Lon., 1781, 8vo.

Foster, Francis. Thoughts on the Times, but chiefly on the Profligacy of Women, and its Causes, Lon., 1779, 12mo.

Foster, George. 1. Sounding of the last Trumpet, 1650, 4to. 2. Pouring out of the Seventh and last Vial, 1650, 4to.

Foster, Georgius. De Epilepsia, Lugd. Bat., 1679, 4to.

Foster, Hannah, an American authoress. The Coquette; or, The History of Eliza Wharton. New ed., with a Preface by Mrs. Jane E. Locke, 1855. This melancholy story is founded on fact. See CHENEY, HARRIET V.; CUSHING, MRS.

Foster, Henry. Trained Bands of London, 1643, 4to.

Foster, Henry. Sermon, 1777, 8vo.

Foster, Henry, 1745-1814, entered at Queen's Coll., Oxf., 1764; Perpetual Curate of St. James's, Clerkenwell, 1804. 1. Grace Displayed and Saul Converted; sub. of a Sermon, Acts ix. 11, Lon., 1776, 8vo. New ed., 1814, 8vo. 2. The Bible Preacher; or, Closet Companion for every Day in the Year, 1824, 12mo.

"A work worthy the attention of all clergymen, dissenting ministers, and all denominations of Christians."—Lowndes's Brit. Lib.

Foster, Rev. J. K. 1. Recollec. of Rev. G. D. Owen, Lon., 1838, 8vo. 2. Convers. on Brit. Ch. Hist., 1848, 12mo. 3. Strong Consolation, or the Penitent Sinner Encouraged, 32mo.

Foster, James, D.D., 1697-1753, a native of Exeter, began to preach as a dissenting minister, 1718, minister at Barbican, London, 1724; at Pinner's Hall, 1744. He was originally an Independent, but was subsequently baptized by immersion. In 1728 he commenced the series of Sunday Evening Lectures—continued for more than twenty years—which were numerously attended by persons of all ranks of life and all classes of opinions.

"Here," says Dr. Fleming, "was a confluence of persons of every rank, station, and quality. Wits, free-thinkers, numbers of clergy; who, whilst they gratified their curiosity, had their professions shaken and their prejudices loosened. And of the usefulness and success of these lectures he had a large number of written testimonials from unknown as well as known persons."

Perhaps no preacher ever maintained an enthusiastic popularity for a longer period. Pope sang his praises, and Savage declared there was none to be named with him.

"Let modest Foster, if he will, excel

Ten Metropolitans in preaching well."

Prof. to Pope's Satires.

"But see the accomplished Orator appear,
Refined his language, and his reason clear;
Thou, Foster, only, hast the pleasing art,
At once to charm the ear, and mend the heart."

SAVAGE.

Lord Bollingbroke noticed the popular favourite after his own fashion, by ascribing to him, but erroneously, it is said, the absurd saying, often quoted by shallow disputants,

"Where mystery begins, religion ends."

But it has been remarked that,

"Whatever his personal virtues and popular talents, he neither professed nor possessed much zeal for the essential doctrines of Christianity."

1. Occasional Sermons, 1720, '32, '41, '42, 8vo. 2. Sermons, 1732, '33, '37, 8vo. 3. Sermons, in 4 vols. 8vo; 4th and best ed., 1755. 4. Discourses on Natural Religion and Social Virtues, 1749-52, 2 vols. 4to. 5. Essay on Fundamentals; especially the Trinity, 1720, 8vo. A celebrated essay. 6. Defence of the Usefulness, Truth, and Excellency of the Christian Religion, 1731, 8vo. Written against Tindal.

"This is generally and justly acknowledged to be an ingenious performance, and written with great clearness of thought and expression."—Leland's Distinct Writers, q. v.

"It reflects much credit on the abilities and ingenuity of the author." See Wilson's Hist. of Diss. Churches.

7. Answer to Dr. Stebbing's Letter on Heresy, 1735, 8vo; do. to his 3d Letter, 1736, 8vo.

Foster, John. 1. Oratio habita Cantabrigin in Collegio Regali, Cantab., 1752, 4to. 2. Dissertatio, Lae, 1758, 4to.

Foster, John, of Elton. Sermon, Lon., 1756, '57, 8vo. Foster, John, 1731-1773, a native of Windsor, educated at Eton and King's Coll., Camb., Master of Eton, 1765; Canon of Windsor, 1772. An Essay on Accret and Quantity, Eton, 1762, 8vo; 3d ed., 1820, 8vo. An esteemed work. The 3d ed. contains Dr. Gally's two Dissertations against pronouncing the Greek language according to accents.

Foster, Rt. Hon. John, M.P. Speeches, 1793, '94, 8vo.

Foster, John. Poems on Relig. Subjects, 1798, 8vo.

Foster, John, D.D., 1783-1829, minister of Brighton, Mass., husband of Hannah Foster, author of The Coquette Sermons, 1799, 1802, '03, '05, '09, '17.

Foster, John. On the Method of Illustrating Scripture from the relation of Modern Travellers, 1802, 8vo.

Foster, John, 1770-1843, a native of Yorkshire, England, was the son of a farmer, who employed his leisure hours in weaving, and taught his son the use of the hand-wheel. When 14 years of age, John was placed under the care of a manufacturer, who soon discovered that his studious apprentice would prove but an unprofitable assistant. Discharged from a distasteful employment, he determined to study for the ministry, and entered the Baptist College at Bristol, where he soon gained distinction by intellectual abilities. In 1792 he commenced preaching, and officiated among the Baptists at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Dublin, Chester, Downend, near Bristol, and Frome, in Somersetshire, in succession. Obligated by a glandular affection of the neck to discontinue preaching, he retired to Stapleton, near Bristol, and here he devoted himself to literary composition, for which few have been so well qualified. He was the principal contributor to the Eclectic Review, and for a period of thirteen years wrote for its columns those excellent essays which gave that periodical so extensive and durable a reputation. We should not fail to mention that the "Friend" to whom he addressed his essays was a Miss Maria Snook of Downend, who subsequently became Mrs. John Foster. For further particulars respecting this excellent man and eminent writer, we must refer the reader to his Life and Correspondence, by J. E. Ryland; with Notices of Mr. Foster as a preacher and companion, by John Sheppard, Lon., 1846, 2 vols. p. 8vo; 2d ed., 1848, 2 vols. 8vo. New ed. (Bohn's Stand. Lib.,) 1852, 2 vols. 12mo; Boston, 1850, 2 vols. in 1, 12mo.

"In the interesting volumes before us we find, and principally in his own words, a full and faithful register of the leading events in his life, and of the more interesting movements in his spiritual history. The book is arranged on a plan somewhat similar to that adopted in Carlyle's work on Cromwell. The biography constitutes an intermitting chain between the numerous letters, and is executed in a modest and intelligent manner. Besides his correspondence, there are large and valuable excerpts from his journals, and to the whole are appended interesting though slight notices of his character, from the pen of Mr. Sheppard."—Gifford's Second Gallery of Lit. Portraits.

In 1805 Mr. Foster pub. (1.) Essays, in a Series of Letters to a Friend, on the following subjects: 1. On a man's writing memoirs of himself; 2. On Decision of Character; 3. On the application of the epithet Romantic; 4. On some of the causes by which Evangelical Religion has been rendered less acceptable to persons of cultivated taste, 8th ed., 1830, 8vo. The final corrections of the author appear in this ed., from which the subsequent eds. were printed; 13th ed., 1839, 12mo; 21st ed., 1850, p. 8vo.

"I happened myself to be in Bristol at the moment when his four essays were first issuing from the press; and everywhere I heard so pointed an account of the expectations connected with Foster by his religious party, that I made it a duty to read his book without delay. It is a distant incident to look back upon; but far more than thirty years; but I remember my first impressions, which were these:—first, That the novelty or weight of the thinking was hardly sufficient to account for the sudden popularity, without some extra influence at work; and, secondly, That the contrast was remarkable between the uncoloured style of his general diction, and the brilliant felicity of occasional images embroidered upon the sober ground of his text. The splendour did not seem spontaneous, or growing up as part of the texture within the loom; it was intermitting, and seemed as extraneous to the substance as the flowers which are chalked for an evening upon the score of ball-rooms."—De Quincey's Essays on the Poets and other Eng. Writers, q. v.

The eminent authorities next to be quoted take a very different view of our author.

"The author places the idea which he wishes to present in such a flood of light, that it is not merely visible itself, but it seems to illumine all around it. He paints metaphysics, and has the happy art of arranging what in other hands would appear cold and comfortless abstractions, in the warmest colours of fancy. Without quitting his argument in pursuit of ornament or imagery, his imagination becomes the perfect handmaid of his reason, ready at every moment to spread her canvas and present her pencil."—ROBERT HALL.

"I have read, with the greatest admiration, the Essays of Mr. Foster. He is one of the most profound and eloquent writers that England has produced."—SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH.

"Mr. Foster's Essays are full of ingenuity and original remarks. The style of them is at once terse and elegant."—DR. DISDEN: Library Comp.

"A very accurate and powerful writer of the present day, Mr. Foster, in his Essay on Decision of Character," &c.—SAMUEL WARREN: Two Thousand a Year. And see the same author's Introduction to Law Studies.

It would be easy to multiply commendations.

In 1819 appeared (2) the Essays on the Evils of Popular Ignorance. New ed., 16th thousand, including the Discourse on the Communication of Christianity to the People of India, 1850, 8vo.

This the author considered his best work, and is the one by which he wished his literary claims to be estimated. The fact of its not having sold so well as his other Essays was, he used to say, a proof of Popular Ignorance. The author was not the only admirer of his performance:

"A work which, popular and admired as it confessedly is, has never met with the thousandth part of the attention which it deserves. It appears to me that we are now at a crisis in the state of our country and of the world, which renders the reasonings and exhortations of that eloquent production applicable and urgent beyond all power of mine to express."—DR. J. PIERCE SMITH.

"If any have yet to learn the Evils of Popular Ignorance, let them survey the chambers of imagery in this original and affecting Essay, and if they can receive impressions, they will never more forget that the people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."—DR. JOHN HARRIS, author of Mammon.

3. Contributions, Biographical, Literary, and Philosophical, to the Eclectic Review, 1840, 2 vols. 8vo.

"They are worthy to go along with the reviews of Hall, Macaulay, and Jeffrey. Profound, keen, courteous, powerful in reasoning, vigorous and massive in style, and eminently Christian in sentiment, they will suffer nothing by comparison with the writings of those justly-celebrated men in the most important points, while in some they possess an evident superiority."—Lon. Congregational Mag.

"We believe that no Review in England, in America, or on the Continent, can boast of more precious treasures than those disclosed in the volumes before us."—Lon. Evangelical Mag.

"We question if there be another Review in Europe that could show such a series of papers as Foster contributed to the Eclectic."—United Secession Magazine, August.

"Had the Eclectic Review achieved nothing else for letters and piety than eliciting the contributions of Foster, it would have established strong claims to public gratitude."—Lon. Christian Witness.

4. Lectures delivered at Broadmead Chapel, Bristol. 1st Series, 1844, 8vo; 3d ed., 1848, 12mo. 2d Series, 1847, 8vo; 2d ed., 1848, 12mo.

"We know of nothing in the language equal to the Lectures upon Historical Subjects from the Old and New Testaments in point of graphical vividness of description and profoundly instructive comment. All the discoveries are rich in thought and deeply impressive; and of all Mr. Foster's writings, they give us the best and truest impress of the real character of his mind."—Lon. Patriot.

5. Introductory Essay to Doddridge's Rise and Progress, 1847, 12mo.

"In point of direct religious utility, it has been surpassed by none of his writings."—Ryland's Life of Foster, vol. II. p. 17.

"Several parts I have had to write anew and differently; minor corrections to an endless amount. To think how much ado, of talking, fretting, pacing the room morning and night, pleading excuse from preaching and visiting, setting aside of plans for South Wales, &c.; and all for what?—a Preface to Doddridge's Rise and Progress."—JOHN FOSTER.

"In simplicity of language, in majesty of conception, in the eloquence of that conciseness which conveys, in a short sentence, more meaning than the mind dares at once admit, his writings are unmatched."—North British Review.

"His Essays are original, and calculated to enlarge the mind."—Edinburgh C. S.

"For twenty years we have been enthusiasts in reference to this writer's genius."—GILFILLAN: Second Gallery of Lit. Port.

"Mr. Gillilan possibly overrates the power of this essayist, and the hold which he has upon the public mind. It is singular, meanwhile, that whatever might be its degree, much or little, originally his influence was due to an accident of position, which, in some countries, would have tended to destroy it. He was a Dissenter."—DR. QUINCEY: Essays on the Poets, and other Eng. Writers.

The reader can pursue the subject in the two works last named, and many of the leading periodicals of the day.

Foster, John Leslie. 1. Essay on the Principles of Commercial Exchange, &c., Lon., 1804, 8vo.

"In this very able treatise Mr. Foster gives the earliest explanation of the real nature and influence of absentee expenditures that we have met with."—McCulloch's Lit. of Polit. Econ.

2. Speech rel. to R. Catholics in Ireland, 1812, 8vo.

Foster, Joseph. See FORSTER.

Foster, Mark. A Treat. of Trigonometry.

Foster, Sir Michael, 1689–1763, an eminent lawyer, a native of Marlborough, Wiltshire, educated at Exeter Coll., Oxf., entered the Middle Temple in 1707, was knighted and made a Judge of the Court of King's Bench in 1745. 1. Letter to Prof. Dissenters, 1720. 2. Exam. of the scheme of Church Power laid down in the Codex Juris Ecclesiastici Anglicani, &c., 1735.

"In this he controverted the system of Church power vested in the clergy, and which forms the groundwork of Bishop Gibson's 'Codex.'"

Several answers appeared, the principal one by Dr. Andrews, a civilian. 3. The King against Alex. Broadfoot, Oxf., 1758, 4to. 4. Report, &c. rel. to trial of the Rebels in 1746; 1762, fol.; 1776, 8vo. New ed., with Discourses upon a few Branches of the Crown Law, 1792, 8vo; 3d ed., with Appendix, cont'g Foster's Opinion, &c., and Notes and References by Michael Dodson, 1809, 8vo.

"The truly admirable discourses of Sir Michael Foster."—JUDAS SPOON: Miscell. Writings, 76.

"The author did not attempt to write a regular Treatise upon Crown Law. His discourses are much admired for their sound and accurate learning."

See Prof. Gilbert's Evid., by Lofft, 37; Cowp., 7; 3 East, 582; Warren's Law Stu., 620; Marvin's Leg. Bibl., 321.

Michael Dodson, his nephew, pub. his Life in 1811, 8vo.

Foster, Nich. Rebellion in Barbadoes, 1650, 8vo.

Foster, P. L. N. Act rel. to Wills, Lon., 1837, 12mo.

Foster, Rev. Randolph S., b. 1820, in Williamsburg, Ohio. 1. Objections to Calvinism. 2. Christian Purity, N.Y., 1851, 12mo. 3. Ministry Needed for the Times.

Foster, Richard. To the Rulers in Israel, 1650.

Foster, Robert, or William. Hoplocrisma-Sponges; or, A Sponge to wipe away the Weapon-salve, Lon., 1631, 4to.

Foster, Samuel, d. 1652, a native of Northamptonshire, educated at Emanuel Coll., Camb., was elected Prof. of Astronomy in Gresham Coll. in 1636, and again in 1641. He was a distinguished mathematician. His principal works are—1. Descrip. of a Quadrant, Lon., 1624, 4to. Several eds. 2. The Art of Dialling, 1636, &c., 4to. 3. Four Treatises on Dialling, 1654, 4to. 4. Horologigraphy, 1654, 4to. 5. Miscellanea, Eng. and Lat., 1659, fol.

Foster, Thomas. Sermon, Lon., 1631, 4to.

Foster, Thomas. See FORSTER.

Foster, Thomas. Chrestomatheia; or, A Collection of Morality and Sentiment extracted from various Authors, 1793, 12mo.

Foster, Wm. See FORSTER.

Foster, Wm. See FORRESTER.

Foster, Wm., D.D. Visit. Sermon, Lon., 1802, 4to.

Foster, Rev. Wm., Head Master of St. Paul's School, Southsea, has pub. Greek and Latin Grammars, &c., and works on Arithmetic and Algebra.

Foster, Mrs. W. Lady Marion, Lon., 1853, 3 vols. p. 8vo.

"This fascinating novel needs not the attraction of the name of the late Duke of Wellington's niece upon the title-page to commend it to the novel-readers of the fashionable world. The work gives evidence of talent of no common order."—John Bull.

Foster, Wm. L. New Hampshire Reports, vols. I, II, III, pub. to 1854, Boston, 8vo.

Fotherby, Martin, D.D., 1659–1619, a native of Lincolnshire, educated at, and Fellow of, Trin. Coll., Camb., Preb. of Canterbury, 1596; Bishop of Sarum, 1618. 1. Fovre Sermons, Lon., 1608, 4to. 2. Atheomasti; or, The clearing of Four Truths against Atheists, &c., 1622, fol.

Fothergill, Anthony, a husbandman, pub. three theolog. treatises, Lon., 1754, '56, 8vo.

Fothergill, Anthony, M.D., of Northampton, pub. treatises on Fever, Poison, &c., 1763–99, and contrib. profess. papers to Med. Obs. and Inq., and Phil. Trans., 1767–1805.

Fothergill, Charles. 1. The Wanderer: Tales and Essays, 1803, 2 vols. 12mo. 2. Essay on Natural History, 1813, 12mo.

Fothergill, George, 1705–1760, a native of Westmoreland, educated at, and Fellow and tutor of, Queen's Coll., Oxf.; Principal of Edmund Hall, and Vicar of Bramley, Hampshire, 1751. 1. Occas. Sermons, Lon., 1756, '57, '58, 8vo. 2. Sermons, 1761, '62, 8vo; Oxf., 1765, 2 vols. 8vo.

"His sermons display a large share of many senses. They are clear, rational, and instructive. His turn of thought and expression is ingenious and sprightly."—Lon. Month. Rev.

Fothergill, John, M.D., 1712–1780, an eminent physician, a member of the Society of Friends or Quakers, was a native of Carr End, Yorkshire. After travelling on the continent, he settled in London, where he gained such fame in his profession that he enjoyed an income of about £7000, and left an estate of £80,000. He endowed a seminary for young Quakers at Ackworth, near Leeds, assisted Sydney Parkinson in his account of his South Sea Voyage, and printed Anthony Purver's (a Quaker) trans. of the Bible from the Hebrew and Greek, at an expense of £2000. 1. Thesis de Emeticorum usu, in variis Morbis tractandis, Edin., 1738, 8vo. 2. Sore Throat with Ulcers, Lon., 1748, '54, 8vo. 3. Rules for the Preserv. of Health, 1762, 8vo. 4. Aoct. of Dr. Collinson, 1770, 4to. Anon. 5. Explan. Remarks to the Pref. to Sydney Parkinson's Jour. of a Voy. to the South Seas, 1773, 4to. 6. Hydrophobia, 1778, 8vo. 7. Con. to Ed. Med. Ess., 1736. 8. Con. to Phil. Trans., 1744. 9. Con. to Med. Obs. and Inq., 1755, '67, '78, '84. His Works, edited by John Elliot, M.D., with Life and Notes, 1781, 8vo. By Gilbert Thompson, 1782, 8vo. By Dr. Lettsom, 1783, 2 vols. 8vo; 1784, 4to. Hortas Uptoniensis; or, A Cat. of Stove and Greenhouse Plants in Dr. Fothergill's Garden at Upton, at the time of his decease, 1784, 8vo.

"The person of Dr. Fothergill was of a delicate rather than extenuated make. His features were all expressive, and his eye had a peculiar brilliancy. His understanding was comprehensive and quick, and rarely embarrassed on the most sudden occasions. There was a charm in his conversation and address that conciliated the regard and confidence of all who employed him; and so discreet and uniform was his conduct, that he was not apt to forfeit the esteem which he had once acquired."

See authorities cited above; also Chalmers's Biog. Dict.; Nichols's Lit. Anecdotes; Physic and Physicians; The Lives of Brit. Physicians; and for a list of his separate papers in Ed. Med. Ess., Phil. Trans., and Med. Obs. and Inq., refer to Bibl. Brit.

Fothergill, Samuel, d. 1773, an eminent Quaker preacher, brother of the preceding, travelled over England, Scotland, Ireland, and North America, holding religious meetings. He was greatly respected. 1. Remarks on an Address to the People called Quakers, and a Sermon, &c. by M. Pilkington. In a Letter to the Author; with Observ. by Phipps, 1761, 8vo. 2. Reply to E. Owen on Water Baptism, 1763, 8vo. 3. Letters, 1816.

Fothergill, Samuel, M.D. Tic Douloureux, Lon., 1804, 8vo.

Fothergill, Thomas. Articles against Capt. Neidham, 1653, 4to.

Fothergill, Thomas, D.D. Provost of Queen's Coll., and Preb. of Durham. Serms., Oxf., 1749, '53, '56, '60, '62, '64.

Fouler. See FOWLER.

Fouler, Wm. Truth's Vindication of Election and Reprobation, Lon., 1652, 12mo.

Foulface, Philip. Bacchus Bovntie, Describing the debonaire dietie of his bountifull godhead, in the royall observance of his great feast of Pentecost. Necessaire to be read and marked of all, for the eschuing of like enormities. By Philip Foulface of Ale-foord, student in good fellowship, Lon., 1594, 4to. Partly in verse and partly in prose; much in the style of Robert Greene. Three sheets only. Bibl. Anglo-Poet., 74, £6. It is reprinted in the Harleian Miscellany.

"The intention of this Pamphlet was to expose the sin of drunkenness, and the folly and danger of those who give themselves up to that chargeable, silly, and health-destroying vice: a vice, in which a man takes the utmost pains to drown his own reason, to commence a fool, the object of a sober man's resentment and reproach, and to ruin both his own estate and constitution."—Oldys.

To this "let all the people say, Amen!"

Foulis, or De Foliis, Henry, 1638?–1685, entered Queen's Coll., Oxf., 1654; Fellow of Lincoln's Coll., 1659; took holy orders, but devoted himself to historical studies. 1. Hist. of the Wicked Plots and Conspiracies of our blessed Saints, the Presbyterians, &c., Lon., 1662; Oxf., 1674, fol.

"Which book, tho' full of notable girds against that party, yet it hath been so pleasing to the royalists, (who have found much wit and mirth therein,) that some of them have caused it to be chained to desks in public places, and in some country-churches, to be read by the vulgar. But as by the publishing of this book he hath much displeased the Presbyterians, of whom some have fallen foul upon him in their writings for so doing; so hath he more displeased another party for the writing of this book following:

"(2) The History of the Romish Treasons and Usurpations, with an Account of many gross Corruptions and Impositions of the Church of Rome, &c., Lon., 1671 and '81, fol. Which book, had it not fallen into the hands of a knavish bookseller, might have been extant in the lifetime of the author, and so consequently more compleat and exact than it now is. At its first publication, I was informed by a letter written by a noted man of that party, that the papists did look upon the said book as a simple thing—that he (the author) fought against his own shadow, and that all sober Catholics did disallow much of what he combats against."—Athen. Coen.

Watt ascribes to Foulis (3) Cabala; or, the Hist. of the Conventicles Unceased, 1664, 4to; and Foulis left a MS.

Account of all Serms. preached before Parliament, 1649–48; in Wood's Collect., Ashmole's Museum, 8480, 18.

Foulis, Sir James, Bart., d. 1721. 1. Lett. on Irish Affairs, Lon., 1805, 8vo. 2. Catholic Emancip., 1812, 8vo.

Foulis, Oliver. Under this name David Lloyd pub. his work Of Plots, &c., Lon., 1664, 4to.

Foulis, Robert, d. 1776, a celebrated printer, as was also Andrew, his brother, who d. 1774. Cat. of Robert Foulis's Pictures, by the most admired Masters, Lon., 1776, 3 vols. 8vo. Sold at a great sacrifice. The balance over the expenses amounted to only fifteen shillings. Respecting the brothers Foulis, see Nichols's Lit. Anecdotes; Le-moine's Hist. of Printing; Timperley's Dict. of Printers and Printing.

Foulkes, E. S., Fellow and Tutor of Jesus Coll., Oxf. Manual of Ecclesiastical History from the 1st to the 12th Cent. inclusive, Oxf., 1851, 8vo. Mr. Foulkes's principal authorities are—Spanheim, Spondanus, Mosheim, Fleury, Gieseler, and Döllinger.

"Mr. Foulkes writes in a spirit of manly faith."—Scottish Review, May, 1852.

Foulkes, Martin. See FOLKES.

Foulkes, Peter, D.D. Serms., Oxf., 1723, 4to.

Foulkes, Robert. 1. Alarms for Sinners, Lon., 1679, 4to. 2. His Confession and Life, 1679, 4to. An Account of His Trial and Execution for Murder and Adultery was pub. in the same year.

Foulston, J. Public Buildings of the West of England, Lon., 1838, imp. 4to.

"The noble, elegant, and truly classical works of this eminent Architect furnish admirable examples both of taste and professional skill in grappling with and overcoming some of the difficulties of the art, namely, in arrangement and adaptation."—Barrow and Bayly.

Fountain, John. His Catechisms, trans. by T. W., (Tho. Wilcox,) 1578, 8vo.

Fountain, John. The Rewards of Vertue; a Comedie, Lon., 1661, 4to. Altered by Shadwell, and represented with success under the title of The Royal Shepherds, T. C., 1669, 4to.

Fountain, or Fountayne, John, D.D., Dean of York. Fast Sermon, Lon., 1756, 8vo.

Fountaine, Sir Andrew, d. 1753, an eminent antiquary, the friend of Dean Swift and other wits of the age, is commended for his antiquarian knowledge by Montfaucon in the preface to L'Antiquité Expliquée. Swift often mentions him in his Journal to Stella.

1. Numismata Anglo-Saxonica et Anglo-Danica reviter illustrata, Oxon., 1704, fol. Vide Hickes's Thesaurus. 2. Notes in Anglo-Saxonum Nummosa D. Andrea Fountaine editos, (ab Edv. Thwaites,) Oxon., 1708, 8vo. 3. His Case in relation to a Bill under the name of Sir Charles Holt, Bart., fol.

Fountaine, John. Letter to Dr. Turner concerning the Ch. and the Revenues thereof, Lon., 1647, 4to. Anon.

Fountainhall, Lord. Chronol. Notes of Scot. Affairs, 1630–1701, taken chiefly from the Diary of Lord Fountainhall, Edin., 1822, 4to.

Fountainhall, Sir John Lauder, Lord. Decisions of the Lords of Council and Session, 1678–1712, Edin., 1759–61, 2 vols. fol.

Four, Du, W. See DUFOUR.

Fourrestier, James. The Pearle of Practise; or, Practiser's Pearle for Physicke and Chirurgerie; found out by J. H., (John Hester,) a Spagericke, or Distiller, amongst the learned observations and proued practices of many expert men in both faculties, Lon., 1594, 4to.

Fourrestier, Paul. Serms., Lon., 1758, 8vo.

Fournier, Daniel. Perspective, Lon., 1762, 4to. This is based on the principles laid down by Dr. Brook Taylor.

Fovargue, Stephen. A new Cat. of Vulgar Errors, Lon., 1767, 8vo. Intended as a supplement to Dr. Thomas Browne's work of the same title.

Fowke, John. Account of his Enquiries for Extirpating Fires, fol.

Fowldes, Wm. The Strange and Wonderful and bloody Battell betweene Frogs and Mice; a Poem, 1603, 4to.

Fowle, Fulmer Wm., Preb. of Salisbury. 1. Twelve Serms., Lon., 1835, '36, 2 vols. 12mo. 2. Serms. on Faith, 1845, 12mo. 3. Memoranda of 1846, '47, pp. 8vo, 1848.

Fowle, Thomas. Almanacks, 1681, '84, 12mo.

Fowle, Wm., M.D. 1. Hurricanes, &c. in W. Indies, Lon., 1781, 8vo. 2. Mercury in the Small-Pox, 1793, 8vo. 3. Fevers of the W. Indies, 1800, 8vo.

Fowler. Sermon on Luke xxiii. 19, 1699, 4to.

Fowler, Christopher, 1611–1676, a clergyman of the Church of England, joined the Presbyterians in 1641, and became a noted preacher, as we shall presently see.

1. Dæmonium Meridianum, 1st Pt., 1655, 4to; 2d Pt., 1656, 4to. This work relates to the ejection of Rev. John Pordage. 2. Anti-Christian Blasphemies, &c., 1655, 4to. 3. Answer to Thos. Speed, a Quaker, 1656. In this he was assisted by Simon Ford. George Fox animadverted upon this work. 4. Serm., 1675, 4to. 5. A few Occasional Sermons.

"A very conceited and fantastical preacher. . . . For by his very many odd gestures, and antic behaviour (unbecoming the serious gravity to be used in the pulpit) he drew constantly to his congregation a numerous crowd of silly women and young people, who seemed to be hugely taken and enamoured with his obstreperousness and undecent cants."—Athen. Oxon.

It is to be remembered that Anthony Wood shows no mercy to Dissenters; especially such as had left the Church of England; unless, indeed, they became Roman Catholics. Mr. Cooper describes Fowler as "An able, holy, faithful, indefatigable servant of Christ. He was quick in apprehension, solid in his notions, clear in his conceptions, sound in the faith, strong and demonstrative in arguing, mighty in convincing, and zealous for the truth against all errors."

Fowler, David Burton. The Prac. in the Ct. of Exch. upon Proceed. in Equity, 1795; 2d ed., 1817, 2 vols. 8vo.

Fowler, Edward, 1632-1714, originally a Presbyterian, conformed at the Restoration; Preb. of Gloucester, 1676; Bishop of Gloucester, 1691. He pub. many sermons, and theolog. treatises, the best-known of which is The Design of Christianity, Lon., 1671, 8vo; 3d ed., 1699, 8vo. This was attacked by John Bunyan, and defended by the author. Libertas Evangelica, a sequel to the Design of Christianity, was pub. in 1780. The Design, &c. will be found in the 6th vol. of Bishop Watson's Collec. of Theolog. Tracts.

"This work was first published in 1671: there have been several editions of it since, but not so many as, from the worth of it, might have been expected."—BISHOP WATSON.

Fowler, George. 1. Three Years in Persia, Lon., 1841, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

"Mr. Fowler's volumes possess great interest for those who love to study pictures of foreign life."—Lon. Athenæum.

2. Lives of the Sovereigns of Russia, from Rurik to Nicholas: vols. i. and ii., p. 8vo, 1852, '54; iii., 1858: see Lon. Athen., 1858, 687. 3. Hist. of the Ottoman Empire, 1854, p. 8vo.

Fowler, J. Hist. of the Troubles in Sutherland and Poland which occas. the expul. of Sig. III., Lon., 1656, fol.

Fowler, John, b. at Bristol, England, d. at Neumark, Germany, 1579, a learned English printer, educated at and Fellow of New Coll., Oxf., reduced into a Compendium the Summa Theologica of Aquinas, wrote Epigrams and other verses, and engaged in some other literary labours, 1578, &c., besides printing many books in favour of Romanism.

"Being a zealous papist, he could not comport with the Reformation, but conveyed himself and his press over to Antwerp, where he was signally serviceable to the Catholic cause, in printing their pamphlets, which were sent over and sold in England."—Fuller's Worthies of Bristol.

"He was well skill'd in the Greek and Latin tongues, a tolerable poet and orator, and a theologian not to be contemn'd. So learned was he also in criticisms, and other polite learning, that he might have passed for another Robert, or Henry, Stephens, printers."—Athen. Oxon.

See the above authorities, and Dodd's Church Hist., vol. i.

Fowler, John, surgeon at Ayton. Hints rel. to recovery of the drowned, Lon., 1784, 8vo.

Fowler, John. The Last Guinea; a Poem, 8vo.

Fowler, Orrin S. Works on Physiology, Education, Phenology, &c., N. York, 1848-53, &c.

Fowler, Richard. Animal Electricity, or Galvanism, Edin., 1793, 8vo.

Fowler, Robert. A Quaker's Sea Journal, 1659, 4to.

Fowler, Thomas. Funl. Serm., Lon., 1754, 8vo.

Fowler, Thomas, M.D., 1736-1801, a native of York, England, practised at Stafford and York. 1. Dissertatio Medica, Edin., 1778, 8vo. 2. Med. Reports of the Effects of Tobacco, 1785, 8vo. 3. Effects of Arsenic, 1786, 8vo. 4. Effects of Blood-letting, &c., 1795, 8vo. 5. Con. to Med. Com., 1777, '78, '94. 6. Memoirs Med., 1792.

"Some idea of his indefatigable labours may be conceived, when we mention that he left in manuscript the history of more than six thousand cases, which fell under his own inspection and treatment." See Rees's Cyclopædia.

Fowler, W. The Eastern Mirror; an Illust. of the Scriptures from celebrated Travellers, Exeter, 1814, 8vo. This is an abridgt. of Harmer and Burder, with some additions.

Fowler, W. C. The English Language in its Elements and Forms, N. York, 1850, 8vo.

"A work of great elaboration and care, which carries the relations of grammar to other sciences further than is usual in such treatises."—Watchman and Observer.

Fowler, or Fowler, Wm. Answer to Hamilton, 1581.

Fowler, Wm. Engravings of Mosaic Pavements and paintings in Stained Glass, 2 vols. eleph. fol., Winterton, York; v. y. Of this beautiful work not forty copies were completed. It is worth about £24. Mr. Fowler, who was originally a journeyman carpenter, was emphatically the author of this book; for he made the drawings and engravings, prepared the colours, and even made the paper itself.

Fowles, Rev. James H., 1812-1854, b. at Nassau, New Providence, was the son of Lt. Henry Fowles of the British Army. He graduated at Yale College in 1831, and about 1833 was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of New York. He subsequently received ordination at the hands of Bishop Bowen of S. Carolina, and, after officiating in several parishes in that State, in 1845 accepted the rectorship of the Church of the Epiphany, Philadelphia, then recently vacated by the removal of the Rev. Dr. Stephen H. Tyng to New York. He here laboured with great zeal until within a few months of his death, when obliged to resign his duties from ill health. 1. Protestant Epis. Views of Baptism Explained and Defended, Phila., 1846, 18mo. 2. Serms. [30] preached in the Church of the Epiphany, Phila.; preceded by a biographical sketch of the author, 1855, 8vo.

"We should be glad to make some extracts from these sermons, but it is about as difficult to do this as it would be to substitute any other language for that of the author. Each sermon is a piece of solid masonry. It must be taken as a whole to be appreciated; and, what is uncommon, there is not a sermon in the book which will not read better the second time. For close logical reasoning, for distinctness of doctrine, for scriptural style, and for power of thought, few sermons we have ever seen equal them."—Prof. Epis. Quar. Rev. and Ch. Reg., N. York, April, 1855.

Mr. Fowles also edited and wrote Introductions to Goode's Better Covenant and The Convict Ship.

Fownes, George, late Prof. of Prac. Chem. in Univ. Coll., London. 1. Chemistry as exemplifying the Wisdom and Beneficence of God, being the Actonian Prize Essay of 100 Guineas, awarded by the Com. of the Royal Instit. of G. Brit., Lon., 1844, p. 8vo; 2d ed., 1848, 12mo.

"The field which the author has gone over is one of the utmost interest. He has embraced all the leading facts of the subject, and made them to bear upon his principal argument."—Lon. Athenæum.

2. Chemical Tables, Lon., 1846, sm. fol. 3. Introduct. to Qualitative Analysis, 1846, p. 8vo. 4. Rudimentary Chemistry, 1848, 12mo. 5. Manual of Elementary Chemistry, 1844, sp. 8vo; 4th ed., revised, 1852; 5th ed., with addita., edited by H. Bence Jones, M.D., and A. W. Hofman, Ph. D., 1854; 4th Amer. ed., by Robert Bridges, M.D., Phila., 1855, r. 12mo.

"An admirable exposition of the present state of chemical science, simply and clearly written, and displaying a thorough practical knowledge of its details, as well as a profound acquaintance with its principles. The illustrations, and the whole getting up of the book, merit our highest praise."—Brit. and For. Med. Rev.

"One of the best elementary works on Chemistry accessible to the American and English student."—N. York Jour. of Med., March, 1854.

Fownes, Joseph. Serms., &c., Lon., 1760-90.

Fownes, or Fowns, Richard, D.D., domestic chaplain to Prince Henry, son of James I. 1. Concio ad Clerum Academia Oxon., Lon., 1606, 4to. 2. Trisagion; or, the Three Offices of Christ, 1619, 4to. 3. Serm., 1660.

Fox, General. Hist. of the War in the Peninsula, Lon., 1837, 3 vols. 8vo.

"Without question, the most eloquent and masterly picture ever attempted."—Lon. Monthly Review.

Fox, Abr. L. Surgery, Lon., 1656, 8vo.

Fox, Bohun. Self-condemned Quaker, 1707, 8vo.

Fox, Charles. A Series of Poems, Bristol, 1797, 8vo.

Fox, Rt. Hon. Charles James, Jan. 24, 1749-

Sept. 13, 1806, second son of the first Lord Holland and Lady Georgiana Carolina, eldest daughter of Charles, Duke of Richmond, was educated at Eton, and at Hertford Coll., Oxf. He studied the classics to great advantage under the eye of the celebrated Drs. Barnard and Newcome, and distinguished himself by his proficiency in the ancient languages. This taste and erudition he retained through life, as is abundantly evinced by his letters to Gilbert Wakefield and his controversies with Dr. Warton. In his 14th year he visited the continent, and also in 1765 and '66, where that love of gaming was acquired which proved the bane of his future life. In 1768 he took his seat in Parliament, and entered upon that brilliant political career which for a long term of years gave him so commanding a position in the eyes of the world. As it is in this capacity that Mr. Fox is principally known, a detailed account of his life will not be expected in a work devoted to authors and their productions. It is sufficient that we indicate the works where fuller information can be had. The student is therefore referred to—1. Hist. of the Political Life and public Services as a Senator and a Statesman of the Rt. Hon. C. J. Fox, Lon., 1783, 8vo. 2. Memoirs of the Life of R. B. Sheridan, 1799, 8vo. 3. Recollec. of the Life of C. J. F., by B. C. Walpole, 1806, 8vo. 4. Gent. Mag., Sept. 1806, pp. 883-886. 5. Memoirs of the Public Life of C. J. F., by R. Fell, 1808, 4to. 6. Lord Holland's (his nephew) Introduction to C. J. F.'s Hist. of the Early Part of the Reign of James II., 1808, 4to. 7. Characters of the late C. J. F., selected and in part written by Philopatris Varricensis, 1809, 8vo. This work, principally a collection of eulogies upon Fox, is by Dr. Samuel Parr. See a review of it by the Rev. Sydney Smith, Edin. Rev., xiv. 353. 8. Memoirs of the latter years of C. J. F., 1811, 8vo. Appendix, same year, by J. B. Trotter. This gentleman was Mr. Fox's private secretary. 9. Sir S. E. Brydges's ed. of Collins's Peerage, 1812. 10. Corresp. of C. J. F. with Gilbert Wakefield, 1796-1801, 1813, 8vo. See end of this article. 11. Speeches in the H. of Commons, with an Introduction, by Lord Erskine, 1815, 6 vols. 8vo. 12. Rees's Cyclopaedia, 1819. 13. Occasional Speeches, etc., 1782-1803. 14. Article Fox, Charles James, in Watt's Bibl. Brit., vol. iii., 1824. 15. Field's Memoirs of Parr, 1828, 2 vols. 8vo. 16. His Speeches, (Modern Orator, vol. ii.) 1847, r. 8vo; 3d ed., 1853. 17. Select British Eloquence, by C. A. Goodrich, D.D., N. York, 1852, 8vo. 18. Memoirs and Corresp. of Francis Horner, 1853, 2 vols. 8vo. 19. Memorials and Corresp. of C. J. F., edited by Lord John Russell, vols. i., ii., iii., pub. to Dec. 1854. 20. Hist. Sketches of the most eminent Orators and Statesmen of ancient and modern time, N. York, 1855, 8vo. 21. Article BURKE, EDMUND, in Allibone's Critical Dictionary of English Literature and Eng. and Amer. Authors, Phila., 1859, imp. 8vo.

To these many other works might be added; such as Wrexall's Memoirs, Wilberforce's Life, &c., but our list is sufficiently long for most readers. In addition to the Speeches, &c. already referred to, Mr. Fox is the author of some juvenile Latin and Greek compositions, some pieces in the New Foundling Hospital for Wit, an Essay on Wind, of which 50 copies were privately printed, political pamphlets, the 14th, 16th, and perhaps some other numbers of the "Englishman," pub. in 1779, and a History of the Early Part of the Reign of James II., pub. in 1808, 4to, by his nephew, Lord Holland. This is an unfinished production, written with great accuracy, but with such pharisaical punctiliousness of style, that the absence of the Rerum copia verborum of Cicero is painfully felt.

"He once assured me, says Lord Holland, that he would admit no word into his book for which he had not the authority of Dryden."

This remark reminds us of the elegant, the truly classical, compliment paid by Mr. Prescott to Washington Irving in the Preface to the History of Ferdinand and Isabella. The eloquent historian, who has performed his task in that masterly manner which forbids all regret at the selection of his theme, remarks that had Mr. Irving persevered in a design once entertained by him of occupying the same ground, he should have abandoned the field.

"If not from courtesy, at least from policy: for, though armed with the weapons of Achilles, this could give me no hope of success in a competition with Achilles himself."

Had Dryden's vocabulary been at the command of the historian of the Reign of James II., we should still have lacked the magical charm which captivates the reader of the Essay on Dramatic Poesy. We may truly apply to him what he declares of Shakespeare:

"Dryden's magic could not copied be, Within that circle none durst walk but he."

In the House of Commons, indeed, Fox could display the force and beauties of the English tongue in a manner which Dryden would have gladly copied; but he needed the excitement of opposition or the stimulus of immediate applause, and sank in the socket when there was no one to admire his brilliancy. Dr. Parr, whose admiration of Fox was excessive, and who would have commended the history of Tom Thumb, if recorded by the leader of the New Whigs, is glad to have a legitimate occasion for the expression of his devout veneration.

"Nothing," says he, referring to Fox's History of James II., "can exceed his anxious endeavour to discover the truth of facts for himself, nor his scrupulous care to present it fairly and fully to his readers. In this respect, all must own he discharged his trust with ability rarely equalled, and with fidelity never surpassed."

Yet the work elicited Some Observations, by the Rt. Hon. George Rose, 1809, 4to, which were answered in a Vindication.

of Fox's History, by Sergeant Samuel Heywood, 1811, 4to. There was also pub., in 8vo, a work entitled Remarks on Fox's History of James II. We should not omit to state that, of the History of James, some copies were pub. on large paper, 4to, and some of elephant folio size.

"It was also during the early progress of printing the first volume of these [Typographical] Antiquities, at Mr. Savage's, in Bedfordbury, Covent-Garden, that I used to see the sheets of Mr. Fox's Historical Work hanging up in every direction through the dwelling-house and adjacent yard. It will be naturally supposed that five thousand copies of a quarto volume, with five hundred more upon a larger paper, and yet another two hundred and fifty of an elephantine size, were not likely to be carried through the press where the premises were small, without seeming to suffocate every passage and corridor of the building. . . . [Note.] It was doubtless the boldest experiment ever made with a large paper speculation: but it succeeded. In due course, what at first came forth as a rapid and overboiling torrent, at a high price, subsided into a quiet channel, and became obtainable on very moderate terms. Yet, considering the extraordinary number of copies printed, I do not consider this book of the commonest possible occurrence. As the work of an AUTHOR whose name can never perish, it must necessarily form 'part and parcel' of every well-ordered library. Why is it not classed in 'rank and file' with the octavo HUME, ROSSIGNOL, and GIBBON?"—Dibdin's Reminiscences of a Life, vol. i., 277.

"The topmost step [of Authorship] . . . may be considered as the tender of the leading booksellers of the day to become purchasers (and of course publishers) of Mr. Fox's Historical Work, when Mr. Miller was the fortunate adventurer at the price of FIVE THOUSAND GUINEAS."—Ibid., vol. i., 185.

The octavo size, for which Dibdin, the Bibliomaniac, sighed, can now be obtained. Fox's History was pub. in an octavo vol. by Bogue of London, in 1846, bound with Armand Carrel's Revolution in England; again, 1854. See CARREL, ARMAND.

A copy of the elephant quarto size was illustrated by the late Mr. Gray of Harringay Park, at an expense of 36 guineas. It is bound in 2 vols. 4to. It fell into the hands of Mr. H. G. Bohn of London, who offered it at the trifling price of £8 8s.

This article is already longer than we can well justify, yet we feel unwilling to conclude without quoting a few lines of tribute to the eloquence of this great orator. This subject is ably treated by our learned and excellent correspondent, Dr. C. A. Goodrich, in his admirable work, already referred to, entitled Select British Eloquence. In this volume, which should be in every collection of any pretensions, will also be found six of Mr. Fox's best speeches. Undoubtedly Fox owed much of his success as an orator to the most careful and elaborate cultivation of his great natural genius. He proposed to himself, as the first object of life, oratorical distinction; and by gradual ascents he at length reached the summit. We by no means rank him with Pitt in vigour, or with Burke in fervour; but in promptness, lucidity, and fulness, Fox knew no superior.

Burke describes him exactly, in those graphic lines which excited the bitter indignation of meddling, pompous little Dr. Parr:

"I knew him when he was nineteen; since which time he has risen by slow degrees to be the most brilliant and accomplished debater the world ever saw."

This is it: he was a brilliant and accomplished debater. He had on ordinary occasions far greater power over his auditors than either of his great contemporaries and rivals. He lacked the moral elevation and the commanding sway of Pitt, but he knew better how to touch the passions. He had less philosophy than Burke, but he possessed far more tact. In the knowledge of men he was inferior to either, but in the knowledge of men he left both far in the rear. Their respective influence over their auditors illustrated our distinction. When Pitt thundered his anathemas, they hung their heads with confusion; when Burke exhorted them by their love of virtue and truth, they were half persuaded to make an alliance with virtue; but when Fox arose, full of blandishments of voice and manner, and instructed and amused them by turns, they forgot their terror and their repentance, and gave him their hearts and their votes.

The discussion of the question, how far the eloquence of Fox may properly be compared with the ancient model, to which doubtless he laboured to conform his style, has elicited opinions so contradictory, from two great critics, that we may well decline to enter the lists.

"He certainly possessed, above all moderns, that union of reason, simplicity, and vehemence, which formed the prince of orators. He was the most Demosthenean speaker since Demosthenes."—SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH.

But, says Lord Brougham, in reference to this dichæma—
"There never was a greater mistake than the fancying a close resemblance between his eloquence and that of Demosthenes."

In reviewing these rather antagonistic opinions, Dr. Goodrich points out ten characteristics of the oratory of Fox which bear a striking resemblance to the well-known peculiarities of Demosthenes, and instances other points in which the dissimilarity is quite as obvious. The clearness of intellect which distinguished the great English orator did not lack that prevailing influence which can only be lent by the warmth of the passions.

"His feeling," says Coleridge, "was all intellect, and his intellect was all feeling."

"I have seen his countenance," says Goethe, "lighten up with more than mortal ardour and goodness; I have been present when his voice was suffused with tears."

In kindness of temper and gentility of disposition in private life no man surpassed the indignant "Thunderer" of the Commons of England. He knew no animosities outside of the lines of party encroachments.

"He was," said Mr. Burke, shortly after his expiration, "a man who was made to be loved."

Dr. Franklin, a close observer of men and manners, was most favourably impressed with the appearance of sincerity and warmth which pervaded his whole character. In a letter to David Hartley, dated "Passy, 6th Sept., 1783," he remarks:

"Referring to my letter to Mr. Fox. I beg you would assure him that my expressions of esteem for him are not mere professions. I really think him a great man, and I should not think so, if I did not believe he was at bottom, and would prove himself, a good one."—Franklin's Works of Franklin, vol. x. 1, 2.

But alas! that period never arrived; a great man and an eloquent orator Fox certainly was; but to that highest title which can be proposed to man's loftiest ambition—a GOOD MAN—the great English statesman could lay no claim.

Two articles on Fox, by the Rt. Hon. John Neesham Esq., will be found in the Lon. Quar. Rev., ii. 276, and vi. 518. See, also, articles by the Rev. Sydney Smith, in Edin. Rev., xiv. 496, and xviii. 335; and a review of Fox's Correspondence with Gilbert Wakefield, by the Earl of Dudley, in Lon. Quar. Rev., ix. 313. See also a review of Fox's James II., by Lord Jeffrey, in Edin. Rev., xii. 371; and a notice by Francis Horner of the French translation of this work, in Edin. Rev., xv. 196.

We have referred to Dr. Parr's enthusiastic admiration for Mr. Fox. We quote an amusing exemplification:

"When I pronounced the words 'Mr. Fox comes,' Parr would come out 'stop' and, after shaking the cob out of his pipe, and filling it afresh, he would add, 'Now, you say, do you hear?'"

"In the course of the speech, he would often interrupt me, in a tone of triumphant exultation, with exclamations such as the following: 'Capital!' 'Answer that, if you can, Mr. Fox!' and at the conclusion, 'That is the speech of the orator and statesman.'"—New Month Mag., Aug. 1838, where will be found many interesting recollections of Dr. Parr.

"If I were to be asked what was the nature of Mr. Fox's eloquence, I should answer that it was only adding to the other words what I understood to be the character of eloquence itself, when applied to the transactions of British Government and Laws."—Shelton.

Fox, C. J. Guide to Officers of Towns, Concord, New Hamp., 1843, 12mo.

Fox, Edmund. Enthusiasm; a Poem, with Notes variorum, &c., Lon., 1754, 8vo.

Fox, Edward, d. 1536, Bishop of Hereford, and Almoner to Henry VIII., wrote De Vera Differentia Regni Potestatis et Ecclesiasticum, &c., 1534, 32, (trans. into English by Henry, Lord Stafford.) Annotations upon the Mantuan Poet, and an Oration. See Biog. Brit., Lloyd's State Worthies; Strype's Cronica; Dodd's Church Hist.

Fox, Edward. Formalis Medicamentorum Solutio, Lon., 1777, 8vo.

Fox, Francis. Serms., Lon., 1683, 4to.

Fox, Francis, d. 1756, Vicar of Pottery, Wiltshire, and Prob. of Salisbury, Vicar of St. Mary's, Reading, 1756. 1. Serms., 1765, 78, 77. 2. Oaths, 1710, 8vo. 3. Duty of Public Worship, 1713, 12mo; 6th ed., 1737. 4. Testament Explained, 1723, 2 vols. 8vo. New ed., 1742.

"In this work the references are all given, in words of full length, under the text, so that the parallel texts may be all out of one view. It contains also a few notes on some difficult passages."—Orser's Bibl. Sac.

"The editor of this useful publication has given, for the most part, all the references to the last and fullest edition of the Bible, together with a great number collected by himself; and has further added the chronology of Bishop Usher, the marginal renderings, and several good notes on really difficult passages, together with a copious index. The work is now only to be procured at a very high price."—Orser's Bibl. Sac.

Fox, George, 1624-1696, the founder of the Society of Friends or Quakers, was a native of Drayton, Leicestershire, where his father followed the occupation of a weaver. George was bound apprentice to a shoemaker and grainer, and, whilst engaged in tending his sheep, enjoyed these opportunities for undisturbed meditation which resulted in the formation of that character of solid piety and religious zeal which eminently distinguished his future life. In 1645 he abandoned his occupation, and, four years later he became an itinerant preacher, rebuking sharply whatever he deemed worthy of reprehension, and often "holding forth," without invitation, to congregations assembled for regular service. These "breaches of the peace" led to frequent imprisonments, involving great hardships and privations, which were patiently submitted to by one who was always ready to lay down his life in defence of what he believed to be the truth. About 1660 he was married to Margaret Fell, the widow of Thomas Fell, a Welsh Judge. It will not be expected that we should follow him in his arduous and unremitting efforts for the benefit of his fellow-beings. The reader will find ample sources of information in the works indicated below. In the course of his public ministrations he twice visited the continent, spent two years in assiduous labours among the American colonies, and repeatedly visited different portions of Great Britain. He died in London in 1696, continuing his public addresses until within a few days of his death. A list of his separate publications will be found in Bibl. Brit. His writings were published in three vols. fol., viz. 1. Journal of his Life, Travels, &c., 1694, fol., 1706, 2 vols. 8vo., 1766, fol. 2. Collection of many Select and Christian Epistles, Letters, and Testimonies written by George Fox, 1688. 3. Gospel Truth Demonstrated in a collection of doctrinal books given forth by George Fox, containing principles essential to Christianity and Salvation held among the people called Quakers, 1706. A new ed. of his works has been pub. in Phila., 8 vols. 8vo. See Sewall's Hist. of the Quakers, Neal's Puritans, Rees's Cyclopaedia, Jonah Marsh's Life of Fox, 1644, 12mo; Samuel M. Jaeney's Life of Fox, with Dissertations on his Views concerning the Doctrines, Testaments, and Discipline of the Christian Church, Phila., 1833, 8vo.

Fox's Journal is a volume of great interest, and has been highly commended even by those who felt little sympathy for the author's religious peculiarities.

"It is one of the most extraordinary and instructive narratives in the world, which no reader of competent judgment can peruse without revering the virtues of the writer."—Rev. James Mackintosh.

"I have read through the ponderous folio of George Fox. Pray how may I return it to Mr. Shewell, at Ipswich? I dare to send such a treasure by a stage-coach, not that I am afraid of the confusion or the guard running it, but it might be lost. Can you put me in a way of sending it safely? The clerk hearted owner trusted it to me for six months, I think I was about as many days in getting through it, and I do not think that I shipped a word of it."—Charles Lamb to Bernard Barton, Feb. 1728.

The reader will find a brief notice of Fox's labours in Scotland in this Dictionary, article BAUCALY, READER. We have quoted, in the article referred to, William Penn's opinion of Robert Barclay, and it is but fitting that we should record the testimony of the same eminent authority to the excellence of the character of George Fox. He mentions in terms of warm commendation his meekness, humility, and moderation; tells us that he was

"Civil beyond all terms of breeding, in his behaviour very temperate, eating little, and sleeping less, though a bulky person.... He had an extraordinary gift in opening the scriptures, but, above all, excelled in prayer. His reverence and solemnity of his address and behaviour, and the fervour and fulness of his words, often struck strangers with admiration."

Fox, Henry. 1. New Diet. in French and Eng., Lon., 1769, 12mo. 2. View of Univ. Med. Hist., 476-1648, trans. from the French of Chev. Mehegan, 1779, 3 vols. 8vo.

"In elegant and animated style, and philosophical and impartial spirit."

Fox, Henry Richard, third Lord Holland, nephew of Charles James Fox. 1. Some Account of the Life and Writings of Lope Felix de Vega Carpio, Lon., 1806, 8vo; 2d ed., with a Life of Guillen de Castro, 1817, 2 vols. 8vo.

"This is evidently the work of a person of taste and intelligence, not much accustomed to write with a view to publication. It is composed in an easy conversational style, with very little of the getting up of authorship, or the parade of literary accomplishments. It is written, however, in a very pleasing and lively manner, and indites several good scenes and liberality of sentiment."

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

ed

must consult the invaluable volumes of Mr. Ticknor himself. See TICKNOR, GEORGE.

2. Three Comedies from the Spanish, 1807, 8vo. And see article FOX, Rt. HON. CHARLES JAMES, No. 6, and HOLLAND, HENRY RICHARD VARRALL, third LORD.

FOX, J. 1. Tancred; a Tale of Ancient Times, Lon., 1791, 2 vols. 12mo. 2. Sancta Maria; a Romance, 1787.

FOX, or FOKE, JOHN, 1517-1587, the Martyrologist, a native of Boston, Lincolnshire, was educated at Brasenose Coll., Oxf., where he attained great distinction by his extraordinary acquisitions. His love of study he retained after he had left college; for we are assured by his son that before he was thirty years of age he had read over all the Greek and Latin fathers, the schoolmen, and the proceedings of councils and consistories. He received the degree of B.A. in 1538, and in 1543 was elected Fellow of Magdalen College. In 1545 he was accused of heresy, and, boldly proclaiming his opinions to be in favour of the Protestant Reformation, he was expelled from his college. After supporting himself for some time as a tutor in the family of Sir Thomas Lucy, of Warwickshire, and subsequently in the household of the Duke of Norfolk, he found himself in danger from the vigilance of Gardiner, and escaped with difficulty to the continent. He here meditated his great work—the Acts and Monuments of the Church, or Book of Martyrs. The first draft of it was an octavo volume, pub. at Straßbourg, 1554, in Latin, entitled, Commentarii rerum in Ecclesiis Gestarum, maximarumque per totam Europam persecutionem à Wiclavi temporibus ad hanc usque statum descriptorum; in one book. Reprinted, with 5 other books, at Basil, 1559, fol. On the accession of Elizabeth he returned home, was pensioned by his former pupil, now fourth Duke of Norfolk, and through Secretary Cecil received a prebend in the Church of Salisbury. No office in the church would have been thought too good for him, had he been willing to forget scruples to which he adhered with self-denying pertinacity. He refused to subscribe to some of the canons, and boldly petitioned the Queen on behalf of the German Anabaptists. He spent the rest of his days in great esteem for his profound learning, sincere piety, and unfeigned humility, and died, amidst the blessings of the nation, in 1587, in his 70th year. He pub. a number of theolog. treatises, tables of Grammar, the Latin play of De Christo triumphante, &c., an account of which will be found in the authorities cited below; but he is best known by the great work already mentioned—the Acts and Monuments of these latter and perilous days, touching matters of the Church; wherein are comprehended and described, the great persecutions and horrible troubles that have been wrought and practised by the Romish Prelates, specially in this Realm of England and Scotland, from the year of our Lord 1000, unto the tyme now present. Gathered and collected accordyng to the true copies and wrytynges certifiicatorie, as well of the parties themselves that suffered, as also out of the Bishops' Registers, which were the doers thereof, Lon., 1563, fol.; 1583, fol. Enlarged, 1570, 2 vols. fol.; 1576, 2 vols. fol.; 1612, '32, '43, 3 vols. fol.; 1650, 2 vols. fol.; 9th ed., 1684, 3 vols. fol.

Respecting the new editions of this valuable work, we can give nothing more to the purpose than the following extract from a letter before us, written by an eminent bibliographer, who, having instructed our grandfathers in his youth, continues in his advanced age to enlighten their descendants with the results of his pains-taking researches. It would indeed be difficult to estimate the value of this gentleman's thirty-five years' service in the British Museum.

"A new edition, superintended by the Rev. S. A. Oottley, M.A., was published at London, 1836-41, in 8 vols. 8vo; to which was prefixed a Life of Foxe, including a vindication of his work from the attacks of Romanists, by the Rev. George Townsend, D.D., of Durham. This edition having been severely criticised, (and not without reason,) a carefully-revised and considerably-improved edition was published between the years 1846 and 1846. But the best edition of Foxe's Acts and Monuments will be found in the Reformation Series of the Ecclesiastical Historians of England, published at London, also in 8 vols. 8vo, in 1853 and following years. The editors (the Rev. R. R. Mendham, M.A., and Josiah Pratt, Jun., M.A.) have most carefully corrected the whole work, and have verified the documents consulted by Foxe. This edition is beautifully and accurately printed, and is enriched with a valuable Appendix of Documents. Dr. Townsend's Life and Vindication of Foxe are retained, with some corrections."—Thomas Hartwell Horne, D.D., to S. Austin Allibone, British Museum, London, April 26, 1866.

All the other so-called Foxe's Book of Martyrs, edited respectively by Milner, Buckley, Pratt, Clarke, Cobbin, Cumming, Kennedy, Seymour, Mrs. Tonna, or any one else, are merely abridgments,—of more or less value. The first abridgment, by Rev. Timothy Bright, M.D., (q.v.), pub. in 1581, and again in 1589, 4to, is now a rare book, but is little valued. We have already referred under the appropriate head to the Rev. Dr. Thomas Bray's Martyrology, or Papal Usurpation and Persecution, 1712, fol., intended as a supplement to the Acts and Monuments.

The Acts and Monuments received the approbation of the first three Archbishops of the Reformed Church of England, viz.: Parker, Grindal, (who assisted Fox in the work,) and Whitgift. It was ordered to be set up in every one of the parish churches in England, as well as in the common halls of archbishops, bishops, deans, archdeacons, and heads of colleges; and its influence in keeping alive the Protestant feeling in Great Britain and North America is too well known to be disputed.

Without entering at large into the merits of the work, it certainly would appear that, as regards conscientiousness of performance and adherence to records, the faithfulness of the Book of Martyrs cannot intelligently be questioned. For the same reason—abundant testimony—that we believe Sir Thomas More, the Roman Catholic Chancellor, to have been one of the best of men, do we believe John Fox, the Protestant chronicler, to have been one of the most veracious of historians. As regards the credit accruing to their respective communions from the adherence of these two great men, it is to be remembered that More simply retained the bias of education and habit, whilst Fox had to overcome both of these before he could be a Protestant. Both were honest as the sun; and had Sir Thomas More presented as with Roman Catholic Acts and Monuments as well attested as those of John Fox, we should have considered them entitled to equal credence. It has been confidently declared that "All the popish writers from Harpsfield to Milner have not proved, and it never will be proved, that John Fox is not one of the most faithful and authentic of all historians."

The testimony of the two eminent authorities subjoined must have great weight with those who can appreciate the value of evidence:

"Mr. Fox must not go without the commendation of a most painful searcher into records, archives, and repositories of original acts and letters of state, and a great collector of MSS. All the world is infinitely beholden to him for abundance of extracts thence communicated to us in his volumes. And as he hath been found most diligent, so most strictly true and faithful in his transcriptions."—SKRYPE: Annals of the Reformation.

"Mr. Fox hath very diligently and faithfully laboured in this matter, [of Archbishops and Metropolitans,] and searched out the truth of it as loyally as I know any man to have done."—ARCHBISHOP WILKINS, after he "had read over his Acts and Monuments from the one end to the other." See Defence of the Answer to the Admonition, p. 333.

The great Camden thus refers to the Martyrologist and his work:

"Ex eruditiorum numero obit Johannes Foxus Oxoniensis, qui Ecclesiasticam Anglie Historiam sive Martyrologium indefesso veritatis studio, primum latine postea anglie auctus, magna cum laude contexit."—Annales Elizabeth, p. 558, edit. 8vo.

Bishop Burnet, a most pains-taking searcher into original papers, thus sets his seal to Fox's conscientiousness as a historian:

"Having compared these Acts and Monuments with the records, I have never been able to discover any errors or prevarications in them, but the utmost fidelity and exactness."—Pref. to Hist. of the Reformation.

But faithfulness in a historian is one thing; infallibility is quite another thing; and we doubt not at all that, as Wood and Collier among Protestants, and many Roman Catholic commentators, affirm, Fox has, without any intention to deceive, admitted exaggerations, and even sometimes fictions, which diminish the value, whilst they add to the bulk, of a book of great learning, research, and historical as well as theological value.

But for critics, who lived long after the historian and the historian's opportunities, to pretend to know the contents of records which they never saw, is a little more than absurd: it is foolish and impertinent, and places the offender beyond the lines of polite and intelligent controversy. Undoubtedly John Fox was not an infallible chronicler nor a perfect man; and if any modern Quixote seek for a religionist without zeal, an advocate without partialities, a partisan without prejudice, and a man without passions, he must needs go altogether out of the world for his Phoenix.

It is much to be said of any man, in the absence of all perfection, which is recorded by Fuller of our historian:

"Although the richest mitre in England would have counted itself preferred by being placed upon his head, he contented himself with a prebend of Salisbury. How learnedly he wrote, how constantly he preached, how plausibly he lived, and how cheerfully he died, may be seen at large in the life prefixed to his book."—Church History.

To this life, written by his son, and to the authorities subjoined below, we refer the curious reader who wishes to see a specimen of that which has been written for and against the famous Martyrologist:

"Several of Fox's other works—his Treatise on Justification, and the Sermons on Christ Crucified, and on Christ Triumphant—are excellent."—Bickerstaff's C. S.

Nor should we omit to acknowledge the pious zeal of Fox in collecting the Works, appending thereto the Lives, of William Tyndale, John Frith, and Robert Barnes, 1573, fol. He tells us that he collected them that they might "Remain as perpetual samples—shining in the church of Christ—to give light to all posterity."—See BARRETT, ROBERT.

See Strype's Annals and Lives of the Archbishops, present; Bale; Fuller's Worthies, and his Church Hist.; Athen. Oxon.; Fox's MSS., Collec. in Harleian MSS. in Brit. Mus.; Biog. Brit.; Fuller's Abel Redivivus; Churton's Life of Nowell; Wordsworth's Ecol. Biog., Preface, &c.; Collier's Ecol. Hist.; Dodd's Ch. Hist.; Chalmers's Biog. Dict.

Fox, John. 1. Agricult. of Monmouth, Brentf., 1794, 4to. 2. Agricult. of Glamorgan, Lon., 1796, 4to.

Fox, Joseph. Serm., 1702, 4to.

Fox, Joseph. Parish Clerk's Vade Mecum, 1778, 12mo.

Fox, Joseph, of Roy. Coll. of Surgeons, pub. a number of profess. and educational and theolog. works. The following is still in estimation: Nat. Hist. and Diseases of the Human Teeth, Lon., 1803-06, 4to. Of this work there have been three English eds. Also pub. in N. York and Phila. Remodelled, with an Introduction, and nearly two-thirds of addit. matter, by Chapin A. Harris, M.D. Prof. in Baltimore Coll. of Dent. Surgeons. With 30 plates, Phila., sup. roy. 8vo.

"A work which we think every dental student, and especially practitioner, should possess. The plates alone are worth the price of the book, [3s.]"—Amer. Jour. of Dental Science.

Fox, Joseph Bolton. Lectures on Modern Socialism, 1824, 12mo.

"The productions of a mind imbued with piety, and distinguished by just views of Evangelical truth."—Lon. Evangelical Mag.

Fox, or Foxe, Luke. Northwest Fox, or Fox from the Northwest Passage. By Captain Luke Foxe, of Kingston-upon-Hull, Lon., 1635, 4to.

"This treatise contains many important facts and judicious observations on the ice, the tides, compass, northern lights, &c."—Londoner's Bibl. Man.

Fox, M. C., and B. C. Smith. Reports of Cases in Ct. of K. B. and Ct. of Error, 1822-24, Dublin, 1825, 8vo.

Fox, Margaret, wife of George Fox, the founder of the Quakers. Passages rel. to her Birth, Life, &c., with sundry of her Epistles, &c., Lon., 1710, 8vo. See Janney's Life of George Fox, Phila., 8vo.

Fox, Richard, d. 1528, a native of Grantham, Lincolnshire, educated at Magdalen Coll., Oxf., was made Bishop of Durham by Henry VII. He was subsequently translated to Winchester. He founded Corpus Christi Coll., Oxf., with two Lectures for Greek and Latin, and several free schools. 1. The Contemplation of Synners, Lon., 1499, 4to. 2. Letter to Cardinal Wolsey. See Chalmers's Hist. of Oxf.; Life in Biog. Brit.; Life by Gough in the Vestuta Monumenta; Wood's Colleges and Halls; Athen. Oxon.; Jortin's Erasmus; Chalmers's Biog. Dict.

Fox, Samuel. Monks and Monasteries, being an account of English Monachism, Lon., 1845, sm. 8vo. Other works.

Fox, W. J., M.P., b. 1786, near Wrentham, Suffolk, formerly a Unitarian preacher, is well known as a prominent member of the extreme liberal party. In 1847 and 1852 he was elected M.P. for Oldham. As a periodical-writer he has been connected with the Westminster Review, for which he wrote the first article of the first number, and other papers; the Monthly Repository, and the Weekly Dispatch newspaper. 1. Letter to Rev. J. P. Smith, D.D., 1813, 8vo. 2. Funl. Serm. on T. P. Powell, M.D., 1816. 3. The Life and Literary Remains of Charles Reece Pemberton. Edited by John Fowler, 1843, 8vo. 4. Lectures to the Working Classes. Vols. i.-iii., 1845-49; vol. iv., 1851, 12mo. 5. On the Religious Ideas, 1849, 8vo. New ed., 1851, 12mo.

Fox, Wm. 1. Exam. of Paine's Writings, Lon., 1793, 8vo. 2. Remarks on Agricult. Reports made in 1794, Lon., 1798, 4to.

"The author has selected well and observed very acutely."—Donaldson's Agricult. Biog.

Mr. Fox also pub. several polit. and theolog. works, 1793-1813.

Fox, Wm. A Treatise on Simple Contracts, and the Action of Assumpsit, Lon., 1842, 12mo.

"An admirable outline of the Law of Contracts, containing much information in a condensed form."—6 Jurist, 167; 34 Leg. Obs., 102; Martin's Leg. Bib., 322.

Fox, Wm., Jr. La Bagatelle; or, Delineations of Home Scenery: a Descriptive Poem, 1801, 8vo.

Foxcraft, Alex. Lett. to W. Davidson, 1803, 8vo.

Foxcroft, John. The Good of good Gov't and a well-founded Peace, opened in a Serm., Lon., 1648, 4to.

Foxcroft, John. Serm., 1695, '97, 8vo, 12mo, and 4to.

Foxcroft, Thomas, d. 1769, aged 72, a Congregational minister in Boston, Mass., graduated at Harvard Coll. in 1714. He pub. a number of serms., &c., 1718-60, for a list of which see Allen's Amer. Biog. Dict.; Chandler's Life of Johnson.

"His writings evince a clearness of perception, copiousness of invention, liveliness of imagination, and soundness of judgment."

Foxell, John. 1. Serm. on Lord Nelson, 1806.

Foxle, George. Groans of the Spirit in the Trial of the Truth of Prayer, Lon., 1639, 8vo.

Foxley, Thomas. Serm., 1756, 8vo.

Foxon, Wm. A Brief Discovery rel. to the Infinite Being and Reigning of God in Mankind.

Foxton, Rev. Frederick J., perpetual Curate of Stoke, Prior, and Docklow, Herefordshire. Popular Christianity, Lon., 1849, p. 8vo.

"His book appears to us to contain many just and profound views of the religious character of the present age, and its indications of progress."—Lon. Prospective Rev., Nov. 1849.

Foxton, Thomas. Moral Songs for Children, 1728.

Foxwell, W. Primitive State of Adam, 1807.

Foye, Rev. M. W. Early Irish Church, 2d ed., Lon., 1845, 12mo. New ed., 1851. 2. Romish Rites, offices and legends. This forms Gibson's Preservative, Suppl. 7; 2d ed., 1851, p. 8vo.

Foyster, J. G. Serm., Lon., 1826, 8vo.

Frampton, Algernon, M.D. Robert Thome's Modern Practice of Physic, 11th ed., Lon., 1853, 2 vols. 8vo.

Frampton, John. 1. Joyful News out of the new founde Worlde, Lon., 1577, '80, '96, 4to. From the Spanish of Monardi, 3d ed., printed with No. 4. 2. Ports, Creeks, Bayes, and Havens of the W. Indies, from the Castill tongue, 1578, 4to. 3. Trans. of the Travels of Marco Polo, 1579, 4to. 4. The Bexoar Stone, &c., 1580, 4to. Printed with No. 1. 5. Arte de Navigation, from the Spanish of P. de Medina, 1581, fol.; 1595, 4to.

Frampton, Matthew, LL.D. Serm., 1769, '76, 4to.

Frampton, Th. Serm., 1712, 8vo.

Framton, G. Election for Dorset, 1807, 8vo.

Franchore, Gabriel, b. 1786, at Montreal. Travels in Oregon; 1st ed. in French, 1819-20. English trans., N. York, 1854.

Francillon, F. Essay on Punctuation, Lon., 1842, fp. 8vo.

"A treatise which we can safely recommend. . . . The work also bears evident marks of considerable learning."—Oxf. Univ. Herald.

See DAY, WM.; WILSON, JOHN.

Francillon, John. Of a Scabarbæus, 1795, 4to.

Francis. 10 Serm., 1771, 12mo.

Francis, Anne, d. 1800, an English lady. 1. A Poetical Trans. of the Song of Solomon, from the original Hebrew, Lon., 1781, 4to.

"The versification is smooth and lively. The plan of the poem is constructed on the principles of Harmer's Outline, to whom, and to Parkhurst, she is indebted for many of her notes and illustrations."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

"Her version is elegantly executed."—Horne's Bibl. Brit.

2. Obsequies of Demetrius Poliorcetes; a Poem, 1785, 4to. 3. Charlotte to Werter, 1788, 4to. 4. Miscell. Poems, 1790, 12mo.

Francis, B. 1. Elegy, Lon., 1771, 4to. 2. Poem, 1786, 8vo.

Francis, C., of Wath. Serm., 1788, 8vo.

Francis, Charles. Union with Ch. of Eng., 1807, 4to.

Francis, Convers. 1. Life of John Elliot in Sparks's Amer. Biog., 1st Series, v. 1. 2. Life of Sebastian Rale, in 2d Series, vii. 157.

Francis, Eliza S. Sir Willibert de Waverley, or the Bridal Eve; a Poem, Lon., 1815, 8vo.

Francis, F. Introduct. to Geography, Lon., 1812.

Francis, F. J. Two Lectures on Physical and Fossil Geology, Lon., 1839, p. 8vo.

"The Lectures are carefully corrected, clearly written, and will prove a valuable addition to the existing elementary works on one of the most interesting and important of the physical sciences."—Lon. New Monthly Mag.

2. Orig. Designs for Churches and Chapels, 1841, imp. 4to.

Francis, George Hy. 1. The Duke of Wellington's Maxims and Opinions, Lon., 1845, 8vo.

"It is the most compendious, the most agreeable, and all things considered, the best, book that has been published respecting the Duke of Wellington."—Lon. Times.

2. Orators of the Age, 1847, p. 8vo.

"No man living has had such admirable opportunities of observing our Parliamentary orators, or has evinced so much fitness for the very delicate task of treating each man after his deserts. We commend the volume to general attention for its truthfulness, its exceeding good taste, and its very pleasant style."—Lon. Pictorial Times.

3. Critical Biographies: B. Disraeli; the late Sir Robert Peel, 1852, 12mo; Lord Brougham, 1853, 12mo. Opinions and Policy of the Rt. Hon. Viscount Palmerston, with Memoir, 1852, 8vo.

"This work ought to have a place in every political library. It gives a complete view of the sentiments and opinions by which the policy of Lord Palmerston has been dictated as a diplomatist and statesman."

Francis, Henry. Sermon, Lon., 1723, 8vo.

Francis, J. G. Notes from a Journal kept in Italy and Sicily, 1844-46, with 8 Illustr., Lon., 1847, 8vo.

"He [Mr. Francis] is an active and enterprising traveller. He has a good taste in art, a keen relish for the beauties of nature, a knowledge of history, acquired by reflecting as well as reading, an observing eye for mankind, and, what is more, a sympathy with them."—Lon. Spectator.

Francis, J. T., M.D. Change of Climate considered as a Remedy in Dyspeptic, Pulmonary, and other Chronic Affections, Lon., 1855, p. 8vo.

"Proceeds from the pen of a well-informed practitioner and an accomplished gentleman, well acquainted with the subject upon which he treats."—Lon. Lancet.

"A very meritorious production."—Lon. Med. Times and Gaz.

Francis, John, LL.D., minister of St. John's, Norwich. Sermon, 1746, 4to.

Francis, John, Vicar of Lekeham. 1. Sermons, 1764, '66, '67, '70. 2. Reflections on David, 1765, 8vo.

Francis, John, LL.D., Rector of Morley, Suffolk. Sermons, 1773, 2 vols. 12mo.

Francis, John. 1. Hist. of the Bk. of England, Lon., 1847, 2 vols. p. 8vo; 3d ed., 1848. 2. Chronicles and Characters of the London Stock Exchange, 1849, 8vo.

"All the great operations that have taken place relating to the funds, lotteries, loans, bribes, speculative manias, and panics, are faithfully delineated; and Mr. Francis has brought together such a variety of interesting anecdotes and historical facts as were never before collected."—Lon. Banker's Mag.

"A volume at once the most interesting and the most terrible in modern English literature."—Tail's Edin. Mag.

"No romance whatever has yet been constructed from materials of deeper interest."—Blackwood's Mag.

3. Hist. of the English Railway, 1820-45, 1851, 2 vols. 8vo. 4. Annals, Anecdotes, and Legends of Life Assurance, 1853, p. 8vo.

Francis, John W., M.D., LL.D., one of the most distinguished of American physicians and men of letters, b. 1789, in the city of New York, is the son of Melchior Francis, a native of Germany, who settled in America about 1784. The subject of this memoir enjoyed as a youth the learned preceptorship of George Strebeck and John Conroy, distinguished for their attainments in the classical and mathematical departments. In 1809 he graduated at Columbia College, from which in 1812 he received the degree of Master of Arts. In 1807, whilst still an under-graduate, he commenced the study of medicine under the eye of the celebrated Dr. Hosack, and gained the warm approbation of his discriminating tutor by his assiduous devotion to the object of his pursuit.

"During the period of his professional studies for four collegiate years, he never absent himself from a single lecture, nor attended one without making notes or abstracts on the subject taught by the lecturer."

What an example is this to the students of the present day, and how great has been the reward, in large stores of professional erudition, in public esteem, and national reputation, of the hours thus devoted to the acquisition of useful knowledge!

In 1811 the laborious student received from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of N. York, organized in 1807, the degree of M.D.; and, a few months later, received from his old preceptor, Dr. Hosack, the offer of a co-partnership in business. This flattering offer was indeed the highest compliment that could be paid to the talents and acquirements of the young physician, and was of course accepted. The connection thus formed lasted until 1820. In 1813 Dr. Francis was appointed lecturer on the Institutes of Medicine and Materia Medica in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and laboured with great zeal in the discharge of his arduous duties. Anxious to transplant to his native soil whatever was valuable in the renowned medical schools of Europe, he left home for a tour in Scotland, Ireland, Holland, and France, and derived profitable themes of meditation and practice from the friendly converse of the celebrated Gregory, Jamieson, McCartney, Denon, Gall, Cuvier, and other benefactors of the science and erudition of their race. The ardent thirst for knowledge, the acuteness of perception, and breadth of comprehension, which distinguished the young American, did not escape the notice nor fail to elicit the approbation of his distinguished European friends.

"A mind more ardent in the pursuit of useful knowledge," writes the late Patrick Colquhoun, "perhaps never existed; and I have no doubt he will, in a few years, stand at the head of his profession." See Life of Eddy, by S. L. Knapp.

Upon the return of the young traveller to New York, he was appointed Professor of the Institutes of Medicine in the College of Physicians and Surgeons; and, on the death of Dr. Stringham in 1817, succeeded that gentleman in the department of Medical Jurisprudence. Two years later he became Professor of Obstetrics, in addition to his former duties, and held this appointment until 1826, when he resigned at the same time with his colleagues, Drs. Hosack, Mott, McNevin, and Mitchell.

A majority of the professors who had resigned from the College of Physicians and Surgeons organized a new institution under the name of Rutgers Medical College, and its success was so great that at the end of four terms the Legislature closed the doors of the last-named institution. In the Rutgers Medical College Dr. Francis was chosen Professor of Obstetrics and Forensic Medicine, and his classes were crowded with students from different parts of the republic, attracted by his great and growing reputation. For other particulars connected with the life of this eminent physician, useful citizen, and public benefactor in many senses, we must refer the reader to the source to which we are indebted for the facts above stated,—the biography of Dr. Francis in the National Portrait-Gallery of Distinguished Americans, vol. iv., Phila., 1853, 8vo. See also New England Magazine, vol. vii.; Griswold's Prose Writers of America; Men of the Time, N. York, 1852; a review of Dr. Francis's literary works in the Southern Quarterly Review, xix. 226; and Knickerbocker Magazine, Aug. 1858, for a sketch of Dr. Francis, with a steel portrait.

We annex a list of Dr. Francis's writings:

1. An Inaugural Dissertation on Memory, N.Y., 1811, 8vo, pp. 56.
2. Cases of Morbid Anatomy, 1814, 4to, pp. 36.
3. Letter on Febrile Contagion, 1816, 8vo, pp. 24.
4. Notice of Thos. Eddy, the Philanthropist, 1823, 12mo, pp. 10.
5. Dr. T. Denman's Prac. of Midwifery, with Notes, &c., 1825, 8vo.
6. Address before the N.Y. Horticult. Society, 1830, 8vo, pp. 34.
7. Address before the Philoxia Society, 1831, 8vo, pp. 43.
8. Letter on Cholera Asphyxia of 1832, 8vo, 1832, pp. 35.
9. Observations on the Mineral Waters of Avon, 1834, 8vo, pp. 36.
10. Discourse before the N.Y. Lyceum of Natural History, 1841, 8vo, pp. 93.
11. Discourse before the N.Y. Academy of Medicine, 1847, 8vo, pp. 112.
12. Inaugural Address before the N.Y. Academy of Medicine, 1848, 8vo, pp. 23.
13. Address before the N.Y. Acad. of Med. on the Election of Prof. Mott, 1849, 8vo, pp. 8.
14. Address before the Typographical Society of N.Y. on Dr. Franklin, 1856, 8vo.
15. Before do. on the Publishers, Printers, and Editors of N.Y. In International Mag., edited by Dr. Griswold, 1851.
16. Old New York; or, Reminiscences of the Past Sixty Years, N.Y., 1857, 8vo; 2d ed., enlarged, 1858, 12mo.

"Dr. Francis writes as he might have told the story in successive sittings, bound by no prearranged order, but letting each name or topic suggest that which succeeds. The style is colloquial,—by which we do not mean stippled, but unartificial,—the style in which one may talk who adds to the fluent speech that is the gift and grace of nature the culture of a scholar and a gentleman."—A. P. FRASER, D.D.: N. Amer. Rev., July, 1858.

Also reviewed in Lon. Athen., July 10, 1858, No. 1602.

17. Numerous biographical articles in divers works, medical papers in different journals, &c. 18. The American Medical and Philosophical Register, 1811, '12, '13, '14, 8vo; edited by David Hosack, M.D., and Prof. John W. Francis, M.D. 19. The N.Y. Medical and Physical Journal, 1822, '23, '24, 8vo; edited by John W. Francis, M.D., John B. Beck, M.D., Jacob Dyckman, M.D.

"For forty years he has been engaged in the most active exercise of professional duties in his native city. But amid the incessant avocations of a large practice, Dr. Francis has found time to manifest his interest in, and genius for, the liberal studies. In a series of able discourses delivered before various literary and scientific bodies, he has illustrated the value and charms of horticulture, the fine arts, American biography, history, and science. He is identified with the city of New York more prominently than any individual in the same professional sphere. He is always consulted in questions of local and personal interest, and his cooperation is deemed essential on occasions of municipal festivity, literary and scientific anniversaries, and charitable enterprises."—Men of the Time, N. York, 1852, 12mo.

"In his social character Dr. Francis represents an almost obsolete class. He is emphatically a New Yorker in his feelings and associations. The frank hospitality of the early colonists is combined around his fireside with the discursive intercourse of the present and the patriotic sentiment of the citizen. In American history and biography he is an oracle, and has been an efficient member of all the institutions originated to advance the interests of literature and science in his native city. With enlarged benevolence, a mind unwearied in inquiry, constant association with men and books, and an ardent love of knowledge as well as friendship for its promoters, Dr. Francis finds time, even amidst the unceasing claims of an extensive practice, thus to identify his name with the progress of the age and the literature of his country."—National Portrait Gallery of Distinguished Americans, vol. iv., 1853, 8vo.

Francis, Philip. The Misdemeanours of a Traytor and Treasurer discovered; an answer to C. Vaughan, 1644, 4to.

Francis, Philip, d. 1773, son of the Rector of St. Mary's, Dublin, resided for many years and died in England. 1. A Poet. trans. of the books of Horace, first pub. probably about 1743; 8th ed., 1778, 4 vols. 8vo.

"The lyrical part of Horace never can be properly translated; so much of the excellence is in the numbers and the expression. Francis has done it the best: I'll take his five out of six, against them all."—Dr. Samuel Johnson.

2. Eugenius, a Trag., Lon., 1752, 8vo. 3. Constantine; a Trag., 1753, 8vo.

"As a dramatic writer Dr. Francis was not very successful; having written only two pieces, which were both coldly received."—Biog. Dramat.

4. Trans. of the Orations of Demosthenes, 1753–55, 2 vols. 4to.

"Appraised as a difficult work well executed and acceptable to every friend of genius and literature; but its success was by no means correspondent to the wishes of the author or his friends."

Dr. Francis was at one time supposed to be the author of the Letters of Junius: see JUNIUS.

See Chesterfield's Letters and Miscellanies; Boswell's Johnson; Chalmers's Biog. Dict.

Francis, Sir Philip, 1740–1818, son of the preceding, was a native of Dublin, and educated under the eye of his father, and at St. Paul's School, London. After visiting Portugal in 1760, in company with Lord Kinnoul, the British Envoy, and holding a clerkship in the War Office, which he resigned in 1772, he went in 1774 to India, where he became a member of the council of Bengal. Brought into contact with that disgrace to the British name—that man of violence and blood—Warren Hastings, Francis opposed his measures, and a controversy ensued which resulted in a duel, in which the latter was wounded. He returned to England in 1781, was chosen M. P. for Yarmouth, Isle of Wight, in 1784, received the order of the Bath in 1806, and died in 1818. He pub. a number of political Speeches, Remarks on the defence of Warren Hastings, Letters on the E. India Company, Reflections on the Currency, &c., 1784–1814. These were but of temporary interest, and are now forgotten; but the name of Sir Philip Francis will always occupy a prominent place among literary men, in consequence of the persuasion entertained by many that he was the author of the famous LETTERS OF JUNIUS. But this is by no means a settled point, and we think that the claims put forward on behalf of Sir Philip Francis are now less readily allowed than they were some twelve or fifteen years past. We do not, however, by this remark intend to express any opinion of our own upon the subject. We shall best discharge our duty by indicating to the reader the sources of information upon this famous controversy. See JUNIUS.

Francis, Richard. Maxims of Equity, 1729, '39, '46. Amer. ed., by W. W. Hening, Richmond, 1823, 8vo.

Francis, Sophia L. Novels, &c., 1803–09.

Francis, W. Farmer's Assist. in computing the value of Land, 1808, 12mo; Franciscus a Sancta Clara. See DAVENPORT, CHRISTOPHER.

Frank, Richard. 1. Rabbi Mons; or a Philoe. Treat on the Origin of Things. Written in America, Lon., 1687, 8vo. 2. Northern Memoirs, &c., with the Contemplative and Practical Angler. Writ in 1658, 1694, 8vo. New ed., with Preface and Notes by Sir Walter Scott, 1821, 8vo.

Sir Walter Scott humorously signs the preface as one who is "No fisher,

But a well-wisher
To the game."

"Frank's contests with the salmon are painted to the life, and his directions to anglers in that noble branch of the art, which exceeds all other uses of the angling-rod as much as fox-hunting exceeds hare-hunting, are generally given with great judgment."—Editor.

See Retrospect. Rev., and Censura Literaria, 1823, 8vo, 270–294, 1815; iv. 270–272.

Franklin, Two Discourses, Lon., 1683, 4to.

Franklin, Gracious. Answer to Freeman, 1648, 4to.

Franklin, R. Tractatus de Tonis in Lingua Græca,

Lon., 1630, '50, '73, 8vo; 1633, 12mo. Repub., with addita. by Richardson, 1717, 12mo.

Franklin, Thomas, D.D. An Epistle written from Lucifer unto the persecuting Popish Prelates, 1642, 4to.

Franklin, Thomas, 1721–1784, Greek Prof. at Cambridge, 1730, preferred to the livings of Ware and of Thundrich, 1757, and to that of Brasted in 1776. He pub., separately, trans. from Phalaris, Cicero, Sophocles, and Lucian, 1749–81. Of this last author, an eminent authority remarks:

"There is a vein of ease and pleasantry in the works of Lucian which I have always thought imitable, nor do I know any author, ancient or modern, that in this respect can enter into competition with him."—LORD LITTLETON.

He also wrote some plays, sermons, &c.; and 4 vols. of his sermons. were pub. after his death, viz., in 1790.

"In his sermons, although they have not much pretension to original genius, there is an order and perspicuity in the arrangement of the matter, with an elegance and propriety in the language, characteristically free from all affectation, which does great honour to the Doctor's abilities."—Lon. Critical Rev. See Biog. Dramat.

Franklin, Capt. Wm. 1. Observ. made on a Tour from Bengal to Persia in 1786–87, Lon., 1790, 8vo.

"The most original and valuable portion of this work relates to Persia, especially the province of Faristan; it contains also much information respecting Goa, Bombay, &c. M. Langles translated it into French, and added a learned memoir on Persepolis."—Scovron's Cat. of Voyages and Travels.

2. The Lives of Comarupa and Camalata; from the Persian, 1793, 8vo. 3. Hist. of the Reign of Shah-Aulum, 1798, 4to. 4. Plain of Troy, 1800, 4to. 5. Memoirs of George Thomas, Calcutt, 1803, 4to; Lon., 1805, 8vo. Contains some interesting particulars respecting the interior of India. 6. Tracts on Ava, &c., 1810, 8vo.

Franklyn, Gilbert. Works on the Slave Trade and on politics, 1789–95.

Franklyn, Rev. Thomas. Advice, &c., 1756, 8vo.

Franco, R. Solomon. Truth springing out of the Earth, 1668, 4to; 1670, fol. Refers to Christ.

Frank, John. Serm., Lon., 1756, 8vo.

Frank, Joseph. Editor of The Office of Bailiff of a Liberty. From the MS. of J. Ritson, 1811, 8vo.

Frank, Mark, 1613–1664, Archdeacon of St. Alban's, 1660; Master of Pembroke Hall, Camb., 1662; Rector of Barley, 1663. 1. 51 Sermons, Lon., 1672, fol.; Oxf., 1849, 2 vols. 8vo. 2. Epitome of Divinity, 1665. In verse.

Frank, Thomas. Letter, Lon., 1732, 8vo.

Frankland, Mrs. Leaves of Poesy, Lon., 1838, fp. 8vo.

Frankland, B. Outlines of Literary Culture, Lon., 1853, 12mo.

Frankland, Capt. Charles Colville. 1. Visits to Courts of Russia and Sweden, Lon., 2 vols. 8vo. 2. Travels to and from Constantinople, 1829, 2 vols. 8vo.

"His volumes teem with interest and instruction."—Lon. Sun.

Frankland, Rev. Thomas, 1633–1690, a physician and historian, was educated at and Fellow of Brasenose Coll., Oxf. 1. The Honours of the Lords Spiritual asserted, Lon., 1679, fol.; Anon., but ascribed to him. 2. Original of Kingly and Eccles. Govt., 1681, 8vo. 3. The Annals of K. James I. and King Charles I., 1681, fol.

"A faithful and impartial account of the great affairs of State, Parliaments, &c., with many proclamations, addresses, and other official documents."

Frankland, Sir Thomas, Bart. Cautions to Young Sportsmen, Lon., 1800, 8vo.

Frankland, Wm. Speech rel. to Criminal Law, 1811, 8vo.

Franklin. See FRANKLIN.

Franklin. Farewell to the World, with his Christian Contrition in Prison before his Death; broad sheet. Franklin was executed in 1615 for poisoning Sir Thomas Overbury.

Franklin. Parables of our Lord illustrated by 12 engravings, fol.

"Worthy of all commendation."—Lon. Art Journal.

Franklin, Andrew. Farces, Comedies, &c., 1792–1804. See Biog. Dramat.

Franklin, Benjamin, LL.D., January 17th, 1706–April 17th, 1790, one of the most distinguished of modern philosophers, was a native of Boston, Massachusetts, where his father, Josiah Franklin, an emigrant from England, carried on the business of a tallow-chandler and soap-boiler. At the age of eight years, Benjamin, the youngest but two of seventeen children, was sent to a grammar school; from which he was removed in less than a year to be placed under the tuition of George Brownell, who conducted a seminary in which writing and arithmetic formed the principal branches. His father designed him for the ministry, but, needing his assistance at home, withdrew him from school when only ten years of age, and set the future philosopher to work at "cutting wicks for the candles, filling the moulds for cast candles, attending the shop, going of errands," &c.

If we at first feel inclined to blame the father for so soon depriving his son of the benefits of schooling, we must remember that the good tallow-chandler was straitened in circumstances, and had the expenditures of a large family to provide for from a business probably incapable of much profitable extension.

His occupation was extremely distasteful to him, and he felt a strong inclination to exchange it for the roving life of a sailor, but paternal prudence prevented the consummation of this project. His father allowed the youth to abandon a trade for which he evinced so strong an aversion, and bound him apprentice to his brother James, who had recently (in 1717) returned from London, and established a printing-office in Boston. Young Franklin soon became an adept in his new business, and doubtless was stimulated by the nature of his duties to that love for reading which remained with him through life.

Among his favourite works were The Pilgrim's Progress, Plutarch's Lives, Burton's Historical Collections, an odd volume of The Spectator, and Cotton Mather's Essays to do Good. The perusal of this last work had so great an effect upon his future life that we shall be excused for quoting from a letter from Dr. Franklin, written after he had attained great eminence, to a son of Cotton Mather:

"When I was a boy, I met a book entitled Essays to do Good, which I think was written by your father. It had been so little regarded by its former possessor that several leaves of it were torn out, but the remainder gave me such a turn of thinking, as to have an influence upon my conduct through life; for I have always set a greater value on the character of a doer of good than any other kind of reputation: and if I have been, as you seem to think, a useful citizen, the public owes all the advantage of it to that book."

We may remark, as a comment to the above, that the first edit. of the Essays to do Good was pub. in 1710, 12mo. In 1807, 12mo, it was repub. by the Rev. George Burder, who detracted greatly from its value by making such alterations in the style as he thought would "render it more agreeable to a modern reader,"—changing "many quaint and obsolete words and phrases for others more intelligible and pleasant." This is as intolerable as the modern versions of Chaucer and Spenser. Carrying out this bright idea, Mr. Burder favours us with no less than three hundred "improvements" on the first eighteen pages! But we are happy to state that the Massachusetts S. School Society have recently (Boston, 1845, 18mo) issued an exact reprint of the original; the latter is now so scarce that a copy was recently sold in Boston for six dollars. The new edit. is pub. at a low price, and should be circulated by thousands and tens of thousands through the land. If the whole of the seed thus sown shall produce but one more FRANKLIN, the expenditure will be richly repaid.

But to return to the subject of our memoir. Among young Franklin's first literary efforts were some specimens of ballad poetry, which he printed, and sold himself in the streets of Boston:

"One was called The Light-House Tragedy, and contained an account of the shipwreck of Captain Worthlake with his two daughters; the other was a sailor's song, on the taking of the famous Teach, or Blackbeard the pirate. They were wretched stuff, in street-ballad style; and when they were printed, my brother sent me about the town to sell them. The first sold prodigiously, the event being recent, and having made a great noise. This success flattered my vanity; but my father discouraged me by criticising my performances, and telling me verse-makers were generally beggars. Thus I escaped being a poet, and probably a very bad one."

—Autobiography.

The autobiography from which we have quoted is, or should be, familiar to all of our readers, and a repetition will not be expected here. To this work, and to Dr. Jared Sparks's continuation of his Life, we must refer the reader for interesting particulars connected with the career of this extraordinary man and his important contributions to human knowledge. A rapid summary of the principal incidents in his life is all that our space will allow. In 1723, disgusted with the continued severity of his brother's treatment of him, he removed to Philadelphia, where he obtained employment with a printer named Keimer, and devoted himself to his business with great industry and intelligence. Having made the acquaintance of Sir William Keith, then Governor of Pennsylvania, he encouraged him to establish a printing-office for himself. As his father did not second this proposal, Sir William sent him to London in 1724 to select the proper stock for a small printing-establishment. Unable to accomplish the object of his visit, he worked at his trade in London for about two years, and then returned to Philadelphia. It was whilst still in London, in 1725, that he pub. A Dissertation on Liberty and Necessity, Pleasure and Pain. This essay introduced him to the acquaintance of Mandeville, the author of The Fable of the Bees. It is not to be doubted that intimacies with English freethinkers at this period, and with French deists and atheists at a later stage of his life, did much to engender those latitudinarian sentiments upon religious subjects which Franklin is known to have entertained. The essay on Liberty and Necessity, &c. is not to be found in any edition of Franklin's Works. When Dr. Sparks, in 1840, pub. his edit., this essay was supposed to be lost; but a copy has since been discovered in England. See (London) Notes and Queries No. 114, Jan. 3, 1852; Dryckinck's Cyc. of Amer. Lit. In 1727 he entered into partnership with a person named Meredith, and two years later wrote and published an anonymous pamphlet on the Nature and Necessity of Paper Currency; which was the cause of an issue of bills amounting to eighty thousand pounds. In the same year he purchased from Keimer the Pennsylvania Gazette, the 1st No. of which bears date Dec. 24, 1728. Franklin and Meredith's first issue was No. 44. Through the columns of this journal, and by the agency of the Junto—a club established by him on his return from London—the enterprising printer now controlled political influence to no contemptible extent. In 1730 he was married to his old acquaintance, Mrs. Rogers, formerly Miss Read, who had been deserted by her husband; and in the same year he founded the public library in Philadelphia. In 1732 he first pub. Poor Richard's Almanac, which had a great run—in several cases an annual sale of 10,000 copies—for 25 years. Franklin was now a prominent member of the community, and in 1736 was chosen Clerk of the Provincial Assembly; in 1737 he became deputy postmaster at Philadelphia; and in 1733 Postmaster-General for British America. In 1741 he pub. The General Magazine and Historical Chronicle for all the British Plantations in America; in 1742 he invented what is still called The Franklin Stove; in the next year he originated The American Philosophical Society; in 1749 he had the great satisfaction of establishing in Philadelphia an institution of learning, which, in the maturity of its age and fame, as the University of Pennsylvania, has conferred honour of the most substantial kind upon the country at large; in 1752 he was rejoiced at the demonstration of the truth of his theory of the identity of lightning with electricity; in 1754 he sat as a delegate in the Congress of Commissioners of the Colonies convened at Albany, in expectation of a rupture with France; the value of his suggestions in this assembly, respecting articles of union between the colonies, is well known to the student of early American history. Nor must we omit to mention, among the services rendered by Franklin at this period, the important aid which he rendered to Braddock at the moment of extreme need. In 1756 we find Franklin commanding in person on the frontier, and ready to endure any hardships or perils which the nature of his duties might impose. From 1757 to 1762 he spent in England, as agent for Pennsylvania, (he was complimented by the degree of Doctor of Laws, conferred by the Universities of Edinburgh, Oxford, and St. Andrew's, and chosen Fellow of the Royal Society,) and in 1764 again visited England, with a petition for a change in the charter. Whilst in Great Britain, he was not forgetful of the interests of the colonies at large, and it was doubtless greatly owing to the effect produced by his celebrated examination before the Parliament in 1766 that the obnoxious Stamp Act was repealed.

When the difficulties between Great Britain and her colonies had been aggravated to a state of open hostility, Franklin was elected a member of the American Congress, and, after signing the Declaration of Independence, was appointed Minister Plenipotentiary to France, where he arrived in December, 1776. His success in enlisting the sympathies and substantial assistance of the French people in behalf of the American colonies is well known. He returned to Philadelphia, September 14, 1785, at which period he had attained the advanced age of 80 years, and was received with the enthusiastic acclamations of a grateful nation. From the original letter in the valuable collection of our esteemed friend, George P. Putnam, of New York, we copy the following testimonial to the patriotic services of the individual to whom it is addressed:

"Mount Vernon, Sept. 25, 1786.

"DEAR SIR: Amid the public gratulation on your safe return to America, after a long absence, and the many eminent services you had rendered it—for which as a benefited person I feel the obligation—permit an individual to join the public voice in expressing his sense of them; and to assure you, that as no one entertains more respect for your character, so none can salute you with more sincerity or with greater pleasure than I do on the occasion.

"I am—dear sir,

"Your most obt.

"and most Hble. Servt.,

"G. WASHINGTON.

"The Hon'ble Doct. FRANKLIN."

He filled the dignified office of President of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania from 1785 to 1788, and in 1787 sat with Washington and Hamilton in the Federal Convention which framed the Constitution of the United States. His last public act was to sign his name, as President of the Abolition Society, to a memorial to Congress, and the last paper which he composed was on the same subject. He died of a disease of the lungs, after a short illness, on the 17th of April, 1790.

We have already referred to the religious opinions of this eminent philosopher as "latitudinarian," and we know not that we could have selected a better word. Nothing can be fairer, in this connexion, than to quote his own words, in a letter to Dr. Stille, dated March 9, 1790, but a few weeks before his death:

"As to Jesus of Nazareth, my opinion of whom you particularly desire, I think the system of morals and his religion, as he left them to us, the best the world ever saw, or is likely to see; but I apprehend it has received various corrupting changes; and I have, with most of the present dissenters in England, some doubts as to his divinity."

"It may not be unnecessary to remark, that if we may credit Dr. Priestley, Dr. Franklin was not correct in estimating the sentiments of a majority of the dissenters in England."—PRESIDENT ALLEN.

When Thomas Paine proposed to publish his infamous Age of Reason, Franklin wrote to him,

"I would advise you not to attempt unchaining the tiger, but to burn this piece before it is seen by any other person. If men are so wicked with religion, what would they be without it?"

A notice, however cursory, of the religious opinions of Benjamin Franklin, would be hardly just if it omitted to notice a memorable declaration made by him, on an august occasion, of his profound belief in the overruling providence of Almighty God.

His celebrated speech in the Convention for forming a Constitution for the United States, when supporting his motion for providing daily prayer in the Convention, was in these words:

"In the beginning of the contest with Britain, when we were sensible of danger, we had daily prayers in this room for the Divine protection. Our prayers, sir, were heard, and they were graciously answered. All of us who were engaged in the struggle must have observed frequent instances of a superintending Providence in our favour. To that kind Providence we owe this happy opportunity of consulting in peace on the means of establishing our future national felicity. And have we now forgotten this powerful friend? or do we imagine we no longer need His assistance? I have lived, sir, a long time, [81 years]; and the longer I live the more convincing proofs I see of this truth, that God governs in the affairs of man. And if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without His notice, is it probable that an empire can rise without His aid? We have been assured, sir, in the sacred writings, 'that except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it.' I firmly believe this; and I also believe that without His concurring aid, we shall succeed in this political building no better than the builders of Babel; we shall be divided by our little partial local interests; our projects will be confounded; and we ourselves shall become a reproach and a by-word down to future ages. And what is worse, mankind may hereafter, from this unfortunate instance, despair of establishing government by human wisdom, and leave it to chance, war, or conquest. I therefore beg leave to move that henceforth prayers, imploring the assistance of Heaven and its blessing on our deliberations, be held in this assembly every morning before we proceed to business; and that one or more of the clergy of this city be requested to officiate in that service."

His death was sincerely mourned both in Europe and America.

"Mirabeau announced in the General Assembly of France that 'the genius which had freed America, and poured a flood of light over Europe, had returned to the bosom of the Divinity.' 'Everywhere,' to use the language of Rochefoucauld, 'he was the object of the regrets, as he had been of the admiration, of the friends of liberty.'"

Turgot celebrated his discoveries in electricity, and his labours in behalf of freedom, in the striking line written by him under Franklin's portrait:

"Eripuit cælo fulmen, sceptrumque tyrannus."

The history of this celebrated line need not here be repeated.

His Experiments and Observations on Electricity, made at Philadelphia, [proving that lightning and electricity are the same,] and communicated in several Letters to Mr. P. Collinson of London, were pub. in that city in 1751, '53, '54, 3 Pts. 4to. They were not originally designed for publication, but Collinson thought them too important to be withheld. The public interest in these experiments justified Collinson's anticipations. "Nothing," says Priestley, "was ever written on the subject more justly applauded. All the world, even kings, flocked to see them, and retired full of admiration." They were tested with eminent success by M. de Los, in Paris, by M. Beccaria, in Turin, by Richmann, in Russia, and by philosophers in various countries. Professor Richmann, as if to rebuke his temerity, was struck dead, in the midst of his investigations, by the formidable element which he had chosen for a plaything. The 4th edit. of his letters and papers on electricity, enlarged by essays on various philosophical subjects, appeared in 1769, 4to. This edit., and the 5th, which was pub. five years later, is supposed by Dr. Sparks to have received some degree of attention from the author, who was then in London. Translations of his writings were made into Latin, French, Italian, and German, and appeared in various parts of Europe. In 1772 M. Dubourg made a new collection of Franklin's writings, including some not before printed, and pub. them at Paris, 2 vols. 4to. In 1779 another collection was pub. in London, consisting of Political, Miscellaneous, and Philosophical Pieces. These, few of which were in print before, were edited by Benjamin Vaughan, an intimate friend and correspondent of the author. In 1787 a selection from the above edit. was pub. in a thin 8vo.

In 1793 there appeared in London what is called The Works of Dr. Franklin, in 2 vols.; in 1798 a selection of his pieces was pub. in Paris, 2 vols. 8vo; and in 1806 an edition, superintended by a Mr. Marshall, was issued in London, in 3 vols. 8vo. In 1816-19 edit. were pub. in England and the United States, by William Temple Franklin, grandson of the author, and Mr. William Duane of Philadelphia, (also a descendant of Dr. Franklin,) first in 3 vols. 4to, (Lon.,) subsequently in 6 vols. 8vo, Lon., 1818; also in 1833; Phila., 1818. The Phila. ed., in 6 vols. 8vo, contains some papers and letters not to be found in the Lon. ed. It has been reprinted in 2 vols. r. 8vo. There is a Lon. ed. of his Life and Writings, 1818, 2 vols. 8vo. There has been republ. at Paris, in 2 vols., a selection from Franklin's writings in Spanish, translated from the French by Mangino. Further particulars respecting the eds. of Franklin's writings will be found in the Preface to Sparks's ed., Boston, 1836-40, to which we are indebted for many of the facts now stated. New ed. of the same, thoroughly revised, with additions and new illustrations, Phila., 1858, 10 vols. 8vo. This edition is the only complete one, and contains about six hundred and fifty letters and miscellaneous papers (more than one-third of the whole bulk of the new ed.) not to be found in any other collection. Of these, upwards of four hundred and sixty had never been printed. The Familiar Letters of Franklin, pub. in 1833 by Dr. Sparks, are included in this ed., and magazines, pamphlets, and newspapers have been industriously examined, and no printed paper omitted which is known to have been written by Franklin. The number of books, papers, &c.—excluding letters—is no less than 304!

"In classifying these materials, the following arrangement has been adopted:

- "1. Autobiography.
- "2. Essays on Religious and Moral Subjects and the Economy of Life.
- "3. Essays on General Politics, Commerce, and Polit. Economy.
- "4. Essays and Tracts, Historical and Political, before the American Revolution.
- "5. Political Papers during and after the American Revolution.
- "6. Letters and Papers on Electricity.
- "7. Letters and Papers on Philosophical Subjects.
- "8. Correspondence.

"Under each head all the articles have been placed in the order in which they were written, with the date of each prefixed wherever this could be ascertained. The Correspondence is also printed in chronological order from beginning to end, without regard to the contents of the letters. This method was believed to be preferable to any attempt at a classification, because in numerous instances a single letter treats of various subjects, both of a political and of a private nature."—Preface.

We need not dwell upon the great value of the learned editor's notes and historical remarks, which illustrate the text. Dr. Sparks has not forgotten the great importance of a copious index to a work of this character—to a good work of any character. He gives us, indeed, no less than five indexes, viz.: Index. I. A List of the Author's Writings, chronologically arranged. II. Letters written by Franklin to Individuals and Public Bodies. III. Letters addressed to Franklin by Various Persons. IV. Miscellaneous Letters. V. General Index.

Can any collector of American history do without such a noble set of volumes as this?

As regards minor publications, Franklin's autobiography has been frequently pub. in America and England, and we have edit. of his Life by Holley, Stanley, Weems, and Weld, and sundry compilations from his writings. On this eminent philosopher and statesman—of whom Lord Brougham declares that “his genius ranks him with the Galileos and the Newtons of the Old World,” and of whom Mirabeau does not scruple to assert, “Antiquity would have raised altars to this mighty genius,”—it would be easy to quote pages of panegyric; but our space allows of but brief citation. At the conclusion of this article, however, we shall refer the reader to other papers upon the fertile themes of Franklin and his discoveries.

“A singular felicity of induction guided all his researches, and by very small means he established very grand truths. The style and manner of his publication on electricity are almost as worthy of admiration as the doctrine it contains. He has endeavoured to remove all mystery and obscurity from the subject. He has written equally for the uninitiated and for the philosopher; and he has rendered his details amusing and perspicuous, elegant as well as simple. Science appears in his language in a dress wonderfully decorous, best adapted to display her native loveliness. He has in no instance exhibited that false dignity which philosophy is kept aloof from common applications; and he has sought rather to make her a useful inmate and servant in the common habitations of man, than to preserve her merely as an object of admiration in temples and palaces.”—SIR HUMPHRY DAVY.

“This self-taught American is the most rational, perhaps, of all philosophers. He never loses sight of common sense in any of his speculations; and when his philosophy does not consist entirely in its fair and vigorous application, it is always regulated and controlled by it in its application and result. No individual, perhaps, ever possessed a juster understanding, or was so seldom obstructed in the use of it by indolence, enthusiasm, or authority. . . . The distinguishing feature of his understanding was great soundness and sagacity; combined with extraordinary quickness of penetration. He possessed also a strong and lively imagination, which gave his speculations, as well as his conduct, a singularly original turn. The secular charm of his writings, and his great merit also in action, consisted in the clearness with which he saw his object,—and the bold and steady pursuit of it, by the surest and the shortest road. He never suffered himself, in conduct, to be turned aside by the seductions of interest or vanity, or to be scared by hesitation and fear, or to be misled by the arts of his adversaries. Neither did he, in discussion, ever go out of his way in search of ornament, or stop short from dread of the consequences. He never could be caught, in short, acting absurdly, or writing nonsensically: at all times, and in every thing he undertook, the vigour of an understanding at once original and practical was distinctly perceivable.

“But it must not be supposed that his writings are devoid of ornament or amusement. The latter especially abounds in almost all he ever composed; only nothing is sacrificed to them. On the contrary, they come most naturally into their places; and they uniformly help in the purpose in hand, of which neither writer nor reader ever loses sight for an instant. Thus, his style has all the vigour and even consciousness of Swift, without any of his harshness. It is in no degree more flowery, yet both elegant and lively. The wit, or rather humour, which prevails in his works, varies with the subject. Sometimes he is bitter and sarcastic; often gay and even droll; reminding us, in this respect, far more frequently of Addison than of Swift, as might naturally be expected from his admirable temper, or the happy turn of his investigation. . . . Upon the whole, we look upon the life and writings of Dr. Franklin as affording a striking illustration of the inestimable value of a sound and well-directed understanding, and of the comparative uselessness of learning and laborious accomplishments. Without the slightest pretensions to the character of a scholar or man of science, he has extended the bounds of human knowledge on a variety of subjects, which scholars and men of science had previously investigated without success; and has only been found deficient in those studies which the learned have generally turned from in disdain. We would not be understood to say any thing in disparagement of scholarship and science; but the value of these instruments is apt to be overrated by their possessors; and it is a wholesome mortification to shew them that the work may be done without them. We have long known that their employment does not insure its success.”—LORD JEFFREY: Edin. Rev., viii. 327-344; xxviii. 275-302, q. v.

These last reflections of Lord Jeffrey hardly require a serious answer. It were as wise to say that the American Indian, whose native talent enables him to fashion his canoe with a rude flint, could not make a better canoe, and sooner despatch his work, with the steel axe and the sharp tools used by his civilized neighbour. Had Franklin been an educated man, doubtless he would have been enabled to add larger contributions to the stock of human knowledge than those which have immortalised his name.

See papers on Franklin, his Correspondence and his Discoveries, in the N. Amer. Rev., vii. 289, by A. Norton; xxxvii. 249, by W. B. O. Peabody; lix. 446, by Francis Bowen; Meth. Quar. Rev., vii. 101, by Wm. H. Allen; Lon. Month. Rev., lxxviii. 18, 133, lxxxviii. 409, cxxxii. 239; Amer. Month. Rev., iv. 124. The reader must also peruse John Foster's Review of Dr. Franklin's Private Correspondence, (contrib. to the Lon. Eccl. Rev., and repub. in the collective ed. of his contribs. to that periodical,) and Edward Everett's Boyhood and Youth of Franklin.

We are glad to observe an announcement of the intended publication (N.Y., 1859) of Letters to Benjamin Franklin from his Family and Friends: a collection of about eighty original letters, 1751-90. These are in the possession of Franklin Bache, M.D., and are being carefully copied and annotated by Mr. William Duane, (great-grandsons of Benjamin Franklin.) Edition, 250 copies, (8vo, about 250 pp. :) 10 copies on large paper, $10 each.

Franklin, Eleanor Ann, 1795-1825, a daughter of Mr. Porden, architect, was married in 1823 to Sir John Franklin, the unfortunate navigator. 1. The Veils; or, The Triumph of Constancy; a Poem, in six Books, Lon., 1815, 8vo. 2. The Arctic Expedition; a Poem, 1818. This poem, suggested by a visit to the Isabella and Alexander, discovery ships, led to an acquaintance with Sir John Franklin, one of the adventurers, which resulted in marriage. 3. Cœur de Lion; an Epic Poem on the third Crusade, 1824, 2 vols. 8vo. Mrs. Franklin died six days after the departure of her husband on his second expedition. See FRANKLIN, SIR JOHN.

Franklin, J. Hist. of anc. and mod. Egypt, from the most authentic records, Lon., 1800, 3 vols. 12mo.

Franklin, James. A Philos. and Polit. Hist. of the 13 U. States of America, Lon., 1734, 12mo.

Franklin, James. Present State of Hayti, Lon., 1828, cr. 8vo.

“The statements concerning the productions, commerce, resources, population, and government of Hayti, are minute and particular, and were obtained by personal inquiry during a residence in the West Indies.”—N. Amer. Rev.

Franklin, Sir John, an eminent navigator, b. 1764, at Spilsby, Lincolnshire, entered the Royal Navy as a midshipman in 1800, was present at the battle of Trafalgar in 1806 and the battle of New Orleans in 1814, and was selected in 1819 to head an expedition overland from Hudson's Bay to the Arctic Ocean. After encountering great hardships, and very frequently at the point of death from hunger and fatigue, he reached home in October, 1822. In the next year he was married to Miss Porden. See FRANKLIN, ELEANOR ANN. In 1825 he submitted to Lord Bathurst “a plan for an expedition overland, to the mouth of the Mackenzie river, and thence by sea, to the N. West extremity of America, with the combined object also, of surveying the coast between the Mackenzie and Copper Mine rivers.”

This proposition was accepted, and, to superintend the expedition, he embarked at Liverpool, February 16, 1825, after the “severe struggle of taking leave of his wife, whose death, then hourly expected, took place six days after his departure.”

After encountering great hardships, the moving masses of ice forced the heroic sailors to retrace their steps. September 1, 1827, Captain Franklin arrived at Liverpool, married a second time in November of the following year, and in 1829 received the honour of knighthood. The persevering zeal of Lady Franklin in stimulating the search for Sir John, for ten years past, is well known to the world. He was greatly disappointed at his unsuccessful attempts to accomplish the object of his voyages; remarking, with reference to his compulsory return in 1827:

“It was with no ordinary pain that I could now bring myself even to think of relinquishing the great object of my ambition, (the discovery of a North West passage from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean,) and of disappointing the flattering hopes which had been reposed in my exertions. But I had higher duties to perform than the gratification of my own feelings, and a mature consideration of all things forced me to the conclusion that we had reached that point beyond which perseverance would be rashness and the best efforts would be fruitless.”

The Montreal Gazette of Sept. 11, 1822, remarks: “It appears that the toils and sufferings of the expedition have been of the most trying description, and that, if they do not exceed belief, they were at least of such a nature as almost to overcome the stoutest heart, and deter all future attempts of a similar tendency.”

But this writer little knew the iron stuff of which Sir John Franklin was made.

On the 26th of May, 1845, Sir John started upon a third expedition, in two ships, the Erebus and Terror; he was heard from on the 26th of July of the same year, and passed his first winter in a cove between Cape Riley and Beechey Island. Since that period, many expeditions from England and America have been despatched in search of the adventurer, but it was not until November, 1854, that news reached England which leaves little doubt that the whole party perished in the winter of 1850-51. See London Gent. Mag., Nov. 1854, 479; Dec., 1854, 594-95. Since the above was written, we have further intelligence, —by the return of Mr. James G. Stewart's expedition, despatched by the British Hudson's Bay Company, 18th Nov., 1854; arrived at St. Paul, Minnesota, 10th Dec., 1855,—which places beyond all doubt the loss of Sir John Franklin and his party. Some of their shoes, cooking-utensils, &c., were found among the Esquimaux, who declared that they had died of starvation.

By a curious coincidence, on the day that we are penning this article, (Oct. 11, 1855, the last expedition—sent specially in search of Dr. Kane and his party—which sailed from New York in June, 1855, has arrived at home. The explorers bring with them Dr. Kane and all of his company save three—a carpenter, a cook, and a seaman, lost by death. The remainder of the party are more or less frost-bitten. Of the last expedition—the steamer (propeller) Arctic, Lieut. Simms, and the barque Release, Lieut. Hartstene—the Arctic (Lieut. Hartstene was on board) made its way north to lat. 78° 32', when it was stopped by the ice. The Advance, Dr. Kane's vessel, had been pushed as far north as possible, (see "Geographical Results," below,) when she was frozen in, and of course had to be abandoned. The ship's company were found by the Arctic and Release on the island of Disco. They have been absent from home since May 31, 1853, and are received with great rejoicings. They have made several important discoveries, and added largely to our knowledge of the inhospitable region the perils and discomforts of which they have so bravely encountered. From a statement in the New York Tribune of Oct. 12, 1855, we extract the following résumé of the results of Dr. Kane's last voyage. For an account of his former explorations, see his work noticed at the end of this article.

"GEOGRAPHICAL RESULTS.

"I. Greenland has been followed and charted by Dr. Kane toward the Atlantic with a coast-line pointing due north, until a stupendous glacier absolutely checked their progress. This mass of ice rose in a lofty precipice five hundred feet high, abutting into the sea. It undoubtedly is the only barrier between Greenland and the Atlantic. It is an effectual barrier to all future exploration.

"This glacier, in spite of the difficulty of falling bergs, was followed out to sea by means of sledges; the party rafting themselves across open-water spaces on masses of ice. In this way they succeeded in travelling eighty miles along its base, and traced it into a new northern land. This glacier is, we believe, the largest ever discovered by any navigator.

"II. This new land thus cemented to Greenland by protruding ice was named Washington. The large bay which intervenes between it and Greenland bears the name of Mr. Peabody of Baltimore, one of the projectors of the expedition. This icy connection of the Old and New World seems to us a feature of romantic interest.

"III. The range of the sledge journeys may be understood from the fact that the entire circuit of Smith Sound has been effected and its shores completely charted. But the real discovery of the expedition is the open Polar Sea. The channel leading to these waters was entirely free from ice; and this mysterious feature was rendered the more remarkable by the existence of a belt of solid ice extending one hundred and twenty-five miles to the southward. This sea verifies the views of Dr. Kane as expressed to the Geographical Society before his departure. The lashings of the surf against the frozen beach of ice was impressive beyond description. Several gentlemen with whom we have conversed speak of the matter as one of peculiar interest. An area of three thousand square miles has been seen, entirely free from ice. This channel has been named after the Hon. J. P. Kennedy, late Secretary of the United States Navy, under whose auspices the expedition was undertaken.

"IV. The land to the north and west of this channel has been charted as high as 82° 30'. This is the nearest land to the Pole yet known. It bears the name of Mr. Henry Grinnell, the founder of the enterprise."

Perhaps so long an article on this subject, in a Literary Dictionary, is rather out of place; but who can resist being led away by such themes? The reader who desires to pursue this interesting topic must refer to the following publications:—1. Capt. John Franklin's Narrative of a Journey to the Shores of the Polar Sea, 1819-22, with an Appendix on various Subjects relating to Science and Natural History, Lon., 1823, 4to, pp. 784; 34 Plates, and four Maps, £4 4s. The Appendix on Natural History is by Sir John Richardson, Sabine, Lieut. Hood, &c. The Plates are beautifully engraved by Finden (some of them coloured) after drawings by Lieuts. Hood and Back. A second and third edit. were pub. in 1824, both in 2 vols. 8vo, without the plates.

Also an ed. in Phila., 8vo, same year.

"The unstudied and seaman-like simplicity of the style is not the least of its merits; and the illustrations and embellishments, from the drawings of the late unfortunate Mr. Hood and Mr. Back, are of a very superior kind."—Lon. Quar. Rev.

"A work of intense and indeed painful interest, from the sufferings of those who performed this journey; of value to geography by no means proportional to these sufferings; but instructive in meteorology and natural history."—Stevenson's Voy. and Travels.

2. Capt. John Franklin's Narrative of a Second Expedition to the Shores of the Polar Sea, 1825-27; including an Account of the Progress of a Detachment to the Eastward, by John Richardson, M.D., F.R.S., &c., Surgeon and Naturalist to the Expedition. Illustrated by numerous Maps and Plates, 1828, 4to, pp. 447, £4 4s. The Second Expedition has not in England been pub. in 8vo, but see below.

"The views of Arctic Scenery with which this volume is both illustrated and embellished are of extreme beauty. They supply, in a great measure, the absence of picturesque description, and delineate, with singular truth, the striking peculiarities which distinguish the aspect of these regions from that of the temperate climates."—Edin. Rev.

"It is difficult to do sufficient justice either to the skill and intelligence displayed in its conduct, or the information to be derived from it."—Amer. Quar. Rev.

